62. ἐὰν οὖν θεωρῆτε τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἀναβαίνοντα] If you imagine that My flesh cannot give you life, how can it, like a winged bird, soar up to heaven? But if, as your own eyes will see, it raises itself to heaven, cannot it also raise you? cannot it vivify you? It is not, however, the flesh, as flesh, that will vivify you, but it is the Flesh united to the Word; it is the Flesh in which "dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily" (Col. ii. 9). It is the Spirit that dwelleth in it that quickeneth; and "the Lord is that Spirit" (2 Cor. iii. 17). The Spirit is Christ as God. (Cyril.)

They thought He would give them His body to eat, but He said that He, in His body entire, would ascend to heaven. Then you will perceive that He does not give His body in the way you imagine, and that His Grace is not to be fed upon by the teeth. "Gratia Ejus non consumitur morsibus." (Aug.)

Therefore our Lord said, "Me ye have not always" (John xii. 8), when He spake of His bodily presence; for according to His divine majesty He said, "I am with you alway" (Matt. xxviii. 20). But according to the flesh which He assumed in the Virgin's womb, and in which He died and rose again, it "ye have not always." Why? because in it He ascended into heaven, and in it He is not here. (Aug.)

— ὅπου ἦν τὸ πρότερον] Not that the human body of Christ came down from heaven (for that is the heresy of Marcion and Apollinarius), but because the Son of Man and the Son of God are one Christ. (Theoph.)

Our Lord answers their murmurs by these words: "You imagine that I am about to give you My Body to divide as it were into parts for you to eat. What if you see Me ascend?" Certainly He Who could ascend bodily, could not be eaten bodily; therefore He gives us healthful reflection from His Body and Blood, and at the same time solves their doubts. Let them eat and drink Him Who is our Life; and the Body and Blood of Christ will be Life to us, if that which is visibly taken in the Sacrament is indeed spiritually eaten and spiritually drunken. For our Lord proceeds to say (v. 63), "It is the Spirit that quickeneth." (Aug. Serm. cxxxi.)

63. τὸ πνεῦμά ἐστι τὸ ζωοποιοῦν] Cp. 1 Cor. xv. 45: "The first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit,"—εἰς πνεῦμα ζωοποιοῦν,—i. e. by union of flesh with deity; the flesh which Christ took became by His assumption of it the flesh of Him Who is God,—and Who as Jehovah, the universal and everlasting I am, quickens all. It is not by participating in His flesh as flesh, but by faith in His Divinity dwelling in that flesh, and by it communicating itself to us, that we are profited in the reception of the Holy Communion of His Body and Blood.

Not that His flesh profits nothing; for our only hope of life eternal in body and soul is through His Incarnation; but what profits nothing, is to think of His flesh merely as flesh. So the Apostle says (2 Cor. iii. 6), "The letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life." Not that the letter is nothing; but the letter alone, without the Spirit, killeth. Cp. Cyril here.

We must not say that Christ's flesh or body profiteth nothing (see v. 53, 54), but to understand these things in a carnal way profiteth nothing. (Chrys.)

Why did He say, "Except ye eat the flesh," &c.? Because the flesh considered carnally, as ye consider it, profiteth nothing. But the flesh must be quickened by the Spirit, and then the Spirit in the flesh, and by the flesh, profits much. Your soul quickens only the members which are in your body; if you take a limb away, it is not quickened by your soul. This we say, that we may love unity and fear separation. A Christian ought not to fear any thing so much as to be separated from Christ's Body; for if he is separated from the Body of Christ, he is not a member of Christ, and if not a member of Christ, he is not quickened by His Spirit. (Aug.)

— πνεῦμα καὶ ζωή] They speak of Spirit and Life. (Cyril.) "Spiritualiter intelligenda." (Aug.)

64. τινες οἳ οὐ πιστεύουσιν] and therefore do not understand; for "unless ye believe ye cannot understand" (Isa. vii. 9.) See LXX.

— ὁ παραδώσων] The betrayal took place at the season of the Passover, and soon after the Institution of the Holy Eucharist; and so the treachery of Judas was intimately connected with these words, concerning the Holy Eucharist, and spoken before at a Passover.

67. δώδεκα] That these were the Apostles, St. John supposes to be known from the other Gospels.

69. ὁ Υἱός] "Instead of ὁ Υἱὸς, Griesb., Lachm., Tisch., and Alf. edit, from 4 MSS., and a few Versions, ὁ ἅγιος. But that reading has been, very properly, rejected by Scholz; since, while external authority for it is infinitely less, internal evidence is altogether on the side of the common reading; the appellation ἅγιος τοῦ Θεοῦ, as used of our Lord, only occurring in the confession of the demoniacs (Mark i. 24. Luke iv. 34). He is, indeed, called ἅγιος παῖς Acts iv. 27, but not ἅγιος τοῦ Θεοῦ. Whereas the appellation, Χριστὸς, ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, frequently occurs in the New Test., and especially in this Gospel, as i. 50; xi. 27. See more in Tittman, who proves that the appellations ὁ Χριστὸς and ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ were not synonymous, but that the former have reference to the office, the latter to the Divine nature of Christ." (Bloomf.)

— τοῦ ζῶντος] Cancelled by some on the authority of a very few MSS., e. g. B, C, D, L, and six cursive copies, but confirmed by most of the Versions and Fathers; and very expressive and relevant to this place in connexion with ῥήματα ζωῆς (v. 68).

70. ἐξελεξάμην; καὶ ἐξ ὑμῶν εἷς διάβολός ἐ.] There is therefore an election of grace, from which men may fall. (Bengel.)

REVIEW OF THE CONTENTS OF THE FOREGOING CHAPTER.—It is said by the Holy Spirit in v. 6 of this chapter, that "He (Christ) Himself (αὐτὸς, Ipse, nemo alius) knew what He would do;" and this saying may be taken as a clue to the whole; for all our Lord's sayings and actions in it are prophetical.

St. John in his Gospel does not describe the Institution of either Sacrament. That had been done by the preceding Evangelists. And he alone records our Lord's prophetical discourses concerning both Sacraments; first, in the third chapter, concerning Baptism; and secondly, in the sixth chapter, concerning the Lord's Supper. And there is a striking resemblance in the manner in which each of the Sacraments is treated by Our Lord in this Gospel. (See, for instance, v. 53, compared with iii. 3.)

Thus it is shown that there is an analogy between them; and that the two Sacraments occupy a place peculiar to themselves in the Christian Dispensation.

In a word, the Third Chapter and the Sixth Chapter of St. John's Gospel may be said to contain two Sermons upon the Sacraments from the Divine lips of Him Who instituted them.

Our Lord employs the same method in speaking of the Second Sacrament (that of His Body and Blood) as He had done in speaking of the first—the Sacrament of Baptism. See above on chap. iii. 22, and note at end of that chapter; and on Matt. x. 38.

If it be alleged (as it is by some) that His Words could not refer to the Sacraments, because they were not so understood by those who heard them; this objection, it must be replied, is grounded on a total misconception of our Lord's Nature and Teaching.

He knew what He would do; and He knew that His Words would be recorded by the Holy Spirit in Holy Scripture, for the teaching and comfort of all future ages of the world. Such language as was not intelligible at the time when, and to the persons to whom, it was first uttered, was most appropriate in the mouth of Him Who foreknows all things, and spoke to all men in all time. Cp. on xii. 16.

Its subsequent explanation by what afterwards took place proves

VII. [1] Καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα περιεπάτει ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐν τῇ Γαλιλαίᾳ· οὐ γὰρ ἤθελεν a Lev. 23. 34. ἐν τῇ Ἰουδαίᾳ περιπατεῖν, ὅτι ἐζήτουν αὐτὸν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ἀποκτεῖναι. [2] [a]Ἦν b Matt. 12. 46. Mark 3. 31. Acts 1. 14. δὲ ἐγγὺς ἡ ἑορτὴ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἡ σκηνοπηγία. [3] [b]Εἶπον οὖν πρὸς αὐτὸν οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ, Μετάβηθι ἐντεῦθεν, καὶ ὕπαγε εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν, ἵνα καὶ οἱ μαθηταί σου θεωρήσωσι τὰ ἔργα σου ἃ ποιεῖς· [4] οὐδεὶς γὰρ ἐν κρυπτῷ τι ποιεῖ, καὶ ζητεῖ αὐτὸς ἐν παῤῥησίᾳ εἶναι· εἰ ταῦτα ποιεῖς, φανέρωσον σεαυτὸν c Mark 3. 21. τῷ κόσμῳ. [5] [c]Οὐδὲ γὰρ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ ἐπίστευον εἰς αὐτόν. [6] λέγει οὖν αὐτοῖς

His Divinity: it is an evidence of the truth of the Gospel, and confirms our faith in Christ.

His Teaching was prophetical. It proceeded from His foreknowledge. It was also probationary; it tried the faith of His hearers. Some would be staggered and fall away, and "would no more walk with Him." But they who meekly and lovingly trusted in Him would abide with Him in patience, because they had seen His miracles and knew that "He has the words of eternal life;" and they would wait till what were at first "hard sayings" would be cleared up by visible actions and by spiritual illuminations.

So it was with regard to our Lord's teaching concerning both the Sacraments. Those very persons, who at first might have been perplexed by that teaching, were enlightened by receiving those Sacraments, and became Ministers of those Sacraments to others.

Our Lord, at the approach of a Passover, goes up with His disciples to a hill on the Northern side of the Lake of Galilee; and the Multitudes who had seen His miracles of healing, and were going up to Jerusalem, follow Him. He preaches to them, and heals some of them (Luke ix. 2).

It was now afternoon, and He commands His disciples to arrange the multitude of five thousand men, besides women and children, in companies of fifties; and having blessed and broken the five barley loaves and two fishes, He delivers them to the disciples to deliver to the multitude; and they were all filled; and the fragments that remain are gathered up by the disciples and fill twelve baskets.

The multitude would have taken Him and made Him their King; but He retires to the mountain, and commands the disciples to embark in the ship, and pass over to the western side of the Lake. A storm arises and darkness comes on, and He sees them toiling in rowing, and comes to them walking on the sea. They are affrighted at the sight, but He says, Ἐγώ εἰμι· μὴ φοβεῖσθε, and they gladly received Him into the ship, which was immediately at the land where they were going.

The next day many of the people who had partaken of the loaves came over the sea to Capernaum, and asked Jesus, "Rabbi, when camest thou hither?" He does not give a direct reply to that question; but, when teaching in the Synagogue at Capernaum (v. 59), proceeds to apply the miracle of the loaves to their spiritual instruction.

They had compared Him to Moses, and He teaches them that He is greater than Moses, in that He gives the true bread,—not manna for forty years only, for the bodies of one people, who die (v. 58), but the true living bread for the eternal life of immortal souls, as well as for the glorious resurrection of the bodies of all Mankind (vv. 33. 39); and He tells them that He Himself is this Bread (vv. 35—41), and that it is necessary to partake of it; and further, except they eat His Flesh and drink His Blood, they have no Life in them (v 53); and that they who obey this command will have everlasting life, and He would raise them up at the last day (v. 54).

These were then hard sayings (v. 60); they sifted His hearers; some murmured at them (vv. 41, 42); but He said, "What if they should see Him ascend to where He was before?" and that the words He had spoken were spirit and were life, and must be received with faith in His Divinity, and then they would believe that He is the Bread that descends from heaven.

They would not indeed be able to understand how He is present in the Holy Eucharist, any more than the people could understand how He had come over the sea (v. 24). Nor should they curiously enquire, but joyfully receive Him with faith; and remember that He, by His Divine Power, had fed the bodies of five thousand without a word, and that He Who promised to be with them would ascend in their sight to where He was before, in His Divine Nature, and He could therefore do what He promised to perform.

The hard sayings at Capernaum, like those concerning Regeneration and Baptism to Nicodemus, soon became easy to those who, like St. Peter (v. 68), remained with Christ in faith and patience. For all this was done when a Passover was nigh (see on v. 4); and, at the very next Passover after it, He explained this saying, in act as well as word, by instituting the Holy Sacrament of His Body and Blood, when He said, "Take, eat; this is my Body;" and "Drink ye all of this: this is My Blood which is shed for you and for many for the remission of sins." (Matt. xxvi. 26. Mark xiv. 22. Luke xxii. 19.)

And that His words were spiritual, and must be received with faith, was then made evident from the case of Judas, who received the Holy Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Christ from the hands of Christ Himself, but received it carnally, and not with faith and love, and went and betrayed his Master, and so fulfilled the prophecy here uttered by Christ concerning him (v. 70).

And these hard sayings became still more easy, when the Apostles saw Christ's body slain and His blood poured out at that same Passover. And they became more easy yet, when they saw that by His Divine Power He raised His own Body at that Passover as He promised to raise them (v. 54). And they became more easy still, when they beheld Christ ascend in His Human Body to where He was before in His Divinity. And they believed that by reason of the union of the Humanity with the Divinity, He, though in Heaven in His Humanity, can ever communicate the vivifying Virtue of His Body offered and of His Blood poured out, once for all, on the Cross, to the strengthening and refreshing of the souls of those who receive them in faith and love, and to the preservation of their souls and bodies unto everlasting life. And the hard sayings at Capernaum became more easy still, when the same Apostles, who had been employed by Christ to dispense the bread and the fishes which He had blessed and broken on the mountain of Bethsaida to the weary multitudes journeying to Jerusalem, were commissioned to bless in His Name the Bread and Cup of the Holy Eucharist (which would remind them even by its name of Christ's act and miraculous power, see on v. 6), and to break the Bread, and to dispense, and to authorize and ordain others to dispense, even "till the Lord come," the Sacrament of His blessed Body and Blood, to all true Israelites in all the world, weary of their sins, and hungering for the Bread of Life, and made to sit down on the Green grass of the Lord's holy mountain, where He prepares them a Table, and anoints their head with the holy oil of His grace, and fills their cup (Ps. xxiii. 2. 5), on their way to an Eternal Festival in the heavenly Jerusalem.

CH. VII. 1. οὐ γὰρ ἤθελεν ἐν τ. Ἰουδαίᾳ περιπατεῖν, ὅτι ἐζήτουν αὐτὸν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ἀποκτεῖναι] Our Lord was accustomed, on fit occasions, to fly as man, that He might manifest Himself as God. (Chrys.)

2. σκηνοπηγία] From the 15th to 23rd of Tisri (October). On the Feast of Tabernacles, see below, note on v. 37, and Lightfoot's treatise on the Temple Service, ch. xvi. vol. 1, pp. 974—979. Mede's Works, i. p. 266, and Jahn, Archæol. § 356. It was called specially חַג (ha-chag), τὸ ἅγιον, ἡ ἑορτὴ, the Feast, and μεγίστη by Jewish writers (see Rosenmüller, and the authorities in Jahn, and below, note on v. 37). It was the Feast of Ingathering of Fruits (Exod. xxiii. 16; xxxiv. 22), and it commemorated,

The dwelling in Booths in the Wilderness (Levit. xxiii. 34—43. Nehem. viii. 15). And on each day of the feast the Jews went round the altar with shouts of Hosanna, and bearing in their hands palm branches. (2 Macc. x. 6, 7.) Hence the Hosannas in Matt. xxi. 9. 15.

The flowing of water from the rock in the wilderness, see on verse 37.

It seems to have been typical

Of our Lord's Incarnation (see on i. 14, and note at end of this chapter), and sojourn in the Tabernacle of our Flesh on Earth;

Of the effusion of the Holy Spirit (see on v. 37, and note at end of this chapter), as a result of His Humanity, Death, Resurrection, and Ascension into heaven.

It celebrated the Ingathering of the Fruits of the Earth (Exod. xxiii. 16), and so was typical of the Spiritual Fruits to be gathered into the Church, after the effusion of the Holy Ghost.

Occurring, as it did, in the Seventh or Sabbatical Month, and being continued for seven days, during which they dwelt in booths, and having a Great Sabbath on the Eight day, which was the last festive day of the Jewish sacred year (see note on v. 37), it exhibited a consummation of the Mystery of the Incarnation in its beginning and fulness. Cp. on Luke xxiv. 1.

3. ὕπαγε εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν] Thou doest miracles; show Thyself to men, that thou mayest be praised by them. Because, in thus speaking, they had regard to human glory, therefore the Evangelist adds, "not even His brethren believed on Him." (Aug.)

4. καὶ ζητεῖ] On this use of καὶ, see Luke xxiv. 18.

5. οὐδὲ γὰρ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ ἐπίστευον] Observe, ἐπίστευον, the imperfect: they were not believing in Him; they were not stedfast in faith. They had made, as it were, "an act of faith" at Cana; there they ἐπίστευσαν (ii. 11) when they saw His miracles; but it had not ripened into a habit.

They knew Christ as their kinsman as to the flesh, but they had not faith in Him as God; they even charged Him with cowardice, "no man doeth any thing in secret;" and they intimated that they had suspicions as to the truth of His miracles; and they offered Him advice, dictated by carnal affection, and exciting Him to seek for worldly fame.

Observe, also, that the Evangelist does not decline to relate what at first might seem to bring disparagement on Christ and the Gospel; viz. that His brethren (i. e.), His Cousins, did not believe Him. An evidence of truth. And see how mildly their divine Master replies to their injurious speeches and mean counsels—thus teaching ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ὁ καιρὸς ὁ ἐμὸς οὔπω πάρεστιν· ὁ δὲ καιρὸς ὁ ὑμέτερος πάντοτέ ἐστιν ἕτοιμος. 7 [d] Οὐ δύναται ὁ κόσμος μισεῖν ὑμᾶς· ἐμὲ δὲ μισεῖ, ὅτι ἐγὼ μαρτυρῶ περὶ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ πονηρά ἐστιν. 8 [e] Ὑμεῖς ἀνάβητε εἰς τὴν ἑορτὴν ταύτην· ἐγὼ οὔπω ἀναβαίνω εἰς τὴν ἑορτὴν ταύτην, ὅτι ὁ καιρὸς ὁ ἐμὸς οὔπω πεπλήρωται. 9 Ταῦτα δὲ εἰπὼν αὐτοῖς ἔμεινεν ἐν τῇ Γαλιλαίᾳ.

10 Ὡς δὲ ἀνέβησαν οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ, τότε καὶ αὐτὸς ἀνέβη εἰς τὴν ἑορτὴν, οὐ φανερῶς, ἀλλ' ὡς ἐν κρυπτῷ. 11 [f] Οἱ οὖν Ἰουδαῖοι ἐζήτουν αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ καὶ ἔλεγον, Ποῦ ἐστιν ἐκεῖνος; 12 [g] Καὶ γογγυσμὸς πολὺς περὶ αὐτοῦ ἦν ἐν τοῖς ὄχλοις. Οἱ μὲν ἔλεγον, Ὅτι ἀγαθός ἐστιν· ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, Οὔ· ἀλλὰ πλανᾷ τὸν ὄχλον. 13 [h] Οὐδεὶς μέντοι παῤῥησίᾳ ἐλάλει περὶ αὐτοῦ, διὰ τὸν φόβον τῶν Ἰουδαίων.

14 Ἤδη δὲ τῆς ἑορτῆς μεσούσης ἀνέβη ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν καὶ ἐδίδασκε. 15 Καὶ ἐθαύμαζον οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι λέγοντες, [i] Πῶς οὗτος γράμματα οἶδε μὴ μεμαθηκώς; 16 [k] Ἀπεκρίθη οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν, [l] Ἡ ἐμὴ διδαχὴ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμὴ, ἀλλὰ τοῦ πέμψαντός με. 17 [m] Ἐάν τις θέλῃ τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ ποιεῖν, γνώσεται περὶ τῆς διδαχῆς, πότερον ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐστιν, ἢ ἐγὼ ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ λαλῶ. 18 [n] Ὁ ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ λαλῶν τὴν δόξαν τὴν ἰδίαν ζητεῖ· ὁ δὲ ζητῶν τὴν δόξαν τοῦ πέμψαντος αὐτὸν οὗτος ἀληθής ἐστι, καὶ ἀδικία ἐν αὐτῷ οὐκ ἔστιν. 19 [o] Οὐ Μωϋσῆς δέδωκεν ὑμῖν τὸν νόμον; καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐξ ὑμῶν ποιεῖ τὸν νόμον.

d ch. 3. 19. & 14. 17. & 15. 18.
e ch. 8. 20.
f ch. 11. 46.
g ver. 40. & 6. 14. & 9. 16. & 10. 19.
Matt. 21. 46. Luke 7. 16.
h ch 9. 22. & 12. 42. & 19. 38.
i Matt. 13. 54. & 7. 28, 29.
k ch. 3. 11. & 8. 28. & 12. 49. & 14. 10, 24. & 17. 8.
l ch. 12. 24.
m Isa. 50. 10. Hos. 6. 1—3. Matt. 6. 22. & 13. 12. Acts 8. 27—29. & 10. 1—6. Luke 8. 15. n ch. 5. 41, 43. & 8. 49, 50. Phil. 2. 3—8.
o Exod. 20. 1. & 24. 3. Acts 7. 53. Matt. 12. 14. Mark 3. 6. ch. 5. 16, 18. ch. 10. 39. & 11. 53.

---

by His example, meekness and forbearance to others. (Cp. Aug. and Chrys.)

6. ὁ καιρὸς ὁ ἐμὸς οὔπω πάρεστιν] Remark the word καιρὸς, season for gathering fruit. See Matt. xiii. 30; xxi. 34. 41. Mark xi. 13.

They had counselled Him to gain glory by earthly means. He resolved to obtain Glory by Humility. The hour of My glory is not yet arrived, of that glory which I will manifest when I come to judge. But your time or season,—the season which you love,—is always ready, i. e. the season of earthly glory. That glory is always ripe. You may always gather it from the trees of this world's praise.

We are members of the Lord's body; and whenever the lovers of this world triumph over us, let us say to them, Your season is always present; our season is not yet come. Our country is on high, our path to it is lowly. But why should any one decline the lowly path on earth, who seeks the heavenly country? (Aug.)

There may also be a reference to the Festival then in course of celebration. My Festive Season is not yet come; the Festival of My Glory is not yet come. Go ye up to this Feast, ye who seek a worldly glory. I shall celebrate a Festival hereafter, a Festival not of a few days, but an everlasting Festival; a joy without end, eternity without toil, serenity without a cloud. (Aug.)

Besides, in another sense, there may be a reference to the Feast of Tabernacles. It was the Festival of Ingathering of Fruits (see Exod. xxiii. 16), the καιρὸς καρπῶν.

Our Lord's Feast of Ingathering of Fruits was not yet come. But it would come when "He was glorified," and the Spirit was given (v. 39). Then He would celebrate a great Feast of Ingathering; for He would gather in a Harvest of Souls from all Nations.

— ὁ δὲ καιρὸς ὁ ὑμέτερος πάντοτέ ἐ. ἕ.] They who are friends with the world are never out of season. Their season lasts as long as this world lasts. But when the fashion of this world has passed away, then they will be out of season, and then will be the season of Christ, and of all His true disciples. Their Harvest is the end of the world (Matt. xiii. 39).

8. οὔπω ἀναβαίνω] This is the reading of the majority of MSS., and is retained by Lachmann. Other recent Editors have received οὐκ, on the authority of D, K, M, and a few cursive MSS., and also of some Versions and Fathers. Chrys., who is quoted in favour of οὐκ, has οὐκ—ἀρτι, which is equivalent to οὔπω.

That οὐκ is a very ancient reading cannot be doubted (see Jerome, adv. Pelag. iv. p. 521, and August. Tract. 28, and Serm. 133). But the evidence of the MSS. being what it is, it would seem too bold a step to introduce it in the text. It is also somewhat rash to affirm, that οὔπω has been introduced here into so many MSS. in order to meet the sceptical objection of Porphyry (see Jerome l. c.), that Our Blessed Lord's conduct as recorded in v. 14, is not consistent with His saying here, οὐκ ἀναβαίνω. It is at least as probable, that οὐκ may have found its way into some early copies by inadvertence, and thence have passed into various Versions. If οὐκ is the true reading, then the meaning appears to be, "I am not now going up to this feast, because My time is not yet fulfilled." And when His brethren had gone up, then He went up to the feast, not, however, like one who set his face to Jerusalem for that purpose, and with a festal company, but privately; and so as not to arrive there till the Feast was half over; and then (it must be inferred) His time was fulfilled. If the Feast was figurative of our Lord's Incarnation and sojourn on earth (see note at end of this chapter), then these words may have also a spiritual meaning. You charge Me with shunning the light, and censure Me for living in obscurity. But I do every thing in season. My time of obscurity had its own purpose and end. My time of public manifestation will have its design also.

10. ἀνέβησαν οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐ., τ. κ. αὐτὸς ἀνέβη εἰς τὴν ἑορτὴν, οὐ φανερῶς] It is not said that He remained concealed in Jerusalem, but that He went up privately. For three days the Jews sought Him in vain, for He was absent. And it was not till the fourth day of the Feast that He went up to the Temple (v. 14).

He would not go openly, lest by the concourse of people which His appearance and progress to Jerusalem would attract, He might give occasion to the cavils of His enemies that He was stirring up the people, and endeavouring to make Himself a King, and might so exasperate the Rulers against Him.

He went not up for temporal glory, but to teach wholesome doctrine. He went up privately, and, as it were, secretly. The Evangelical Truth of Christ lay concealed in the figurative shadows of the Annual Festivals of the Levitical law; "the body of them is of Christ," Col. ii. 17. (Cp. Aug.)

14. τῆς ἑορτῆς μεσούσης] The fourth day of the feast. He had made them more expectant by delay (see v. 11), and He had withdrawn Himself from their rage against Him; and so had endeavoured to calm them, and make them more attentive to His words. (Chrys.)

— ἐδίδασκε] 'was teaching:' and, it is added, οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ἐθαύμαζον, 'were wondering.' For further explanation of this verse, see note at end of the chapter.

15. πῶς οὗτος γράμματα οἶδε] γράμματα, letters. So διδάσκειν γράμματα. (Meyer.)

This question of theirs ought to have led them to recognize that His wisdom was from above. And therefore Christ conducts them to this conclusion by saying, "My doctrine is not mine." (Chrys.)

16. ἡ ἐμὴ διδαχὴ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμή] He again answers their thoughts. (Chrys.)

"I am not from Myself;" thus also supplying a refutation of the Sabellian heresy, which says that the Father and the Son are one, being only two names of the same Essence. (Aug.)

17. ἐάν τις θέλῃ τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ ποιεῖν] 'If any one will believe in Me.' For He had before said, "This is the work of God, that ye believe in Him Whom He hath sent" (John vi. 29). Believe, and you will understand. Or thus: lay aside your envy, hatred, and malice, which you now feel towards Me, and then all the darkness will have been removed which now blinds your eyes, and hinders your faith in Me. (Aug. Chrys.)

Our Lord says, "If any one wills God's will, and not his own will, he shall know of the doctrine." Self-will is the root of unbelief. Obedience to God's will is the root of Divine knowledge. (See John viii. 31, 32. 43.) For the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom (Ps. cxi. 10. Prov. ix. 10), and mysteries are revealed to the meek (Ecclus. iii. 10), and he that keepeth the law getteth the understanding thereof (Ecclus. xxi. 11).

"Intellectus merces fidei est." (Ambrose.)

19. οὐ Μωϋσῆς δέδωκεν] Has he not given you the law? have you not the law now in your hands? See next note.

— οὐδεὶς ἐξ ὑμῶν ποιεῖ τὸν νόμον] If you kept the Law, you would recognize Him, of Whom the Law speaks; and you would not τί με ζητεῖτε ἀποκτεῖναι; 20 [p] Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ ὄχλος καὶ εἶπε, Δαιμόνιον ἔχεις· τίς σε ζητεῖ ἀποκτεῖναι; 21 Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, [q] Ἓν ἔργον ἐποίησα, καὶ πάντες θαυμάζετε 22 [r] διὰ τοῦτο. Μωϋσῆς δέδωκεν ὑμῖν τὴν περιτομήν· οὐχ ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ Μωϋσέως ἐστὶν ἀλλ' ἐκ τῶν πατέρων· καὶ ἐν σαββάτῳ περιτέμνετε ἄνθρωπον. 23 Εἰ περιτομὴν λαμβάνει ἄνθρωπος ἐν σαββάτῳ, ἵνα μὴ λυθῇ ὁ νόμος Μωϋσέως, [s] ἐμοὶ χολᾶτε ὅτι ὅλον ἄνθρωπον ὑγιῆ ἐποίησα ἐν σαββάτῳ; 24 [t] Μὴ κρίνετε κατ' ὄψιν, ἀλλὰ τὴν δικαίαν κρίσιν κρίνατε. 25 [v] Ἔλεγον οὖν τινὲς ἐκ τῶν Ἱεροσολυμιτῶν, Οὐχ οὗτός ἐστιν ὃν ζητοῦσιν ἀποκτεῖναι; 26 καὶ ἴδε, [u] παῤῥησίᾳ λαλεῖ, καὶ οὐδὲν αὐτῷ λέγουσι· μήποτε ἀληθῶς ἔγνωσαν οἱ ἄρχοντες, ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ἀληθῶς ὁ Χριστός; 27 [v] [w] Ἀλλὰ τοῦτον οἴδαμεν πόθεν ἐστίν· ὁ δὲ Χριστὸς ὅταν ἔρχηται [w] οὐδεὶς γινώσκει πόθεν ἐστίν. (76/III) 28 [x] [y] Ἔκραξεν οὖν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ διδάσκων ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ λέγων, Κἀμὲ οἴδατε, καὶ οἴδατε πόθεν εἰμί· [y] καὶ ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ οὐκ ἐλήλυθα, ἀλλ' [z] ἔστιν ἀληθινὸς ὁ πέμψας με, ὃν ὑμεῖς οὐκ οἴδατε. 29 [a] Ἐγὼ οἶδα αὐτόν, ὅτι παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμὶ, κἀκεῖνός με ἀπέστειλεν. (77/I) 30 [b] Ἐζήτουν οὖν αὐτὸν πιάσαι· καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐπέβαλεν ἐπ' αὐτὸν τὴν χεῖρα, [c] ὅτι οὔπω ἐληλύθει ἡ ὥρα αὐτοῦ. (78/X) 31 [d] Πολλοὶ δὲ ἐκ τοῦ ὄχλου ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτὸν, καὶ ἔλεγον, [v] Ὅτι ὁ Χριστὸς ὅταν ἔλθῃ, μήτι πλείονα σημεῖα τούτων ποιήσει ὧν οὗτος ἐποίησεν; (79/I) 32 [v] Ἤκουσαν οἱ Φαρισαῖοι τοῦ ὄχλου γογγύζοντος περὶ αὐτοῦ ταῦτα· καὶ ἀπέστειλαν οἱ Φαρισαῖοι καὶ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς ὑπηρέτας, ἵνα πιάσωσιν αὐτόν. (80/X) 33 [e] Εἶπεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, [f] [v] Ἔτι μικρὸν χρόνον μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι, καὶ [g] ὑπάγω πρὸς τὸν πέμψαντά με· (81/X) 34 [h] ζητήσετέ με, καὶ οὐχ εὑρήσετε· καὶ ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγὼ ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν. 35 Εἶπον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι πρὸς ἑαυτούς, Ποῦ οὗτος μέλλει πορεύεσθαι, ὅτι ἡμεῖς οὐχ εὑρήσομεν αὐτόν; μὴ εἰς τὴν

p ch. 8. 48, 52. & 10. 20.
q ch. 5. 1—9. ver. 23.
r Gen. 17. 10. Lev. 12. 3.
s Luke 13. 15, 16. & 14. 1—6.
t Deut. 1. 16, 17. & 16. 19. ch. 8. 15. Prov. 24. 23. 2 Cor. 10. 7. James 2. 1.
u ver. 4. 13. ch. 18. 20
v Matt. 13. 55. Mark 6. 3. Luke 4. 22.
w Matt. 24. 23.
x ch. 8. 26, 42, 55. Rom. 3. 4.
y ch. 5. 43.
z ch. 3. 33. & 8. 26.
a Matt. 11. 27. ch. 10. 15. b ch. 8. 20, 37. Mark 11. 18. Luke 19. 47. & 20. 19. ver. 19.
c ch. 8. 20.
d ch. 8. 30.
e ch. 13. 33. & 16. 16.
f ch. 12. 35. & 13. 33. & 16. 16.
g ch. 6. 62. & 13. 1, 3. & 14. 12. & 16. 5, 10, 28. & 17. 11.
h ch. 8. 21. & 13. 33. Matt. 23. 39. Luke 13. 15.

seek to break the Law which says, "Thou shalt not kill." (Chrys. Aug.)

Our Lord refers to the Law three times in this chapter (vv. 19. 23), and the Law is mentioned also at vv. 49. 51. At the Feast of Tabernacles, in the seventh month in every seventh year, the Law was to be read publicly (Deut. xxxi. 10. Nehem. viii. 13—16). Hence the reference to the Law was very pertinent now. Perhaps also this year, in which our Lord came to Jerusalem, was the Sabbatical year.

21. ἓν ἔργον ἐποίησα, καὶ πάντες θαυμάζετε] I wrought one work, and ye are all surprised and perplexed. I healed a man on the Sabbath day (above, ch. v. 29); and ye do not reflect that this is not one work, i. e. not a mere single act, but part of a system of Divine government,—and that whosoever recovers his health on the Sabbath, is restored by no other power than that of Him with Whom you are offended, because He healed a man on the Sabbath.

22. Μωϋσῆς δέδωκεν ὑμῖν τὴν περιτομήν] He thus proves that His act of healing on the Sabbath was not a violation of the Law. There are many things paramount to the law of the Sabbath,—things by the observance of which the Law is not broken but fulfilled. Moses himself acknowledged even a ceremonial (how much more a moral!) commandment (that of Circumcision) to be superior to the law of the Sabbath, as these Jews understood it; for Circumcision is not of Moses, but of the Fathers; and I have done something superior and better than circumcision,—i. e. I have made a man every whit whole. (Cp. Chrys. here.)

Moses himself convicts you. For by the Law of Moses ye are taught to keep the Sabbath; and by the same Law ye circumcise a man on the eighth day; and if this eighth day falls on the Sabbath, ye administer circumcision, which was given to Abraham before the Law; and is, as it were, a seal of salvation, and men ought not to rest from works of salvation on the Sabbath. (Aug.)

The non-observance of the Sabbath in the case of Circumcision, is in fact the observance of the Law. If the Sabbath is not broken in this case, the Law is broken. So I, in healing a man on the Sabbath, have kept the Law. You, who are not the Lawgivers, defend the Law amiss; but Moses, who gave the Law, commands the Law to be broken for the keeping of a commandment (that of Circumcision) which is not from the Law, but from the Fathers. (Chrys.)

Circumcision, which produces pain, is administered by you on the Sabbath, and yet ye condemn Me Who have freed a man from pain on the Sabbath. (Theoph.)

The administration of Circumcision was attended with wounding of the flesh, and required the performance of certain "opera chirurgica et medicinalia, ne morbus ex vulnere ingrueret."

23. ὅλον ἄνθρωπον ὑ.] I healed the whole man, not only a part (see xiii. 10, καθαρὸς ὅλος. Cp. ix. 34); whereas Circumcision inflicts a wound. And that is to be performed on the Sabbath. Which work is the more sabbatical of the two?

24. μὴ κρίνετε—κρίνατε] Observe the difference between κρίνατε and κρίνατε,—the one expressing habit, the other an act.

26.] B, D, K, L, T, X, omit the second ἀληθῶς.

27. ὁ δὲ Χριστὸς ὅταν ἔρχηται οὐδεὶς γινώσκει] Yet the Scribes had answered from the Prophet Micah that He would be born in Bethlehem (Matt. ii. 1—6). Why then did they say, "no one knoweth," &c.? Because the Scripture had prophesied this also,—"Who shall declare His generation?" (Isa. liii. 8.) The Scriptures had foreshown the place of His birth as man,—but as God He was hidden from the evil, and sought the good. Hence our Lord said,—"Ye know whence I am" (v. 28).

28. ἔκραξεν] He cried aloud, as a Prophet. (See on i. 15, and below, v. 37.) Contrast this with ὡς ἐν κρυπτῷ, v. 10. Here was the promulgation of His Divine Message; here His public manifestation. He was now at Jerusalem, the capital city, in the Temple, at the great final Festival of the Jewish year, and He cried aloud twice; once in the middle of the Festival, once at the end (v. 37). Cp. also xii. 44, and His last cry with a loud voice on the cross (Matt. xxvii. 50. Mark xv. 37).

— οἴδατε πόθεν εἰμί] i. e. as man; but in that I am God. "I am not come of myself, but He that sent Me is true, Whom ye know not." (Origen, tom. xix.)

And in this respect ye neither know me nor my Father (John viii. 19). Ye know Me, and therefore your responsibility is greater, and your sin is heavier. But ye do not know Me spiritually and morally, so as to confess Me and obey Me; as it is said of the sons of Eli, "they knew not the Lord." 1 Sam. ii. 12, and compare Isa. i. 3. Titus i. 16. (Chrys. Theoph.)

30. οὔπω ἐληλύθει ἡ ὥρα] (see on xi. 4), i. e. because it was not His will to be then taken. Our hour is His will; what is His hour but His own will? By His hour, He means the time when He deigned to be slain,—not any time when He was compelled to die. (Aug.)

33. ἔτι μικρὸν χρόνον μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι] Why are you in haste to kill Me? Wait a little, and I will depart from you. (Chrys. Aug.)

34. ζητήσετέ με] Ye will weep over Me when you have slain Me. (Chrys. Aug.)

— ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγώ] He does not say where I shall be, but where I am; and He does not say ye will not be able, but ye are not able; thus showing, that though on earth according to His visible Body, He is both in heaven and earth, according to His invisible Majesty. (See iii. 13.) But He would not drive them to despair; and, therefore, when He had said, "Whither I go ye cannot follow Me now" (John xiii. 33), He said in His prayer, "Father, I will that they be with Me where I am" (John xvii. 24); and to Peter He said, "Whither I go thou canst not follow me now, but thou shalt follow Me afterwards" (John xiii. 36).

35. τὴν διασπορὰν τῶν Ἑλλήνων] Will He go to the Jews scattered among the Heathen, and teach them, and the Heathen by διασποραν των Ἑλλήνων μέλλει πορεύεσθαι, καὶ διδάσκειν τοὺς Ἕλληνας; 36 Τίς ἐστιν οὗτος ὁ λόγος ὃν εἶπε, Ζητήσετέ με, καὶ οὐχ εὑρήσετε, καὶ ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγὼ ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν;

37 i Ἐν δὲ τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ μεγάλῃ τῆς ἑορτῆς εἱστήκει ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἔκραξε λέγων, Ἐάν τις διψᾷ, ἐρχέσθω πρός με καὶ πινέτω. 38 j Ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμέ, καθὼς εἶπεν ἡ γραφή, ποταμοὶ ἐκ τῆς κοιλίας αὐτοῦ ῥεύσουσιν ὕδατος ζῶντος. 39 k Τοῦτο δὲ εἶπε περὶ τοῦ Πνεύματος οὗ ἔμελλον λαμβάνειν οἱ πιστεύοντες εἰς αὐτόν· οὔπω γὰρ ἦν Πνεῦμα ἅγιον, ὅτι ὁ Ἰησοῦς οὐδέπω ἐδοξάσθη. (82/VII) 40 l Πολλοὶ οὖν ἐκ τοῦ ὄχλου ἀκούσαντες τῶν λόγων ἔλεγον, Οὗτός ἐστιν ἀληθῶς ὁ προφήτης. (83/VII) 41 m Ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Χριστός· ἄλλοι δὲ ἔλεγον, Μὴ γὰρ ἐκ τῆς Γαλιλαίας ὁ Χριστὸς ἔρχεται;

i ch. 4. 14. & 6. 35. Lev. 23. 36. Isa. 55. 1. Rev 22 17.
j Isa. 12. 3. & 44. 3.
k Joel 2. 28. Acts 2. 17. & 19. 2, 10, 44. ch. 16. 7.
l ch. 1. 21. & 4. 42. & 6. 14. Deut. 18. 15. Matt. 21. 46. Luke 7. 16.
m ch. 1. 46. ver. 52.

---

them? ἡ διασπορὰ are the tribes in the dispersion (James i. 1); the Jews dispersed among the Gentiles. (Chrys.) διασπορὰ is the word used by the LXX for the dispersion of the Jews. See Deut. xxx. 4. Nehem. i. 9. Jerem. xv. 7. 2 Macc. i. 27, οἱ διασπαρέντες ἐν τοῖς Ἕλλησι.

On the various διασποραὶ of the Jews among the Ἕλληνες, see on Acts ii. 9.

The question therefore is one of incredulous mockery. Will he leave us who inhabit the Holy Land and Holy City, and go to strange and heathen countries in quest of those who are scattered almost everywhere? And yet this sceptical question (like many others of the same kind) was partly answered in the affirmative on the Day of Pentecost, when three thousand of the Dispersion from all lands believed; and it will be completely answered when the dry bones of Israel, scattered every where in the valley, are revived by the breath of Christ (Ezek. xxxvii. 1—11).

The Hellenistic Jews were regarded with contempt by the Hebrews, especially by those of Palestine. Hence the rivalry described in Acts vi. 1.

37. τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ μεγάλῃ] The eighth.

"Festum Tabernaculorum per septem dies celebrabatur, v. Levit. xxiii. 36, sed et octavus dies è legis præscripto festus et celebrandus erat, v. Levit. l. c.; propriè tamen hic dies à festo tabernaculorum ipso distinguebatur, v. Nehem. viii. 19. Succah fol. xlviii. 1, dies octavus est festum per se ipsum; nec hoc die octavo Judæi habitabant in tabernaculis, v. Levit. xxiii. 42, 43; vulgò tamen octavus quoque dies reliquis annumerabatur, ita, ut octo dies latiore ambitu festum comprehenderent 2 Macc. x. 6, μετ' εὐφροσύνης ἦγον ἡμέρας ὀκτὼ σκηνωμάτων τρόπον, μνημονεύοντες ὡς πρὸ μικροῦ τὴν τῶν σκηνῶν ἑορτὴν ἐν τοῖς ὄρεσι καὶ ἐν τοῖς σπηλαίοις θηρίων τρόπον ἦσαν νεμόμενοι. Joseph. Ant. iii. 10, ἐφ' ἡμέρας ὀκτὼ ἑορτὴν ἄγοντας κ.τ.λ. et paulo post: ἀνίενται δὲ ἀπὸ παντὸς ἔργου κατὰ τὴν ὀγδόην ἡμέραν—καὶ ταῦτα μὲν Ἑβραίοις τὰς σκηνὰς πηγνῦσιν ἐπιτελεῖν ἐστι πάτριον.

"Jam verò quæritur, quam ob causam dies octavus dictus sit μεγάλη h. e. cujus præcipua fuerit festivitas? Ex numero saltem victimarum, quæ singulis diebus festis offerendæ erant, res æstimari nequit. Primò enim festi tabernaculorum die tredecim immolandi erant juvenci, die secundo duodecim, tertio undecim, et sic imminuto ampliùs numero per reliquos dies, ita, ut die septimo non nisi septem offerendi essent juvenci, die autem octavo tantùm unicus; eademque fuit diversitas in numero arietum et agnorum, vid. Num. xxix. 13—36. Itaque aliæ rationes afferri debent, ob quas dies ille octavus dictus sit μεγάλη, i. e. præcipua, imprimis sancta. Erat nimirum ille dies octavus, ultimus omnium totius anni festorum, hinc Philo de Septen. et Festis extr. ἐπτὰ δὲ ἡμέραις ὀγδόην ἐπισφραγίζεται, καλέσας ἑξόδιον αὐτὴν, οὐκ ἐκείνης, ὡς ἔοικε, μόνον τῆς ἑορτῆς, ἀλλὰ πασῶν τῶν ἐτησίων, ὅσαι κατηριθμήσαμεν· τελευταία γάρ ἐστι τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ, καὶ συμπέρασμα σταθερώτερον, καὶ ἁγιώτερον, τὰς ἀπὸ τῆς χώρας προσόδους εἰληφότων ἤδη, καὶ μηκέτ' ἐνδοιασμοῖς τοῖς περὶ ἀφορίας πλαζομένων καὶ δεδιότων. Præterea primo et octavo festi illius die omni labore, operâque servili, abstinere debebant, Levit. xxiii. 39. Num. xxix. 12. 35, unde et octavus ille dies Judæis dicebatur יוֹם עֲצֶרֶת, quia nimirum illo die ab omni labore, ut quovis solenniori die sacro, abstinebant; dicebatur etiam שִׂמְחַת הַתּוֹרָה, lætitia legis, quoniam hoc die absolvebant lectionem legis, quam proximo sabbato, cui nomen erat שַׁבָּת בְּרֵאשִׁית, denuo incipiebant.

"Jam quod libationem aquæ ipsam attinet, solebant Judæi singulis hujus festi diebus, cùm offerretur sacrificium matutinum, aquam ex fonte Siloam, ad radices montis Zion scaturiente, cujus fontis aqua limpidissima et ad refrigerandum aptissima erat, haurire, haustamque super altare effundere. Nempe sacerdos phialam auream aqua ex fonte Siloam hausta implebat, quo facto, per portam aquarum (portam templi, sic dictam, ut nonnulli volunt, quia per eam hæc aquâ ex Siloam haustâ in templum inferebatur) reversus, ad altare clangentibus tubis et buccinis se conferebat, vinoque mixtam aquam, post disposita sacrificii membra, super altari effundebat. Hanc inter libationem singulis diebus festis Hallel magnum canebatur h. e. Psalmi 113—118. v. Lightfootus et Wetstenius ad h. l." (Kuin.)

— ἐάν τις διψᾷ] An allusion to the water drawn from the pool of Siloam by the Priests, and poured on the Great Altar in the Temple when the people sang (Isa. xii. 3; see note on v. 37 and Surenhus. p. 357), as a memorial of the water from the Rock in the wilderness, and typical of the living water of the Spirit, which would be poured forth when the true Rock (1 Cor. x. 4) had been smitten. Cp. Zech. xiv. 8. 14, a prophecy read at the Feast of Tabernacles (Bengel) concerning the living water to flow in the spiritual Jerusalem to all Nations from Him whose Incarnation was indeed the Feast of Tabernacles. See on John i. 14.

This the eighth day, or consummation, of the feast, was prophetic of the full outpouring of the Blessings consequent on the Incarnation. See note at end of the chapter.

38. καθὼς εἶπεν ἡ γραφή] These words introduce a saying which is no where literally in Scripture. But it is found in spirit and in substance in several places of Scripture (Isa. xii. 3; xxxv. 6, 7; xliii. 19; xliv. 3. Joel ii. 28. Zech. xii. 10; xiv. 8. Cp. John iv. 14). And the Holy Spirit often quotes Scripture in this way. See on Matt. ii. 23. And thus Christ appropriates Scripture to Himself, and declares its sense. See Cyril here, who well says, εἰδέναι καλὸν, ὅτι περ οὐ τὸ ῥητὸν οὕτως ἔχον ὡς προεμήνευται παρὰ τῇ θείᾳ γραφῇ τοῖς ἰδιωτοῦ λόγοις ἐνίθηκεν ὁ Σωτὴρ, ἁρμηνεύσας δὲ μᾶλλον πρὸς διάνοιαν.

— ἐκ τῆς κοιλίας] κοιλία = Hebr. בֶּטֶן (beten), Ps. xxxi. 10, where it is used with soul. (Cp. Job xv. 35.) The LXX often interchange καρδία and κοιλία. (See the passages in Kuin. here.) They will flow from his conscience and from his heart, for which the word belly is sometimes employed by a Hebrew figure. (Theoph. Cp. Glass. Phil. 5, p. 795.)

Or perhaps the sense is, even the κοιλία itself, or seat of natural appetites, will be changed and spiritualized by the grace of God, so as to become a fountain of holiness. Drink of this water, and the conscience will be cleansed and become a fountain, and flow for others. What is this fountain? Love. They drink it who believe. But if he who drinks deems that he ought to minister only to himself, the fountain does not flow; but if he is eager for his neighbour's good, it is not dry, but flows. (Aug.) He speaks of rivers, not of one river only: and thus intimates the richness and abundance of divine grace. The Holy Spirit, having been poured forth into the heart, flows forth more copiously than any stream, and never fails, nor is stagnant. Witness the wisdom of Stephen, the eloquence of Peter, the impetuosity of Paul. Nothing was able to resist them; they flowed like torrents in their course, and carried every thing with them. (Chrys.)

Thus our Lord explains the character of the water of Siloam as figurative of the illuminating graces of the Holy Spirit, sent by Him Who is ὁ ἀπεσταλμένος. (See ix. 7.)

39. οὔπω γὰρ ἦν Πνεῦμα ἅγιον] i. e. was not yet given. (Cp. Acts xix. 2.) The waters could not flow from the Rock, which is Christ, till the Rock had been smitten.

How then is it that we read that John the Baptist was filled with the Holy Ghost from his mother's womb, and that Zacharias, Mary, Simeon, and Anna were filled with the Holy Ghost? Because the gift of the Holy Ghost after the glorification of Christ was distinguished by certain peculiar characteristics from all previous bestowals of the Spirit. (Aug. de Trin. iv. 20.) But why now that Christ is glorified do not men speak with tongues, by the operation of the same Spirit who came at Pentecost? Because the Church herself, being diffused every where, speaks now with the tongues of all nations. You may ask me, Do I speak with tongues? Yes, I do; because I am a member of Christ's body the Church, which speaks in every language of the world. (Aug.)

— ὅτι ὁ Ἰησοῦς οὐδέπω ἐδοξάσθη] Therefore now that Jesus has been glorified, we may be sure that the gift of the Holy Ghost has been bestowed. Hence we may refute the Montanists and Manichæans, who pretend to have received the promise of the Holy Ghost, as if the gift had not been given before them. (Aug.) The prophets had grace from the Holy Ghost; but could not give it to others, as it was given by the Apostles of Christ. (Theoph.)

40. τῶν λόγων] His words. So Ten Uncials.—Eliz. τὸν λόγον.

41. μὴ γὰρ ἐκ τῆς Γαλιλαίας ὁ Χριστός;] They knew what the prophets had foretold of Christ; they knew where Jesus had been brought up, but did not pay attention to the place of His birth. But did they not know that He was of the seed of David? They were wilfully blind, and would not enquire into the evidence; they were not like Nathanael, who at first had asked, "Can any good thing n Ps. 132. 11. Micah 5. 2. Matt. 2. 5. Luke 2. 4. 1 Sam. 16. 1, 4. o ch. 9. 16. & 10. 19.

42 [n] οὐχὶ ἡ γραφὴ εἶπεν, ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ σπέρματος Δαυὶδ, καὶ ἀπὸ Βηθλεὲμ τῆς κώμης ὅπου ἦν Δαυὶδ, ὁ Χριστὸς ἔρχεται; (ϟδ) 43 [o] σχίσμα οὖν ἐν τῷ ὄχλῳ ἐγένετο δι' αὐτόν. (ϟε) 44 Τινὲς δὲ ἤθελον ἐξ αὐτῶν πιάσαι αὐτὸν, ἀλλ' οὐδεὶς ἐπέβαλεν ἐπ' αὐτὸν τὰς χεῖρας. (ϟϛ) 45 Ἦλθον οὖν οἱ ὑπηρέται πρὸς τοὺς Ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ Φαρισαίους· καὶ εἶπον αὐτοῖς ἐκεῖνοι, Διὰ τί οὐκ ἠγάγετε αὐτόν;

p Matt. 7. 28, 29.

46 Ἀπεκρίθησαν οἱ ὑπηρέται, [p] Οὐδέποτε οὕτως ἐλάλησεν ἄνθρωπος ὡς οὗτος ὁ ἄνθρωπος. 47 Ἀπεκρίθησαν οὖν αὐτοῖς οἱ Φαρισαῖοι, 48 Μὴ καὶ ὑμεῖς πεπλάνησθε; q ch. 12. 42. 1 Cor. 1. 20, 26—29. & 2. 7, 8. Acts 6 7.

[q] μή τις ἐκ τῶν ἀρχόντων ἐπίστευσεν εἰς αὐτὸν, ἢ ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων; 49 [r] ἀλλ' ὁ ὄχλος οὗτος ὁ μὴ γινώσκων τὸν νόμον ἐπικατάρατοί εἰσι.

r Mark 12. 37. s ch. 3. 2. t Exod. 23. 1. Lev. 19. 15. Deut. 1. 17. & 17. 4, 8. & 19. 15—19.

50 [s] Λέγει Νικόδημος πρὸς αὐτοὺς, ὁ ἐλθὼν νυκτὸς πρὸς αὐτὸν, εἷς ὢν ἐξ αὐτῶν, 51 [t] Μὴ ὁ νόμος ἡμῶν κρίνει τὸν ἄνθρωπον, ἐὰν μὴ ἀκούσῃ παρ' αὐτοῦ πρότερον, καὶ γνῷ τί ποιεῖ;

u Isa. 9. 1, 2. Matt. 4. 15. ch. 1. 46. v ver. 41. ch. 1. 46.

52 [u] Ἀπεκρίθησαν καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Μὴ καὶ σὺ ἐκ τῆς Γαλιλαίας εἶ; ἐρεύνησον καὶ ἴδε, [v] ὅτι προφήτης ἐκ τῆς Γαλιλαίας οὐκ ἐγήγερται. 53 Καὶ ἐπορεύθη ἕκαστος εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ· come out of Nazareth?" (John i. 46,) but he was an Israelite indeed without guile, and therefore came and saw (i. 46). (Chrys., Alcuin.)

---

49. ὁ ὄχλος οὗτος ὁ μὴ γινώσκων τὸν νόμον ἐπικατάρατοί εἰ.] And yet they, of whom these rulers said that they knew not the Law, believe in Him who had given the Law, whereas they who professed to teach it condemned Him, so that our Lord's saying might be fulfilled, "I have come that they who see not may see, and they who see may be made blind," John ix. 39. (Aug.) Here is their condemnation; the people believed, and the Rulers did not believe; they who were teachers of the Law, disobeyed the Law (for, as Nicodemus says, "Does the Law judge any one before it know what he doeth?"); they who know not the Law, obey the Law. (Chrys., who quotes Isa. i. 10. Mic. iii. 1.)

52. προφήτης ἐκ τῆς Γαλιλαίας οὐκ ἐγήγερται] Yet Jonah and Nahum, and perhaps Elijah, did arise from Galilee. So that they prove themselves ignorant of their own History, while they condemn Christ.

REVIEW OF THE CONTENTS OF THE FOREGOING CHAPTER.—The Gospel of St. John is eminently a πνευματικὸν εὐαγγέλιον, and to be interpreted spiritually. (See Clemens Alex. ap. Euseb. vi. 14.) Especially does it dwell on the Mystery of the Incarnation, and on its blessed results to the World.

In this Gospel, the Holy Spirit says that the Eternal Word became Flesh, and pitched His Tabernacle in Human Nature, ἐσκήνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν (i. 14).

And now, in this Chapter, He describes the Incarnate Word coming up and preaching in the Temple at Jerusalem, at the Feast of Tabernacles, the Σκηνοπηγία.

The two other great Festivals, the Feast of Passover and the Feast of Pentecost, were figures of things to come, and had a typical reference to the Blessings of the Gospel in Christ, Who is the substance of the Law (Col. ii. 17).

It is therefore reasonable to suppose that the third great Festival of the Ancient People of God,—the Feast of Tabernacles (Σκηνοπηγία), had also a symbolical relation to Christ.

What relation was that?

St. John seems to have suggested the answer to that question by saying, ὁ Λόγος ἐσκήνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν (i. 14). In a word, the Incarnation of Christ is the Evangelical Scenopegia, or Feast of Tabernacles. Cp. Mede's Works, pp. 266—270.

This conclusion is confirmed by other considerations. The Greek word σκηνὴ, as used by the LXX, represents two things,—

The Tabernacle, מִשְׁכָּן (mishcan), in which the Divine Presence, or Shechinah dwelt, שָׁכַן (shachan). (See above, on John i. 14.)

The Tents, or Booths, or Tabernacula, סֻכּוֹת (succoth), in which the Ancient People of God dwelt in the wilderness. And these tents were represented in the Feast of Tabernacles, when the people dwelt in booths. It also commemorated the overshadowing of the People with the Pillar of the Cloud, or heavenly tabernacle of the Divine Glory, in their course through the Desert. See Buxtorf. Synag. Jud. cap. xxi.

The word Σκηνὴ, therefore, represents both a divine and human habitation. And ἐσκήνωσε fitly describes the sojourn of our Lord in His Divine and human Nature in this lower world. He pitched his tent (σκηνὴν ἔπηξε) at His Incarnation in our Nature, and became our Emmanuel, God with us; and the Σκηνὴ of our humanity became the Shechinah of Deity.

The Σκηνοπηγία was pre-eminently the Feast of the Jews. It is called μεγίστη by Philo (de Septenario, p. 1193). See above, on v. 2. And the Feast of our Lord's Nativity, in our Flesh, is the Queen and Mother of all Christian Festivals. Without it, no Christian Passover, no Christian Pentecost.

The Holy Spirit speaks of the Israelites coming forth from Egypt as typical of Christ (Matt. ii. 15).

The Ark was brought into Solomon's Temple; and that Temple was dedicated at the Feast of Tabernacles (2 Chron. v. 2, 3. 7). And the Temple of God was a type of Christ's Body, in which the Fulness of the Godhead dwells. (John ii. 19. 21.)

The Jews omitted to keep the Feast of Tabernacles for many centuries, even from Joshua to Ezra (Nehem. viii. 13). And now, for many centuries, they have refused to receive the Eternal Word, Who became Flesh and tabernacled in us (John i. 14).

It is prophesied that all Nations will come up to keep the Feast of Tabernacles (Zech. xiv. 16—19). Is not this a prediction of the universal preaching of Christ, as Emmanuel, God with us?

Supposing the Σκηνοπηγία, or Feast of Tabernacles, to be typical of our Lord's Incarnation, and sojourn in this world, we may thence see some fresh light reflected on the incidents of this chapter, describing our Lord's ascent to the Σκηνοπηγία at Jerusalem.

Our Lord went up to this Feast (v. 10), not openly, but as it were in secret; His Nativity was private, in a poor inn. He spent a great part of His Life in obscurity at Nazareth. The Evangelist's words here are literally true of that time, before His Manifestation to the world, ἤμειναν ἐν τῇ Γαλιλαίᾳ, "He abode in Galilee" (v. 9).

But when His time was come, He went up and taught publicly at Jerusalem in the Temple (see Luke xix. 47; xx. 1; xxi. 37; xxii. 53). Especially did He manifest Himself twice with power in the Temple, in His Ministry, at the beginning of it and the end; when He cleansed the Temple (John ii. 14, 15. Matt. xxi. 12).

Thus, supposing the Σκηνοπηγία to represent figuratively His sojourn upon Earth, we see that it divides itself into two parts; the first part when He was in obscurity, the latter part when He came forth publicly and taught in Jerusalem.

Accordingly, we find that He came up to the Temple in the midst of the Feast of Tabernacles (v. 14), ἑορτῆς μεσούσης, i.e. when three and a half days remained to its close. And it may be worthy of notice, that in all probability His public Ministry lasted three and a half years.

May we not also compare Daniel ix. 27, where it is said He shall confirm the covenant with many for one week?

During His teaching in the Temple, as here recorded by St. John (v. 35), the Jews asked whether He would go to the dispersion among the Gentiles? He did go to them by His Apostles; and they came to Him at the outpouring of the Holy Ghost, to which He refers v. 39; and by means of which His Gospel was preached in all tongues to those who were scattered abroad (Acts ii. 9—12).

On the eighth day of the Feast (v. 37), He cried, "If any one thirst, let him come unto Me and drink." This spake He of the Spirit, which they who should believe in Him would receive after He was glorified.

The Feast of Tabernacles, properly speaking, lasted for seven days. That is, they dwelt in tents for a week. See Levit. xxiii. 34. 42. Numb. xxix. 12—35. Deut. xvi. 13. Neh. viii. 14. 18.

The eighth day, or Great Day, was a Feast by itself; it was the consummation of that Feast, and of all the Feasts of the year. The outpouring of the Holy Spirit was the crowning boon, and final gift which Christ bestowed on the Church, after that the week of His sojourn in His fleshly Tabernacle on earth was over, and when He was glorified (v. 39), and the Tabernacle of our Nature was carried up by Him into Heaven. It was the consummation of all the Blessings of the Incarnation.

It is said at the close of the narrative (viii. 1), that Jesus went to the Mount of Olives,—the place of His future Ascension into Heaven; whence He would send the gift of the Holy Ghost.

The law of Moses was read at this Feast (see note on v. 19), and the cycle of the Jewish Calendar of Lessons of the Law to be read in the Synagogues commenced with this Feast. And our Lord defends His own practice from the Law, and compares His own beneficent miracles with the ceremonies of the Law to which He appeals. He came not to destroy the Law, but to fulfil (Matt. v. 17). The Law was given by Moses, but Grace and Truth came by Jesus Christ (i. 17).

A question arises concerning the place at which Christ was to be

VIII. [1] Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἐπορεύθη εἰς τὸ ὄρος τῶν Ἐλαιῶν. [2] Ὄρθρου δὲ πάλιν παρεγένετο εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, καὶ πᾶς ὁ λαὸς ἤρχετο πρὸς αὐτόν· καὶ καθίσας born, i.e. to become Incarnate, or pitch His Tabernacle in our Nature (vv. 27. 41, 42); it was very appropriate at the Σκηνοπηγία; and our Lord tells the Jews that the time of His sojourn with them on earth is short (v. 33). His bodily Σκηνὴ would soon be removed from them.

At the Feast of Tabernacles, water from Siloam was poured forth on the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices in the Temple. This water was commemorative of the water miraculously flowing from the Rock smitten in the wilderness, to refresh the Israelites on their journey; and that Rock was Christ (1 Cor. x. 4), smitten for the sins of the world, and pouring out His Life for the supply of living streams to the soul; and for the hallowing of all sacrifices of prayer and praise to God. He is the true fount of Siloam, which is by interpretation sent, John ix. 7 (שִׁלֹחַ, shiloah, from שָׁלַח, shalak, 'misit'), for He was sent to save the world, and He is true who sent Him (v. 28), and He will return to Him that sent Him (v. 33). The water poured on the Altar was also figurative of the effusion of the Holy Spirit, which He sent, and which they who believed in the Incarnation of the Eternal Word should receive, after He was glorified (v. 39).

NOTE on ch. vii. 53—viii. 1—11.—This passage, from ch. vii. 53, to ch. viii. 1—11 inclusive, is rejected as spurious by many Editors, on the following grounds[1]:—

It is not found in some of the oldest and best Manuscripts, viz. A, B, C, I, L, X, Δ, and above fifty cursive copies.

It is not found in many Ancient Versions; particularly the Old Latin (Codd. Vercel. and Brixian.), the Old Syriac Cureton, the Peschito and Harclean Syriac, the Armenian, and other Versions.

It is not commented on by Origen, Cyril, Chrysostom, Theophylact, and others, in their Expositions of this Gospel; nor is it quoted by Tertullian and Cyprian on occasions when they could hardly have failed to notice it; nor by any Father of the second century.

It is not found in any consistent form in those MSS. where it exists, but in a variety of diverse recensions, with many discrepancies of various readings. (Lücke, 254. Davidson, p. 359. Alf. p. 708.)

It differs in style from the rest of St. John's Gospel, e. g. πορεύομαι with εἰς is not found in this Gospel; nor ὄρθρου, nor παραγίνομαι εἰς, nor ὁ λαὸς in this sense, but ὁ ὄχλος; nor such an expression as ἐδίδασκον αὐτοὺς, nor οἱ γραμματεῖς as the adversaries of our Lord; nor does St. John usually connect his sentences by means of δὲ, as here, vv. 1—3. 5—7. 9—11, but οὖν. See Lücke, ii. p. 256. Alf. p. 710. Meyer, p. 214.

It is said that it was derived from a narrative of Papias, a scholar of St. John, which was first inserted in the Gospel of the Hebrews (Euseb. iii. 39), and thence passed into this Gospel. Cp. Routh, R. S. i. 39.

On the other hand, it is found in D, F, G, H, K, U, and in more than 300 cursive MSS.

It is, however, to be observed, that in E it is marked with asterisks in the margin, and in sixteen cursive copies. In S it is marked with obeli, and in forty cursive copies. It is placed at the end of the Gospel in ten cursive copies. In four MSS. it is placed at the end of St. Luke xxi.

It is found in some MSS. of the Old Latin Version, and in the Vulgate, and in the Arabic, Persian, Coptic, Philoxenian Syriac, and Æthiopic Versions.

It is commented on by Augustine, in his Exposition of the Gospel (Tract xxxiii.); and he adverts in another place (de Conj. Adulterin. ii. 6, 7) to its omission from some MSS. "Hoc infidelium sensus exhorret, ut nonnulli modicæ, vel potius inimici veræ fidei, credo, metuentes peccandi impunitatem dari mulieribus suis, illud quod de Adulteræ indulgentiâ Dominus fecit (Joh. viii. 3—11) auferrent de Codicibus suis; quasi permissionem peccandi tribuerit Qui dixit 'Deinceps noli peccare.'" Cp. Aug. de Cons. Evang. iv. 17. De verâ Pœnit. c. 13.

It is also quoted by St. Ambrose (Apol. David. ii. 1), who refers to the scruple which the hearing of this chapter read in the Church might cause in some minds. "Non mediocrem scrupulum movere potuit imperitis Evangelii lectio, quæ decursa est, in quo advertistis Adulteram Christo oblatam, eamque sine damnatione dimissam. Nam profectò si quis ea auribus acceperit otiosis, incentivum erroris incurrit, cùm legit . . . . Adulteræ absolutionem. Lubrica igitur ad lapsum via." So also Ambrose, de Spiritu Sanc. iii. 3. Epist. vii. 58; ix. 76.

It is also adduced by St. Jerome, in his argument against the Pelagians (ii. 6), with an assertion that it is found "in Evangelio secundùm Joannem, in multis et Græcis et Latinis Codicibus."

It is treated as genuine in the Apostolic Constitutions, ii. 24.

Some assert that it was in the MSS. of the Armenians, and that they expunged it, βλαβερὰν εἶναι λέγοντες τοῖς πολλοῖς τὴν τοιαύτην ἀκρόασιν. (Nicon in Coteler. Patr. Apostol. i. p. 238.)

The various readings of this passage are indeed very numerous. But they may be reduced on the whole to three main Recensions:—that of the 'Textus Receptus;' that of the Codex D (Codex Bezæ), which is a somewhat abridged form of the narrative; and that of other MSS. differing from those on which the 'Textus Receptus' is grounded.

These Recensions are printed below[2].

Many of the objections from style may be in part removed by an examination of the various readings;

It is said that πορεύομαι is not used with εἰς by St. John, but it is found in vii. 35; and it is not easy to say what other preposition he should have employed here. ὄρθρου is not used by him elsewhere in this Gospel. It is used by St. Luke, but only once in his Gospel (xxiv. 1), and ὄρθριαι only once (xxiv. 22). ὁ λαὸς is found in D here, but ὁ ὄχλος is in S and other MSS.: ἐδίδασκεν αὐτοὺς is not in D; and for οἱ γραμματεῖς some MSS. have οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς.

As to the narrative by Papias, it is not clear that it relates to the same incident as that before us. Eusebius says (iii. 39) concerning it, that "Papias has put forth a history concerning a woman accused before the Lord of many sins (ἐπὶ πολλαῖς ἁμαρτίαις), which the Gospel of the Hebrews contains." And even if it were the same history as that in this passage, it is not evident that it might not have been recorded by St. John, as well as by his scholar Papias after him.

We find, then, that the external evidence on both sides is strong. The Western Church of the fourth century appears to have pronounced in its favour. Not so (it seems) the primitive Western. It does not appear to have been known to Tertullian or Cyprian. And the authority of the Eastern Church is against it.

There is, however, a difference in the nature of these two testimo-

[1] Cp. Lücke, Commentar. vol. ii. pp. 243—279. Davidson's Introduction, pp. 356—367. Tregelles on the Text of the Greek Test., pp. 236—243: and the Notes and Collations of Griesbach, Kuinoel, Scholz, Bloomfield, Tischendorf, Alford, and Meyer. The passage has been regarded as an interpolation by Erasmus, Calvin, Beza, Grotius, Wetstein, Semler, Wegscheider, Paulus, Tittmann, Knapp, Lücke, Credner, Tholuck, Olshausen, Davidson, Bleek, De Wette, Tischendorf, Lachmann, Tregelles, Meyer, and others; and defended as genuine by Maldonatus, à Lapide, Mill, Whitby, Fabricius, Wolf, Lampe, Bengel, Michaelis, Storr, Staeudlein, Hug, Kuinoel, Scholz, and others.

[2] Textus receptus à Scholzio emendatus.

Καὶ ἐπορεύθη ἕκαστος εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ. Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἐπορεύθη εἰς τὸ ὄρος τῶν ἐλαιῶν. Ὄρθρου δὲ πάλιν παρεγένετο εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, καὶ πᾶς ὁ λαὸς ἤρχετο πρὸς αὐτὸν, καὶ καθίσας ἐδίδασκεν αὐτούς. Ἄγουσι δὲ οἱ γραμματεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι γυναῖκα ἐπὶ μοιχείᾳ κατειλημμένην. καὶ στήσαντες αὐτὴν ἐν μέσῳ λέγουσιν αὐτῷ· διδάσκαλε, αὕτη ἡ γυνὴ κατειλήφθη ἐπ' αὐτοφώρῳ μοιχευομένη. Ἐν δὲ τῷ νόμῳ Μωσῆς ἡμῖν ἐνετείλατο τὰς τοιαύτας λιθάζειν· σὺ οὖν τί λέγεις περὶ αὐτῆς; Τοῦτο δὲ ἔλεγον πειράζοντες αὐτὸν, ἵνα ἔχωσι κατηγορίαν κατ' αὐτοῦ. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς κάτω κύψας τῷ δακτύλῳ ἔγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν. Ὡς δὲ ἐπέμενον ἐρωτῶντες αὐτὸν, ἀνακύψας εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς· ὁ ἀναμάρτητος ὑμῶν πρῶτος τὸν λίθον ἐπ' αὐτῇ βαλέτω. Καὶ πάλιν κάτω κύψας ἔγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν. Οἱ δὲ ἀκούσαντες καὶ ὑπὸ τῆς συνειδήσεως ἐλεγχόμενοι ἐξήρχοντο εἷς καθ' εἷς ἀρξάμενοι ἀπὸ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων ἕως τῶν ἐσχάτων, καὶ κατελείφθη μόνος ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ ἡ γυνὴ ἐν μέσῳ οὖσα. Ἀνακύψας δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ μηδένα θεασάμενος πλὴν τῆς γυναικὸς εἶπεν αὐτῇ· γύναι, ποῦ εἰσιν ἐκεῖνοι οἱ κατήγοροί σου; οὐδείς σε κατέκρινεν; Ἡ δὲ εἶπεν· οὐδείς, κύριε. εἶπε δὲ αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς· οὐδὲ ἐγώ σε κατακρίνω· πορεύου καὶ μηκέτι ἁμάρτανε.

Textus codicis D.

Καὶ ἐπορεύθησαν ἕκαστος εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ. Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἐπορεύθη εἰς τὸ ὄρος τῶν ἐλαιῶν. Ὀρθροῦ δὲ πάλιν παραγίνεται εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, καὶ πᾶς ὁ λαὸς ἤρχετο πρὸς αὐτόν.

Ἄγουσι δὲ οἱ γραμματεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι ἐπὶ ἁμαρτίᾳ γυναῖκα εἰλημμένην καὶ στήσαντες αὐτὴν ἐν μέσῳ. Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ ἐκπειράζοντες αὐτὸν οἱ ἱερεῖς, ἵνα ἔχωσι κατηγορίαν αὐτοῦ· διδάσκαλε, αὕτη ἡ γυνὴ κατείληπται ἐπαυτοφώρῳ μοιχευομένη· Μωϋσῆς δὲ ἐν τῷ νόμῳ ἐκέλευσε τὰς τοιαύτας λιθάζειν· σὺ δὲ νῦν τί λέγεις; Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς κάτω κύψας τῷ δακτύλῳ κατέγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν. Ὡς δὲ ἐπέμενον ἐρωτῶντες, ἀνέκυψε καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς· ὁ ἀναμάρτητος ὑμῶν πρῶτος ἐπ' αὐτὴν βαλέτω λίθον. Καὶ πάλιν κατακύψας τῷ δακτύλῳ κατέγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν. Ἕκαστος δὲ τῶν Ἰουδαίων ἐξήρχετο, ἀρξάμενοι ἀπὸ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων· ὥστε πάντας ἐξελθεῖν· καὶ κατελείφθη μόνος, καὶ ἡ γυνὴ ἐν μέσῳ οὖσα. Ἀνακύψας δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, εἶπεν τῇ γυναικί· ποῦ εἰσιν; οὐδείς σε κατέκρινεν; Κἀκείνη εἶπεν αὐτῷ· οὐδείς, κύριε. ὁ δὲ εἶπεν· οὐδὲ ἐγώ σε κατακρίνω· ὕπαγε, ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν μηκέτι ἁμάρτανε.

Textus codicum multorum.

Καὶ ἀπῆλθεν ἕκαστος εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ.

Καὶ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐπορεύθη εἰς τὸ ὄρος τῶν ἐλαιῶν. Ὀρθροῦ δὲ πάλιν βαθέως ἦλθεν (ὁ Ἰησοῦς) εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, καὶ πᾶς ὁ ὄχλος ἤρχετο· καὶ καθίσας ἐδίδασκεν αὐτούς. Φέρουσι πρὸς αὐτὸν (al. καὶ προσήνεγκαν αὐτῷ) οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι γυναῖκα ἐπὶ μοιχείᾳ καταληφθεῖσαν· καὶ στήσαντες αὐτὴν ἐπὶ τῷ μέσῳ, Εἶπον πειράζοντες· διδάσκαλε, ταύτην εὕρομεν ἐπ' αὐτοφώρῳ μοιχευομένην. Καὶ ἐν τῷ νόμῳ ἡμῖν Μωσῆς ἐνετείλατο τὰς τοιαύτας λιθάζειν· σὺ οὖν τί λέγεις περὶ αὐτῆς; Τοῦτο δὲ εἶπον πειράζοντες (ἐκπειράζοντες), ἵνα ἔχωσι (σχῶσι) κατηγορίαν κατ' αὐτοῦ· ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς κάτω κύψας τῷ δακτύλῳ (τῷ δ. = alii) κατέγραφεν (s. ἔγραψεν) εἰς τὴν γῆν, μὴ προσποιούμενος (al. καὶ προσοιούμενος). Ὡς δὲ ἐπέμενον ἐπερωτῶντες αὐτὸν, καὶ ἀναβλέψας (ἀνέκυψε καὶ) λέγει αὐτοῖς· ὁ ἀναμάρτητος ὑμῶν πρῶτον λίθον βαλέτω ἐπ' αὐτῇ (s. ἐπ' αὐτὴν τὸν λ. βαλέτω· alii aliter). Καὶ πάλιν κάτω κύψας ἔγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν ἑνὸς ἑκάστου αὐτῶν τὰς ἁμαρτίας. Καὶ ἐξῆλθον εἷς ἕκαστος αὐτῶν (s. εἷς καθ' εἷς) ἀρξάμενοι ἀπὸ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων καὶ κατελήφθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς (s. ὁ Ἰησοῦς μόνος) καὶ ἡ γυνὴ ἐν μέσῳ οὖσα. Ἀναβλέψας δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶδεν αὐτὴν καὶ (εἶδεν αὐτὴν καὶ = alii) εἶπε γύναι· (γύναι = alii), ποῦ εἰσιν οἱ κατήγοροί σου; (alii ποῦ εἰσιν οἱ κ. σ. =, alii ποῦ εἰσιν; habent) Ἡ δὲ εἶπεν· οὐδείς, κύριε· καὶ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπε· οὐδὲ ἐγώ σε κρινῶ· πορεύου, καὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν μηκέτι ἁμάρτανε.

ἐδίδασκεν αὐτούς. 3 Ἄγουσι δὲ οἱ Γραμματεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι πρὸς αὐτὸν γυναῖκα ἐν μοιχείᾳ κατειλημμένην, καὶ στήσαντες αὐτὴν ἐν μέσῳ 4 λέγουσιν a Lev. 20. 10. Deut. 22. 21—24. αὐτῷ, Διδάσκαλε, αὕτη ἡ γυνὴ κατειλήφθη ἐπ' αὐτοφώρῳ μοιχευομένη. 5 a Ἐν δὲ τῷ νόμῳ Μωϋσῆς ἡμῖν ἐνετείλατο τὰς τοιαύτας λιθάζειν· σὺ οὖν τί λέγεις περὶ αὐτῆς; 6 Τοῦτο δὲ ἔλεγον πειράζοντες αὐτὸν, ἵνα ἔχωσι κατηγορεῖν αὐτοῦ.
b Deut. 17. 6, 7. Rom. 2. 1. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς κάτω κύψας, τῷ δακτύλῳ ἔγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν. 7 b Ὡς δὲ nies. That of the West is affirmative; that of the East negative. The evidence of the former is the evidence of positive testimony; that of the latter is rather the evidence of silence.

For example: much stress has been laid on the omission of this passage by Chrysostom in his Exposition; and his example seems to have given a bias to the Eastern Church in this respect. As the Athenian Editor of Euthymius Zigabenus says (p. 560, ed. 1842),—Εὐθύμιος, εἰς τὸ κῦρος τοῦ Χρυσοστόμου στηριζόμενος, θεωρεῖ αὐτὴν (τὴν περικοπὴν) παρέγγραπτον. Hence also perhaps it was omitted by Theophylact and others. It may be observed also, on the evidence of Chrysostom, that he omits it in his Exposition, but no where says that it is spurious, though it is not improbable that he knew of its existence in some MSS. of his age. He passes it by in his Exposition. But it must be remembered, that his Exposition is not a theological treatise, but a series of Homilies ad Populum. And for such reasons as are suggested by Augustine and Ambrose (above, p. 239, col. 2), Chrysostom might have thought that this history might be perverted to evil purposes in the licentious age and city in which he lived and preached, and therefore have passed it by in his Homilies[1]. We have it in our Bibles now; but how few Sermons are preached and published upon it! Still, however, there is the silence of Origen, Cyril, and others, to be accounted for. It may also be thought, that the Discipline of the Eastern Church, which was very severe towards such sins as that of the woman in this history, may have acted as an impediment to its reception. "St. Basil's Canons prescribe fifteen years' penance for adultery; the Council of Ancyra imposes seven years; the Council of Eliberis five for a single act, and ten years if repeated." (Bingham, xvi. c. 11.)

As to internal evidence, it seems to be rather in favour of the passage.

The Pharisees had been publicly convicted by our Lord of ignorance and violation of the Law of Moses, of which they were the guardians and teachers, with regard to the Sabbath. (See vii. 19. 22.) They had sent officers to take Him, but He had escaped (vii. 44—46). Exasperated by this exposure and discomfiture, they would, it is probable, have endeavoured to set themselves right in the eyes of the people, and to show, if possible, that He Who charged them with contravening the Law of Moses was Himself at variance with Moses. They once tried to do this in vain, in regard to the Bill of Divorce. (Matt. xix. 7—9.) Then they had attempted to show that He had contradicted the Law of Moses by too much severity. (Matt. v. 31.) Now they might think they would be sure of exposing Him to a charge of inconsistency with Moses and Himself by too much laxity. "Moses in the Law commanded that such as this woman should be stoned. But what sayest thou? This they said tempting Him." (Cp. Matt. xix. 3.)

Thus this passage seems to be coherent with what precedes. The mode also by which our Lord turned back, as it were, the horns of the dilemma on those who pressed Him with it, and by its retorted force drove them from His presence, even by means of their own question, is very like what He did with divine wisdom and power on another occasion, when they assailed Him with the captious question concerning the tribute-money. (Matt. xxii. 17.)

Upon the whole, on considering the evidence of the case, we may come to the following conclusions:—

That this passage contains a true history of an event which occurred at the time here specified. The Early Church would never have invented such a History as this. Its tendencies were in the other direction.

That it is in all probability from St. John.

That it may have been delivered by him orally.

But that it was not written by him as a part of his Gospel.

Hence the variety of Recensions; hence also, perhaps, the narrative of Papias, which may have been derived from St. John's oral teaching (cp. Euseb. iii. 39), and so it may have been added, first to the margin here of some MSS., and thence have passed into the text.

Hence also, perhaps, we may account for the fact that it is found in some MSS. at the end of his Gospel.

That it is not to be called a part of Canonical Scripture, as the rest of his Gospel is Canonical Scripture. For by the term "Canonical Scripture" we mean, not only what is true, nor only what was delivered by holy men, but what they were inspired by the Holy Ghost to deliver to the Church as divinely inspired Scripture, and what they did deliver as such, and what has been received as divinely inspired Scripture, not only by particular Churches, such as the Churches of Italy or Africa, but by the Universal Church of Christ.

These conditions, which are necessary to constitute Canonical Scripture, are not satisfied by the present passage. It is indeed now received as Scripture by the Church of Rome[2], but it was not received by the ancient Eastern Church, nor, even, by the primitive Western Church. It cannot be said to have ever been received as Canonical Scripture by the consentient voice of Christendom. It seems to occupy a peculiar position; namely, a middle place, between Canonical Scripture and those few narratives of incidents concerning our Blessed Lord, which are found in primitive writers, and are probably true (see Fabric. Cod. Apocr. p. 330), but have never found their way into any Manuscripts of the Gospels.

Some moral inferences may close this investigation. It serves to inculcate the duty of thankfulness to Almighty God, for the solid foundation on which the proof of the Genuineness and Inspiration of the Canon of Scripture rests. This passage is found in three hundred MSS., and numerous Versions and Fathers. But it does not quite stand the test, nor quite satisfy the conditions requisite for its admission into the Canon of Holy Writ. How severe an ordeal, therefore, have the Canonical Books of Holy Scripture gone through! The strong claims of this rejected candidate for admission bring out more clearly and forcibly the value and strength of those which have been admitted into the Canon of Scripture. This passage consists only of twelve verses. Few persons doubt its authenticity. But its canonicity is the question at issue. How much and minutely has that been discussed! How rigid, therefore, is the scrutiny to which Canonical Scripture has been subjected, and which it has passed through, before it has been acknowledged as Scripture, i. e. before it has been received as the work of the Holy Spirit by the Universal Church of Christ! And in proportion to the rigour of that scrutiny is the solidity of the ground of our belief of its Inspiration.

It reminds us, also, of our own privileges in possessing many Manuscript Copies of the New Testament, which mount in antiquity up to a time before this passage was received even (as it seems) in the Western Church, i. e. to the primitive age of Christendom, and which enable us to read the Text in its pristine and original purity.

It leads us to examine carefully the grounds on which we receive the Scripture as Scripture, viz. as the divinely inspired Word of Almighty God.

It excites us to thank Him that He has not only given us Holy Scripture, but has also planted in the World His Church Universal to guard Holy Scripture, and to assure us of its Inspiration.

Cp. also what has been said above, on Mark xvi. 9—19.

Ch. VIII. 5. σὺ οὖν τί λέγεις] Hence they thought to be able to accuse Him of breaking the Law. But our Lord avoided their snare, and maintained Justice, without swerving from Mercy. (Aug.) —ἐνετείλατο, see Levit. xx. 10. Deut. xxii. 22, which, however, do not authorize the assertion, τὰς τοιαύτας λιθοβολεῖσθαι. But it is common for hasty accusers to forget the Law which they desire to be put in force. (Aug.)

"Sed, ut Michaëlis in Mosaisch. Recht § 262, pluribus argumentis haud contemnendis comprobavit, Levit. et Deut. ll. cc. sub pœnâ mortis intelligenda est lapidatio. Sic quoque Exod. xxxi. 14; xxxv. 2, pœna mortis indicitur violatori religionis sabbati, sed Num. xv. 32, 35, ejusmodi violator sabbati lapidatus esse perhibetur, cf. et Ezech. xvi. 38, 40. Cæterùm, nihil impedit, quò minùs cum Seldeno, Lightfooto, Lampio, Heumano, aliis, statuamus, γυναῖκα h. l. memoratam, fuisse puellam desponsatam, in stupro cum alio viro deprehensam, ἐν μοιχείᾳ κατειλημμένην, cui Moses Deut. xxii. 24, lapidationis pœnam indixit, cùm γυνὴ etiam de puellâ et sponsâ adhibeatur (v. Schleusneri Lex. h. v., nos ad Matth. i. 16), atque Philo de legg. special. p. 608, ed. Mang. hanc sponsæ infidelitatem εἶδος μοιχείας nuncupet." (Kuin.)

6. κάτω κύψας, τῷ δακτύλῳ ἔγραφεν] An emblem that the Law, which He Himself had given, had been written on earthly and stony hearts. (Cp. Aug. de Con. Evang. iv. 10.) "Hoc digito mysticè scribebat in terrâ, cùm à Judæis adultera esset oblata, significans quando de peccatis alterius judicamus, nostri nos debere meminisse peccati." (Ambrose, de Spir. Sanct. iii. 3.)

Bengel and others have supposed that there is a reference here to the curses written by the Priest against women charged with unfaithἐπέμενον ἐρωτῶντες αὐτὸν, ἀνακύψας εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, Ὁ ἀναμάρτητος ὑμῶν πρῶτος τὸν λίθον ἐπ' αὐτῇ βαλέτω. 8 Καὶ πάλιν κάτω κύψας ἔγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν. 9 Οἱ δὲ ἀκούσαντες, καὶ ὑπὸ τῆς συνειδήσεως ἐλεγχόμενοι, ἐξήρχοντο εἷς καθ' εἷς, ἀρξάμενοι ἀπὸ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων ἕως τῶν ἐσχάτων· καὶ κατελείφθη μόνος ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἡ γυνὴ ἐν μέσῳ οὖσα. 10 Ἀνακύψας δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ μηδένα θεασάμενος πλὴν τῆς γυναικὸς εἶπεν αὐτῇ, Ποῦ εἰσιν ἐκεῖνοι οἱ κατήγοροί σου; οὐδείς σε κατέκρινεν; 11 [c] Ἡ δὲ εἶπεν, Οὐδείς, Κύριε. Εἶπε δὲ αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Οὐδὲ ἐγώ σε κατακρίνω· [d] πορεύου καὶ μηκέτι ἁμάρτανε.

[1] This argument would be stronger, if (as Maldonatus asserts) Chrysostom, in this same exposition of St. John, speaks of this history as true. Maldonatus refers to "Chrys. Hom. in Johann. 60;" but I do not find such an assertion there. Can he mean ἑτέραν πόρνην πάλιν, ὑπὲρ ἧς ὠνείδιζον οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, ἐδέξατο, καὶ ἀθῴωσεν?

[2] Concil. Trident. Sessio iv. See also Maldonat. and à Lapide here. Both these able Commentators, especially the latter, bring forth strong reasons against the passage. But when they have done this, they suddenly remember the Tridentine Decree, which supplants the Original Scriptures by the Latin Vulgate; and then all Criticism is at an end. Indeed no member of the Church of Rome can consistently do otherwise than receive it. Here is a radical error of her theological system. In dealing with Holy Scripture she substitutes herself in the place of the Church Universal, and has thus deprived herself and her members of the true Scriptures.

12 [e] Πάλιν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς αὐτοῖς ἐλάλησε λέγων, Ἐγώ εἰμι τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου· ὁ ἀκολουθῶν ἐμοὶ οὐ μὴ περιπατήσει ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ, ἀλλ' ἕξει τὸ φῶς τῆς ζωῆς. 13 Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι, [f] Σὺ περὶ σεαυτοῦ μαρτυρεῖς· ἡ μαρτυρία σου οὐκ ἔστιν ἀληθής. 14 [g] Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Κἂν ἐγὼ μαρτυρῶ περὶ ἐμαυτοῦ, ἀληθής ἐστιν ἡ μαρτυρία μου· ὅτι [h] οἶδα πόθεν ἦλθον, καὶ ποῦ ὑπάγω· ὑμεῖς δὲ οὐκ οἴδατε πόθεν ἔρχομαι, καὶ ποῦ ὑπάγω. 15 [i] Ὑμεῖς κατὰ τὴν σάρκα κρίνετε· [j] ἐγὼ οὐ κρίνω οὐδένα. 16 Καὶ ἐὰν κρίνω δὲ ἐγὼ, ἡ κρίσις ἡ ἐμὴ ἀληθής ἐστιν· [k] ὅτι μόνος οὐκ εἰμι, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ, καὶ ὁ πέμψας με Πατήρ. 17 [l] Καὶ ἐν τῷ νόμῳ δὲ τῷ ὑμετέρῳ γέγραπται, ὅτι δύο ἀνθρώπων ἡ μαρτυρία ἀληθής ἐστιν. 18 [m] Ἐγώ εἰμι ὁ μαρτυρῶν περὶ ἐμαυτοῦ, καὶ μαρτυρεῖ περὶ ἐμοῦ ὁ πέμψας με Πατήρ. (87/III) 19 [n] Ἔλεγον οὖν αὐτῷ, Ποῦ ἐστιν ὁ πατήρ σου; Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Οὔτε ἐμὲ οἴδατε, οὔτε τὸν Πατέρα μου· εἰ ἐμὲ ἤδειτε, καὶ τὸν Πατέρα μου ἤδειτε ἄν. (88/I) 20 [o] Ταῦτα τὰ ῥήματα ἐλάλησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐν τῷ γαζοφυλακίῳ, διδάσκων ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ· καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐπίασεν αὐτὸν, ὅτι οὔπω ἐληλύθει ἡ ὥρα αὐτοῦ. (89/X) 21 [p] Εἶπεν οὖν πάλιν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἐγὼ ὑπάγω, καὶ [q] ζητήσετέ με, καὶ ἐν τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ ὑμῶν ἀποθανεῖσθε· ὅπου ἐγὼ ὑπάγω, ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν. 22 [r] Ἔλεγον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, Μήτι ἀποκτενεῖ ἑαυτὸν

c Luke 9. 56. & 12. 14. ch. 3. 17. & 12. 47.
d ch. 5. 14.
e Isa. 49. 6. ch. 1. 4, 5, 9. & 9. 5. & 12. 46.
f er. 18, &c. ch. 5. 31.
g ch. 5. 31.
h ch. 7. 28, 29. & 9. 29.
i ch. 7. 24.
j ver. 11.
k ver. 29. ch. 16. 32. & 5. 22. 27.
l Deut. 17. 6. & 19. 15. Matt. 18. 16. 2 Cor. 13. 1. Heb 10. 28.
m ch. 4. 26. & ver. 37.
n ch. 7. 8, 30.
o ch. 7. 34. ch. 13. 33. Ezek. 3. 18, 19. Eph. 2. 1.
p ch. 7. 34. & ver. 24.

fulness, and drunk by them in the 'water of jealousy' (Numb. v. 17), and that our Lord changes the order of proceeding by writing a curse against the accusers. See Burgon here.

7. ὁ ἀναμάρτητος ὑμῶν] Let the Law be enforced, but not by those who infringe it; let her who is a sinner be punished, but not by sinners. (Aug.) He is not fit to judge another who does not first judge himself. (Gregor. Moral. xiv. c. 13.)

— τὸν λίθον] the stone which was to inflict the sentence, and to be a signal for other stones to follow. (Cp. Deut. xiii. 9; xvii. 5.)

9. εἷς καθ' εἷς] A Hebrew formula, אֶחָד בְּאֶחָד (echad ke-echad), 'unus et alter.' (Rosenmüller.) Cp. Mark xiv. 19.

— κατελείφθη μόνος ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἡ γυνή] Two things were left together alone;—Misery and Mercy. (Aug.)

10. αὐτῇ] After this word some MSS. add γύναι, others ἡ γυνή: but neither is found in D, E, G, H, K, and numerous other MSS.

11. οὐδὲ ἐγώ σε κατακρίνω] What? does our Lord favour sin? No; observe what follows: "Go and sin no more." He therefore condemned sin, though He pardoned the sinner. Let them who love Christ's mercy also fear His truth; for "gracious and righteous is the Lord" (Ps. xxv. 7). (Aug.) "'Vade et ne pecces.' Habes auctoritatem, quia vetera donavit; habes judicium, quia futura præscripsit." (Ambrose, Apol. Dav. ii. 75.)

Christ is the Lion of the Tribe of Judah (Rev. v. 5) as well as the Lamb of God (John i. 29. 36). Let us not presume on the meekness of the Lamb, lest we feel the wrath of the Lion.

12. τὸ φῶς] It was early dawn (see v. 2); hence the allusion. (Bengel.) Christ is the Ἀνατολὴ (Luke i. 78), the Day-spring from on high; the rising Sun.

This also perhaps may confirm the truth of the above history (vv. 1—11).

This passage also serves happily as a contrast to the darkness and blindness of the Pharisees as just described; and as a transition to the assertion in v. 56, that Abraham, whom they claimed as their father, rejoiced to see His Day—that Light which they, his children, strove to extinguish!

Observe, that our Lord in His former Discourse at the Feast of Tabernacles had declared the mystery of His Incarnation; He now describes its gracious influences, especially in opposition to the Powers of Darkness, and for the Illumination of the World.

— περιπατήσει] B, G, H, T, have the subjunctive; but the future is right here, where human agency is considered—he will not walk in darkness. (Cp. iv. 14; x. 5.)

14. ὑμεῖς δὲ οὐκ οἴδατε πόθεν ἔρχομαι] 'whence I am coming.' I am the Sun of Righteousness. You neither know My rising nor My setting. But I, like the Sun, bear witness to Myself by My own light.

The Sun illuminates the face of him who sees and of him who is blind; but is seen by the one, and not by the other. So Christ, the Light of the world, is every where present to all, even to the unbelieving; but they cannot see Him, because they have no eyes in their hearts.

15. ἐγὼ οὐ κρίνω οὐδένα] For I have not now come to judge the world, but to save the world (John xii. 47). (Chrys., Aug.)

This also perhaps may be thought to be an allusion to the case of the Woman brought to Him for judgment. (See vv. 10, 11.)

17. δύο ἀνθρώπων ἡ μαρτυρία] In this reference of our Lord to the Law (Deut. xix. 15) we have an evidence of the plurality and distinction of Persons in the one Godhead. (Aug., Chrys.) When the Witnesses are said to be two, it is implied also that they are of the same Nature. If one is a creature, so is the other. If One is God, both are God. Compare what is said of the Three Witnesses (1 John v. 7).

Sabellius teaches heretically that the Father is the same as the Son. The Father is distinct from the Son, but not greater than the Son. He is of one substance with the Son, but He is a distinct Person from the Son. Our Lord says, "I and my Father are one" (John x. 30), "Ego et Pater meus unum (not unus) sumus;" one substance, not one person. The word 'unum' is an antidote to Arianism; the word 'sumus' is a refutation of Sabellianism. (Aug.)

19. οὔτε ἐμὲ οἴδατε] See above, vii. 28.

— τὸν Πατέρα μ. ἤδειτε ἄν] A proof of the Unity of Substance, as v. 17 is of the Plurality of Persons in the One Godhead.

20. ἐν τῷ γαζοφυλακίῳ] In the court of the Women (Mark xii. 41. Luke xxi. 1); a public place, where He might easily have been taken, if it had been His Will to be taken.

Whenever we read it recorded that our Lord spake such and such words in such and such a place, if we attend to the narrative, we shall find the propriety of the addition. "The Treasury" was a depository of money collected for the honour of God and relief of the poor; and the coin may be regarded as emblematic of the Divine Word stamped with the image of the Great King. Let every one contribute according to his power to this spiritual Treasury. Christ, teaching in the Temple, offered, as it became Him, rich gifts—the words of eternal life. (Origen.)

21. ἐν τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ ὑμῶν ἀποθανεῖσθε] This was the misery of the Jews—not only to commit sins, but to die in them. This is what every Christian ought to fear. Hence we resort to Baptism. Hence even the suckling is borne by the pious hands of its mother to the Church, that it may not depart this life unbaptized, and may not die in the sins in which it was born. (Aug.)

— ὅπου ἐγὼ ὑπάγω, ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν] They who die in their sins cannot come to the place where Christ is. (Origen.)

22. μήτι ἀποκτενεῖ ἑαυτόν;] Our Lord's answer shows that such a thought is sinful. (Chrys.) The suggestion of it was worthy of them who were about to kill the Prince of Life.

ὅτι λέγει, Ὅπου ἐγὼ ὑπάγω, ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν; 23 Καὶ ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς, q ch. 3. 31. & 15. 19. James 4. 4. 1 John 2. 15, 16. & 4. 5. & 5. 19. q Ὑμεῖς ἐκ τῶν κάτω ἐστέ, ἐγὼ ἐκ τῶν ἄνω εἰμί· ὑμεῖς ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου ἐστέ, ἐγὼ οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου. 24 Εἶπον οὖν ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἀποθανεῖσθε ἐν ταῖς ἁμαρτίαις ὑμῶν· ἐὰν γὰρ μὴ πιστεύσητε ὅτι ἐγώ εἰμι, ἀποθανεῖσθε ἐν ταῖς ἁμαρτίαις ὑμῶν. 25 Ἔλεγον οὖν αὐτῷ, Σὺ τίς εἶ; Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς r ch. 7. 28. & 8. 32. & 15. 15. s Deut. 18. 18. vv. 28, 38, 40. ch. 12. 49, 50. & 14. 10. & 15. 15. & 17. 8. ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Τὴν ἀρχὴν ὅ τι καὶ λαλῶ ὑμῖν. 26 r Πολλὰ ἔχω περὶ ὑμῶν λαλεῖν καὶ κρίνειν· ἀλλ' ὁ πέμψας με ἀληθής ἐστι, s κἀγὼ ἃ ἤκουσα παρ' αὐτοῦ, ταῦτα λέγω εἰς τὸν κόσμον. 27 Οὐκ ἔγνωσαν ὅτι τὸν Πατέρα αὐτοῖς ἔλεγεν. 28 Εἶπεν t ch. 3. 14. & 12. 32. Acts 2. 36—41. & 4. 4. & 6. 7, &c. u ch. 7. 28. & 4. 34. & 5. 30. & ver. 16. οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, t Ὅταν ὑψώσητε τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, τότε γνώσεσθε ὅτι ἐγώ εἰμι, καὶ ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ ποιῶ οὐδέν· ἀλλὰ, καθὼς ἐδίδαξέ με ὁ Πατήρ μου, ταῦτα λαλῶ. 29 u καὶ ὁ πέμψας με μετ' ἐμοῦ ἐστιν· οὐκ ἀφῆκέ με μόνον ὁ Πατὴρ, ὅτι ἐγὼ τὰ ἀρεστὰ αὐτῷ ποιῶ πάντοτε.

v Acts 13. 43. & 14. 22. Rom. 11. 22. Col. 1. 23. 2 Tim. 3. 14. James 1. 25. Matt. 10. 22. w Rom. 6. 6, 7, 19. 2 Pet. 2. 19. x Gal. 4. 30, 31. ch. 4. 7. y Rom. 8. 2. Gal. 5. 1. Heb. 3. 5, 6. ver. 32. z ver. 47. & ch. 5. 38. a ch. 3. 32. & ver. 26. b Matt. 3 9, 33. Rom. 4. 12 & 9. 7. Gal. 3. 7. c Rom. 2. 28, 29. & 4. 12. Gal. 3. 7, 29.
30 Ταῦτα αὐτοῦ λαλοῦντος πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτόν. 31 v Ἔλεγεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς πρὸς τοὺς πεπιστευκότας αὐτῷ Ἰουδαίους, v Ἐὰν ὑμεῖς μείνητε ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τῷ ἐμῷ, ἀληθῶς μαθηταί μου ἐστέ, 32 καὶ γνώσεσθε τὴν ἀλήθειαν, καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια ἐλευθερώσει ὑμᾶς. 33 w Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ, Σπέρμα Ἀβραάμ ἐσμεν, καὶ οὐδενὶ δεδουλεύκαμεν πώποτε· πῶς σὺ λέγεις, x Ὅτι ἐλεύθεροι γενήσεσθε; 34 w Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι πᾶς ὁ ποιῶν τὴν ἁμαρτίαν δοῦλός ἐστι τῆς ἁμαρτίας. 35 x Ὁ δὲ δοῦλος οὐ μένει ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα· ὁ υἱὸς μένει εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. 36 y Ἐὰν οὖν ὁ υἱὸς ὑμᾶς ἐλευθερώσῃ, ὄντως ἐλεύθεροι ἔσεσθε. 37 Οἶδα ὅτι σπέρμα Ἀβραάμ ἐστε· ἀλλὰ ζητεῖτέ με ἀποκτεῖναι, ὅτι z ὁ λόγος ὁ ἐμὸς οὐ χωρεῖ ἐν ὑμῖν. 38 a Ἐγὼ ὃ ἑώρακα παρὰ τῷ Πατρί μου λαλῶ, καὶ ὑμεῖς οὖν ὃ ἑωράκατε παρὰ τῷ πατρὶ ὑμῶν ποιεῖτε. 39 b Ἀπεκρίθησαν καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Ὁ πατὴρ ἡμῶν Ἀβραάμ ἐστι.
Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, c Εἰ τέκνα τοῦ Ἀβραὰμ ἦτε, τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Ἀβραὰμ

---

23. ἐγὼ ἐκ τῶν ἄνω] Hence the Manicheans and Apollinarians erroneously argue that Christ brought His Body from Heaven, and they quote St. Paul also (1 Cor. xv. 47), "The second man is the Lord from heaven." Did then our Lord mean that His Apostles had a heavenly body when He said, "Ye are not of the world" (John xv. 19). No; but He means that the thoughts of the Jews are from the earth, earthy, and that His thoughts are not as theirs. (Theoph.)

— ἐγὼ οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου] I am not of those who, like you, are of, i. e. from the earth, and entertain earthly and sinful thoughts; and therefore I could not entertain such an idea as ye impute to me, saying, "Will He kill Himself?" (Theoph.); but I am from the Father. (Aug.)

24. ἐὰν γὰρ μὴ πιστεύσητε ὅτι ἐγώ εἰμι] literally, that "I am." Referring to the words of Jehovah to Moses (Exod. iii. 13—15), "I AM that I AM." And therefore meaning, unless ye believe that I am God, ye shall die in your sins. (Aug.) Cp. above, on vi. 20, and below, v. 58.

25. τὴν ἀρχήν] principio; prorsus omnino, penitus: altogether, according to Rosenmüller, Glass. (Phil. p. 461), Loëzner, and others. Others read the sentence as a question, First of all, why do I even speak to you? So Lachm., Lücke. Others, as Meyer, Do ye ask what I say to you at the first?

But these interpretations do not seem to give a sense worthy of the occasion and the Speaker;

Rather, with St. Cyril, we may explain it;—I am what I am ever declaring to you, even the first, or beginning of all things; speaking to you by Creation (Gen. i. 1) as God, and in Moses and in the Prophets; the Everlasting Jehovah, "I am that I am." Cp. John i. 1, ἐν ἀρχῇ ὁ Λόγος, and He is ἡ ἀρχὴ καὶ τὸ τέλος (Rev. xxi. 6; xxii. 13); cp. 1 John i. 1, ὃ ἦν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς: ii. 13, ἐγνώκατε τὸν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς: whereas the Διάβολος is a murderer ἀπ' ἀρχῆς (v. 44).

This appears to be one of those speeches of our Lord, occurring often in St. John's Gospel, which can only be understood by reference to His Divine Nature, which He is asserting in this discourse.

26. κρίνειν] Consider the infatuation of the Jews, who, after so much teaching, and so many miracles from Christ, ask "Who art thou?" Our Lord, therefore, rebukes them as unworthy of further instruction, and proceeds now to speak to them of judgment. (Chrys.)

27. οὐκ ἔγνωσαν — ἔλεγεν] another instance of the expository character of St. John's Gospel (see on ii. 24).

28. ὅταν ὑψώσητε] See above, iii. 14. You will desire to crucify Me; and when you have crucified Me you will imagine that you have destroyed Me. But I tell you, that then especially, when you have lifted Me up, in shame, and yet in glory, you will know from My Resurrection, and from the Miracles wrought in My Name, and even from your own Captivity, consequent on your sin in rejecting Me; and from the graces of the Holy Ghost poured upon you to enlighten your minds,—from all these things you will know that I am He, i.e. that I am one with the Father, God with God. For God would never have worked such miracles by Me, as He will then work, if I had not been all-pleasing to God, and if I had not been the Son of God. (Chrys., Theoph.) Ye will then acknowledge that I am HE, i.e. that I am GOD. (Aug.)

30. πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν] when He lowered His discourse to an inferior level; but their faith was an imperfect one, as appears from what follows. (Chrys.)

31. ἐὰν ὑμεῖς μείνητε ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τῷ ἐμῷ] If ye remain stedfast. He refers to some who, after they had believed, had gone away from Him. It is a little thing to come to Christ, we must abide in Him. (Aug.)

32. γνώσεσθε τὴν ἀλήθειαν] They who believe in Christ, by abiding in Christ learn to see the Truth which is unchangeable, and is the bread of the soul, and is not changed into him who eats it, but changes him. (Aug.)

— ἡ ἀλήθεια ἐλευθερώσει ὑμᾶς] from death and corruption. (Aug.)

33. οὐδενὶ δεδουλεύκαμεν] not true; for they had been in bondage to the Egyptians, Babylonians, and others; but Christ was speaking of the slavery of sin, and does not correct them. (Chrys.)

34. πᾶς ὁ ποιῶν τὴν ἁμαρτίαν δοῦλός ἐστι τῆς ἁμαρτίας] The slave of miserable slavery! The slave of Sin. A man may find escape and rest from a tyrannical master, but whither can the slave of sin fly? He drags his master with him. He alone can free us from sin, Who came into the world without sin, and offered Himself a sacrifice for sin. (Aug.)

35. δοῦλος οὐ μένει ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ] Many sinners enter the Church which is Christ's house, but Christ abides in it for ever. Here is our hope that we may cease to be slaves, and be freed by Him Who is free, and gave not silver and gold, but His own blood for us; and Who is our Head; and "if He makes us free, we are free indeed." (Aug.)

36. ὄντως ἐλεύθεροι ἔσεσθε] Do not therefore abuse your freedom, to sin freely; but use it, not to sin; your will is free if it is holy; you will be free, if you serve righteousness. (Aug.)

37. σπέρμα Ἀβραάμ ἐστε] by the propagation of the flesh, not by faith of the heart, or imitation of life. "If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham." They were therefore a degenerate seed; we are made true sons of Abraham by God's grace; for if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. Gal. iii. 16. 29. (Aug.)

ἐποιεῖτε ἄν. 40 Νῦν δὲ ζητεῖτέ με ἀποκτεῖναι, ἄνθρωπον ὃς τὴν ἀλήθειαν ὑμῖν λελάληκα, [d] ἣν ἤκουσα παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ· τοῦτο Ἀβραὰμ οὐκ ἐποίησεν. 41 [e] Ὑμεῖς ποιεῖτε τὰ ἔργα τοῦ πατρὸς ὑμῶν. Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ, Ἡμεῖς ἐκ πορνείας οὐ γεγεννήμεθα· ἕνα πατέρα ἔχομεν τὸν Θεόν. 42 [f] Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Εἰ ὁ Θεὸς πατὴρ ὑμῶν ἦν, ἠγαπᾶτε ἂν ἐμέ· ἐγὼ γὰρ ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθον καὶ ἥκω· οὐδὲ γὰρ ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ ἐλήλυθα, ἀλλ' ἐκεῖνός με ἀπέστειλε. 43 [g] Διατί τὴν λαλιὰν τὴν ἐμὴν οὐ γινώσκετε; ὅτι οὐ δύνασθε ἀκούειν τὸν λόγον τὸν ἐμόν. 44 [h] Ὑμεῖς ἐκ πατρὸς τοῦ Διαβόλου ἐστὲ, καὶ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας τοῦ πατρὸς ὑμῶν θέλετε ποιεῖν. [i] Ἐκεῖνος ἀνθρωποκτόνος ἦν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, καὶ ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ οὐχ ἕστηκεν· ὅτι οὐκ ἔστιν ἀλήθεια ἐν αὐτῷ. ὅταν λαλῇ τὸ ψεῦδος, ἐκ τῶν ἰδίων λαλεῖ· [j] ὅτι ψεύστης ἐστὶ καὶ ὁ πατὴρ αὐτοῦ. 45 Ἐγὼ δὲ ὅτι τὴν ἀλήθειαν λέγω οὐ πιστεύετέ μοι. 46 [k] Τίς ἐξ ὑμῶν ἐλέγχει με περὶ ἁμαρτίας; εἰ δὲ ἀλήθειαν λέγω, διατί ὑμεῖς οὐ πιστεύετέ μοι; 47 [l] Ὁ ὢν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ τὰ ῥήματα τοῦ Θεοῦ ἀκούει· διὰ τοῦτο ὑμεῖς οὐκ ἀκούετε, ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐκ ἐστέ. 48 [m] Ἀπεκρίθησαν οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Οὐ καλῶς λέγομεν ἡμεῖς, ὅτι Σαμαρείτης εἶ σὺ, καὶ δαιμόνιον ἔχεις; 49 Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, Ἐγὼ δαιμόνιον οὐκ ἔχω· ἀλλὰ τιμῶ τὸν Πατέρα μου, καὶ ὑμεῖς ἀτιμάζετέ με. 50 [n] Ἐγὼ δὲ οὐ ζητῶ τὴν δόξαν μου· ἔστιν ὁ ζητῶν καὶ κρίνων. 51 [o] Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ἐάν τις τὸν λόγον τὸν ἐμὸν τηρήσῃ, θάνατον οὐ μὴ θεωρήσῃ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. 52 Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, Νῦν ἐγνώκαμεν ὅτι δαιμόνιον ἔχεις. Ἀβραὰμ ἀπέθανε, καὶ οἱ προφῆται· καὶ σὺ λέγεις, Ἐάν τις τὸν λόγον μου τηρήσῃ, οὐ μὴ γεύσηται θανάτου εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. 53 [p] Μὴ σὺ μείζων εἶ τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν Ἀβραὰμ, ὅστις ἀπέθανε; καὶ οἱ προφῆται ἀπέθανον· τίνα σεαυτὸν σὺ ποιεῖς; 54 [q] Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, Ἐὰν ἐγὼ δοξάζω ἐμαυτὸν, ἡ δόξα μου οὐδέν ἐστιν· ἔστιν ὁ Πατήρ μου ὁ δοξάζων με, ὃν ὑμεῖς λέγετε ὅτι Θεὸς ἡμῶν ἐστι, 55 [r] καὶ οὐκ ἐγνώκατε αὐτόν· ἐγὼ δὲ οἶδα αὐτὸν, καὶ ἐὰν εἴπω ὅτι οὐκ οἶδα

d ver. 26, 38. e Isa. 63. 16. & 64. 8.
f Heb. 1. 3. 1 John 5. 1. ch. 16. 27. & 17. 8, 15. & 1. 18. & 5. 43.
g ch. 5. 44. Matt. 13. 14.
h Matt. 3. 7. & 13 38. 1 John 3. 8. Jude ver. 6.
i Gen. 3. 4, 5. 1 John 3. 12. Heb. 2. 14. 1 Pet. 5. 8.
j 2 Cor. 11. 3. 2 Chron. 18. 20, 21. Acts 5. 3. & 13. 10. 2 Thess. 2. 9, 10. Rev. 12. 9.
k Matt. 26. 60. l ver. 37. ch. 5. 38. 1 John 4. 6.
m ch. 7. 20. & 10. 20. Matt. 10. 25.
n ch. 7. 18.
o ch 3. 16. & 5. 24. & 6. 40.
p ch. 4. 12.
q vv. 17, 18, 31, 37, 41. ch. 5. 31.
r ch. 7. 28, 29.

---

40. τοῦτο Ἀβραὰμ οὐκ ἐποίησεν] But how could he do it? Because the Spiritual Advent of Christ has ever cheered the Saints of God. Wherefore we may conclude that they, who after their regeneration, and other graces conferred on them, are guilty of sin, "crucify afresh the Son of God." (Origen.)

41. ἐκ πορνείας οὐ γεγεννήμεθα] The Jews who heard our Lord, had now begun to perceive that He was speaking spiritually; and it is the usage of Scripture to describe as fornication, the prostitution of the soul to false gods. (Aug.)

42. ἐξῆλθον καὶ ἥκω] I came forth from the Father, and am come to you. "Exii et adsum."

43. οὐ δύνασθε ἀκούειν τὸν λόγον τὸν ἐμόν] cannot, i. e. will not; cannot, on account of your perverse will, and malignant minds. (Theoph.) ἀκούειν, with an accusative, something more than to hear, to consider.

44. ἐκ πατρὸς τοῦ Διαβόλου ἐστέ] Of your father the devil; "not by generation, but by imitation." (Aug.) In words you claim to be children of God; by works ye show yourselves children of the Devil. (Theoph.) — θέλετε ποιεῖν] Ye eagerly desire to do; i. e. to kill Me Who am the Truth. On this use of θέλω, see v. 35; vi. 21. Acts x. 10.

— ἐκεῖνος ἀνθρωποκτόνος ἦν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς] Therefore to tempt a man to evil (as the Devil tempted Adam) is murder; and since in Adam all died, the Devil has been a murderer from the beginning. (Aug., Origen.) — ψεύστης ἐστὶ καὶ ὁ πατὴρ αὐτοῦ] Bengel, Meyer, and others, interpret πατὴρ αὐτοῦ to mean "father of the liar," i. e. the liar is a child of the devil.

But αὐτοῦ seems rather to refer to ψεύδους; and the sense is, I am the Truth; but he is a liar, and something more, &c. Cp. Lücke here, and Winer, pp. 104. 132. 169. Something more than a liar; he is the father of that which is false: τοῦ ψεύδους is to be supplied from the preceding sentence. Cp. 2 Thess. ii. 11.

From these words πατὴρ αὐτοῦ, some have imagined that the Devil has a father. This is the error of the Manichæans. "Pater ejus," i. e. "mendacii." St. Jerome (on Isa. xviii.), and cp. Glass. Phil. S. p. 329. Our Lord calls the Devil the Father of falsehood in the abstract, τοῦ ψεύδους; as God is the Father of the Truth.

Men, when they tell a lie, use what does not belong to them, but to the Devil; but the Devil, when he tells a lie, uses what is his own offspring, for he is the Father of lies. And ye will not believe in Me, because I speak the truth; and thus ye prove yourselves the children of him who is the Father of lies. (Theoph.)

46—59.] On these verses, see Greg. M. Hom. in Ev. i. 18, p. 1507.

51. θάνατον οὐ μὴ θεωρήσῃ] 'shall never see,' that is, never feel. He who spake was about to die, and He spake to men who were about to die. What then did He mean, when He spake thus? He meant, that whosoever keeps His saying shall never see that Death, from which He came to save us, viz. everlasting death, the death of damnation with the Devil and his angels; that is real death. Other death is only a translation. (Aug.) When, therefore, the Psalmist asks, What man is he that liveth and shall not see death?" (Ps. lxxxix. 48,) we may reply, "he who keepeth Christ's Word." And this our Lord meant when He said (Matt. xvi. 28), "Verily I say unto you, there be some standing here that shall not taste of death." They who stand by Christ, and continue to stand by Him to the end, they shall never taste of death. (Origen.)

See above, on Matt. xvi. 28.

52. Ἀβραὰμ ἀπέθανε] The Jews were blind, and only looked at the death of the flesh, and therefore could not see the light of Christ's words. (Greg. Hom. xviii. in Evang.) According to that death of which our Lord spake, neither Abraham was dead nor the Prophets. They were dead, but alive. The Jews were alive, but dead. Consider what our Lord said to the Sadducees, who were dead in soul, concerning the Patriarchs who were alive. (Matt. xxii. 31.)

Our Lord declared in a remarkable manner, in the history of Dives and Lazarus, that Abraham is not dead; for He said that the beggar was carried by angels into Abraham's bosom. (Luke xvi. 22, 23.) Could the place of rest and joy, in which are the departed spirits of the righteous, be the bosom of one who is dead? Could Paradise, to which our Lord's soul went at His death (Luke xxiii. 43), be the bosom of one who is dead? No; Abraham never saw death, never tasted death; but death with him was the joyful passage to a better life. And why? Because he saw Christ's day with faith, and was glad; because he saw the day of Him Who has tasted death for every man (Heb. ii. 9); Who has taken away its sting (1 Cor. xv. 55, 56), and opened the kingdom of heaven to all believers. Abraham was indeed dead in flesh, but alive in soul.

— γεύσηται] So A, C, D, L, S, X, and other MSS. Elz. has γεύσεται. See above, iv. 14.

53. σὺ ποιεῖς] σὺ is expunged by some recent Editors (Lachm., Tisch., Alf.); but it is found in the major part of the MSS., and adds force to the sense.

54. ἡμῶν] Rightly received by recent Editors (Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., Tisch., Alf.) from A, C, G, K, L, M, S, and other MSS. Elz. has ὑμῶν. Cp. x. 36, λέγετε ὅτι βλασφημεῖς, and Acts i. 4,—where the words of the speaker are adopted, as here.

s ch. 15. 10. Heb. 5. 8, 9.
t Gen. 15. 6. Rom. 4. 18—22. Gal. 3. 8. Heb. 11. 13.
u Exod. 3. 14. Isa. 43. 13. ch. 17. 5, 24. Col. 1. 17.
v ch. 10. 31, 39. & 11. 8. Luke 4. 30.

αὐτὸν, ἔσομαι ὅμοιος ὑμῶν ψεύστης. ἀλλ' οἶδα αὐτὸν, καὶ [s]τὸν λόγον αὐτοῦ τηρῶ. 56 [t]Ἀβραὰμ ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν ἠγαλλιάσατο ἵνα ἴδῃ τὴν ἡμέραν τὴν ἐμὴν, καὶ εἶδε καὶ ἐχάρη. 57 Εἶπον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι πρὸς αὐτόν, Πεντήκοντα ἔτη οὔπω ἔχεις, καὶ Ἀβραὰμ ἑώρακας; 58 [u]Εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ γενέσθαι, ἐγώ εἰμι. 59 [v]Ἦραν οὖν λίθους ἵνα βάλωσιν ἐπ' αὐτόν· Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἐκρύβη, καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ, διελθὼν διὰ μέσου αὐτῶν, καὶ παρῆγεν οὕτως.

a ch. 11. 4, 40—42. & 2. 11.
b ch. 4. 34. & 11. 9. & 12. 35. c ch. 1. 5, 9. & 8. 12. ch. 12. 35, 46.
d Mark 7. 33. & 8. 23.

IX. 1 Καὶ παράγων εἶδεν ἄνθρωπον τυφλὸν ἐκ γενετῆς. 2 καὶ ἠρώτησαν αὐτὸν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ λέγοντες, Ῥαββὶ, τίς ἥμαρτεν, οὗτος, ἢ οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ, ἵνα τυφλὸς γεννηθῇ; 3 Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, Οὔτε οὗτος ἥμαρτεν οὔτε οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ· [a]ἀλλ' ἵνα φανερωθῇ τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ. 4 [b]Ἐμὲ δεῖ ἐργάζεσθαι τὰ ἔργα τοῦ πέμψαντός με ἕως ἡμέρα ἐστίν· ἔρχεται νὺξ ὅτε οὐδεὶς δύναται ἐργάζεσθαι. 5 [c]ὅταν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ ὦ, φῶς εἰμι τοῦ κόσμου. 6 [d]Ταῦτα εἰπὼν ἔπτυσε χαμαὶ, καὶ ἐποίησε πηλὸν ἐκ τοῦ πτύσματος, καὶ ἐπέχρισε τὸν

---

56. Ἀβραὰμ ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν ἠγαλλιάσατο—ἡμέραν] i. e. he rejoiced with faith and hope that he should see. The particle ἵνα often serves to connect verbs of willing and desiring in N. T., as νά does in modern Greek. (See John iv. 47; xv. 8; xvii. 15. 24. Matt. vii. 12. Mark vi. 25.) So Teles in Stob. Serm. 95, ἵνα Ζεὺς γένηται ἐπιθυμήσει. Cp. 1 Cor. ix. 15, καλὸν ἵνα, and Winer, pp. 301—303.

The name Isaac יִצְחָק (laughing), Gen. xvii. 17, had a reference to this ἀγαλλίασις,—for in Isaac, the promised seed, he had a vision, of Christ, in Whom all rejoice. See St. Jerome ad loc. Jones, Proper Names of O. T. p. 163. A glorious testimony given to Abraham, Creator of Abraham, and seed of Abraham.

— ἡμέραν] Christ's coming is beautifully called the Day; for it is the sequel of, and is opposite to, Night. And it is happily so called here, where He is describing Himself as the Light of the World. See above, v. 12, and cp. Cyril here.

My day. Does our Lord mean the Day in which He was incarnate, or the Day of His Divinity—that Day which has neither morning or evening? I believe that Abraham saw both by faith and hope, and therefore in joy. And how great was the joy of his heart when he saw the Word of God, and His brightness beaming on holy minds, and yet remaining as God with the Father; and hereafter about to come in the flesh, and yet never to be separated from the bosom of the Father! (Aug.)

Abraham saw the day of Christ, i. e. the cross of Christ, when he laid the wood on his son, and in will offered up Isaac, Heb. xi. 19; and when he believed the promise, that of his seed should come the Saviour, in Whom all nations would be blessed, Gen. xxii. 18. (Chrys. Theoph.)

See also Article VII. of the Church of England, and the passages quoted from Holy Scripture and the Fathers by Bp. Beveridge and Prof. Browne.

57. πεντήκοντα ἔτη οὔπω ἔχεις] Chrysostom reads τεσσαράκοντα, forty; but Irenæus had πεντήκοντα. Our Lord was then about thirty-three years old. (Theophyl., who inquires why they did not rather say forty than fifty?)

The inference of St. Irenæus (ii. 39) from this passage, that our Lord's life upon earth extended to fifty years, was corrected by the writers of the fourth century, e. g. Euseb. (i. 10), Theodoret (ad Dan. ix. tom. ii. p. 1250). And indeed St. Hippolytus, the scholar of Irenæus, had already rectified it. See his Comment on Daniel, Num. iv., where he says that our Lord suffered in His thirty-third year.

58. πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ γενέσθαι, ἐγώ εἰμι] It would seem that the words ἐγώ εἰμι are used by our Lord singly (i. e. without any predicate) three times (v. 23, 24. 28) in this chapter to signify His own Divine Pre-existence,—I am, i. e. from everlasting, and His co-existence with the Father. (See St. Cyril on chap. i.) Why did He not say,—before Abraham was I was, but I am? because He uses this word, "I am," as His Father uses it; for it signifies perpetual existence, independent of all time. And therefore they charged Him with blasphemy. (Chrys.)

Acknowledge your Creator, and distinguish Him from the creature. He who speaks was made the seed of Abraham; and He was before Abraham, in order that Abraham himself might be made. Because Abraham was a creature, He did not say, "before Abraham existed,"—"antequàm esset," πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ εἶναι,—but He says, "before Abraham was made,"—"antequàm Abraham factus esset," πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ γενέσθαι,—and He did not say, "I was made," but "I am." (Aug.)

The Deity has no past or future, but a perpetual present, and therefore He uses the present tense, and says, "I am." He does not say, I was before Abraham, but I am,—according to that in Exodus (iii. 14), "I am that I am." (Greg.)

59. ἦραν οὖν λίθους ἵνα βάλωσιν ἐπ' αὐτόν] "Quasi blasphemantem divina sibi arrogando." And thus they showed that in their opinion He did claim to be God. And our Lord did not contradict that opinion (which He would have done if it was false), but proved its truth by vanishing from their sight by His divine power.

— ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ, διελθὼν διὰ μέσου] That is, He rendered Himself invisible by His divine power. He fled from the stones which might have touched Him as man. Woe to them from whose stony hearts God flies! (Aug.)

They take up stones to cast at Him. He had told them, "Let him who among you is without sin first cast the stone at her" (v. 7). Was this present act one of vindictiveness for that saying? And is this another mark of the coherence of the context with that passage? Christ escaped unseen from His enemies (viii. 59), and saw a man who had never seen from his birth, and made him see; and showed Himself to be the Light of the world; and proved that they who thought that they could see better than others, were blind in body and soul, because they would not see Him Who is the Light, but sought to extinguish Him.

CH. IX. 2. τίς ἥμαρτεν] The Apostles could not have imagined that a man had sinned before his birth; nor does it appear that they believed in a transmigration of souls, or that children are punished for their parents. (Cp. Ezek. xviii. 2—4.)

But this question of theirs may have been occasioned by our Lord's speech to the paralytic whom He had healed (John v. 14),—"Sin no more, lest a worse thing come upon thee;" and it may have been a statement of an objection on their part to that assertion of our Lord, that sin is the cause of physical evils. (Cp. Chrys.)

3. οὔτε οὗτος ἥμαρτεν] Both he and his parents were sinners; but their sin was not the cause of his being born blind.

— ἵνα φανερωθῇ τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ] But had this man been punished with blindness that God might be glorified? Would not this have been unjust? We may reply, that the conjunction that does not here indicate the cause, but the effect,—i. e. the man was not born blind in order that God might be glorified, but God's glory was an effect of his blindness. So it is in our Lord's words (John ix. 39), "I came into the world that they who see might be made blind;" but we cannot suppose that Christ, Who is the Light of the world, came in order to make men blind. So also we may explain the words of St. Paul (Rom. i. 19; v. 20),—"The Law came in that sin might abound;" whereas in fact the Law was given as a check to sin. In all these and other cases the conjunction signifies a consequence and event, and not a reason or cause. Cp. Chrys., Theophyl., who quote other parallels, and Glass., Phil. S. pp. 529, 530. Matt. xxiii. 34, 35. See below, v. 39; xii. 40. 1 Cor. xi. 19.

4. ἐμὲ δεῖ ἐργάζεσθαι] 'I must work the works of Him that sent Me.' Observe, this was said on a Sabbath (v. 14), when God specially does works of mercy,—to the body by rest, and to the soul by grace. Observe also,—the cripple at the other pool—Bethesda,—was healed on the Sabbath (above, ch. v. 2—10). Lightfoot asserts that the two pools of Bethesda (the house of Mercy) and of Siloam were from one spring (see below, on v. 7). If so,—then these two Miracles, both wrought on the Sabbath, may serve as mementos that all streams of Mercy are from the One source of Him, Who is also the Sent, and in Whom is our Rest.

— ἔρχεται νύξ] While you have life, do what you have to do; for after death there is no place for faith or repentance. (Chrys.)

5. φῶς εἰμι τοῦ κόσμου] 'even to the end of the world;' for the Day of Christ's presence has no Evening: His Sun never sets. Matt. xxviii. 20. (Aug.)

6. ἐπέχρισε τὸν πηλόν] Observe the faith of the man who had been born blind. He did not say that clay is apt to blind the eye rather than to open it, or that he had often washed in Siloam, and was not a whit the better; or that if Christ could heal him He would have done it by His word. He did not say thus as Naaman did of Elisha (2 Kings v. 11); but he obeyed. He went his way; he washed, and came seeing.

Observe also the manner in which Christ wrought the miracle. It was one of tenderness to the Jews. They might see the clay on the blind man's eyes; and might see him go to Siloam. All these things were done that their eyes might be opened, and that they might see and believe.

He thus reminds us that He is the Creator of all who made us live and see. He who anoints the blind with clay, and makes him see, formed Adam from the clay of the earth, and breathed into him πηλὸν ἐπὶ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς τοῦ τυφλοῦ, 7 [e] καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Ὕπαγε νίψαι εἰς τὴν κολυμβήθραν τοῦ Σιλωάμ· ὃ ἑρμηνεύεται ἀπεσταλμένος· [f] ἀπῆλθεν οὖν καὶ ἐνίψατο, καὶ ἦλθε βλέπων. e Neh. 3. 15. f 2 Kings 5. 14.

8 Οἱ οὖν γείτονες καὶ οἱ θεωροῦντες αὐτὸν τὸ πρότερον ὅτι προσαίτης ἦν ἔλεγον, Οὐχ οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ καθήμενος καὶ προσαιτῶν; Ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, Ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν· 9 ἄλλοι δέ, Ὅτι ὅμοιος αὐτῷ ἐστιν. Ἐκεῖνος ἔλεγεν, Ὅτι ἐγώ εἰμι. 10 Ἔλεγον οὖν αὐτῷ, Πῶς ἀνεῴχθησαν σοῦ οἱ ὀφθαλμοί; 11 Ἀπεκρίθη ἐκεῖνος καὶ εἶπεν, Ἄνθρωπος λεγόμενος Ἰησοῦς πηλὸν ἐποίησε, καὶ ἐπέχρισέ μου τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς, καὶ εἶπέ μοι, Ὕπαγε εἰς τὴν κολυμβήθραν τοῦ Σιλωὰμ καὶ νίψαι· ἀπελθὼν δὲ καὶ νιψάμενος ἀνέβλεψα. 12 Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ, Ποῦ ἐστιν ἐκεῖνος; λέγει, Οὐκ οἶδα.

13 Ἄγουσιν αὐτὸν πρὸς τοὺς Φαρισαίους τὸν ποτὲ τυφλόν· 14 [g] Ἦν δὲ σάββατον ὅτε τὸν πηλὸν ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἀνέῳξεν αὐτοῦ τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς. g Matt. 12. 10. Luke 13. 10—17. & 14. 1—5. & ch. 5. 5—11.
15 Πάλιν οὖν ἠρώτων αὐτὸν καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι, πῶς ἀνέβλεψεν; Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Πηλὸν ἐπέθηκε μοῦ ἐπὶ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς, καὶ ἐνιψάμην, καὶ βλέπω. 16 [h] Ἔλεγον οὖν ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων τινές, Οὗτος ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὐκ ἔστι παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὅτι τὸ σάββατον οὐ τηρεῖ. Ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, [i] Πῶς δύναται ἄνθρωπος ἁμαρτωλὸς τοιαῦτα σημεῖα ποιεῖν; καὶ σχίσμα ἦν ἐν αὐτοῖς. 17 [j] Λέγουσιν h ver. 31. 33. ch. 3. 2. & 7. 12. i ver 31—33. ch. 10. 19—21. j ch. 4. 19.

---

a living soul, and made him see and live. And that we may know that the waters of Siloam were not potent of themselves, but by operation of Christ, and derived their virtue from Him, the Evangelist adds the interpretation 'sent;' as the Apostle says of the Rock in the wilderness, "that Rock was Christ." 1 Cor. x. 5. (Cp. Cyril, Chrys., Theophyl.)

Christ anointed the eyes with clay, and so gave sight to one who had never seen, and opened his eyes by means of that which seemed only to seal them up. Here is an answer to those who object that sight cannot be given to the soul by means of things so feeble, inadequate for the purpose, as Sacraments. Almighty God can perform the greatest works by the weakest implements; and it is also certain that He loves to effect them by such means,—nay, by means tending, under ordinary circumstances, to produce, as far as human knowledge could predict, the very opposite of what was to be done. God has walled the sea with sand. He clears the air with storms. He warms the earth with snow. So in the world of His grace. In the desert He brings water, not from the soft earth, but from the flinty rock; He heals the sting of the serpent of fire by the serpent of brass; He overthrows the walls of Jericho by rams'-horns; He slays a thousand men with the jaw-bone of an ass: He cures salt-water by salt; He buoys up iron with water. He fells the giant with a sling and a stone. And thus does the Son of God work in His Gospel. He cures the blind man by what seemed only likely to increase his blindness,—He opens his eyes by anointing them with clay; He exalts us to heaven by the stumbling-block of the cross. In the simplest symbols He hides supernatural grace. In the weakest creatures He conceals Divine power. He regenerates us by water; He gives us immortal food in bread and wine,—in order that, from the very weakness of the instruments used, the excellency of their power may be seen to be not of man, but of God.

The Anointing with Clay may also be designed to remind us, that the blessings of spiritual illumination are derived from the Incarnation of Christ. The first Adam was formed of the Clay of the earth,—ἐκ γῆς χοϊκός, 1 Cor. xv. 47. 49: (χοϊκός from χοῦς, χέω,—i. e. from earth fused and moulded.) The Son of God, Who is "the Lord from heaven," became the Second Adam, and took our Nature of Clay; and in it became the Messiah, the Christ, the Anointed One; and by virtue of the Unction of the Holy Ghost, which He received in that Nature, and has poured down upon us, He has regenerated, illumined, and sanctified that Nature, which ever since the Fall was born blind; and He has sent it to Siloam to wash. See note on v. 7.

7. νίψαι εἰς] Cf. Mark i. 9, ἐβαπτίσθη εἰς.

— Σιλωάμ· ὃ ἑρμηνεύεται ἀπεσταλμένος] שִׁלֹחַ (Shiloah), Isa. viii. 6. Neh. iii. 15; from root שָׁלַח (shalach). So called "à missione aquæ ab uno fonte per aquæductus sive canales in duas piscinas, quarum una superior, eadem quæ Bethesda (auctore *Lightfoot*o, in Johan. cap. v. vol. ii. p. 667) altera inferior Siloa, Isa. vii. 3; xxii. 9." See Rosenmüller et Mintert, Lex. in v. It has been objected, that שִׁלֹחַ (Shiloah) does not signify sent, but sending,—probably from the sending forth of the waters; and that the proper term for ἀπεσταλμένος would be שָׁלוּחַ (Shaluah); and therefore some (e. g. Kuin. and Lücke) would expunge ὃ ἑρμ. ἀπεστ. as a gloss. But see Meyer, p. 257. The participle Kal may have a passive signification, or Dagesh forte in the participle Piel may be resolved into Yod. And the sense of the word ἑρμηνεύεται is not to be pressed too closely; it does not mean always a literal interpretation, but rather an allusion. See Acts iv. 36.

Our Lord, by sending the blind man to Shiloah, here appears to refer to His own words as recorded above in v. 4, "I must do the works of Him that sent Me." The Jews endeavoured to set Him in opposition to Moses, who was sent by God (see vii. 19—23; ix. 28, 29), and He proves His own Divine Mission by His Works. The words "He that sent Me," or "the Father that sent Me," are repeated by Him no less than seventeen times in the first nine chapters of this Gospel. And it would appear that by sending the blind man to wash in the pool of Siloam, He intended to teach that He Himself, Who was sent by the Father, is the true Fountain to be opened in Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness (Zech. xiii. 1. Joel iii. 18). He is the Fount of Siloam. As St. John says, "This is He that came by Water and Blood; and the Blood of Christ cleanseth us from all sin." (1 John i. 6; v. 6.) He loved us, and washed us from our sins in His own Blood (Rev. i. 5); and the Saints have washed their robes, and made them white in the Blood of the Lamb. (Rev. vii. 14.) Hence St. Cyril says here, "No one is 'the Sent' but the only-begotten Son, Who came from the Father to destroy sin and Satan. And when we know Him operating invisibly in the Waters of the baptismal font, we wash with faith,—not by putting away the filth of the flesh, as the Scripture says (1 Pet. iii. 21), but cleansing off the uncleanness of the eyes of the mind, so that we may be able to behold the beauty of the Lord."

The name Siloam, says Bengel, had a prophetic character; "quis Christus eo missurus erat cæcum; et ab hoc tempore erat monumentum miracli facti?" The same may be said of Bethesda (above, ch. v. 2).

7. ἦλθε βλέπων] This opening of the eyes of the blind was one of the signs of the Messiah. (Isa. xxix. 18; xxxv. 5.) And this opening of the eyes was very different from all human operations on the organ of sight. It was the bestowal of a new faculty—an act of Creation; and it was the gift of immediate power to use that faculty; a power no less wonderful than the faculty itself. Cp. Burgon here.

8. προσαίτης] So A, B, D, K, L, X, and many Versions.—Elz. τυφλός. But it is not probable, that if τυφλὸς had been the genuine reading, it would have been altered in so many MSS. to προσαίτης, a word no where else occurring in N. T. Cp. Acts iii. 10, ἐπεγίνωσκον αὐτὸν ὅτι οὗτος ἦν ὁ πρὸς τὴν ἐλεημοσύνην καθήμενος.

The Evangelist mentions that he was a beggar, to teach us by Christ's example not to despise any. (Theoph.)

10. πῶς ἀνεῴχθησαν σοῦ οἱ ὀφθαλμοί;] How? the mode no one knew, but what wonder? the Evangelist himself did not know, nor did he who was healed know; but the fact he knew, and we know it also. (Chrys.) Σοῦ is emphatic; see on v. 11.

11. ἄνθρωπος λεγόμενος Ἰησοῦς πηλὸν ἐποίησε, καὶ ἐπέχρισε] Remark the appropriateness of these words in a spiritual sense, as applicable to ourselves. The Son of God became man (ἄνθρωπος) and Saviour (Ἰησοῦς). He came to us in our blindness, as we sat and begged by the wayside of life; He made Clay, i. e. He took of the mortal dust of our earthy Nature (see v. 6), and moulded it by the breath and moisture of His mouth, and blended it with the Divine Nature, and anointed it with the Holy Ghost; and sent us to Siloam, and on the co-operation of our Faith and Obedience with His Divine Power and Love, our eyes are opened and we see.

— μου] emphatic here, and in vv. 15. 30. The eyes of me—who was born blind. And so σοῦ, vv. 10. 17. 26.

12. ποῦ ἐστιν] Christ withdrew Himself after His miracles. He did not seek glory from man. (Chrys.)

14. ἦν δὲ σάββατον] At the end of the week; and Christ illumined the world in the last age. (Cyril.) See also above on v. 4.

οὖν τῷ τυφλῷ πάλιν, Σὺ τί λέγεις περὶ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι ἤνοιξέ σου τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς; Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν· Ὅτι [k] προφήτης ἐστίν. [18] Οὐκ ἐπίστευσαν οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι περὶ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι τυφλὸς ἦν καὶ ἀνέβλεψεν, ἕως ὅτου ἐφώνησαν τοὺς γονεῖς αὐτοῦ τοῦ ἀναβλέψαντος, [19] καὶ ἠρώτησαν αὐτοὺς λέγοντες, Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ υἱὸς ὑμῶν, ὃν ὑμεῖς λέγετε ὅτι τυφλὸς ἐγεννήθη; πῶς οὖν ἄρτι βλέπει; [20] Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτοῖς οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ καὶ εἶπον, Οἴδαμεν ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ υἱὸς ἡμῶν, καὶ ὅτι τυφλὸς ἐγεννήθη· [21] πῶς δὲ νῦν βλέπει, οὐκ οἴδαμεν· ἢ τίς ἤνοιξεν αὐτοῦ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς, ἡμεῖς οὐκ οἴδαμεν· αὐτὸς ἡλικίαν ἔχει, αὐτὸν ἐρωτήσατε· αὐτὸς περὶ αὐτοῦ λαλήσει. [22] [l] Ταῦτα εἶπον οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ, [m] ὅτι ἐφοβοῦντο τοὺς Ἰουδαίους· ἤδη γὰρ συνετέθειντο οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, ἵνα ἐάν τις αὐτὸν ὁμολογήσῃ Χριστὸν, ἀποσυνάγωγος γένηται. [23] Διὰ τοῦτο οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ εἶπον, Ὅτι ἡλικίαν ἔχει, αὐτὸν ἐρωτήσατε. [24] [n] Ἐφώνησαν οὖν ἐκ δευτέρου τὸν ἄνθρωπον ὃς ἦν τυφλὸς, καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Δὸς δόξαν τῷ Θεῷ· ἡμεῖς οἴδαμεν ὅτι ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος ἁμαρτωλός ἐστιν. [25] Ἀπεκρίθη οὖν ἐκεῖνος καὶ εἶπεν, Εἰ ἁμαρτωλός ἐστιν, οὐκ οἶδα· ἓν οἶδα, ὅτι τυφλὸς ὢν ἄρτι βλέπω. [26] Εἶπον δὲ αὐτῷ πάλιν, Τί ἐποίησέ σοι; πῶς ἤνοιξε σοῦ τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς; [27] Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς, Εἶπον ὑμῖν ἤδη, καὶ οὐκ ἠκούσατε· τί πάλιν θέλετε ἀκούειν; μὴ καὶ ὑμεῖς θέλετε αὐτοῦ μαθηταὶ γενέσθαι; [28] Ἐλοιδόρησαν αὐτὸν καὶ εἶπον, Σὺ εἶ μαθητὴς ἐκείνου· ἡμεῖς δὲ τοῦ Μωϋσέως ἐσμὲν μαθηταί. [29] [o] Ἡμεῖς οἴδαμεν ὅτι Μωϋσῇ λελάληκεν ὁ Θεός· τοῦτον δὲ οὐκ οἴδαμεν πόθεν ἐστίν. [30] Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ ἄνθρωπος καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, [p] Ἐν γὰρ τούτῳ θαυμαστόν ἐστιν, ὅτι ὑμεῖς οὐκ οἴδατε πόθεν ἐστὶ, καὶ ἀνέῳξέ μου τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς· [31] [q] οἴδαμεν δὲ ὅτι ἁμαρτωλῶν ὁ Θεὸς οὐκ ἀκούει, ἀλλ' ἐάν τις θεοσεβὴς ᾖ καὶ τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ ποιῇ, τούτου ἀκούει· [32] ἐκ τοῦ αἰῶνος οὐκ ἠκούσθη, ὅτι ἤνοιξέ τις ὀφθαλμοὺς τυφλοῦ γεγεννημένου· [33] [r] εἰ μὴ ἦν οὗτος παρὰ Θεοῦ, οὐκ ἠδύνατο ποιεῖν οὐδέν. [34] [s] Ἀπεκρίθησαν καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Ἐν ἁμαρτίαις σὺ ἐγεννήθης ὅλος, καὶ σὺ διδάσκεις ἡμᾶς; Καὶ ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν ἔξω. [35] [t] Ἤκουσεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ὅτι ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν k ver. 32, 33. ch. 3. 2. & 4. 19. & 6. 14.

l ch. 12. 42. ver. 34.
m ch. 7. 13. Matt. 10. 26, 28.
n Josh. 7. 18, 19. 1 Sam. 6. 5. ver. 16.
o ch. 8. 14.
p ch. 3. 10.
q Prov. 15. 8, 29. & 28. 9. Isa. 1. 15. Jer. 14. 10—12. Ezek. 8. 17, 18. Micah 3. 4. Zech. 7. 13.
r ver. 16.
s ver. 2.
t Ps. 2. 7. Matt. 14. 33. & 16. 16. & 26. 63. ch. 1. 50.

---

17. ὅτι] in regard to that, εἰς ἐκεῖνο ὅτι—ὑπὲρ ὧν ὅτι. (Meyer.) See xi. 47.

27. γενέσθαι] 'to become.'

28. ἐλοιδόρησαν] Elz. and many MSS. add οὖν, which is not in A, E, G, H, L, S, X.

34. ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν ἔξω] The children of falsehood cast out the confessor of Truth. The Jews cast him out of the Synagogue for confessing Christ; and the Lord of the Temple found him: they who suffer for the truth will be found by Christ. (Chrys., Theoph.)

It was no evil to be so put out; they excommunicated him who confessed Christ, and Christ received him. (Aug.)

35. ἤκουσεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ὅτι ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν ἔξω καὶ εὑρὼν αὐτόν] εὑρὼν is something more than having found; it implies also having gone in quest of: εὑρεῖν is the Hebr. מָצָא (matsa), for which it is often used by the LXX. Cp. above, i. 42. 44; v. 14; xii. 14.

The Pharisees cast him out; Jesus went in search of him. When my father and mother forsake me, the Lord taketh me up (Ps. xxvii. 10). Blessed are they that are persecuted for righteousness sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven (Matt. v. 10: see also v. 11, and Luke vi. 22).

This History affords comfort, direction, and encouragement to members of the Church of England, in regard to the Church of Rome.

Our Lord commanded His disciples to love all men, even their enemies (Matt. v. 44. 46), and to hearken even to His worst enemies, the Scribes and Pharisees, sitting in Moses' seat (Matt. xxiii. 2); that is, as far as they taught in accordance with His law; but to beware of their false doctrine (Matt. xvi. 6. 11).

It is the duty of all His disciples to cherish a spirit of Christian Love and Unity toward all men, and to submit in all godly obedience to those who are over them in the Lord.

But if those who sit in Moses seat teach things contrary to the Law of Moses, and not only so, but proceed to impose their false doctrines as terms of Communion,—if they will not receive Him of Whom Moses wrote, if they threaten with Excommunication those who confess Jesus to be the Christ,—then no desire of Unity, no love of Enemies, no fear of separation from Parents and spiritual Superiors, no dread of spiritual censures and penalties may deter the disciples of Christ from confessing Him; but they must boldly acknowledge Christ, and leave the issue to Him.

Our Lord Himself has set the seal of His Divine sanction on these principles. He went in quest of the man who had been put out of the Synagogue. He who is the lover of Unity, and who commanded His Disciples to love their Enemies, and prayed that they all might be one (John xvii. 23), and taught them to hearken to the Scribes and Pharisees; and Who hates strife and disobedience, showed by seeking out the man whom the Pharisees had excommunicated, that he, whom He sought and found, was not guilty of sin, though he had been excommunicated as a sinner; and that he had done his duty in confessing Christ; and that the sin of schism,—for a schism there was, and there cannot be schism without sin,—lay at the door of those who cast him out. So it is now. We do not say that the communion of spiritual Pastors is to be forsaken, simply because they teach some doctrines that are false. Spiritual Pastors are men; and men are fallible; and wherever fallibility is, there error may arise. And if separations were allowable for every Error in a Church, there would be no such thing as Church-Communion left.

Our duty is to communicate with those who sit in Moses' Chair, but not to communicate with any in the false doctrines with which they may corrupt his Law.

Let it then be allowed, for argument's sake, that the Bishop of Rome sits in the Chair of Authority. Then we do not say, that, merely because he is fallible, or because he teaches some false doctrines, Communion with him is impossible. Christ Himself communicated with the Scribes and Pharisees. He taught with them in the Synagogue, and worshipped with them in the Temple. So, though the Bishop of Rome teaches some false doctrines, we might yet communicate with him in what he still retains of Christian truth.

But he has gone further than this. He has proceeded to impose his false doctrines as terms of Church Communion. He has made communion in his errors essential to communion with himself. He teaches in opposition to Christ. He has endeavoured to supersede Christ's Copy of the Old Testament by an Old Testament of his own. He adds his own human codicils as of equal authority with the Divine Testaments. He has mutilated the Sacraments of Christ. He has substituted other objects of worship in the room of Christ. And he teaches Articles of Faith which were not preached by Christ and His Apostles, and were unknown for fifteen centuries to the Church of Christ. And he requires us to receive all these novel corruptions, on pain of excommunication. In a word, he puts himself in the place of Christ. His language amounts to this,—"Receive me as the Christ." That is, if we confess Jesus to be the Christ, we shall be "put out of the Synagogue" (John ix. 22).

ἔξω· καὶ εὑρὼν αὐτὸν εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Σὺ πιστεύεις εἰς τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ; 36 Ἀπἐκρίθη ἐκεῖνος καὶ εἶπε, Καὶ τίς ἐστι, Κύριε, ἵνα πιστεύσω εἰς αὐτόν; 37 [u] εἶπε u ch. 4. 26.
δὲ αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Καὶ ἑώρακας αὐτὸν, καὶ ὁ λαλῶν μετὰ σοῦ ἐκεῖνός ἐστιν.
38 Ὁ δὲ ἔφη, Πιστεύω, Κύριε· καὶ προσεκύνησεν αὐτῷ. 39 [v] Καὶ εἶπεν ὁ Ἰη- v ch. 3. 19. & 12. 47.
σοῦς, Εἰς κρῖμα ἐγὼ εἰς τὸν κόσμον τοῦτον ἦλθον, ἵνα οἱ μὴ βλέποντες βλέπωσι, καὶ οἱ βλέποντες τυφλοὶ γένωνται. 40 Καὶ ἤκουσαν ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων ταῦτα οἱ ὄντες μετ' αὐτοῦ, καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Μὴ καὶ ἡμεῖς τυφλοί ἐσμεν; 41 [w] Εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Εἰ τυφλοὶ ἦτε, οὐκ ἂν εἴχετε ἁμαρτίαν· νῦν δὲ w ch. 15. 22.
λέγετε, Ὅτι βλέπομεν· ἡ οὖν ἁμαρτία ὑμῶν μένει. X. 1 Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὁ μὴ εἰσερχόμενος διὰ τῆς θύρας εἰς τὴν αὐλὴν τῶν προβάτων, ἀλλὰ ἀναβαίνων ἀλλαχόθεν, ἐκεῖνος κλέπτης ἐστὶ καὶ λῃστής· 2 ὁ δὲ εἰσερχόμενος διὰ τῆς θύρας ποιμήν ἐστι τῶν προβάτων. 3 Τούτῳ ὁ θυρωρὸς ἀνοίγει· καὶ τὰ πρόβατα τῆς φωνῆς αὐτοῦ ἀκούει· καὶ τὰ ἴδια πρόβατα καλεῖ κατ' ὄνομα, καὶ ἐξάγει αὐτά. 4 Καὶ ὅταν τὰ ἴδια πρόβατα ἐκβάλῃ, ἔμπροσθεν αὐτῶν πορεύεται, καὶ τὰ πρόβατα αὐτῷ ἀκολουθεῖ, ὅτι οἴδασι τὴν φωνὴν αὐτοῦ.
5 Ἀλλοτρίῳ δὲ οὐ μὴ ἀκολουθήσουσιν, ἀλλὰ φεύξονται ἀπ' αὐτοῦ· ὅτι οὐκ οἴδασι τῶν ἀλλοτρίων τὴν φωνήν. 6 Ταύτην τὴν παροιμίαν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς· ἐκεῖνοι δὲ οὐκ ἔγνωσαν τίνα ἦν ἃ ἐλάλει αὐτοῖς.
7 Εἶπεν οὖν πάλιν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι [a] ἐγώ εἰμι a ch. 14. 6. Eph. 2. 18.
ἡ θύρα τῶν προβάτων. 8 Πάντες, ὅσοι πρὸ ἐμοῦ ἦλθον, κλέπται εἰσὶ καὶ Heb. 10. 19, 20.

We hope that we do confess Jesus to be the Christ. We fear that the Church of Rome, in excommunicating us for confessing Christ, has excommunicated herself; we believe that the sin of the separation between us lies at her door. And we humbly hope and trust that we have been found by Christ, and are in communion with Him Who is the Head of the Church; and if, being illumined by Him Who is the Light, we walk in the Light, we have fellowship one with another (1 John i. 7).

— πιστεύεις εἰς τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ;] It is not enough to believe in Jesus as the Christ, or Messiah, we must also believe in Him as the Son of God. (Hilary, de Trin. vi.) And it is not enough to believe, we must worship Him as God. Hence the Evangelist relates of the blind man healed, "he said, Lord, I believe, and he worshipped Him" (Aug.); and Christ approves this, for He says, "I am come, that they which see not might see," as much as to say, he who was blind from his birth, now sees both in body and soul. (Theoph.) The Worship of Christ is the Vision of the soul.

36. καὶ τίς ἐστι] The καὶ is omitted by Elz., but is found in B, D, E, G, K, M, S, X, and many cursive MSS.

37. ἑώρακας αὐτόν] Thou who wast born blind hast seen Christ. This is His gift. This Scripture may be used against the Nestorian heresy, which separates the Son of Mary as a different person from the Son of God. In seeing My person, thou seest the Son of God. (Theoph.)

We are all born blind, and we must all repair to Siloam, the font of baptism, and be baptized in Him Who is Sent, that is, Christ. And when we are baptized, we must expect to be tempted. We may be brought before Kings and Rulers for His sake who has healed us. We must then quit ourselves valiantly, and not be afraid to confess Christ; and if need be, to suffer excommunication according to Christ's words, "They will put you out of their synagogues, and ye shall be hated of all men for My name's sake" (John xvi. 2. Matt. x. 22. Mark xiii. 13. Luke xxi. 17). Then Jesus will find us, and He will bless us with fuller knowledge and firmer faith. (Theoph.)

39. κρῖμα] incorrectly printed κρίμα in some edd. here and elsewhere in N. T. The ι is long by nature. Æsch. Suppl. 392, οὐκ εὔκριτον τὸ κρῖμα.

— βλέπωσι] 'may see:' now, and in other ages. A general proposition applicable to all times.

41. εἰ τυφλοὶ ἦτε] If ye had no access to the Scriptures your sin would not be so great as it is; but now that you profess to be teachers of the law, you are self-condemned. (Theoph.)

CH. X. 1. ἀμὴν ἀμὴν—λῃστής] This chapter is a Divine Pastoral, addressed especially to Bishops, Priests, and Deacons.

The blind man had been excommunicated by the Pharisees for confessing Christ (ix. 34). They were the Doctors of the Law and Pastors of the People (Matt. xxiii. 2); but they had become hireling shepherds and idol pastors (Ezek. xxxiv. 2. Jer. xxiii. 1. Zech. xi. 16). And from this act of theirs our Lord takes occasion to show that they had in fact excommunicated themselves.

And why? Because He is the Door of the Fold. And by casting out a man who had come in by the Door of a good confession to Christ, they, who cast him out, had proved that they did not know the Door, and were therefore not in the fold.

Besides, they had endeavoured to make Moses into a Door, in opposition to Christ (ix. 28, 29). They had accused Christ of breaking the Law of Moses, which was given by Christ. Thus they had shown that they did not understand the relation of Moses to Christ. Christ therefore here declares that He Himself is the Only Door; and that Moses and all true Prophets have passed through that Door; and that there is no other entrance for Pastors or People but by Him; and that all who profess to be Shepherds, but do not pass through that Door, are "thieves and robbers."

This may be applied more generally, as follows:

Many persons, who are called good men according to the language of this world, and yet are not true Christians, ask, as the Pharisees did, "Are we blind also?" (John ix. 40.) Many who compose subtle treatises on Morals and Metaphysics, and have formed Schools of Philosophy, and draw disciples after them, yet will not stoop to pass through the Door. To them our Lord says, "He that entereth not by the door is a thief and a robber." He says the same to many who boast that they alone can see, and that they are even enlightened by Christ, but are, in fact, teachers of false doctrine. Such are the Sabellians, for example, who say that the Son and the Father are but One person. Such are the Arians, who say that the Father and Son are not of the same substance. Such are the Photinians, who say that Christ is a mere man and not God; and, in fine, all who preach such a Christ as they invent for themselves in their own imaginations, and not such a Christ as the Truth reveals. They do not enter by the Door. In a word, none can have a solid hope of eternal life unless he knows the true Life, which is Christ, and enters by this door into the fold. Let him not only preach Christ's name, but seek Christ's glory, and not his own glory. Christ's Door is lowly, and he who enters by this door must humble himself; he must stoop, in order that he may enter by it. (Cp. Aug. here, and Serm. 137, 138.)

On κλέπτης and λῃστὴς see further, v. 8.

3. τούτῳ ὁ θυρωρὸς ἀνοίγει] Christ is the Door of the fold, and the keeper of the door as well as the Shepherd of the Sheep. He is the Truth, and opens Himself, and reveals to us the Truth. (Aug.)

He uses various metaphors here, in order that we may not interpret His words literally, and may know Him to be All in All.

4. τὰ πρόβατα αὐτῷ ἀκολουθεῖ] The Saints before the Advent of Christ in the flesh believed in Him who was to come, as we believe in Him Who has come. The seasons are changed, but the Faith is One. All who before the Incarnation believed the faith which was taught by Abraham and the Patriarchs, and Moses and the Prophets, preannouncing Christ, were Sheep of Christ, and heard and knew His Voice speaking by them. (Aug.) All the saints follow Christ (cp. Rev. xiv. 4); none go before Him (see on v. 8); He goes before them all (v. 4).

5. ἀκολουθήσουσι] Rightly received by some recent Editors, Lachm., Tisch., Alf., from A, B, D, E, F, G, Δ. Cp. on viii. 12.

7. ἡ θύρα] "Christus et Ostium, et Pastor, et Omnia." (Bengel.)

8. πάντες, ὅσοι πρὸ ἐμοῦ ἦλθον, κλέπται εἰσὶ καὶ λῃσταί] Did not Moses and the Prophets come before Him? No; they came with Him. He is the Eternal Word; and He sent them as His heralds, and He possessed their hearts. All who preached the Truth came with Him who is the Truth. Others, who put themselves before Him, who do not come from Him, and do not acknowledge His Eternity, are thieves and robbers. (Chrys.) "In venientibus præsumptio temeritatis, in missis obsequium servitutis." (Jerome, in Matt. i., who quotes Ezek. xiii. 3. Jer. xiv. 14; xxiii. 21.) Similarly Aug. ad Ps. xc., "Qui venerunt sponte suâ, à Me non missi; nam virtute Christi Elias mortuos suscitavit." (Cp. above on v. 4.)

λησταί· ἀλλ' οὐκ ἤκουσαν αὐτῶν τὰ πρόβατα. 9 [b] Ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ θύρα· δι' ἐμοῦ ἐάν τις εἰσέλθῃ, [c] σωθήσεται· καὶ εἰσελεύσεται καὶ ἐξελεύσεται, καὶ νομὴν εὑρήσει. 10 Ὁ κλέπτης οὐκ ἔρχεται εἰ μὴ ἵνα κλέψῃ καὶ θύσῃ καὶ ἀπολέσῃ· ἐγὼ ἦλθον ἵνα ζωὴν ἔχωσι, καὶ περισσὸν ἔχωσιν. 11 [d] Ἐγώ εἰμι ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλός· ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλὸς τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ τίθησιν ὑπὲρ τῶν προβάτων· 12 ὁ μισθωτὸς δὲ, καὶ οὐκ ὢν ποιμὴν, οὗ οὐκ εἰσὶ τὰ πρόβατα ἴδια, θεωρεῖ τὸν λύκον ἐρχόμενον, καὶ ἀφίησι τὰ πρόβατα καὶ φεύγει· καὶ ὁ λύκος ἁρπάζει αὐτὰ, καὶ σκορπίζει τὰ πρόβατα· 13 ὁ δὲ μισθωτὸς φεύγει, ὅτι μισθωτός ἐστι, καὶ οὐ μέλει αὐτῷ περὶ τῶν προβάτων. 14 Ἐγώ εἰμι ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλός· καὶ γινώσκω τὰ ἐμὰ καὶ γινώσκομαι ὑπὸ τῶν ἐμῶν· (ϙ) 15 [e] καθὼς γινώσκει με ὁ Πατὴρ κἀγὼ γινώσκω τὸν Πατέρα· καὶ τὴν ψυχήν μου τίθημι ὑπὲρ τῶν προβάτων. (ϙα) 16 [f] Καὶ ἄλλα πρόβατα ἔχω ἃ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ τῆς αὐλῆς ταύτης· κἀκεῖνά με δεῖ ἀγαγεῖν, καὶ τῆς φωνῆς μου ἀκούσουσι· [g] καὶ γενήσεται μία ποίμνη, εἷς ποιμήν. (ϙβ) 17 [h] Διὰ τοῦτο ὁ Πατήρ με ἀγαπᾷ, ὅτι ἐγὼ τίθημι τὴν ψυχήν μου ἵνα πάλιν λάβω αὐτήν. 18 [i] Οὐδεὶς αἴρει αὐτὴν ἀπ' ἐμοῦ, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ τίθημι αὐτὴν ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ· ἐξουσίαν ἔχω θεῖναι αὐτὴν, καὶ ἐξουσίαν ἔχω πάλιν λαβεῖν αὐτήν. ταύτην τὴν ἐντολὴν ἔλαβον παρὰ τοῦ Πατρός μου. 19 [j] Σχίσμα οὖν πάλιν ἐγένετο ἐν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις διὰ τοὺς λόγους τούτους·

b ch. 14. 6. Rom. 5. 1. Eph. 2. 18. Heb. 10. 19, 20. Ps. 23. 1, 4. c ver. 3, 4. Isa. 40. 11. Ezek. 34. 11—16. d Isa. 40. 11. Ezek. 34. 23. & 37. 24. Zech. 11. 16, 17. & 13. 7. Micah 5. 4. Heb. 13. 20. 1 Pet. 2. 25. ch. 15. 13. Rom. 5. 7, 8. Ephes. 5. 2. Isa. 53. 10, 11. Dan. 9. 24, 26. Tit. 2. 14. 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. Rev. 5. 9.
e Matt. 11. 27. ch. 15. 13.
f Ezek. 37. 22. Isa. 56. 3. & 66. 8. 1 Pet. 2. 25. Rom. 15. 8, 12. ch. 12. 20—24, 32.
g Eph. 2. 14—19. & 3. 1—6. 1 Cor. 12. 12, 13. Col. 3. 11. Rev. 7. 4. h Isa. 53. 7, 8, 13.
i ch. 2. 19.
j ch. 9. 16.

Hence the Church of England says in her Collect for the third Sunday in Advent, "O Lord Jesus Christ, Who at Thy first coming didst send Thy Messenger to prepare Thy way before Thee." He Who is the Eternal Word sent him who was the Voice. He Who is the Way sent His own forerunner to prepare it in the hearts of men.

The Manichæans pervert these words of Christ by applying them to the Prophets of the Old Testament, in order to show that the Old Testament is contrary to the New. But our Lord is speaking only of false prophets. For He says, "as many as came before Me," that is, who were not sent; according to what God says by Jeremiah (xxiii. 21), "I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran; I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied." They defrauded Him of His own prerogative, and spoiled men's souls of the only faith and hope that can save them (Col. ii. 8. 2 Tim. iii. 6). (Theoph.) Hence they who came,—claiming to themselves the incommunicable attributes of Christ, Who is the only Door,—are thieves and robbers. Cp. Glass. Phil. pp. 854. 882.

11—16.] See the Homily of Greg. M. on these verses, in Evang. i. 14, p. 1484.

11. ἐγώ εἰμι ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλός] and yet He had said before (v. 9), "I am the door." How does He enter through Himself? He by Himself knows the Father, and we know the Father by Him, and so He enters the sheep-fold by Himself, and we by Him, He declares Himself; as a light shows other things as well as itself.

Christ is the Shepherd, and yet He grants to others to be Shepherds. Peter is a Shepherd, and the rest of the Apostles are Shepherds, and all good Bishops are Shepherds; but none of us calls himself "the Door." (Aug.)

— ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλὸς τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ τίθησιν ὑπὲρ τῶν προβάτων] The phrase τιθέναι τὴν ψυχήν, to lay down his life, is peculiar to St. John (xiii. 37; xv. 13. 1 John iii. 16). It seems to be derived from the act of depositing or laying down a sum of money as a price for something bought or redeemed (see Meyer), and is expressive of the act performed by Christ in giving His life as a λύτρον or ἀντίλυτρον (a price or ransom) for all men (see Matt. xx. 28. 1 Tim. ii. 6. Tit. ii. 14. 1 Pet. i. 18), and is an assertion of the doctrine of the Atonement.

The faithfulness of the Shepherd is tested by his sufferings for the Sheep. Hence St. Paul recounts his own perils in answer to the false Apostles (2 Cor. xi. 23). (Chrys.) Here is an instruction to all Pastors: first, to give of their external good things to their sheep; and next, if necessary, to give their lives. He who does not give of his substance for his sheep, how will he give his life? They who love their substance more than their sheep, feed not in love, but for lucre, and forfeit the name of Shepherds, and become hirelings. (Greg. Hom. xiv. in Evang.)

Here is true martyrdom. Not all who give their bodies to be burnt give their lives for the sheep. But we must have charity (1 Cor. xiii. 3). And how can a man be said to have charity who does not love Unity? (Aug.) Here then is a warning to the Shepherds against schism.

— τίθησι] 'lays down.' "Hoc quinquies dicitur summâ vi." (Bengel.) For the death of Christ is the source of all life (Isa. liii. 10. See above on i. 29). And (says Greg. M.) He gives His life for the Sheep in the Holy Communion of His Body and Blood.

12. θεωρεῖ τὸν λύκον ἐρχόμενον] The Wolf—specially Satan. It is the coming of the wolf that proves the fidelity of the Shepherd. In times of tranquillity the hireling stands on guard as well as the Shepherd. The hour of trial shows the difference of the two. (Greg. Hom. i. 14.)

13. μισθωτὸς φεύγει, ὅτι μισθωτός ἐστι] The hireling flies because he seeks earthly gain, and does not love the sheep, and therefore fears to expose himself to peril, lest he lose what he loves. Such is he who declines to exercise godly discipline, or to minister godly rebuke to sinners, and so lets the sheep fall into the jaws of the wolf, who is the devil. (Aug., Greg.) Woe to those who consult their own temporal welfare and not the spiritual good of the flock. Woe to the Shepherds who feed themselves and not the flock. See Ezek. xxxiv. 2 and Phil. ii 21. (Chrys.)

Yet the Hireling is sometimes necessary, and we may hear the Good Shepherd speaking by the Hireling's mouth. Many in the Church who seek their own, yet preach Christ; and the Voice of Christ is heard speaking by them; and the sheep follow—not the Hireling—but the Shepherd speaking by the Hireling. (See Matt. xxiii. 2.) (Aug.) We may not therefore separate ourselves from Christ and the Church because of hirelings in it.

14. γινώσκω τὰ ἐμά] An exemplary lesson to Pastors. The Hireling does not know his sheep, because he does not often visit them; but the true Pastor, who is like Christ, knows his sheep, because he takes care of them; and is known by them, because they are visited by him, and know their guardian by intimacy with him. (Theoph.)

16. ἄλλα πρόβατα ἔχω] Other, beside the sheep of the Israel after the flesh; namely, the sheep of the Israel in faith. He came to make both one in Himself (Eph. ii. 14, 15. 1 Cor. vii. 19). (Chrys., Aug.) Our Lord came to redeem the Gentiles and Samaritans as well as the Jews. (Greg. Hom. xiv.)

— γενήσεται] 'will become.' This is not yet; but is an end to be attained by the missionary labour and prayers of the Church. See the third Collect for Good Friday. And its full end will be, when the Sheep are folded together, on the Right Hand of the Shepherd at the Great Day (Matt. xxv. 33).

— μία ποίμνη, εἷς ποιμήν] One flock, the Church Universal; and One Shepherd, Christ. There is one seal of baptism to all; one Shepherd. He who is the Word of God, and God. Hence we may refute the Manichæans, and prove against them that there is one Shepherd and one God, both in the Old and New Testament. (Theoph., who quotes Col. iii. 10.)

17, 18. ἐγὼ τίθημι τὴν ψυχήν μου, κ.τ.λ.] I pay the price of the world's ransom freely. See on v. 11.

However men may conspire against Me, they cannot take my life unless I surrender it. He goes spontaneously to His Passion, and endured it because He so willed, and when He willed, and as He willed. He had power to lay down, and He had power to take His life up again, because He is the Word; and He proves this by prophesying that He will take it up again when He has laid it down. (Chrys.) Whatsoever Christ suffered, He suffered willingly; and we are not to imagine that His sufferings were any sign of His Father's anger against Him; they were indeed proofs of His Father's anger against sin for which He suffered, and so proofs of His Father's love to Him for taking away sin by suffering. An answer to those who cavil at the doctrine of the Atonement as inconsistent with God's love and justice. (See on Matt. xvii. 5 and xx. 28.) "Amor Patris non modo erga nos, sed etiam erga Christum in Passione Christi spectandus est; non solùm severitas ultrix." (Bengel.)

By this saying of Christ we may refute the Apollinarians, who deny that Christ has a reasonable human soul.

At Christ's death the human flesh laid down the human soul, by the power of the Word which dwelt in the flesh, and which took a human soul, but was never separated from the soul. (Chrys., Aug.)

20 [k] ἔλεγον δὲ πολλοὶ ἐξ αὐτῶν, [l] Δαιμόνιον ἔχει καὶ μαίνεται· τί αὐτοῦ ἀκούετε; 21 ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, Ταῦτα τὰ ῥήματα οὐκ ἔστι δαιμονιζομένου· [m] μὴ δαιμόνιον δύναται τυφλῶν ὀφθαλμοὺς ἀνοίγειν;

22 [n] Ἐγένετο δὲ τὰ ἐγκαίνια ἐν τοῖς Ἱεροσολύμοις, καὶ χειμὼν ἦν· 23 καὶ περιεπάτει ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ ἐν τῇ στοᾷ τοῦ Σολομῶνος. 24 Ἐκύκλωσαν οὖν αὐτὸν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, καὶ ἔλεγον αὐτῷ, Ἕως πότε τὴν ψυχὴν ἡμῶν αἴρεις; εἰ σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστὸς, εἰπὲ ἡμῖν παῤῥησίᾳ. 25 [o] Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Εἶπον ὑμῖν, καὶ οὐ πιστεύετε· τὰ ἔργα ἃ ἐγὼ ποιῶ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Πατρός μου, ταῦτα μαρτυρεῖ περὶ ἐμοῦ. 26 [p] Ἀλλ' ὑμεῖς οὐ πιστεύετε· οὐ γάρ ἐστε ἐκ τῶν προβάτων τῶν ἐμῶν, καθὼς εἶπον ὑμῖν, 27 τὰ πρόβατα τὰ ἐμὰ τῆς φωνῆς μου ἀκούει, κἀγὼ γινώσκω αὐτὰ, καὶ ἀκολουθοῦσί μοι, 28 κἀγὼ ζωὴν αἰώνιον δίδωμι αὐτοῖς· [q] καὶ οὐ μὴ ἀπόλωνται εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, καὶ οὐχ ἁρπάσει τις αὐτὰ ἐκ τῆς χειρός μου. 29 [r] Ὁ Πατήρ μου ὃς δέδωκέ μοι μείζων πάντων ἐστὶ, καὶ οὐδεὶς δύναται ἁρπάζειν ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς τοῦ Πατρός μου. 30 [s] Ἐγὼ καὶ ὁ Πατὴρ ἕν ἐσμεν. 31 [t] Ἐβάστασαν οὖν πάλιν λίθους οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, ἵνα λιθάσωσιν αὐτόν. 32 Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Πολλὰ καλὰ ἔργα ἔδειξα ὑμῖν ἐκ τοῦ Πατρός μου· διὰ ποῖον αὐτῶν ἔργον λιθάζετέ με; 33 Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, Περὶ καλοῦ ἔργου οὐ λιθάζομέν σε, ἀλλὰ περὶ βλασφημίας, καὶ ὅτι σὺ [u] ἄν-

k ch. 7. 20. & 8. 48, 52.
l Matt. 10. 25.
m ch. 9. 31—33. Exod. 4. 11. Ps. 146. 8. n 1 Macc. 4. 59. Acts 3. 11. & 5. 12.
o ch. 5. 36. ver. 38.
p ch. 8. 47. 1 John 4. 6.
q ch. 18. 9. & 17. 2, 6.
r ch. 14. 28.
s ch. 17. 11, 22.
t ch. 8. 59.
u ver. 30. ch. 5. 17, 18, 23.

21. ῥήματα] not only words, but works—דְּבָרִים (debarim).

22. τὰ ἐγκαίνια] Hebr. חֲנֻכָּה (chanukah), 'initiatio.' Cp. 1 Macc. iv. 59. 2 Macc. i. 18; x. 6; called by Josephus φῶτα (Ant. xii. 7), in the month Cisleu or December. See Lightfoot, i. p. 979; ii. 576. Mede, p. 268. Prideaux, Connexion, at B.C. 165. Winer, i. 659. In memory of that made by Judas Maccabæus; for the dedication of Solomon was in the autumn; that of Zerubbabel in the spring; that of Judas Maccabæus in the winter; and therefore the Evangelist adds the words, "it was winter." (Alcuin.) St. John tacitly reminds the reader that our Lord in His mercy, now approaching the end of His Ministry, abode longer than usual at Jerusalem and in its neighbourhood, in order to win the Jews to Himself. In the following spring our Lord suffered.

This was the last celebration of the Encænia, or Feast of Dedication, before Christ's Passion. He Who was the true Temple (ii. 19. 21) was now walking in a Porch which bore the name of the royal builder of the First Temple, and was a remnant of his fabric, and at the festival which commemorated the restoration of the Second Temple. The Temple itself was soon to be profaned again, and to be destroyed, because they who should have been builders rejected the head stone of the corner. But He, the true Solomon, the Divine Architect of the Temple, was now about to raise up the Temple of His own body (John ii. 19), and so to inatitute a great Encænia; and to build up the Temple of His Church, Universal and Indestructible.

The lawfulness and reasonableness of appointing religious Festivals and Holy Days by human authority, is inferred from the practice of the Ancient Church of God in appointing that of Purim (Esther ix. 27), and this of Dedication. See Hooker, V. lxx. lxxi.

— χειμών] A circumstance well known to the Jews, but not to all or many for whom St. John wrote; and showing that the Feast of Dedication here mentioned was that of the Maccabees (see preceding note).

Probably he had also some other design in specifying this season: he thus showed that it was not long before our Lord's Passion.

Nothing is insignificant in the Gospel. And in this Gospel especially, every touch of the Spirit, however slight, has its meaning. May we not venture to suggest, that an intimation may be here given of an inner sympathy between the world of Nature and that of Grace? Both are from the same Divine hand; both were made by Him, Who was from the beginning with God (John i. 1, 2), and both are tributary to Him. The Sun and the Earth paid homage to Him at His Passion: and now the season of contradiction of sinners at Jerusalem is one of Winter in the natural world. Their hearts are frozen. But the Spring will come, and Christ, Who is to fall like a seed into the earth in winter (John xii. 24), will rise from the grave and ascend to heaven, and send the Holy Ghost to refresh His inheritance (Ps. lxviii. 9); and the mustard-seed of the Church will shoot forth its branches and overshadow the earth. Compare the words of Christ to the Church in the Canticles (ii. 10—13), and consider our Lord's words (Matt. xxiv. 20), "Pray ye that your flight be not in the winter." May there not perhaps be a similar suggestion in the words of the Evangelist concerning the going out of Judas on his unholy errand,—ἦν δὲ νύξ (xiii. 30), and also concerning the morning of the Passion (xviii. 18), ψῦχος ἦν? See further below on v. 23.

But after the Passion and Burial, the Morning of the Resurrection is ushered in with more joyful words (Matt. xxviii. 1),—τῇ ἐπιφωσκούσῃ. Mark xvi. 2, ἀνατείλαντος τοῦ ἡλίου ('that sun which had been darkened'). Matt. xxvii. 45. Cp. there, vv. 51, 52.

23. περιεπάτει] 'was walking,' i. e. when they came and surrounded Him,—a proof of the impression He had made at Jerusalem.

— στοᾷ τοῦ Σολομῶνος] An arcade, cloister, or colonnade, at the east side of the Temple, and a remnant of the original Temple. See Joseph. B. J. v. 6. Ant. viii. 3; ix. 11; xx. 9. The Article τοῦ before Σολομῶνος is omitted by A, D, G, K, S.

Observe that this discourse of our Lord, concerning His own Divine power as proved by His works, was delivered in Winter, in Solomon's Porch. And then the Jews rejected Him (v. 39). But we find afterwards (Acts iii. 11; v. 12), that Solomon's Porch was the place in which the Apostles, having wrought mighty works in Christ's name, proclaim His Messiahship and Divine Power to the People, who gladly accept the Gospel. Both in Nature and in Grace it was then Spring. Christ had ascended; the Comforter was come.

24. ψυχὴν ἡμῶν αἴρεις] 'keep us in suspense;' μετέωρον ποιεῖς. See Luke xii. 29.

28. οὐχ ἁρπάσει τις αὐτὰ ἐκ τῆς χειρός] "for I have graven them on the palms of My hands." Isa. xlix. 16. (Burgon.)

But did not Judas perish? Yes; because he did not "endure unto the end;" and if any man separates himself from the flock, and forsakes the Shepherd, he incurs peril of perdition. Hab. ii. 4. (Theoph.)

29. χειρὸς τοῦ Πατρός μου] See v. 28. He thus shows that His own hand and His Father's are one. (Chrys.)

30. ἓν ἐσμεν] Listen to both words, 'are' and 'one.' The word 'are' delivers you from the heresy of Sabellius; the word 'one' ('unum') delivers you from that of Arius. (Aug.)

Sail thou in the midst, between the Scylla of the one and the Charybdis of the other. Christians framed a new word, 'HOMOUSION PATRIS' (consubstantial with the Father), against the impiety of Arianism; but they did not coin a new thing by a new word. For the doctrine of the Homousion is contained in our Lord's own words,—"I and my Father are one,"—'unum,' one substance. (Aug. Tract xcvii. See also Aug. Serm. 139.)

So there were Christians in fact before the name Christians was given to believers at Antioch. (Acts xi. 26.) The same remark applies to the words 'Trinity,' Θεοτόκος, and some others, against which exceptions have been made by some in modern times.

It has been objected by Socinians and others, that these words do not signify oneness of substance, because our Lord uses a similar expression when speaking of His Disciples in His prayer,—ἵνα πάντες ἓν ὦσιν, καθὼς σὺ, Πάτερ, ἐν ἐμοὶ, κἀγὼ ἐν σοὶ, ἵνα καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐν ἡμῖν ἓν ὦσιν, xvii. 21; cp. vv. 22, 23.

That expression does indeed prove that the Father and the Son are not the same person; and so it is valid against the Sabellian heresy. But it does not show that they are not consubstantial. It is a comparison; and things compared are not identical. It contains a prayer that all believers may be one in heart and will, as the Persons of the Trinity are; that by virtue of Christ's Incarnation, by which He became Emmanuel,—God with us, God manifest in the flesh,—or, as He there expresses it, ἐγὼ ἐν αὐτοῖς (xvii. 23. 26), they may be united in the One Godhead.

Rather it proves the consubstantiality of the Three Persons.

Men are not of different natures from each other; they are all of one blood (Acts xvii. 26), of one substance,—being all from Adam and Eve. If the Son is inferior in nature to the Father, and different in substance from Him, the comparison could not have been made. The consubstantiality of all men, with a diversity of persons of each individual, and their union in God, is an apt illustration, as far as human things can be, of the true doctrine of the one nature and plurality of persons of the Godhead.

33. Ἰουδαῖοι] Elz. and many MSS. add λέγοντες, which is not in A, B, K, L, M, X.

— περὶ βλασφημίας, καὶ ὅτι σὺ ἄνθρωπος ὢν ποιεῖς σεαυτὸν

v Ps. 82. 6. Exod. 22. 28.
w ch. 17. 19. Mark 1. 24. Luke 4. 18.
x ch. 14. 10, 11. & 17. 21, 22.
y ch. 1. 28.
z ch. 5. 33, 35. Matt. 11. 7—9. & 21. 26. Luke 7. 29.
a Luke 10. 38, 39.

θρωποι ὧν ποιεῖς σεαυτὸν Θεόν. 34 [v] Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Οὐκ ἔστι γεγραμμένον ἐν τῷ νόμῳ ὑμῶν, Ἐγὼ εἶπα, θεοί ἐστε; 35 εἰ ἐκείνους εἶπε θεοὺς, πρὸς οὓς ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐγένετο, καὶ οὐ δύναται λυθῆναι ἡ γραφὴ, 36 [w] ὃν ὁ Πατὴρ ἡγίασε καὶ ἀπέστειλεν εἰς τὸν κόσμον, ὑμεῖς λέγετε, Ὅτι βλασφημεῖς, ὅτι εἶπον, Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰμι; 37 Εἰ οὐ ποιῶ τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Πατρός μου, μὴ πιστεύετέ μοι· 38 [x] εἰ δὲ ποιῶ, κἂν ἐμοὶ μὴ πιστεύητε, τοῖς ἔργοις πιστεύσατε, ἵνα γνῶτε καὶ πιστεύσητε, ὅτι ἐν ἐμοὶ ὁ Πατὴρ κἀγὼ ἐν αὐτῷ. 39 Ἐζήτουν οὖν πάλιν αὐτὸν πιάσαι· καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς αὐτῶν.

(98/IV) 40 [y] Καὶ ἀπῆλθε πάλιν πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου, εἰς τὸν τόπον ὅπου ἦν Ἰωάννης τὸ πρῶτον βαπτίζων· καὶ ἔμεινεν ἐκεῖ. (94/X) 41 Καὶ πολλοὶ ἦλθον πρὸς αὐτὸν καὶ ἔλεγον, Ὅτι Ἰωάννης μὲν σημεῖον ἐποίησεν οὐδέν· [z] πάντα δὲ ὅσα εἶπεν Ἰωάννης περὶ τούτου ἀληθῆ ἦν· 42 καὶ ἐπίστευσαν πολλοὶ ἐκεῖ εἰς αὐτόν.

XI. 1 [a] Ἦν δέ τις ἀσθενῶν, Λάζαρος ἀπὸ Βηθανίας, ἐκ τῆς κώμης Μαρίας Θεόν] The Jews understood what the Arians do not understand, viz. that our Lord affirmed the equality of the Father and the Son. (Aug. Hilary, de Trin. vii. Chrys.; and see Athanas., de Decret. Nicen. p. 165.)

Our Lord did not disclaim the assertion which they imputed to Him; which He certainly would have done if the imputation was false. Thus the sin of the Jews charging Him with blasphemy is a proof of His Divinity: "illorum error nobis profuit."

34. ἐν τῷ νόμῳ ὑμῶν] The reference here is to the Psalms. (Ps. lxxxii. 6.) Cp. xii. 34; xv. 25.

Our Lord sometimes called all the Jewish Scriptures by the name of Law. Sometimes He distinguishes the Law and the Prophets (Matt. xxii. 40), and He calls the whole Hebrew Canon of Scripture "The Law and the Prophets" (Luke xvi. 29; xxiv. 27); sometimes He divides the Scripture into Three Classes. (See on Luke xxiv. 44.)

— θεοί ἐστε] אֱלֹהִים (Elohim).

35. εἰ ἐκείνους εἶπε θεοὺς—ἐγένετο] He lowers His language to calm their indignation; and, having so done, He raises it again, v. 37. (Chrys.)

If God's Word came to men, so that they to whom it came might be called sons and gods, is not the Word of God Himself God? If by participating in God's Word men become gods, is not the Word God?—the Word, by Whom they participate in God? By living holy lives we may be said to be in God, God in us,—since we participate in His grace and are enlightened by Him. But Christ says in another sense, "The Father is in Me and I in Him;" because the only-begotten Son is in the Father, as co-equal and co-natural with the Father. (Aug. Chrys.)

36. βλασφημεῖς] See on viii. 54.

40. ἀπῆλθε πάλιν πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου] i. e. to Bethany in Peræa. See on John i. 28.

It is observable that He went afterwards from that Bethany (in Peræa) to the other Bethany (that of Lazarus) in Judæa (xi. 1).

According to one etymology, Bethany signifies a "place of transit" (see on i. 28). Another etymology has been mentioned in the note on Matt. xxvi. 36, where see some remarks on N. T. names.

Our Lord, Who is the true Passover, was now about to pass,—μεταβῆναι (see on John xiii. 1),—"from this world to the Father." He was about to cross the flood of His own Passion; to pass through the Red Sea of His own Blood. The word Bethany may be a memento of that transit. He passes from the scene of His first manifestation at the beginning of the Gospel, where John declared Him to be the Lamb of God, the true Passover. (John i. 29.) He passes to another Bethany, where He proves His Divine Power by raising Lazarus; and thence He passes in His triumphal procession to Jerusalem, on the first day of the Paschal Week (Luke xix. 28. John xii. 10. 13),—and thence finally He passes, in a still more sublime transit, by His glorious Ascension into heaven, "from this world to the Father." (Luke xxiv. 55.)

— ὅπου ἦν Ἰωάννης τὸ πρῶτον βαπτίζων] Not to be translated 'where John began to baptize;' for John began to baptize in the wilderness of Judæa, on the west of Jordan (see Matt. iii. 1—12. Mark i. 1—5), and not in Peræa. The meaning is, 'where John was at the first baptizing,'—i. e. where John was at the beginning of the preaching of the Gospel (ἐν ἀρχῇ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου), executing his office. Cp. Acts xiii. 24; and the use of τὸ πρῶτον, xii. 16. An honourable testimony is thus paid by Christ and the Holy Ghost to the teaching of the Baptist. Its effects were permanent; and they whom he taught bear witness that all he said of Christ was true (v. 41). Even at the end of our Lord's ministry, He resorted to the place where John had baptized at the beginning of the Gospel; and found that the way had been prepared for Him there (see v. 41). And the Holy Spirit records this as a noble tribute of praise to the blessed memory of the Baptist.

We may add from Chrys., that our Lord did this to remind the people of John's testimony to Himself, and to give occasion to the reminiscences and reasonings which the Evangelist relates vv. 41, 42. When our Lord has uttered any high and mysterious language which might offend the prejudices of the Jews, He retires for a while to avoid their rage, to give time for their passion to cool, and for their reason to exercise itself on His words.

42. ἐπίστευσαν πολλοὶ ἐκεῖ] The posthumous fruits of John's ministry leading to Christ. (Beng.) How different from that of the Priests and Pharisees putting the man out of the Synagogue for confessing Him!

CH. XI. 1. ἦν δέ τις ἀσθενῶν] He whom Christ loved, and whose sisters Christ loved, was sick. Those who are dearest to God are often tried by sickness. (Chrys.)

A question has been asked,—Why the other Evangelists omitted to mention this crowning miracle of our Lord's Ministry, the raising of Lazarus—concerning which Spinoza said, that "could he believe it, he would renounce his whole system, and embrace Christianity?" (Bayle, Dict.)

Some exceptions have been made, on the ground of this question, —supposed to be unanswerable,—to the veracity of the three Evangelists on the one hand, or of St. John on the other[1]. A solution

---

[1] The following summary of the various opinions of Biblical Critics in his own country, is given by Meyer (Kommentar, p. 298):—

"Ueber die Geschichte der Auferweckung des Lazar. ist zu merken: 1) Die Annahme eines Scheintodes (Paulus, Gabler in s. Journ. f. auerl. theol. Lit. III. p. 235 ff., Ammon L. J. III. p. 128, Kern in d. Tüb. Zeitschr. 1839. 1. p. 182. Schweizer p. 153 ff.) streitet entschieden gegen die Darstellung und Tendenz des durch sinnige Zartheit, Sicherheit u. Wahrheit ausgezeichneten Referats und gegen den Charakter Jesu selbst.

"2) Die Auflösung der Geschichte in ein wunderliches Missverständniss, wornach entweder ein Gespräch Christi mit den beiden Frauen bei dem Tode des Lazar. über die Auferstehung zur Wundererzählung ausgebildet (Weisse II. p. 260 ff.), oder diese mit der Erweckungsgeschichte des (scheintodten) Jünglings zu Nain (welches eine Abkürzung des Namens Bethanien sei) verwechselt worden (Gfrörer Heiligth. u. Wahrh. p. 311 ff.), ist voller Gewaltsamkeit, und mit der Aechtheit des Evang. absolut unvereinbar.

"3) Die völlige Vernichtung der Geschichte zu einem Mythus (Strauss) ist eine Consequenz von Voraussetzungen, welche grade bei dieser so ausführlichen und originellen Darstellung die Spitze der Kühnheit und des Machtspruchs erreichen, und erst in Missdeutungen einzelner Züge nach einer Stütze suchen müssen.

"4) Die Subjectivirung des Facti, wornach es eine vom Schriftsteller selbst gebildete Form zur Darstellung der Idee von der δόξα Christi sein soll (Baur p. 191 ff.), welche sich erst dann recht zu erkennen gebe, wenn sie sich auch in ihrer den Tod negirenden Macht bethätige, macht aus dem Wunder der Geschichte ein Wunder der Production, welches, in der zweiten Hälfte des zweiten Jahrhunderts geschehen, auffallender wäre als jenes.

"5) Befremdend erscheint zwar, dass die Synoptiker von der Erweckung des Lazar. schweigen, da dieselbe an sich so überzeugungsmächtig, und auf die letzte Entwickelung des Lebens Jesu so einflussreich war. Allein diess hängt mit der ganzen unterscheidenden Eigenthümlichkeit des Joh. zusammen, und das gegen diesen gebrauchte argumentum e silentio müsste, die Aechtheit des Evangel. zugestanden, vielmehr gegen die Synoptiker, sich kehren, wenn ihr Schweigen nur als die Folge ihrer Unbekanntschaft mit der Geschichte (Lücke, de Wette, Baur) begreiflich wäre. Begreiflich aber ist dieses Schweigen, zwar nicht aus der Annahme schonender Rücksichtsnahme auf die Bethanische Familie (Epiphan., Grot., Wetst. z. 12, 10, Herder, Schulthess, Olsh., so auch, mit ausmalender Phantasie, Lange L. J. II. 2. p. 1133 f.), womit man etwas dem Sinn und Geist jener ersten Christenzeit Zuwiderlaufendes, und zwar ganz willkürlich, supponirt, wohl aber daraus, dass die Synoptiker einen dermassen begränzten Kreis ihrer Referate inne halten, dass sie, bevor sie mit dem Einzuge Christi in Jerus. (Matth. 21. u. Parall.) den Schauplatz der letzten Entwickelung eröffnen, von der Wirksamkeit des Herrn in der Hauptstadt und dessen nächster Umgebung nichts aufgenommen haben, sondern sich bis dahin lediglich auf die Galiläische und überhaupt von Jerus. entferntere Thätigkeit Jesu beschränken (das geographisch nähste Wunderwerk ist noch die Blindenheilung zu Jericho Matth. 20, 29 ff.). Diess ist, wie ihre Evangelien thatsächlich beweisen, ihr Plan, und dieser schloss die Galiläischen Todtenerweckungen ein, aber die des Lazarus aus."

A similar analysis of the most recent theories on this great question

καὶ Μάρθας τῆς ἀδελφῆς αὐτῆς· [2] [b] ἦν δὲ Μαρία ἡ ἀλείψασα τὸν Κύριον μύρῳ, καὶ ἐκμάξασα τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ ταῖς θριξὶν αὐτῆς, ἧς ὁ ἀδελφὸς Λάζαρος [b] ch. 12. 3. Matt. 26. 7. Mark 14. 3.

seems to be suggested by the ancients (e. g. Epiphanius, Hær. 66), who relate that Lazarus survived thirty years after he was raised from the dead.

The following considerations are offered on this subject. This Miracle, wrought at the close of our Lord's Ministry, was probably designed by the Holy Spirit to be a splendid specimen of His Divine Power generally; and a sample of the evidence which He gave to the Jews of His Mission; and a rehearsal of His Divine Operation in raising Himself, and in raising all men at the Great Day.

It was very important, therefore, that in the description of this stupendous miracle, the particulars of place, and name of person, and manner of its operation, should be given in full and accurate detail.

But to do this, while Lazarus was still living, and, as has been said above, he lived thirty years after he was raised from the dead (Epiphan. Hær. 66), might be attended with great inconvenience; for the following reasons:—

On account of the malice of the Jews, who sought to kill him. (See xii. 10.)

On account of the curiosity which such a history, generally circulated, would excite. Many, coming up to the feasts at Jerusalem, from all parts of the world, would be eager to visit Lazarus and the family at Bethany (see xii. 9), and to put questions to him concerning the mysterious things of that other world from which he had been brought back; and a morbid and irreverent spirit might thus be engendered, injurious alike to him who was the object of their public gaze and inquisitiveness, and to them who indulged it. To keep him and his sisters in the background, to throw over them and theirs a veil of delicate reserve, seems most consistent with the love that Jesus bore them, and to be quite in keeping with that beautiful method of modesty and silence which the Evangelists have used toward her whom our Lord specially loved—His Mother. We see something of this feeling in the three Gospels with regard to St. John himself. We do not learn from them that he was the disciple whom Jesus loved. That there was a disciple whom Jesus singularly loved, we learn only from St. John—and he does not give us his name.

If it be said that something of the same feeling might have restrained the first three Evangelists from describing the resurrection of Jairus' daughter (Mark v. 42. Luke viii. 41) and of the widow's son at Nain (Luke vii. 11), it may be observed that as to the first case, the name of the father is not mentioned by St. Matthew (ix. 18), and his daughter was only twelve years old at the time (Luke viii. 42); and as to the second, the names of the young man and his mother are not mentioned.

None can doubt that many dead persons were raised to life by our Lord (Matt. xi. 5. Luke vii. 22); and the fact that so few are particularly specified by the Evangelists, and not one by name but Lazarus and Jesus Himself, suggests that there were good reasons for partial and temporary reserve at the time in the case of the resurrection of Lazarus, as there was good reason for immediate and universal publicity in the case of the resurrection of Jesus. And further,

The miracle of the raising of Lazarus at Bethany, just before our Lord's last Passover, though not explicitly mentioned by the three earlier Evangelists, yet falls in harmoniously to explain the remarkable facts related by them all, viz. the enthusiastic reception which our Lord met with on coming from Bethany to Jerusalem. The raising of Lazarus (as has been remarked by St. Cyril on xiii. 21), is the true explanation of the plaudits and hosannas of his triumphal entry to Jerusalem. Indeed, St. John himself declares (xii. 18), διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ὑπήντησεν αὐτῷ ὁ ὄχλος, ὅτι ἤκουσε τοῦτο αὐτὸν πεποιηκέναι τὸ σημεῖον. See also note on John xii. 17.

There is also a remarkable analogy between this great Miracle and one of our Lord's most striking Parables—the only one that deals with the mysterious subject of the 'Intermediate State'—(i. e. the condition of the disembodied soul in the interval between Death and Judgment) from which the spirit of Lazarus was recalled to revivify his Body at his resurrection—the Parable of Dives and Lazarus.

That is the only Parable in which any of the persons introduced is mentioned by name. And this is the only Miracle of which the subject is so specified. And in the Parable and the Miracle the name is the same, Lazarus. And when our Lord delivered the Parable, He put into the mouth of Abraham the words (in reply to the prayer of Dives, "Send Lazarus to my five brethren"), "If they hear not Moses and the Prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead." He thus delivered a prophecy. Though one rose from the dead,—though a Lazarus be sent to them, they will not be persuaded. No And the fact was, that when Lazarus was raised, they, who would not hear Moses, sought 'to kill Lazarus'—to send him back to the dead, and did kill Him who had recalled him to life.

Thus the Parable is a prophecy in harmony with the Miracle. And the Miracle fulfilled the Parable. And the one confirms the other.

The question why the Raising of Lazarus is not described by the three Evangelists who wrote before St. John may be a perplexing one to those who do not acknowledge that all the Gospels are but one Gospel; that they are all from One Everlasting Spirit, who, when He was inspiring St. Matthew, foreknew that He would also inspire St. John; and when He wrote some things by the first Three Evangelists, knew what He would write by the Fourth and last. But they who believe that this was the case are not staggered here. They do not read the Sermon on the Mount in St. John but in St. Matthew. But they read other divine Discourses of our Blessed Lord in St. John concerning the highest Mysteries of the Truth, which they do not read in any of the other Three; and they expect to find Divine works also in St. John's Gospel which they do not find recorded in them.

The Holy Spirit doubtless exercised His Divine influence over the minds of the Evangelists, not only by suggestion and dictation, but also by restraint. He inspired them not only in what they wrote, but in what they did not write. There is Inspiration in their Silence. He exerted His divine attributes not only in enabling the Apostles to preach, but even sometimes in forbidding them to do so. (See Acts xvi. 6, 7.) That Apostle who was most gifted with tongues (1 Cor. xiv. 18) was also "in prisons more frequent" than the rest (2 Cor. xi. 23). He was not only more largely endowed with that grace than the rest, but was more often restrained from using that which he had more abundantly.

The Holy Spirit restrained the first three Evangelists from mentioning the first Miracle of our Lord, that at Cana; and left that for St. John. The fact, therefore, that three of the Evangelists do not mention one of the last Miracles,—this at Bethany, is not at variance, but quite in harmony, with what we know of the other operations of the Holy Spirit in diffusing the Gospel.

"Thou hast kept the good wine until now" (John ii. 10). It is God's own method to keep the best to the last. Four thousand years elapsed before Christ came into the World. The Gospel itself has been reserved to the last age of the world. How many nations have not yet heard it! And we have reason to believe that some glorious manifestations of the power of the Holy Spirit—for example, in raising a national Lazarus from the dead,—that is, softening the hard hearts of the Jews, and disposing them to receive the Gospel—are still in store for the Church before the Advent of Christ. What wonder then, that, as the working of this stupendous miracle was deferred by Christ to the close and consummation of His public ministry upon Earth, so the narration of it should have been reserved by the Holy Spirit to the Conclusion of the Evangelical Canon.

The above considerations are not offered with any view of fully explaining the reasons by which the Holy Spirit may have been actuated in restraining the first three Evangelists from recording this mighty work, and in reserving it to be described by St. John. For, "Who hath known the mind of the Lord?" (Rom. xi. 34. 1 Cor. ii. 16.) Suffice it for us if we can see some probable causes for such a proceeding, and if we can show that it is in unison with what we know of the other operations of the Holy Ghost.

We may close these remarks with observing that there is one great purpose which it has answered, during many centuries, and is now answering, and which may have been designed by the Holy Ghost, and which deserves careful attention.

This Miracle itself was a moral test to the Jews. It proved the tempers and displayed the dispositions of those who saw and heard it. It was like a savour of life to some, and of death to others. (See vv. 43—54.) So the Narrative of the miracle. It has been a moral test to the world. They, whose spirit is like that of the obdurate Jews, have may be found in De Wette's Erklärung, 4th ed. p. 197, with this difference, that De Wette rejects Meyer's solution; as Meyer does De Wette's.

---

The recital of the opinions specified in the above extract, concerning this stupendous Miracle, deserves serious meditation, and excites reflections of melancholy interest and grave importance.

The above stated opinions are not put forth by illiterate men, or in an unlearned age and country, but by persons celebrated for erudition, and amply furnished with all material appliances of literature and science, for discovering and declaring the Truth; men to whom thousands of others look up for direction and instruction in their investigation of it. And yet what is the result?

Looking at it merely in an intellectual point of view, and without any reference to its religious bearings, we see here a strange mental phenomenon. We are constrained to say, that the theories above mentioned reflect discredit on the rational faculties of those who propound them. They would excite a sensation of surprise and derision in the minds of peasants and of children.

But yet they are very instructive; they teach great and momentous truths. They show that there may be great literary advantages for Biblical criticism, such as learned leisure and patient toil, extensive knowledge of languages, accurate collations of MSS., careful examination of Versions; and yet, after all, there may co-exist with these benefits lamentable ignorance of the meaning of Holy Scripture; and they are not incompatible with strange perversions of its evidence, and with wild and extravagant speculations concerning it, put forth in the specious name of superior intelligence and critical acumen.

They remind us, that we may be now chargeable with presumption and vain glory, in claiming for our own age the merit of having made great advances in the Science of Biblical Criticism.

Let any candid reasoner examine the contents of the above summary of opinions of those distinguished Biblical Critics there mentioned, living in an age and country celebrated for learning: and let him compare them with the Commentaries of the Christian Writers of the fourth and fifth centuries on this same History. What will he infer from the comparison? Will he say that the advantage lies on the side of the nineteenth century? that its speculations as there displayed show any signs of progress? Will he not rather say, that they exhibit melancholy evidence of great intellectual decline and degeneracy? And in moral and spiritual respects, how great is the fall! And who can say, how much lower yet that fall may be?

What is the cause of this unhappy descent and degradation? How is the recovery to be effected?

Some reply to these important enquiries is offered for the reader's consideration, in the Preface of this Volume.

ἠσθένει. 3 Ἀπέστειλαν οὖν αἱ ἀδελφαὶ πρὸς αὐτὸν λέγουσαι, Κύριε, ἴδε, ὃν φιλεῖς, ἀσθενεῖ. 4 Ἀκούσας δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν, Αὕτη ἡ ἀσθένεια οὐκ ἔστι πρὸς θάνατον, ἀλλ' ὑπὲρ τῆς δόξης τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἵνα δοξασθῇ ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ δι' αὐτῆς. 5 Ἠγάπα δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς τὴν Μάρθαν καὶ τὴν ἀδελφὴν αὐτῆς, καὶ τὸν Λάζαρον. 6 Ὡς οὖν ἤκουσεν ὅτι ἀσθενεῖ, τότε μὲν ἔμεινεν ἐν ᾧ ἦν τόπῳ δύο ἡμέρας· 7 ἔπειτα μετὰ τοῦτο λέγει τοῖς μαθηταῖς, Ἄγωμεν εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν πάλιν. 8 Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταί, Ῥαββί, νῦν ἐζήτουν σε λιθάσαι οἱ Ἰου-

e ch. 12. 35. δαῖοι, καὶ πάλιν ὑπάγεις ἐκεῖ; 9 [e] Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, Οὐχὶ δώδεκά εἰσιν ὧραι τῆς ἡμέρας; Ἐάν τις περιπατῇ ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, οὐ προσκόπτει, ὅτι τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου τούτου βλέπει· 10 ἐὰν δέ τις περιπατῇ ἐν τῇ νυκτὶ, προσκόπτει, ὅτι τὸ φῶς οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν αὐτῷ. 11 Ταῦτα εἶπε, καὶ μετὰ τοῦτο λέγει αὐτοῖς, Λάζαρος

d Matt. 9. 24. & 27. 52. Acts 7. 60. & 13. 36. 1 Cor. 15. 6, 18, 20, 51. 1 Thess. 4. 13—15. & 5. 10. ὁ φίλος ἡμῶν [d] κεκοίμηται· ἀλλὰ πορεύομαι ἵνα ἐξυπνίσω αὐτόν. 12 Εἶπον οὖν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, Κύριε, εἰ κεκοίμηται, σωθήσεται. 13 Εἰρήκει δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς περὶ τοῦ θανάτου αὐτοῦ· ἐκεῖνοι δὲ ἔδοξαν ὅτι περὶ τῆς κοιμήσεως τοῦ ὕπνου λέγει. 14 Τότε οὖν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς παῤῥησίᾳ, Λάζαρος ἀπέθανε· 15 καὶ χαίρω δι' ὑμᾶς, ἵνα πιστεύσητε, ὅτι οὐκ ἤμην ἐκεῖ· ἀλλ' ἄγωμεν πρὸς αὐτόν. 16 Εἶπεν οὖν Θωμᾶς, ὁ λεγόμενος Δίδυμος, τοῖς συμμαθηταῖς, Ἄγωμεν καὶ e ver. 8. ch. 10. 39, 40. ἡμεῖς, [e] ἵνα ἀποθάνωμεν μετ' αὐτοῦ.

17 Ἐλθὼν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς εὗρεν αὐτὸν τέσσαρας ἡμέρας ἤδη ἔχοντα ἐν τῷ μνημείῳ. 18 Ἦν δὲ ἡ Βηθανία ἐγγὺς τῶν Ἱεροσολύμων, ὡς ἀπὸ σταδίων δεκα-stumbled at it. Instead of receiving it humbly, they have criticized and cavilled at it. (See sub-note, p. 250.) Instead of accepting it gratefully from the Holy Spirit, tendering it to them by the hands of St. John, they have stood up and asked—why He did not give it them by St. Matthew, St. Mark, and St. Luke? He therefore has been provoked to leave them to themselves, and to their own proud hearts. And when they are forsaken by Him whose grace dwells only with the meek, their intellectual eye is blinded, and they fall into dotish errors, and are distracted by discordant opinions.

---

But they who have the Spirit of the family 'which Jesus loved' will accept this holy narrative as the sisters received their brother from the grave.

They will reflect that the Holy Spirit by reserving many of our Lord's divine Discourses on the most sublime verities, and some of His most wonderful Works, to be recorded in the last Gospel, has given a striking proof of His own Divine Foreknowledge and Providential love; and that He also suggests to us,—what indeed He explicitly declares,—that as there are many things written in St. John which are not written in the former three, so there are many other great and glorious things which Jesus spake and did, which are not written in this Book (John xx. 30), and which will be revealed hereafter to those who thankfully accept and faithfully use what is revealed therein. If also these things which are revealed are glorious, and show Christ to be full of Glory, how glorious will He appear hereafter, when all that He ever did or said will be unfolded to the eye!

— Λάζαρος] = Ἐλεάζαρος. On the meaning of the name, see note on Luke xvi. 20.

Bethany itself is now called Aziriyeh, bearing in its name a record of Lazarus. And why should he have given it a name, unless he had been distinguished in some remarkable manner? St. John supplies the reason.

For an exposition of this history, see Chrys. Tom. v. p. 271.

— ἀπὸ B.] 'of Bethany.' So οἱ ἀπὸ Ἰταλίας, Heb. xiii. 24.

2. ἦν δὲ Μαρία ἡ ἀλείψασα] a prolepsis,—she who afterwards did it (see John xii. 3), not the woman who was a sinner. Luke vii. 37. (Theoph.)

Did she do it as a thank-offering for the resurrection of her brother, as well as with a presentiment of the Death of Him Who raised him?

— ἀλείψασα τὸν Κύριον] The other Evangelists relate that she poured the μύρον on His head (Matt. xxvi. 7. Mark xiv. 3), but they also mention His σῶμα (Matt. xxvi. 12. Mark xiv. 8), which includes the anointing of the feet, noticed by St. John.

3. ὃν φιλεῖς, ἀσθενεῖ] They did not say, "Come and heal him," nor did they say, "Speak the word where Thou art and it will be done." (Aug., Burgon.)

5. ἠγάπα δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς τὴν Μάρθαν] See Luke x. 38.

For ἠγάπα, the reading of almost all the MSS., D has ἐφίλει. But the Evangelists never use the word φιλεῖν when speaking of His affection for women. The use of φιλεῖν in the sense of osculari (Matt. xxvi. 48. Mark xiv. 44. Luke xxii. 47), may, perhaps, serve to explain this. He φιλεῖ Λάζαρον, but ἀγαπᾷ Μάρθαν καὶ τὴν ἀδελφὴν αὐτῆς. See Tittmann, Synonym. p. 53. Trench on the Miracles, p. 392.

The Evangelist thus teaches not to grieve overmuch for worldly calamities, which often happen to good men whom God loves. (Chrys.)

7. εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν] He was in Peræa. See above, x. 40, and on Luke x. 1. The place at which our Lord was, was called Bethany (see on John i. 28, cp. with x. 40). And our Lord in one Bethany, now tells His Disciples what was going on in the other Bethany, many miles off.

8. ἐζήτουν σε λιθάσαι οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι] He had fled from their stones as man. He will return and work a miracle as God. (Aug.)

9. ἐάν τις περιπατῇ ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ] He thus calms their fears, and comforts them. If any one sees the light of this world, he is safe; much more is he secure, if he is with Me. (Chrys.)

11. Λάζαρος ὁ φίλος ἡμῶν κεκοίμηται] He was dead in the eye of man, but asleep in the sight of Christ, Who can raise us from the grave with the same ease as from our bed.

Death is called a sleep in Scripture (1 Thess. iv. 13), but as some when they sleep have sweet dreams, and others have fearful visions, so in Death. Every one sleeps with his moral condition upon him, and every one will wake with it. And great is the difference between the dormitories, in which they who sleep are guarded, and from which they will come forth to Judgment. The soul of the poor man was carried to his own place, and that of the rich man to his; the former to Abraham's bosom, the latter to a place where he was athirst, and had not a drop of water to cool his tongue. Luke xvi. 22—24. (Cp. Aug., and see on Luke xxiii. 43, and an interesting fragment on this subject by S. Hippolytus, Bp. of Portus, and scholar of St. Irenæus, in the edition of Fabricius, i. p. 220, and in "Hippolytus and the Church of Rome." pp. 156—160.)

— ἐξυπνίσω] to raise the dead is as easy to Christ as to wake the sleeping. Cf. Matt. ix. 24. Mark v. 39. Luke viii. 52.

14. Λάζαρος ἀπέθανε] He does not say τέθνηκε, but ἀπέθανε. Lazarus died; but in regard to Christ, οὐ τέθνηκε; for He is going to wake him. Yet he is ὁ τεθνηκὼς in the eye of men, vv. 40—44. Cp. on v. 32.

He shows His Divine Power, by telling them of things at a distance (Theoph.), and thus prepares them for a miracle.

15. ἵνα πιστεύσητε] that your faith in Me may become more strong than it is (Aug., see on ii. 2).

— ὅτι οὐκ ἤμην] As if it were inconsistent with Christ's presence that any one should die in it. "Præsente vitæ Duce nemo unquam legitur mortuus." Cp. vv. 21. 32. (Bengel.) The thieves died after Him. (John xix. 32. 34.)

16. Θωμᾶς—Δίδυμος] See on Matt. x. 3. St. John alone translates his name, and does it three times (xx. 24; xxi. 2).

— ἵνα ἀποθάνωμεν μετ' αὐτοῦ] 'with Jesus.' This was said aside.

The disciples were afraid of the Jews, and Thomas especially; but afterwards he became firm in faith. He who feared to go to Judæa, went and died for the faith in India. (Chrys.)

17. τέσσαρας ἡμέρας] Lazarus was therefore buried on the day of his death. See vv. 6 and 39. (Bengel.)

18. ἀπὸ σταδίων] On this use of ἀπὸ, see xxi. 8. Rev. xiv. 20; and Winer, p. 491. Cp. xii. 1.

— σταδίων δεκαπέντε] 'fifteen stadia,' two miles; hence many from Jerusalem had come to Bethany. Some came to Martha and Mary, whom Jesus loved, although the Jews had agreed that if any man did confess Jesus to be Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue (John ix. 22). Yet Mary and Martha received Him—a proof of constancy and courage,—rewarded by His love and mercy.

πέντε· 19 καὶ πολλοὶ ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων ἐληλύθεισαν πρὸς τὰς περὶ Μάρθαν καὶ Μαρίαν, ἵνα παραμυθήσωνται αὐτὰς περὶ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ αὐτῶν. 20 Ἡ οὖν Μάρθα, ὡς ἤκουσεν ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἔρχεται, ὑπήντησεν αὐτῷ· Μαρία δὲ ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ ἐκαθέζετο. 21 Εἶπεν οὖν ἡ Μάρθα πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν, Κύριε, [f] εἰ ἦς ὧδε, ὁ ἀδελφός μου οὐκ ἂν ἐτεθνήκει. 22 Ἀλλὰ καὶ νῦν, οἶδα ὅτι, ὅσα ἂν αἰτήσῃ τὸν Θεὸν, δώσει σοι ὁ Θεός. 23 Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἀναστήσεται ὁ ἀδελφός σου. 24 [g] Λέγει αὐτῷ Μάρθα, Οἶδα ὅτι ἀναστήσεται ἐν τῇ ἀναστάσει ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ. 25 Εἶπεν αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, [h] Ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ ἀνάστασις καὶ ἡ ζωή· ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ, κἂν ἀποθάνῃ, ζήσεται, 26 [i] καὶ πᾶς ὁ ζῶν καὶ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ οὐ μὴ ἀποθάνῃ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα· πιστεύεις τοῦτο; 27 [j] Λέγει αὐτῷ, Ναὶ, Κύριε· ἐγὼ πεπίστευκα, ὅτι σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστὸς, ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, [k] ὁ εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἐρχόμενος. 28 Καὶ ταῦτα εἰποῦσα ἀπῆλθε καὶ ἐφώνησε Μαρίαν τὴν ἀδελφὴν αὐτῆς λάθρα, εἰποῦσα, Ὁ διδάσκαλος πάρεστι, καὶ φωνεῖ σε. 29 Ἐκείνη, ὡς ἤκουσεν, ἐγείρεται ταχὺ καὶ ἔρχεται πρὸς αὐτόν. 30 Οὔπω δὲ ἐληλύθει ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὴν κώμην, ἀλλ' ἦν ἐν τῷ τόπῳ ὅπου ὑπήντησεν αὐτῷ ἡ Μάρθα. 31 Οἱ οὖν Ἰουδαῖοι, οἱ ὄντες μετ' αὐτῆς ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ καὶ παραμυθούμενοι αὐτὴν, ἰδόντες τὴν Μαρίαν ὅτι ταχέως ἀνέστη καὶ ἐξῆλθεν, ἠκολούθησαν αὐτῇ λέγοντες, Ὅτι ὑπάγει εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον ἵνα κλαύσῃ ἐκεῖ. 32 Ἡ οὖν Μαρία ὡς ἦλθεν ὅπου ἦν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἰδοῦσα αὐτὸν ἔπεσεν αὐτοῦ εἰς τοὺς πόδας, λέγουσα αὐτῷ, Κύριε, εἰ ἦς ὧδε, οὐκ ἂν ἀπέθανε μοῦ ὁ ἀδελφός. 33 Ἰησοῦς οὖν ὡς εἶδεν αὐτὴν κλαίουσαν, καὶ τοὺς συνελθόντας αὐτῇ Ἰουδαίους κλαίοντας, [l] ἐνεβριμήσατο τῷ πνεύματι, καὶ ἐτάραξεν ἑαυτὸν, 34 καὶ εἶπε, Ποῦ τεθείκατε

[f] ver. 32. ch. 4. 47, 49.
[g] ch. 5. 28, 29. & 6. 39, 40, 44. Luke 14. 14.
[h] ch. 5. 21. & 6. 39. 1 Cor. 15. 21, 22. Phil. 3. 20, 21. Col. 3. 3, 4. Rev. 1. 18.
[i] ch. 6. 35. & 10. 28. Luke 20. 36. 1 Cor. 15. 25, 26, 39—42, 53. Rev. 21. 4.
[j] Matt. 16. 16. & ch. 11. 3. ch. 4. 42. & 6. 69.
[k] Matt. 11. 3. & 21 9. Ps. 118. 26. Deut. 18. 15—18. Isa. 7. 14. & 35. 1—6. & 53. & 61. 1—3. Dan. 9. 24, 26. Micah 5. 2. Hag. 2. 7. Mal. 3. 1. & 4. 2.
[l] ver. 38. Mark 7. 34. & 8. 12.

---

19. τὰς περὶ Μάρθαν καὶ Μαρίαν] 'Martha and Mary.' See Glass. Phil. S. p. 320, but it may mean also friends and relatives with them. See Acts xiii. 13.

— ἵνα παραμυθ. αὐ.] usually for seven days. See Gen. i. 10. 1 Sam. xxxi. 13. 1 Chron. x. 12.

20. ἐκαθέζετο] was sitting in the house; while Martha, it would seem, was out of it, and therefore heard the news first. (Chrys.)

21. Κύριε, εἰ ἦς ὧδε] Her faith was yet weak; and consequently she adds, "whatsoever thou wilt ask of God." She did not yet know that Christ could raise the dead by His divine power, but regarded Him as a holy man. Jesus correcting her erroneous notions, and strengthening her weak faith, says to her, "Thy brother shall rise again."

23. ἀναστήσεται ὁ ἀδελφός σου] A prophecy which was to have a double fulfilment, and to be explained by the event; first by an immediate Resurrection of Lazarus, in the sight of his sisters and others; for Christ knew what He would do; and this first Resurrection was to be a proof to them and to the world, of His truth in pre-announcing the Universal Resurrection.

He does not say, I will ask God that he may rise again; but "he shall rise;" for "I am the Resurrection and the Life." I need not ask aid in raising him. I am the Resurrection; all who desire to partake in the Resurrection must ask of Me, must pray to Me. Thus He raises her mind, and teaches us what the Resurrection is, which is far more important to her and to us than that Lazarus should be raised to life. (Chrys., Theophyl.)

24. ἐν τῇ ἀναστάσει] The Day of Resurrection and the Last Day are here represented as identical. Cp. v. 28, 29; vi. 39. 44.

25. ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ ἀνάστασις καὶ ἡ ζωή] See John xiv. 6. Deut. xxx. 20. Jer. xxx. 6. 1 Cor. i. 30.

"Ego sum Resurrectio morientium, et Vita viventium." (Beng.)

— ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ, κἂν ἀποθάνῃ, ζήσεται] κἂν ἀποθάνῃ, though he die, yet shall he live; and what is more, his death shall be the gate of his entrance to everlasting life, or, as St. Aug. paraphrases it, he that believeth in Me, although he die in the body, yet will remain alive in the soul, even until the day when his body will rise again, never more to die; for death is the life of the soul, and every one who lives in the body, although he may die in the body for a time, yet shall he live.

I am the Life; and he that believeth in Me shall never die; therefore, whether I am present to your bodily eye or no, I am able to give Life, and you must come to Me for life. This is a reply to her who said, whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee; and if Thou hadst been here my brother had not died. (Chrys.)

26. οὐ μὴ ἀποθάνῃ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα] 'shall never die.' See viii. 51, 52; x. 28, i. e. shall live for ever. So οὐ μὴ διψήσῃ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα (iv. 13), 'shall never thirst.' See also xiii. 8. 1 Cor. viii. 13. The Greek οὐ μὴ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα is equivalent to the Hebrew לא לעלם (lo-leolam). Prov. x. 30. Ps. lv. 22. Cp. Vorst. de Hebr. pp. 730—735. And therefore the words, "shall not die eternally" (non morietur in æternum), in the last Prayer of our Burial Service (cp. the first sentence of it from John xi. 25, 26), are to be understood in this sense, i. e. 'shall never die.'

28. λάθρα] 'secretly.' Perhaps she did not say it openly for fear of the Jews, and so she is contrasted with Mary (v. 32).

32. Μαρία—ἔπεσεν αὐτοῦ εἰς τοὺς πόδας] So A, C, E, G, H, K, LXX. Elz. εἰς τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ.—but αὐτοῦ is emphatic.

Mary was more fervent in spirit than her sister, and did not care for the crowd, nor for the jealousy, suspicion, and hatred, with which the Jews regarded Jesus, Whom they and their Rulers sought to kill; but she threw aside all human considerations, and, having "chosen the better part," cared only for the one thing needful, and in a spirit of noble courage and affectionate devotion, meek and gentle as she was, paid public homage to Christ by casting herself at His feet.

— οὐκ ἂν ἀπέθανε μοῦ ὁ ἀδελφός] Observe the difference between these words and Martha's, v. 21. Mary says, "If Thou hadst been here, Death would never have come to one so dear to Thee and me as that brother of mine" (μοῦ ὁ ἀδελφός). Martha says, "If Thou hadst been here, my brother (ὁ ἀδελφός μου) would not have been dead,—as he now is."

33. Ἰουδαίους κλαίοντας] Many witnesses, therefore, were present at this miracle, and many of them bitter enemies to Christ. (Aug., Theoph. See vv. 45, 46, and xii. 17.)

— ἐνεβριμήσατο τῷ πνεύματι] This word ἐμβριμῶμαι, repeated in v. 38, ἐμβριμώμενος ἐν ἑαυτῷ, is from the root βρίμω, 'fremo,' and signifies to be angry, to rebuke, to chide, to menace, to forbid, to restrain, with something of vehemence and indignation; see the passages where it is used Matt. ix. 30. Mark i. 43; xiv. 5. The LXX use ἐμβρίμημα for זַעַם (zaam), 'indignation.' (Lament. ii. 6.)

What was the cause of this ἐμβρίμησις? Some say that He was troubled by a contemplation of the ravages of sin; some, by the hypocrisy and malice of the Jews; some, by the grief of those around Him. The ancient Fathers generally supposed this word to indicate an internal act, by which our Blessed Lord, Who is perfect Man as well as God, and Who, as God, was about to raise the dead, now kept His human affections under control, and, as it were, rebuked and restrained them from bursting into an immoderate excess of grief. Thus St. Cyril says, ἐπιπλήττει τρόπον τινὰ τῇ ἰδίᾳ σαρκί. He does not allow His human affections to break forth, but represses and chides them. And again he says, ἀγριώτερον τῇ λύπῃ ἐπετίμησε· ὡς γὰρ Θεὸς παιδαγωγικῶς ἐπετιμᾷ. And so Euthym.: ἐπετίμησε τῷ πάθει.

St. Cyril adds, that to be overpowered by grief,—τυραννεῖσθαι ταῖς λύπαις,—is a disorder of human nature, and that this was overcome by Christ. Perhaps we may say with reverence, that this wonderful work was not only a proof of the Divine power and love of the Incarnate Lord, and a pledge of our future Resurrection, by His might and mercy, but also the manner of its operation was exemplary to us in the exercise of our own human affections. Our Lord loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus; He wept as man at the grave (v. 36). But He checked his affections from breaking forth into passionate grief; He did not allow them to disturb His reason, to overpower His will, or to impair His quietness and dignity.

He thus taught us to control and moderate our passions; and particularly not to be sorry, as men without hope, for them that sleep in Him. (1 Thess. iv. 13.) He showed human feeling, that we may αὐτόν; Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, Κύριε, ἔρχου καὶ ἴδε. 35 m Ἐδάκρυσεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς.

36 Ἔλεγον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, Ἴδε, πῶς ἐφίλει αὐτόν· 37 n Τινὲς δὲ ἐξ αὐτῶν εἶπον, Οὐκ ἠδύνατο οὗτος ° ὁ ἀνοίξας τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς τοῦ τυφλοῦ ποιῆσαι ἵνα καὶ οὗτος μὴ ἀποθάνῃ; 38 Ἰησοῦς οὖν πάλιν ἐμβριμώμενος ἐν ἑαυτῷ ἔρχεται εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον. Ἦν δὲ σπήλαιον, καὶ λίθος ἐπέκειτο ἐπ' αὐτῷ. 39 Λέγει ὁ Ἰη-σοῦς, Ἄρατε τὸν λίθον. Λέγει αὐτῷ ἡ ἀδελφὴ τοῦ τεθνηκότος Μάρθα, Κύριε, ἤδη ὄζει, τεταρταῖος γάρ ἐστι. 40 Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Οὐκ εἶπόν σοι, ὅτι p ver. 4. 23—26. ἐὰν πιστεύσῃς, ὄψει τὴν δόξαν τοῦ Θεοῦ P; 41 Ἦραν οὖν τὸν λίθον, οὗ ἦν q Matt. 11. 25. ch. 17. 1. ὁ τεθνηκὼς κείμενος. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἦρε τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ἄνω καὶ εἶπε, Q Πάτερ, εὐχαριστῶ σοι ὅτι ἤκουσάς μου. 42 Ἐγὼ δὲ ἤδειν ὅτι πάντοτέ μου ἀκούεις· r ch. 12. 30. s ch. 5. 34—36. & 10. 25, 37, 38. & 14. 10, 11. Matt. 11. 2—5. Acts 2. 22. 1 John 5. 9. R ἀλλὰ διὰ τὸν ὄχλον τὸν περιεστῶτα εἶπον, S ἵνα πιστεύσωσιν ὅτι σὺ μέ ἀπ-έστειλας. 43 Καὶ ταῦτα εἰπὼν φωνῇ μεγάλῃ ἐκραύγασε, Λάζαρε, δεῦρο ἔξω· 44 καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ὁ τεθνηκὼς, δεδεμένος τοὺς πόδας καὶ τὰς χεῖρας κειρίαις, καὶ ἡ ὄψις αὐτοῦ σουδαρίῳ περιεδέδετο. Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Λύσατε αὐτὸν καὶ ἄφετε ὑπάγειν.

45 Πολλοὶ οὖν ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, οἱ ἐλθόντες πρὸς τὴν Μαρίαν καὶ θεασάμενοι t Matt. 26. 3. Mark 14. 1. Luke 22. 2. ch. 12. 19. comp. Acts 4. 16, 17, 24—28. ἃ ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτόν. 46 Τινὲς δὲ ἐξ αὐτῶν ἀπῆλθον πρὸς τοὺς Φαρισαίους, καὶ εἶπον αὐτοῖς ἃ ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς· 47 T Συνήγαγον οὖν οἱ Ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι συνέδριον, καὶ ἔλεγον, Τί ποιοῦμεν, ὅτι surely know that He has a human nature; and He was affected to tears when He saw Mary weeping, for He is touched with our infirmities. But He controlled His feelings by the action of His Spirit, τῷ πνεύματι, or by the Spirit, the Holy Spirit,—in order to teach us (says Theophylact) what are the proper bounds of sorrow, and its opposites,—τὸ γὰρ ἀσυμπαθὲς καὶ ἄδακρυ θηριῶδες, τὸ δὲ πολύδακρυ καὶ φιλόθρηνον καὶ πολύλυπον γυναικῶδες.

— ἐτάραξεν ἑαυτόν] A remarkable expression. He troubled Himself. It was His own will and deed: it was in His own power to be affected as He would. The Eternal Word of God took a human soul as well as human flesh, associating with Himself the complete nature of man in the Unity of His Person; and therefore human infirmity is troubled according to His will in His Person, where resided Divine power, (Aug.)

The affections of Christ were not passions, but voluntary emotions, which He held under control. And this self-commotion was orderly, rational, and full of dignity. And therefore, when He is said afterwards ταραχθῆναι (xii. 27; xiii. 21), some suffering of a more violent kind is indicated by the contrast.

Christians endeavour to be like Christ. They are not Stoics, nor yet are they overpowered by their feelings; they are not agitated by passions properly so called. (Beng.)

35. ἐδάκρυσεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς] ἐδάκρυσεν, not ἔκλαυσεν: non ploravit, sed flevit; i. e. gently, and without passion. When our Lord is about to do mighty works as God, He does something else to remind us that He is also man. He now weeps as Man, when He is about to raise the dead as God; so He slept just before He stilled the storm. See Matt. viii. 24.

Our Lord was affected with the tears of the sisters of the dead, and sympathized with them. "Ipse Salvator ploravit quem resuscitaturus erat." (Jerome, Ep. Nepot. p. 269.)

St. John studiously records, that Jesus wept, to show that He was really clothed with our nature; and because St. John relates more lofty things of Christ than the other Evangelists do, therefore He takes care to record the more lowly also. Christ also thus teaches us to weep for our departed friends,—but to weep moderately, and in the fear of God, and in the faith of the Resurrection. Our Lord, being partaker of our flesh and blood, was partaker in our human affections, and has taught us how to regulate them... The words describe what was seen,—but who shall describe what was felt? (Chrys., Theoph.)

37. ὁ ἀνοίξας τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς] A witness to the truth of that miracle.

38. σπήλαιον, καὶ λίθος] See Matt. xxvii. 60. 66. Mark xv. 46.

39. ἄρατε τὸν λίθον] Why did our Lord say, "Where have ye laid him?" and "Take away the stone," and "Loose him?" Why did He not at once raise Lazarus? Because He designed to make those, to whom He gave these commands, to be so many witnesses, by the eye and touch, to the reality of the miracle. (Chrys.) — τεθνηκότος] A, B, C, D, K, L, have τετελευτηκότος.

— τεταρταῖος] 'quatriduanus.' See v. 17. Cp. προκεῖσθαι πεμπταῖον. (Aristoph.) "τεταρταῖος, ap. Xen. Cyr. v. 3. 1. τριταῖος, Herodo. ii. 89. δευτεραῖος, id. vi. 106. δωδεκαταῖος, Theocrit. Id. ii. 4. Philostr. Apollon. vii. 10. πεμπταῖος ἀφίκετο." (Kuin.) See the examples in Matth. Gr. Gr. § 144. Cp. τριταῖος, 1 Sam. ix. 20; xxx. 13.

Observe this word in reference to Christ Himself. Lazarus was dead four days, and ἤδη ὄζει,—he saw corruption. But Christ raised Himself the third day, and saw no corruption. Acts xiii. 37.

41. οὗ—κείμενος] These words are not found in five uncials, and a few cursives, and in some Versions, and are omitted by many recent Editors; but the evidence of MSS. preponderates greatly in their favour; and their omission makes an inharmonious sound between ἦραν λίθον and ἦρε ὀφθαλμούς.

— Πάτερ, εὐχαριστῶ σοι] Christ prayed not because He needed aid, but because we need instruction. (Hilary, Chrys.) Cp. Mark i. 41; iv. 39; ix. 25. John i. 41; v. 9, which show that Christ wrought His greatest miracles without prayer, and by His own authority. He prayed to show that He was not against God, or God against Him; and that what He did was done with God's approval, as much as to say,—I pray, not because prayer on my part is necessary, nor in order that My will may be made effectual, but in order to show that My will and the Father's will is one and the same will. And this He proceeded to prove by saying, "Lazarus come forth,"—i. e. I, by My power, command thee to rise from the dead. (Chrys.)

43. φωνῇ μεγάλῃ ἐκραύγασε] The Loud Voice of Christ raising Lazarus from the dead, is a prelude to the Loud Voice of the Trumpet at the Great Day, when all who are in the graves will hear His Voice (John v. 28); and the effect of that Voice will be immediate,—in the twinkling of an eye, as the raising of Lazarus was. (Cyril., Theophyl.)

— Λάζαρε, δεῦρο ἔξω] He calls all His sheep by name (x. 3). He knows them dead as well as alive.

When our Lord works miracles, He speaks and acts with sovereign authority: "Tabitha, arise;" "Stretch forth thy hand;" "Thy sins are forgiven thee;" "Peace, be still!" "Take up thy bed and go to thy house;" "I say to thee, thou evil spirit, come out of him;" "Be it unto thee even as thou wilt;" "Say, the Lord hath need of him;" "To-day shalt thou be with Me in Paradise." (Chrys.)

44. ἐξῆλθεν ὁ τεθνηκώς] This history may be considered as symbolical of what is done in the spiritual world, when the soul is raised by Christ's voice from the death of sin, and released from its bands by the Ministry of Reconciliation (2 Cor. v. 18, 19) which He has instituted in His Church. (Aug.)

It is Christ Who quickens the dead, and raises from the grave. The Ministers of Christ, at His command, loose him who is bound, and who has been quickened and raised by Christ. (Aug. See also Aug. Serm. 98, and Quæst. 65, and Burgon here.)

— κειρίαις] Used by LXX for Hebr. חַרְבֹּנִים (marbadim). Prov. vii. 16, 'tapetes lectorum.'

"κειρίαι sunt fasciæ quævis, et hoc nomine insigniuntur fasciæ, quibus infantes vinciri, lecti subtendi, et mortuorum cadavera, linteo prius involuta (v. ad Matt. xxvii. 59), ut aromata, quibus corpora condiebantur, melius servarentur, circumligari solebant. Suidas: κειρία· εἶδος ζώνης ἐκ σχοινίων, παριστικὸς ἱμαντι, ᾧ δεσμοῦσι τὰς κλίνας. Moschopulus: κειρία ὁ τῶν νηπίων δεσμός, ἤγουν ἡ κοινῶς φασκία, καὶ ᾧ δεσμοῦσι τοὺς νεκρούς. Fasciæ sepulcrales, quæ h. l. dicuntur κειρίαι, infra xix. 40, nominantur ὀθόνια. Fuerunt qui putarent totum Lazari corpus involutum, fasciisque circumligatum fuisse, instar infantum recens natorum. Basilius Homil. de gratiar. actione T. i. ὁ νεκρὸς ἐζωοποιεῖτο καὶ ὁ δεδέμενος περιεπάτει. Θαῦμα ἐν θαύματι, κειρίαις δεδέσθαι τοὺς πόδας, καὶ μὴ κωλύεσθαι πρὸς κίνησιν. Eandem sententiam secuti Lightfootus, Lampius." (Kuin.)

— σουδαρίῳ] See Luke xix. 20. John xx. 7.

47. τί ποιοῦμεν, ὅτι—ποιεῖ;] ὅτι = 'in regard to that.' See ix. 17.

οὗτος ὁ ἄνθρωπος πολλὰ σημεῖα ποιεῖ; 48 ἐὰν ἀφῶμεν αὐτὸν οὕτω, πάντες πιστεύσουσιν εἰς αὐτόν· καὶ ἐλεύσονται οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι καὶ ἀροῦσιν ἡμῶν καὶ τὸν τόπον καὶ τὸ ἔθνος. 49 [u] Εἷς δέ τις ἐξ αὐτῶν, Καϊάφας, ἀρχιερεὺς ὢν τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου, εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Ὑμεῖς οὐκ οἴδατε οὐδὲν, 50 [v] οὐδὲ διαλογίζεσθε, ὅτι συμφέρει ἡμῖν ἵνα εἷς ἄνθρωπος ἀποθάνῃ ὑπὲρ τοῦ λαοῦ, καὶ μὴ ὅλον τὸ ἔθνος ἀπόληται. 51 Τοῦτο δὲ ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ οὐκ εἶπεν, ἀλλὰ ἀρχιερεὺς ὢν τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου [w] προεφήτευσεν ὅτι ἔμελλεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἀποθνήσκειν ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἔθνους, 52 [x] καὶ οὐχ ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἔθνους μόνον, ἀλλ' ἵνα καὶ τὰ τέκνα τοῦ Θεοῦ τὰ διεσκορπισμένα συναγάγῃ εἰς ἕν. 53 Ἀπ' ἐκείνης οὖν τῆς ἡμέρας συνεβουλεύσαντο ἵνα ἀποκτείνωσιν αὐτόν. (96/IV) 54 [y] Ἰησοῦς οὖν οὐκ ἔτι παῤῥησίᾳ περιεπάτει ἐν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις· ἀλλὰ ἀπῆλθεν ἐκεῖθεν εἰς τὴν χώραν ἐγγὺς τῆς ἐρήμου, εἰς [z] Ἐφραὶμ λεγομένην πόλιν, κἀκεῖ διέτριβε μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ. (96/I) 55 Ἦν δὲ ἐγγὺς τὸ πάσχα τῶν Ἰουδαίων· (97/X) καὶ ἀνέβησαν πολλοὶ εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα ἐκ τῆς χώρας πρὸ τοῦ πάσχα, [zz] ἵνα ἁγνίσωσιν ἑαυτούς. (97/X) 56 Ἐζήτουν οὖν τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ ἔλεγον μετ' ἀλλήλων ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ ἑστηκότες, Τί δοκεῖ ὑμῖν; ὅτι οὐ μὴ ἔλθῃ εἰς τὴν ἑορτήν; 57 Δεδώκεισαν δὲ καὶ οἱ Ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι ἐντολὴν ἵνα ἐάν τις γνῷ ποῦ ἐστι μηνύσῃ, ὅπως πιάσωσιν αὐτόν.

u Luke 3. 2. ch. 18. 13, 14, 24, 28. Matt. 26. 3.
v ch. 16. 14.
w Matt. 7. 22.
x ch. 10. 16. Isa. 49. 5, 6. & 56. 8. ch. 12. 20—24, 32. Rom. 15. 8, 12. Matt. 8. 11. Eph. 2. 13. 1 John 2. 2. y 2 Chron. 13. 19. ch. 7. 1, 30. & 10. 39, 40.
z 2 Chron. 13. 19.
zz 2 Chron. 30. 17—19.

48. ἐλεύσονται οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι] They feared temporal loss and incurred eternal, and did not escape the temporal; for the Romans did come after Christ's passion, and took away their place and nation, because they did not let Christ alone, but slew Him Who is now reigning in heaven, while they are scattered through the world. (Aug., Chrys.)

49. Καϊάφας] See on Matt. xxvi. 3. Luke iii. 2.

He had been intruded into the office by Valerius Gratus, A.D. 25, and was put out by Vitellius, A.D. 36. (Joseph. A. xviii. 4. 3.)

— ἀρχιερεὺς ὢν τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου] Annas was the High Priest de jure. (Cf. on Luke iii. 2, and below, xviii. 13. 24.) The addition τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ is a silent indication of the illegal character of his tenure of office.

The High Priesthood, by God's Institution, was in the family of Aaron and for life; but through the ambition and strife of the Jews the office had become annual, and indeed there were sometimes more than one High Priest in one year; and Caiaphas had bought the office with money. But even then the Spirit of God had not yet forsaken the sacerdotal office, though they who bare it were unworthy and abused it to their own destruction. But He deserted them when they had crucified Christ, and when the veil of the Temple was rent in twain. (Aug., Chrys., Alcuin.)

Caiaphas was High Priest that year, i. e. that year in which Jesus died; and in that year he prophesied. Jewish Prophecy expired with a prediction of Christ's death on its lips.

Observe, the expression τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου is repeated (vv. 39. 51), and is emphatic. He prophesied as High Priest of that year in which the Levitical Priesthood and Ritual was about to be superseded by the Sacrifice offered by the One Great High Priest. But God would thus show that He had not withdrawn all His graces from them, till they forfeited them by rejecting and crucifying Christ; and then the Veil of the Temple was rent; and the People and the Priesthood became the Victims of False Prophets.

Although there were many other High Priests in other years, yet we do not hear that any prophesied except the High Priest of that year in which Jesus was about to die. (Origen.)

Caiaphas spoke with a view to political expediency, but God overruled his words to spiritual edification. So He did with those of Pilate when he wrote the title on the Cross. "Out of the eater came forth meat" (Judges xiv. 14). "The fierceness of man shall turn to Thy praise, O Lord" (Ps. lxxvi. 10).

50. ὑπὲρ τοῦ λαοῦ] Caiaphas, in a Jewish spirit, prophesied of what would be expedient for the Jews; but God designed the benefit of Christ's death for the Whole World; and made Caiaphas an instrument for conferring that benefit, which the Jews reject.

51. προεφήτευσε] One of the Comments on the History according to St. John's manner. See xii. 6; above, pp. 33. 36. 46, and 207.

Sometimes therefore evil men, as Balaam and Caiaphas, may be endued with prophetical gifts, and evil spirits themselves may confess Christ—"We know Thee who Thou art" (Luke iv. 34). This power, however, in the case of Caiaphas is ascribed by the Evangelist to a divine mystery, because he was "High Priest that year" (Aug.); the last in the seventy weeks of Daniel (Bengel); not that Caiaphas was made High Priest that year; he had been High Priest for several years. (See Josephus, Ant. xviii. 2 and 4. See on Matt. xxvi. 3.)

See the power of the High Priesthood. Caiaphas, being invested in this office, prophesied, although unworthy and not knowing what he said, but was made an instrument in God's hands for declaring the truth. Thus we are taught to honour the Priest's office on account of the grace given by it. He prophesied, but not with a prophetic soul; and therefore was not a prophet.

See also the power of the Holy Spirit, for He used Caiaphas as an organ, and made him utter a prophecy concerning Christ and the efficacy of His death. Many, though unworthy, have foreseen and foretold the future—Pharaoh, Balaam, Saul, Nebuchadnezzar, Caiaphas, Pilate. (Theoph., Chrys.) Prophetical and miraculous powers, eloquence, faith, and other ministerial gifts, may be found in evil men. And nothing profiteth without Charity (1 Cor. xiii. 1—3).

We may look for the time, when Ministers of Antichrist, seducing men to idolatry, will be permitted to try the faith of the world by uttering prophecies, working signs and miracles. (See Matt. xxiv. 24. 2 Thess. ii. 9.) But the Holy Spirit, in the Old and New Testament, has provided a safeguard against these seductions. (See Deut. xiii. 1—4 and 1 Cor. xiii. 1—3.) The test to be applied is—Do they who prophesy and work miracles also preach true doctrine? or do they lead to idolatry? Have they Charity? Do they show love to God and to Man in God? Or are they like Caiaphas, uttering a prophecy concerning Christ, and yet ready to kill Him?

52. συναγάγῃ εἰς ἕν] The prophecy took effect, but in the opposite way to which Caiaphas designed. Christ was slain, and the people of the literal Israel were scattered. "Their house is left to them desolate" (Matt. xxiii. 38), and the people of God were gathered together in one in Christ. (Chrys.)

53. συνεβουλεύσαντο] What, as individuals, they had designed, they now deliberate in common to execute. (Cyril.)

— ἀποκτείνωσιν αὐτόν] They perverted a prophecy in behalf of Christ into an occasion of sin against Him. So evil men deal with the words of the Holy Ghost in the Holy Scriptures, which were written for our learning. "They wrest them to their own destruction" (2 Pet. iii. 16). (Origen.)

54. οὐκ ἔτι παῤῥησίᾳ περιεπάτει ἐν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις] He would not offer any temptation to the impiety and malice of His persecutors, or give the wicked any cause of becoming more wicked. (Origen; see Matt. x. 23.) He thus gave His disciples an occasion of showing their stedfastness and allegiance to Him; and therefore He afterwards said, "Ye are they who have continued with me in my temptations" (Luke xxii. 28). (Chrys.) — Ἐφραὶμ λεγομένην πόλιν] See on Luke x. 1. Cp. Winer, R. W. in v. Ephraim.

55. τῆς χώρας] from that country or region where Jesus had been (v. 54). Does the Evangelist intimate that the men of that region were solicited to deliver up Christ (see vv. 56, 57); and does he thus bring out more strongly the treachery of Christ's own Apostle who betrayed Him?

— ἵνα ἁγνίσωσιν] On this use of ἁγνίζω, see Acts xxi. 24. 26; xxiv. 18.

That they might purify themselves from such ceremonial defilements as they might have contracted; in order to participation in the Paschal feast. (See Numb. ix. 10. 2 Chron. xxx. 17.) Thus purification was effected by sacrifices, sprinkling of water, fasting, prayer, and other observances, which lasted from one to six days. (See Lightf. and Lampe.) This, and the other prescribed rites, brought a great concourse of people together at Jerusalem, before the Festival. Indeed, all who went had to undergo the rites in question. So a Rabbinical writer, cited by Wetstein, says, 'Tenetur unusquisque ad purificandum se ad festum.' And Jos. Ant. iv. 3. 12, ἀθέμιτον ἡγεῖτο—μὴ προηγνευκότι εἰσάγειν τὸ πλῆθος. The rites are described by Jos. Ant. viii. 3, and Bell. v. 2. (Bloomf.)

Probably in reference to this usage at this time our Lord Himself says (xvii. 19), ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν ἐγὼ ἁγιάζω ἐμαυτόν. The People were sanctifying themselves for the Levitical Passover. The True Passover was sanctifying Himself as an oblation for the whole world.

a Matt. 26. 6. Mark 14. 3.
b ch. 11. 1, 43.
c ch. 11. 2.
d Matt. 10. 4.
e ch. 13. 29.
f Deut. 15. 11. Matt. 26. 11. Mark 14. 7.

XII. 1 [a] Ὁ οὖν Ἰησοῦς πρὸ ἓξ ἡμερῶν τοῦ πάσχα ἦλθεν εἰς [b] Βηθανίαν, ὅπου ἦν Λάζαρος ὁ τεθνηκὼς, ὃν ἤγειρεν ἐκ νεκρῶν ὁ Ἰησοῦς. (98/1) 2 Ἐποίησαν οὖν αὐτῷ δεῖπνον ἐκεῖ, καὶ ἡ Μάρθα διηκόνει· ὁ δὲ Λάζαρος εἷς ἦν τῶν ἀνακειμένων σὺν αὐτῷ. 3 [c] Ἡ οὖν Μαρία, λαβοῦσα λίτραν μύρου νάρδου πιστικῆς πολυτίμου, ἤλειψε τοὺς πόδας τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, καὶ ἐξέμαξε ταῖς θριξὶν αὐτῆς τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ· ἡ δὲ οἰκία ἐπληρώθη ἐκ τῆς ὀσμῆς τοῦ μύρου. 4 [d] Λέγει οὖν εἷς ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, Ἰούδας Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτης, ὁ μέλλων αὐτὸν παραδιδόναι, 5 Διατί τοῦτο τὸ μύρον οὐκ ἐπράθη τριακοσίων δηναρίων, καὶ ἐδόθη πτωχοῖς; 6 [e] Εἶπε δὲ τοῦτο, οὐχ ὅτι περὶ τῶν πτωχῶν ἔμελεν αὐτῷ, ἀλλ' ὅτι κλέπτης ἦν, καὶ τὸ γλωσσόκομον εἶχε, καὶ τὰ βαλλόμενα ἐβάσταζεν. 7 Εἶπεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἄφες αὐτήν· εἰς τὴν ἡμέραν τοῦ ἐνταφιασμοῦ μου τετήρηκεν αὐτό. 8 [f] τοὺς πτωχοὺς γὰρ πάντοτε ἔχετε μεθ' ἑαυτῶν, ἐμὲ δὲ οὐ πάντοτε ἔχετε.

(99/2) 9 [g] Ἔγνω οὖν ὄχλος πολὺς ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων ὅτι ἐκεῖ ἐστι· καὶ ἦλθον,

---

CH. XII. 1. ὁ οὖν Ἰησοῦς—ἦλθεν εἰς Βηθανίαν] On the Sabbath before the Passover. This is the same narrative as in St. Matt. (xxvi. 6) and in St. Mark (xiv. 3), concerning the woman in the house of Simon, who had been a leper. (Aug., de Cons. Evang. ii. 89.)

— πρὸ ἓξ ἡμερῶν τοῦ πάσχα] Six days before the Passover. The term 'eight days' is equivalent to a week. On the construction cp. xi. 18, ἐγγὺς τῶν Ἱεροσολύμων ὡς ἀπὸ σταδίων δεκαπέντε. So LXX, Amos i. 1, πρὸ δύο ἐτῶν τοῦ σεισμοῦ: iv. 7, πρὸ τριῶν μηνῶν τοῦ τρυγητοῦ (Winer, p. 492).

This supper at Bethany was probably on the Sabbath before His Death.

1, 2. εἰς Βηθανίαν—δεῖπνον ἐκεῖ] If (as is most probable) this δεῖπνον at Bethany was on a Sabbath,—the Sabbath, or day of Rest before that great Sabbath, the last Sabbath which was of divine obligation, on which Christ rested in the grave, and fulfilled the Sabbath, and prepared the grave as a place of Rest for all who pass from this life in His faith and fear, then this δεῖπνον, in which He was anointed and embalmed beforehand for His ἐνταφιασμός (see on v. 7), may be regarded as presenting a type of that rest and refreshment in the Sabbath of the grave, where all who are cleansed from the leprosy of sin, as Simon was from bodily leprosy, and who are raised from the death of sin, as Lazarus from the grave, and all whom Jesus loves, as Martha and Mary, recline at a spiritual banquet, in Paradise, —which is a blessed Bethany, or House of Passage, from this world to the heavenly Jerusalem.

— ὁ Ἰησοῦς] Not in Elz., but found in A, B, D, E, G, H, and many cursive MSS. and Versions; and it gives force to the sentence.

2. ἀνακειμένων σύν] So the best authorities for Elz. συνανακειμένων.

3. ἡ οὖν Μαρία] See above on xi. 2, where St. John says ἀλείψασα τὸν Κύριον, though he dwells specially on the anointing of the feet.

— νάρδου πιστικῆς] See on Mark xiv. 3. The distillations of pure oil are called ἄδυλοι by Æschyl. Ag. 95.

— τοὺς πόδας] Mary anointed His feet. We may imitate her in her love and ministry to Christ. For all Christians are members of Christ; and what we do from love of Christ to the least of His members is accepted by Him as done unto Himself (Matt. xxv. 40). We also therefore may be said to anoint His feet when we show mercy to His poor. (Theoph.)

— ἡ δὲ οἰκία ἐπληρώθη ἐκ τῆς ὀσμῆς] And the world is now filled with its fragrance. Do thou also anoint the feet of Jesus, and wipe His feet with thy hair. If thou hast more than enough, give to the poor, which are the feet of Christ's body, so thou mayest wipe them with thy hair. (Aug.) This will be an odour of a sweet smell (ὀσμὴ εὐωδίας), a sacrifice well-pleasing to God (Phil. iv. 18); as Christ also hath loved us and hath given Himself an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet smelling savour (εἰς ὀσμὴν εὐωδίας, Eph. v. 2).

4. Ἰούδας] The other Evangelists do not specify him. Here is an evidence of the later date of this Gospel. Cp. the mention of Peter and Malchus, xviii. 10.

Judas, we see, remained in Christ's company to the end.

Our Lord, by His forbearance to the Traitor, teaches us to tolerate evil men in the Church, that we may not divide the body of Christ. Be thou holy, and tolerate the evil, that thou mayest attain the reward of the good, and not be condemned with the evil. Imitate Christ. (Aug.)

6. γλωσσόκομον] Prop. (1) a case for the stops or keys of pipes or flutes; (2) a chest, scrip, or purse for money (2 Chron. xxiv. 10, 11).

As Kuin. says, "γλωσσόκομον, vocabulum compositum ex γλῶσσα lingua, item lingula tibiarum, et κομέω servo, propriè notat thecam, s. cistellam, in quâ tibicines lingulas tibiarum reponebant, ne attritu corrumperentur. Hesychius: γλωττόκομον, ἐν ᾧ οἱ αὐληταὶ ἀπετίθεσαν τὰς γλωσσίδας, deinde verò hoc idem nomen adhibetur etiam de arculâ quâvis; sic Exod. xxxvii. 1, arcam fœderis Aquila dixit γλωσσόκομον. Alexandrini ibi usi sunt vocabulo κιβωτός. Cistulam, in quam Philistæi aureos mures et simulacra conjecerant, quæ in textu Hebraico תֵּבָה dicitur, Josephus Ant. vi. 1, 2, γλωσσόκομον dixit, quod nomen § 3 explicuit, τὸ ἄγγος δ τοὺς ἀνδριάντας εἶχε καὶ μύας, arcula in quâ erant simulacra et mures. Inprimis autem γλωσσόκομον usurpatur de loculo pecuniis asservandis apto sive marsupio, ut h. l. in versione Alexandrinâ 2 Par. xxiv. 8. 10, 11. Plutarch. Galba, p. 1060, ἐκέλευσεν (Galba) αὐτῷ κομισθῆναι τὸ γλωσσόκομον, καὶ λαβὼν χρυσοῦς τινὰς ἐπέδωκε τῷ Κάνῳ. Lex. Cyrill. ined. γλωσσόκομον· βαλάντιον ἢ ξυλίνη θήκη. Euthymius Zigabenus ad Matth. 26, γλωσσόκομον δὲ ἦν βαλάντιον, ἐν ᾧ τὰ προσαγόμενα χάριν τῶν πενήτων ἐναπεθησαυρίζετο. Etiam in scriptis Rabbinorum reperitur vocabulum גלוסקמא (quo h. l. Syrus usus est) et דלוסקמא per Daleth, et vulgò ponitur de arcâ sepulcrali, v. Lightfootus ad h. l. et Buxtorfius Lex. Talm. p. 443." Cp. on xiii. 29.

Observe the striking contrast—Mary and Judas; the three hundred pence and the thirty pieces of silver; her ἀλάβαστρον, his γλωσσόκομον; she in a Simon's house, he a Simon's son; the fragrant deed of the one, the miserable end of the other. Let all covetous men, robbers of Christ and of His Church, beware. Let them turn and imitate Mary.

— βαλλόμενα] offerings to Christ, from those who ministered to Him of their substance. See on Luke viii. 3.

Why Judas had the custody of the oblations to Christ, and why our Lord, who knew his thoughts and secret acts, did not put him out of his stewardship, is a question which has received different answers from various quarters. Some have replied, that He would not give Judas any occasion for betraying Him. (Chrys., Euthym.) Some have ventured to affirm, that his acts of embezzlement were unobserved by Christ. (Lücke.) This is certain, that He has thus left a solemn warning to all, and especially to the Clergy, on the trial of pecuniary trusts and possessions; and on the dreadful consequences to themselves and to their own spiritual being, from dealing dishonestly with Church revenues. He has also thus bequeathed to us an example of patience and forbearance. We may not forsake the Communion of the Church, even though a sacrilegious Judas ministers therein.

7. ἄφες αὐτήν] Observe Christ's words: He does not condemn Judas, but praises and encourages Mary. (Aug.)

— εἰς τὴν ἡμέραν τ. ἐ. μ. τετήρηκεν] So the majority of MSS. But B, D, K, L, Q, X, and a few cursives and some Versions have ἵνα ε. τ. ἡ. τ. ἐ. μ. τηρήσῃ, which has been received by some Editors. If it is the true reading, then it must be observed, that ἵνα is not followed by τηρῇ, but τηρήσῃ, which throws the mind back to a design before the act, and not in it; and the sentence means, "let her alone: allow her to have done this, to keep the nard for the day of My burial."

The allegation of some (e. g. Meyer here), that St. John is at variance with the other Evangelists, and asserts that Mary anointed only the feet of Christ, and had a surplus of nard which she reserved for the burial, is grounded on a misconstruction of his words. See xi. 2, where He says that she anointed the Lord (i. e. His body), and wiped His feet with her hair. This allegation of discrepancy, like many others of the same kind, is founded on the hypothesis, that St. John, in relating any given event, ought to record all the circumstances specified by his predecessors, or else is to be regarded as contradicting them! Whereas, on the contrary, his practice of not repeating all that they had related, and in dwelling on some particular circumstances (e. g. the anointing of the feet here) not mentioned by them, ought rather to be regarded as evidence of his agreement with them.

There is something impressive and affecting in the mention of ἡμέρα ἐνταφιασμοῦ, because, probably, this anointing took place on the day-week before his rest in the grave.

See above on v. 1.

8. ἐμὲ δὲ οὐ πάντοτε ἔχετε] He is speaking of His bodily presence; for, according to His Divine Majesty and Grace, He is ever with us as He promised, "Lo, I am with you always." Matt. xxviii. 20. (Aug.)

He was speaking of the flesh which He took of the Virgin Mary, and in which He was crucified and buried, when He said, "Me ye have not always," for in that flesh He ascended into heaven, and is not here, but He is sitting at God's right hand. But the presence of His Divine Majesty is not withdrawn from us; that is here, and every where.

οὐ διὰ τὸν Ἰησοῦν μόνον, ἀλλ' ἵνα καὶ τὸν Λάζαρον ἴδωσιν, ὃν ἤγειρεν ἐκ νεκρῶν. 10 Ἐβουλεύσαντο δὲ οἱ Ἀρχιερεῖς, ἵνα καὶ τὸν Λάζαρον ἀποκτείνωσιν· 11 ὅτι πολλοὶ δι' αὐτὸν ὑπῆγον τῶν Ἰουδαίων, καὶ ἐπίστευον εἰς τὸν Ἰησοῦν.

(100/I) 12 [g] Τῇ ἐπαύριον ὄχλος πολὺς ὁ ἐλθὼν εἰς τὴν ἑορτήν, ἀκούσαντες ὅτι ἔρχεται Ἰησοῦς εἰς Ἰεροσόλυμα, 13 [h] ἔλαβον τὰ βαΐα τῶν φοινίκων, καὶ ἐξῆλθον εἰς ὑπάντησιν αὐτῶν, καὶ ἔκραζον, Ὡσαννά, εὐλογημένος ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἐν ὀνόματι Κυρίου ὁ βασιλεὺς τοῦ Ἰσραήλ. (101/VII) 14 Εὑρὼν δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὀνάριον ἐκάθισεν ἐπ' αὐτό, καθώς ἐστι γεγραμμένον, 15 [i] Μὴ φοβοῦ, θύγατερ Σιών· ἰδοὺ, ὁ βασιλεύς σου ἔρχεται καθήμενος ἐπὶ πῶλον ὄνου. (102/X) 16 [k] Ταῦτα δὲ οὐκ ἔγνωσαν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ τὸ πρῶτον· ἀλλ' ὅτε ἐδοξάσθη Ἰησοῦς, τότε ἐμνήσθησαν ὅτι ταῦτα ἦν ἐπ' αὐτῷ γεγραμμένα, καὶ ταῦτα ἐποίησαν αὐτῷ. 17 Ἐμαρτύρει οὖν ὁ ὄχλος ὁ ὢν μετ' αὐτοῦ, ὅτι τὸν Λάζαρον ἐφώνησεν ἐκ τοῦ μνημείου, καὶ ἤγειρεν αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν. 18 Διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ὑπήντησεν αὐτῷ ὁ ὄχλος, ὅτι ἤκουσαν τοῦτο αὐτὸν πεποιηκέναι τὸ σημεῖον. 19 Οἱ οὖν Φαρισαῖοι εἶπον πρὸς ἑαυτούς, Θεωρεῖτε ὅτι οὐκ ὠφελεῖτε οὐδέν; ἴδε, ὁ κόσμος ὀπίσω αὐτοῦ ἀπῆλθεν.

20 Ἦσαν δέ τινες [l] Ἕλληνες ἐκ τῶν ἀναβαινόντων ἵνα προσκυνήσωσιν ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ· 21 οὗτοι οὖν προσῆλθον Φιλίππῳ τῷ ἀπὸ Βηθσαϊδὰ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, καὶ ἠρώτων αὐτὸν λέγοντες, Κύριε, θέλομεν τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἰδεῖν. 22 Ἔρχεται Φίλιππος καὶ λέγει [m] τῷ Ἀνδρέᾳ, καὶ πάλιν Ἀνδρέας καὶ Φίλιππος λέγουσι τῷ Ἰησοῦ. (103/IV) 23 Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἀπεκρίνατο αὐτοῖς λέγων, Ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα ἵνα δοξασθῇ

g Matt. 21. 1—11. Mark 11. 1—10. Luke 19. 29—38.
h Ps. 118. 25, 26.
i Zech. 9. 9.
k Matt. 17. 9. Luke 18. 34. ch. 7. 39.
l Acts 8. 27. & 13. 42, 43. & 17. 4 comp. 1 Kings 8. 41—43.
m Matt. 10. 2.

10. ἵνα καὶ τὸν Λάζαρον ἀποκτείνωσιν] See the blindness of their rage; as if Christ could raise one who was dead, and not raise one who was killed. He did both. He who raised Lazarus raised Himself. (Aug.)

12. τῇ ἐπαύριον] Probably the first day of the week—Sunday. See on xii. 1. Cp. Ps. cxviii. 24.

— Ἰησοῦς] ὁ Ἰησ. Elz., but the article is not in A, D, G, H, K, L, Q, X. Cp. v. 16, where a similar variation occurs.

13. τὰ βαΐα τῶν φοινίκων] the branches of the Palms which grew there.

The Palm, which crescit sub pondere, is emblematic of Victory, and specially of such a victory as that of Christ, which was made more glorious by the weight of suffering for the sins of the world laid upon Him, Who, from the lowest depths of sorrow and humility, and from the pit of the grave raised Himself, and ascended on the clouds to the right hand of God.

These Palms of Victory prefigured the conquest He would achieve over death, by dying and triumphing over the Devil, the Prince of Death, by the trophy of the Cross (Aug.), by which the saints also are enabled to overcome, and to stand hereafter with palms in their hands, and sing hallelujahs to the Lamb. (Rev. vii. 9, 10.) St. Cyril of Jerusalem speaks of the Palm tree, from which the βαΐα were stripped, as still existing in his day. See the interesting topographical passage, Catech. x. pp. 246, 247. It is probable, that this triumphal entry took place on what is called Palm Sunday.

— ὡσαννά] a word of prayer and worship, "Save us." See on Matt. xxi. 9. They are inspired to recognize Christ as greater than a prophet; Christ is God; for salvation is from God alone. (Chrys., Aug., Theoph.) εὑρεῖν is the Hebrew מָצָא (matsa), to procure; and here it means, having sent in quest of and found. See i. 41. 45, and ix. 35.

14. εὑρὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὀνάριον] See on Matt. xxi. 7. Mark xi. 2.

The ὀνάριον was one on which no one had ever sat, and was emblematic of the Gentile world, which had never been broken in, and was about to submit to Christ; together with the ass, its mother, the elder Church of the Israel of God. (Aug., Chrys.) See below on v. 20.

— γεγραμμένον] St. John does not often quote the Hebrew Scriptures, and gives the substance rather than the letter. See xii. 38—40.

15. ὁ βασιλεύς σου ἔρχεται] not like most of thy kings, proud and cruel, but meek; and not leading an army, but on the colt of an ass. (Chrys.)

16. ταῦτα οὐκ ἔγνωσαν οἱ μαθηταί] Observe the modesty of the Evangelist. He is not ashamed to confess their former ignorance. (Chrys.) An evidence of truth. Cp. Matt. xvi. 9. Mark viii. 17. John ii. 17. 22; viii. 28; xiii. 7; xvi. 12, 13 (Burgon), passages which show that many things were done and said by our Lord to the Apostles, which they could not understand at the time.

This confirms the principle, which is ever to be borne in mind in reading the Gospels, that much of His teaching was anticipatory and prophetical, and is to be interpreted by the light of what He afterwards did or said. See particularly the doctrine in the Third and Sixth Chapters of this Gospel. Here also is an evidence of their Inspiration. If the Holy Ghost had not been given to lead them into all truth, and to bring to their remembrance what Christ had spoken to them (John xiv. 26), they would never have been enabled, nor would have attempted, to record long discourses on abstruse matters, and which, when delivered, they themselves, as St. John here candidly confesses, did not understand.

17. ὅτι] Some MSS., e.g. A, E, Q, S, X, have ὅτε. But the sense is, that by this triumphal manifestation the people bare witness that He raised Lazarus from the dead. Their hosannas were a public proof of the Miracle. See v. 18. And here is an answer to modern cavils against that Miracle, on the plea that it is not mentioned by the other Evangelists. (Cp. on xi. 1.) These hosannas are mentioned by them. And these Hosannas of the Multitude are Echoes of the Voice of Christ,—"Lazarus, come forth."

18. ἤκουσαν] So A, D, K, L, M, S, X, and many Cursives and Versions.—Elz. ἤκουσε, which is less expressive.

20. ἦσαν δέ τινες Ἕλληνες] Gentile proselytes; like the Eunuch in the Acts of the Apostles. (Acts viii. 27. Cp. Acts xiii. 43.)

And so Kuin., who says, "cùm Ἕλληνες h. l. memorati Hierosolymam profecti esse dicantur, ut ibi festo Paschali Deum adorarent, ἐκ τῶν ἀναβαινόντων. ἵνα προσκ. ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ, id quod à gentilibus factum esse, demonstrari nequit, præferenda est procul dubiò plerorumque interpretum sententia, qui per τοὺς Ἕλληνας proselytos de gentibus intelligunt, quos Lucas Act. xiii. 43, σεβομένους προσηλύτους nuncupat; add. Act. xvii. 4. Sic quoque qui Act. xiii. 42, τὰ ἔθνη dicuntur, v. 43 nominantur σεβόμενοι προσήλυτοι. Commodè ergo et h. l. Proselyti simpliciter dici potuerunt Ἕλληνες."

Observe that the ὀνάριον, brought to Him by two disciples, typified the Gentile world coming to Christ. See on Matt. xxi. 2—7. Mark xi. 2—7. And now in the next verses (20, 21) we see Gentiles, brought by two disciples, and coming to Him. Thus the type is often explained by the Antitype. Thus, when our Lord had withered the leafy Fig-tree, He went up to Jerusalem and the Temple, typified by the Fig-tree. (See Matt. xxi. 19, 20. Mark xi. 13. 20.)

The Jews seek to kill Jesus, and the Greeks to see Him. Yet some among the Jews had cried Hosanna, and had called Him Blessed; and now, therefore, the two walls—that is, the wall of the Circumcision and that of the Uncircumcision—are coming together in the one Corner-stone, Christ Jesus, and Jew and Greek are meeting together in the one faith of Christ, with a kiss of peace. (Aug.)

21. προσῆλθον Φιλίππῳ] These Ἕλληνες come to Philip, and he to Andrew, and they together came to Jesus (one would not come alone), a proof of reverence and awe for Jesus, after the stupendous miracle He had just wrought.

— τῆς Γαλιλαίας] Galilee of the Gentiles, and therefore a very fit person to bring them to Christ.

— θέλομεν] θέλειν here is to earnestly desire, the Hebrew חָפֵץ (chaphets). See above, vi. 21.

23. ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα] Before, He had charged His Apostles. "Go ye not into the way of the Gentiles." (Matt. x. 5. Cp. also Matt. xv. 24.) But now the case is altered, and He was about soon to give a general commission to His Apostles "Go and teach all nations." (Matt. xxviii. 19.) He foresaw that many of the Gentiles would believe after His Passion and Resurrection; and on this occasion of the Greeks wishing to see Him, He beheld the first-fruits of ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. (104 X) 24 Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ἐὰν μὴ ὁ κόκκος τοῦ σίτου πεσὼν εἰς τὴν γῆν ἀποθάνῃ, αὐτὸς μόνος μένει· ἐὰν δὲ ἀποθάνῃ, πολὺν καρπὸν φέρει. (105 III) 25 [n] Ὁ φιλῶν τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἀπολέσει αὐτήν· καὶ ὁ μισῶν τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ τούτῳ εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον φυλάξει αὐτήν. (106 X) 26 [o] Ἐὰν ἐμοὶ διακονῇ τις, ἐμοὶ ἀκολουθείτω· καὶ ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγὼ, [p] ἐκεῖ καὶ ὁ διάκονος ὁ ἐμὸς ἔσται· καὶ ἐάν τις ἐμοὶ διακονῇ, τιμήσει αὐτὸν ὁ Πατήρ. (107 IV) 27 Νῦν ἡ ψυχή μου τετάρακται· καὶ τί εἴπω; Πάτερ, σῶσόν με ἐκ τῆς ὥρας ταύτης· ἀλλὰ διὰ τοῦτο ἦλθον εἰς τὴν ὥραν ταύτην. (108 X) 28 Πάτερ, δόξασον σοῦ τὸ ὄνομα. Ἦλθεν οὖν φωνὴ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, Καὶ ἐδόξασα, καὶ πάλιν δοξάσω· 29 Ὁ οὖν ὄχλος ὁ ἑστὼς καὶ ἀκούσας ἔλεγε βροντὴν γεγονέναι· ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, Ἄγγελος αὐτῷ λελάληκεν. 30 Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν, Οὐ δι' ἐμὲ αὕτη ἡ φωνὴ γέγονεν, ἀλλὰ δι' ὑμᾶς. [q] Νῦν κρίσις ἐστὶ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου· 31 νῦν ὁ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου τούτου ἐκβληθήσεται ἔξω. 32 [r] κἀγὼ ἐὰν ὑψωθῶ ἐκ τῆς γῆς πάντας ἑλκύσω πρὸς ἐμαυτόν. 33 Τοῦτο δὲ ἔλεγε σημαίνων ποίῳ θανάτῳ ἤμελλεν ἀποθνήσκειν. 34 [s] Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ ὄχλος, Ἡμεῖς ἠκούσαμεν ἐκ τοῦ νόμου, ὅτι ὁ Χριστὸς μένει εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα· καὶ πῶς σὺ λέγεις, Ὅτι δεῖ ὑψωθῆναι τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου; τίς ἐστιν οὗτος ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου; 35 [t] Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἔτι μικρὸν χρόνον τὸ φῶς μεθ' ὑμῶν ἐστι.

n Matt. 10. 39. & 16. 25. Mark 8. 35. Luke 9. 24. & 17. 33.
o ch. 14. 3. & 17. 24. 1 Thess. 4. 17. p ch. 14. 3. & 17. 24. 2 Cor. 5. 8. Phil. 1. 23. 1 Thess. 4. 17, 18. 2 Tim. 2. 12.
q ch. 16. 11.
r ch. 3. 14. & ver. 24. Isa. 53. 10, 11. Rom. 1. 16. 1 Cor. 1. 23, 24. s 2 Sam. 7. 13. Ps. 89. 29, 36. & 110. 4. Isa. 9. 6, 7. Ezek. 37. 25. Dan. 2. 44. & 7. 14, 27.
t ch. 1. 9.

the harvest of the Gentiles, and He speaks of Himself as of a grain sown in the earth, and ripening into a spiritual Harvest of faithful believers, who were to spring from Him after His death, burial, and resurrection.

24. ἐὰν μὴ ὁ κόκκος ἀποθάνῃ] He compares Himself to a grain of corn, which would be buried by the unbelief of the Jews, but would fructify in the faith of the Gentiles. (Aug., Chrys.) As much as to say: The Jews reject Me, and desire to kill Me; but the Gentiles wish to see me,—I will not thwart their desires. My hour is come. I will comply with the desire of the Jews, that I may comply with that of the Gentiles. I will die, that they may live. My death will be their birth; the birth of their faith. As when a grain of corn is sown and dies in the earth it bears much fruit, so My death will yield an abundant harvest. If this is true of a grain of corn, how much more so of Me, Whose death is the cause of life? (Cp. Theoph.)

When I have died and have raised Myself from the dead, then will My power be much more manifest, and the world will believe in Me as God.

From this saying of our Lord St. Paul derives his argument on the Resurrection, 1 Cor. xv. 36.

25. ὁ φιλῶν τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ] See Matt. x. 39; xvi. 25. Luke ix. 24; xvii. 33. As much as to say, As I give My life for you, so you must be ready to die for Me; and as I bear fruit by dying, so will you. Love not thy life in Time, lest thou lose it in Eternity. (Cp. Aug.)

— ὁ μισῶν τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ] He who does not give way to the temptations of sinful lusts, but crucifies his appetites, when they rebel against God. (Chrys.)

26. ἐὰν ἐμοί διακονῇ τις] If a man seeks not his own things, but those of Christ, and walks in My ways and not in his own, and does all his good works not for his own glory but for Mine, let him be ready to die, as I am, and his reward shall be to be where I am, that is, in heaven. (Aug.)

Therefore let us not love our lives, nor the things of earth, but of heaven. Thither let us ascend in heart and mind, and dwell with Christ. (Theoph., Aug., Chrys.)

— ἐὰν ἐμοὶ διακονῇ—ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγὼ, ἐκεῖ καὶ ὁ διάκονος ὁ ἐμός] These words (as St. Augustine observes) were remarkably fulfilled in the death of St. Stephen, one of the first deacons and first martyr. Acts vii. 59.

27. ἡ ψυχή μου τετάρακται] In these and the following words we see proofs of His Humanity. Our Lord was liable to human infirmities, and as Man He clung to life. Christ's body was free from sin; but if His body had been exempt from the necessities of Humanity, it would not have been body. There was nothing sinful in this any more than there is in hunger or in sleep; but He controls and corrects this human longing for life, and says, "For this cause came I to this hour,"—that is, to the hour of death, for the redemption of the world. Thus He teaches us that we must not endeavour to fly from trouble or from death for the truth's sake; and by saying, "Glorify Thy name," He teaches us that the cross is the road to glory. (Chrys., Theoph.) See above on Matt. xxvi. 41.

29. ἑστώς] A, B, G, K, M, X, have ἑστηκώς, which may be the right reading.

— βροντήν] An evidence of St. John's veracity, not concealing the doubts of the people. If the Evangelists had wished to deceive, they might perhaps have related that thunder was a voice from heaven to Christ, but they would never have related that any said that a voice to Christ was thunder. Here is a refutation of Rationalism.

30, 31. νῦν κρίσις ἐστὶ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου· νῦν ὁ ἄρχων τ. κόσμου τ. ἐκβληθήσεται] Now is the time of judgment, by which men will be tried, tested, sifted. One man will be discerned from another, as the chaff from the wheat by winnowing.

The Prince of this world is the Prince of the evil who dwell in the world; not that he is the Lord of the world.

Formerly, the Devil possessed the human race, and reigned in the hearts of the unbelieving, and beguiled them to forsake the Creator and worship the creature, and held them captive in his chains. But now, by faith in Christ, and by the efficacy of His blood, and by the virtue of His Resurrection and Ascension, multitudes have been delivered from the Devil, and joined to the body of Christ, Who has bound the strong man and spoiled him of his goods. (Mark iii. 27.)

We are not to suppose that the Devil is finally vanquished, or that he does not continue to tempt men, now that he is cast out. No: he never ceases to tempt us; but it is one thing for him to reign within us, and another to assail us from without. And now, if we follow the Apostle's advice, he cannot hurt us (1 Thess. v. 8); and if he does hurt us, we have one at hand to heal us (1 John ii. 1, 2). The Devil has been cast out from us; let us not give place to him; let us not call him back to dwell within us. (Theoph., Aug.)

32. ἐὰν ὑψωθῶ] A prophecy to be interpreted by the event (cp. iii. 14), and the prophecy concerning St. Peter, xxi. 18.

— πάντας ἑλκύσω] 'de terrâ, sursum.' (Beng.)

He had said before that none can come to Him but whom the Father draws. (John vi. 44.) When the Father draws, the Son draws. By the word 'drawing' He intimates that we are by nature bound and held in chains by a tyrant, and that we cannot escape from the Devil's bondage and approach Christ, of ourselves. (Chrys.)

33. σημαίνων ποίῳ θανάτῳ] See Athanas. de Incarn. 25, pp. 55. 61, on the reasons why our Lord chose to die by crucifixion.

34. ἠκούσαμεν ἐκ τοῦ νόμου] And yet they had the Prophet Isaiah (liii. 7). Christ shows them that He would both suffer and abide for ever (Chrys.), as the light of the sun is withdrawn and then rises again.

It is no wonder that the Jews were not able to believe, because in their pride they desired to establish their own righteousness, and would not submit themselves to God's righteousness. (Rom. x. 3.) When we read, therefore, that they "could not believe," let us understand that they would not believe. (Aug.)

Some are elated to presumption by too much confidence in their own will; and others are cast down into recklessness by too much diffidence. The former say, "Why do we pray to be delivered from temptation, which is in our own power?" The others say, "Why do we endeavour to live well, which is only in God's power?" O Lord, Our Father, which art in heaven, do not Thou lead us into either of these two temptations, but "deliver us from the evil one."

On the one hand, if we are self-confident with Peter, let us listen to the Lord's words,—"I have prayed for thee, Peter, that thy faith fail not" (Luke xxii. 32), lest we imagine that our faith is so much dependent on our own free-will as not to need divine grace. On the other hand, if we doubt and despond, let us hear the Evangelist St. John saying,—"He gave them power to become the sons of God" (John i. 12), lest we imagine that it is not at all in our own power to believe. In both respects let us acknowledge God's goodness (i. e. both for our own power and for His grace). Let us bless Him that He gives us power, and let us pray to Him lest our weakness fail; and in all things, "he that glorieth, let him not glory in himself, but in the Lord."

35. τὸ φῶς μεθ' ὑμῶν] For μεθ' ὑμῶν, some MSS. (B, D, K, L, X, and several Cursives and Versions) have ἐν ὑμῖν, which may περιπατεῖτε ἕως τὸ φῶς ἔχετε, ἵνα μὴ σκοτία ὑμᾶς καταλάβῃ· καὶ ὁ περιπατῶν ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ οὐκ οἶδε ποῦ ὑπάγει. 36 Ἕως τὸ φῶς ἔχετε, πιστεύετε εἰς τὸ φῶς, ἵνα υἱοὶ φωτὸς γένησθε. Ταῦτα ἐλάλησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἀπελθὼν ἐκρύβη ἀπ' αὐτῶν.

37 Τοσαῦτα δὲ αὐτοῦ σημεῖα πεποιηκότος ἔμπροσθεν αὐτῶν, οὐκ ἐπίστευον εἰς αὐτόν· 38 [u] ἵνα ὁ λόγος Ἡσαΐου τοῦ προφήτου πληρωθῇ ὃν εἶπε, Κύριε, τίς ἐπίστευσε τῇ ἀκοῇ ἡμῶν; καὶ ὁ βραχίων Κυρίου τίνι ἀπεκαλύφθη; (109/I) 39 Διὰ τοῦτο οὐκ ἠδύναντο πιστεύειν, ὅτι πάλιν εἶπεν Ἡσαΐας, 40 [v] Τετύφλωκεν αὐτῶν τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς, καὶ πεπώρωκεν αὐτῶν τὴν καρδίαν· ἵνα μὴ ἴδωσι τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς, καὶ νοήσωσι τῇ καρδίᾳ, καὶ ἐπιστραφῶσι, καὶ ἰάσωμαι αὐτούς. (110/K) 41 Ταῦτα εἶπεν Ἡσαΐας, [w] ὅτε εἶδε τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐλάλησε περὶ αὐτοῦ· 42 ὅμως μέντοι καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἀρχόντων πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτόν· ἀλλὰ [x] διὰ τοὺς Φαρισαίους οὐχ ὡμολόγουν, ἵνα μὴ ἀποσυνάγωγοι γένωνται. 43 [y] Ἠγάπησαν γὰρ τὴν δόξαν τῶν ἀνθρώπων μᾶλλον ἤπερ τὴν δόξαν τοῦ Θεοῦ.

(111/I) 44 [z] Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἔκραξε καὶ εἶπεν, Ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ οὐ πιστεύει εἰς ἐμὲ, ἀλλ' εἰς τὸν πέμψαντά με· 45 καὶ [a] ὁ θεωρῶν ἐμὲ θεωρεῖ τὸν πέμψαντά με. (112/K) 46 [b] Ἐγὼ φῶς εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἐλήλυθα, ἵνα πᾶς ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ μὴ μείνῃ. 47 [c] Καὶ ἐάν τίς μου ἀκούσῃ τῶν ῥημάτων καὶ μὴ πιστεύσῃ, ἐγὼ οὐ κρίνω αὐτόν· οὐ γὰρ ἦλθον ἵνα κρίνω τὸν κόσμον, ἀλλ' ἵνα σώσω τὸν κόσμον. 48 Ὁ ἀθετῶν ἐμὲ, καὶ μὴ λαμβάνων τὰ ῥήματά μου, ἔχει τὸν κρίνοντα αὐτόν· [d] ὁ λόγος ὃν ἐλάλησα, ἐκεῖνος κρινεῖ αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ. 49 [e] Ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐξ ἐμαυτοῦ οὐκ ἐλάλησα· ἀλλ' ὁ πέμψας με Πατὴρ, αὐτός μοι ἐντολὴν ἔδωκε, τί εἴπω καὶ τί λαλήσω· 50 καὶ οἶδα ὅτι [f] ἡ ἐντολὴ αὐτοῦ ζωὴ αἰώνιός ἐστιν. ἃ οὖν λαλῶ ἐγὼ, καθὼς εἴρηκέ μοι ὁ Πατὴρ, οὕτω λαλῶ.

XIII. 1 [a] Πρὸ δὲ τῆς ἑορτῆς τοῦ πάσχα, εἰδὼς ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὅτι ἐλήλυθεν αὐτοῦ ἡ ὥρα ἵνα μεταβῇ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα, ἀγαπήσας τοὺς u Isa. 53. 1. Rom. 10. 16.

v Isa. 6. 9, 10. Matt. 13. 14, 15. Mark 4. 12. Luke 8. 10. Acts 28. 26. Rom. 11. 8.
w Isa. 6. 1—5.
x ch. 7. 13. & 9. 22, 33, 34. & 12. 42, 43.
y ch. 5. 44.
z 1 Pet. 1. 21.
a ch. 10. 30, 38. & 12. 45. & 14. 9—11, 20. & 16. 15. & 17. 21—23.
b ch. 1. 4, 5, 9. & 3. 19. & 8. 12. & 9. 5. & ver. 35, 36.
c ch. 3. 17. Mark 16. 16.
d ch. 3. 19. Mark 16. 16. Luke 8. 13. & 12. 47, 48.
e ch. 8. 26. & 14. 10.
f ch. 3. 16, 17. & 6. 27, 32, 33, 40.
a Matt. 26. 1. Mark 14. 1. Luke 22. 1.

---

perhaps be the right reading, and then the ἐν is to be regarded as equivalent to the Hebrew בְּ. See xv. 24.

37—43. τοσαῦτα] "Epicrisis generalis." (Beng.) The Holy Spirit, as it were, sums up the evidence and pronounces judgment. A characteristic of this, the last Gospel, see p. 207.

39. οὐκ ἠδύναντο πιστεύειν] It was not possible for the prophets to utter what was false, but it was not, therefore, impossible for them to believe. For He would not have prophesied as He did if they had been about to believe. But why could they not believe? Because they were not willing to believe. (Chrys.) Or rather, because Almighty God "gave them over to a reprobate mind," and, by a just retribution, punished them with blindness for their sin in closing their eyes (see v. 40).

40. τετύφλωκεν] St. John gives a paraphrase of Isa. vi. 9. See above, v. 14, and Surenhus. p. 366, and Buryon here.

— ἵνα μὴ ἴδωσι] The conjunction does not indicate the cause, but the effect. For it was not on account of the prophecy that they did not believe; but it was on account of their unbelief that the prophecy was uttered. (Chrys.) Our own sins are the cause of God's alienation from us, and of our own consequent suffering. (Isa. lix. 2. Hos. iv. 6.) See above, ix. 3. 39.

41. ὅτε εἶδε τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ] The Evangelist here says that Esaias (Isa. vi. 1. 9) saw the glory of the Son. St. Paul says (Acts xxviii. 25) that he heard the words of the Holy Spirit. There is one glory, therefore, of the Holy Trinity; and the glory of the Father is the glory of the Son, and is the glory of the Holy Ghost. (Theoph.)

The glory of the Ever-blessed Trinity appeared to Isaiah, when he heard the Angelic Holy, Holy, Holy (Isa. vi. 3); and the glory of the Trinity is here called the Glory of Christ, because Christ is God. (Cyril.)

There is a remarkable resemblance to this passage in the Book of Revelation (Rev. iv. 8—11), compared with Rev. v. 12—14, where the Glory ascribed to the Holy Trinity, and the Worship paid to the Holy Trinity is ascribed and paid to Christ.

44. ἔκραξε] He cried aloud; contrary to His custom. (Matt. xii. 19.) A rebuke to their dumb faith. (Cyril.) When Christ is said κράζειν, or κραυγάζειν, doubtless there is a special emphasis in what He says. He is said only once in St. Matt. κράξαι (xxvii. 50), at His death; and once, at the same time, in St. Mark xv. 39 (cp. Heb. v. 7); not once in St. Luke. But in St. John He is said κράξαι ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ twice (vii. 28. 37, and xi. 43); κραυγάσαι φωνῇ μεγάλῃ at the raising of Lazarus from the dead, and lastly here (xii. 44), his last cry as a Prophet to the world.

Cp. Rev. vii. 2 and x. 3. St. John particularly appears to dwell on the word κράζω (the Hebr. קָרָא, kara, 'to cry;' see i. 15), and κραυγή, as expressive of prophetical and evangelical teaching, in his Gospel and Book of Revelation. And perhaps the τρία μυστήρια κραυγῆς in the Epistle of St. John's scholar Ignatius (Ephes. 19), may mean the three great mysteries of Apostolic Preaching; viz. as he explains them, the Virginity of Mary, her bearing of the child Jesus, and His Death.

— ὁ πιστεύων] Our Lord speaks to those who believed, but would not confess Him. See vv. 42, 43.

47. καὶ μὴ πιστεύσῃ] For πιστεύσῃ, A, B, K, L, X, and several Cursives and Versions have φυλάξῃ, which may be the true reading.

— ἦλθον ἵνα κρίνω] Now is the time of mercy; hereafter will be the time of judgment. (Aug.)

47, 48. ἐγὼ οὐ κρίνω αὐτὸν—ὁ λόγος ὃν ἐλάλησα] I am not the cause of his destruction, but he himself is the cause, because he will not hear my word. (Chrys.)

48. ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ] "In novissimo die (vi. 39) uno die erit et Resurrectio et Judicium." (Bengel.)

49. ἔδωκε] A, B, M, X, and several Cursives have δέδωκε, which may be the right reading.

— τί εἴπω καὶ τί λαλήσω] "εἴπω de sermone brevi et mutuo; λαλήσω de copioso; אֲמַר (amar), et דָּבַר (dabhar), apud Hebr." (Bengel.)

CH. XIII. 1. πρὸ δὲ τῆς ἑορτῆς τοῦ πάσχα] The words πρὸ τῆς ἑορτῆς do not mean the day before, for they were spoken on the first day of unleavened bread; but they intimate that this act was introductory to the Passover. Cp. v. 29.

— ἐλήλυθεν] A, B, K, L, M, X, and many Cursive MSS. have ἦλθεν.

— ἵνα μεταβῇ] The word pascha, פֶּסַח, signifies, passing-by, 'transitus,' μετάβασις. See on Matt. xxvi. 2; and the Evangelist seems to refer to this meaning, when he says that Jesus knew that the time had come ἵνα μεταβῇ, that He should pass to the Father; He is our ἰδίους τοὺς ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ εἰς τέλος ἠγάπησεν αὐτούς. (113/IX) 2 Καὶ δείπνου γενοb Luke 22. 3. Matt. 13. 19. Acts 5. 3. μένου, [b] τοῦ Διαβόλου ἤδη βεβληκότος εἰς τὴν καρδίαν Ἰούδα Σίμωνος Ἰσκα-c Matt. 11. 27. & 28. 18. ch. 3. 35. & 17. 2. ριώτου ἵνα αὐτὸν παραδῷ, (114/III) 3 [c] εἰδὼς ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὅτι πάντα δέδωκεν αὐτῷ ὁ Πατὴρ εἰς τὰς χεῖρας, καὶ ὅτι ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθε καὶ πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ὑπάγει, (115/X) 4 ἐγείρεται ἐκ τοῦ δείπνου, καὶ τίθησι τὰ ἱμάτια, καὶ λαβὼν λέντιον διέζωσεν ἑαυτόν· 5 εἶτα βάλλει ὕδωρ εἰς τὸν νιπτῆρα, καὶ ἤρξατο νίπτειν τοὺς πόδας τῶν μαθητῶν, καὶ ἐκμάσσειν τῷ λεντίῳ ᾧ ἦν διεζωσμένος. 6 Ἔρχεται οὖν πρὸς Σίμωνα Πέτρον· καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ ἐκεῖνος, Κύριε, σὺ μοῦ νίπτεις τοὺς πόδας; 7 Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, [a] Ὃ ἐγὼ ποιῶ σὺ οὐκ οἶδας ἄρτι, γνώσῃ δὲ μετὰ ταῦτα. 8 Λέγει αὐτῷ Πέτρος, Οὐ μὴ νίψῃς τοὺς πόδας μου εἰς τὸν d ch. 3. 5. 1 Cor. 6. 11. Eph. 5. 26. Tit. 3. 5. αἰῶνα. Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, [d] Ἐὰν μὴ νίψω σε, οὐκ ἔχεις μέρος μετ' ἐμοῦ. 9 Λέγει αὐτῷ Σίμων Πέτρος· Κύριε, μὴ τοὺς πόδας μου μόνον, ἀλλὰ e ch. 15. 3. καὶ τὰς χεῖρας καὶ τὴν κεφαλήν. 10 [e] Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ὁ λελουμένος true Passover (1 Cor. v. 7), for Whose sake the destroying Angel passes by us, and by whom we pass from the kingdom of the Evil one to the Kingdom of God, and from this world to a better. Cp. above, xi. 1.

---

— εἰς τέλος] See Luke xviii. 5.

2. δείπνου γενομένου] B, L, X have γινομένου. The sense is, 'when supper had begun; at supper time.' He afterwards reclined on the couch at the table, and gave the sop to Judas. (Aug.) Our Lord had already reclined (see v. 12, ἀναπεσὼν πάλιν), and He rose from the couch to do this act (v. 4). The reason of this seems to be, that He desired thus to show that the act itself was an extraordinary one, and not one like that of the washing usual before dinner (Luke xi. 38), but had a spiritual sense, that it was symbolical of a spiritual purification by love. See note v. 10. 14. 34.

The bodily washing had already taken place before supper (cp. Luke vii. 44; xi. 38); the washing which Christ now performed was of another kind. His actions had a spiritual meaning, and an enlarged reference to the well-being of the Church in all places and ages. This is specially the character of His actions which immediately preceded the Crucifixion, or accompanied it, or followed it during His forty days' sojourn on earth. They are to be explained from the sequel. The clue to their interpretation may be found in His own words to St. Peter (v. 7), "What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter."

— τοῦ Διαβόλου ἤδη βεβληκότος εἰς τὴν καρδίαν Ἰούδα] This is introduced to show that our Lord deigned to wash the feet of him who was about to betray Him, and as proving the malice of the traitor when in the hands of Satan; that such an act of condescension on Christ's part could not move him from his purpose. (Chrys.) He Who sitteth above the cherubim washed the feet of the traitor.

3. εἰδὼς ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὅτι πάντα δέδωκεν αὐτῷ ὁ Πατὴρ εἰς τὰς χεῖρας] Observe εἰδὼς repeated. See v. 1. He knew that His hour was come; He knew that the Father has given all things into His hands. He was conscious of man's ingratitude and of His own glory; and yet He did what He did now.

The Evangelist says this in a spirit of astonishment at Christ's humility, into whose hands the Father had given all things, the traitor, and all His enemies and persecutors. (Chrys.)

The traitor was delivered into the hands of Him Whom he betrayed, and under Christ's controlling power, the evil done by the traitor was so done by him that good, which he designed not, was elicited from it by Christ. Our Lord knew what He Himself was doing for His friends, in patiently availing Himself of His enemies. The Father had so given all things into His hands; even the worst things, for good use of them.

The Evangelist being about to describe Christ's humility, first speaks of His exaltation, in order that we may remember from what a height of glory and majesty He stooped down to do the work of a servant. God gave all things into His hands, and yet He washed the feet of His Disciples, even of Judas, whom He foreknew as about to betray Him. (Cp. Origen, Aug., Gregor. Moral. iii. c. xii.)

4. ἐγείρεται ἐκ τοῦ δείπνου] ἐγείρεται, present tense. So τίθησι, βάλλει, ἔρχεται, λέγει: the whole is described and presented to the eye, with the graphic liveliness of a picture.

— ἐκ τοῦ δείπνου] He rises from the supper. By the word δεῖπνον, St. John refers the reader's mind to the δεῖπνον, the great δεῖπνον, the δεῖπνον Κυριακόν, the Lord's Supper, just instituted by Christ, and described by the preceding Evangelists. This act just took place soon after that Institution.

— τίθησι τὰ ἱμάτια — ἑαυτόν] ἱμάτια, His upper garment. (See on Matt. xxvi. 65.) He lays aside His outer attire, and takes a λέντιον (linteum).

He did not wash them before they had reclined, but after; He then rises (Chrys., see on v. 2) and girds himself; that is, He appears before them as a δοῦλος, or servant. Cp. Luke xii. 37; xvii. 8, where He says, "He shall gird Himself, and will come forth and serve them," and "gird thyself, and serve me, till I have eaten. Doth he thank that servant?"

And to wash the feet was to perform a servile act, especially of women. See 1 Sam. xxv. 45, "Let thine handmaid be a servant to wash the feet of thy servants." Luke vii. 38. 1 Tim. v. 10. Cp. Kuin. here, who says, "λέντιον, linteum, vox Hellenistarum Latio originem suam debens, quæ etiam in scriptis Rabbinorum occurrit, qui utuntur vocabulis לינטיה et לינטיא. Clemens Alex. Pædag. ii. 3, pro hâc voce, σάβανον adhibuit: καὶ τοὺς πόδας ἐνίπτε αὐτῶν σαβάνῳ περιζωσάμενος.

"Erat autem lotio pedum propriè opus servile. Schemoth Rabba sect. 20, fol. 119, qualis est consuetudo omnis terræ? Resp. Quisquis emit servos, ut se lavent, ungant, vestiant, gestent, et lucem præferant: vid. Lightfootus et Schœttgenius ad h. l. Suet. Calig. c. 26, nihilo reverentior leniorque erga senatum: quosdam summis honoribus functos—ad pedes stare succinctos linteo passus est."

Each of these actions was symbolical. Being in the form of God, He had divested Himself of His royal robe of heavenly dignity and glory, and "made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant" (Phil. ii. 7); and as He said Himself (Luke xxii. 27), "I am among you as he that serveth." He pours out water to wash His disciples' feet. And He was about to pour out His blood to cleanse us from sin. He wipes the feet of His Disciples with the towel with which He was girded. And He refreshes us by the Flesh with which He clothed Himself for our sakes. His Passion is our Purification. He commended to us humility by His example. We should have been lost for ever through pride, unless God humbling Himself had found us and saved us. (Luke xix. 10.) We had perished by following the pride of our Deceiver; let us, now that we are found, follow the humility of our Saviour. (Cp. Aug.)

5. βάλλει ὕδωρ εἰς τὸν νιπτῆρα] He does not employ any one else to do these menial works, but performs them all with His own Hand. (Chrys.) He alone cleanses us from sin.

— νίπτειν τοὺς πόδας τῶν μαθητῶν] When the feet of the Disciples were washed by Christ, then it might be said that what was spoken prophetically of the Apostles was fulfilled, "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the Gospel of peace!" (Isa. lii. 7. Rom. x. 15.) (Origen.) On these incidents see Williams, Holy Week, pp. 392—420.

6. σὺ μοῦ νίπτεις τοὺς πόδας;] Not νίπτεις τοὺς πόδας μοῦ. The pronouns σὺ and μοῦ are emphatic; Peter speaks in reverential awe; but yet, such is our ignorance, when we speak from ourselves, we are apt to decline what is best for us. (Cp. Origen.)

7. ὃ ἐγὼ ποιῶ σὺ οὐκ οἶδας ἄρτι.] Our Lord intimates that there was something mystical in this act. (See on v. 4.)

The word νίπτω is repeated eight times in these first fourteen verses. The Evangelist dwells upon it as containing a divine truth of great importance.

8. οὐ μὴ—εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα] On this phrase, see viii. 51, 52.

— ἐὰν μὴ νίψω σε, οὐκ ἔχεις μέρος μετ' ἐμοῦ] If I wash not thy feet, i. e. if I cleanse not thy affections, so that thou mayest walk aright, thou hast no share in Me and My glory. (Origen.) The unholy cannot enter into the mansions above, but only they who have their conscience cleansed by love of Christ, and are sanctified by the Spirit in holy baptism. (Cyril.)

10. ὁ λελουμένος οὐ χρείαν ἔχει ἢ τοὺς πόδας νίψασθαι] These words cannot be understood of a bodily washing, they must be interpreted spiritually.

Observe λελουμένος and νίψασθαι. One total, the other partial. He that hath been washed (says Aug.) by the waters of Baptism, λελουμένος λουτρῷ παλιγγενεσίας (Tit. iii. 5. Eph. v. 26. Heb. x. 22), is wholly washed, and needeth not but to wash his feet. That is, because after his Baptism he lives in the world, his affections are sullied by intercourse with it, and contract dust and mire in his daily walk amid the cares and pleasures of life, he must therefore cleanse his affections; "for if we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us; but if we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John i. 9). Cp. Burgon, p. 550.

He Who is ever making intercession for us (Heb. viii. 25), daily washes our feet; and we have daily need of washing our feet, that is, of directing the paths of our spiritual steps, as we confess in the Lord's Prayer, "Forgive us our trespasses" (Matt. vi. 12).

οὐ χρείαν ἔχει ἢ τοὺς πόδας νίψασθαι, ἀλλ' ἔστι καθαρὸς ὅλος. Καὶ ὑμεῖς καθαροί ἐστε· ἀλλ' οὐχὶ πάντες· 11 [f] ἤδει γὰρ τὸν παραδιδόντα αὐτόν· διὰ τοῦτο εἶπεν, Οὐχὶ πάντες καθαροί ἐστε.

f ver. 18. ch. 6. 64, 70, 71. & 18. 4.

12 Ὅτε οὖν ἔνιψε τοὺς πόδας αὐτῶν, καὶ ἔλαβε τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ, ἀναπεσὼν πάλιν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Γινώσκετε τί πεποίηκα ὑμῖν; (116/III) 13 [g] Ὑμεῖς φωνεῖτέ με, ὁ διδάσκαλος, καὶ ὁ Κύριος· καὶ καλῶς λέγετε, εἰμὶ γάρ. (117/X) 14 [h] Εἰ οὖν ἐγὼ ἔνιψα ὑμῶν τοὺς πόδας, ὁ Κύριος καὶ ὁ διδάσκαλος, καὶ ὑμεῖς ὀφείλετε ἀλλήλων νίπτειν τοὺς πόδας. 15 [i] Ὑπόδειγμα γὰρ ἔδωκα ὑμῖν, ἵνα καθὼς ἐγὼ ἐποίησα ὑμῖν, καὶ ὑμεῖς ποιῆτε. (118/III) 16 [k] Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, οὐκ ἔστι δοῦλος μείζων τοῦ κυρίου αὐτοῦ, οὐδὲ ἀπόστολος μείζων τοῦ πέμψαντος αὐτόν. 17 [l] Εἰ ταῦτα οἴδατε, μακάριοί ἐστε ἐὰν ποιῆτε αὐτά. (119/X) 18 Οὐ περὶ πάντων ὑμῶν λέγω· ἐγὼ οἶδα οὓς ἐξελεξάμην· ἀλλ' ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ πληρωθῇ, [m] Ὁ τρώγων μετ' ἐμοῦ τὸν ἄρτον ἐπῆρεν ἐπ' ἐμὲ τὴν πτέρναν αὐτοῦ· 19 [n] Ἀπ' ἄρτι λέγω ὑμῖν πρὸ τοῦ γενέσθαι, ἵνα ὅταν γένηται πιστεύσητε ὅτι ἐγώ εἰμι. (120/I) 20 [o] Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, Ὁ λαμβάνων ἐάν τινα πέμψω ἐμὲ λαμβάνει· ὁ δὲ ἐμὲ λαμβάνων λαμβάνει τὸν πέμψαντά με.

g Matt. 23. 8, 10. Luke 2. 11.
h Rom. 12. 10. 1 Pet. 5. 5.
i Luke 22. 27.
k ch. 15. 20. Matt. 10. 24. Luke 6. 40.
l James 1. 25.
m Ps. 41. 9.
n ch. 14. 29. & 16. 4.
o Matt. 10. 40.
p ch. 12. 27. Matt. 26. 21. Mark 14. 18. Luke 22. 21.

(121/IV) 21 [p] Ταῦτα εἰπὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐταράχθη τῷ πνεύματι, καὶ ἐμαρτύρησε καὶ

They who are washed with the Baptism of Christ, and have their feet washed by Him, have a capacity to receive the cleansing graces of the Holy Ghost. (Cp. Origen.)

13. φωνεῖτέ με, ὁ διδάσκαλος] On this use of the nominative, see Luke xix. 29. 1 Sam. ix. 9, τὸν προφήτην ἐκάλει ὁ λαός, ὁ βλέπων. (Winer, p. 164.)

14. εἰ οὖν ἐγώ] Christ, as Lord, washed the feet of His servants; as Master or Teacher, He washed the feet of His Disciples, and gave them a lesson in both respects.

Observe how the Word of God humbled Himself. Abraham gave water to the three men (Gen. xviii. 4); Joseph did the same to his brethren (Gen. xliii. 24); but neither of them did to them what Christ did to His Disciples. (Origen, who quotes Matt. xi. 29.)

— ὀφείλετε ἀλλήλων νίπτειν τοὺς πόδας] This is not usually done by Christians literally, and is to be understood figuratively. (Origen.) Sometimes it is done when Christians receive their brethren in hospitality (1 Tim. v. 10). It is done spiritually when we confess our faults to each other (James v. 16), and ask forgiveness one of another (Col. iii. 13). It is also done by those who are competent to teach others by Christian doctrine; they wash their feet and make them clean by leading them from the impure ways of sin into the path of God's commandments. (Cp. Aug., Origen.)

18. οὐ περὶ πάντων ὑμῶν λέγω] For He had said, "Ye are clean, but not all" (xiii. 10, 11). Judas had been washed by Christ, but was not clean, as it is said, "Let him that is filthy be filthy still" (Rev. xxii. 11). The Eleven, when washed by Jesus, became more clean; but Judas, who was unclean, and into whom Satan had entered after the sop (xiii. 2), became more unclean. (Origen.)

— ἐγὼ οἶδα οὓς ἐξελεξάμην] Cp. John vi. 71. He does not openly upbraid the traitor, but speaks to his conscience, in order to show him that He knows his secret thoughts, and to deter him from his sin against One who thus proves Himself to be God.

— ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ πληρωθῇ] that the Scripture might have its full and final accomplishment. See on Matt. i. 22.

St. Matthew's formula of quoting the Old Testament is ἵνα or ὅπως πληρωθῇ, or τότε ἐπληρώθη τὸ ῥηθὲν, which he uses ten times (i. 22; ii. 15. 17. 23; iv. 14; viii. 17; xii. 17; xiii. 35; xxi. 4; xxvii. 9), and which is never used by St. John, who employs the form ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ πληρωθῇ four times (xiii. 18; xvii 12; xix. 24. 36).

St. Matthew wrote specially for the Jewish Nation, to whom the Word of the Old Testament was delivered viva voce; St. John wrote for those to whom it was a written volume.

— ὁ τρώγων μετ' ἐμοῦ τὸν ἄρτον] Ps. xli. 9. St. John gives a paraphrase of the text, which is, 'he that eateth my bread.' See above, xii. 39.

This is said in order that we may not be irritated by injuries from our friends, when we remember what Christ suffered from one who ate of His Bread in the Lord's Supper. (Chrys. ibid. and Aug.) It is also corrective of the spirit of ambition and rivalry which showed itself in the Twelve at this time, among whom there was a strife who of them should be greatest (Luke xxii. 24), and inculcates humility and love as the fittest accompaniments of that holy Feast.

He says ὁ τρώγων μετ' ἐμοῦ τὸν ἄρτον, He that eateth with Me the Bread, the Sacramental Bread of the Holy Eucharist. (Cp. John vi. 54. 56. 58.)

They (says Aug.), whom Christ had chosen, ate the Lord, Who is the Bread; Judas ate the Bread of the Lord ("illi manducabant panem Dominum, ille panem Domini, contrà Dominum"). They ate Life. He ate Punishment; for the Apostle says (1 Cor. xi. 29), "He that eateth unworthily eateth to himself damnation." Peter and Judas received of one bread. Peter to life; Judas unto death. (Cp. 2 Cor. ii. 16.)

Our Lord here refers to the Holy Communion just instituted by Himself.

St. John does not describe the Institution of that Sacrament, because it had been already fully described in the preceding Gospels.

His silence in this particular respect, as in many others, is an eloquent testimony to the completeness of their accounts.

He supposes their Gospels to be familiar to his readers; and writes accordingly.

Besides, at the time when he wrote, the Holy Communion had been administered in some places daily for many years. And by that administration the history of its Institution was kept alive in the minds of all Christians. In all probability the Evangelic history of its Institution formed part of the Ritual of its celebration.

Then therefore the time was come, when our Lord's prophetical teaching concerning the Holy Eucharist could be fully understood. Hence the fitness of the insertion of that teaching in the Gospel of St. John, in the sixth chapter (vv. 27—71).

It is observable that our Lord seems to refer here to what He had said before, as St. John records in that chapter. Compare v. 18 here with what He had said vi. 70, "Have I not chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil. He spake concerning Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, who would betray Him, being one of the Twelve." Thus He connects the Institution of the Holy Communion in the upper room at Jerusalem with His prophetic discourse concerning it in the Synagogue at Capernaum.

It would seem as if St. John had specially intended, in this most eventful part of the history of our Lord's Ministry, to make his own silence a more emphatic comment of approval on the narratives of the preceding Evangelists, by not recording a single action of our Lord on the Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday of Passion Week. He passes from the Triumphal Entry on Sunday to the Paschal Meal on Thursday Evening.

20. ὁ λαμβάνων] An answer to the secret thoughts of His hearers, perhaps of Judas, and of others in all time. If one whom Thou hast chosen (v. 18) will betray Thee,—if one who eats Thy Sacramental bread will lift up his heel against Thee,—why didst Thou choose him? Why (might Judas think) didst Thou choose me?

Do not suppose that My purpose has been frustrated even in his ministry. Whosoever receives My Apostle in My Name,—even though he be a traitor,—receiveth Me. Here is an answer to the objection derived from Christ's choice of Judas. Here is a consolation to the Church in all ages when evil men bear rule in her communion. See on Matt. x. 4.

21. ἐταράχθη τῷ πνεύματι] By His own will. He was troubled because He troubled Himself. (See on John xi. 33.) He thought on the ingratitude and treachery of Judas and of his consequent doom; and He was now about to reveal the Traitor whom He had foreknown in His own mind, but had not yet disclosed to His Apostles. He was troubled by feelings of pity for him. Human infirmity was troubled in Him by a prospect of the violence that awaited Himself and was now about to assail Him. Christ, Who transfigured the body of our humility to be like to His glory (Phil. iii. 21), transfigured into Himself the affection of our weakness through compassion for us; and when by His own will He is troubled, He consoles us who are troubled against our will. Away then with the arguments of Philosophers, who say that a wise man is not liable to be troubled. Let the soul of the Christian be troubled with fear lest others perish, with sorrow when others perish, with desire that others may not perish but be saved, with joy when others are saved from perishing, with fear lest we ourselves perish, with sorrow because we are absent from Christ. And let us not despair when we are troubled by a prospect of death; for Christ was troubled by it. Thus εἶπεν, Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι εἷς ἐξ ὑμῶν παραδώσει με. (122/I) 22 [q]Ἔβλεπον q ch. 21. 20. Luke 16. 22. οὖν εἰς ἀλλήλους οἱ μαθηταὶ ἀπορούμενοι περὶ τίνος λέγει. (122/X) 23 [q]Ἦν δὲ r ch. 19. 26. & 20. 2. & 21. 7, 20, 24. ἀνακείμενος εἷς ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ ἐν τῷ κόλπῳ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, [r]ὃν ἠγάπα ὁ Ἰησοῦς· 24 νεύει οὖν τούτῳ Σίμων Πέτρος πυθέσθαι τίς ἂν εἴη περὶ οὗ λέγει.

25 Ἀναπεσὼν δὲ ἐκεῖνος οὕτως ἐπὶ τὸ στῆθος τοῦ Ἰησοῦ λέγει αὐτῷ, Κύριε, τίς ἐστιν; (124/IX) 26 Ἀποκρίνεται ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἐκεῖνός ἐστιν, ᾧ ἐγὼ βάψας τὸ ψωμίον ἐπιδώσω· καὶ ἐμβάψας τὸ ψωμίον, δίδωσιν Ἰούδᾳ Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτῃ.
(125/X) 27 Καὶ μετὰ τὸ ψωμίον τότε εἰσῆλθεν εἰς ἐκεῖνον ὁ Σατανᾶς. λέγει οὖν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, [s]Ὃ ποιεῖς, ποίησον τάχιον. 28 Τοῦτο δὲ οὐδεὶς ἔγνω τῶν ἀνακειμένων s ch. 12. 6. πρὸς τί εἶπεν αὐτῷ· 29 [s]τινὲς γὰρ ἐδόκουν, ἐπεὶ τὸ γλωσσόκομον εἶχεν ὁ Ἰούδας, ὅτι λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἀγόρασον ὧν χρείαν ἔχομεν εἰς τὴν ἑορτήν· ἢ τοῖς πτωχοῖς ἵνα τι δῷ. 30 Λαβὼν οὖν τὸ ψωμίον ἐκεῖνος εὐθέως ἐξῆλθεν· ἦν δὲ

He cheers infirm members in His Body the Church by the voluntary example of His own infirmity; thus He encourages Christians, if they find themselves troubled by the prospect of death, to look on Christ, and not to suppose themselves reprobate if they are troubled as He was. (Cp. Aug.)

22. ἀπορούμενοι περὶ τίνος λέγει] See Matt. xxvi. 21. Mark xiv. 18. Luke xxii. 23. They were unconscious of such a sin in themselves or others, but they believed the judgment of Christ to be more credible than their own thoughts. (Chrys.)

23. ἀνακείμενος εἷς ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ ἐν τῷ κόλπῳ] As he reclined (ἀνέκειτο) at the table. See Luke xvi. 22. Thus St. John speaks of Himself,—viz. that Jesus loved him. Cp. xx. 2; xxi. 7. 20. He Who loved all His Disciples, loved him especially, and made him lean on His bosom at supper; perhaps in order that He might specially commend to us the Gospel which He was about to deliver by St. John (Aug.), and which we receive from the mouth of him who imbibed love and wisdom from the lips of Christ.

St. John does not speak of himself by name, but in the third person; so St. Paul of himself (2 Cor. xii. 2). St. John was writing for the whole world, and by mentioning his own name he might have made his name celebrated in the world; but he shuns the mention of his own name. "Optabilius est amari ab Jesu, quàm nomine proprio celebrari." (Beng.)

If thou desirest to be loved by Jesus, and to recline on the bosom of Jesus, and to know divine mysteries, imitate the innocence, and meekness, and gentleness, the modesty and simplicity of St. John; and receive those divine words which the Evangelist who leaned on His bosom at supper drank in from the mouth of Christ. (Cp. Theoph.)

24. τίς ἂν εἴη] 'who it could be.'

25. ἀναπεσών] Elz. has ἐπιπεσών,—but ἀναπεσὼν is in many MSS. John was already reclining ἐν τῷ κόλπῳ (v. 23), but he now ἀνέπεσε, i. e. leant back, 'more closely' ἐπὶ τὸ στῆθος, and whispered the question into the ear of His Master.

It appears from this chapter that our Lord Himself washed the feet of His disciples after the Holy Communion, and commanded them to wash one another's feet (v. 15).

It appears also that He did not sit nor kneel at the Holy Communion, but reclined.

These incidents suggest the questions, On what grounds do Christian Churches now forbear to do the former of these acts, and require persons to do what our Lord did not do, i. e. to kneel at the Lord's Table?

And on what ground do they celebrate the Lord's Supper at a different time of day from that on which He celebrated it at its first institution?

For a reply to these inquiries, which have led to conflicts in the Church in our own land, see Hooker, III. x. xi., and Bp. Sanderson, Lectures on Conscience, Lect. iii. § 19, vol. iv. pp. 55. 278, and vol. ii. 136. 159; iii. 285. 301.

ἐκεῖνος] B, E, G, H, L, M, X, and many cursives, add οὗτως, which is not in Elz. See iv. 6.

26. βάψας τὸ ψωμίον] τὸ ψωμίον, 'the sop, which I hold in my hand.' ψωμίον (from ψάω, rado, frango) is used by LXX for פַּת (path), 'frustum,' a morsel. (Jud. xix. 5. Ruth ii. 14.) In the N. T. it is only used by St. John here and 27. 30. It is now the usual word (ψωμί) in Greece for bread,—as ψαρι-όψάριον, a word used only by St. John in N. T. (vi. 9. 11; xxi. 9, 10. 13), is the common word for fish.

"Ψωμίον non tantùm de frustulo panis adhibetur (et sic h. l. Vulg. Syrus et Arabs hoc vocabulum intellexerunt), sed et omnis generis esculentorum frusta, sive buccellas designat. Schol. Hom. Odys. ι'. 374, ψωμοί· σάρκες, μίλη. In versione Alexandrinâ Job. xxii. 7, ψωμὸν respondet Hebr. לֶחֶם panis. Suidas: ψωμός· ὁ ἄρτος. Etiam verbum ψωμίζειν quo Alexandrini interpretes expresserunt Hebraicum הֶאֱכִיל Num. xi. 4. 18. Deut. viii. 3. 16. Prov. xxv. 21, notat omnino: escendum cibum præbere, nutrire. Hesychius: ψωμιεῖ· τρέφει." (Kuin.) Cp. 1 Cor. xiii. 3.

To give a ψωμίον at an Eastern Repast was an ordinary mark of friendship, and would not have attracted any attention. It was in this case like our Lord's word to Judas, ἑταῖρε (Matt. xxvi. 50); as Kuin. says,—"Jesum, cùm offam intinctam Judæ porrigeret, nil novi et insoliti fecisse, vel exinde patet, quoniam discipuli rem non demirabantur, coll. etiam v. 26. Nempe quæ h. l. leguntur, haud dubiè evenerunt in fine cœnæ Paschalis. Erat autem in more positum, ut, finitâ cœnâ Paschali, quilibet adhuc offam agni Paschalis de carne residuo comederet; exinde verò nemo quicquam cibi gustaret omninò, v. Lightfoot. ad Matth. xxvi. 26, p. 476. De hâc offâ, jusculo agni Paschalis intinctâ, h. l. sermonem esse arbitror. Jesus, qui patrisfamilias personam agebat, offam agni Paschalis singulis porrigebat, et cùm Johannes eum interrogaret, vel initium faciebat à Judâ proditore, vel in porrigendis ψωμίοις ad eum ordine devenerat. Judas Jesu proximè accumbens, ut videtur, Johannis interrogationem fortè audierat, aut conscientiâ ipsum monente suspicabatur de se agi. Quare, acceptâ offâ, Jesum submissâ voce interrogabat: μήτι ἐγώ εἰμι, ῥαββί; et Jesus eodem modo respondebat: σὺ εἶπας, Tu es, v. Matth. xxvi. 25, sed clarâ voce adjiciebat verba hæc: ὃ ποιεῖς, ποίησον τάχιον."

It has been supposed by some (Burgon), that as John was doubtless next our Lord, on His right hand (vv. 23. 25), so Judas was on His left hand. (Cp. Matt. xxv. 33, 34. Luke xxiii. 33.) Certainly Judas must have been very near Jesus; for no one could have heard the reply. (Matt. xxvi. 25.)

We are not to suppose that when Judas received the sop he received the Body of Christ, says Aug., for Christ had already distributed to all the Sacrament of His Body and Blood, and among them to Judas, as St. Luke relates (xxii. 19—21). The act of giving the sop was one of kindness. Judas, though admitted to the same table with Christ, was not deterred from his design, although Christ gave him this mark of love, which ought to have overwhelmed him with shame. (Aug., Chrys.)

27. τότε εἰσῆλθεν ε. ἐ. ὁ Σατανᾶς] At first, Satan did not enter in, but only put it into the heart of Judas to betray his Master. (John xiii. 2.) But after the sop he entered in, and possessed Judas as his own.

Let us be on our guard against the first suggestions of Satan. If he puts evil into our hearts and we resist not, he will enter in and dwell there (Origen, who quotes Matt. xxv. 29. Luke x. 6. Rev. xxii. 11. 2 Cor. vi. 15, on the effect of good things on evil men). Hence learn how dangerous it is to receive good things ill. (Aug.)

Observe the contrast, μετὰ τὸ ψωμίον, εἰσῆλθεν ὁ Σατανᾶς, and vv. 29, 30, λαβὼν τὸ ψωμίον, εὐθέως ἐξῆλθε. When Satan came into him, he went out from the presence of Christ, as Cain went out from the presence of the Lord. Gen. iv. 16. (Burgon.)

Here also is a proof of St. John's inspiration. Who could reveal to him the successive invisible operations of the Evil One on the heart of Judas, except the Holy Spirit, Who seeth all things, even the hidden things of darkness? The Holy Spirit alone knows all the wiles of the Evil Spirit.

— ὃ ποιεῖς, ποίησον τάχιον] 'do more quickly.' "Non jubet facere, sed, si facere pertendat, maturare. Judas ex hoc radio Omniscientiæ poterat sentire se nosci." (Bengel.)

On the sense of this imperative see on ii. 19.

Our Lord did not command the deed, but prophesied,—to Judas evil, to us good; and showed His own readiness to suffer, and His eagerness to save. Judas delivered up Christ. Christ delivered up Himself. (Gal. ii. 20.) By delivering up Christ, Judas sold himself to death; by delivering up Himself, Christ delivered us from death. (Aug.)

28. οὐδεὶς ἔγνω] It appears that John had asked the question privately, and none could believe that Judas was going out to betray his Master. (Chrys.)

29. τὸ γλωσσόκομον εἶχεν] See on xii. 6. Christ had a Purse, and kept there what was requisite for His own needs, and for the Poor. Here is the primitive form of a Church Fund; and thence we learn that when Christ commanded us not to be careful about to-morrow (Matt. vi. 34), He did not forbid us to possess money, but He forbade us to serve God in the hope of gaining it, or to forsake righteousness for fear of losing it. (Aug., who refers to 1 Tim. v. 16.)

30. ἐξῆλθεν] See on v. 27.

— ἦν δὲ νύξ] A proof that Judas was present at the Holy Communion which followed the Paschal feast, in the evening. On St. John's notice of times and seasons in connexion with human actions and in relation to Christ, see on x. 22. Some MSS. and Editions connect ἦν δὲ νύξ with what follows; but the mention of the time is made more impressive by the termination of the sentence at νύξ. And the

νύξ. 31 [t]Ὅτε ἐξῆλθε, λέγει ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Νῦν [u]ἐδοξάσθη ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς ἐδοξάσθη ἐν αὐτῷ. 32 [u]Εἰ ὁ Θεὸς ἐδοξάσθη ἐν αὐτῷ, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς δοξάσει αὐτὸν ἐν ἑαυτῷ, καὶ εὐθὺς δοξάσει αὐτόν. 33 [v]Τεκνία, ἔτι μικρὸν μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι. ζητήσετέ με, καὶ καθὼς εἶπον τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, ὅτι ὅπου ἐγὼ ὑπάγω, ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν, καὶ ὑμῖν λέγω ἄρτι. 34 [w]Ἐντολὴν καινὴν δίδωμι ὑμῖν, ἵνα ἀγαπᾶτε ἀλλήλους· καθὼς ἠγάπησα ὑμᾶς, ἵνα καὶ ὑμεῖς ἀγαπᾶτε ἀλλήλους. 35 Ἐν τούτῳ γνώσονται πάντες ὅτι ἐμοὶ μαθηταί ἐστε, ἐὰν ἀγάπην ἔχητε ἐν ἀλλήλοις. 36 [x]Λέγει αὐτῷ Σίμων Πέτρος, Κύριε, ποῦ ὑπάγεις; Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, [v]Ὅπου ὑπάγω, οὐ δύνασαί μοι νῦν ἀκολουθῆσαι· ὕστερον δὲ ἀκολουθήσεις μοι. (126/1) 37 Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Πέτρος, Κύριε, διατί οὐ δύναμαί σοι ἀκολουθῆσαι ἄρτι; τὴν ψυχήν μου ὑπὲρ σοῦ θήσω. 38 [y]Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Τὴν ψυχήν σου ὑπὲρ ἐμοῦ θήσεις; ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω σοι, οὐ μὴ ἀλέκτωρ φωνήσει ἕως οὗ ἀπαρνήσῃ με τρίς.

XIV. (127/X) 1 [a]Μὴ ταρασσέσθω ὑμῶν ἡ καρδία· [b]πιστεύετε εἰς τὸν Θεὸν, καὶ εἰς ἐμὲ πιστεύετε. 2 [c]Ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ τοῦ Πατρός μου μοναὶ πολλαί εἰσιν· εἰ δὲ μή, εἶπον ἂν ὑμῖν· πορεύομαι ἑτοιμάσαι τόπον ὑμῖν. 3 [d]Καὶ ἐὰν πορευθῶ καὶ ἑτοιμάσω ὑμῖν τόπον, πάλιν ἔρχομαι καὶ παραλήψομαι ὑμᾶς πρὸς ἐμαυτόν· ἵνα ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγὼ, καὶ ὑμεῖς ἦτε. 4 Καὶ ὅπου ἐγὼ ὑπάγω οἴδατε, καὶ τὴν ὁδὸν οἴδατε. 5 Λέγει αὐτῷ Θωμᾶς, Κύριε, οὐκ οἴδαμεν ποῦ ὑπάγεις. καὶ πῶς δυνάμεθα τὴν ὁδὸν εἰδέναι; 6 [e]Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ ὁδὸς, καὶ

t ch. 12. 23. & 14. 13.
u ch. 17. 1, 4. 1 Cor. 1. 30, 31. Phil. 2. 10, 11. 1 Pet. 4. 11.
v ch. 7. 33, 34. & 8. 21. & 14. 19.
w ch. 15. 12, 17. Lev. 19. 18. 1 John 2. 7, 8. & 3. 11. & 4. 16. 21. James 2. 8. Gal. 6. 2. Rom. 12. 10. Eph. 5. 2. 1 Thess. 4. 9. Heb. 13. 1. 1 Pet. 1. 22. & 3. 8.
x ch. 21. 19. 2 Pet. 1. 14.
y Matt. 26. 34. Mark 14. 30. Luke 22. 34. a ver. 27.
b ch. 20. 29. 1 Pet. 1. 8.
c Ps. 36. 7—9. & 23. 6. & 27. 4. Heb. 12. 22. Rev. 3. 12.
d ver. 18. & 17. 24. ch. 12. 26.
e Heb. 6. 20. Heb. 9. 8. & 10. 19. 20. ch. 1. 4, 17. & 8. 32. & 11. 25.

---

glorification of Christ by the going out of the Tempter is also rendered more emphatic by the connexion of ὅτε ἐξῆλθε with λέγει, and so Aug.

31. νῦν ἐδοξάσθη ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου] Judas goes out, Jesus is glorified. The Son of Perdition goes out; the Son of Man is glorified. Jesus, foreknowing His Disciples, had said, "Ye are clean, but not all; for He knew who should betray Him" (John xiii. 10); and now that he is gone out, they remain all clean with Him Who cleanses them. He foresees that future time of glory, when all things that offend shall be taken away from His Church (Matt. xiii. 41); when all the tares will be gathered up, and the Wheat alone will remain; "and the just shall shine as the sun in the kingdom of their Father" (Matt. xiii. 43). (Aug.)

He says "the Son of Man is glorified;" for the glory of which He speaks is not the glory of Christ reigning as God, but the glory now to be acquired by Him as Man, and as a reward for His sufferings on the Cross (Phil. ii. 8, 9), "by which He spoiled principalities and powers, and made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it" (Col. ii. 14, 15); and God reconciled all things to Himself, "having made peace through the blood of the Cross by Christ" (Col. i. 20). (Cp. Origen.) Thus also He raises the minds of the Disciples, which had been depressed by sorrow. (Chrys.)

33. ἐγὼ ὑπάγω] So A, B, C, D, K, L, X, and many Cursives and Versions.—Elz. has ὑπάγω ἐγώ.

34. ἐντολὴν καινήν] Our Lord having told His Apostles that they cannot yet come where He is, and cannot follow Him now, but will follow Him afterwards (John xiii. 33. 36), now proceeds to point out the way (1 Cor. xii. 31),—the marvellous way by which they must follow Him, the way of love; and He therefore says, "a new commandment I give unto you."

But how was it new? Was it not commanded in the old law, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself?" (Lev. xix. 18.) Why then is it called a new commandment? Because, He adds, 'as I loved you;' this is a new commandment, to love, as Christ loves us—who were enemies and rebels against Him. And yet He died for us. And it is new, because this love renews us, makes us new creatures, heirs of the new covenant, and singers of a new song. This love renewed the Apostles, and renews the nations throughout the world, and knits together a New People, namely, the body of the newly-married Spouse of the only-begotten Son of God; and by reason of this New Commandment her members are eager for each other's welfare; and if one member suffer, or one rejoice, the others suffer and rejoice with it (1 Cor. xii. 26). And they love one another not as men love men, but as children of God and brethren and sisters in Christ, with the love with which Christ loved us. (Cp. Aug., Chrys.)

And what did He love in us?—God; not Whom we had in us, but that we might have Him in us. So let us love our brother that he may have God in himself. He who loves his neighbour with a spiritual and divine love, as Christ loved us, what does he love in him but God? (Aug.) By loving God in man our life is hid with Christ in God, and love thus becomes a death to the world and a life unto God. This love overcame the world and is stronger than death.

35. ἐν τούτῳ γνώσονται] Here is the true "Note of the Church," Love; Love of God and of Man in God and for God. "What," says Grotius, "would the Apostles say, if they heard men propounding almost any other 'notes of the Church' than that which was given by Christ?" Christ does not say that they shall be known to be His Disciples by their power of working miracles, but by Love. (Theoph.)

36. οὐ δύνασαί μοι νῦν ἀκολουθῆσαι· ὕστερον δέ] Thou canst not now be a Peter, for the Petra (or Rock) has not yet consolidated thee with His Spirit; but thou shalt follow Me by dying on the cross, as I shall die for thee. (Aug.) See on John xxi. 18, 19.

37. τὴν ψυχήν μου ὑπὲρ σοῦ θήσω] Peter imagined that he would lay down his life for Christ; whereas Christ had come to lay down His life for all, among whom was Peter. Peter imagined that he could precede his Guide. Presumptuous supposition! It was necessary that Christ should first lay down His life for the salvation of Peter, before Peter could be able to lay down his life for the Gospel of Christ. But when Christ had died for Peter, and redeemed him by His own Blood, and had risen from the dead, then Peter was able to follow Christ, even to the cross. (Aug.)

CH. XIV. 1. μὴ ταρασσέσθω] This discourse was uttered at table after the celebration of the Lord's Supper. (See v. 31.)

— πιστεύετε εἰς τὸν Θεὸν, καὶ εἰς ἐμὲ π.] A proof of Christ's Divinity. The word πιστεύειν, followed by εἰς and an accusative, when said of a person in the N. T., is never applied to a man, but only to God. (See Vorst. de Hebr. p. 676.)

If ye believe in God, ye must also believe in Me; because I am God. The prospect of My death makes you fearful. I have taken the form of a servant, but I am in the form of God (Phil. ii. 6). As God I will raise Myself, Who am Man. Let not therefore your heart be troubled. (Aug.)

2. μοναὶ πολλαί] μοναί, 'mansiones;' for there alone we have a continuing city, μένουσαν πόλιν (Heb. xiii. 14).

One of Christ's Disciples may be more holy, more wise, more righteous than another; but none of His Disciples will be excluded from that paternal house where every child of God will have a mansion proportioned to the use he has made of the grace given him in this life. The term 'many mansions' signifies that there will be different degrees of felicity in the same eternity, as there are stars differing from one another in glory in the same sky, "So is the Resurrection of the dead" (1 Cor. xv. 41, 42).

See above on Luke xix. 17.

So God will be all in all; and since God is Love, the effect of Love will be that what each has severally will be common to all; there will be no envy arising from disparity of glory, since the unity of love will reign in all. (Aug.)

— πορεύομαι ἑτοιμάσαι τόπον ὑμῖν] Christ πορεύεται, takes a journey, to prepare a place for us. Let Him then depart; let Him ascend and not be visible to the bodily eye; let him be hidden from it, that thus He may be seen by the eye of faith; and being so seen, may be desired; and being desired, may be possessed for ever; the desire of our Love is the preparation of our house in heaven. (Aug.)

3. πορευθῶ] Shall have made My journey from earth to heaven. See xiv. 12. 28; xvi. 7.

— καὶ ἑτοιμάσω] A, B, E, G, H, K, and many cursive MSS. omit καί.

6. ἐγώ εἰμι ὁ ὁδὸς, καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια, καὶ ἡ ζωή] "Via, Veritas, Vita." From the verb of existence, εἰμί, as used here and in other places of St. John's Gospel, St. Athanasius (p. 329) infers the eternal existence of Christ, ἐν τῷ εἰμι τὸ ἀΐδιον τοῦ υἱοῦ σημαίνεται.

f ch. 8. 19.
g ch. 16. 26, 27.
h ch. 12. 45.
i ver. 20. ch. 10. 32, 36, 38.
j ch. 15. 7, 16. & 16. 23, 24. & ver. 14. Matt. 7. 7. & 18. 20. & 28. 18. 2 Cor. 12. 8, 9. Mark 11. 24. 1 John 5. 14. k ver. 21. 23. ch. 15. 10. 1 John 2. 3. & 5. 3.

ἡ ἀλήθεια, καὶ ἡ ζωή· οὐδεὶς ἔρχεται πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα, εἰ μὴ δι' ἐμοῦ. 7 [f] Εἰ ἐγνώκειτε με, καὶ τὸν Πατέρα μου ἐγνώκειτε ἄν· [g] καὶ ἀπ' ἄρτι γινώσκετε αὐτὸν, καὶ ἑωράκατε αὐτόν. 8 Λέγει αὐτῷ Φίλιππος, Κύριε, δεῖξον ἡμῖν τὸν Πατέρα, καὶ ἀρκεῖ ἡμῖν. 9 [h] Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Τοσοῦτον χρόνον μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι, καὶ οὐκ ἔγνωκάς με, Φίλιππε; ὁ ἑωρακὼς ἐμὲ ἑώρακε τὸν Πατέρα· καὶ πῶς σὺ λέγεις, Δεῖξον ἡμῖν τὸν Πατέρα; 10 [i] Οὐ πιστεύεις ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ Πατρὶ, καὶ ὁ Πατὴρ ἐν ἐμοί ἐστι; Τὰ ῥήματα ἃ ἐγὼ λαλῶ ὑμῖν ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ οὐ λαλῶ· ὁ δὲ Πατὴρ ὁ ἐν ἐμοὶ μένων αὐτὸς ποιεῖ τὰ ἔργα. 11 Πιστεύετέ μοι ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ Πατρὶ, καὶ ὁ Πατὴρ ἐν ἐμοί· εἰ δὲ μὴ, διὰ τὰ ἔργα αὐτὰ πιστεύετέ μοι. 12 [j] Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ, τὰ ἔργα ἃ ἐγὼ ποιῶ κἀκεῖνος ποιήσει, καὶ μείζονα τούτων ποιήσει, ὅτι ἐγὼ πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα μου πορεύομαι, (128/IV) 13 [j] καὶ ὅ τι ἂν αἰτήσητε ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου, τοῦτο ποιήσω· ἵνα δοξασθῇ ὁ Πατὴρ ἐν τῷ Υἱῷ. 14 Ἐάν τι αἰτήσητε ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου, ἐγὼ ποιήσω.

15 [k] Ἐὰν ἀγαπᾶτέ με, τὰς ἐντολὰς τὰς ἐμὰς τηρήσατε· 16 καὶ ἐγὼ ἐρωτήσω τὸν Πατέρα, καὶ ἄλλον Παράκλητον δώσει ὑμῖν, ἵνα μένῃ μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰς τὸν

I am the Way by which you desire to go; the Truth to which you desire to come; the Life in which you desire to remain.

The eternal Word, Who being with the Father, is the Truth and the Life, became the Way to us by taking our nature. Walk therefore in Him Who is Man, that you may come to Him Who is God. (Aug. Serm. 141.) He Who is the Way cannot lead us astray; He Who is the Truth cannot deceive us; He Who is the Life cannot desert us in death. (Hilary, de Trin. vii. 9. Chrys.) He is the Way—by Doctrine, by Example, by Suffering (Heb. x. 20), by Prayer.

You need not inquire for the Way. He Who is the Way has come to you. Arise and walk. Walk in the Way. Many run, but do not run in the Way. It is better 'claudicare in viâ,' than to run out of the Way. (Aug. Serm. ibid.)

He said before, "No one can come to Me except the Father which hath sent Me draw him" (John vi. 44). He now says, "No one can come to the Father but by Me," making Himself equal with the Father. "If ye had known Me, ye would have known the Father." They had known Him, but not rightly: but afterwards the Holy Spirit would come and give them true knowledge; and therefore He adds, "hereafter ye shall know Him." (Chrys.; see also Aug. Serm. 141, 142.)

9. τοσοῦτον χρόνον μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι] To walk on the waves, to command the winds, to forgive sins, to raise the dead; these are acts of God, and were done by Christ in the presence of His Disciples. He therefore reproves Philip because he had seen Christ do these things, and yet did not recognize the Divine nature dwelling in Him Who had taken the nature of man. (Hilary. de Trin. vii.)

— οὐκ ἔγνωκάς με] He says, 'known Me;' i. e. perceived My Divinity by My works. Philip saw Christ's Body, but he did not yet know Him as God. Philip thought that he had seen the Son of God, because he had seen His body; and he now wished to see the Father, but Christ tells him that he had not yet seen, i. e. known, the Son aright; and if he did see Him aright, i. e. as God, he would see the Father, Who is consubstantial with the Son. (Chrys.)

— ὁ ἑωρακὼς ἐμὲ ἑώρακε τὸν Πατέρα] Some have perverted these words into an occasion of the Sabellian Heresy. (Chrys.) On the ill use made of them by the Noetian School at Rome, under Zephyrinus and Calli-tus, see St. Hippolytus, Philosophumena, p. 289, ed. Miller, and the present Editor's notes, p. 261, and cp. St. Hippol. c. Noet. § 7, where he vindicates the true sense of this text. See also St. Cyril here.

He that hath seen Me, hath seen the Father. Not that I am both Father and Son (the Error of the Patripassians, and Noetians, and Sabellians), but because the Son is coequal with the Father. He reproves Philip for desiring to see the Father, as if the Father were greater than the Son, and because Philip did not know the Son aright, in that he thought that another Person was greater than the Son. Therefore our Lord said, "Dost thou not believe that I am in the Father and the Father in Me?" (Aug.) We acknowledge the nature of God subsisting in Christ, since God is in God, and there is no other God besides Him Who is in God. (Hilary, de Trin. v.) He who sees My divine substance, sees the substance of the Father. Whence it is clear that Christ is not a creature, for they who see the creature see not God. Christ is therefore consubstantial with the Father. (Chrys.)

10. ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ οὐ λαλῶ] i. e. nothing contrary to, or independent of, My Father. (Chrys. on John xvi. 15.)

11. ἐν ἐμοί] Elz. adds ἐστι, but this is not in A, B, D, E, K, L, Q, S, X, and many Cursive MSS. and Versions.

— διὰ τὰ ἔργα αὐτὰ πιστεύετέ μοι] Not only for those which I do on earth, when present in My human nature, but for those works, which after My Ascension, I shall enable others to do, thus showing My divine power, and coequality with the Father. (Chrys., Aug.)

12. μείζονα τούτων ποιήσει] Behold the power of the only-begotten Son. He, when absent from Earth in body, can give to others the ability to do greater works than He Himself did while He was on earth. And by adding, "Whatsoever ye shall ask in My Name, I will do," He showed that these other works would be done by His own power. (Cp. Theoph.) What are these greater works? Such as the healing of the sick by the shadow of Peter (Acts v. 15), and by handkerchiefs from the body of Paul (Acts xix. 12), and the speaking in new tongues (we do not hear that Christ ever spoke in a foreign language), and the conversion of the world by their means.

Christ, in heaven, did these things by means of His Disciples on earth; He enabled them to do them. He did more when He preached by them after His Ascension than He had done by speaking in person to those who heard Him on earth. (Cp. Aug.) He says, "because I go to the Father," for these mighty Works were due to the gift of the Holy Ghost, which He obtained for His Church by suffering, and which He received on His Ascension and Session at the right hand of the Majesty on High, when He had gone to the Father.

"He that believeth in Me shall do greater works than those which I do here." See the power of Faith! As the Apostle says, "To him that believeth on Him that justifieth the ungodly, his Faith is counted for Righteousness" (Rom. iv. 5), that is, it justifies him; it is the hand which applies the merits of Christ for the forgiveness of our own sins, and for our acceptance with God. Herein we do the work of Christ, for to believe in Christ is the work of Christ. And to be justified is more than to be created. This is the work done when the ungodly is justified, and his faith is counted to him for righteousness. This work is wrought by Christ in him, but not without him, and this is a greater work than even to create heaven and earth. For heaven and earth will pass away, but the Justification and Salvation of God's elect abideth for ever. And Christ inspires us with lively hope when we pray to Him, by adding, "Because I go to the Father;" and, "Whatsoever ye ask in My Name, I will do it." (Cp. Aug.)

13. ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου] Hence the Apostles said when working miracles, "In the Name of Jesus of Nazareth, rise and walk." (Acts iii. 6.) He, sitting in heaven, wrought all the miracles which were worked by their agency on earth; "the Hand of the Lord was with them," enabling them to do what they did. Acts iv. 30; xi. 21; xiii. 11. (Chrys.)

14. ἐγὼ ποιήσω] ἐγὼ is emphatic. "Whatsoever ye ask in My Name I will do it;" in My Name, i. e. in submission to My Will; and conducive to your own salvation and to God's glory, which are purposed by My Will. St. Paul asked that the thorn in his flesh might be removed (2 Cor. xii. 8), but his prayer was not granted because it was more expedient for him that he should have grace to bear it. (Cp. Aug.)

16. ἄλλον Παράκλητον] On the meaning of the words παρακαλεῖν, παράκλησις, and παράκλητος in Greek Authors, see Kuin., who says:—

"Variæ sunt verbi παρακαλεῖν significationes. Notat propriè advocare, arcessere, ut Act. xxviii. 20. Xen. Mem. ii. 10, 2, qui usus verbi latiùs patet, et de quovis genere advocationis παρακλήσεως adhibetur, ut de diis, qui in auxilium vocantur Xen. H. Gr. ii. 4. 10, de amicis atque juris peritis, qui, cùm quis in judicium vocatus erat, solebant advocari, παρακαλεῖσθαι, h. e. rogari, ut de causâ deliberarent, consilia darent, in judicio adessent, atque honoris causâ, in subsellio ejus, qui accusatus esset, sederent; ponitur etiam de patronis causarum sive oratoribus, qui ad causas defendendas advocabantur.

"Porro significat: monere, cohortari Act. xx. 2, coll. 31. Tit. ii. 6. Philo de Charit. p. 700, B. de Mose adhortante Josuam, ad rem strenuè fortiterque gerendam: ἦν δὲ καὶ χρησμὸς αὐτῷ παρακαλέσαι τὸν διάδοχον, de eâdem re paulò ante usus erat verbo παραινέσαι. Id. de Opif. M. p. 4, E. ubi Deum condidisse ait hoc universum οὐδενὶ παρακλήτῳ, nemine monente.

"Denotat quoque rogare, obsecrare, ut Luc. vii. 4. Matth. viii.

αἰῶνα, 17 [l] τὸ Πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας, ὃ ὁ κόσμος οὐ δύναται λαβεῖν, ὅτι οὐ θεωρεῖ αὐτὸ, οὐδὲ γινώσκει αὐτό· ὑμεῖς δὲ γινώσκετε αὐτὸ, [m] ὅτι παρ' ὑμῖν μένει, καὶ ἐν ὑμῖν ἔσται. 18 [n] Οὐκ ἀφήσω ὑμᾶς ὀρφανούς· ἔρχομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς. 19 [o] Ἔτι μικρὸν, καὶ ὁ κόσμος με οὐκ ἔτι θεωρεῖ, [p] ὑμεῖς δὲ θεωρεῖτέ με· [q] ὅτι ἐγὼ ζῶ, καὶ ὑμεῖς ζήσεσθε. 20 Ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ γνώσεσθε ὑμεῖς ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ Πατρί μου, καὶ ὑμεῖς ἐν ἐμοὶ, κἀγὼ ἐν ὑμῖν. (129/I) 21 Ὁ ἔχων τὰς ἐντολάς μου καὶ τηρῶν αὐτὰς ἐκεῖνός ἐστιν ὁ ἀγαπῶν με· ὁ δὲ ἀγαπῶν με ἀγαπηθήσεται ὑπὸ τοῦ Πατρός μου· καὶ ἐγὼ ἀγαπήσω αὐτὸν, καὶ ἐμφανίσω αὐτῷ ἐμαυτόν. (130/X) 22 [r] Λέγει αὐτῷ Ἰούδας, οὐχ ὁ Ἰσκαριώτης, Κύριε καὶ τί γέγονεν, ὅτι ἡμῖν μέλλεις ἐμφανίζειν σεαυτὸν, καὶ οὐχὶ τῷ κόσμῳ; 23 [s] Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Ἐάν τις ἀγαπᾷ με, τὸν λόγον μου τηρήσει· [t] καὶ ὁ Πατήρ μου ἀγαπήσει αὐτὸν, καὶ πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐλευσόμεθα, καὶ μονὴν παρ' αὐτῷ ποιήσομεν. (131/I) 24 ὁ μὴ ἀγαπῶν με τοὺς λόγους μου οὐ τηρεῖ· καὶ ὁ λόγος ὃν ἀκούετε οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμὸς, ἀλλὰ τοῦ πέμψαντός με Πατρός. 25 Ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν παρ' ὑμῖν μένων. (132/X) 26 [u] Ὁ δὲ Παράκλητος, τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, ὃ πέμψει ὁ Πατὴρ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου, ἐκεῖνος ὑμᾶς διδάξει πάντα, καὶ ὑπομνήσει ὑμᾶς πάντα ἃ εἶπον ὑμῖν. 27 [v] Εἰρήνην ἀφίημι ὑμῖν, εἰρήνην τὴν ἐμὴν δίδωμι ὑμῖν· οὐ καθὼς ὁ κόσμος δίδωσιν, ἐγὼ δίδωμι ὑμῖν. Μὴ ταρασσέσθω ὑμῶν ἡ καρδία, μηδὲ δειλιάτω. 28 [w] Ἠκούσατε ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶπον ὑμῖν, Ὑπάγω καὶ ἔρχομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς. Εἰ ἠγαπᾶτέ με, ἐχάρητε ἄν, ὅτι πορεύομαι πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα· ὅτι ὁ

l ch. 15. 26. & 16. 13.
m 1 John 5. 6.
n ver. 16. Rom. 8. 9, 14—16. 1 Cor. 3. 16. & 6. 19.
o ch. 15. 26. 1 John 4. 6. p Matt. 18. 20. & 23. 20. 2 Cor. 5. 6—8. Heb. 12. 1—3.
q 1 Pet. 1. 8. ch. 6. 57. & 10 28. & 15. 4—6. Col. 3. 3, 4.
r Rom. 8. 3, 10, 11. Matt. 10. 3. s Luke 6. 16. Rev. 3. 20.
t ch. 12. 26. & 16. 26, 27. & 17. 26. 2 Thess. 2. 16, 17. 1 John 3. 1.
u Luke 24. 49. ch. 15. 26. & 16. 7.
v Rom. 8. 6. & 16. 17. 2 Cor. 1. 3—5. Phil. 4. 6, 7. Hagg. 2. 9. 2 Thess. 3. 16.
w ver. 3. 18. ch. 10. 29.

---

5. Thomas Mag. παρακαλῶ· τὸ προτρέπω, ὡς ἐπὶ τὸ πολύ. καὶ παράκλησις, ἡ προτροπή· ἅπαξ δὲ καὶ τὸ δίομαι.

"A Judæis Græcè loquentibus ita quoque usurpatur, ut esset, consolari, exhilarare, v. τοὺς ὁ. Ps. xxii. 5; xciii. 19. 2 Cor. i. 4: cf. not. ad Luc. ii. 25. Et in liberis N. T. interdum etiam eo significatu legitur, ut sit docere, veluti 1 Thess. ii. 11; iii. 2. Tit. ii. 15. 1 Tim. vi. 2.

"Græcè dicitur παράκλητος advocatus, quem in auxilium vocavimus, ut nobis adsit opitulator, adjutor, v. Reiskii Ind. Gr. Demosth. s. παρακαλεῖν et παράκλητος, add. Dionys. Halic. 10, p. 717, ed. Sylburg. ὅσοι μὲν ἦσαν ἀκέραιοί τε καὶ τῶν τὰ δίκαια λεγόντων. In libris autem Rabbinorum commutantur inter se nomina patroni et paracleti סנגורין et פרקליטין."

The word παράκλητος, as used in the N. T., represents two Hebrew words;

מְנַחֵם (menachem), 'a Comforter,' for which the LXX had used παρακλήτωρ in Job xvi. 2: cf. Zech. i. 13. One of the Names of the Messiah was Menahem. See Lightfoot, who refers to Luke ii. 25, the consolation of Israel.

מֵלִיץ (melits), an Interpreter or Mediator, for which the Chaldee Paraphrasts use פרקלטא (praclit), i.e. παράκλητος. (Job xvi. 20; xxxiii. 23. Cf. Buxtorf, Lex. Talm. p. 1843.) Hence παράκλητος sometimes signifies, as here, one who consoles or comforts, by counsel and aid (see below, xv. 26), and sometimes one who mediates or interprets, and presents petitions to another, as an Intercessor.

Some have attempted to limit the sense of παράκλητος in the New Testament to 'Advocatus,' or 'Adjutor.' But the Word is one of large acceptation. And it was probably chosen for that reason, as best signifying the manifold gifts and offices of the Holy Ghost (1 Cor. xii. 3—10), as the Sanctifier, Teacher, Comforter, Exhorter, Remembrancer, Inspirer, Enlightener, Counsellor, Guide, Helper, and Advocate of the Church. Cp. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. viii. pp. 608—616. Barrow, Serm. xxxiv. on the Creed, vol. v. pp. 185—189. See Bp. Andrewes, iii. pp. 130. 174—178, Sermon v. on the sending of the Holy Ghost.

Christ is called a Paraclete or Advocate by St. John. "We have an Advocate (Παράκλητον) with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous." (1 John ii. 1.)

Here the Paraclete is the Holy Ghost, Whom the faith confesses to be consubstantial with the Father and the Son. (Aug.)

By calling the Person here promised to be sent "another Paraclete," He shows that there is One Person, Who sends, of the Son, and another, to be sent, of the Holy Ghost. (Aug.)

Let the Sabellians hear this who do not give due honour to the Holy Ghost. By the word 'another,' Christ shows the distinction of Persons; by the word 'Paraclete,' He declares the equality of dignity. (Cp. Chrys.)

The Holy Spirit is here represented in opposition to the Evil Spirit. The Evil Spirit is our Κατήγορος. (Rev. xii. 10. Job i. 9; ii. 4. Zech. iii. 1.) The Holy Spirit is our Παράκλητος. Cp. Burgon here, and see on Rom. viii. 26.

17. ὃ ὁ κόσμος οὐ δύναται λαβεῖν] Worldly hearts desire what is visible; the world does not rise to the love of what is invisible, therefore the world cannot receive Him. (Aug.)

18. οὐκ ἀφήσω ὑμᾶς ὀρφανούς] ὀρφανός is used by LXX for יָתוֹם (jathom), 'fatherless.' (Ps. lxviii. 5, 6.) Hence He calls them τέκνια (xiii. 33),—a word used eight times by St. John.

— ἔρχομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς] 'I am coming to you.' Do not think that I am deserting you. I am even now coming to you in spiritual gifts.

19. ἔτι μικρόν] In a short time I shall be withdrawn from you in body; but you will see Me with the eye of faith, and feel My presence by that of the Spirit. See Cyril, and on xiii. 33, and xvi. 16.

22. οὐχ ὁ Ἰσκαριώτης] for he had 'gone out,' and was not now present. Cp. xiii. 30.

23—31.] For an exposition of these verses see Greg. M., Hom. in Ev. xxx. p. 1575.

23. Ἰησοῦς] Elz. has ὁ Ἰησ., but the Article is not in many of the best MSS.

26. ὑπομνήσει ὑμᾶς πάντα ἃ εἶπον ὑμῖν] The Spirit taught them those things which Christ did not teach them, because they were not able to bear them. (John xvi. 12.) And He brought to their remembrance those things which, either through obscurity or slowness of understanding, they were not able to recall. (Theoph.)

Hence the Writers of the Gospels, who were unlearned and illiterate men, have been enabled to record with minuteness and accuracy the sublime sayings and marvellous acts of Christ. Here is the refutation of all objections to their veracity. They were inspired by the Spirit of Truth (v. 7), Who taught them all things, and brought to their recollection all things that Christ had said to them. Therefore objections against the truth and inspiration of the Sacred Writers are in fact sins against Christ, Who sent the Holy Ghost, and against the Holy Ghost, Who was sent to teach them all things, and to lead them into all the truth.

27. εἰρήνην ἀφίημι ὑμῖν] He gives us peace in this world, and He will give us His peace in the world to come. He Himself is our peace. (Ephes. ii. 14.) The peace of Christ is serenity of mind, tranquillity of spirit, the bond and fellowship of love; and no one can attain to the inheritance of the Lord, who does not keep this testament of peace, nor can any one have concord with Christ who foments discord among Christians. (Aug.)

— οὐ καθὼς ὁ κόσμος δίδωσιν] Men who love the world love not Christ, and love not one another in Christ; and when they give peace, it is for their own sake and for the world's sake, not for God's sake. (Aug.)

28. εἰ ἠγαπᾶτέ με, ἐχάρητε ἄν] He was going in that nature which He had as Man; but He remained with them as God. In that nature by which He is not equal to the Father He was going to the Father, from Whom He will come again to judge the quick and the dead. In that other nature by which He is equal to the Father, He never came away from the Father, but is present with Him every where, and entire, co-equal with Him in that Divinity, which no place can contain.

Ye would have rejoiced. Human nature may well rejoice in that it has been taken up to heaven by the Only-begotten Word; so that earth is exalted, and dust sits incorruptible in Christ, at the right hand of the Father. Who does not rejoice, that loves Christ, and contemplates his own nature, now made immortal in Christ, and hopes that he himself will one day be together with Christ? (Aug.)

Πατήρ μου μείζων μού ἐστί. [29] [x] Καὶ νῦν εἴρηκα ὑμῖν πρὶν γενέσθαι, ἵνα, ὅταν γένηται, πιστεύσητε.

[30] Οὐκ ἔτι πολλὰ λαλήσω μεθ' ὑμῶν· [y] ἔρχεται γὰρ ὁ τοῦ κόσμου ἄρχων, καὶ ἐν ἐμοὶ οὐκ ἔχει οὐδέν· [31] [z] ἀλλ' ἵνα γνῷ ὁ κόσμος, ὅτι ἀγαπῶ τὸν Πατέρα, καὶ, καθὼς ἐνετείλατό μοι ὁ Πατὴρ, οὕτω ποιῶ. Ἐγείρεσθε, ἄγωμεν ἐντεῦθεν.

XV. [1] Ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ ἄμπελος ἡ ἀληθινὴ, καὶ [a] ὁ Πατήρ μου ὁ γεωργός ἐστι· [2] [b] πᾶν κλῆμα ἐν ἐμοὶ μὴ φέρον καρπὸν αἴρει αὐτὸ, καὶ πᾶν τὸ καρπὸν φέρον [c] καθαίρει αὐτὸ, ἵνα πλείονα καρπὸν φέρῃ. [3] [d] Ἤδη ὑμεῖς καθαροί ἐστε διὰ τὸν λόγον ὃν λελάληκα ὑμῖν. [4] [e] Μείνατε ἐν ἐμοὶ, κἀγὼ ἐν ὑμῖν· καθὼς τὸ κλῆμα οὐ δύναται καρπὸν φέρειν ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ, ἐὰν μὴ μείνῃ ἐν τῇ ἀμπέλῳ, οὕτως οὐδὲ ὑμεῖς, ἐὰν μὴ ἐν ἐμοὶ μείνητε. [5] [f] Ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ ἄμπελος, ὑμεῖς τὰ κλήματα· ὁ μένων ἐν ἐμοὶ, κἀγὼ ἐν αὐτῷ, [g] οὗτος φέρει καρπὸν πολὺν, ὅτι χωρὶς ἐμοῦ οὐ δύνασθε ποιεῖν οὐδέν. [6] [h] ἐὰν μή τις μείνῃ ἐν ἐμοὶ, ἐβλήθη ἔξω ὡς τὸ κλῆμα καὶ ἐξηράνθη· καὶ συνάγουσιν αὐτὰ καὶ εἰς τὸ πῦρ βάλλουσι, καὶ καίεται· (133/IV) [7] [i] ἐὰν μείνητε ἐν ἐμοὶ, καὶ τὰ ῥήματά μου ἐν ὑμῖν μείνῃ, ὃ ἐὰν θέλητε αἰτήσεσθε, καὶ γενήσεται ὑμῖν. (134/X) [8] [k] Ἐν τούτῳ ἐδοξάσθη ὁ Πατήρ μου, ἵνα καρπὸν πολὺν φέρητε· καὶ γενήσεσθε ἐμοὶ μαθηταί. [9] Καθὼς ἠγά-

x ch. 13. 19. & 12. 16.
y ch. 12. 31. ch. 16. 11.
z ch. 10. 18.
a Matt. 20. 1. & 21. 33. 1 Cor. 3. 9.
b Matt. 7. 21. & 15. 13. 2 Tim. 3. 5. Rev. 3. 1. c Ps. 51. 7—13. Isa. 27. 6—8. Mal. 3. 3. d ch. 13. 10. & 17. 17. Eph. 5. 26. 1 John 2. 6. e Hos. 14. 8. Phil. 1. 11. & 4. 13. Rom. 6. 4. & 8. 10. Eph. 3. 16—21. Col. 1. 6. 2 Pet. 3. 18.
f Matt. 3. 10. & 7. 19. ch. 16. 23. 1 John 3. 22.
g Matt. 5. 16. Phil. 1. 11.
h ch. 8. 31.

— ὅτι πορεύομαι] So A, B, D, L, X, and many cursive MSS. and Versions. Elz. has ὅτι εἶπον πορεύομαι.

— ὁ Πατὴρ μείζων μου] Greater than I am as Man. Christ is speaking of going, which cannot be predicated of God. My Father is greater than I am in that nature which goes to Him. But I am equal to Him in that Nature which is now and ever with Him. See on iii. 13, and x. 30, and 1 Cor. xv. 28. See St. Cyril here, and on this text see Bp. Bull, Def. Fid. Nic. sect. 4.

— Πατήρ μου] μου is omitted by A, D, L, X, and some Cursives and Versions.

30. ἔρχεται γὰρ ὁ τοῦ κόσμου ἄρχων] Elz. has κόσμου τούτου, but τούτου is not found in eleven uncials and many cursive MSS.

The devil is not the prince of creation, but of sinners. Hence the Apostle speaks of our warfare "against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." Ephes. vi. 12. (Aug.)

— ἐν ἐμοὶ οὐκ ἔχει οὐδέν] He has nothing in Me; because Christ had come as God without sin, and the Virgin conceived and brought forth His flesh, but without any mortal taint of sin. (Aug.)

Why then did our Lord die? Death in Him was not the penalty of sin, but a gift of mercy to us, that He might free us from eternal death. (Aug., Tract 3.)

31. ἐγείρεσθε] They had been reclining at supper till He said these words. (Aug.) They now leave the upper room, in which the Lord's Supper had been instituted, to go to Gethsemane.

CH. XV. 1. ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ ἄμπελος ἡ ἀληθινή] 'I am the Vine.'

The People of God had been compared to a Vine in the Old Test. (Ps. lxxx. 8. Isa. v. 1—7. Jer. ii. 21. Ezek. xv. 2; xix. 10.) But in the New the Son of God is incarnate, and one with His People.

The discourse of our Lord in the last chapter was delivered at the table in the chamber of the paschal supper (see xiv. 31). The following seems to have been suggested by the Vineyards and Gardens through which they passed in their way toward the Mount of Olives.

They had also lately partaken of the fruit of the Vine, and even of the Communion of the Blood of the True Vine; and He said that He would no more drink of the fruit of the Vine till He should drink it new with them in His kingdom. (Matt. xxvi. 29.) And so this discourse related by St. John falls in with what is recorded by the other Evangelists.

He is the Vine, because He is the Head of the Church, the Man Christ Jesus, and we are His members; and the Vine and branches are of the same nature; and He is the true Vine, as distinguished from that mentioned Jer. ii. 21. Isa. v. 4. (Aug.)

For other instances of ἀληθινὸς as applied to Christ, see i. 9, φῶς ἀληθινόν: vi. 32, ἄρτον ἀληθινόν, and Rev. iii. 7. 14; xix. 11.

On this discourse see Williams, Holy Week, pp. 490—498.

— Πατήρ μου ὁ γεωργός] He tills our hearts with the ploughshare of His Word, and scatters the seeds of His precepts there, and sends us the dew and rain of the Spirit, that He may reap the fruits of holiness.

2. πᾶν κλῆμα ἐν ἐμοὶ μὴ φέρον καρπόν] Unless we bear the fruit of good works, we cannot be said to be branches of the Vine, which is Christ. (Chrys.)

— καθαίρει] He pruneth us by afflictions, in order that we may put forth shoots and bear more fruit. (Chrys.)

Observe the connexion of καθαίρει and καθαρός. We are purified by being pruned.

3. ὑμεῖς καθαροί ἐστε διὰ τὸν λόγον] Why did He not say, "Ye are clean by Baptism?" Because it is the Word which cleanses in the water. Take away the Word, and what is the water? The Word is added to the Element, and it becomes a Sacrament. Whence is this power of the water, that it touches the body and the heart is cleansed? Whence, but because the Word operates, not in being spoken, but in being believed. This word of faith is of so great power in the Church of God, that by means of him [1] who believes and offers an infant for baptism, and by means of him who blesses and baptizes the infant, it cleanses the infant, although as yet not capable of believing unto repentance, and of making confession unto salvation. (Aug.)

4. τὸ κλῆμα οὐ δύναται καρπὸν φέρειν] Behold here the need of grace.

This truth is set at nought by those who think that they have not need of God for the performance of good works. He who imagines that he can bear fruit of himself is not in the Vine; and he who is not in the Vine is not in Christ, Who said, "Without Me ye can do nothing."

Here is a proof also of the Two Natures of Christ. If He were not man, He would not be the Vine of which we are the branches; if He were not God, He could not give grace to the branches, so that without Him they can bear no fruit. (Aug.)

6. ἐβλήθη—ἐξηράνθη] He, by severing himself from Me, is already cast out, and withered. He is the cause of his own destruction.

— συνάγουσιν αὐτά] i. e. the Angel-reapers will gather them and cast them into everlasting fire. (Alcuin.) On this use of the third person plural, see on Luke xii. 20 and Rev. xiv. 18, 19.

— εἰς τὸ πῦρ] Elz. omits τό, which is in A, G, L, M, S, and very many cursive MSS., and is emphatic, 'the fire,' which is an emblem of that fire which is reserved to the wicked, the πῦρ αἰώνιον (Matt. xviii. 8; xxv. 41).

One of two things remains for every branch: either to be in the Vine, or to be in the fire; and if we do not dwell in the Vine, we shall be cast into the fire. (Aug.)

7. ἐὰν μείνητε ἐν ἐμοί] We abide in Christ when we do what Christ commands, and love what He promises. (Aug.)

— ὃ ἐὰν θέλητε αἰτήσεσθε] They who abide in Christ can only will what He wills, viz. those things which lead to everlasting salvation. Here is the use of the Lord's Prayer; if we never decline from the words and spirit of that prayer in our own prayers, then whatever we ask shall be done for us. (Aug.)

9. καθὼς ἠγάπησέ με ὁ Πατὴρ, κἀγὼ ἠγάπησα ὑμᾶς] The Father also loves us in Christ. (Aug.) If the Father loveth us, let us be of good cheer; if the Father is thus glorified, let us bring forth much fruit. And in order that we may never faint and fall away, He adds, "Abide ye in My love;" and how? by keeping My commandments. If ye keep My commandments, ye shall abide in My love. (Chrys.) Let no one therefore deceive himself by saying that he loves Christ, when he does not obey Christ. We love Christ in the exact proportion that we keep His commandments. (Aug.) He tells us next (v. 12) what His will is that we must do. This is My commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you. (Theoph.) And hence it appears that all the commandments are rooted in Love. As the different boughs of a tree spring from the stem, so the Christian Virtues branch out from Love; and the boughs of good works have no verdure unless they abide in the root of Love. (Gregor. Hom. xxvii. in Evang.)

[1] Al. "ipsam," i. e. "Ecclesiam."

πησέ με ὁ Πατὴρ, κἀγὼ ἠγάπησα ὑμᾶς, μείνατε ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ τῇ ἐμῇ· 10 [l] ἐὰν τὰς ἐντολάς μου τηρήσητε, μενεῖτε ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ μου· καθὼς ἐγὼ τὰς ἐντολὰς τοῦ Πατρός μου τετήρηκα, καὶ μένω αὐτοῦ ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ. 11 [m] Ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν, ἵνα ἡ χαρὰ ἡ ἐμὴ ἐν ὑμῖν μείνῃ, καὶ ἡ χαρὰ ὑμῶν πληρωθῇ. 12 [n] Αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ ἐντολὴ ἡ ἐμὴ, ἵνα ἀγαπᾶτε ἀλλήλους, καθὼς ἠγάπησα ὑμᾶς· (135 IV) 13 μείζονα ταύτης ἀγάπην οὐδεὶς ἔχει, ἵνα τις τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ θῇ ὑπὲρ τῶν φίλων αὐτοῦ· (136 X) 14 [o] ὑμεῖς φίλοι μου ἐστὲ, ἐὰν ποιῆτε ὅσα ἐγὼ ἐντέλλομαι ὑμῖν· 15 [p] οὐκέτι ὑμᾶς λέγω δούλους, ὅτι ὁ δοῦλος οὐκ οἶδε τί ποιεῖ αὐτοῦ ὁ κύριος· ὑμᾶς δὲ εἴρηκα φίλους, ὅτι πάντα ἃ ἤκουσα παρὰ τοῦ Πατρός μου ἐγνώρισα ὑμῖν. 16 [q] Οὐχ ὑμεῖς μὲ ἐξελέξασθε, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ ἐξελεξάμην ὑμᾶς, καὶ ἔθηκα ὑμᾶς ἵνα ὑμεῖς ὑπάγητε καὶ καρπὸν φέρητε, καὶ ὁ καρπὸς ὑμῶν μένῃ, ἵνα ὅ τι ἂν αἰτήσητε τὸν Πατέρα ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου δῷ ὑμῖν. (137 IV) 17 Ταῦτα ἐντέλλομαι ὑμῖν, ἵνα ἀγαπᾶτε ἀλλήλους. (138 X) 18 Εἰ ὁ κόσμος ὑμᾶς μισεῖ, γινώσκετε ὅτι ἐμὲ πρῶτον ὑμῶν μεμίσηκεν. 19 [r] Εἰ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου ἦτε, ὁ κόσμος ἂν τὸ ἴδιον ἐφίλει· ὅτι δὲ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου οὐκ ἐστὲ, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ ἐξελεξάμην ὑμᾶς ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, διὰ τοῦτο μισεῖ ὑμᾶς ὁ κόσμος. (139 III) 20 [s] Μνημονεύετε τοῦ λόγου οὗ ἐγὼ εἶπον ὑμῖν, [t] Οὐκ ἔστι δοῦλος μείζων τοῦ κυρίου αὐτοῦ· (140 X) εἰ ἐμὲ ἐδίωξαν, καὶ ὑμᾶς διώξουσιν· εἰ τὸν λόγον μου ἐτήρησαν, καὶ τὸν ὑμέτερον τηρήσουσιν· (141 I) 21 [u] ἀλλὰ ταῦτα πάντα ποιήσουσιν ὑμῖν διὰ τὸ ὄνομά μου, ὅτι οὐκ οἴδασι τὸν πέμψαντά με. (142 III) 22 [v] Εἰ μὴ ἦλθον καὶ ἐλάλησα αὐτοῖς, ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ εἶχον· νῦν δὲ πρόφασιν οὐκ ἔχουσι περὶ τῆς ἁμαρτίας αὐτῶν. (143 X) 23 [w] Ὁ ἐμὲ μισῶν καὶ τὸν Πατέρα μου μισεῖ. (144 X) 24 Εἰ τὰ ἔργα μὴ ἐποίησα ἐν αὐτοῖς ἃ οὐδεὶς ἄλλος πεποίηκεν, ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ εἶχον· νῦν δὲ καὶ ἑωράκασι καὶ μεμισήκασι καὶ ἐμὲ καὶ τὸν Πατέρα μου· (145 X) 25 [w] ἀλλ' ἵνα πληρωθῇ ὁ λόγος ὁ γεγραμμένος ἐν τῷ νόμῳ αὐτῶν, Ὅτι ἐμίσησάν με δωρεάν. 26 [x] Ὅταν δὲ ἔλθῃ ὁ Παράκλητος, ὃν ἐγὼ πέμψω ὑμῖν παρὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς, τὸ Πνεῦμα τῆς

l 1 ch. 14. 15.
m ch. 17. 13. & 16. 24.
n ch. 13. 34. Eph. 5. 2. 1 John 3. 11, 16. & 4. 21. 1 Thess. 4. 9.
o ch. 14. 15. & ver. 10, 11. Matt. 12. 50. James 2. 23.
p Rom. 8. 15. Gal. 4. 1—7.
q ch. 6. 70. & 13. 18. 1 John 4. 10.
r 1 John 3. 1, 13. & 4. 5.
s ch. 13. 16. Matt. 10. 24. Luke 6. 40. t ch. 13. 16. Matt. 10. 24. Luke 6. 40. ch. 15. 20. u Heb. 12. 2—4.
v ch. 16. 3. Matt. 24. 9.
w ch. 9. 41.
w Ps. 35. 19. & 69. 5.
x ch. 14. 26. & 16. 7. Luke 24. 49.

---

12. ἵνα ἀγαπᾶτε ἀλλήλους] And so love to God and man are woven into one chain; as Euthym. says, quoted by Bloomf.:—Ὅρα δὲ θαυμασίαν σειράν. δέδεικται γὰρ, ὅτι τὸ μεῖναι ἐν τῷ Χριστῷ γίνεται ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀγαπᾶν αὐτόν· τὸ δὲ ἀγαπᾶν αὐτὸν, ἀπὸ τοῦ τὰς ἐντολὰς αὐτοῦ τηρεῖν· ἡ ἐντολὴ δὲ αὐτοῦ, ἵνα ἀγαπῶμεν ἀλλήλους· ὥστε τὸ ἀγαπᾶν ἀλλήλους, μένειν ἐν τῷ Χριστῷ ἐστι καὶ ἀγαπᾶν τὸν Θεόν· καὶ ἀναπλεγμένα πρὸς ἀλλήλους εἰσὶν ἥ τε πρὸς Θεὸν καὶ ἡ πρὸς ἀλλήλους ἀγάπη.

— καθὼς ἠγάπησα ὑμᾶς] Hence we may discern true love from false; divine love from human. Why did Christ love us? In order that we might reign with Him in glory. Let us love one another with the same view. (Aug.) To what degree did He love us? Even so as to lay down His life for us. And because He laid down His life for us, we ought to lay down our own life for the brethren (1 John iii. 16). This the Martyrs did in the fervour of their love. With one and the same love let us love God and our neighbour; let us love God for Himself, and let us love ourselves and our neighbour for God's sake. (Aug. de Trin. viii. 8.)

13. ἵνα ψυχὴν θῇ] See on x. 11.

15. οὐκέτι ὑμᾶς λέγω δούλους] 'I call you not servants.' For He hath given us power to become sons—sons of God (i. 12). And yet He will say to the blessed, "Well done, good and faithful servant" (Matt. xxv. 23). And we must call ourselves unprofitable servants (Luke xvii. 10). Thus we must be as it were servants, and yet not servants, but sons; servants without servile fear, but with that holy fear which belongs to the servant that entereth "into the joy of his Lord." And yet not servants, in casting out that slavish fear which belongs to him who "abideth not in the house for ever" (John viii. 35); and loving God as sons. (Cp. Aug.)

16. οὐχ ὑμεῖς μὲ ἐξελέξασθε] μέ is emphatic. You did not choose Me, Your Master.

He did not choose men who were already good, but He makes good those whom He has chosen. We may not say, 'I did good works before I believed, and was therefore chosen.' What good work can there be before faith? (Rom. xiv. 23.) (Aug.)

— ὅ τι ἂν αἰτήσητε—δῷ ὑμῖν] Yet even St. Paul asked, and did not receive what he asked (2 Cor. xii. 9). "Imò; sed si id quod non expedit petitur, non in nomine Jesu petitur. Jesus est Salvator. Paulus non exauditur, quia si liberaretur à tentatione, ei non proderat ad salutem." (Greg. M. hom. in Ev. xxvii.)

20. εἰ—ἐτήρησαν] which is not the case, except in some particular instances, though it ought to have been the case in all. Do not therefore despond if your preaching is rejected, when you remember what has been the reception of Mine.

— μοῦ] emphatic.

22. εἰ μὴ ἦλθον καὶ ἐλάλησα αὐτοῖς, ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ εἶχον] i. e. the sin of which they are now guilty, in rejecting Him Who came, that they might believe in Him and be saved by faith in Him. (Aug.) —δωρεάν = חִנָּם (chinnam) (Job i. 9. Ezek. vi. 10. Ps. xxxv. 16; lxix. 4), "sine causâ." See Vorst. de Hebr. p. 228.

24. οὐδεὶς ἄλλος] For they had compared the works of Moses to Christ's. (See vi. 31.) Cp. Matt. xii. 28; xvi. 1.

26. ὅταν δὲ ἔλθῃ ὁ Παράκλητος] He calls the Holy Ghost by the name of Comforter on account of His operations, because He frees from all perturbations those with whom He dwells, and imparts to them ineffable joy (see above on xiv. 16); and He is sent by the Son, not as an Angel or Prophet or Apostle is sent, but as it befits the dignity of the Spirit of God to be sent by the Wisdom and Virtue of God, with which Virtue and Wisdom the Spirit of God has the same Nature undivided and entire. The Son of God, when sent by the Father, is not separated from the Father, but remains in Him, and has the Father in Himself. And the Holy Spirit, being sent by the Son, comes forth from the Father, but does not migrate to any other place. For as the Father is not confined to place, no more is the Holy Spirit; being incorporeal, and transcending the essence of all created beings. And when the Son sends the Spirit, the Father sends Him also, since the Spirit comes by the same will both of Father and Son. (Didymus, de Spiritu Sancto, ii.)

— τὸ Πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας, ὃ παρὰ τοῦ Πατρός] Some one may inquire, whether the Spirit proceeds also from the Son? The Son is the Son of the Father, and the Father is the Father of the Son alone. But the Holy Spirit is the Spirit of both Father and Son. Hence our Lord says, "It is the Spirit of your Father that speaketh in you" (Matt. x. 20); and yet the Apostle says (Gal. iv. 6), "God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son in your hearts." And if the Spirit did not proceed from the Son, Christ would not have breathed on His Apostles and said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost" (John xx. 22). Why then did He say, "The Spirit of Truth that proceedeth from the Father? Because He ascribes what is His own to the Father, from Whom He, the Son, Himself is; as when He says, "My doctrine is not mine, but His that sent Me" (John vii. 16). (Aug. See also Origen, in Joan. tom. ii. 6.)

On the Procession of the Holy Spirit, see Bp. Andrewes, Works, iii. 262. 284; Ninth and Tenth Sermons on the Sending of the Holy Ghost; and Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. viii. pp. 489—492, and Notes; and below, xvi. 13.

ἀληθείας, ὃ παρὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς ἐκπορεύεται, ἐκεῖνος μαρτυρήσει περὶ ἐμοῦ· 27 y καὶ ὑμεῖς δὲ μαρτυρεῖτε, ὅτι ἀπ' ἀρχῆς μετ' ἐμοῦ ἐστε.

y Acts 1. 21. & 5. 32.

XVI. (146/1) 1 a Ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν, ἵνα μὴ σκανδαλισθῆτε. 2 Ἀποσυναγώγους ποιήσουσιν ὑμᾶς· ἀλλ' ἔρχεται ὥρα, ἵνα πᾶς ὁ ἀποκτείνας ὑμᾶς δόξῃ λατρείαν προσφέρειν τῷ Θεῷ. 3 b Καὶ ταῦτα ποιήσουσιν, ὅτι οὐκ ἔγνωσαν τὸν Πατέρα οὐδὲ ἐμέ. 4 c Ἀλλὰ ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν, ἵνα, ὅταν ἔλθῃ ἡ ὥρα, μνημονεύητε αὐτῶν, ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶπον ὑμῖν· ταῦτα δὲ ὑμῖν ἐξ ἀρχῆς οὐκ εἶπον, ὅτι μεθ' ὑμῶν ἤμην· (147/χ) 5 νῦν δὲ ὑπάγω πρὸς τὸν πέμψαντά με· καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐξ ὑμῶν ἐρωτᾷ με, Ποῦ ὑπάγεις; 6 ἀλλ' ὅτι ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν, ἡ λύπη πεπλήρωκεν ὑμῶν τὴν καρδίαν. 7 d Ἀλλ' ἐγὼ τὴν ἀλήθειαν λέγω ὑμῖν, συμφέρει ὑμῖν ἵνα ἐγὼ ἀπέλθω· ἐὰν γὰρ ἐγὼ μὴ ἀπέλθω, ὁ Παράκλητος οὐκ ἐλεύσεται πρὸς ὑμᾶς· ἐὰν δὲ πορευθῶ, πέμψω αὐτὸν πρὸς ὑμᾶς· 8 καὶ ἐλθὼν ἐκεῖνος ἐλέγξει τὸν κόσμον περὶ ἁμαρτίας, καὶ περὶ δικαιοσύνης, καὶ περὶ κρίσεως· 9 e περὶ ἁμαρτίας μὲν, ὅτι οὐ πιστεύουσιν εἰς ἐμέ· 10 περὶ δικαιοσύνης δὲ, ὅτι a ch. 15. 18—21. Matt. 13. 21.

b ch. 15. 21.

c Matt. 9. 15. & 24. 25. Mark 2. 19. Luke 5. 34. ch. 13. 19. & 14. 29.

d ch. 7. 39. Acts 2. 33.

e Acts 2. 22—37. 2. 33. & 4. 13—18. & 5. 26—28, 32, 33. & 7. 54, 57, 58. Eph. 4. 8.

---

27. ὑμεῖς δὲ μαρτυρεῖτε] See the proof of the truth of Christ's prophecy, and of the Comforter's power, in the wonderful change wrought in the character and conduct of St. Peter, once so infirm as to deny Christ, and yet, after the day of Pentecost, coming forward to preach Christ to those who had lately crucified Him (Acts ii. 14). (Cp. Aug.)

CH. XVI. 1. ἵνα μὴ σκανδαλισθῆτε] by your sufferings for Me (Aug.), as He had prophesied they would be (Matt. xxvi. 31).

2. ἀποσυναγώγους ποιήσουσιν ὑμᾶς] Thus our Lord prophesied that the Jews would not receive Himself preached by the Apostles, and therefore would not be true children of Abraham; and thus the natural branches would be cut off (Rom. xi. 19. 21) by putting out of the synagogues those who preached the Gospel of the true Seed of Abraham.

— ἀλλ'] 'imò.'

— λατρείαν προσφέρειν] 'to offer a sacrifice.' See Rom. viii. 36; xii. 1.

3. ποιήσουσιν] Elz. adds ὑμῖν, which is not in A, B, E, G, K, M, S, and many Cursives and Versions.

5. οὐδεὶς ἐξ ὑμῶν ἐρωτᾷ με, Ποῦ ὑπάγεις;] The disciples on hearing what they themselves were to suffer, and that they who killed them would think that they did God service, were absorbed with sorrow, and asked no such question of Christ. (Chrys.) Before this time they had asked, "Lord, whither goest Thou?" (xiii. 36,) and had heard from Him that they could not follow Him then.

He was going to heaven, to His Father, and they sought to detain Him; and He knew what was in their hearts, and that, not having yet received the spiritual presence of the Comforter, they feared to lose His own corporal presence, and were therefore sad: "Because I have said these things unto you sorrow hath filled your hearts." But He knew what was best for them, viz. the internal vision with which the Holy Spirit would comfort them, and therefore He adds, "It is expedient for you that I go away."

7. συμφέρει ὑμῖν ἵνα ἐγὼ ἀπέλθω] "For if I go not away the Comforter will not come." Christ is ever with us in His divinity; but if He had not departed from us corporally, we should always be looking carnally on His Body, and should never believe (for Faith is the evidence of things not seen, Heb. xi. 1), and so never be justified and beatified by that Faith which qualifies us to see Him as God. (Cp. Aug., Serm. 143.)

It was good for them that the "form of a servant" in which they beheld Christ present with their bodily eyes, should be removed from them, because by looking on that they might think that He was only what they saw. I, Who am "the Word made flesh," dwell in you; but I would not that you should love Me after the flesh, and so be content with only the milk of babes (1 Cor. iii. 1). Therefore I remove My Body from you; for if after a fleshly manner you cling to My flesh, you will not be capable of receiving the Spirit. (Aug., de Trin. i. 9, and Tract. xciv.)

A reproof to those who crave a carnal presence in the Holy Eucharist. See further on our Lord's speech to Mary Magdalene (xx. 17).

He says that the Holy Spirit will not come, unless He Himself departs. Why is this? Could not Christ, remaining on earth in His bodily presence, send the Holy Spirit, Who had descended on Him at His Baptism, and Who is never separated from Christ? Yes; but we cannot receive the Spirit so long as we know Christ only according to the flesh. (2 Cor. v. 16.) But when Christ disappears from our bodily sight, then the Spirit will come. When Christ had departed corporally, not only the Holy Spirit, but the Father and Son also, were present spiritually; for He said, "If a man love Me he will keep My words, and My Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him" (John xiv. 23); and "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world." (Matt. xxviii. 20.) Thus we are taught to believe in, and recognize the presence of, the Holy Trinity, in which a distinction of persons is clearly presented to us, while there is no diversity of substance. (Aug. here, and Serm. 143.)

It was predetermined in the divine counsel that each of the Three Persons of the Holy Trinity should exercise His office severally in the salvation of men. The Father sends the Son; the Son redeems them; the Holy Spirit perfects the work of salvation, by sanctifying those who are redeemed. But this several operation of each of the Three Persons would not have been so clearly manifested, unless the Son had gone away. (Euthym.)

Our Lord says, it is expedient that He should depart, or the Comforter would not come. Is then the Comforter greater than Christ? No; but Christ's acts would not be fully available for our salvation, unless the Comforter had come to perfect the work of Christ, by doing His own proper office in sanctifying those whom Christ has redeemed. Cp. St. Basil, Quæst. 69. (Maldonat.)

See also Greg. Nazian. p. 566, Orat. xxxi.—an excellent treatise on the Divine Personality and office of the Holy Ghost.

Besides, it was necessary for them to receive the gift of the Holy Ghost; and the gift of the Holy Ghost was to be a consequence of Christ's Ascension; it was to be the inauguration of His Heavenly Coronation and Royal Session in His glorified humanity at the right hand of God (Ps. lxviii. 28. Ephes. iv. 8); and the Descent of the Holy Ghost from heaven was to be the proof of His Ascension into heaven. See Bp. Andrewes, Serm. iv. on the Sending of the Holy Spirit, vol. iii. p. 163.

— ἐὰν γὰρ ἐγὼ μὴ ἀπέλθω] Elz. omits ἐγώ, which is emphatic, and found in A, E, H, K, and very many cursive MSS. and Versions.

— πορευθῶ] Shall have made My journey from you to My Father, and from earth to heaven. See above, xiv. 3.

8. ἐλέγξει] 'arguet;' convict the world in the judgment of others, if not convince it in its own. See the use of ἐλέγχω, John viii. 9. 46. 1 Cor. xiv. 24. Eph. v. 13. Jude 15. From these passages it appears that ἐλέγχειν signifies in the N. T. a process of argument, generally public, by which an offender is proved to be such, and is "pricked to the heart," and "smitten in conscience" (cp. Acts ii. 37), and put to shame, and brought to repentance by salutary rebuke and reproof, or although callous in himself, yet manifestly proved and convicted as a sinner in the eyes of others.

— ἐλέγξει τὸν κόσμον περὶ ἁμαρτίας] He will prove the world guilty of sin because they believe not in Christ. It is one thing to believe Christ, and another to believe in Him. The devils believe Him (James ii. 19), but not in Him; we believe in Christ when we hope in Christ and love Christ. (Aug.)

He will convict the world of sin, and take from the world all excuse for its unbelief, when the world sees the gift of the Holy Spirit poured forth in answer to prayers addressed to Me (Aug., Quæst. Nov. et Vet. Test. 89), and when it sees the fruits of your righteousness or justification by Faith in Me.

See Molerly on the Great Forty Days, p. 88.

He will not only convict the world of sin, in not believing the Gospel, but of sinfulness generally; by showing that it needed so great a sacrifice as My death to reconcile it to God, and that all who do not receive Me as their Saviour are yet in their sins, and in danger of perdition. Cp. Cyril. (Maldonat.)

10. δικαιοσύνης] He will convict the world of sin for its unbelief, and convince it of My Righteousness, when it sees Me accepted by the Father, and sending the Holy Ghost. And it will convince the world of your righteousness or justification through Me, when you believe in Me no longer present with you in Body. The unbeliever says, "How shall we believe in Him Whom we do not see?" Your belief will be an answer to that question; and so the faith of the believer will be a condemnation of the unbelief of the world. "Blessed are they who have not seen, and yet have believed." (John xx. 29. Cp. Aug. here, and Serm. 143.)

He will convince the world of My righteousness. I shall be condemned by the world as unrighteous. My going to the Father and reception into glory, and the outpouring of the Holy Ghost by My power, and your miracles wrought in My Name, will prove that the πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα μου ὑπάγω, καὶ οὐκ ἔτι θεωρεῖτέ με· 11 [f]περὶ δὲ κρίσεως, ὅτι ὁ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου τούτου κέκριται.

12 [g]Ἔτι πολλὰ ἔχω λέγειν ὑμῖν, ἀλλ' οὐ δύνασθε βαστάζειν ἄρτι· 13 [h]ὅταν δὲ ἔλθῃ ἐκεῖνος, τὸ Πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας, ὁδηγήσει ὑμᾶς εἰς πᾶσαν τὴν ἀλήθειαν, οὐ γὰρ λαλήσει ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ, ἀλλ' ὅσα ἂν ἀκούσῃ λαλήσει, καὶ τὰ ἐρχόμενα ἀναγγελεῖ ὑμῖν. 14 Ἐκεῖνος ἐμὲ δοξάσει, ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ ἐμοῦ λήψεται, καὶ ἀναγγελεῖ ὑμῖν. (148/III) 15 [i]Πάντα ὅσα ἔχει ὁ Πατὴρ ἐμά ἐστι· διὰ τοῦτο εἶπον, ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ ἐμοῦ λήψεται, καὶ ἀναγγελεῖ ὑμῖν. (149/X) 16 [j]Μικρὸν καὶ οὐ θεωρεῖτέ με· καὶ πάλιν μικρόν, καὶ ὄψεσθέ με· ὅτι ὑπάγω πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα. 17 Εἶπον f ch. 12. 31. Acts 26. 18. Luke 10. 18. Col. 2. 15. Heb. 2. 14.

g 1 Cor. 3. 2.
h ch. 14. 26. & 15. 26. 1 John 2. 20, 27.
i ch. 17. 10. ch. 3. 35.
j ch. 7. 33. & 12. 35. & 13. 33. & 14. 19.

---

world was guilty in condemning Me; and that I am righteous, and the cause of righteousness to others, and am accepted of God as such. (Cp. Chrys.)

— οὐκ ἔτι θεωρεῖτέ με] You will no longer continue to behold Me with the bodily eye; and yet you will continue to behold Me with faith and by spiritual illumination. For He says (xiv. 19), ἔτι μικρὸν, καὶ ὁ κόσμος με οὐκ ἔτι θεωρεῖ, ὑμεῖς δὲ θεωρεῖτέ με.

11. ὁ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου τούτου κέκριται] Has been cast out and condemned; and therefore the world, being delivered by Me from the power of Satan, has no excuse for unbelief. (Aug., Serm. 143, 144.) See above, xii. 31. Cp. Rev. xx. 9.

The Rebellion of the Prince of this world and his adherents in the world, is also judged and condemned by the obedience of the servants of Christ, even weak women and children, who show, by their love to Him, and by their courage and endurance in persecution and martyrdom, that His grace is sufficient for them, and that "His commandments are not grievous." (1 John v. 3.) The life and death of the saints is a condemnation of Satan and the world, and at the Great Day it will judge them. See 1 Cor. vi. 2, 3.

12. ἔτι πολλὰ ἔχω λέγειν ὑμῖν, ἀλλ' οὐ δύνασθε βαστάζειν ἄρτι] Heretics hence seek to derive a pretext for their false doctrines; as if their heresies were the things which Christ had then to say, and the disciples could not bear, and which were afterwards revealed by the Spirit. But how do we know what the things are which Christ had then to say, and they could not bear?

But some may say,—"Have not spiritual men some things in their doctrine, which they may withhold from carnal minds, and unfold to those that are spiritual?" Spiritual men may not withhold altogether spiritual things from the carnal (Matt. x. 27); for the Catholic Faith is to be preached to all. And yet they may not so declare them as that in their desire to bring them to the knowledge of persons who cannot receive them, they may make them rather loathe their discourse, by the truth it contains, than teach them the truth by their discourse.

But in order that we may grow in knowledge and receive the food of Christians, and in proportion as we grow may receive it more and more, we must all pray for grace from Him Who gives the increase. (Aug., Tract 66—68, who quotes 1 Cor. i. 23; ii. 6. 14; iii. 1, 2; xiv. 37. Gal. iv. 9. Heb. v. 12—14; vi. 1—12. Phil. iii. 15.)

These "many things" which the Apostles could not then bear, are not to be sought in the oral traditions of Rome, which indeed "cannot be borne" by Apostles and Apostolic men, who have the Comforter; but they are to be found in the Acts of the Apostles, the Apostolic Epistles, and the Apocalypse,—which, together with the Gospels and the Old Testament, constitute "all the truth" (v. 13. Cp. Bengel here).

Tertullian says (Præscr. Hær. 22), that heretics were "wont to allege that the Apostles were not acquainted with all Christian doctrine, or that they did not declare it fully to the world; not perceiving that, by these assertions, they exposed Christ Himself to obloquy, for having chosen men who were either ill-informed or else not honest."

This heretical allegation has been revived in recent times by the advocates of the "Doctrine of Development."

But our blessed Lord says to His Apostles, that the "Holy Spirit should teach them all things, and guide them into all the truth, and bring all things to their remembrance whatever He had said unto them." (John xiv. 26.)

He also orders them to proclaim to the world what they had heard from Him:—"What I tell you in darkness that speak ye in light; and what ye hear in the ear that preach ye upon the housetops." (Matt. x. 27.) "Teach all nations to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." (Matt. xxviii. 19.) Accordingly, St. John testifies that Christ's Disciples "have an unction from the Holy One, and know all things." (1 John ii. 20.) And St. Paul declares that he has kept nothing back from his hearers;" and has not shunned to declare unto them "all the counsel of God;" and he intimates that he would not have been "pure from their blood,"—that is, he would have been guilty of destroying their souls if he had done so (Acts xx. 20. 26, 27); and that he "uses great plainness of speech" (2 Cor. iii. 12); and "not being rude in knowledge, has been thoroughly made manifest to them in all things" (2 Cor. xi. 6. 16); and he warns all men against building "hay and stubble on the only foundation which is laid" (1 Cor. iii. 11); and says, that, "though an angel from heaven preach unto them any thing beside what he had preached unto them, and they had received from him, let him be accursed," Gal. i. 8, ἐὰν εὐαγγελίζηται, παρ' ὃ εὐηγγελισάμεθα, where remark the expression παρ' ὅ, i.e. 'besides what,' &c. These, the words of the original, are very observable, and are conclusive against the Doctrine of Development.

13. ἐκεῖνος, τὸ Πνεῦμα] Lest by the use of a neuter word Πνεῦμα, we should suppose the Spirit to be only a quality or thing, He used the word ἐκεῖνος here and v. 14, which shows Him to be a Person. (See also xiv. 26; xv. 26; xvi. 8.)

— πᾶσαν τὴν ἀλήθειαν] All the truth; all that truth which is opposed to what is false, and is alone able to save, and is necessary to salvation.

— οὐ γὰρ λαλήσει ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ] He will not speak from Himself, for the Spirit is not from the Father alone; the Son is begotten of the Father, and the Spirit proceedeth from the Father.

A question may be asked—whether the Holy Spirit proceeds also from the Son? The Son is of the Father alone; but the Holy Spirit is of the Father and the Son. (See Matt. x. 20. Gal. iv. 6. Rom. viii. 9. 11.) And there are many other passages of Scripture which evidently show that the Person in the Holy Trinity, Who is called the Holy Spirit, is the Spirit of the Father and the Son. (Aug.)

See above on xv. 26.

He shall not speak of Himself (see xiv. 10). He will speak nothing contrary to, or independently of, Me. His knowledge and Mine are one.

— τὰ ἐρχόμενα ἀναγγελεῖ ὑμῖν] He will declare to you the things that are coming to pass. A proof of the Godhead of the Holy Ghost, for no one can reveal the future but God. (Chrys., Theoph.)

14. ἐκεῖνος ἐμὲ δοξάσει] Glory is fame with praise. And yet Christ's glorification in the world does not confer any thing on Christ, but it confers something on the world, because the praise of what is good brings a benefit to those who give the praise, not to that which receives it. (Aug.)

15. καὶ ἀναγγελεῖ ὑμῖν] This Scripture shows the distinction of Persons, and co-equality of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. (Chrys., who dilates on this doctrine here.)

16. μικρὸν καὶ οὐ θεωρεῖτέ με] Compare on xiv. 19. There seems to be a difference in the sense of the θεωρεῖτε and of ὄψεσθε, as used in the Gospels; θεωρεῖν is to behold a thing present, to contemplate it (cp. v. 10); ὄπτεσθαι, to see it, or Him, appearing (Rev. i. 7.)

The primary sense of this sentence appears to be,

A little time will elapse and ye shall see Me no longer, because I shall die and be buried. And again a little time will elapse and ye shall see Me reappear, because I shall rise again, and then be visible to you.

The words, "Because I go to the Father," which are not found in B, D, L, are omitted by some Editors.

Or thus; for a short time you will see Me no longer, because I shall die, and am buried. And again, for a short time only I shall be with you, because I go to the Father.

But these interpretations (authorized by some of the Fathers, e. g. Cyril, Chrysostom, Theodor., Mops., Euthym.) do not seem to reach to the full meaning of the words,—addressed, as they appear to be, not only to the Apostles personally, but to all Christians.

We may (with Augustine, Bede, Maldonatus, and others) see in them a secondary and more comprehensive sense, as follows;

A little while will elapse, and ye will no longer continue to see Me; for I shall withdraw from you My bodily presence, by departing from you to the Father. (Cp. v. 10, where He says, "I go to the Father, and ye no longer see Me.") And again a little time will elapse, and you will see Me reappear, because I go to the Father, in whose glory I shall come again.

To adopt the words of Augustine, the time between the Ascension and the Second Advent is a little while (in comparison with Eternity), and when that little while is over, ye shall see Me again. This is a promise to the Universal Church, and when this little while is past, and Christ comes again, we shall feel how short a time it has been. (Aug.)

Ye shall see Me, because I go to the Father, i. e. because I do not die, but go to Him Who is able to enlighten you, and I will converse with you for ever. And therefore ye shall see Me here by faith, and after death by sight. And therefore He adds, "your joy no one taketh from you;" for since He liveth for ever, He is the Author to them of everlasting joy. (Theoph.) See also v. 20.

— ὅτι ὑπάγω] So A, E, G, H, K, S, and many cursive MSS. Elz. has ὅτι ἐγὼ ὑπάγω. And in v. 17, ἐγὼ, is not in A, B, L, M, and other MSS.

οὖν ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ πρὸς ἀλλήλους, Τί ἐστι τοῦτο ὃ λέγει ἡμῖν, Μικρὸν καὶ οὐ θεωρεῖτέ με· καὶ πάλιν μικρὸν καὶ ὄψεσθέ με· καὶ, ὅτι ὑπάγω πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα; 18 ᵛ Ἔλεγον οὖν, Τοῦτο τί ἐστιν ὃ λέγει, τὸ μικρόν; οὐκ οἴδαμεν τί λαλεῖ. 19 Ἔγνω οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὅτι ἤθελον αὐτὸν ἐρωτᾶν καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Περὶ τούτου ζητεῖτε μετ' ἀλλήλων, ὅτι εἶπον, Μικρὸν καὶ οὐ θεωρεῖτέ με, καὶ k ver. 33. Matt. 9. 15. Luke 6. 21.

πάλιν μικρὸν καὶ ὄψεσθέ με. 20 Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ᵏ κλαύσετε καὶ θρηνήσετε ὑμεῖς, ὁ δὲ κόσμος χαρήσεται· ὑμεῖς δὲ λυπηθήσεσθε, ἀλλ' ἡ λύπη l Isa. 26. 17.

ὑμῶν εἰς χαρὰν γενήσεται. 21 ˡ Ἡ γυνὴ ὅταν τίκτῃ λύπην ἔχει, ὅτι ἦλθεν ἡ ὥρα αὐτῆς· ὅταν δὲ γεννήσῃ τὸ παιδίον, οὐκ ἔτι μνημονεύει τῆς θλίψεως, m Luke 24. 41. Acts 13. 52. 1 Pet. 1. 8.

διὰ τὴν χαρὰν ὅτι ἐγεννήθη ἄνθρωπος εἰς τὸν κόσμον· 22 ᵐ καὶ ὑμεῖς οὖν λύπην μὲν νῦν ἔχετε· πάλιν δὲ ὄψομαι ὑμᾶς, καὶ χαρήσεται ὑμῶν ἡ καρδία, καὶ τὴν n ch. 14. 13. & 15. 16. Matt. 7. 7. & 21. 22 Mark 11. 24. James 1. 5.

χαρὰν ὑμῶν οὐδεὶς αἴρει ἀφ' ὑμῶν. (ιν) 23 ⁿ Καὶ ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐμὲ οὐκ ἐρωτήσετε οὐδέν. Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ° ὅσα ἂν αἰτήσητε τὸν Πατέρα o ch. 14. 13, 14. & 15. 7, 16. Matt. 7. 7.

ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου, δώσει ὑμῖν· 24 ἕως ἄρτι οὐκ ἠτήσατε οὐδὲν ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου· ᵖ αἰτεῖτε καὶ λήψεσθε, ἵνα ἡ χαρὰ ὑμῶν ᾖ πεπληρωμένη. (ιν) 25 Ταῦτα p ch. 17. 13. & 1. 16. & 3. 34. Eph. 4. 7. 1 Cor. 1. 4—8. Col. 2. 9, 10.

ἐν παροιμίαις λελάληκα ὑμῖν· ἀλλ' ἔρχεται ὥρα ὅτε οὐκ ἔτι ἐν παροιμίαις λαλήσω ὑμῖν, ἀλλὰ παρρησίᾳ περὶ τοῦ Πατρὸς ἀναγγελῶ ὑμῖν. 26 Ἐν ἐκείνῃ

q ch. 17. 8, 25.

τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου αἰτήσεσθε· καὶ οὐ λέγω ὑμῖν ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐρωτήσω τὸν Πατέρα περὶ ὑμῶν, 27 ᑫ αὐτὸς γὰρ ὁ Πατὴρ φιλεῖ ὑμᾶς, ὅτι ὑμεῖς ἐμὲ πεφιλήκατε, καὶ πεπιστεύκατε ὅτι ἐγὼ παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθον. 28 Ἐξῆλθον παρὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς, καὶ ἐλήλυθα εἰς τὸν κόσμον· πάλιν ἀφίημι τὸν κόσμον, καὶ πορεύομαι πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα.

29 Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, ᵛ Ἴδε νῦν παρρησίᾳ λαλεῖς, καὶ παροιμίαν r ch. 17. 8. s ch. 21. 17. Matt. 9. 4.

οὐδεμίαν λέγεις. 30 ʳ νῦν οἴδαμεν ˢ ὅτι οἶδας πάντα, καὶ οὐ χρείαν ἔχεις ἵνα τίς σε ἐρωτᾷ· ἐν τούτῳ πιστεύομεν ὅτι ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθες. (ιν) 31 Ἀπεκρίθη t Matt. 26. 31, 56. Mark 14. 27, 50.

αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ᵛ Ἄρτι πιστεύετε; 32 ᵗ ἰδοὺ, ἔρχεται ὥρα, καὶ νῦν ἐλήλυθεν, ἵνα σκορπισθῆτε ἕκαστος εἰς τὰ ἴδια, καὶ ἐμὲ μόνον ἀφῆτε· καὶ οὐκ εἰμὶ μόνος,

---

20. κλαύσετε κ. θ. ὑμεῖς] These words also, as well as the preceding, appear to have a double sense; first applicable to the Apostles personally, and next to the Church Universal, of all place and time, to the end.

First. Ye, My Apostles, shall weep, when ye see Me crucified and slain; and My enemies—the Jewish World, and Satan himself the Prince of this world, will exult over Me as conquered,—but I will raise Myself, and ascend in glory; and then you will rejoice with great joy. (Luke xxiv. 52. John xx. 20.)

Secondly. In a larger sense;—after My Ascension, even till the time of My Second Advent, My Church will be in a state of widowhood. She will weep and lament; and the World will persecute her and triumph over her. (See Rev. xi. 10.) But I shall reappear in glory, and her sorrow shall be turned into joy (Rev. xi. 12); and her light affliction, which is but for a moment, will work for her a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory (2 Cor. iv. 17); and she will be for ever with her Lord (1 Thess. iv. 17).

21. ἡ γυνὴ ὅταν τίκτῃ] ἡ γυνὴ, the woman in her womanhood, and in its peculiar sorrow (see Gen. iii. 16). On this use of the article, see on John iii. 10.—διὰ τὴν χαρὰν, for the joy; her joy, as a mother.

This verse, like the two preceding ones, has a double sense:

First, as applicable to Christ. His Resurrection was a Birth; it was a Birth from Death to Life Everlasting; a Birth which is the source of all other Births, from the death of sin to newness of life in this world; and from the Death of the Grave to a glorious Resurrection and a Blessed Immortality, in body and soul, in the life to come. The Apostolic Church (i. e. the Church of the Apostles personally) went through the throes of parturition, until the day of the Resurrection, when the Second Adam came forth from the womb of the grave; and then they no longer remembered their sorrow, for joy that a Man,—the Man Christ Jesus,—the firstbegotten from the dead (Col. i. 18. Rev. i. 18) was born. And all Humanity was born into the world with Him, for "as in Adam all die, so in Christ all are made alive." (1 Cor. xv. 22.)

In a secondary and wider sense, the Church in this world is the Woman in travail (see Rev. xii. 2. Gal. iv. 19); she is in travail with souls for the new-birth to grace and glory. She groans in the pangs of parturition even till the great Day of Regeneration, the Day of the glorious Reappearing of Christ, and the general Resurrection and new-birth to Immortality. (Rom. viii. 22.) Then, indeed, "a Man will be born into the world." Humanity will cast off its grave-clothes, and be glorified for ever in Christ.

As Augustine says, "The Church may be compared to this woman, because she brings forth children to God. Now is her time of travail; but when that time is over and her hour is come, then she will rejoice at the birth of a faithful progeny to life eternal. She is now in travail in looking for Christ, she will then be delivered when she sees Him."

Do not be surprised that you will pass from a state of sorrow to one of rejoicing. A mother passes through sorrow in order to be a mother. He thus intimates spiritually, that He Himself it is who looses the pains (ὠδῖνας, throes) of death, and brings the new man to life, never more to die. He Himself is indeed the 'Man Who is born into the world,' for by His Resurrection the new man is born,—He Who is incorruptible, Jesus Christ, our Lord. (Theoph.) Compare on Rev. xii. 5.

— τὸ παιδίον] the child which has caused her pain.

— ἄνθρωπος] 'homo;' not 'vir.'

23. οὐκ ἐρωτήσετε] You shall ask nothing, for gladness and fulness of fruition. You shall know all things, enjoy all things, and have no need of any thing.

— ὅσα ἂν αἰτήσητε τὸν Πατέρα ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου] B, C, L, X, Y, Δ, place ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι μου after δώσει ὑμῖν, and this is adopted in some editions. But the language of Scripture (xiv. 13; xv. 16; xvi. 26, &c.) and the great majority of MSS. is in favour of the received text. And it is not any prayer that obtains a favourable answer from God, but only prayer in Christ's Name; and every prayer so offered is granted, for it is offered in a spirit of submission to His Will.

They who do not believe rightly concerning Christ do not ask in His Name. (Aug.)

25. ἀναγγελῶ] A, D, K, L, M, X, Y, have ἀπαγγελῶ. But see iv. 25; xvi. 13—15.

28. ἀφίημι τὸν κόσμον, καὶ πορεύομαι πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα] Christ left the world by bodily absence, and has gone to the Father by bodily ascension, but He has not left the world which He governs with His Divine presence, just as when He came forth from the Father into the world He did not leave the Father. (Aug.)

32. σκορπισθῆτε ἕκαστος] not only in body, by deserting me personally, but also in mind, by falling away from faith in Me. This was fulfilled when He was apprehended, "and they all forsook Him and fled." Matt. xxvi. 56. (Aug.)

ὅτι ὁ Πατὴρ μετ' ἐμοῦ ἐστι. (153/X) 33 u Ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν ἵνα ἐν ἐμοὶ εἰρήνην ἔχητε. v Ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ θλῖψιν ἔχετε, ἀλλὰ θαρσεῖτε, ἐγὼ νενίκηκα τὸν κόσμον.

u ch. 14. 27.
v ver. 1, 2. ch 15. 18—20. 1 Thess. 3. 3, 4. 2 Tim. 3. 12. 1 Pet. 5. 9. Rev. 7. 14.

XVII. 1 a Ταῦτα ἐλάλησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἐπῆρε τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ εἶπε, Πάτερ, ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα· δόξασόν σου τὸν Υἱόν· ἵνα καὶ ὁ Υἱός σου δοξάσῃ σέ· 2 b καθὼς ἔδωκας αὐτῷ ἐξουσίαν πάσης σαρκὸς, ἵνα πᾶν ὃ δέδωκας αὐτῷ, δώσῃ αὐτοῖς ζωὴν αἰώνιον· 3 c αὕτη δέ ἐστιν ἡ αἰώνιος ζωὴ, ἵνα γινώσκωσί σε τὸν μόνον ἀληθινὸν Θεὸν, καὶ ὃν ἀπέστειλας Ἰησοῦν

a ch. 12. 23.
b Matt 28. 18. ch. 5. 27.
c ch. 20. 31. 1 John 4. 9, 14. & 5. 20. 1 Cor. 8. 4. ch. 6. 29, 57. & 7. 29. Jer. 9. 23, 24. & 31. 33, 34. 2 Cor. 4. 6. 2 Pet. 1. 2—4.

---

33. ἔχετε] So A, C, E, K, L, S, X, Y, and many cursive MSS. Elz. ἕξετε, but ἔχετε seems preferable. Tribulation is your portion in this life; it is what you have; suffering is your inheritance here, in order that you may reign hereafter.

— νενίκηκα] See the sublime vision in St. John's Apocalypse, vi. 2. The Victory of Christ over the World, and the Victory of Christians by means of that Victory, are themes specially appropriated to the last Evangelist St. John. See 1 John ii. 13, 14; iv. 4; v. 4. Rev. ii. 7. 11. 17. 26; iii. 5. 12. 21; xii. 11; xv. 2; xvii. 14; xxi. 7.

CH. XVII. 1. ταῦτα ἐλάλησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς] He had said that in the world they should have tribulation, and He now teaches them by His example, that in tribulation they should resort to prayer. (Chrys.)

— καὶ ἐπῆρε τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν, καὶ εἶπε] He might have prayed in silence; but He would teach us by His prayer how to believe and pray aright. This prayer, offered in the hearing of His Disciples, is designed to instruct us what our own desires, and thoughts, and actions should be. (Aug., Theoph.) — ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα] the hour of suffering; and yet in suffering Christ was glorified, so that the Centurion confessed Him to be the Son of God. (Matt. xxvii. 54. Hilary, de Trin. iii.) And if He was glorified in His passion, how much more in His resurrection! (Aug.)

— ἵνα καὶ ὁ Υἱός σου δοξάσῃ σέ] not by adding to Thy divine glory, but by making it known to all Nations by the Gospel. And as far as Christ's part was concerned, all Nations to whom it has been offered have received the Gospel; He has died for all; and has given a commission that the Gospel be preached to all. (Aug. Hilary, de Trin. iii. Chrys.)

2. ἔδωκας—δέδωκας] Observe these words frequently repeated in this Prayer (vv. 4. 6, 7, 8, 9. 11, 12. 22. 24), commemorating what Christ has received from the Father. Thus this Prayer may be regarded as an example of Thanksgiving.

How is Christ said to receive? See Hooker, V. liv., who says, "Christ is by three degrees a receiver.

"First, in that He is the Son of God;

"Secondly, in that His human nature hath had the honour of union with Deity, into that nature which is coupled with it;

"Thirdly, in that by means thereof, sundry eminent graces have flowed, as effects from Deity, into that nature which is coupled with it. On Christ, therefore, there is bestowed the gift of Eternal Generation, the gift of Union, and the gift of Unction.

"By the gift of Eternal Generation Christ hath received of the Father one, and in number the self-same substance, which the Father hath of Himself, unreceived from any other. For every beginning is a Father unto that which cometh of it; and every offspring is a Son unto that out of which it groweth. Seeing, therefore, the Father alone is originally that Deity which Christ originally is not (for Christ is God by being of God, light by issuing out of light), it followeth hereupon, that whatsoever Christ hath common unto Him with His heavenly Father, the same of necessity must be given Him, but naturally and eternally given, not bestowed by way of benevolence and favour, as the other gifts both are. And, therefore, where the Fathers give it out for a rule, that whatsoever Christ is said in Scripture to have received, the same we ought to apply only to the manhood of Christ; their assertion is true of all things which Christ hath received by grace, but to that which He hath received of the Father by eternal nativity or birth it reacheth not.

"Touching union of Deity with manhood, it is by grace, because there can be no greater grace showed towards man, than that God should vouchsafe to unite to man's nature the person of his only-begotten Son. Because, 'the Father loveth the Son' as man, He hath, by uniting Deity with manhood, 'given all things into His hands.' It hath pleased the Father that in Him 'all fulness should dwell.' The 'name' which He hath 'above all names' is given Him. 'As the Father hath life in Himself,' the 'Son in Himself hath life also' by the gift of the Father. The gift whereby God hath made Christ a fountain of life, is that 'conjunction of the nature of God with the nature of man' in the person of Christ, 'which gift,' saith Christ to the woman of Samaria, 'if thou didst know, and in that respect understand who it is which asketh water of thee, thou wouldst ask of Him that He might give thee living water.' The union, therefore, of the flesh with Deity, is to that flesh a gift of principal grace and favour. For by virtue of this grace man is really made God, a creature is exalted above the dignity of all creatures, and hath all creatures else under it."

— ἐξουσίαν σαρκός] So Matt. x. 1, ἐξουσίαν πνευμάτων.

3. ἵνα γινώσκωσι] To know, i. e. to acknowledge, love, honour, and obey, suitably to the attributes of God and Christ, which that knowledge reveals.—γινώσκειν is the Hebr. יָדַע (yadha), which not only signifies mental knowledge, but also the moral and spiritual affections, and acts consequent on it. See Buxtorf in v.

— τὸν μόνον ἀληθινὸν Θεόν] The only true God. Not that (as the Socinians say) Christ is not God. Christ is praying. He first speaks as Man; and of what is given Him as such (vv. 1, 2, and in v. 6). He then speaks of the Glory that He Himself had with the Father, before the world was; and that all things that the Father has are His (v. 10), and that He and the Father are one (ἕν, one nature and substance, vv. 11. 22). And He says that the Father is in Him, and He in the Father (v. 21). The knowledge, therefore, of the Father, as the only true God, must include the knowledge of the Son as in Him, and co-equal, co-eternal, and consubstantial with Him; and would be incomplete without it; as the knowledge of the Solar Orb includes the knowledge of the Light which beams from it.

The Father, as πηγὴ Θεότητος, may in Himself be called μόνος, and in this sense the text was understood by some in ancient times. See Hooker, quoted on v. 2, and Bp. Bull (Def. Fid. Nic. iv. 1), who says, "The ancients did not shrink from calling God the Father the one and only God, as being the principle, cause, author, and fountain of the Son. For thus the Nicene fathers themselves commence their creed: 'We believe in one God the Father Almighty,' &c. And thus subjoin, 'and in one Jesus Christ, ... God of God.' And the great Athanasius, in his Oration against the Sabellians, not far from the beginning, allows that the Father is rightly designated 'the only God, because He alone is unbegotten, and alone is the fountain of Godhead.' To his testimony I will only add that of Hilary, who, in the third book of his work on the Trinity, setting forth the passage of the Evangelist John (xvii. 3), where the Father is called 'the only true God,' writes as follows: 'Due honour is rendered by the Son to the Father,' when He says, 'Thee, the only true God;' the Son, however, does not separate Himself from the truth of Godhead when He adds, 'And Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent.' The confession of the faithful puts no interval [between Them], because in Both is the hope of life; nor is true God [head] wanting to Him, who, when They are put together, comes second in order. When, therefore, it is said, 'That they may know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent,' under this meaning, that is, 'that of Sender and Sent, the truth and Godhead of the Father and of the Son, is not distinguished under any difference of meaning or extent, but the faith of [our] religion is instructed unto the confessing of the Begetter and the Begotten.' And now to all these testimonies I will add this, by way of conclusion; that the doctrine, that in the Trinity there is only one Beginning without Beginning, even the Father, was so fixed, decreed, and established in the primitive Church, that in the forty-ninth of what are called the Apostolical Canons, he is condemned who shall baptize into 'three [Persons] without beginning,' εἰς τρεῖς ἀνάρχους. On which canon Zonaras has made this comment; 'For the Church has received to worship One without beginning, even the Father, because of His being uncaused; and one Son, because of His ineffable generation; and One Comforter, the Holy Ghost, by reason of His procession.'"

Observe, also, our Lord adds the word ἀληθινόν. This shows that He is not contemplating the Father as distinct in His Divine Nature from the Son, but as the true God, distinguished from false gods, who have no life, and cannot give it.

Thus St. Paul says, "There is none other God but One" (1 Cor. viii. 4). "And ye turned from idols to serve the living and true God" (1 Thess. i. 9. Cp. Rom. xvi. 27. 1 Tim. i. 17). And thus He shows that the distinction He makes between Himself and the Father is not in regard to Godhead but as to Manhood; as St. Paul does, when He says, "There is one God and one Mediator between God and Man, the Man Christ Jesus." (1 Tim. ii. 5.) And St. Paul calls Christ the blessed and only Potentate, King of Kings, and Lord of Lords. (1 Tim. vi. 15. Cp. Jude 4. 25, where Christ is called the only Lord.) This is the sense in which the passage is understood by Cyprian, Exhort. ad Martyr. Greg. Nazian., Orat. 4. Basil, c. Eunom. lib. v. Chrys. and Cyril here, and Theodoret in Caten. See Maldonat., who says, "verba illa 'solum verum Deum' ad Patrem referuntur, non quòd Filius excludatur, sed ut excludantur idola. Non ergo his verbis Filio et Spiritui Sancto sed Idolis Pater opponitur." St. John himself has thus explained the passage by what he says at the close of his first Epistle, which is the best comment on it: ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ ἥκει, καὶ δέδωκεν ἡμῖν διάνοιαν ἵνα γινώσκωμεν τὸν ἀληθινόν· καὶ ἐσμεν ἐν τῷ ἀληθινῷ, ἐν τῷ Υἱῷ αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦ Χριστῷ· οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ἀληθινὸς Θεὸς καὶ ἡ ζωὴ αἰώνιος· τέκνια, φυλάξατε ἑαυτοὺς ἀπὸ τῶν εἰδώλων.

Χριστόν. 4 Ἐγώ σε ἐδόξασα ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς· τὸ ἔργον ἐτελείωσα ὃ δέδωκάς d ch. 1. 1—3. & 3. 13. & 6. 62. 1 Cor. 15. 47. Phil. 2. 6, 7. Col. 1. 15—17. μοι ἵνα ποιήσω· 5 καὶ νῦν δόξασόν με σύ, Πάτερ, παρὰ σεαυτῷ, d τῇ δόξῃ e Ps. 22. 22. Heb. 2. 12. ch. 1. 18.
ᾗ εἶχον πρὸ τοῦ τὸν κόσμον εἶναι παρὰ σοί. 6 e Ἐφανέρωσά σου τὸ ὄνομα τοῖς ἀνθρώποις, οὓς δέδωκάς μοι ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου. Σοὶ ἦσαν, καὶ ἐμοὶ αὐτοὺς δέδωκας· καὶ τὸν λόγον σου τετηρήκασι. 7 Νῦν ἔγνωκαν ὅτι πάντα ὅσα f ch. 7. 16. & 16. 27, 30. ver. 25.
δέδωκάς μοι παρὰ σοῦ ἐστιν. 8 f ὅτι τὰ ῥήματα ἃ δέδωκάς μοι, δέδωκα αὐτοῖς· καὶ αὐτοὶ ἔλαβον, καὶ ἔγνωσαν ἀληθῶς, ὅτι παρὰ σοῦ ἐξῆλθον· καὶ ἐπίστευσαν g Luke 22. 32. Rom. 8. 34. Heb. 7. 25. & 9. 24. 1 John 2. 1.
ὅτι σύ με ἀπέστειλας. 9 g Ἐγὼ περὶ αὐτῶν ἐρωτῶ· οὐ περὶ τοῦ κόσμου ἐρωτῶ, ἀλλὰ περὶ ὧν δέδωκάς μοι, ὅτι σοί εἰσι· 10 h καὶ τὰ ἐμὰ πάντα σά ἐστι, καὶ
h ch. 16. 15.
τὰ σὰ ἐμά· καὶ δεδόξασμαι ἐν αὐτοῖς· 11 i καὶ οὐκ ἔτι εἰμὶ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, καὶ i ch. 10. 30. & ver. 21.
οὗτοι ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ εἰσὶ, καὶ ἐγὼ πρός σε ἔρχομαι. Πάτερ ἅγιε, τήρησον j ch. 6. 39. & 18. 9. Heb. 2. 13.
αὐτοὺς ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί σου, ᾧ δέδωκάς μοι, ἵνα ὦσιν ἓν καθὼς ἡμεῖς. 12 j Ὅτε ἤμην μετ' αὐτῶν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, ἐγὼ ἐτήρουν αὐτοὺς ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί σου· οὓς δέδωκάς μοι ἐφύλαξα, καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐξ αὐτῶν ἀπώλετο, εἰ μὴ ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀπωλείας, ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ πληρωθῇ. 13 Νῦν δὲ πρός σε ἔρχομαι, καὶ ταῦτα λαλῶ ἐν τῷ k ch. 15. 11. & 16. 24. l ch. 15. 13. 1 John 3. 13. κόσμῳ, k ἵνα ἔχωσι τὴν χαρὰν τὴν ἐμὴν πεπληρωμένην ἐν αὐτοῖς. 14 l Ἐγὼ δέδωκα αὐτοῖς τὸν λόγον σου· καὶ ὁ κόσμος ἐμίσησεν αὐτούς, ὅτι οὐκ εἰσὶν m Matt. 6. 13. 2 Thess. 3. 3. 1 John 5. 18.
ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, καθὼς ἐγὼ οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου. 15 m Οὐκ ἐρωτῶ ἵνα ἄρῃς αὐτοὺς ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, ἀλλ' ἵνα τηρήσῃς αὐτοὺς ἐκ τοῦ πονηροῦ. 16 Ἐκ τοῦ n ch. 15. 3. Ps. 119. 142. κόσμου οὐκ εἰσὶ, καθὼς ἐγὼ οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου. 17 n Ἁγίασον αὐτοὺς ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ σου· ὁ λόγος ὁ σὸς ἀλήθειά ἐστι. 18 Καθὼς ἐμὲ ἀπέστειλας o 1 Cor. 1. 2, 30. Heb. 10. 10. εἰς τὸν κόσμον, κἀγὼ ἀπέστειλα αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸν κόσμον· 19 o καὶ ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν ἐγὼ ἁγιάζω ἐμαυτόν, ἵνα ὦσι καὶ αὐτοὶ ἡγιασμένοι ἐν ἀληθείᾳ. 20 Οὐ περὶ p ch. 10. 38. & 14. 10. 1 John 1. 3. & 3. 24. τούτων δὲ ἐρωτῶ μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ περὶ τῶν πιστευόντων διὰ τοῦ λόγου αὐτῶν εἰς ἐμὲ, 21 p ἵνα πάντες ἓν ὦσι, καθὼς σὺ, Πάτερ, ἐν ἐμοὶ, κἀγὼ ἐν σοὶ, ἵνα καὶ

---

4. ἐγώ σε ἐδόξασα ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς] Here, and v. 6, the aorist is used, not the perfect; inasmuch as the work of glorification was still going on, and not to be completed before His Passion, when He would say τετέλεσται (xix. 30). Here is an answer to the objection made to the exposition of Aug., Chrys., and others, who include the Passion in this work of Glorification.

He uses the Perfect in v. 8, because the part of the work which is there described, was done.

5. νῦν δόξασόν με σὺ, Πάτερ] He prays that His human nature which He had assumed in time, may be received into that Divine Glory which He had with the Father from eternity. (Hilary, de Trin. iii. Chrys., Cyril. Cp. Iren., iii. 14.)

9. οὐ περὶ τοῦ κόσμου ἐρωτῶ] I pray not for those who live according to the lusts and vanities of the world. (Aug., Theoph.)

11. ᾧ] So A, B, C, E, H, K, L, M, S, U, X, Y, Δ, and many Cursives. Elz. οὕς. The ὄνομα here specified is not the essential divinity of Christ, but the attributes which He has by virtue of His Incarnation. These are said to be given Him by the Father. Hence St. Paul says, that God has given Him a Name above every Name, that at the Name of Jesus every knee should bow. See on Matt. xxviii. 18. John iii. 34, 35; v. 27; xiii. 3; xvii. 8. Rev. vi. 2, and above, on v. 2.

— ὦσιν ἓν] see vv. 20—22.

12. οὓς δέδωκάς μοι] It appears from this and the following words that Judas was given to the Son by the Father, and that therefore he was once in a state of salvation; and became a betrayer and murderer (ἐγένετο προδότης, Luke vi. 16) by his own will. Even after he had betrayed Christ he might have been saved by the merits of the innocent blood which he had betrayed. (Aug. in Ps. lxviii. Leo M., Serm. i. 3. 5, de Passione; and Chrys. here.) Our Lord appears to have referred to Judas here for the purpose of saying that none of His Sheep had been lost by the Shepherd, but by their own sin; and even in that there was a proof of His own truth. See next note.

On the case of Judas, see Hammond, Letter to Sanderson concerning God's grace and decrees, in Bp. Sanderson's Works, v. p. 324.

— ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀπωλείας] One who is moved by the spirit of destruction (Ἀβαδδών, Rev. ix. 11, אֲבַדּוֹן, rendered by the LXX ἀπώλεια), and who draws others to destruction, and whose end is destruction. Cp. 2 Thess. ii. 3.

It is a Hebraism, בֶּן־מָוֶת (ben-maveth), υἱὸς θανάτου (2 Sam. xii. 5. 1 Sam. xxvi. 16), בֶּן מַשְׁחִית (ben mashchith), Isa. i. 4, i. e. 'filius mortis et perditionis, qualenus morte et perditione dignus, eâque puniendus.'

Cp. Rosenmüller here, and Matt. xxiii. 15, υἱὸν γεέννης, and note on υἱοὶ νυμφῶνος (Matt. ix. 15).

— ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ πληρωθῇ] He perished in order that the Scripture might be fulfilled. But the Scripture would not have been written by God unless God had foreseen that he would perish. And this divine Prescience, though it foreknew and foretold that he would perish, did not in any way cause him to perish. Why then was this Scripture written? In order that even his perishing might be an evidence of God's foresight; and so the Traitor himself, even in the hands of Satan, and betraying Christ, might be a witness of the truth even by his perishing; and Judas, 'the son of Perdition,' might still, even in his perdition, be an Apostle of the Son of God.

14. οὐκ εἰσὶν ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου] but citizens of heaven. (Chrys.)

15. τοῦ πονηροῦ] The Evil One.

16. οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐκ τ. κ.] the order of the words in A, B, C, D, L, X, Δ, and many Versions. Elz. has ἐκ τ. κ. οὐκ εἰσι.

17. ἁγίασον αὐτοὺς ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ σου] Make them holy by the gift of the Spirit and sound doctrine. Set them apart and consecrate them as living sacrifices for Thyself. (Chrys., Theoph.)

19. ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν ἐγὼ ἁγιάζω ἐμαυτόν] Cp. John x. 11. 15. 17. Heb. ix. 14. I offer Myself as an oblation, a holy victim to Thee, that they also may be sanctified and presented as oblations to Thee.

Christ, Our Great High Priest Who offers Himself, is our Head and we His members. And as He offered Himself, so must we, according to the Apostolic saying (Rom. xii. 1): "I beseech you, brethren, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." (Chrys., Theoph.)

I sanctify or hallow Myself, My Body, as an offering for sin (Heb. x. 5), and I sanctify My Body the Church, whose members are members of Christ and are sanctified in Him. (Aug.) Cp. on xi. 55.

— ἵνα ὦσι, κ. α.] The order of the words in many of the best MSS. and Versions.

20. ἐρωτῶ μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ περὶ πιστευόντων] Elz. πιστευσόντων. But πιστευόντων, the reading of the best MSS., is preferable as signifying all believers, present at once to the Omniscience of Christ.

21. ἵνα πάντες ἓν ὦσι] On the Socinian objection drawn from these words, see above on x. 30; and cp. Athanas. c. Arian. iii. 17, pp. 449—454. For a fulfilment of this petition, see Acts iv. 32.

Our Lord does not say that we may be all one ('unum'), but that all may be one ('unum') as Thou, O Father, in Me and I in Thee are one ('unum'). The Father is in such a manner in the Son that they are 'unum' (one substance). We may be in them, but we cannot be 'unum' with them, for we are not consubstantial with them; inasmuch as the Son with the Father is God. The Father and Son are in us as God is in a temple; and we are in them as a creature is in its Creator. He adds that they may be one ('unum') in us, because our unity in Love is due not to ourselves, but to Divine Grace. (Aug., Hilary, de Trin. viii.)

αὐτοὶ ἐν ἡμῖν ἓν ὦσιν, ἵνα ὁ κόσμος πιστεύσῃ ὅτι σύ με ἀπέστειλας. 22 Καὶ ἐγὼ τὴν δόξαν ἣν δέδωκάς μοι δέδωκα αὐτοῖς, ἵνα ὦσιν ἓν, καθὼς ἡμεῖς ἕν ἐσμεν, 23 ἐγὼ ἐν αὐτοῖς καὶ σὺ ἐν ἐμοὶ, ἵνα ὦσι τετελειωμένοι εἰς ἕν, καὶ ἵνα γινώσκῃ ὁ κόσμος ὅτι σύ με ἀπέστειλας, καὶ ἠγάπησας αὐτοὺς, καθὼς ἐμὲ ἠγάπησας. 24 [q] Πάτερ, οὓς δέδωκάς μοι, θέλω ἵνα ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγὼ κἀκεῖνοι ὦσι μετ' ἐμοῦ, ἵνa θεωρῶσι τὴν δόξαν τὴν ἐμὴν ἣν δέδωκάς μοι, ὅτι ἠγάπησάς με πρὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου. (154/III) 25 [r] Πάτερ δίκαιε, καὶ ὁ κόσμος σε οὐκ ἔγνω, ἐγὼ δέ σε ἔγνων, καὶ οὗτοι ἔγνωσαν ὅτι σύ με ἀπέστειλας, (155/X) 26 καὶ ἐγνώρισα αὐτοῖς τὸ ὄνομά σου, καὶ γνωρίσω, ἵνα ἡ ἀγάπη ἣν ἠγάπησάς με ἐν αὐτοῖς ᾖ, κἀγὼ ἐν αὐτοῖς.

q ch. 12. 26. & 14. 3. 1 Thess. 4. 17. ver. 5.

r 1 Pet. 2. 23. ch. 8. 19, 49, 50. & 15. 21. & 16. 3. Rom. 3. 3, 4. Matt. 11. 25—27. ch. 6. 68, 69. & 16. 27, 30.

XVIII. (156/I) 1 [a] Ταῦτα εἰπὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐξῆλθε σὺν τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ πέραν τοῦ χειμάῤῥου τῶν Κέδρων, ὅπου ἦν κῆπος εἰς ὃν εἰσῆλθεν αὐτὸς καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ. (157/X) 2 [b] Ἤδει δὲ καὶ Ἰούδας ὁ παραδιδοὺς αὐτὸν τὸν τόπον, ὅτι πολλάκις συνήχθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐκεῖ μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ. (158/I) 3 [c] Ὁ οὖν Ἰούδας λαβὼν τὴν σπεῖραν, καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἀρχιερέων καὶ Φαρισαίων ὑπηρέτας, ἔρχεται ἐκεῖ μετὰ φανῶν καὶ λαμπάδων καὶ ὅπλων. (159/X) 4 Ἰησοῦς οὖν [d] εἰδὼς a Matt. 26. 36. Mark 14. 32. Luke 22. 39. 2 Sam. 15. 23.

b Luke 22. 39.

c Matt. 26. 47. Mark 14. 43. Luke 22. 47. Acts 1. 16.

d Matt. 16. 21.

He prays that we all may be one—"perfectly joined together in one Will and Mind and Judgment"—as He and the Father are One. Nothing is such a stumbling-block to those who learn, as discord among their teachers. How will any one be willing to listen to those who have not the same mind? Therefore Christ prays that they may be one, as He and the Father are One (Theoph., Euthym., whose words deserve to be transcribed: οὐδὲν οὕτως ἔμελλεν ἐμποδίζειν τῷ κηρύγματι, ὡς τὸ διεσχίσθαι τοὺς κήρυκας, τῇ τε διαφορᾷ τῆς πίστεως, καὶ τῇ πρὸς ἀλλήλους ἀπεχθείᾳ; Ἐπειδὴ, μαχομένων (i. e. if they strive) ἐροῦσιν (i. e. men will say) οὐκ εἰρηνικοῦ εἶναι μαθητάς· εἰ δὲ οὐκ εἰρηνικοῦ, οὐδὲ παρὰ Σοῦ ἀποστελλόντας. Ὁμογνωμονούντων δὲ, καὶ τὰς ἐντολὰς Μοῦ φυλαττόντων, γνώσονται πάντες ὅτι ἐμοὶ μαθηταί εἰσι, καὶ ὅτι Σὺ Μὲ ἀπέστειλας. Memorable words; deserving to be engraven on the minds of all Missionaries and Ministers of Christ, and of all who endeavour to promote the Missionary cause at home and abroad).

In ourselves we cannot be one, on account of our lusts and sins, which divide us, and from which we are cleansed through the One Mediator, that we may be one with Him. (Aug. de Trin. iii. 9.)

22. ἐγὼ τὴν δόξαν ἣν δέδωκάς μοι δέδωκα αὐτοῖς] He had said before (xiv. 23), We will come and make our abode with him, refuting by anticipation the heresy of Sabellius, by declaring a plurality of persons. Here He overthrows Arianism by saying that the Father comes by the Son. (Chrys.)

24. θέλω ἵνα ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγὼ κἀκεῖνοι ὦσι] He had said before (iii. 13), "No man hath ascended up to heaven but He that came down from heaven;" and what He now says is in unison with that; for our Lord is the Head of His members, and we are made one in Him. He reascends and carries us to that place whence He alone came down in Himself. (See Eph. ii. 6. Greg. Mor. xxvii. 1.)

— θεωρῶσι] 'contemplate.' See xii. 45; and on xiv. 19; xvi. 16.

25. Πάτερ δίκαιε] When our Lord prays that they may be sanctified, He says Πάτερ ἅγιε (xvii. 11); He now appeals to His Father's Justice, which will be seen in punishing the world, which refused to know Him (v. 25), and in glorifying those who are sanctified by the offering of Christ (v. 10), and who recognize that God has sent Him, and are sanctified in His truth, and will therefore be glorified with Him (v. 24).

CH. XVIII. 1. ἐξῆλθε] out of the City and its suburbs.

— τῶν Κέδρων] Its vernacular form is קִדְרוֹן (Kidron, 2 Sam. xv. 23. 1 Kings xv. 13. 2 Kings xxiii. 4), from root קָדַר (kadhar), 'niger fuit.' It flows in the valley or ravine between the City and the Mount of Olives, toward the Dead Sea. Cp. Robinson, Palestine, ii. 32. Winer, i. p. 655.

I have not ventured to follow some recent Editors here in changing this reading into τοῦ Κεδρών. I do not assert that it may not perhaps be the right reading; but that there is not sufficient evidence to justify its adoption.

The very great majority of MSS. have τῶν Κέδρων. The other reading, τοῦ Κεδρών, is only found in three uncials, A, S, Δ, and one cursive MS.

Doubtless τοῦ Κεδρών is etymologically correct (see below); though according to strict etymology it should be Κεδρών.

But it is not improbable that the Greek and Latin inhabitants of Jerusalem may have Grecized and Latinized the Hebrew Kidron into a form which gave an intelligible sense in their own languages; and so the "brook Kidron" may have been known to them as the brook τῶν Κέδρων, of Cedars.

Thus it might have been accommodated in its name to other neighbouring places, such as the Garden of Gethsemane and the Mount of Olives. It is observable that the Hebrew brook Kison has also been Grecized in like manner into χειμαῤῥοὺς τῶν Κισσῶν, or brook of Ivy. See Suidas, v. Ἰαβίν. (Cp. Bp. Middleton.)

We see this process of modification, for the sake of intelligibility, operating on the names of places in all languages. Thus Μαλόεις became first Maleventum, and then Beneventum; which no Critic would correct on etymological grounds. Thus the Euripus has been Italianized into Negro-ponte. Thus the Hebrew name of Jerusalem itself has been Grecized into Ἱερο-σόλυμα, which no one would expunge on principles of strict etymological accuracy from the pages of the New Testament.

Besides, we find the very words of the text of the MSS. here, χειμάῤῥους τῶν Κέδρων, actually used as a translation of the Hebrew 'brook Kidron' in the LXX Version of 2 Sam. xv. 23, describing David's sorrowful passage over it: πᾶσα ἡ γῆ ἔκλαιε φωνῇ μεγάλῃ· καὶ πᾶς ὁ λαὸς παρεπορεύοντο ἐν τῷ χειμάῤῥῳ τῶν Κέδρων· καὶ ὁ βασιλεὺς διέβη τὸν χειμάῤῥουν Κέδρων. Had not St. John this passage in his mind when he described the mournful transit of the Son of David over the same brook?

It may indeed be alleged that almost all the MSS. have been altered here by a blunder of the Copyists, who did not understand Hebrew, and have introduced a Greek form. But is this consistent with a due regard to the authority of the MSS.? And if we are to abandon that authority and resort for refuge to the individual opinions of a discordant criticism, where will be the Text itself? Is it not at least as probable that the four MSS. which have τοῦ Κεδρὼν here may have been altered to suit the Hebrew sense, as that the four hundred which have τῶν Κέδρων have been altered to suit the Greek? The reading τῶν Κέδρων appears also to be recommended by the usage of Josephus. He uses the form Κεδρὼν (φάραγξ κεδρῶνος, Ant. ix. 7. 3. Cp. viii. 1. 5. B. J. v. 6. 1); and every Greek reader would suppose that as Ἐλαιὼν is to be rendered Olivetum, or a place of Olives; so Κεδρὼν is Cedretum, a place of Cedars. Cp ἰτιὼν, salicetum; ῥοδὼν, rosetum; ἰὼν, violetum; μυρτὼν, myrtetum; ἀμπελὼν, vinetum; and many others.

The word Κέδρος, Cedrus, Cedar, may also be derived from the Hebrew root signifying dark; and it is by no means improbable that there were Cedars near the brook Kedron.

On the whole it seems more consistent with reverence for the sacred text, and with respect for its readers, not to disturb the reading of the vast majority of the MSS., than to insert in the Text another reading in its place upon very slender authority.

As was before observed, the name of the brook is probably here mentioned by the Evangelist in order to suggest a reference to the history of David in his passage 'over the brook Kidron' when he fled from his rebellious son (2 Sam. xv. 23). So He, Who in His sufferings was prefigured by David, now passes over it, being rejected by His own City and People.

This was the time of His Agony; and now His Passion may be said to begin. The descent into this Vale and the passage over this dark Brook was His path to light and glory. "He drank of the Brook in the way; therefore shall He lift up His head" (Ps. cx. 7). And if there was any local foundation for the Greek name, then we might venture to say that the dark boughs of the Cedars became to Him Palm branches of Victory.

— ὅπου ἦν κῆπος] The Garden of Gethsemane. (See Matt. xxvi. 36. Mark xiv. 32. Luke xxii. 40.) Our Lord's Passion began with His Agony in the Garden; and He was buried in a Garden. The first Adam fell, and we fell with him, in a Garden, in a Gan-Eden, or Garden of Delight. And we rose again with the Second Adam in the Garden of Agony and of Suffering, the Garden of Gethsemane and of Calvary, and by that we are restored to Paradise.

Our Lord was wont to teach on mountains and in gardens, places sequestered from tumults, and congenial to religious instruction. (Chrys.)

3. τὴν σπεῖραν] The band assigned by the Procurator to attend the Sanhedrim on the great Festivals; part of the garrison of the Temple. (Michaelis, Rosenmüller.) Cp. Luke xxii 52.

— φανῶν καὶ λαμπάδων] 'torches, and lights in lanterns.' (Hesyc.) πάντα τὰ ἐρχόμενα ἐπ' αὐτὸν, ἐξελθὼν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Τίνα ζητεῖτε; 5 Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ, Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον. Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἐγώ εἰμι· εἱστήκει δὲ καὶ Ἰούδας ὁ παραδιδοὺς αὐτὸν μετ' αὐτῶν. 6 Ὡς οὖν εἶπεν e Matt. 26. 53, 54. ch. 10. 18. Acts 9. 3. αὐτοῖς, Ὅτι ἐγώ εἰμι, [e] ἀπῆλθον εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω, καὶ ἔπεσον χαμαί. 7 Πάλιν οὖν αὐτὸς ἐπηρώτησε, Τίνα ζητεῖτε; οἱ δὲ εἶπον, Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον.

8 Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, Εἶπον ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἐγώ εἰμι· εἰ οὖν ἐμὲ ζητεῖτε, ἄφετε τούτους f ch. 17. 12. ὑπάγειν· 9 [f] ἵνα πληρωθῇ ὁ λόγος ὃν εἶπεν, Ὅτι οὓς δέδωκάς μοι, οὐκ ἀπώλεσα ἐξ αὐτῶν οὐδένα. (160/1) 10 Σίμων οὖν Πέτρος ἔχων μάχαιραν εἵλκυσεν αὐτὴν, καὶ ἔπαισε τὸν τοῦ ἀρχιερέως δοῦλον, καὶ ἀπέκοψεν αὐτοῦ τὸ ὠτίον τὸ δεξιόν· g Matt 20. 22. ἦν δὲ ὄνομα τῷ δούλῳ Μάλχος. (161/1) 11 [g] Εἶπεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τῷ Πέτρῳ, Βάλε τὴν μάχαιραν εἰς τὴν θήκην· τὸ ποτήριον ὃ δέδωκέ μοι ὁ Πατὴρ, οὐ μὴ πίω αὐτό;

h Matt. 26. 57. Mark 14. 53. Luke 22. 54. i Luke 3. 2. (162/1) 12 [h] Ἡ οὖν σπεῖρα καὶ ὁ χιλίαρχος καὶ οἱ ὑπηρέται τῶν Ἰουδαίων συνέλαβον τὸν Ἰησοῦν καὶ ἔδησαν αὐτὸν, (163/X) 13 [i] καὶ ἀπήγαγον αὐτὸν πρὸς Ἄνναν πρῶτον· ἦν γὰρ πενθερὸς τοῦ Καϊάφα, ὃς ἦν ἀρχιερεὺς τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου·

Lest He should escape in the darkness of the night. (Theoph.) God was veiled in the Flesh, and the Eternal Day was shrouded in humanity; and He was sought for with lanterns and torches in order that He might be slain by those who were Darkness. (Aug.)

4. ἐξελθών] Not out of the garden (see v. 26), but He came forward voluntarily from the company of the disciples.

6. ἀπῆλθον εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω, καὶ ἔπεσον χαμαί] On the effects of our Lord's aspect and demeanour see note on Mark x. 32.

A single word from Christ threw them prostrate,—them who were armed and exasperated against Him. Since when He was about to be judged He did this, how great will be His power and majesty when He comes to judge? He Who did this when about to die, what will He do when reigning in Glory? (Cp. Aug., Chrys.)

In order that no one might say that Christ tempted the Jews to commit the sin of taking Him, by delivering Himself into their hands, the Gospel records how He did every thing that might have deterred them from doing so. (Chrys.)

10. τὸν δοῦλον] 'the servant.' So in all the Evangelists. The Article does not seem to imply (as some have thought) that the person struck was a special officer in command over the rest, but it marks Peter's boldness He whom he struck was not an ordinary person, but in the service of the High Priest. It distinguishes the person struck from all who were not servants of the High Priest. See this use of the Article iii. 10. It is certain that this servant was not the only servant of the High Priest that was in the Garden (see v. 26); and therefore he is not distinguished here from other servants, but from those who were not servants of the High Priest.

— Μάλχος] The names of Peter and Malchus are mentioned only by St. John; St. Peter being now dead. Cp. Matt. xxvi. 51. Mark xiv. 47. Luke xxii. 50.

11. μάχαιραν] Elz. adds σου, which is not in the best MSS.

— τὸ ποτήριον ὃ δέδωκέ μοι ὁ Πατὴρ, οὐ μὴ πίω αὐτό;] An expression explained by the Prayer recited in the other Gospels,—Matt. xxvi. 39. Mark xiv. 36. Luke xxii. 42.

The cup which His Father gave Him is that to which the Apostle refers (Rom. viii. 32),—"He spared not His own Son, but freely gave Him for us all." And yet He Who drank the cup gave to Himself the cup; for the same Apostle says, "Christ loved us, and hath given Himself for us." Ephes. v. 2. (Aug.)

12. ἔδησαν αὐτόν] The binding of our Lord is mentioned by St. John alone. They bound Him Who came to loose all from the chains of Satan and of sin (Luke iv. 18), and "to bind the strong man in his house" (Matt. xii. 29).

13. Ἄνναν] St. John omits for the most part what had been already narrated by the former Evangelists, and here he does not describe the leading of our Lord to Caiaphas (Matt. xxvi. 57. Mark xiv. 53. Luke xxii. 54), except by the single word πρῶτον, which intimates that our Lord was led to Annas before He was led to Caiaphas, and by saying (v. 24) ἀπέστειλεν αὐτὸν ὁ Ἄννας δεδεμένον πρὸς Καϊάφαν τὸν ἀρχιερέα.

Some attempts have been made (e. g. by Meyer, and see above on Luke xxii. 54) to prove a discrepancy here between St. John and the other Evangelists, as if he asserted that the interrogatory examination of our Lord and one of Peter's denials took place in the house of Annas, whereas they describe it as in that of Caiaphas. But cp. John xviii. 18, with Mark xiv. 54. 67. Luke xxii. 55, 56. From the mention of the fire, it appears that all the Evangelists are speaking of one and the same place; which is described as the palace of the High Priest by Matt. xxvi. 58, compared with Mark xiv. 53. Luke xxii. 54.

St. John here calls the place into which our Lord was brought as the αὐλὴ τοῦ ἀρχιερέως (v. 15), and it is evident that by that word he means Caiaphas. See v. 24, ἀπέστειλεν αὐτὸν ὁ Ἄννας δεδεμένον πρὸς Καϊάφαν τὸν ἀρχιερέα. But it may be asked, If the events narrated in vv. 15—18, and the conversation recorded by St. John in vv. 19—23, did not take place in the house of Annas, why is the leading to Annas mentioned at all? The reason seems to be, that St. John designed to show that our Lord passed through all the successive stages of interrogation that were possible under the circumstances; and that the Jewish Nation, by all its Representatives, made itself responsible for His condemnation and crucifixion.

Annas was an important person, being High Priest de jure, and the head of the sacerdotal order. (See on Luke iii. 2.) Our Lord is brought bound to him, and Annas does nothing to release Him. On the contrary, he sends Him on bound to Caiaphas (v. 24), whose murderous counsel and intentions he must have known; and therefore St. John refers to them here (v. 14; cp. xi. 49). And thus Annas, the High Priest de jure, adopts the policy of the High Priest de facto, and makes himself responsible for it. This was a sufficient reason for the mention of the leading to Annas first.

The next stage of interrogation was before Caiaphas, described here by St. John, and by him only (vv. 19. 23). This took place before daybreak, and before the Sanhedrim had been assembled in the palace of the High Priest.

As soon as it was day they came together at the High Priest's house (Luke xxii. 66, cp. with John v. 28); and then, at that meeting of the Sanhedrim, at which Caiaphas presided, our Lord went through the next process of interrogation described by the first three Evangelists (Matt. xxvi. 57—68. Mark xiv. 53—65. Luke xxii. 67—71) in the High Priest's palace, and not mentioned by St. John, as being already known from their Gospels. The next stage of proceeding is the arraignment before Pilate, mentioned by all the Evangelists; and with full particulars, supplementary to those of the former three, by St. John. (Matt. xxvii. 1, 2. 11—23. Mark xv. 1—15. Luke xxiii. 1—5. John xviii. 28—38; xix. 1—16.) The next is before Herod. (Luke xxiii. 6—12.)

Thus from the narratives of the Evangelists taken together, it appears that all the authorities of Judæa and Galilee, Civil and Ecclesiastical, Roman and Jewish, Rulers and People, were concerned in the condemnation of Christ, and were responsible for it.

It is true that some of the Fathers understand the narrative in vv. 13—23 to describe what took place before Annas, and not Caiaphas. Thus Aug.: "Explicat quod in domo Annæ de trinâ ejus negatione contigerat." But Aug. supposes that Annas and Caiaphas were together at the same place, "in domo Annæ quo ad audiendum Jesum ambo convenerant." See also Aug., de Consensu Evang. iii. 20. Chrys. says on v. 24, εἶτα μηδὲ οὕτως εὑρίσκοντές τι πλέον πέμπουσιν αὐτὸν δεδεμένον πρὸς Καϊάφαν. But he also supposes Caiaphas to have been in the same place with Annas. He says of Peter after this, ἔτι θερμαίνεται, and that our Lord looked upon him διὰ βλέμματος ἀνιστᾶς, and that all the Evangelists ὁμοφώνως περὶ αὐτοῦ ἀνέγραψαν. And so Theophyl.

This is clearly stated by Euthymius, who says (on Matt. xxvi. 58, p. 545), "The three Evangelists say that Peter denied his Master thrice in the court-yard of Caiaphas; but John says that it was in that of Annas, his father-in-law. There is no discrepancy here; for both had one house and one court-yard, which had in it two separate establishments."

St. Cyril (p. 1030) adopts the opinion which is expressed in the Syriac and Arabic Versions, and in our own,—viz. ἀπεσταλθαι τὸν Ἰησοῦν παρὰ τοῦ Ἄννα πρὸς τὸν Καϊάφαν, and that the interrogation in vv. 19—22 was before Caiaphas. St. John, when he wrote his Gospel, knew what had been written by the other Evangelists in their Gospels. He knew that they had related that St. Peter denied his Master three times in the house of the High Priest; and St. John's narrative is to be construed accordingly. In no case does any one of the Four Evangelists speak of the house or court-yard of Caiaphas, or of the house or court-yard of Annas; they speak only of the house and court-yard of the High Priest. The three denials took place in the official residence of the High Priest. There is some probability in the opinion above expressed by Euthymius, that Annas and Caiaphas dwelt together in that house; at least, it is not unlikely that they were both together in the sacerdotal palace on that important occasion.

14 [k] ἦν δὲ Καϊάφας ὁ συμβουλεύσας τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, ὅτι συμφέρει ἕνα ἄνθρωπον ἀπολέσθαι ὑπὲρ τοῦ λαοῦ. (164/IV) 15 [l] Ἠκολούθει δὲ τῷ Ἰησοῦ Σίμων Πέτρος, καὶ ὁ ἄλλος μαθητής· (165/X) ὁ δὲ μαθητὴς ἐκεῖνος ἦν γνωστὸς τῷ ἀρχιερεῖ, καὶ συνεισῆλθε τῷ Ἰησοῦ εἰς τὴν αὐλὴν τοῦ ἀρχιερέως· (166/I) 16 [m] ὁ δὲ Πέτρος εἱστήκει πρὸς τῇ θύρᾳ ἔξω. (167/X) Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ μαθητὴς ὁ ἄλλος, ὃς ἦν γνωστὸς τῷ ἀρχιερεῖ, καὶ εἶπε τῇ θυρωρῷ καὶ εἰσήγαγε τὸν Πέτρον. (168/I) 17 Λέγει οὖν ἡ παιδίσκη ἡ θυρωρὸς τῷ Πέτρῳ, Μὴ καὶ σὺ ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν εἶ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τούτου; λέγει ἐκεῖνος, Οὐκ εἰμί. (169/X) 18 Εἱστήκεισαν δὲ οἱ δοῦλοι καὶ οἱ ὑπηρέται, ἀνθρακιὰν πεποιηκότες ὅτι ψῦχος ἦν, καὶ ἐθερμαίνοντο· ἦν δὲ μετ' αὐτῶν ὁ Πέτρος ἑστὼς καὶ θερμαινόμενος. 19 Ὁ οὖν ἀρχιερεὺς ἠρώτησε τὸν Ἰησοῦν περὶ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, καὶ περὶ τῆς διδαχῆς αὐτοῦ. (170/I) 20 [n] Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, [o] Ἐγὼ παῤῥησίᾳ ἐλάλησα τῷ κόσμῳ· ἐγὼ πάντοτε ἐδίδαξα ἐν συναγωγῇ καὶ ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, ὅπου πάντοτε οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι συνέρχονται, καὶ ἐν κρυπτῷ ἐλάλησα οὐδέν. (171/X) 21 Τί μὲ ἐπερωτᾷς; ἐπερώτησον τοὺς ἀκηκοότας, τί ἐλάλησα αὐτοῖς· ἴδε οὗτοι οἴδασιν ἃ εἶπον ἐγώ. (172/I) 22 [p] Ταῦτα δὲ αὐτοῦ εἰπόντος, εἷς τῶν ὑπηρετῶν παρεστηκὼς ἔδωκε ῥάπισμα τῷ Ἰησοῦ εἰπών, Οὕτως ἀποκρίνῃ τῷ ἀρχιερεῖ; (173/X) 23 Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Εἰ κακῶς ἐλάλησα, μαρτύρησον περὶ τοῦ κακοῦ· εἰ δὲ καλῶς, τί με δέρεις; (174/I) 24 [q] Ἀπέστειλεν αὐτὸν ὁ Ἅννας δεδεμένον πρὸς Καϊάφαν τὸν ἀρχιερέα. (175/I) 25 [r] Ἦν δὲ Σίμων Πέτρος ἑστὼς καὶ θερμαινόμενος· εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ, Μὴ καὶ σὺ ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ εἶ; ἠρνήσατο ἐκεῖνος καὶ εἶπεν, Οὐκ εἰμί. 26 Λέγει εἷς ἐκ τῶν δούλων τοῦ ἀρχιερέως, συγγενὴς ὢν οὗ ἀπέκοψε Πέτρος τὸ ὠτίον, Οὐκ ἐγώ σε εἶδον ἐν τῷ κήπῳ μετ' αὐτοῦ; 27 Πάλιν οὖν ἠρνήσατο Πέτρος, καὶ εὐθέως ἀλέκτωρ ἐφώνησεν.

k ch. 11. 50.
l Matt. 26. 58. Mark 14. 54. Luke 22. 54.
m Matt. 26. 69.
n ch. 7. 26. Luke 4. 15. Matt. 26. 55.
o ch. 7. 14, 25, 26, 28. Matt. 4. 23. & 9. 25. & 13. 54. Mark 1. 31, 39. Luke 4. 15, 16, 44.
p Jer. 20. 2. Acts 23. 2.
q Matt. 26. 57. Mark 14. 53. Luke 22. 54.
r Matt. 26. 69. Mark 14. 66. Luke 22. 55.

---

15. ὁ ἄλλος μαθητής] One of the various modes of speech by which St. John,—who seems anxiously to avoid the mention of his own name in the Gospel,—describes himself. See v. 16, and xx. 2, 3, 4. 8.

In his humility he loves to describe himself as a disciple (see here, 15, 16, and xxi. 23, 24),—the disciple whom Jesus loved (xix. 26, 27; xx. 2; xxi. 7. 20). The adjunct ὁ ἄλλος, 'the other,' seems to have been adopted with reference to St. Peter. It first occurs in connexion with him, xviii. 15, 16; cp. xx. 2, 3, and would be very intelligible to the Christian world from the History of the Acts of the Apostles, where he and St. Peter are constant companions, and is an edifying record of their fraternal affection in the discipline of Christ. Cp. Bp. Middleton here.

The word μαθητὴς never occurs in the Epistles. After the Day of Pentecost the Disciples had become Teachers.

— αὐλήν] court-yard, open to the sky, probably paved; hence perhaps the fire kindled in it (v. 18); a rectangular area, entered from the street by a προαύλιον (Mark xiv. 68), and πυλὼν (Matt. xxvi. 71), in which was a θύρα (v. 16).

The interrogation before Caiaphas and the Sanhedrim appears to have taken place in an apartment raised above the ground, and looking, with a large open window, into the αὐλή. St. Peter was beneath, in the αὐλὴ or court-yard (Mark xiv. 66), when our Lord looked down upon him from the audience-chamber. (Luke xxii. 61.)

This was the scene of St. Peter's triple denial. "Una in aulâ Pontificis, quanquàm in diversis ejus locis, ter negavit Christum Petrus." (Bengel.)

16. ἐξῆλθεν ὁ μαθητὴς—τὸν Πέτρον] St. John would not claim for himself the credit of courage above the rest; and he would also intimate that he himself might take to himself some share in St. Peter's sin, in not reminding him of our Lord's warning to him, and in bringing him into a place of temptation, after that warning which he had heard.

— τῷ ἀρχιερεῖ] B, C, L, X, have τοῦ ἀρχιερέως, received by Tisch. and Alf.

17. καὶ σύ] 'thou also.' It seems that she knew some one else there present (viz. St. John) to be Christ's disciple. Did St. John boldly confess it?

19. περὶ τῶν μαθητῶν] A reason for St. Peter's fear.

20. ἐν συναγωγῇ] So the best MSS. Elz. has ἐν τῇ. He taught in the Temple, and "in Synagogue;" i. e. in Synagogues, generally.

21. μέ] emphatic.

23. ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς] What more true, mild, and just, than this answer? He Who received the blow was He Who created the world, and might have consumed with fire or earthquake him who gave it. He was able to do this. The world was made by Him; but He preferred to teach us patience, by which the world is overcome.

It may be asked here, why did not Christ follow His own precept, to him that smiteth Him on the one cheek turn the other also? (Matt. v. 39. Luke vi. 29.)

He did so in spirit. For He replied mildly, and gave His cheek to the smiter (Isa. l. 6), and His body to them that pierced it and nailed it to the cross. He thus showed us that His precepts of patience are not to be followed so much by visible exhibition of the body, as by the spiritual preparation of the heart, "non ostentatione corporis, sed præparatione cordis." An angry man may turn, in sullenness, the other cheek visibly to the smiter; better is he who makes a true answer with mildness, and prepares his heart in peace to endure greater sufferings. (Aug.)

24. ἀπέστειλεν] 'sent.' This is not an instance of an aorist for a pluquam perfectum (though for clearness' sake it is properly rendered had sent, in the Authorized Version), but it is an example of a mode of speech very common in the N. T., according to which the writer goes back to a previous point, and writes from it.

The full meaning is, Annas sent Him bound to Caiaphas, when Annas sent Him to that interrogation which I have described (vv. 15—23), and to that more formal trial which has been already fully described by the three former Evangelists. The emphatic word is δεδεμένον, in chains. See on v. 13. It makes Annas responsible for the acts of Caiaphas. It shows that the indignities done to Christ (v. 22) were done to Him bound. It suggests a reason for St. Peter's fears, which led so soon to the denial. It anticipates the objections which have been made on the ground of alleged discrepancy between St. John and the other Evangelists. It shows that the first denial did not take place when our Lord was before Annas (as might have been, perhaps, supposed from v. 17, compared with v. 13), but as the other Evangelists had related, in the court-yard of the High Priest. So ἴδησαν, Matt. xiv. 3. John iv. 45, 46; vi. 16; ix. 18; xi. 30; xiii, 12; xix. 23; xxi. 9. Acts i. 2; v. 24. Winer, Gr. Gr. § 40. p. 246.

Elz. has οὖν after ἀπέστειλεν, but this is not in A, D, E, K, M, S, V, Y.

25. εἶπον οὖν] An example of the manner in which St. John's Gospel reconciles seeming discrepancies in the preceding ones.

Matthew says (xxvi. 71), ἄλλη λέγει.

Mark says (xiv. 69), ἡ παιδίσκη (the same as before, not ἄλλη) ἤρξατο λέγειν.

Luke says (xxii. 58), ἕτερος (a man, not a maiden). Here are three accounts of three different persons doing the same thing.

John reconciles them all by his εἶπον οὖν, each and all did so.

— ἠρνήσατο] Observe, Christ is denied, not only by those who deny Him to be Christ, but by those who deny themselves to be Christians. Our Lord did not say to Peter, thou shalt deny thyself to be My Disciple, but, thou shalt deny Me. St. Peter, then, denied Christ when he said, "I am not His disciple." (Aug.) We deny Christ, by speaking and acting in a manner unbecoming the disciples of Christ. (Cp. Aug.)

27. πάλιν οὖν ἠρνήσατο—ἐφώνησεν] See the prediction of the

(176/I) 28 s Ἄγουσιν οὖν τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἀπὸ τοῦ Καϊάφα εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον· ἦν δὲ πρωΐ· καὶ αὐτοὶ οὐκ εἰσῆλθον εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον, ἵνα μὴ μιανθῶσιν, t ἀλλ' ἵνα φάγωσι τὸ πάσχα. (177/IX) 29 Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ Πιλάτος πρὸς αὐτοὺς καὶ εἶπε, Τίνα κατηγορίαν φέρετε κατὰ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τούτου; 30 Ἀπεκρίθησαν καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Εἰ μὴ ἦν οὗτος κακοποιὸς, οὐκ ἄν σοι παρεδώκαμεν αὐτόν. 31 Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Πιλάτος, Λάβετε αὐτὸν ὑμεῖς, καὶ κατὰ τὸν νόμον ὑμῶν κρίνατε αὐτόν. Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, Ἡμῖν οὐκ ἔξεστιν ἀποκτεῖναι οὐδένα· 32 u ἵνα ὁ λόγος τοῦ Ἰησοῦ πληρωθῇ, ὃν εἶπε σημαίνων ποίῳ θανάτῳ ἤμελλε ἀποθνήσκειν. (178/I) 33 v Εἰσῆλθεν οὖν εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον πάλιν ὁ Πιλάτος, καὶ ἐφώνησε τὸν Ἰησοῦν καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Σὺ εἶ ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων; (179/X) 34 Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ σὺ τοῦτο λέγεις, ἢ ἄλλοι σοί εἶπον περὶ ἐμοῦ; 35 Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Πιλάτος, Μήτι ἐγὼ Ἰουδαῖός εἰμι; τὸ ἔθνος τὸ σὸν καὶ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς παρέδωκάν σε ἐμοί· τί ἐποίησας; 36 Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, w Ἡ βασιλεία ἡ ἐμὴ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου· εἰ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου ἦν ἡ βασιλεία ἡ ἐμὴ, οἱ ὑπηρέται ἂν οἱ ἐμοὶ ἠγωνίζοντο, ἵνα μὴ παραδοθῶ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις· νῦν δὲ ἡ βασιλεία ἡ ἐμὴ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐντεῦθεν. (180/IV) 37 Εἶπεν οὖν

s Matt. 27. 1. Mark 15. 1. Luke 23. 1. Acts 10. 28. & 11. 3.
t Matt. 26. 17.
u Matt. 20. 19. Mark 10. 33. Luke 18. 32.
v Matt. 27. 11. Mark 15. 2. Luke 23. 3.
w ch. 6. 15. Dan. 2. 44, 45. & 7. 13, 14, 27. Rev. 11. 15.

Divine Physician accomplished, and the presumption of the human patient convicted. The latter had said, "I will lay down my life for Thy sake;" the other, "Before the cock crow thou shalt deny Me thrice." But what wonder that God should prophesy what was true, and man presume what is false? (Aug.)

All the Evangelists narrate the denial of Peter, not for the sake of blaming him, but in order to instruct us how dangerous it is to trust in ourselves, and not in God. (Chrys.)

28. εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον] of Pilate, the Roman Procurator. See on Matt. xxvii. 2.

— ἵνα μὴ μιανθῶσιν, ἀλλ' ἵνα φάγωσι τὸ πάσχα] Had not the Passover been eaten on the preceding day? Had not our Lord Himself eaten the passover? And if He did eat it, did He not eat at the right time? or did He anticipate the time by a day, and eat it on the day before it was eaten by the Jews?

To these questions it has been replied by Lightfoot (ii. p. 610), and many others, that by φαγεῖν τὸ πάσχα, St. John here does not mean to eat the Paschal Lamb, but to eat the Chagigah, or festive thank-offering at the Passover. Deut. xvi. 2, 3. 2 Chron. xxxv. 8, 9.

But this is not the proper signification of the words, and has no example in the Gospels (cp. Mark xiv. 12), and it has not been shown that the Chagigah was eaten on the fifteenth day.

How then are these words to be explained?

It appears (from Matt. xxvii. 1, 2. Mark xv. 1. Luke xxiii. 1) that they who led our Lord to Pilate were "the Chief Priests and Elders," "the whole Council."

Now it would seem that they had been continually engaged during the whole of the preceding afternoon, in taking counsel how they might kill Jesus. See Matt. xxvi. 3. 14. 47. 50—66. Mark xiv. 10, 11. Luke xxii. 1—6. 52. John xviii. 3.

In a word, they seem to have been so eager to kill Him Who was the Evangelical Passover, that they had no time to go the Temple to kill the Levitical Passover, and to go to their own houses to eat it.

This appears to be the true solution of the difficulty.

It has already been suggested by Eusebius (de Paschate, in Mai. Coll. Vat. iv. p. 216). See above, note on Luke xxii. 1. Compare also Chrysostom, who says (on Matt. xxvi. 56) that our Lord ate the Passover at the right time; but the High Priest, and those who were with him, spent their time in plotting against Christ during the night when they ought to have eaten the Passover; and they would not enter Pilate's Hall (John xviii. 28), that they might afterwards eat it; and so they broke the Law in their malignant zeal against Christ.

Thus, also, we see there was something strikingly prophetic in our Lord's words. "Did not Moses give you the Law, and yet none of you keepeth the Law? Why go ye about to kill Me?" (John vii. 19.)

The Priests, perhaps, pleaded for themselves, and quieted their consciences, by the pretext that they were engaged in doing God service by putting Christ to death, and therefore might be excused for postponing their Paschal meal to another day.

There seems to be a confirmation of this opinion in St. Luke's words, ἵν' ᾖ ἕδει θύεσθαι τὸ πάσχα (xxii. 7).

It is well said by Leo (Serm. lvi. p. 126), that the Institution of the Christian Passover was the consummation of the Levitical Passover; and in that, Christ represented His own Passion, at the time when the Levitical Passover was slain; and that He kept the Passover, and consummated the Passover, while the Chief Priests in their impious haste to kill Him Who is the true Passover, neglected to keep the Passover. "Oportebat enim ut manifesto implerentur effectu, quæ diu fuerunt figurato promissa mysterio; ut ovem significativam Ovis vera removeret, et ut uno expleretur Sacrificio variarum differentia victimarum. Nam omnia illa, quæ de immolatione Agni divinitùs per Mosen fuerant præstituta, Christum prophetaverant, et Christi occisionem propriè nunciaverant.

"Ut ergo umbræ cederent corpori, et cessarent imagines sub præsentiâ veritatis, antiqua observantia novo excluditur Sacramento, hostia in Hostiam transit, Sanguine sanguis aufertur, et legalis festivitas, dum mutatur, impletur.

"Unde cùm scribas et seniores populi ad impietatis concilium Pontifices congregarent, omniumque animos sacerdotum cura admittendi in Jesum sceleris occupasset, ipsi se doctores legis lege privarunt, et spontaneo defectu ritus sibi patrios sustulerunt. Incipiente enim festivitate Paschali, qui ornare templum, mundare vasa, victimas providere et legitimis purificationibus sacratiorem diligentiam adhibere debuerant, parricidalis odii furore concepto, ad unum opus vacant et in unum facinus simili crudelitate conjurant. Quid assecuturi supplicio innocentiæ, condemnatione justitiæ, nisi ut et nova mysteria non apprehenderent, et antiqua violarent?

"Providentibus ergo principibus, ne in die sancto tumultus oriretur, non devotioni, sed facinori studebatur; nec religioni serviebat hæc cura, sed crimini. Diligentes enim Pontifices et soliciti sacerdotes seditiones turbarum fieri in præcipuâ solennitate metuebant, non ut populus non peccaret, sed ne Christus evaderet.

"At Jesus consilii sui certus, et in opere paternæ dispositionis intrepidus, vetus testamentum consummabat, et novum Pascha condebat. Discumbentibus enim Discipulis ad edendam mysticam cœnam, cùm in Caiaphæ atrio tractaretur quomodò Christus posset occidi, ille Corporis et Sanguinis sui ordinans Sacramentum docebat qualis Deo hostia deberet offerri."

Similarly, be it observed, that the Chief Priests violated the holy rest of the great Paschal Sabbath by going into Pilate's presence, and begging a watch of Roman soldiers, and going to the sepulchre with the soldiers to seal it (Matt. xxvii. 62—66), while the faithful women were resting on the Sabbath-day, "according to the Commandment" (Luke xxiii. 56), and while Christ rested in the grave.

"They went not in lest they should be defiled." O impious blindness! they are afraid of being defiled by the hall of a heathen judge, and yet do not fear to shed the blood of their own innocent Brother, who is the Lord of Life! (Aug.)

He, the good Shepherd—the true Abel, offered an acceptable sacrifice to God; they, like Cain, were rejected, and slew their brother, and have been driven out from the presence of the Lord.

30. εἰ μὴ ἦν οὗτος κακοποιός] Let those be examined on whom Christ worked His miracles of mercy; those who were delivered by Him from evil spirits, the blind to whom He gave sight, the dead raised by Him to life, and those who before were ignorant, to whom He gave true wisdom; let them be asked whether He is a malefactor? But what Jesus had before prophesied by the Psalmist (Ps. xxxviii. 20), is now fulfilled. "They also that reward evil for good are against Me." (Aug.)

31. ἡμῖν οὐκ ἔξεστιν ἀποκτεῖναι οὐδένα] Because the power of life and death was now taken away from them by the Romans; and because they wished to show that His crime was against Cæsar and the government, and that He was setting up a rival kingdom to theirs, and ought therefore to suffer by a Roman punishment, viz. crucifixion, and so become more infamous. Thus our Lord's prophecy was fulfilled, signifying by what manner of death He should die (Chrys.), viz. "Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of Man shall be delivered unto the Chief Priests, and unto the Scribes; and they shall condemn Him to death, and shall deliver Him to the Gentiles." (Mark x. 33.) The Son of Man shall be delivered to be crucified. (Matt. xxvi. 2.)

See Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. iv. ("Suffered under Pontius Pilate"), p. 305.

36. ἡ βασιλεία ἡ ἐμὴ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου] Our Lord would first show the vanity of the opinion,—whether of Gentiles or of Jews,—that He was guilty of death for aspiring to an earthly dynasty, and that therefore it was necessary for them to take αὐτῷ ὁ Πιλάτος, Οὐκοῦν βασιλεὺς εἶ σύ; Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς· (181 IX) Σὺ λέγεις ὅτι βασιλεύς εἰμι ἐγώ. Ἐγὼ εἰς τοῦτο γεγέννημαι, καὶ εἰς τοῦτο ἐλήλυθα εἰς τὸν κόσμον, [x] ἵνα μαρτυρήσω τῇ ἀληθείᾳ· [y] πᾶς ὁ ὢν ἐκ τῆς ἀληθείας ἀκούει μοῦ τῆς φωνῆς. (182 IX) [38] Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Πιλάτος, Τί ἐστιν ἀλήθεια; καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν πάλιν ἐξῆλθε πρὸς τοὺς Ἰουδαίους, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, [z] Ἐγὼ οὐδεμίαν αἰτίαν εὑρίσκω ἐν αὐτῷ. (183 IV) [39] [aa] Ἔστι δὲ συνήθεια ὑμῖν, ἵνα ἕνα ὑμῖν ἀπολύσω ἐν τῷ πάσχα· βούλεσθε οὖν ἀπολύσω ὑμῖν τὸν βασιλέα τῶν Ἰουδαίων; (184 I) [40] [bb] Ἐκραύγασαν οὖν πάλιν πάντες λέγοντες, Μὴ τοῦτον, ἀλλὰ τὸν Βαραββᾶν· ἦν δὲ ὁ Βαραββᾶς λῃστής.

x 1 Tim. 6. 13. Rev. 1. 5. & 3. 14. ch. 14. 6.
y ch. 6. 45. & 7. 17. & 8. 47. & 10. 26, 27. Matt. 17. 5. 1 John 3. 19. & 4. 6. & 5. 20.
z ch. 19. 4, 6. Matt. 26. 60. aa Matt. 27. 15—17. Mark 15. 6—11. Luke 23. 17—19.
bb Acts 3. 14.

XIX. (185 IV) [1] [a] Τότε οὖν ἔλαβεν ὁ Πιλάτος τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ ἐμαστίγωσε. [2] Καὶ οἱ στρατιῶται πλέξαντες στέφανον ἐξ ἀκανθῶν ἐπέθηκαν αὐτοῦ τῇ κεφαλῇ, καὶ ἱμάτιον πορφυροῦν περιέβαλον αὐτὸν, [3] καὶ ἔλεγον, Χαῖρε, ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων· καὶ ἐδίδουν αὐτῷ ῥαπίσματα. (186 IX) [4] Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν πάλιν ἔξω ὁ Πιλάτος, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, Ἴδε, ἄγω ὑμῖν αὐτὸν ἔξω, ἵνα γνῶτε ὅτι ἐν αὐτῷ οὐδεμίαν αἰτίαν εὑρίσκω. (187 IV) [5] Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἔξω φορῶν τὸν ἀκάνθινον στέφανον, καὶ τὸ πορφυροῦν ἱμάτιον. Καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, Ἴδε, ὁ ἄνθρωπος. (188 I) [6] [b] Ὅτε οὖν εἶδον αὐτὸν οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ ὑπηρέται, ἐκραύγασαν λέγοντες, Σταύρωσον, σταύρωσον αὐτόν· (189 X) λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Πιλάτος, Λάβετε αὐτὸν ὑμεῖς καὶ σταυρώσατε, ἐγὼ γὰρ οὐχ εὑρίσκω ἐν αὐτῷ αἰτίαν. (190 IX) [7] Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, (191 X) [c] Ἡμεῖς νόμον ἔχομεν, καὶ κατὰ τὸν νόμον ἡμῶν ὀφείλει ἀποθανεῖν, [d] ὅτι ἑαυτὸν Υἱὸν Θεοῦ ἐποίησεν.

a Matt. 27. 26. Mark 15. 15. & 10. 34. Isa. 50. 6.
b Acts 3. 13.
c Lev. 24. 16. Matt. 26. 65. ch. 5. 18. & 10. 33.
d ch. 5. 18. & 10. 32, 33.

(192 IV) [8] Ὅτε οὖν ἤκουσεν ὁ Πιλάτος τοῦτον τὸν λόγον μᾶλλον ἐφοβήθη, [9] καὶ εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον πάλιν, καὶ λέγει τῷ Ἰησοῦ, Πόθεν εἶ σύ; Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἀπόκρισιν οὐκ ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ. (193 X) [10] Λέγει οὖν αὐτῷ ὁ Πιλάτος, care lest His kingdom should be imagined to supplant theirs. He replies as follows: Hear this, ye Jews and Gentiles; I do not impede your domination in the world. What do you desire more? Come ye by faith to that kingdom which is not of this world. For what is Christ's kingdom but the kingdom of those who believe in Him, and to whom He says, ye are not of or from this world (cp. John xv. 19; viii. 23; xvii. 14. 16), although He wills that they shall be in the world? (John xvii. 15.)

---

Therefore He does not say, "My kingdom is not in this world," but it is not of—not derived from—this world. But His kingdom is in this world, and the world is ruled by Him; and He orders every thing here as He wills, and His kingdom will so remain to the end. (Aug.)

Is not Christ King of the world? Certainly. He does not say that He does not rule here, but that His power came from above, and is not human, but far more glorious. How then was He seized and taken by a worldly power? By His own free-will, and because He delivered Himself, and is greater than any earthly kingdom, for He adds, "if My kingdom were from this world My servants would have fought in My behalf;" thus showing the weakness of all earthly kingdoms, because they derive their strength from the swords of their servants; whereas His kingdom is from above, and is self-existing, and needs no such aid. Since, then, His kingdom is greater than any earthly kingdom, it was an act of His own free-will to deliver Himself up to an earthly power.

He does not say, My kingdom is not in this world, for He governs the world, and disposes all things in it according to His Will; but it is not derived from beneath but from above, and it is from everlasting. (Chrys., Theoph.)

This passage has been abused by some, alleging that Christ is not identical with the Creator of the world. Why, then, did St. John say of Christ, "He came to His own, and His own received Him not?" (John i. 11.)

But when Christ says, My kingdom is not from hence, He does not deprive the world of His providence and pre-eminence, but declares that His kingdom is not a human or corruptible kingdom. (Chrys.)

He says that He does not need the exercise of earthly power in His behalf; but He does not say that earthly power needs not to be so exercised. On the contrary, since He is King of kings, and Lord of lords, it needs His aid, protection, and blessing, which it cannot have, unless it be exercised in dependence on His grace, in obedience to His law, for the promotion of His glory, for the advancement of His kingdom, and for the propagation of His Gospel through the world.

— νῦν—ἐντεῦθεν] νῦν is conclusive here—not an adverb of time.

37. οὐκοῦν βασιλεὺς εἶ σύ;] 'Art thou a king then?' Thou, so despised and insulted by Thine own people? Thou a King!

— σὺ λέγεις] Thou speakest the truth in saying, that a King am I: I, even such as I am now.

On σὺ λέγεις, see Matt. xxvi. 25. 64; xxvii. 11.

— ἀκούει μοῦ τῆς φωνῆς] Observe μοῦ emphatic, hears My Voice; not that of others; not that of a whole People clamouring, as now, for My crucifixion.

38. τί ἐστιν ἀλήθεια;] As if ἀλήθεια and βασιλεία, truth and policy, had little connexion; a heathen notion, the speech of Pilate.

39. ἀπολύσω ὑμῖν] So A, B, D, K, L, U, X, Y.—Elz. ὑμῖν ἀπολύσω.

CH. XIX. 1. ἐμαστίγωσε] See on Matt. xxvii. 26. Luke xxiii. 16. Pilate did this and what follows, that the Jews, being satisfied with the infliction of these injuries, might desist from pursuing their rage further, even to His death. (Aug.)

2. στέφανον ἐξ ἀκανθῶν] A crown of thorns for a royal diadem; and the purple robe for that purple attire which is worn by kings. (Bede.)

When thou readest this, meditate on the King of the world and the Lord of Angels bearing these contumelies in silence, and do thou imitate Him. (Chrys.) See on Matt. xxvii. 28.

Thus the prophecies concerning Christ were accomplished. Thus martyrs have been trained to bear all things from their persecutors. Thus the kingdom which is not of this world has conquered the world; not by fierceness of fighting, but by patience of suffering. (Aug.)

3. καὶ ἔλεγον] B, L, U, X, and some cursive MSS., have καὶ ἤρχοντο πρὸς αὐτὸν καὶ ἔλεγον.

— ἐδίδουν—ῥαπίσματα] 'were smiting Him'—a repeated act.

5. Ἴδε, ὁ ἄνθρωπος] 'Behold the man!' Though you reject Him as a king, yet spare Him as a man, now so abject and afflicted. His ignominy waxes hot, let then your malignity wax cold. (Aug.)

6. αὐτόν] Omitted by Elz., but in A, D, K, M, S, V, X, Y, Δ; and it is emphatic: Release Barabbas, crucify Him. See how often αὐτὸν is repeated by the Evangelist in this chapter,—Him even Him,—the Prince of Life!

7. ἑαυτὸν Υἱὸν Θεοῦ ἐποίησεν] Υἱὸν Θεοῦ. So the best MSS. Elz. has Υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ. He was before charged with making Himself a King. He had a right to both dignities; for He is the Only-begotten Son of God, and God has set Him as a King upon the Holy Hill of Sion. (Ps. ii. 6.)

9. ἀπόκρισιν οὐκ ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ] Pilate had been told before by Jesus, My kingdom is not of this world; and to this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness to the truth. (John xviii. 37.) The Roman Judge ought therefore to have resisted the Jews, and to have delivered Jesus from them; but he yielded to their malice, and therefore Jesus now holds His peace, for Pilate's questions are idle and vain. Since also the works of Jesus witnessed of Him, He would not win him by words. We find that our Lord was silent at various times in this hour of trial; and thus He fulfilled the prophecy, "As a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so opened He not His mouth." Is. liii. 7. (Aug.)

Ἐμοὶ οὐ λαλεῖς; οὐκ οἶδας ὅτι ἐξουσίαν ἔχω σταυρῶσαί σε, καὶ ἐξουσίαν ἔχω ἀπολῦσαί σε; 11 [e] Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς, [f] Οὐκ εἶχες ἐξουσίαν οὐδεμίαν κατ' ἐμοῦ, εἰ μὴ ἦν σοι δεδομένον ἄνωθεν· διὰ τοῦτο ὁ παραδιδούς μέ σοι μείζονα ἁμαρτίαν ἔχει. 12 Ἐκ τούτου ἐζήτει ὁ Πιλάτος ἀπολῦσαι αὐτόν. [g] Οἱ δὲ Ἰουδαῖοι ἔκραζον λέγοντες, Ἐὰν τοῦτον ἀπολύσῃς, οὐκ εἶ φίλος τοῦ Καίσαρος· πᾶς ὁ βασιλέα ἑαυτὸν ποιῶν ἀντιλέγει τῷ Καίσαρι. 13 Ὁ οὖν Πιλάτος ἀκούσας τούτων τῶν λόγων ἤγαγεν ἔξω τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ ἐκάθισεν ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος εἰς τόπον λεγόμενον Λιθόστρωτον, Ἑβραϊστὶ δὲ Γαββαθᾶ. (194/I) 14 Ἦν δὲ παρασκευὴ τοῦ πάσχα, ὥρα δὲ ὡς ἕκτη, καὶ λέγει τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, Ἴδε, ὁ βασιλεὺς ὑμῶν. (196/X) 15 Οἱ δὲ ἐκραύγασαν, Ἆρον, ἆρον, σταύρωσον αὐτόν. Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Πιλάτος· Τὸν βασιλέα ὑμῶν σταυρώσω; Ἀπεκρίθησαν οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς, Οὐκ ἔχομεν βασιλέα εἰ μὴ Καίσαρα. (196/I) 16 [h] Τότε οὖν παρέδωκεν αὐτὸν αὐτοῖς ἵνα σταυρωθῇ.

[i] Παρέλαβον δὲ τὸν Ἰησοῦν καὶ ἀπήγαγον· (197/I) 17 [j] καὶ βαστάζων τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ ἐξῆλθεν εἰς τὸν λεγόμενον Κρανίου τόπον, ὃς λέγεται Ἑβραϊστὶ

e Luke 22. 53. ch 7. 30.
f Matt. 26. 53.
g Luke 23. 2.
h Matt. 27 32. Mark 15. 22. Luke 23. 33.
i Matt. 27. 31—33. Mark 15. 20—22. Luke 23. 26, 32, 33.
j Lev. 15. 35. Heb. 13. 12.

10. ἐμοὶ οὐ λαλεῖς;] Mihine non respondes? Mihi, Legato Cæsaris!

— ἐξουσίαν ἔχω σταυρῶσαί σε, καὶ ἐξουσίαν ἔχω ἀπολῦσαί σε] Thus Pilate pronounces sentence of condemnation on himself; for if he had power to do both, why did he condemn Him Whom he had pronounced innocent? (Chrys.)

11. οὐκ εἶχες ἐξουσίαν οὐδεμίαν κατ' ἐμοῦ, εἰ μὴ ἦν σοι δεδομένον ἄνωθεν] As the Apostle says (Rom. xiii. 1), there is no power but of God. What thou doest is by God's permission, but do not therefore imagine thyself to be innocent; he therefore adds what follows,

— ὁ παραδιδούς μέ σοι, μείζονα ἁμαρτίαν ἔχει] 'He that delivereth (ὁ παραδιδούς) Me to thee hath the greater sin.' Thou, therefore, hast some sin. But he that delivereth Me to thee (i. e. the Jews and Judas) hath a greater sin than thine, because they have had more opportunities of knowing the truth; thou art a heathen, but they are favoured of God; thy power is limited; thou art not altogether free to do as thou wilt, and thou actest from fear of the displeasure of Cæsar, under whose authority and power thou art placed by God; but they act from malice and envy. Therefore their sin is greater than thine. (Cp. Chrys., Aug., Theoph.)

It is a sin to deliver an innocent man to death from fear; but it is a greater sin to deliver Him through envy than from fear; theirs is therefore a greater sin than thine; but do not thou imagine that thine is no sin because theirs is greater than thine. Lest Pilate, having heard the words "if it were not given thee from above," should imagine that he himself was blameless, He adds these words, "although it is given from above (i. e. given by Myself), yet he that betrayed Me has a great sin, and thou hast a sin likewise." Therefore Pilate was moved, and sought to release Him. (Cp. Chrys.)

All power is from above, i. e. from Christ (see Matt. xxviii. 18); for, "by Him were all things created, that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers: all things were created by Him and for Him." (Col. i. 16.)

And since the knowledge which Judas, the Chief Priests, and the Jews had of God, was greater than what Pilate, a heathen, could have, therefore they who delivered Jesus to Pilate, and clamoured for His destruction, sinned more heinously than Pilate, who "strove to release Him," and would have done so but for them.

Therefore the greater is the abuse of civil power, in Christian lands, if it be not used for Christ and His Gospel; and how great is the sin if it be used against Him!

12. ἐκ τούτου ἐζήτει ὁ Πιλάτος ἀπολῦσαι] That he might not be guilty of condemning the innocent. (Aug.) — ἑαυτόν] So A, D, E, G, L, M.—Elz. αὐτόν.

13. τούτων τῶν λόγων] So the best MSS. Elz. has τοῦτον τὸν λόγον.

— βήματος] βῆμα, suggestum, or judicial tribunal. Pilate, when he administered justice, appears to have been set upon it. And this pavement was called gabbatha, from the Hebr. גַּבָּה (gabhah), elevari; from its height,—making the Judge, seated on high, conspicuous and audible to the people.

There seems to be, in St. John's mind, a contrast between the Tribunal of Pilate, before which Christ stood, and the glorious high Throne of God, with its pavement of sapphire (Exod. xxiv. 10), and the Throne of Christ, before which Pilate and the World will stand. (Rev. xx. 11, 12. Cp. Rev. iv. 2. 6.)

— Λιθόστρωτον] A tessellated or Mosaic pavement; such as was common in the mansions of Roman patricians and magistrates in Italy and the provinces. See Plin. N. H. xxxvi. 25. Horat. Ep. i. 10. 19. "Opus tessellatum ex parvulis coloris varii lapidibus quadratis constabat, quibus solum pavimenti incrustabatur. Scilicet luxus cùm Romæ invaluisset, inter multa alia munditiarum genera, etiam hoc indè à Sullæ temporibus usu receptum est, ut beatiores in ædibus suis pavimenta tessellata et sectilia facienda curarent. Hoc verò luxûs genus etiam ad provincias pervenit. Ac Julius Cæsar quidem ipsa sectilia marmorisque crustas et tesseras in expeditionibus circumferebat, ut quoties locus castris ponendis esset dimetiendus, hisce marmoreis crustis Prætorium sterneretur. Sueton. V. Cæs. c. 46. Tale ergo pavimentum, cui tribunal impositum erat, extra Prætorium h. l. intelligendum est." (Kuin.)

— Ἑβραϊστί] A word used by St. John twice in the history of the Crucifixion; see v. 17, Ἑβραϊστὶ Γολγοθᾶ. It occurs in one other place in the Gospels, John v. 2, Ἑβραϊστὶ Βηθεσδά. How striking is the contrast! After His works of mercy at their Bethesdas they brought Him to Gabbatha and Golgotha! And this was done by Ἑβραῖοι, the favoured people of God!

14. παρασκευή] It has been erroneously inferred by some from these words that the Passover was on the next day. But the true meaning is,—"It was the preparation for the Sabbath of the Passover." Hence St. Mark calls it προσάββατον, Mark xv. 42. See also Matt. xxvii. 62. Luke xxiii. 54. Christ's death is the true preparation for the Sabbath, or rest of eternity. It was on the sixth day of the week, on which day they made the preparation for the Sabbath, as it is said, "On the sixth day they shall prepare that which they bring in, and it shall be twice as much as they gather daily" (Exod. xvi. 5).

On the sixth day of the week the First Adam was created, and on the seventh day God rested from His works. On the sixth day of the week, Christ, the Second Adam, dies for man; and by His death man was created anew, and on the seventh day He rests in the grave.

— ὥρα δὲ ὡς ἕκτη] 'six in the morning.' St. Mark says (xv. 25) that it was ὥρα τρίτη, or nine o'clock, when they crucified Him; so that there were three hours between the hearing before Pilate and the Crucifixion.

St. John reckons his hours (as we do) from midnight to noon, and from noon to midnight. See above on iv. 6, and Lee on Inspiration, pp. 383, 384; and Wieseler, Chron. Synop. 410—414.

15. οὐκ ἔχομεν βασιλέα εἰ μὴ Καίσαρα] Thus they rejected the kingdom of God; and armed against themselves, by God's retributive justice, the kingdom of Cæsar, by which their own kingdom and nation were overthrown. And so, by murdering Christ, they brought on themselves that doom which they thought, in their worldly policy, by murdering Him to avoid. (John xi. 48.) Such are the fruits of expediency!

16. ἀπήγαγον] Six uncial MSS. and many cursives have ἤγαγον, which has been received by Griesb. and Scholz. Others omit καὶ ἀπ.

17. βαστάζων τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ ἐξῆλθεν εἰς—Γολγοθᾶ] The Jews deemed the cross an accursed thing, and would not touch it, but laid it on Jesus. Thus they fulfilled the type, according to which Isaac, the son of Abraham, bare the wood. (Gen. xxii. 6, 7.) And as Isaac was released and the ram was offered up, so Christ's divine nature remained impassible, but in His humanity He suffered for the world. (Chrys., Theoph.)

Mysterious spectacle! A bitter mockery in the eyes of Unbelief,—a divine mystery in the eye of Faith! Infidelity sees there a King bearing a cross instead of a sceptre; Faith sees Christ bearing the wood on which He would first offer Himself, and which He would afterwards plant on the diadems of kings; which would be scorned by the impious, but in which the saints would glory. And as conquerors bear their own trophies, so Christ bears the symbol of His own victory. (Aug., Chrys.)

The Cross, when erected on Golgotha, became a Tribunal. There the Judge sat in the midst between the two thieves; the one malefactor, believing, was acquitted; the other, who railed on Him, condemned. And thus Christ showed what He will do hereafter at the Great Day with the quick and dead, some of whom He will set on His right hand and bless,—the others on His left He will condemn. (Cp. Aug.)

See above on Matt. xxvii. 28. Luke xxiii. 33.

Γολγοθᾶ, (198/1)ᵖ 18 ὅπου αὐτὸν ἐσταύρωσαν, ᵏ καὶ μετ' αὐτοῦ ἄλλους δύο ἐντεῦθεν καὶ ἐντεῦθεν, μέσον δὲ τὸν Ἰησοῦν. (199/1) 19 ¹ ᵛΕγραψε δὲ καὶ τίτλον ὁ Πιλάτος, καὶ ἔθηκεν ἐπὶ τοῦ σταυροῦ· ἦν δὲ γεγραμμένον ΙΗΣΟΥΣ Ο ΝΑΖΩΡΑΙΟΣ Ο ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥΣ ΤΩΝ ΙΟΥΔΑΙΩΝ. (200/X) 20 Τοῦτον οὖν τὸν τίτλον πολλοὶ ἀνέγνωσαν τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ὅτι ἐγγὺς ἦν ὁ τόπος τῆς πόλεως ὅπου ἐσταυρώθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς· καὶ ἦν γεγραμμένον Ἑβραϊστὶ, Ἑλληνιστὶ, Ῥωμαϊστί. 21 ᵛΕλεγον οὖν τῷ Πιλάτῳ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς τῶν Ἰουδαίων, Μὴ γράφε, Ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἀλλ' ὅτι ἐκεῖνος εἶπε, Βασιλεύς εἰμι τῶν Ἰουδαίων. 22 Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Πιλάτος, ᵃΟ γέγραφα, γέγραφα. (201/I) 23 ᵐ Οἱ οὖν στρατιῶται, ὅτε ἐσταύρωσαν τὸν Ἰησοῦν, ἔλαβον τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐποίησαν τέσσαρα μέρη, ἑκάστῳ στρατιώτῃ μέρος, καὶ τὸν χιτῶνα· ἦν δὲ ὁ χιτὼν ἄῤῥαφος, ἐκ τῶν ἄνωθεν ὑφαντὸς δι' ὅλου. 24 ⁿ Εἶπον οὖν πρὸς ἀλλήλους, Μὴ σχίσωμεν αὐτὸν, ἀλλὰ λάχωμεν περὶ αὐτοῦ τίνος ἔσται· ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ πληρωθῇ ἡ λέγουσα, Διεμερίσαντο τὰ ἱμάτιά μου ἑαυτοῖς, καὶ ἐπὶ τὸν ἱματισμόν μου ἔβαλον κλῆρον. Οἱ μὲν οὖν στρατιῶται ταῦτα ἐποίησαν· (202/X) 25 ᵒ εἱστήκεισαν δὲ παρὰ τῷ σταυρῷ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἡ ἀδελφὴ τῆς μητρὸς αὐτοῦ, Μαρία ἡ τοῦ Κλωπᾶ, καὶ Μαρία ἡ Μαγδαληνή. 26 Ἰησοῦς οὖν ἰδὼν τὴν μητέρα, καὶ τὸν μαθητὴν παρεστῶτα ὃν ἠγάπα, λέγει τῇ μητρὶ αὐτοῦ, Γύναι, ἰδοὺ ὁ υἱός σου. 27 Εἶτα λέγει τῷ μαθητῇ, Ἰδοὺ ἡ μήτηρ σου. Καὶ ἀπ' k Matt. 27. 38. Mark 15. 27, 28. Luke 23. 32, 33.

1 Matt. 27. 37. Mark 15. 26. Luke 23. 38.
m Matt. 27. 35. Mark 15. 24. Luke 23. 34.
n Ps. 22. 18.
o Matt. 27. 55, 56. Mark 15. 40, 41. Luke 23. 49.

— Γολγοθᾶ] See on Matt. xxvii. 33. Luke xxiii. 33.

19. Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων] All the Four Evangelists mention the Inscription on the Cross; and no two of them set it down in precisely the same words. (Cp. Matt. xxvii. 37. Mark xv. 26. Luke xxiii. 38. John xix. 19.) Hence it has been argued by some, that there are inaccuracies in the Gospels: and that, whatever we may say of their spirit, yet the letter of the Evangelical History could not have been under the superintending care and guardianship of the Holy Ghost, and could not have been suggested and dictated by Him.

As to the question of veracity,—if there were any contradictions in the recitals of the superscription in the several Gospels, or if any one of them had professed to give every word of the inscription, then, indeed, it must be allowed that the charge of inaccuracy is proved. But this is not the case. In this and in other particulars one Evangelist tells more than another; but no one of the Evangelists contradicts what any other of them has said. And therefore it is not true that their reports, if literally taken, are incompatible with each other. This is clear from an inspection and comparison of the several recitals: οὗτός ἐστιν Ἰησοῦς ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων (Matt.). ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων (Mark). ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων οὗτος (Luke). Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων (John). From all which, taken together, we may conclude that none of them has given the whole; and that the τίτλος was as follows: οὗτός ἐστιν Ἰησοῦς Ναζωραῖος ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων.

Why has none of them set down the whole of the Title? Why has each of the Four given a portion of it? Why is that portion not the same as that which any of the other three has given? Doubtless there were good reasons for this; reasons which, we need not hesitate to say, are known to the Holy Ghost, Who inspired them.

May not one reason be, that in this remarkable example we might have a rule for directing our own reasonings concerning the parallelisms in the Gospels; that we should look upon each of the Four Gospels by itself as perfectly true, and truly perfect, and yet as having a relation to the other three, and lending its aid to consummate the One Fourfold Gospel?

May not another reason be, that we should not confine our attention to one of the Four Gospels, but examine and compare them all; and that our faith and patience, our humility and diligence, should be tried by this exercise of examination and comparison; that it should be our moral probation; that our tempers should be tested thereby; and that it should be seen whether we ourselves have the spirit of the Gospel? If we have that spirit, then we shall not speak of discrepancies in it, but shall see one of the clearest proofs of its Divine Unity and Truth, in the various forms in which the same substance is presented to the inward eye. See above, in the Preface to this volume.

— ὁ Ναζωραῖος] The Man who is the Branch. (See on Matt. ii. 23.) Then, at the Crucifixion, The Branch was grafted on the Tree of the Cross (ξύλον), and by virtue thereof, the Cross of death, planted in the Garden of Calvary, became a Tree of Life in Paradise; and its leaves are for the healing of the Nations (Rev. xxii. 2).

— ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων] But is not Christ also King of the Gentiles? Yes. (Ps. ii. 8.) And in Christ's cross the wild olive becomes a partner in the fatness of the olive; all are grafted together in Him. Christ is King of the Jews—of all who are the true seed of Abraham, the children of promise, the sons of God; the Israel of God, not according to the circumcision of the flesh, but of the heart; not in the letter, but in the spirit, whose praise is not of men, but of God (Rom. ii. 28, 29. Cp. Gal. iv. 26). Cp. Aug.

20. ὁ τόπος τ. π.] So the best MSS. Elz. has τ. π. ὁ τ.

— Ἑβραϊστὶ, Ἑλληνιστὶ, Ῥωμαϊστί] i. e. in the three languages which were then eminent above all others; the Hebrew, for God's law; the Greek, for human wisdom; the Latin, for the Empire, then almost universal—of Rome. (Aug.)

See on Luke xxiii. 38.

22. ὃ γέγραφα, γέγραφα] O unspeakable power of divine operation working even in the hearts of those who know it not! A mysterious voice whispered silently to Pilate what had been before prophesied in the Psalms. (Here is a reference to the title prefixed to Ps. lvi. lvii. lviii. in the Septuagint.) Pilate wrote what he wrote, because God had said what He said. (Aug.)

The Jewish nation prophesied in Caiaphas, its official Representative (xi. 51); and the Roman world prophesied in Pilate, its supreme Magistrate in Judæa; God prophesied in them, unwitting and unwilling, and proclaimed Jesus to be the Christ.

23. τέσσαρα μέρη] The quadripartite outer garment or ἱμάτιον of Jesus may be regarded as emblematic of the Church in its Universality; extended to the four quarters of the earth, and diffused equally in all places; wherefore He says that He will send His angels to gather His elect from the four winds (Matt. xxiv. 31). (Aug.)

23, 24. ἦν δὲ ὁ χιτὼν ἄῤῥαφος—μὴ σχίσωμεν αὐτόν] The inner garment, or tunic, or coat, which was without seam and was not rent, is an emblem of the Church in its Unity, girt with the zone of charity (Col. iii. 14). (Aug. Cp. Cyprian, de Unit. Eccl. 7.)

25. Μαρία—Κλωπᾶ] "sc. γυνὴ, Maria Clopæ uxor. Clopas non confundendus cum Cleopa, cujus Luc. xxiv. 18 mentio fit. Nomen enim Κλωπᾶς Hebraicam originem prodit, sed Κλεόπας Luc. l. c. est nomen Græcum contractum ex Κλεόπατρος, ut Ἀντίπας ex Ἀντίπατρος." (See note on Luke xxiv. 18.) It is almost certain that Clopas is the same as Alphæus; but perhaps he may be the same also as Cleopas in St. Luke.

"Clopas est idem qui aliàs vocatur Alphæus. Nam Maria Clopæ uxor, Matth. xxvii. 56 dicitur, mater Jacobi et Josis, ut Marc. xv. 40, sed Matth. x. 3. Marc. iii. 17, 18, Jacobus Alphæi filius, memoratur inter Apostolos. v. et ad Matth. xiii. 55. Nomina autem Clopas et Alphæus derivantur è communi fonte, Hebraicâ nempe scripturâ, quâ nomen viro erat חלפי, quod dupliei modo efferri poterat Chalpai et Chlopai. Priorem pronuntiationem sequuntur Matth. et Marc. abjectâ, more Græcorum, adspiratione orientali, et additâ terminatione Græcâ ος, unde Ἀλφαῖος, veluti Hagg. i. 1, ubi οἱ ὁ. חגי efferunt Ἀγγαῖος. Posteriorem sequitur Johannes, qui habet Κλωπᾶς, ח mutato in κ, ut חסד 2 Paralip. xxx. 1, ab Alexandrinis effertur per Φασέκ." (Kuin.)

26. γύναι, ἰδοὺ ὁ υἱός σου] Our Lord at His death on the cross made a private testament as well as a public one. He bequeathed the offices of love to His disciple and His mother. (Ambrose, Epist. ad Vercell.) He provided at His death another son for her from whom He had taken human flesh; caring for her as Man for His Mother. (Aug.)

He says γύναι, woman,—the same address as He had used at Cana of Galilee, when He wrought His first miracle as God (ii. 4). But He no longer says now, "What have I to do with thee?" for "His hour," the hour of His Humanity, which He had derived from her, and in which He suffered for all men, is now come.

Cp. above, note on ii. 4. See the following note. These two passages are the best comments on each other.

27. ἀπ' ἐκείνης τῆς ὥρας] This is 'the hour' of which our Lord had spoken at the marriage of Cana in Galilee, "Woman, what have ἐκείνης τῆς ὥρας ἔλαβεν αὐτὴν ὁ μαθητὴς εἰς τὰ ἴδια. (206/IV) 28 p Μετὰ τοῦτο p Ps. 69. 21. Luke 18. 31. & 22. 37. Acts 13. 29. εἰδὼς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ὅτι πάντα ἤδη τετέλεσται, ἵνα τελειωθῇ ἡ γραφὴ, λέγει, Διψῶ.

ver. 30.
29 q Σκεῦος ἔκειτο ὄξους μεστόν· οἱ δὲ πλήσαντες σπόγγον ὄξους, καὶ ὑσσώπῳ q Matt. 27. 48.
περιθέντες, προσήνεγκαν αὐτοῦ τῷ στόματι. (204/I) 30 r Ὅτε οὖν ἔλαβε τὸ ὄξος
r ch. 17. 4.
ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπε, Τετέλεσται· καὶ κλίνας τὴν κεφαλὴν παρέδωκε τὸ πνεῦμα.

(205/X) 31 s Οἱ οὖν Ἰουδαῖοι, t ἵνα μὴ μείνῃ ἐπὶ τοῦ σταυροῦ τὰ σώματα ἐν τῷ s ver. 42. Mark 15. 42. Deut. 21. 23.
t Deut. 21. 22, 23.
u Lev. 23. 5—8.
σαββάτῳ, ἐπεὶ παρασκευὴ ἦν, u ἦν γὰρ μεγάλη ἡ ἡμέρα ἐκείνου τοῦ σαββάτου, ἠρώτησαν τὸν Πιλάτον, ἵνα κατεαγῶσιν αὐτῶν τὰ σκέλη, καὶ ἀρθῶσιν. 32 Ἦλθον οὖν οἱ στρατιῶται, καὶ τοῦ μὲν πρώτου κατέαξαν τὰ σκέλη, καὶ τοῦ ἄλλου τοῦ συσταυρωθέντος αὐτῷ· 33 ἐπὶ δὲ τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἐλθόντες, ὡς εἶδον αὐτὸν ἤδη τεθνηκότα, οὐ κατέαξαν αὐτοῦ τὰ σκέλη· 34 ἀλλ' εἷς τῶν στρατιωτῶν λόγχῃ v 1 John 5. 6—8.
αὐτοῦ τὴν πλευρὰν ἔνυξε, καὶ v εὐθὺς ἐξῆλθεν αἷμα καὶ ὕδωρ. 35 Καὶ ὁ ἑωρακὼς μεμαρτύρηκε, καὶ ἀληθινὴ αὐτοῦ ἐστιν ἡ μαρτυρία· κἀκεῖνος οἶδεν ὅτι ἀληθῆ w Exod. 12. 46. Num. 9. 12.
λέγει, ἵνα καὶ ὑμεῖς πιστεύσητε. 36 w Ἐγένετο γὰρ ταῦτα, ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ πληx Zech. 12. 10.
ρωθῇ, Ὀστοῦν οὐ συντριβήσεται αὐτοῦ. 37 x Καὶ πάλιν ἑτέρα γραφὴ λέγει, y Ὄψονται εἰς ὃν ἐξεκέντησαν.

(206/I) 38 y Μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα ἠρώτησε τὸν Πιλάτον ὁ Ἰωσὴφ ὁ ἀπὸ Ἀριμαθαίας, y Matt. 27. 57—61. Mark 15. 42 to end. Luke 23. 50—56. ch. 12. 42.
ὢν μαθητὴς τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, κεκρυμμένος δὲ, διὰ τὸν φόβον τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἵνα ἄρῃ τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ· καὶ ἐπέτρεψεν ὁ Πιλάτος. Ἦλθεν οὖν καὶ ἦρε τὸ σῶμα z ch. 3. 1, 2. & 7. 50—52.
τοῦ Ἰησοῦ· (207/X) 39 z ἦλθε δὲ καὶ Νικόδημος, ὁ ἐλθὼν πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν νυκτὸς τὸ πρῶτον, φέρων μίγμα σμύρνης καὶ ἀλόης ὡς λίτρας ἑκατόν. (208/I) 40 Ἔλαβον

I to do with thee? Mine hour is not yet come" (John ii. 4). On that occasion, being about to work a divine miracle, He repelled, as unknown to Him, her who was not the mother of His Divinity, but of His Humanity. But now that He is enduring human sufferings He owns her; and bequeathes with human love her whom He loved, and from whom He had received His Humanity, to the Disciple whom He loved. At Cana He Who had created Mary manifested forth His glory; but now at Calvary that which Mary had brought forth from her womb hangs upon the Cross. Thus the Cross became a Teacher's Chair, from which Christ inculcates by example the duty of filial love. (Cp. Aug.)

— μαθητής] Elz. adds ἐκεῖνος, which is not in the best MSS.

29. σκεῦος] Elz. adds οὖν, which is not in A, B, L, X.

— ὑσσώπῳ] Namely, the καλάμῳ, mentioned Matt. xxvii. 48. Mark xv. 36.

30. κλίνας τὴν κεφαλήν] Christ died when He willed to die. If His power and dignity was so great at His death, what will it be when He comes to judge! (Aug.)

31. ἐκείνου] So in many of the best MSS. Elz. ἐκείνη.

34. εἷς τῶν στρατιωτῶν λόγχῃ αὐτοῦ τὴν πλευρὰν ἔνυξε, καὶ εὐθὺς ἐξῆλθεν αἷμα καὶ ὕδωρ] The first woman Eve was created from the side of Adam as he slept. And here the Second Adam bowed His Head and fell asleep on the Cross, in order that His spouse the Church, the spiritual Eve,—Εὔα, חַוָּה (chavah), the Mother of all living (Gen. iii. 20), might be formed by means of that which flowed from His side as He slept.

Adam sleeps that Eve might be made. Christ dies that the Church may live. Eve is made of Adam's side as he slept; the side of Christ is pierced, that the life-giving Sacraments may flow forth from it, by the virtue of which, derived from His death, the Church lives.

Cp. Hieron. ad Ephes. c. v.: "Quomodò de Adam et uxore ejus omne hominum nascitur genus, sic de Christo et Ecclesiâ omnis credentium multitudo generata est." Chrysost. in Ephes. c. v. p. 864, Savil. Ambros. in S. Luc. iii. 22: "Adam novissimus Christus est: Costa Christi vita Ecclesiæ. Hæc est Eva mater omnium viventium." Aug. Serm. 22: "Parentes qui nos genuerunt ad mortem. Adam et Eva; parentes qui nos genuerunt ad vitam, Christus et Ecclesia."

By means of the wounded side our wounds are healed. O death by which the dead live! What more pure than that blood! what more healing than that wound! (Cp. Aug. and Theoph.)

The soldiers, gratifying the Jews, pierced the Body of Christ. Thus they fulfilled a prophecy (Zech. xii. 10); thus they supplied the means for overcoming the incredulity of Thomas. Thus an ineffable mystery was completed. For thence "came out Blood and Water." And from both of these the Church subsists; as we know who are regenerate by water, and are fed by the Body and Blood. Hence the holy Sacraments derive their efficiency, in order that thou shouldst approach the sacred cup as if thou wert about to drink from the very side of Christ. (Chrys.)

Cp. Hooker, v. lvi. 7, who thus speaks: "The Church is in Christ as Eve was in Adam; yea, by grace we are every of us in Christ and in His Church, as by nature we are in those our first Parents. God made Eve of the rib of Adam, and His Church He frameth out of the very wounded and bleeding Side of the Son of Man. His body crucified and His blood shed for the life of the world, are the true elements of that heavenly being which maketh us such as Himself is of whom we come." See also Cudworth's Works, tom. ii. Bp. Beveridge on Article xxv. ii. p. 210.

Hence Christ is He who cometh (i. e. is our Messiah and Saviour) by water and blood (1 John v. 6).

35. καί] Not in Elz., but in A, D, K, L, X, and other MSS. The sense is that you also who hear, as well as I who saw, may believe.

— ὑμεῖς] For this Gospel is to be read in the Church to you and to all Christians, even to the end of time.

36. ὀστοῦν οὐ συντριβήσεται αὐτοῦ] Thus the Holy Ghost teaches in a few words that the whole History of the Paschal Lamb is typical of Christ. (Cp. Exod. xii. 46. Numb. ix. 12. Ps. xxxiv. 20.)

"Dirissimum suppliciorum Crux; et tamen quodvis aliud corpori mox resuscitando minùs aptum fuisset" (Bengel), et, liceat adjicere, ad resuscitatum corpus aliis exhibendum, et veritatem resurrectionis ipsiusque resuscitati corporis ταυτότητα adstruendam.

37. ἐξεκέντησαν] דָּקָרוּ (dakaru), Zech. xii. 10, from root דָּקַר (dakar), to pierce (cp. δάκνω, dig), rightly rendered by St. John here (and Rev. i. 7) ἐξεκέντησαν.

The Septuagint, who have κατωρχήσαντο, appear to have read רָקְדוּ from root רָקַד (rakadh), to dance for joy, to insult.

On this passage of Zechariah, see Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. iv. p. 379.

38. Ἰωσήφ] See on Matt. xxvii. 57. 59. Luke xxiii. 53.

39. σμύρνης καὶ ἀλόης ὡς λίτρας ἑκατόν] On the quality of this myrrh and aloes, and on the objection made by some, on the ground of the large quantity, see Kuin., who says: "σμύρνη myrrha, succus arboris Arabicæ, Dioscorides, i. 60: σμύρνα δάκρυον δένδρου γεννωμένου ἐν Ἀραβίᾳ, οὗ ἐγκοπτομένου ἀποῤῥεῖ τὸ δάκρυον εἰς ὑπεστρωμένας ψιάθους. Add. Plin. H. N. xiii. 15. Celsii Hierobot. P. i. p. 520, sqq.

"Ἀλόη, ex plurimorum interpretum sententiâ, non herba, Aloe intelligenda est, e quâ succus amarissimus eliciebatur, sed arbor aromatica, quæ et agallochum et xylaloe vocatur, cujus lignum ad thymiamata, etiam ad condienda cadavera ab Ægyptiis adhibebatur. Salmasius, Exercitt. Plin. p. 745, ss. Rosenmülleri Scholia ad Num. xxiv. 6.

"Dissentiunt interpretes, utrùm de aromatibus siccis, an de unguento ex iis confecto, cogitandum sit. Sed probabilius est Nicodemum attulisse, myrrhæ siccæ solidæ et contusæ atque agallochi ligno contuso quoque et in pulverem redacto mixtæ libras circiter centum. Etenim Josephus et Nicodemus non leguntur aromatibus illis unxisse Jesu corpus, imò Johannes v. 40 refert, corpus unà cum aromatibus linteis involutum esse; neque Josephus et Nicodemus διὰ τὴν παρασκευήν, v. 42, accuratiùs Christi corpus condire poterant; mulieres autem, quæ ritè et accuratè illud condire volebant, ut Lucas refert xxiii. 56, aromata et unguenta (discernuntur ἀρώματα et μύρα) emerant, ὅπως ἀλείψωσι, ut corpus Jesûs ungerent, quoque ei unguenta illinerent, add. Marc. xvi. 1.

οὖν τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, καὶ ἔδησαν αὐτὸ ἐν ὀθονίοις μετὰ τῶν ἀρωμάτων, καθὼς ἔθος ἐστὶ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις ἐνταφιάζειν. 41 Ἦν δὲ ἐν τῷ τόπῳ ὅπου ἐσταυρώθη κῆπος, καὶ ἐν τῷ κήπῳ μνημεῖον καινὸν, ἐν ᾧ οὐδέπω οὐδεὶς ἐτέθη. 42 Ἐκεῖ οὖν, διὰ τὴν παρασκευὴν τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ὅτι ἐγγὺς ἦν τὸ μνημεῖον, ἔθηκαν τὸν Ἰησοῦν.

XX. (209/1) 1 [a] Τῇ δὲ μιᾷ τῶν σαββάτων Μαρία ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ ἔρχεται πρωΐ, σκοτίας ἔτι οὔσης, εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον· καὶ βλέπει τὸν λίθον ἠρμένον ἐκ τοῦ μνημείου. (210/2) 2 Τρέχει οὖν καὶ ἔρχεται πρὸς Σίμωνα Πέτρον, καὶ πρὸς τὸν ἄλλον μαθητὴν ὃν ἐφίλει ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, Ἦραν τὸν Κύριον ἐκ τοῦ μνημείου, καὶ οὐκ οἴδαμεν ποῦ ἔθηκαν αὐτόν. 3 [b] Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ Πέτρος, καὶ ὁ ἄλλος μαθητὴς, καὶ ἤρχοντο εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον. 4 Ἔτρεχον δὲ οἱ δύο ὁμοῦ· καὶ ὁ ἄλλος μαθητὴς προέδραμε τάχιον τοῦ Πέτρου, καὶ ἦλθε πρῶτος εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον, 5 καὶ παρακύψας βλέπει κείμενα τὰ ὀθόνια· οὐ μέντοι εἰσῆλθεν. 6 Ἔρχεται οὖν Σίμων Πέτρος ἀκολουθῶν αὐτῷ, καὶ εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον, καὶ θεωρεῖ τὰ ὀθόνια κείμενα, 7 καὶ τὸ σουδάριον, ὃ ἦν ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς αὐτοῦ, οὐ μετὰ τῶν ὀθονίων κείμενον, ἀλλὰ χωρὶς ἐντετυλιγμένον εἰς ἕνα τόπον. 8 Τότε οὖν εἰσῆλθε καὶ ὁ ἄλλος μαθητὴς ὁ ἐλθὼν πρῶτος εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον, καὶ εἶδε καὶ ἐπίστευσεν· 9 [c] οὐδέπω γὰρ ᾔδεισαν τὴν γραφὴν, ὅτι δεῖ αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀναστῆναι. 10 Ἀπῆλθον οὖν πάλιν πρὸς ἑαυτοὺς οἱ μαθηταί. (211/1) 11 [d] Μαρία δὲ εἱστήκει πρὸς τῷ μνημείῳ κλαίουσα ἔξω. Ὡς οὖν ἔκλαιε, παρέκυψεν εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον, 12 καὶ θεωρεῖ δύο ἀγγέλους ἐν λευκοῖς καθεζομένους, ἕνα πρὸς τῇ κεφαλῇ καὶ ἕνα πρὸς τοῖς ποσὶν, ὅπου ἔκειτο τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. (212/2) 13 Καὶ λέγουσιν αὐτῇ ἐκεῖνοι, Γύναι, τί κλαίεις; Λέγει αὐτοῖς, Ὅτι ἦραν τὸν κύριόν μου, καὶ οὐκ οἶδα ποῦ ἔθηκαν αὐτόν. 14 [e] Καὶ ταῦτα εἰποῦσα ἐστράφη εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω, καὶ θεωρεῖ τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἑστῶτα, καὶ οὐκ ᾔδει ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἐστι. 15 Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Γύναι, τί κλαίεις; τίνα ζητεῖς; Ἐκείνη, δοκοῦσα ὅτι ὁ κηπουρός ἐστι, λέγει αὐτῷ, Κύριε, εἰ σὺ ἐβάστασας αὐτὸν, εἰπέ μοι ποῦ ἔθηκας αὐτὸν, κἀγὼ αὐτὸν ἀρῶ. 16 Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Μαρία· στραφεῖσα

a Matt. 28. 1. Mark 16. 1. Luke 24. 1.
b Luke 24. 12.
c Ps. 16. 10. Acts 2. 25—31. & 13. 34, 35. Isa. 55. 3.
d Mark 16. 5.
e Matt. 28. 9. Mark 16. 9. Luke 24. 16, 31. & 21. 4.

"Videtur præterea etiam pondus aromatum, si unguenta intelligenda essent, nimis magnum esse, quàm ut unctioni unius corporis paratum existimari possit. λίτρα h. l. pondus duodecim unciarum significat. Iis autem, qui tantam aromatum copiam inutilem fuisse objiciunt, rectè regeritur, etiam cubile illud, in quod Christi corpus repositum esset, ad suavem odorem excitandum, more consueto, vid. 2 Chron. xvi. 14, undique his aromatibus impletum fuisse, et aromata ad suffitus ciendos, in ipso sepeliendi actu ex parte comburi potuisse, cùm hoc quoque moris esset in funeribus, vid. 2 Chron. l. c. Harmeri Beobachtt. über den Orient, Th. ii. p. 148, p. 151, sq. Norbergius de religione et linguâ Sabæorum, p. 12: Exsequias prosequendi Galilæis (Sabæis) hic est mos. Mortuum domi lavatum, rebus odoratis suffitum, et in arculâ vestitum positum, ad sepulturam efferunt. Massecheth Semachoth, c. 8, cùm mortuus esset R. Gamaliel senior, combussit super eum Onkelosus proselytus ultra LXXX. libras opobalsami. Josephus quoque Ant. xvii. 8. 3, p. 849, et B. Jud. i. 1, extr. p. 143, ed. Havercamp. quingentos servos vel libertos ἀρωματοφόρους, aromata portantes, funus Herodis comitatos esse testatur." (Kuin.)

40. ἐν] Not in Elz., but in many of the best MSS.

41. κῆπος] 'a Garden.' Christ changes the wilderness of death into a Garden.

He provides Paradise or a garden for the departed soul (Luke xxiii. 43).

He makes the Grave itself to be a Garden of Paradise, from which at the great Day the bodies of the faithful, that have been sown in hope, will rise in vernal beauty, and be united for ever in unfading glory to their souls.

CH. XX. 1. τῇ δὲ μιᾷ τῶν σαββάτων] which we now call the Lord's Day, on account of the Lord's Resurrection. (Aug., Chrys.)

Our Lord arose while the stone was yet on the mouth of the cave, and the seals upon the stone; but the Tomb was opened after the Resurrection by an Angel, in order that others might be convinced of it. (Chrys., Theoph.)

On this Chapter of St. John, see the conclusion of the Tenth Book of St. Ambrose on St. Luke, ch. xxiv., and on vv. 1—9, see Greg. M. Hom. in Ev. xxii.

— τὸν λίθον] 'the stone;' not mentioned before by St. John; but supposed to be known from the other Gospels.

— ἠρμένον ἐκ] Observe, ἐκ, out of, showing that the stone had been fitted into the mouth of the tomb. (Cp. Mark xvi. 3.)

2. τρέχει—πρὸς Σίμωνα Πέτρον] A confirmation of St. Mark's account, which relates that the Angels had given the women a special message to St. Peter. (Mark xvi. 7.)

— ἦραν τὸν Κύριον] See v. 13. Mary Magdalene came to seek the Body only, which she calls her Lord (Greg. Moral. iii. 29), and which, as St. Mark relates (xvi. 1), she had come to anoint.

— οὐκ οἴδαμεν] 'we know not;' we women who have been to the Sepulchre. A silent confirmation of the narrative of the other Evangelists (Matt. xxviii. 1—8. Mark xvi. 1—8), that Mary Magdalene had been accompanied by others, Mary the mother of James, and Salome, St. John's mother, of whom St. John says nothing.

6. 7. τὰ ὀθόνια (cloths, not clothes) κείμενα, καὶ τὸ σουδάριον] A characteristic instance of St. John's manner of refuting calumnies, without mentioning the authors of them; a lesson of speaking the truth in love. The Evangelist had mentioned that the Body was buried with a mixture of myrrh (xix. 39), which fastened the cloths to the body, and which binds linen to flesh with as much tenacity as lead. And by this particular he guards us against the allegations of those, who had said that Christ's Body was stolen by His Disciples. (See Matt. xxviii. 11—15.) For if any one had taken away, or stolen it, they would not have spent so much time, and been at the pains to unwrap it, and to lay the cloths apart, and to wrap the Napkin by itself. But they would have taken all away together. (Cp. Chrys.)

8. ἐπίστευσεν] that He was risen.

9. οὐδέπω] to this time; now they knew it. Before this time they had not believed the report of the women who had been at the Sepulchre. See Luke xxiv. 11, ἠπίστουν αὐταῖς.

11—18.] For an exposition of these verses, see Greg. M. Hom. in Ev. xxv.

On the appearances of our Lord to Mary Magdalene, as related by the different Evangelists, see Euseb. ad Marinum, Qu. 2 and 3, ed. Mai, p. 257 (Bibl. Patr. Vatic. vol. iv.).

11. τῷ μνημείῳ] So many of the best MSS. Elz. has τὸ μνημεῖον.

— ὡς ἔκλαιε] as she was weeping.

15. εἰ σὺ ἐβάστασας] Mary Magdalene, as yet, had only feeble and low notions of Christ's power; and speaks of bearing, laying, and taking away; all applicable to the body only. But Christ gradually weans her mind from carnal notions, and raises her to higher and heavenly thoughts.

16. λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Μαρία] Our Lord first called her by ἐκείνη λέγει αὐτῷ, Ῥαββουνί· ὃ λέγεται, διδάσκαλε. 17 [f] Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Μή μου ἅπτου, οὔπω γὰρ ἀναβέβηκα πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα μου, πορεύου δὲ πρὸς τοὺς ἀδελφούς μου, καὶ εἰπὲ αὐτοῖς, Ἀναβαίνω πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα μου καὶ Πατέρα ὑμῶν, καὶ Θεόν μου καὶ Θεὸν ὑμῶν. 18 [g] Ἔρχεται Μαρία ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ ἀπαγγέλλουσα τοῖς μαθηταῖς ὅτι ἑώρακε τὸν Κύριον, καὶ ταῦτα εἶπεν αὐτῇ.

(213 IX) 19 [h] Οὔσης οὖν ὀψίας, τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ, τῇ μιᾷ τῶν σαββάτων, καὶ τῶν θυρῶν κεκλεισμένων, ὅπου ἦσαν οἱ μαθηταὶ συνηγμένοι, διὰ τὸν φόβον τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἦλθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ ἔστη εἰς τὸ μέσον, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, [i] Εἰρήνη ὑμῖν· 20 καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν ἔδειξεν αὐτοῖς τὰς χεῖρας καὶ τὴν πλευρὰν αὐτοῦ. Ἐχάρησαν οὖν οἱ μαθηταὶ ἰδόντες τὸν Κύριον. (214 X) 21 Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς πάλιν, [j] Εἰρήνη ὑμῖν· [k] καθὼς ἀπέσταλκέ με ὁ Πατὴρ, κἀγὼ πέμπω

f Ps. 22. 23. Heb. 2. 11. Eph. 1. 17.
g Matt. 28. 10. Luke 24. 10.
h ver. 26. Mark 16. 14. Luke 24. 36. Acts 20. 7. 1 Cor. 15. 5. & 16. 2.
i ver. 21. 26. ch. 14. 27.
j ver. 20. 26. ch. 14. 27.
k ch. 17. 18. 2 Tim. 2. 2.

---

the common name of her sex, Woman (v. 13), and was not recognized by her. He then calls her by her own name, Mary, as if He had said, Do thou recognize Him Who recognizes thee. (Greg.)

He did not produce recognition by means of the eye, but of the ear, and by the sound of her own name. (Chrys., who supposes that Mary saw the two Angels doing reverence to Christ.)

— λέγει αὐτῷ] B, D, L, O, X, Δ, add Ἑβραϊστὶ, which has been received by Scholz, Tisch., Alf.

17. μή μου ἅπτου, οὔπω γὰρ ἀναβέβηκα] Mary had fallen at His knees, and made a movement to embrace the feet of Him Who had recognized her. (Chrys., Greg.) He says to her μή μου ἅπτου. Observe the verb ἅπτου, from ἅπτομαι, properly, to fasten on to an object, to cling to it with a view of communicating something to it, or of eliciting something from it. Hence it is applied to the sick who touched our Lord's garment, in order to be healed (Matt xiv. 36. Mark vi. 56), and especially to the faithful woman who is said to touch Him, ἅψασθαι, while the crowd only presses on Him. See on Matt. ix. 20, 21. Mark v. 27. 30. Luke viii. 44—47.

Observe, also, the tense, ἅπτου. It indicates not only a prohibition of a particular act, but forbids a habit; i. e. that of clinging to Him with the bodily touch.

And the words οὔπω ἀναβέβηκα contain a precept concerning the time, when the habit of touching Christ is to be exercised. He is to be touched, after He ascended; that is, He is then to be truly touched, when He is beyond the reach of the bodily touch.

And one of the purposes of His Absence, and of His Ascension into Heaven, was to elicit and to exercise that touch, by which alone He can then be touched, and by which He best loves to be touched, and by which He must be touched by us, if Virtue is to go out of Him to heal us,—the touch of Faith.

This is thus expressed by some of the Fathers:

Mary, as yet, believed only carnally in Him. She had been weeping for Him as Man; and now that with her bodily eye she saw Him restored in bodily presence, she imagined that He would abide with her as before. But Jesus raises her mind, and inspires her with greater reverence; He teaches her that He must be touched spiritually, that is, by Faith; that is, He must be touched not only as man, but as God, One with the Father. (Aug., Chrys.) We must touch Him Who has ascended as Man (for Ascension is an act of body), and Who is to be worshipped as every where present, as God, and to be touched by Faith. (Aug. Tract. 121, Serm. 143, 144.)

Therefore, where the power of the bodily touch ends, there the function of the spiritual touch begins; and that is the touch which Christ loves, because it most honours Him, and most profits us.

Hence He says, "Touch Me not." Think not of Me as you now do; dwell not on what I have been made for thy sake, but aspire to that by which thou thyself wast created. I have not yet ascended, but when I have ascended, and am no longer visible and tangible to mortal sense, and when you believe in Me as God, equal with the Father, then you will really touch Me.

Do not strive to detain Me now carnally by the bodily touch, which is not the touch I desire; but learn to touch Me spiritually; and this you will do, when you can no longer touch Me on earth. Then you will learn to touch Me with the spiritual organ, and to hang on Me by the tenacious grasp and loving embrace of Faith.

"Meritò (says St. Ambrose, on Luke xxiv.) prohibetur tangere Dominum, non enim corporali tactu Christum, sed fide tangimus." And again; "Prohibetur tangere, quia nondum in Christo inhabitare corporaliter plenitudinem Divinitatis acceperat. Deus est qui adoratur; homo qui tenetur. Ergo non supra terram, nec in terrâ secundùm carnem Te quærere debemus, si volumus invenire. Nunc enim secundùm carnem non novimus Christum (2 Cor. v. 16). Stephanus non supra terram quæsivit, qui stantem Te ad dexteram Dei vidit; Maria autem quia quærebat in terrâ, tangere non potuit. Stephanus autem tetigit, quia quæsivit in cœlo." Hence also St. Leo says (Serm. lxxii. p. 154, Noli me tangere, &c.), "Nolo ut ad Me corporaliter venias, nec ut Me sensu carnis agnoscas; ad sublimiora te differo, et majora tibi præparo. Cùm ad Patrem ascendero, tunc Me perfectiùs, veriùsque palpabis, apprehensura quod non tangis, et creditura quod non cernis. . . . . Tunc Filius hominis, Dei Filius, excellentiùs sacratiùsque innotuit, cùm in paternæ majestatis gloriam Se recepit, et ineffabili modo cœpit esse divinitate præsentior Qui factus est humanitate longinquior." See also Jerome, iv. 174.

Besides, now that Christ is ascended, a special virtue goes out of Him (Mark v. 30), in gracious response to the touch of faith; viz. the virtue of the divine gift of the Holy Ghost Himself, who was not given till Christ had ascended, but was given in consequence of His Ascension, and is given to the touch of Faith.

Cp. Bp. Andrewes, iii. 23. 39, Sermons xv. and xvi. on the Resurrection, and Dr. Moberly, on the Sayings of the Great Forty Days, pp. 81—95.

See also on the contrast between Mary's case and that of Thomas, the notes on v. 29.

We have here, also, divine instruction concerning the presence of Christ in the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. When discoursing on that subject at Capernaum, He had said to His disciples, "What if ye shall see the Son of Man ascend up where He was before?" (John vi. 62.) He had thus taught them not to crave a carnal presence in that Sacrament. He now says to Mary, "Touch Me not, for I am not ascended;" Touch Me not till I have ascended. Touch Me when I have ascended. And go and tell My disciples that I am about to ascend. Thus He teaches her, and He teaches His disciples by her, not to dote upon a bodily presence, and not to yearn for that. By seeking to detain Him on earth, we contravene His gracious purposes in ascending to Heaven. By clinging to Him by a carnal grasp we lose Him. By so touching Him, we touch Him not. He says to us, Sursum corda, Lift up your hearts. Depress not Me to yourselves on earth, but raise yourselves to Me in heaven. Touch Me by the hand of Faith. Cling to Me by the embraces of your souls. Thus Divine Virtue will flow from Me to heal you and refresh you, and to make you partakers of the Divine Nature, and to qualify you for the fruition of the Divine Presence for ever. My Body given for you, and Blood shed for you, will be to you meat indeed and drink indeed, and preserve your souls and bodies to everlasting Life.

— τὸν Πατέρα μου καὶ Πατέρα ὑμῶν] Him Who is Father of Me and Father of you (plural). He does not say, 'our Father,' but, 'Father of Me,' by nature; and 'Father of you,' by grace. (Aug.) Hence we may refute the Noetian and Sabellian heresy, which confounds the Father with the Son. He who goes must be a different Person from Him to Whom He goes. (St. Hippolyt. adv. Noet. § 657.)

19. τῶν θυρῶν κεκλεισμένων—ἦλθεν] For an exposition of these verses, 19—31, see Greg. M. Hom. in Ev. xxvi. He entered through closed doors. Where (it may be asked) were the dimensions of body, if He entered through closed doors?—where, we may reply, was the weight of body, when He walked on the sea? The Lord did the latter, as Lord, before His crucifixion; and did He cease to be Lord when He had risen from the dead? (Aug. Serm. clix.)

Besides, we may ask, where were the functions and laws of body, when He glided invisibly through the midst of His enemies. (John v. 13; viii. 59. Luke iv. 30. Theoph.) We cannot understand the mode of either work, but where our Reason fails, there Faith begins. (Aug. Serm. cx. cl.) See on Luke xxiv. 31.

But why, it may be inquired, did He enter thus, when He desired to give His Apostles proof of His bodily Resurrection? The reason seems to be, that He would not have them forget His Divinity, while they acknowledged His Humanity. They should recognize Him as Very Man, and adore Him also as Very God.

20. ἔδειξεν αὐτοῖς τὰς χεῖρας καὶ τὴν πλευράν] The marks of His wounds were remedies to heal the heart of unbelief. (Greg. Hom. xxvi. in Evang.) And in this sense, also, it may be truly said that by His stripes we are healed. (Isa. liii. 5.)

See also on v. 27.

— ἐχάρησαν] They did not inquire, how He had come to them through closed doors, but received Him with great joy. An example to the disciples of Christ. Let us not discuss, How He comes to us in the Holy Eucharist, but gladly receive Him into our hearts. See Hooker, quoted above on vi. 25.

He who came forth to life at His Nativity from the Virgin's womb, He who came forth again at His Resurrection from a sealed tomb, He Who came through closed doors and stood before His disciples, can come to us in ways far beyond our present powers of comprehension. He assures us that He does come to us in the Holy Eucharist. Here is the trial of our Faith. Let us not debate, but believe, and welcome Him with great joy.

21. καθώς] i. e. with authority to send others; as I, Who have been sent by My Father, send you;

ὑμᾶς. (215/VII) 22 Καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν ἐνεφύσησε, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, Λάβετε Πνεῦμα ἅγιον· 23 [l] ἄν τινων ἀφῆτε τὰς ἁμαρτίας, ἀφίενται αὐτοῖς, ἄν τινων κρατῆτε, κεκράτηνται. (216/X) 24 Θωμᾶς δὲ, εἷς ἐκ τῶν δώδεκα, ὁ λεγόμενος Δίδυμος, οὐκ ἦν μετ' αὐτῶν ὅτε ἦλθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς. 25 Ἔλεγον οὖν αὐτῷ οἱ ἄλλοι μαθηταὶ, Ἑωράκαμεν τὸν Κύριον. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Ἐὰν μὴ ἴδω ἐν ταῖς χερσὶν αὐτοῦ τὸν τύπον τῶν ἥλων, καὶ βάλω τὸν δάκτυλόν μου εἰς τὸν τύπον τῶν ἥλων, καὶ βάλω τὴν χεῖρά μου εἰς τὴν πλευρὰν αὐτοῦ, οὐ μὴ πιστεύσω. (217/IX) 26 Καὶ μεθ' ἡμέρας ὀκτὼ πάλιν ἦσαν ἔσω οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ Θωμᾶς μετ' αὐτῶν· ἔρχεται ὁ Ἰησοῦς, τῶν θυρῶν κεκλεισμένων, καὶ ἔστη εἰς τὸ μέσον καὶ εἶπεν, Εἰρήνη ὑμῖν· 27 εἶτα λέγει τῷ Θωμᾷ, Φέρε τὸν δάκτυλόν σου ὧδε, καὶ ἴδε τὰς χεῖράς μου· καὶ φέρε τὴν χεῖρά σου καὶ βάλε εἰς τὴν πλευράν μου· καὶ μὴ γίνου ἄπιστος, ἀλλὰ πιστός. (218/X) 28 Ἀπεκρίθη Θωμᾶς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, [m] Ὁ Κύριός μου καὶ ὁ Θεός μου. 29 [n] Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ὅτι ἑώρακάς με, πεπίστευκας· μακάριοι οἱ μὴ ἰδόντες, καὶ πιστεύσαντες.

30 [o] Πολλὰ μὲν οὖν καὶ ἄλλα σημεῖα ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐνώπιον τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, ἃ οὐκ ἔστι γεγραμμένα ἐν τῷ βιβλίῳ τούτῳ· 31 [p] ταῦτα δὲ

l Matt. 16. 19. & 18. 18. 1 Cor. 4. 18—21. & 5. 3—5. 2 Cor. 2. 10.

m Luke 2. 11. ch. 1. 1. Acts 7. 59, 60. 1 Tim. 3. 16. n 1 Pet. 1. 8. 2 Cor. 5. 7. o ch. 21. 25. p Luke 1. 3, 4. Rom. 15. 4. 2 Tim. 3. 15. 1 John 1. 1—4.

And I send you with the Holy Ghost; as I was anointed at My Baptism with the Holy Ghost.

22. ἐνεφύσησε] "He breathed on them." They felt His presence, as well as saw Him present. He Who breathed into the first man, and he became a living soul (Gen. ii. 7), now breathes on His Apostles, and thus reminds them that His own Resurrection is the beginning of the new Creation; that the breath of Christ risen from the dead is the origin of our new Life, and the pledge of Life Everlasting; "for as in Adam all die, even so in Christ all are made alive" (1 Cor. xv. 22); "and as the first man Adam was made a living soul; so the last Adam was made a quickening Spirit," πνεῦμα ζωοποιοῦν (1 Cor. xv. 45). The act of breathing was a proper preparation for receiving the Πνεῦμα ἅγιον; and for the exercise of that power by which, in consequence of Christ's Death and Resurrection, the Soul, dead in trespasses and sins, is raised from death to life.

Thomas was not present when He breathed on them; yet we cannot doubt that the breathing extended its virtue to him, and to all who are duly called and sent by Christ. (Cyril.) Cp. Numb. xi. 24—26.

— λάβετε Πνεῦμα ἅγιον] A proof that the Holy Ghost proceeds from the Son as well as from the Father. (Aug. de Trin. iv. 20.) He gave now, that they might receive more abundantly hereafter (on the day of Pentecost), and He gave now privately that they might receive afterwards publicly. (Aug. Tract. lxxiv.)

23. ἄν τινων ἀφῆτε] The Resurrection of Christ from the dead is preparatory to, and effective of our Resurrection from the death of sin, which is called by St John in the Revelation "the first Resurrection" (see Rev. xx. 5, 6), and is necessary as a safeguard against the second death (Rev. xx. 6. 14: xxi. 8), and as a qualification for the joys of the second, or general Resurrection. Hence, as soon as He is risen from the dead, He proceeds to speak of Remission of sin. The bands of death being burst, those of sin and guilt are to be broken also. See Jerome, iv. 178, "Primâ die Resurrectionis acceperunt Spiritûs Sancti gratiam quâ peccata dimitterent et baptizarent" (where St. Jerome considers the difference between this gift and that of Pentecost), and cp. Bp. Andrewes, Serm. ix. On the sending of the Holy Ghost, vol. iii. p. 261, and On the Power of Absolution, v. pp. 83—103, and see above on Matt. xvi. 19.

26. μεθ' ἡμέρας ὀκτώ] The next Lord's Day. He does not appear to have shown Himself to His disciples in the intervening six days. Thus He distinguished the first day from all other days as His Own day. And the Holy Spirit, by recording those appearances in Holy Scripture, and by calling it ἡμέρα Κυριακὴ (Rev. i. 10), has consecrated this day to Him. Cp. above on Matt. xxviii. 1.

Christ rose from the dead on this day; He appeared twice in succession on this day; He gave special evidence of His Resurrection on this day; He gave the spiritual power to His Apostles, by which the soul is raised from the Death of Sin (v. 23). He gave the earnest of the Spirit on this day (v. 22), and, finally, He sent the full effusion of the Holy Ghost to His Church on this day (see on Acts ii. 1).

Hence it appears, that the proper exercise of this Day is to "rise more and more from the death of sin to newness of life." "If ye be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above" (Col. iii. 1); to "reckon ourselves dead unto sin, and alive unto God through Jesus Christ" (Rom. vi. 9—11); to be "in the Spirit on the Lord's Day" (Rev. i. 10). Every Lord's Day ought to be a Day of spiritual Resurrection. Every succeeding Lord's Day ought to prepare us for the Day of the Lord. Then "when Christ, Who is our life, shall appear, we shall also appear with Him in glory" (Col. iii. 1—4).

27. ἴδε τὰς χεῖρας] This action and these words seem to be referred to in the Fragment De Resurrectione, in Justin Martyr's Works, Append. ii. p. 188. Cp. Justin, c. Tryphon. 97, and Apol. i. 35.

Our Lord might have erased all marks of His wounds from His Body risen and glorified, but He has preserved them there; He showed them to Thomas, who would not believe unless he saw, and so convinced him; He will show His wounds to those who will not believe, and will convict them, and say, Behold Him Whom ye crucified, behold the wounds ye inflicted, see the side which ye pierced. (Aug. de Symb. ad Catech. ii. 8.) Our Lord arose with the marks of His crucifixion imprinted in His Body, in order that we might believe that He arose with the same Body as that in which He suffered. (Chrys.)

Observe, that the wounds which Satan inflicted in malice and scorn on our Lord's crucified Body, have been converted by His controlling power and wisdom into proofs of His Resurrection, and marks of His personal identity. They have become indelible evidences of His Power, graven, as it were, with an iron pen on the Rock of Ages, to be read by eyes of angels and men for eternity; and are glorious trophies of His victory over death and sin, and over Satan himself.

— μὴ γίνου ἄπιστος] Remark γίνου: Do not become unbelieving. Thomas was doubtful, not unbelieving. Our Lord warns us, through him, that if we miss opportunities of having our scruples removed, if we close our eyes to the evidences He gives us of the truth, our doubts will be hardened into unbelief.

28. ὁ Κύριός μου καὶ ὁ Θεός μου] Thomas confesses that He Whom he now sees is the same Person, as He Whom he had before known as his Lord. He owns His identity. And he acknowledges this Person to be God. He had felt His Divine power exercised in reading his own thoughts. He recognizes Him as Man, and adores Him as God. This saying, therefore, was regarded by the Ancient Church as an assertion of Christ's Divinity. See Cyril, Chrys., Athanas., and others in Maldonat.

Thomas beheld and touched Christ as Man, and confessed Him to be God, Whom he did not see nor touch. (Aug.)

29. μα] Some MSS. add Θωμᾶ, which is not found in the best MSS.

From the two examples of Mary Magdalene and of St. Thomas respectively, as described by St. John in this chapter, we learn two several duties to Christ risen from the dead and ascended into heaven.

The case of Mary Magdalene (v. 17) was very different from that of Thomas. She acknowledged His Resurrection, she clung with joy to His human Body risen from the grave, and was satisfied with His visible presence, and wished to retain that. She had yet to learn —and we by her—to see Him that is invisible; to touch Him by faith; to adore Him as God. Therefore our Lord said to her, "Touch Me not, for I am not ascended; touch Me not till I have ascended; touch Me when I am ascended; touch Me by Faith. That is the touch which I require; that is the touch by which I am to be held, and by which you may have My Presence with you."

But Thomas would not believe that He was risen indeed; or, if risen, that He was risen in the same human body as that which He wore before, and at, His crucifixion. This was what he was to learn, and we by him.—faith in our Lord's Resurrection; faith in our own future resurrection; faith in the identity of Christ's risen body; faith in the identity of our own bodies to rise hereafter.

Therefore Christ, Who had said "Touch Me not" to Mary, said "Touch Me" to St Thomas.

Thus we are taught the True Faith in His Divinity, Humanity, and Personality, by His providential and gracious correction of the too material yearnings of a woman's love, and of the too spiritual doubts of an Apostle's fears.

— μακάριοι] Let those who wish they had lived in the times of the Apostles, and had seen Christ working miracles, meditate on these words. See Heb. xi. 1. (Chrys.)

30. πολλὰ μὲν οὖν καὶ ἄλλα σημεῖα] He intimates that the Evangelists did not write all, but they wrote enough for our salvation; and that they who are not convinced by what is written would never have been convinced by more. (Chrys.)

On the connexion of these verses with what precedes and follows, see the note at the end of the next chapter.

γέγραπται, ἵνα πιστεύσητε ὅτι ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐστιν ὁ Χριστὸς ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ ἵνα πιστεύοντες ζωὴν ἔχητε ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι αὐτοῦ.

XXI. (219/IX) [1] Μετὰ ταῦτα ἐφανέρωσεν ἑαυτὸν πάλιν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τοῖς μαθηταῖς ἐπὶ τῆς θαλάσσης τῆς Τιβεριάδος· ἐφανέρωσε δὲ οὕτως. [2] Ἦσαν ὁμοῦ Σίμων Πέτρος καὶ Θωμᾶς ὁ λεγόμενος Δίδυμος, καὶ Ναθαναὴλ ὁ ἀπὸ Κανᾶ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, καὶ οἱ τοῦ Ζεβεδαίου, καὶ ἄλλοι ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ δύο. [3] Λέγει αὐτοῖς Σίμων Πέτρος, Ὑπάγω ἁλιεύειν. Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, Ἐρχόμεθα καὶ ἡμεῖς σὺν σοί. Ἐξῆλθον καὶ ἐνέβησαν εἰς τὸ πλοῖον εὐθὺς, καὶ ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ νυκτὶ a ch. 20. 14. ἐπίασαν οὐδέν. [4] [a] Πρωΐας δὲ ἤδη γενομένης ἔστη ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὸν αἰγιαλόν· b Luke 24. 41. οὐ μέντοι ᾔδεισαν οἱ μαθηταὶ ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἐστι. [5] [b] Λέγει οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, c Luke 4. 5—7. Παιδία, μή τι προσφάγιον ἔχετε; Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ, Οὔ. [6] [c] Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Βάλετε εἰς τὰ δεξιὰ μέρη τοῦ πλοίου τὸ δίκτυον, καὶ εὑρήσετε. Ἔβαλον d ch. 13. 23. οὖν, καὶ οὐκέτι αὐτὸ ἑλκῦσαι ἴσχυσαν ἀπὸ τοῦ πλήθους τῶν ἰχθύων. (220/X) [7] [d] Λέγει οὖν ὁ μαθητὴς ἐκεῖνος ὃν ἠγάπα ὁ Ἰησοῦς τῷ Πέτρῳ, Ὁ Κύριός ἐστι. Σίμων οὖν Πέτρος ἀκούσας ὅτι ὁ Κύριός ἐστι τὸν ἐπενδύτην διεζώσατο, ἦν γὰρ γυμνὸς, καὶ ἔβαλεν ἑαυτὸν εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν. [8] Οἱ δὲ ἄλλοι μαθηταὶ τῷ πλοιαρίῳ ἦλθον, οὐ γὰρ ἦσαν μακρὰν ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς, ἀλλ' ὡς ἀπὸ πηχῶν διακοσίων, σύροντες τὸ δίκτυον τῶν ἰχθύων. (221/IX) [9] Ὡς οὖν ἀπέβησαν εἰς τὴν γῆν, βλέπουσιν ἀνθρακιὰν κειμένην, καὶ ὀψάριον ἐπικείμενον, καὶ ἄρτον. [10] Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Ἐνέγκατε ἀπὸ τῶν ὀψαρίων ὧν ἐπιάσατε νῦν. (222/IX) [11] Ἀν-

---

31. γέγραπται] 'have been written.'

— ἵνα] "Scopus Evangelii fides in Christo, et vita sempiterna per fidem in Ipso." (Bengel.)

CH. XXI. On the genuineness of this chapter, see note at end of it.

1. ἐφανέρωσε δὲ οὕτως] i. e. after the Resurrection He was not seen, except when He willed to show Himself. (Chrys.)

For an exposition of these verses, 1—14, see Greg. M. Hom. in Ev. xxiv. p. 1543.

2. Ναθαναήλ] This is added by St. John to show the truth of Christ's promise to him, i. 46—50.

On the question whether Nathanael was the same as Bartholomew, see above, i. 49.

— οἱ τοῦ Ζεβεδαίου] Another indication that this chapter was not written, as some suppose, by any but St. John. Any other writer would probably have called them "James and John," or "the two sons of Zebedee;" and would certainly have placed them next to St. Peter, and not after Thomas and Nathanael. (Cp. Bengel; see also v. 24.)

3. ὑπάγω ἁλιεύειν] How was this after St. Peter had become a Fisher of men, and When our Lord had said, "No man having put his hand to the plough and looking back is fit for the kingdom of God!" (Luke ix. 62.)

The Apostle Peter was not prohibited from seeking the necessaries of life by means of his former calling, any more than the Apostle St. Paul was forbidden to work with his hands, that he might not be burdensome to any. (Aug., Greg.) St. Peter returned to his fishing, —an innocent occupation,—but we do not read that St. Matthew returned to the seat of custom.

Simon goes a fishing; for Christ was not now continually present in person with His Apostles, nor was the Holy Ghost yet given. They had not yet received their commission. (Chrys.) Thus they showed how little capable they were of themselves to do any thing to convert others.

— λέγουσιν αὐτῷ] This was emblematic of the labours of the Prophets in the night of heathenism, before the coming of Christ; they caught nothing. But when He appeared, a large draught of Jews and Gentiles was inclosed in the Apostolic Net. (Theoph.) — ἐπίασαν οὐδέν] They caught nothing in the night, the best time for fishing. Christ had not yet come to them. But when He came in the morning, and commanded them to let down the net, they could not draw it for the multitude of fishes (v. 6). There is no success for "the fishers of men" without Christ. With His aid the Net which has been drawn in vain through the Sea in the most favourable times according to human calculation, is filled, and does not break. These circumstances, so similar in many respects, must have recalled the thoughts of the Apostles to the time when our Lord called Simon and Andrew from their nets at the same lake to be "fishers of men." They were designed to teach them, and all "Fishers of men," that this Fishing was figurative and prophetical of what they, and their successors after them, were to do and expect in the great work of drawing the Net of the Gospel through the Sea of the World to the Shore of Everlasting Life. Thus also they proved the reality and power of the gift they afterwards received when Christ had ascended into heaven, and sent them the Holy Ghost, on the Day of Pentecost.

5. μή τι προσφάγιον ἔχετε;] "Num quid piscium habetis? Attici omnis generis cibos, qui adhibentur ad panem, et cum eo capiuntur, sed recentiores maximè pisces, imprimis clixos et assatos, ὄψον appellarunt, vid. Eustath. ad Hom. Il. λ', p. 861. Macedones autem, repudiato hujus vocabuli usu, ipsi finxerunt nomen προσφάγιον. (Mœris: ὄψον, Ἀττικῶς. Προσφάγιον, Ἑλληνικῶς. Thomas Mag. ὄψον, οὐ προσφάγιον.)" (Kuin.)

— ἀπεκρίθησαν, Οὔ] They answered, that they had no προσφάγιον, i. e. no ὀψάριον, or fish; in order that we might know that the fish, which was afterwards seen on the shore (v. 9), was not provided by any human means, but by the creative power of Christ.

7. ἐπενδύτην] A fisher's over-coat, superaria. Cp. Is. xx. 2, 3. 1 Sam. xix. 24. 2 Sam. vi. 14. 20.

— γυμνός] Not having his upper garment on. See Mark xiv. 51, 52.

8. ἀπό] See xi. 18.

9. βλέπουσιν ἀνθρακιὰν κειμένην, καὶ ὀψάριον ἐπικείμενον, καὶ ἄρτον] A coal-fire, Fish, and Bread.—provided not by themselves (see v. 5), but by the creative power of Christ. The fire was kindled, the fish and the bread were created by Him.

What did this teach?

That He is God; the Creator of all things. All the elements were here combined. The ἄνθρακες (charcoal) and ἄρτος from the Earth, representing the Vegetable World. The Fish from the Water. Fire was there, burning the coals, and Air fanning the flame. And also,

That the miraculous draught was due to Him. He could provide fish not only in the liquid sea, but even on the sandy shore.

Hence in the great work to which they were called as "Fishers of Men," they were instructed to look to Him, and Him alone; they should rely on Him. He would and could enable them to catch fish in the Net of the Gospel, even in the least favourable times and places. He could even enable them to catch fish on the dry shore. A memorable example of this was afterwards seen in the history of Philip the Deacon catching a μέγαν ἰχθὺν (v. 11) even on the desert road to Gaza. (See Acts viii. 26—39.)

They should, therefore, ascribe all their success to Him alone; and they should never faint in their work. He could and would feed them by food supplied and fire kindled—they knew not how—by His divine power.

Our Lord commanded them to bring of the fish they had caught, and then invited them to eat (vv. 12, 13). He takes the bread, and the fish likewise, and gives them.

He combines the fruits of their labour and of His own Omnipotence, and invites them to partake of them. So it will be at the Great Day. The good and faithful servant who has improved his Lord's money will enter into the joy of his Lord. (Matt. xxv. 21. 23. Luke xix. 17.)

— ὀψάριον ἐπικείμενον] On ὀψάριον see vi. 9. 11.

On other occasions our Lord produced more food from food already existing. Thus He acted in multiplying the loaves, and changing water to wine (John ii. 9); and thus He showed that the creatures are His, and are good (see on John vi. 2). But after His Resurrection He creates, without any pre-existing matter; and thus He proved that He is the Creator of all. out of nothing. (Chrys.)

They did not dare to ask who He was; but they ate what He had created, and which He ordered to be brought and eaten by them, in order that they might be able to bear witness to His act of creation.

ἔβη Σίμων Πέτρος, καὶ εἵλκυσε τὸ δίκτυον ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, μεστὸν ἰχθύων μεγάλων ἑκατὸν πεντηκοντατριῶν· καὶ τοσούτων ὄντων οὐκ ἐσχίσθη τὸ δίκτυον.

(223/IX) 12 [e] Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Δεῦτε ἀριστήσατε· οὐδεὶς δὲ ἐτόλμα τῶν μαθητῶν ἐξετάσαι αὐτόν, Σὺ τίς εἶ; εἰδότες ὅτι ὁ Κύριός ἐστιν. (224/X) 13 [f] Ἔρχεται οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ λαμβάνει τὸν ἄρτον καὶ δίδωσιν αὐτοῖς, καὶ τὸ ὀψάριον ὁμοίως. (225/IX) 14 [g] Τοῦτο ἤδη τρίτον ἐφανερώθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ ἐγερθεὶς ἐκ νεκρῶν.

[e] Acts 10. 41.

[f] ch. 20. 19, 26.

(226/X) 15 [h] Ὅτε οὖν ἠρίστησαν, λέγει τῷ Σίμωνι Πέτρῳ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Σίμων Ἰωνᾶ, [i] ἀγαπᾷς με πλεῖον τούτων; λέγει αὐτῷ, Ναὶ, Κύριε, (227/IX) σὺ οἶδας ὅτι φιλῶ σε. Λέγει αὐτῷ, Βόσκε τὰ ἀρνία μου. (228/X) 16 [k] Λέγει αὐτῷ πάλιν δεύτερον, Σίμων Ἰωνᾶ, ἀγαπᾷς με; λέγει αὐτῷ, (229/IX) Ναὶ, Κύριε, σὺ οἶδας ὅτι φιλῶ σε. Λέγει αὐτῷ, [l] Ποίμαινε τὰ πρόβατά μου. (230/X) 17 Λέγει αὐτῷ τὸ τρίτον, Σίμων Ἰωνᾶ, φιλεῖς με; (231/IX) Ἐλυπήθη ὁ Πέτρος, ὅτι εἶπεν αὐτῷ τὸ τρίτον, Φιλεῖς με; καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Κύριε, σὺ πάντα οἶδας· σὺ γινώσκεις ὅτι φιλῶ σε. Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Βόσκε τὰ πρόβατά μου. (232/X) 18 [j] Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω σοι, ὅτε

[g] Matt. 26. 33.

[h] 1 Pet. 2. 25. Acts 20. 28. Heb. 13. 20.

[i] ch. 10. 1, 2. Matt. 25 32, 33. Heb. 13. 20. Acts 20. 28. 1 Pet. 1. 2, 25.

[j] 2 Pet. 1. 14.

---

11. εἵλκυσε τὸ δίκτυον ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς] This draught of fishes, recorded at the close of the Gospels, is emblematic of the work of the Church at the end of time, when the net of evangelic preaching will be full, and drawn to the shore of eternal life. Matt. xiii. 47, 48. (Aug.)

All the fishes were great. Such is the glory of the saints in heaven. This miraculous draught after the Resurrection is to be contrasted with the former miraculous draught. (Luke v. 1—11. Matt. iv. 18—22. Mark i. 16—20. See Aug., Serm. 249—251.) There the fishes are hauled up into the boats on the sea, here they are drawn to the land; there the net is on the point of bursting asunder (διερρήγνυτο), here it is not torn at all (οὐκ ἐσχίσθη); there the fishermen are called to be fishers of men (Matt. iv. 19), here they sit down and feast with Christ.

The former miraculous draught represents the fishers tossed in the ship of the Church on the sea of this world, and drawing bad and good fish (Matt. xiii. 47) into the Net of the Church Visible, which is always strained by schisms, and ever on the point of breaking asunder. This second miraculous draught—that after the Resurrection—represents her labour done, and the good drawn to the land of everlasting life, and the Fishers of the Gospel sitting down at a spiritual banquet with their Lord, on the peaceful shore of life everlasting, after their own Resurrection, through the Resurrection of Christ.

— ἑκατὸν πεντηκοντατριῶν] St. Jerome (on Ezek. xlvii.) says that the ancients supposed that all the genera of fishes were 153, and that this number indicates that "omne genus hominum de mari hujus sæculi extrahetur ad salutem." The mention of this number 153 is more remarkable, because it is so near a round number 150, to which ὡσεί might have been prefixed. (Cp. Bengel.)

But may it not be said that this very nearness to a round number serves to bring out more clearly the truth, that the great God and Judge of all does not look ad generalia, but counts every one of His elect children, whose very hairs are all numbered (Matt. x. 30)?

— οὐκ ἐσχίσθη τὸ δίκτυον] The net is a figure of the Church of the elect. There are divisions in the Church on earth; but there are no schisms in the Church of the Saints. (Aug.)

12. ἀριστήσατε] 'come to breakfast.' "ἄριστον primis temporibus significabat jentaculum, ut h. l. cibum matutinum, (serioribus Græcis ἀκράτισμα dictum) et ἀριστᾶν, jentare, Athen. i. 9, 10, καὶ ἄριστον μὲν ἐστὶ τὸ ὑπὸ τὴν ἕω λαμβανόμενον. Apollon. Lex. Hom. p. 206, ἄριστον τὸ πρώϊνον ἔμβρωμα, οἷον τὸ ἀκράτισμα: add. Phavorin. deinde verò ἄριστον adhibitum etiam est de prandio, vid. Perizonius ad Æl. H. V. ix. 19, et in dialecto Macedonicâ novâ atque Alexandrinâ nomen ἄριστον hâc quoque potestate præditum fuit, ut notaret epulum quodcunque." (Kuin.)

It was now early dawn, πρωΐα (v. 4), a proper emblem of the Morning of the Resurrection, when Christ will appear, standing on the sea-shore of Eternity, and invite His disciples to sit down with Him. (Cp. Luke xii. 37.)

13. ἔρχεται—ὁμοίως] See on v. 9.

15. πλεῖον τούτων] more than thy brethren? Thou who didst say that they all should be offended with Me, yet wouldest thou never be offended (Matt. xxvi. 33. Mark xiv. 29. Luke xxii. 33. John xiii. 37). "Dost thou love Me more than these?"

— σὺ οἶδας] Observe σὺ repeated thrice. St. Peter had now learnt that Christ knew him better than he knew himself.

15—17.] The questions of our Lord, the answers of St. Peter, our Lord's commission to him, stand thus:—

1. (v. 15) ἀγαπᾷς με πλεῖον τούτων;	Ναὶ, Κύριε, σὺ οἶδας ὅτι φιλῶ σε.	βόσκε τὰ ἀρνία μου.
2. (v. 16) ἀγαπᾷς με;	Ναὶ, Κύριε, σὺ οἶδας ὅτι φιλῶ σε.	Ποίμαινε τὰ πρόβατά μου.
3. (v. 17) φιλεῖς με;	Κύριε, σὺ πάντα οἶδας· σὺ γινώσκεις ὅτι φιλῶ σε.	βόσκε τὰ πρόβατά μου.

In the Hebrew and Syriac there are not the same shades of difference in words of loving (see Kuin.), as there are in the Greek of the New Testament and in the Vulgate Latin Version, which (as Buttmann observes in Lachmann's edition of N. T., p. xlv.) renders uniformly ἀγαπᾶν by diligere, and φιλεῖν by amare and osculari. The last word osculari serves better than any comment to mark the difference between ἀγαπᾶν and φιλεῖν.

Though therefore it would not seem safe to build any thing upon the Syriac words which our Lord may be supposed to have uttered, yet the Holy Spirit, the Searcher of hearts, who knew what was in our Lord's mind and in St. Peter's mind, signified something by availing Himself of the variations of Greek in the words for love and also for feed in this Evangelical narrative. And if our Lord used the same word in Syriac, then this variation in Greek may be a sign of Inspiration.

Our Lord asks St. Peter, ἀγαπᾷς με; 'Diligis me?' St. Peter dares not presume to say that he has that constant, settled, unwavering, practical love which ἀγάπη implies, such as was the love of Christ for His friends, especially for St. John (see v. 20). He can only answer for the emotions of his heart at the time, which He now knows by experience to be weak, though fervent and tender. Therefore he says φιλῶ σε. He will not rise above professions of φιλῶ.

Our Lord, having first deigned to waive the words πλεῖον τούτων, at length condescends still further to his humility and diffidence, and adopts St. Peter's own word, and says φιλεῖς με;

Our Lord had known that St. Peter, in his self-confidence, had formerly professed more than he would perform; and now He knows that St. Peter in his humility professes less than he will perform.

Formerly St. Peter had professed ἀγαπᾶν, but his ἀγαπᾶν proved to be only a short-lived φιλεῖν. Now he only professes φιλεῖν, but Christ knows that it will be a long-lived ἀγαπᾶν; it will be an ἀγάπη in old age (v. 18), and stronger than death [1]. Therefore our Lord commands him to prove his love by feeding the Lambs and Sheep of His Flock (for which He had shed His Blood) with the milk of His Word and spiritual herbage, and by tending His Sheep with his pastoral crook. And He Who knew Peter better than Peter knew himself, foretells that Peter will prove his ἀγάπη by the best of all tests (John xv. 15), the test which Christ the good Shepherd has given of His love for His Sheep, by dying for Christ.

Some, on the authority A, C, read προβάτια here, but there is much force in the repetition of πρόβατα,—with ποιμαίνειν first, and then with βόσκειν,—to show the greatness of the privilege and the duty in which St. Peter is now reinstated, and to inculcate the truth that this is the evidence of love which Christ requires.

15. βόσκε τὰ ἀρνία μου] As if there were no other way by which St. Peter might prove his love than by being a faithful shepherd under the Chief Shepherd. (Aug. Serm. 149.)

Peter answers, one for all, and Christ addresses all Shepherds in Peter. (Aug. Serm. 137. 295, 296.)

17. λέγει αὐτῷ τὸ τρίτον] The triple confession is made a counterpoise to the triple denial, that his tongue may be an organ of love no less than of fear; and that the presence of Life may not elicit less than the imminence of Death. (Aug.)

— βόσκε τὰ πρόβατά μου] Feed not thyself, but feed My sheep; the sheep of Christ. Not thy sheep, not the sheep of man. They who feed Christ's sheep with a desire to make them their own sheep, convict themselves of loving themselves more than Christ. Let us not love ourselves, but Him; and in feeding His sheep, let us not seek our own things, but His. He who loves himself and not God, is no true lover of himself, for he cannot live of himself, and he therefore dies by loving himself. Hence the Apostle traces the evils of the last days to self-love (2 Tim. iii. 1—5). We love ourselves best by not loving ourselves, but Him, from Whom we live and from Whom our life comes. (Aug. Tract. cxxiii.)

---

[1] The reader may compare a somewhat different view in Mr. Trench's Synonyms of N. T. p. 48. Meyer refers to Tittmann, Synon. p. 53.

ἦς νεώτερος ἐζώννυες σεαυτὸν, καὶ περιεπάτεις ὅπου ἤθελες, ὅταν δὲ γηράσῃς ἐκτενεῖς τὰς χεῖράς σου, καὶ ἄλλος σε ζώσει, καὶ οἴσει ὅπου οὐ θέλεις. 19 Τοῦτο δὲ εἶπε σημαίνων ποίῳ θανάτῳ δοξάσει τὸν Θεόν· καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν λέγει αὐτῷ, k ch. 13. 23. & 1. 7. Ἀκολούθει μοι. 20 [k] Ἐπιστραφεὶς δὲ ὁ Πέτρος βλέπει τὸν μαθητὴν, ὃν ἠγάπα ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ἀκολουθοῦντα, ὃς καὶ ἀνέπεσεν ἐν τῷ δείπνῳ ἐπὶ τὸ στῆθος αὐτοῦ, καὶ εἶπε, Κύριε, τίς ἐστιν ὁ παραδιδούς σε; 21 τοῦτον ἰδὼν ὁ Πέτρος λέγει τῷ

l Matt. 16. 28. Ἰησοῦ, Κύριε, οὗτος δὲ τί; 22 Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, [l] Ἐὰν αὐτὸν θέλω μένειν ἕως ἔρχομαι, τί πρὸς σέ; σὺ μοὶ ἀκολούθει. 23 Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ λόγος οὗτος εἰς τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς, ὅτι ὁ μαθητὴς ἐκεῖνος οὐκ ἀποθνήσκει· καὶ οὐκ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ὅτι οὐκ ἀποθνήσκει, ἀλλ', ἐὰν αὐτὸν θέλω μένειν ἕως ἔρχομαι, τί πρὸς σέ;

m ch. 19. 35. 24 [m] Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ μαθητὴς ὁ μαρτυρῶν περὶ τούτων, καὶ γράψας ταῦτα, n ch. 20. 30. Amos 7. 10. καὶ οἴδαμεν ὅτι ἀληθής ἐστιν ἡ μαρτυρία αὐτοῦ. 25 [n] Ἔστι δὲ καὶ ἄλλα πολλὰ ὅσα ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ἅτινα ἐὰν γράφηται καθ' ἕν, οὐδὲ αὐτὸν οἶμαι τὸν κόσμον χωρῆσαι τὰ γραφόμενα βιβλία. Ἀμήν.

Christ addresses His Church in Peter, whom He desires to make a good shepherd in His own Body the Church, and asks him, "Lovest thou Me?" And in saying, "Feed My sheep," and in foreshowing Peter's death, He intimates the duty of the good Shepherd to "lay down his life for the Sheep" (John x. 11. 15). (Aug. Tract. 47.)

What Christ is, a good Shepherd, that He gives to His members to be. Peter is a Shepherd, and Paul is a Shepherd, and the rest of the Apostles are Shepherds, and good Bishops are Shepherds, but none of us calls himself the Door of the Sheep. Paul was a good Shepherd, because He entered by the Door; and when the Sheep at Corinth began to call themselves by names of different Shepherds, saying, "I am of Paul, I am of Cephas," he exclaimed, "Whither are ye going, miserable that ye are? Was Paul crucified for you?" (1 Cor. i. 12, 13.) (Aug. Tract. xlvii. Cp. Barrow on the Pope's Supremacy, vol. vi. pp. 110—118. Moberly on the Forty Days, pp. 134—192.)

18. ἐκτενεῖς τὰς χεῖρας] i. e. be crucified; as he was at Rome. (Aug. See Tertullian, Præsc. Hæret. 36. Eusebius, ii. 25.)

— οἴσει ὅπου οὐ θέλεις] Peter desired to be released from the burden of the body, and to be with Christ; but, if it might be so, he desired life eternal without the pains of death; he shrunk from those pains through natural infirmity, and was carried to them unwillingly; but he overcame them and suffered willingly. Since Peter had said, "I will never deny Thee; I will lay down my life for Thee." Christ grants him his will; but in saying "Whither thou willest not," He intimates the sympathy and necessity of nature, and that the soul is unwilling to be severed from the body (otherwise there would be often self-murders); he was carried unwillingly to be crucified, but he was crucified willingly.

However grievous may be the pain of death, it is to be overcome by the power of love for Him Who is our Life, and Who willingly suffered death for our sakes.

Christ reserved the glory of martyrdom for the old age of Peter. (Aug., Chrys.) His old age was no hindrance to his courage, for he was invigorated by the Holy Ghost. (Chrys.)

19. σημαίνων ποίῳ θανάτῳ δοξάσει τὸν Θεόν] This was the issue; he who had promised, in presumptuous haste, that he would die for Christ, at last died for Him in perfect love. It was needful that Christ should first die for the salvation of Peter, before Peter could die for the Gospel of Christ. (Aug.)

— δοξάσει τὸν Θεόν] 'glorify God.' He does not say 'die.' To suffer for Christ is glory. (Chrys.)

— ἀκολούθει μοι] Thou hast heard My words, which are the words of Him Whose truth thou hast proved by thine own denial of Him. He Who prophesied that thou wouldest deny Him, now prophesies that thou wilt die for Him. Now thou mayest no more fear to die, for He liveth Whom thou didst weep as dead, and Whom thou didst endeavour with earnest love to deter from dying for all.

Peter not only followed Christ to death, but in the manner of his death—crucifixion. (Aug.)

22. ἐὰν αὐτὸν θέλω μένειν ἕως ἔρχομαι] i. e. If I will that he should not follow Me, as thou wilt, by martyrdom on the cross, but that he should tarry for a placid consummation of his life, and wait in expectation till I come to take him to Myself in peace. (Aug. Cp. Serm. cclii.)

Our Lord had before said to Peter (John xiii. 36), thou canst not follow Me now; now that thou boastest of thine own strength, saying that thou wilt not deny Me, but wilt lay down thy life for Me. But, He added, thou wilt follow Me hereafter; and He now explains that saying.

— ἕως ἔρχομαι] while I am coming, and till I come (1 Tim. iv. 13).

— σὺ μοί] both pronouns are emphatic.

It may be observed here,—once for all,—that the oblique cases of the pronoun Ἐγὼ (viz. μοῦ, μοί, μέ) are often used in the New Testament in a manner peculiar to it; and that this usage imparts much strength and clearness to the sense.

See a remarkable example in Matt. xvi. 18, οἰκοδομήσω μοῦ τὴν ἐκκλησίαν. When so used, they do not follow their substantive, but precede it. They are not enclitic, but emphatic. The same may be said of their relation to verbs, as here, where the sense is, "Do thou follow Me, instead of inquiring what will become of him."

In the present Edition, these oblique cases are accentuated accordingly.

23. ἀποθνήσκει] Cp. Matt. ii. 4, ποῦ ὁ Χριστὸς γεννᾶται; — οὐκ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ὅτι οὐκ ἀποθνήσκει, ἀλλ'] Our Lord delivered here two prophecies, one concerning the death of St. Peter, the other concerning the death of St. John.

The prophecy concerning St. Peter's death had been fulfilled, and been explained by its fulfilment when St. John wrote his Gospel, by the manner of St. Peter's death, in which he followed Christ to the cross, and so glorified God (v. 19).

But the second prophecy—that concerning St. John's own death—was not yet fulfilled. It was to be fulfilled, and to be explained by its fulfilment, when the Evangelist came to die. And those who survived him, knew that it was fulfilled in the patient waiting, and in the quiet endurance of life, protracted among many trials, after the death of all his brother Apostles, till Christ came and took him to Himself by a natural death. Thus St. Peter followed Christ; St. John tarried for Him. St. Peter's was the martyrdom of death, St. John's was the martyrdom of life.

The Holy Spirit, by commenting here on a fulfilled prophecy (that concerning St. Peter), teaches us to attend to the fulfilment of prophecy in our own times. But by only correcting an error with regard to an unfulfilled prophecy,—that concerning St. John,—He teaches us not to speculate curiously on unfulfilled prophecies, but to wait patiently till Christ comes to us in the events of History, and interprets His own prophecies by fulfilling them.

24. οὗτός ἐστιν] John himself. On οὗτος, used by a speaker when designating himself, see the note on Matt. xvi. 18.

— οἴδαμεν] 'We know.' I, and you whom I address, know that His testimony is true, for it is the testimony of the Spirit of Truth (cp. 1 John v. 6. 3 John 12). An assertion of Inspiration, for who could have recorded Christ's Discourses on the mysterious doctrines revealed in this Gospel, and have solemnly affirmed that his record was true, if he had not been enabled to do so by the illumination of the Holy Ghost?

25. ὅσα] Not for ἃ simply, but indicating multitude and greatness, "quæ et quanta." So used by St. John, Rev. i. 2, ὅσα εἶδε, "quæ et quanta vidit."

— οὐδὲ αὐτὸν οἶμαι τὸν κόσμον χωρῆσαι] A manner of speech which is employed when that which is evident is amplified, without any deviation from truth. The expressions used may exceed the fact, but so as to show the desire of the speaker without any delusion being practised on the hearer. This figure of speech is called hyperbole, and is found in other places of Holy Writ. (Aug. Cp. Aug. Civ. Dei, xvi. 21. Cp. Rom. ix. 3. Glass. Philog. Sacr. tract. i. cap. xix. p. 905, ed. 1711.)

St. John testifieth this with as great certainty of truth as height of hyperbole. (Bp. Pearson.)

— οἶμαι] the first person singular; very appropriate after οἴδαμεν the first person plural in the preceding verse, lest any one should attribute this verse to any but one person, and that person the disciple who wrote these things—St. John. Some, however, have questioned the genuineness of this verse. But it is found in all the MSS. with scarcely more than a single exception (Cod. 63).

St. John does not describe the Ascension of Christ into heaven. This had been already done in the preceding Gospels. (Mark xvi. 19. Luke xxiv. 51. Cp. Acts i. 2—12.) He takes for granted that it is well known to those for whom he wrote. And though he does not describe it, yet he records three speeches of Christ referring to it (iii. 13; vi. 62; xx. 17).

NOTE ON THE GENUINENESS OF THE FOREGOING CHAPTER.

It has been said by some, that this Gospel, as originally written by St. John, ended with the close of the preceding Chapter—the twentieth; and

That this Chapter,—the Twenty-first,—was added afterwards;

Either by himself,

Or by some other hand.

The main ground for this allegation is,—that the words which conclude the Twentieth Chapter appear to be designed, as, it is said, their tenour indicates, to form the conclusion of the Gospel.

On the evidence of the authorship of the Twenty-first Chapter, it is to be observed;

That all the MSS. have it, without any distinction or separation of it from the body of the Gospel;

That it is also received as an integral part of the Gospel in the Ancient Versions and Expositions of it;

That the internal evidence is very strong in favour of its genuineness. For example; this Chapter contains many expressions which are characteristic of, and peculiar to, St. John. St. John often uses μετὰ ταῦτα, as in v. 1. See iii. 22; v. 1. 14; vi. 1; vii. 1; xix. 38. St. John, and St. John alone, uses the words θάλασσα ἡ Τιβεριάς (v. 1). Cp. above on v. 1, and Trench on the Miracles, p. 152. He alone uses πιάζειν (vv. 3. 10). He alone of the Evangelists uses μέντοι (v. 4); he alone uses the double ἀμὴν (v. 18); he alone uses the form Θωμᾶς ὁ λεγόμενος Δίδυμος (v. 2); he often uses the form Σίμων Πέτρος (vv. 2, 3. 7. 11. 15), which is very rare in the other Gospels; he alone uses the term ὀψάριον (vv. 9, 10. 13); he alone uses παιδία, as in v. 5. Cp. 1 John ii. 13. 18; and he alone uses the expression ὁ μαθητὴς ὃν ἠγάπα ὁ Ἰησοῦς (v. 7). The word μένειν, as applied to St. John by Christ (vv. 21, 22), and characteristic of St. John's duty and life, seems to have made such an impression on him, that he repeats it twenty-six times in his Epistles. And the words of Christ, ἕως ἔρχομαι (vv. 22, 23), find a striking echo in the last chapter of St. John's Revelation (v. 20), ἀμὴν· ἔρχου, Κύριε Ἰησοῦ.

This chapter must also have been written in St. John's lifetime;

For, if it had been written after his death, it is clear that the observation on our Lord's prophecy in v. 23 would have been illustrated by an addition to the effect that St. John had died, and that therefore the prophecy could not have meant that he would not die. And it is not probable that during St. John's lifetime, any other person would have ventured, or have been permitted by him, to add to his Gospel.

Besides; the Writer of this Chapter distinctly claims to be St. John. See v. 24 compared with the preceding vv. 20—23.

And lastly, this chapter has been received by the Universal Church of Christ as an integral part of St. John's Gospel.

On the whole, then, there does not seem to be any ground for doubting that this chapter was written by St. John.

But may it not have been written and published by St. John himself after he had written and published the preceding part of the Gospel? May it not (as some suppose) have been annexed as an Appendix to his Gospel by himself?

In reply to this question, let it be observed that St. John's Gospel was written in order to be read publicly in the Churches of Christendom. Copies were made of it for this purpose as soon as it was written. And if two editions had been published of it, it is probable that some MSS. of the Gospel would now be extant, representing the original edition. But none of the MSS. of this Gospel omit the twenty-first chapter.

No Version or Exposition affords any sign of the existence of two editions of the Gospel; nor does any ancient writer appear to have received any record, or even the least intimation, of their existence.

It has been alleged, that St. John wrote the twenty-first chapter to correct the erroneous notion that he himself would not die. (See v. 23.) But suppose this to have been so. St. John's Gospel was not written till fifty years after our Lord's prophecy concerning him was delivered. And he relates that the saying that he should not die, went forth in consequence of that prophecy (v. 23). If, therefore, that erroneous notion was the occasion of his writing the twenty-first chapter, it would have operated as strongly when he first published the Gospel as at any subsequent time after its publication.

But it is said that the Gospel ends with the conclusion of the Twentieth chapter. What follows (it is alleged) is the result of an after-thought.

This allegation appears to proceed from a non-apprehension of the connexion between the Twentieth and Twenty-first Chapters. They are, in fact, closely united, as follows:

Toward the close of the Twentieth Chapter, our Lord says to St. Thomas, "Because thou hast seen Me thou hast believed; Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed" (xx. 29).

St. John then proceeds to intimate to the readers and hearers of his Gospel that they may obtain for themselves this blessing; and in this respect be more blessed than St. Thomas, and even than the Apostles themselves. He therefore adds, that "Jesus did many other miracles in the presence of His disciples, which have not been written in this book;" that is, He did them in the sight of those who were convinced by them and believed (v. 30).

But do not therefore imagine that you, the hearers and readers of the Gospel, are less privileged than we His disciples who saw them. For these have been written (ταῦτα γέγραπται) for your sake, that you, who have not seen them, might believe, and so gain the blessing pronounced by Christ on all those who believe without seeing; and that, believing, ye might have life in His name.

He thus closes the Twentieth Chapter; and in order to prove this more fully, St. John proceeds to add, in the twenty-first chapter, a specimen of what was done by Jesus after these things which had been written.

His argument now is—If these things (ταῦτα) which have been already written in this book ought to constrain you to believe, and enable you to have life in the Name of Jesus, and to obtain the blessing He has promised to those who have not seen them and yet have believed, the ground of your belief will be still more strong, and your hope and assurance of the promised blessing will be yet more stedfast, if I proceed to record, by way of example, and ex abundanti, what Jesus did in addition to, and after, these things which have been already written.

Therefore he proceeds immediately to corroborate his declaration by writing the Twenty-first chapter.

That chapter is an illustration and expansion of the assertion at the close of the Twentieth.

Observe how it begins: μετὰ ταῦτα, 'after these things.' He takes up the word ταῦτα from the last verse of the preceding chapter. After these things, which have been written, he goes on to say, ἐφανέρωσεν ἑαυτὸν τοῖς μαθηταῖς. He here also repeats the word μαθηταί from the last verse but one of the foregoing chapter. He reiterates this word "disciples" in vv. 2. 4. 8. 12. 14. Jesus manifested Himself to His disciples: to those who saw and believed, —to Simon Peter, to us the two sons of Zebedee, and to others. But do not suppose that this manifestation was not also for your sakes who hear and read this Gospel. "Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed." You who have not seen, but who hear and read and believe, may, by believing, inherit a blessing which is not enjoyed by us who were His disciples when He was alive on earth; you may enjoy a blessing which was not possessed by St. Thomas, no, nor even by Simon Peter, and by the Israelite in whom was no guile, and by the disciple whom Jesus loved, and who saw and wrote these things (xxi. 24), and we know that his testimony is true.

Nor is this all. As if to press this argument home still more forcibly on his hearers and readers, St. John repeats at the close of the last chapter some words which he had used at the end of the preceding one. These words are ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς. The works which He did (ἃ ἐποίησεν), these bear witness of Him (v. 34. 36). Enough and more than enough of these His works has now been written, in order that you may believe and have life. And now at the close of this Gospel,—the last of all the Gospels,—the Gospel written by the disciple whom Jesus loved, the last surviving Apostle, hear this solemn declaration from me; that not only, as I have said before, did Jesus many things which have not been written in this book (xx. 30), but that, if all His mighty works were written severally and in each particular, not even the world itself would contain the Books that should be written.

Therefore, on the whole, you may derive instruction and assurance not only from what has been written in this book (xx. 30), but also from what has not been written. Believe, therefore, that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God. Believe, and have life in His Name (xx. 30). Believe, and inherit the blessing—For, Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed (xx. 29).

END OF PART I.

BY THE EDITOR.

OCCASIONAL SERMONS preached in Westminster Abbey.

Contents of the several Numbers:—

FIRST SERIES.

1. Counsels and Consolations in Times of Heresy and Schism.
2. On Pleas alleged for Separation from the Church.
3. The Doctrine of Baptism with reference to the Opinion of Prevenient Grace.
4. An Enquiry—Whether the Baptismal Offices of the Church of England may be interpreted in a Calvinistic Sense? Part I. The Doctrine of Scripture compared with the Tenets of Calvin.
5. The Enquiry continued—Whether the Baptismal Offices of the Church of England were framed by Persons holding Calvinistic Opinions; and whether they may be interpreted in a Hypothetical Sense? Part II. Argument from Internal Evidence.
6. The Enquiry continued. Part III. Argument from External Evidence.
7. The Church of England in 1711 and 1850.
8. The Church of England and the Church of Rome in 1850. Conclusion.

SECOND SERIES.

9. Diotrephes and St. John; On the Claim set up by the Bishop of Rome to Exercise Jurisdiction in England and Wales, by erecting therein Episcopal Sees.
10. St. Peter at Antioch, and the Roman Pontiff in England.
11. The Christian Soldier, a Christian Builder.
12. On a Recent Proposal of the Church of Rome to make a New Article of Faith. (The Immaculate Conception.)
13. On the Authority and Uses of Church Synods.
14 & 15. On Secessions to the Church of Rome. 2*s.*
16. On the Privileges and Duties of the Christian Laity. Conclusion.

THIRD SERIES.

17 & 18. On the Great Exhibition of 1851.
19. On Secular Education.
20. On the Office of the Holy Spirit in Education.
21. On the Use of the Church Catechism in National Education.
22. On an Education Rate.
23. On Intellectual Display in Education. (School Inspection.)
24. Early Instruction.

FOURTH SERIES.

25—33. On the History of the Church of Ireland.

FIFTH SERIES.

34. Religious Restoration in England—Introductory: On National Sins, Judgments, and Duties.
35. Census of Religious Worship. (Preached on Trinity Sunday.)
36. The Episcopate. On Additional Sees.
37. The Diaconate; and on Lay Agency.
38. Tithes, Endowments, and Maintenance of the Clergy.
39. On Church Rates.
40. On Divorce.
41. Restoration of Holy Matrimony.
42. Hopes of Religious Restoration. Conclusion.

SIXTH SERIES.

43. On the Immaculate Conception.
44. The Christian Sunday.
45. The Armies on White Horses; or, the Soldier's Return.

 Any Volume, or any Number, may be had separately.

SCRIPTURE INSPIRATION; or, on the CANON of the SCRIPTURES of the OLD and NEW TESTAMENT, and on the APOCRYPHA. Twelve Discourses, preached before the University of Cambridge. With a copious Appendix of Ancient Authorities. Second Edition. 9*s.*

LECTURES on the APOCALYPSE. Preached before the University of Cambridge. Third Edition. 10*s.* 6*d.*

A HARMONY of the APOCALYPSE, being also a revised Translation of the same, with Notes. 4to. 4*s.* 6*d.*

THEOPHILUS ANGLICANUS; or, Instruction for the Young Student concerning the Church and the Anglican Branch of it. Seventh Edition. 8*s.* 6*d.*

ELEMENTS of INSTRUCTION concerning the CHURCH, and the Anglican Branch of it; for the Use of Young Persons. 3*s.* 6*d.*

S. HIPPOLYTUS and the CHURCH of ROME in the beginning of the Third Century, from the newly-discovered "Philosophumena." 8*s.* 6*d.*

LETTERS to M. GONDON, Author of "Mouvement Religieux en Angleterre," "Conversion de Cent Cinquante Ministres Anglicans," &c., on the DESTRUCTIVE CHARACTER of the CHURCH of ROME, both in RELIGION and POLITY. Third Edition. 7*s.* 6*d.*

A SEQUEL to the above. Second Edition. 6*s.* 6*d.*

A DIARY in France; mainly on Topics concerning Education and the Church. Second Edition. 5*s.* 6*d.*

NOTES at PARIS. 1854. 4*s.*

The APOCALYPSE; or, Book of Revelation. The original Greek Text, with MSS. Collations and Fac-similes of Ancient MSS.; an English Translation and Harmony, with Notes; and an Appendix to the Hulsean Lectures on the Apocalypse. 10*s.* 6*d.*

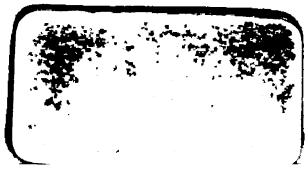
BABYLON; or, the Question considered, "Is the CHURCH of ROME the BABYLON of the APOCALYPSE?" 3*s.*

LATINÆ GRAMMATICÆ RUDIMENTA; or, King Edward the Sixth's Grammar. In usum Scholarum. Ninth Edition. 3*s.* 6*d.*

CORRESPONDENCE of RICHARD BENTLEY, D.D., Master of Trinity College. 2 vols. 2*l.* 2*s.*

MEMOIRS of WILLIAM WORDSWORTH. 2 vols. 30*s.*

THEOCRITUS, Codicum MSS. ope recensitus et emendatus, cum Indicibus locupletissimis. 10*s.* 6*d.*



ATHENS and ATTICA. Journal of a Residence there; with Maps, Plans, and Inscriptions. Third Edition.

GREECE, Historical, Pictorial, and Descriptive. A New Edition. 1*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*

INEDITED ANCIENT WRITINGS, copied from the Walls of Pompeii, with Fac-similes. 2*s.* 6*d.*

LONDON: RIVINGTONS, WATERLOO PLACE.

 The GREEK TESTAMENT, of which the First Part is now published, will, it is proposed, consist of Two Volumes, in Four Parts; as follows,—Part I. the Gospels; Part II. the Acts of the Apostles; Part III. St. Paul's Epistles; Part IV. the Catholic Epistles and Apocalypse; with a General Index to the Two Volumes.

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at `http://books.google.com/`

THE

NEW TESTAMENT

OF OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR

JESUS CHRIST,

IN THE ORIGINAL GREEK:

WITH NOTES,

BY

CHR. WORDSWORTH, D.D.

CANON OF WESTMINSTER.

PART II.—THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

LONDON:

RIVINGTONS, WATERLOO PLACE.

1857.

~~101 d. 712~~. 101 d. 723

LONDON:
GILBERT AND RIVINGTON, PRINTERS,
ST. JOHN'S SQUARE.

ADVERTISEMENT.

The present Volume contains the Second Part of the Editor's Greek Testament with Notes;

The First Part, already published, contains the Four Gospels:

The Third Part will contain St. Paul's Epistles;

The Fourth Part, concluding the work, will contain the Catholic Epistles and Book of Revelation; with a general Index to the whole.

May 14, 1857.

CONTENTS.

PAGE

INTRODUCTION TO THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES v

CHRONOLOGICAL SYNOPSIS OF THE EVENTS RELATED IN THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES xxxiv

ANCIENT GREEK MSS. CONTAINING THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES . . . xlii

CRITICAL EDITIONS xliv

AUTHORS AND EDITIONS QUOTED xlv

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES 1

INTRODUCTION

TO THE

ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

No portion of Holy Writ has been made the occasion of more controversy as to its design than the ACTS of the APOSTLES.

Some have said that it is composed without any specific plan [1], and that it is merely a collection, imperfect and fragmentary, of such materials concerning the primitive Church, as happened to be accessible to the writer. It has been argued from its inscription to Theophilus [2], that it was designed only for the use of a private Christian. It has been observed, that it records only some actions of two of the Apostles, St. Peter and St. Paul; and that it says nothing of their Epistles, or of the martyrdom of either, and that it terminates unexpectedly with St. Paul's first visit to Rome. And it is alleged, that its title, "the ACTS of the APOSTLES," disappoints the reader, and can hardly have been assigned to it by the writer himself.

Others [3], in recent times, profess to have discovered in this book a design to vindicate St. Paul, the Apostle of the Gentiles, from the charges of those who contrasted his teaching with that of St. Peter, the Apostle of the Circumcision; as if the one were contradictory to the other. And others [4], accepting this hypothesis concerning the Acts, have proceeded so far as to affirm, that the view presented to us there, of St. Paul's teaching, is inconsistent with the tenour of St. Paul's Epistles. The tendency of these theories is, evidently, to invalidate its authority, and to undermine the foundations of its Genuineness and Inspiration.

Happily for the Christian Church, there is no book whose Authenticity, Genuineness [5], and Inspiration, are more strongly corroborated by the consentient testimony of Ancient Christendom than the Acts of the Apostles.

[1] e. g. See Dr. Davidson, Introduction to N. T., ii. p. 62, and ibid. p. 24.

[2] Kuinoel, Ziegler, Heinrichs, Meyer, and others.

[3] Schneckenburger über d. Zweck d. Apostelsgeschichte. Bern. 1841.

[4] Bauer, Schwegler, and Zeller. See Meyer's Einleitung, p. 9.

[5] On the subject of the Authorship, the following ingenious argument from internal evidence deserves to be ·ıtei·. ;

"Acts xvi. 10: 'After he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavoured to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the Gospel unto them.'

"Here the writer of the history, by the change of persons, first indicates his own presence as a companion of the Apostle. It is well known that this book of Acts, as well as the third Gospel, are

The evidence of this is clear and open to all[1]. And taking for granted that this book was dictated by the Holy Ghost, we may feel confident, that, whether ascribed to St. Luke by the universal tradition of the Church; but it seems never to have been shown that the same conclusion may be reached, simply and rigidly, by the internal evidence alone.

"The writer then, so far as we can learn from his history, was present with the Apostle from Troas to Philippi, in his first visit to Europe; was absent from him, or not distinctly present, after his departure from Philippi, during his double stay at Corinth and Ephesus; and having joined him at Philippi again, continued his companion during his voyage from Greece to Palestine, his imprisonment at Cæsarea, his second voyage, and, at least, the earlier part of his imprisonment at Rome.

"None of St. Paul's letters were written until his arrival at Corinth, when the first separation had taken place. Six of them, the first and second to Thessalonica, the Epistle to the Galatians, the first and second to Corinth, and the Epistle to the Romans, were written during the interval of the writer's apparent absence. His name could not then be expected to occur in these letters among the friends who were present with St. Paul, and who joined in the salutations.

"Four other letters, to the Ephesians, Colossians, Philemon, and Philippians, were written during the first imprisonment at Rome. Now since the writer had been a companion of the Apostle for three whole years before that imprisonment, had attended him on the voyage with only one or two others, and had continued with him till his arrival at Rome, it is most improbable that he would leave him at once, and not cheer him by his presence and friendship, as in the previous long delay at Cæsarea. In these letters, therefore, if the helpers present with St. Paul are at all mentioned, his name will be likely to appear. And since he had been so intimate a companion, and attended him faithfully so long, it seems almost certain, that the Apostle, if he specified his chief helpers and friends who were with him, could not omit one so conspicuous. The writer, we may thus infer, was either Tychicus, Timothy, Epaphroditus, Epaphras, Onesimus, Aristarchus, Marcus, Jesus Justus, Luke, or Demas, the only persons whose names appear in the salutations of these four letters.

"But this choice is soon reduced within narrower limits. Timothy, Tychicus, and Aristarchus could none of them be the writer, since they accompanied Paul and himself on the voyage from Greece (Acts xx. 4, 5). Onesimus is excluded, since he was converted by St. Paul during his imprisonment at Rome (Philem. 10). Mark is also excluded, since he is mentioned repeatedly in the history, and was rejected by St. Paul as a companion in that very journey in which the writer soon afterwards joined him. Epaphroditus clearly was not with the Apostle when the imprisonment began, but was sent to him from Philippi, when they heard tidings of his necessities. Epaphras appears to have been a local Pastor from Colossæ, who arrived also at Rome after the imprisonment there had begun. Thus Jesus Justus, Luke, and Demas are the only three names which are not absolutely excluded by these texts.

"That Jesus Justus was not the writer may be gathered from two presumptions of considerable weight. First, he was of the circumcision, or a Jew by birth; while several indications in the book of Acts lead us to suppose that the writer was a Greek, and only a Proselyte, rather than a native Jew. And next, Jesus Justus is named only once, while the two others are named three times in these Epistles. Now the companion of the Apostle for so many years, and through so many dangers, would not be likely to be left thus entirely in the background, compared with others.

"The choice will now be confined to Luke and Demas, each of whom is mentioned three times, and always near together. In the last instance, however, there occurs a remarkable contrast. In his second imprisonment, as we learn from 2 Tim. iv. 10, 11, Demas forsook the Apostle, through love of the world, and 'only Luke' continued with him, while every other helper was absent. It would be a high degree of moral incongruity to suppose that this apostate, whether his apostasy was temporal or final, and not the companion who was faithful to the last, was the same with the faithful companion during shipwreck and imprisonment, and the honoured writer of two main books of the sacred canon. And thus, by internal evidence alone, we are led to the conclusion that Luke, and no other, was the real Author of the Gospel and the book of Acts. The circumstantial evidence limits our choice to three names, while the moral evidence, hardly less forcible, confines it among these to St. Luke only." —Birks' Horæ Apostolicæ, pp. 351—353.

[1] It may be seen in Lardner, iii. 207. Kirchofer, Quellensammlung zur Geschichte des N. T. Canons, pp. 161—168. Davidson's Introduction, pp. 2, 3; and Appendix A to the Editor's Lectures on the Canon of Scripture. See also below, p. xii, note.

we can discover its design or no, a design certainly it has, not unworthy of its Divine Author. He is the Spirit of Counsel and of Might, and what He purposes wisely, that He performs effectually.

But, is it difficult, to discover its plan? Let us consider.

St. Luke has written one work, consisting of two parts; the former his Gospel, the latter the Acts of the Apostles.

The connexion of these two parts is marked by the commencement of the latter, with a reference to the former, and by the inscription of both to one person.

The latter opens thus; "The former Treatise I made, O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and to teach, until the day in which He was taken up." Let us remark also, that in his latter treatise, the Acts, he resumes the subject at the point where, in the former, the Gospel, he had left it; that is, with a description of Christ's Ascension into Heaven.

Therefore, it appears from the Acts, that in his former treatise, the Gospel, St. Luke had professed to give an account only of what Jesus began to do and to teach, while He was in person upon earth.

But now, in his second treatise, the Acts of the Apostles, he has a higher and ampler subject before him.

In this book, the sequel of his Gospel, he, being inspired by the Holy Ghost, comes forward and reveals to the world, what the same Jesus, having ascended into heaven, and being exalted to the right hand of God, and there sitting in glory, continues "to do and to teach," not within the narrow confines of Palestine, or during the few years of an earthly ministry, but "in Judæa and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth[1]," by the instrumentality of Apostles and Apostolic men, and Apostolic Churches, in all ages of the world; and what He will ever continue to do and to teach, from heaven, even till He comes again in glory to judge both the quick and dead.

This it would seem is the view which the Author himself propounds of his own plan in composing this book.

Let us consider, whether this view is consistent

I. With what may be gathered from other writers of Holy Scripture, concerning Christ's Office after His Ascension, and during His Session in Glory? and

II. Whether it be confirmed by internal evidence derivable from the Acts of the Apostles?

I. Our Blessed Lord Himself, when upon earth, promised to be always with His Apostles[2], and He said to them, a little before His Ascension, "As My Father hath sent Me, even so send I you[3]." Thus He prepares us to regard their Acts as done by Himself.

Accordingly St. Mark concludes his Gospel, by expressing in few but comprehensive words, what may be regarded as the argument of the Acts of the [1] Acts i. 8. [2] Matt. xxviii. 20. [3] John xx. 21.

Apostles. "So then after the LORD had spoken unto them, He was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God; and they went forth and preached every where, the LORD working with them, and confirming the Word with signs following[1]."

Thus the Holy Ghost, speaking by St. Mark, represents the Lord Jesus as continuing to do and to teach every where, after His Ascension, by the ministry of His Apostles, what He had begun to do and to teach while He was visible upon earth.

Similarly, the Apostle St. Paul, who, as Christian Antiquity testifies, was St. Luke's fellow-labourer in writing, as well as in preaching, the Gospel[2], represents Christ in glory, as the origin of all that is done or taught in the Church by the ministry of men. "He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all Heavens, that He might fill all things. And He gave (i. e. constituted) some Apostles, and some Prophets, and some Evangelists, and some Pastors and Teachers, for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the Ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ[3]."

In like manner the beloved Disciple St. John, to whom it was given to behold Christ in Glory, describes Him in the Apocalypse as walking in the midst of the seven Golden Candlesticks; which are the Churches of God[4].

Therefore the Church of England, in her Office for ordering of Priests, looks up from earth to heaven, and praises God for having given His dearly beloved Son, Who "after He had made perfect our Redemption by His death, and was ascended into Heaven, sent abroad into the world His Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists, Doctors, and Pastors, by whose labour and ministry He gathered together a great flock in all parts of the world, to set forth the eternal praise of God's holy Name."

II. Let us now examine, whether this view of the design of the Acts of the Apostles, is authorized by the contents of the book itself.

1. Consider the first Act done by the Apostles after the Ascension. They return from the Mount of Olives to Jerusalem, and resort to the Upper-room[5], probably the same where Jesus had instituted the Lord's Supper, and had shown Himself alive to the Apostles on the two successive Sundays after His Resurrection. There they nominate two persons, with the view of filling up the vacancy made by the death of Judas, and they address a prayer to Jesus, "Lord[6], show whether of these two Thou hast chosen[7]." Thus they declare their persuasion that He who is removed from them in person is still present with them, as He Himself had promised to be[8]; and that sitting on His throne in Heaven, He can and does choose an Apostle, as truly as when He was walking on earth, by the side of the Sea of Galilee. The lot was cast into the lap, but the disposing of it was of the Lord[9]. The lot which fell upon Matthias was dropped from heaven by the hand of Christ.

[1] Mark xvi. 19, 20. [2] See the authorities in the Introductory Note to the Four Gospels.
[3] Eph. iv. 10—12. [4] Rev. i. 13. 20; ii. 1. [5] Acts i. 13.
[6] That Κύριος is here Christ, see Notes on Acts i. 6. 21. 24.
[7] Acts i. 24. [8] Matt. xxviii. 20. [9] Prov. xvi. 33.

2. Let us observe the next great event in this Sacred History—the descent of the Holy Ghost. Christ when on earth, breathed upon His Apostles and said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost[1]." Thus He showed that He Himself was the source whence that gift would come. And when the Spirit was poured forth on the Apostles, Peter ascribed the effusion to Christ; "He, having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear[2]." He, who while on earth did and taught what the Messiah was to do and teach, now does and teaches in a more glorious manner by the Holy Ghost the Comforter, Whose Mission from heaven is like a royal largess, bestowed in honour of Christ's Coronation, a sign and fruit of His heavenly inauguration and enthronization on the Right Hand of the Majesty on high.

Hence the Kingdom of Christ, which was commenced by His ministry upon earth, is now continued, extended, and amplified. The Four Gospels are the Beginnings[3] of its history: they reveal the Day-Spring from on high, and the orient gleams of the Sun of Righteousness. But in the Acts of the Apostles we behold that Sun in his strength, shining in noonday splendour. After His exaltation in glory, and after the bestowal of the Holy Ghost, the number of the names of the Disciples at Jerusalem, which had been before a mere handful, a hundred and twenty[4], is now counted by thousands[5]. We see the Christian Church extending herself from the upper room on Mount Sion, in a gradually growing circle, till she embraces within her range "devout men from every nation under heaven[6]." She enfolds Samaria by the agency of Philip the Deacon, and of Peter and of John. Christ preaches by Philip in the wilderness of Gaza, and the Morians' Land stretches out her hands unto God[7]. He passes toward Ashdod: "Philistia is glad of Him[8]." "Behold the Philistines, and they of Tyre with the Morians, lo! there is He born[9],"—born by the new Birth of the Word and Sacraments. By the preaching of Peter He gathers in the Gentiles at Cæsarea; by the ministry of Paul He plants the Gospel at Antioch; He encounters the Evil One in various forms; of obstinate obduracy in Jewish Synagogues; of Pagan Idolatry at Lystra and Ephesus; of Sorcery, Divination, and Witchcraft at Samaria, Paphos, and Philippi; of sceptical Philosophy, and intellectual pride at Athens and Corinth; and at length in His triumphant march, as a crowning consummation of His conquests, and an earnest of universal victory, He plants the cross in the imperial city of the Cæsars, the heathen capital of the world, by the hands of him,—who had formerly been the fiercest persecutor of the Church, and afterwards was its most zealous champion, and courageous confessor and martyr, St. Paul.

These feats of Christian prowess were performed by means of men, but the Doer of them all was Christ. And what St. Luke says concerning one great harvest of souls, gathered into Christ's garner, may be said equally of all; "The LORD added to the Church daily such as should be saved[10]."

3. Thus we see in the Acts the continuance and extension of Christ's working, and we also recognize in it a greater manifestation of glory in the manner of His operations. He Himself had said, when on earth, "He that believeth on Me, the works that I do shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto my Father [1]." That is to say, when I am ascended into heaven, and am seated in glory there, then will I do, by the agency of others—My faithful servants—works more marvellous than are done by Me now, in person, before My Death, and Resurrection, and Ascension.

[1] John xx. 22. [2] Acts ii. 33. [3] See Note on Acts x. 11.
[4] Acts i. 15. [5] Ib. ii. 41; iv. 4. [6] Ib. ii. 5.
[7] Ps. lxviii. 31. [8] Ib. lx. 8. [9] Ib. lxxxvii. 4. [10] Acts ii. 47.

For example, our Lord when on earth had healed the woman who touched with faith the hem of His garment [2]. But when He had ascended into heaven, He worked miracles on the sick by means of the shadow of St. Peter at Jerusalem [3], and by the handkerchiefs of St. Paul at Ephesus [4]; and thus He showed that the sphere of His working was enlarged; and He creates in our hearts a blessed assurance that now, when as Man united for ever to God, He, by virtue of His obedience to death, has received "a Name which is above every name [5]," He is ever acting by those visible channels of Invisible Grace, His Word and Sacraments, which derive their efficacy from His Incarnation and Passion, and are the means by which the benefits of His Death are bestowed for our everlasting life, and are like the skirts of His garments, by which He operates from heaven, and heals the diseases of our souls.

4. The Acts of the Apostles is a portraiture of the Church; it is an Historical Picture traced by the Holy Ghost guiding the hand of the spiritual Painter St. Luke. It has, as its central Figure, Jesus Christ, perfect God and perfect Man, Who died for us on the cross, and raised Himself from the Dead, and ascended into heaven, and there reigns in glory, the Head of the Church and Sovereign Lord of the world. He is the one spring of all the life and beauty delineated in this heavenly landscape; and therefore, it will be remembered, the Apostles are careful to disclaim for themselves all independent power. "Ye men of Israel, why look ye on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk? The God of our fathers hath glorified His Son Jesus [6]." Thus they raise the eyes of the people from themselves—Christ's members and ministers on earth—to Christ their Head and King acting by them from heaven.

5. Accordingly, we find that in this History there are certain words continually recurring, which remind the reader of this concentration of power in Christ, and derivation of power from Him.

One of these is Κύριος, the LORD. This word, equivalent to the JEHOVAH of the Old Testament, and corresponding to it in the Septuagint Version [7], is constantly applied to CHRIST in the Acts, where it is found nearly a hundred times, and is like a sacred keynote of the whole, ever sounding forth His Divine Lordship in the ear of the world. The Lord's working in the Church, the Lord's household,—this is what the Acts reveals. Ὁ Κύριος ἐν τῇ Κυριακῇ,—that is its subject. It is "the LORD JESUS," Who is said by St. Peter to have come in and gone out among them [8].

[1] John xiv. 12.
[2] Matt. ix. 20.
[3] Acts v. 15.
[4] Ib. xix. 12.
[5] Phil. ii. 9.
[6] Acts iii. 13.
[7] See Note below on i. 6.
[8] Acts i. 21.

It is He Who chooses Matthias [1]; He Who sends the Holy Ghost [2]; He Who adds Believers daily to the Church [3]; He works miracles by the hands of His Apostles [4]. To the Lord Jesus, St. Stephen, the first Martyr, looks up and prays at the hour of death [5]. It is He Who calls to the persecuting Saul from heaven [6]. He sends Ananias to baptize him [7]. He sends Peter to Cornelius [8]. He (says St. Peter) is Lord of all [9]. His Angel delivers Peter from prison, and smites Herod on his throne [10]. He calls Paul to Macedonia [11], and comforts him at Jerusalem [12]; and finally the book closes with the triumphant declaration, that Paul preaches, at Rome, "the things concerning the Lord Jesus, with all confidence, no man forbidding him [13]."

Thus the mind is elevated from earth to heaven, and from the acts of the envoys and ambassadors, to the majesty and glory of the universal Lord and King, sitting on His heavenly throne.

6. This process of exaltation is also performed by another word, recurring in this history and drawing the heart upward to Christ.

That word is οὐρανὸς, HEAVEN. The inner scene of the book is Heaven. It begins with Christ's Ascension into heaven. The Apostles gaze upward to heaven, and a heavenly messenger comes and announces to them that Jesus is received into heaven; and will come again in like manner in glory from heaven [14]. On the day of Pentecost there comes a sound from heaven, as of a rushing mighty wind, and declares the source whence the Holy Spirit proceeds [15]. St. Stephen, in the hour of death, being full of the Holy Ghost, "looks stedfastly up to heaven, and sees the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God," and says, "Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God [16]." As Saul journeys and comes near to Damascus, "suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven; and he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me? And he said, Who art Thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus Whom thou persecutest [17]." Peter, when in a trance at Joppa, saw heaven opened, and the vessel descending, representing the Church Universal, extending to all corners of the earth, and into which all nations were to be received; and this vessel, let down from heaven, is drawn up again into heaven [18]. Thus it was declared, that the hand by which the Church Universal is ordered, maintained, and extended, is the hand of Christ in heaven. "In His hand are all the corners of the earth [19];" and whatever is effected by the ministry of men for the advancement of His kingdom on earth, is done by the power of Him, Who sitteth on the throne of heaven.

III. This view of the design of St. Luke in writing the Acts of the Apostles, seems to supply a solution of the difficulties which, as has been noticed at the commencement of this Introduction, have been raised with respect to it;

1. It accounts for its Title.

[1] Acts i. 24. [2] Ib. ii. 33—35. [3] Ib. ii. 47. [4] Ib. iii. 6; iv. 10.
[5] Ib. vii. 59, 60. [6] Ib. ix. 5. [7] Ib. ix. 10. [8] Ib. x. 4. 14.
[9] Ib. x. 36. [10] Ib. xii. 7. 23. [11] Ib. xvi. 10. [12] Ib. xxiii. 11.
[13] Ib. xxviii. 31. [14] Ib. i. 9—11. [15] Ib. ii. 2. [16] Ib. vii. 55, 56.
[17] Ib. ix. 3—5. [18] Ib. x. 11—16, and xi. 5—10. [19] Ps. xcv. 4.

In all probability that Title was given by the Author himself. Certainly it is very ancient[1]; and the book was never known by any other name.

But we must understand what that Title means; and its meaning is to be sought in the sense of the words πράττω and πρᾶξις, as distinguished from the words ποιῶ and ποίησις.

Christ is said ποιεῖν, e. g. in the first words of this book[2], Jesus began to do[3], and in numerous other places of Scripture; but He is never said πράττειν, and His agency is never described by the word πρᾶξις. This book therefore describes what Christ, the Invisible Head of the Church, ποιεῖ, i. e. does, or makes, by the visible instrumentality and operations, the πράξεις, or actings, of Apostles, who are His chief Ministers; and in whose apostolic office is contained and summed up the subordinate agency of the Priesthood and Diaconate.

The title of the book is[4] πράξεις Ἀποστόλων, "Actings of Apostles;" and two of the Apostles, Peter and Paul, are selected as specimens of the rest; and certain acts of theirs are chosen as specimens of their operations. The one, Peter, was called by Christ on earth; the other, Paul, was called by Christ from heaven. The one, Peter, had denied Christ; the other, Paul, had persecuted Christ. The one was an unlettered fisherman of Galilee; the other a learned Pharisee, brought up at Jerusalem. Therefore, in the choice of Peter and Paul, as special instruments for propagating the Gospel of Christ, His power is signally glorified. The acts of these two Apostles are like patterns of what Christ wrought by all the Apostles, whether on earth or from heaven. And what this book records of some of Christ's works, wrought by these two Apostles, enables us to infer what else He did by their agency, and by that of other Apostles whose acts are not described.

2. Hence also we perceive the reason why some of the main incidents in the [1] Thus the ancient Canon Muratorianus says, "Acta omnium Apostolorum sub uno libro scripta, sunt (qu. sanctus) Lucas optimè Theophilo comprehendit; quia sub præsentiâ ejus singula gerebantur." And Irenæus, iii. 15: "Fortassis et propter hoc operatus est Deus plurima Evangelii ostendi per Lucam, quibus necesse habuerint omnes uti, ut sequenti testificatione ejus quam habet de Actibus et Doctrinâ Apostolorum omnes sequentes et regulam veritatis in adulteratam habentes salvari possint." And Clemens Alexandrin. Adumbrat. in 1 Pet. Epist.: "Sicut Lucas quoque et Actus Apostolorum stylo executus." And Tertullian (passim, e. g. de præscr. hæret. 22, adv. Marcion. v. 2, and de Baptismo, 10) refers to this book, under the title Acta Apostolorum, and calls it Commentarium Lucæ, De jejun. 10. And Origen (ad Cels. vi. 12): ὡς ὁ Λουκᾶς ἐν ταῖς πράξεσιν τῶν ἀποστόλων ἔγραψεν, and Epist. ad African. § 9. So Eusebius, ii. 17; iii. 4. Cyril Hierosol., Cat. iv. Epiphan., Hæres. 1, p. 941, enumerates τὰς πράξεις τῶν ἀποστόλων in the Canon of the N. T.

It is observable that St. Hilary (in Matt. xiv.) refers to this book thus, "sicut libro Praxeos continetur." Qu. Praxeon? But he may have used a MS. like Codex D with the title πρᾶξις, in the singular.

The composition of Apocryphal "Acts" of Apostles and apostolic men (of which an Edition has been published by Tischendorf), proves the prior existence of a genuine "Acts," and the Christian Church knows of no other than the work of St. Luke bearing that inscription.

[2] Acts i. 1.

[3] Cp. John ii. 11. 23; iv. 29. 46; v. 11. 36; vi. 14; vii. 31; ix. 16; x. 25. 37; xi. 45, 46, and passim xx. 30; xxi. 25.

[4] Without the definite article αἱ before πράξεις, and perhaps, also, without τῶν before ἀποστόλων. The MSS. A, E, G, H have πράξεις τῶν ἁγίων ἀποστόλων as the title; D has πρᾶξις ἀποστόλων; B has πράξεις ἀποστόλων or πράξεις τῶν ἀποστόλων. Lachmann, Tisch., Bornemann, and Alford have adopted πράξεις ἀποστόλων in their editions history of Peter and Paul,—for example, their last sufferings and glorious martyrdom,—are not recorded in this book. Some excellent persons, indeed, have deplored this[1]; some have therefore complained of omissions, or defects in the history. But no; St. Luke was with St. Paul in his last days, who then says, "only Luke is with me[2];" but he has not said any thing of them. And with good reason. An uninspired writer would have dealt differently with his subject. Whatever else he left untold in the history of the Apostles, he would certainly have described their deaths. But St. Luke was guided by the Holy Ghost. There is inspiration in his silence. Neither Paul nor Peter are the heroes of the Acts; Christ is all in all. And by the subordination of the instruments, the Agent is glorified; by the "omissions and defects," as they are called, in the history of the Acts of the Apostles, he reminds us, that even the greatest of men are nothing; that even a Paul is nothing, and a Peter is nothing, but only "ministers of Christ[3]."

3. Here then we see a divine protest against that morbid curiosity of modern times, which craves to gratify the appetite by graphic and vivid pictures of minute personal details in the history of the Apostles; and in order to provide food for that unwholesome craving, strains its inventive ingenuity, and bedizens the venerable forms of the Apostles with legendary shreds and tinsel embellishments. The Holy Spirit in this divine book condemns such meddling inquisitiveness, and busy familiarity and irreverence as this. He subordinates every thing in the private history of the Holy Apostles to the public dignity of the Apostolic office. He does not sink the Apostle in the man, but transfigures the man into the Apostle. He tells us nothing of their personal appearance, nothing of the day or year of their birth, or of their death; nothing of their parents or children. He has not informed us whether St. Paul was ever married, or no. Thus he takes them out of the category of common men, and encircles their heads with a halo of sanctity; they are Christ's chosen vessels and instruments, consecrated as such; that is their history. He raises our eyes from them to Him: they by whom He wrought were men, but He who worked by them is God; and the sparkles of their light are drowned in the abyss of His Glory.

IV. The plan then of this divine book, is to enlarge our view of Christ's Ministry; to prevent us from confining it to His brief bodily sojourn on earth; to reveal to us Christ sitting in heaven; not like one of the deities of the heathen world, indifferent to human affairs, nor controlled by a fatal destiny; nor sharing His power with rival deities; but enthroned King of Kings and Lord of Lords, and ever ruling all things by His word, for the advancement of His Gospel, and the establishment of His kingdom, till at length He will put all things under His feet, and God will be all in all.

Here is a magnificent subject, worthy the pen of the inspired Evangelist.

The Acts of the Apostles, as thus viewed, is a divine Epinicium, or Song of [1] Even Dr. Burton, p. 262, says, "It is much to be lamented that St. Luke did not continue the Acts of the Apostles beyond the arrival of St. Paul at Rome."

[2] 2 Tim. iv. 11. [3] 1 Cor. iii. 5.

Victory, on the triumphant exaltation of Christ. It is an Evangelical fulfilment of those holy Psalms, the 45th and 68th, "Thou art gone up on high, Thou hast led captivity captive[1]." "Gird Thee with Thy sword upon Thy thigh, O Thou most mighty." "Ride on, because of the word of truth, of meekness, and righteousness. Thy seat, O God, endureth for ever[2]."

And in regard to Christ's tender love for the Church, His Bride, it may be called a sacred Epithalamium, in which is celebrated His tenderness for her, whom He has "purchased with His own blood[3]," and has delivered from heathen bondage, and has brought near to Himself, and advanced to His own right hand, and made her partner of His Glory. Here, in this divine book, which describes the espousals of the Gentile Church to Christ, we may behold the prophetical picture displayed to the eye of the world in the fulness of historical truth: "Upon Thy right hand did stand the queen in a vesture of gold wrought about with divers colours. Hearken, O daughter, and consider; incline thine ear: forget also thine own people and thy father's house. So shall the King have pleasure in thy beauty, for He is thy Lord God, and worship thou Him[4]."

Hence we may derive the assurance, that "no weapon formed against her shall prosper[5]." The Powers of this world may persecute and oppress her, the Spirits of Darkness may be leagued against her, but He who ascended into heaven, and reigns in majesty on high, works in her, and by her. "He is in the midst of her, therefore shall she not be removed; He shall help her, and that right early. He is her hope and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will we not fear, though the earth be moved, and the hills be carried into the midst of the sea; though the waters thereof rage and swell, and the mountains shake at the tempest of the same; the rivers of the flood thereof shall make glad the city of God. The Lord of Hosts is with her; the God of Jacob is her refuge[6]."

V. This then is the proposition, submitted to the reader's consideration ;—

That the design of the writer of the Acts of the Apostles is, to reveal Jesus Christ in Glory, ordering and disposing all things, by the agency and teaching of men, particularly His Apostles, for the advancement of His Kingdom upon Earth, and for the full and final triumph of His holy Name and Word.

We may now proceed to test the soundness of this proposition, by reference to evidences derived from the state of the World when the Book was written, and also from the Book itself.

Jesus Christ is Lord of all[7]. His enthronement in glory is the culminating point to which His earthly ministry tends. His session there, by its very name implies permanence. There He reigns and will continue to reign, even to the end, as King. There He teaches, and will continue to teach, as our Prophet. There He, who as our Priest offered Himself on the Cross, and lifted up His hands on His Apostles, and blessed them, and was parted from them[8], and ascended into

[1] Ps. lxviii. 18. [2] Ps. xlv. 4—7. Cp. Ps. ii. 6—9; cx. 1—5. [3] Acts xx. 28.
[4] Ps. xlv. 10—12. [5] Isa. liv. 17. [6] Ps. xlvi.
[7] Acts x. 36. [8] Luke xxiv. 51.

Heaven, and entered into the true Holy of Holies, on that great Day of Atonement; there He abideth still, a Priest for ever[1]; there He ever liveth, to make intercession for us[2].

Such, then, being the majesty of Christ, and such His offices to mankind, it may reasonably be anticipated

(I.) That the circumstances of the world would be adjusted à priori, by providential preparations and pre-arrangements for the display of such a glorious consummation. And,

(II.) That à posteriori Christ would manifest His divine Power, by applying actually, what He had contrived provisionally, for the extension of His Kingdom on Earth. And,

(III.) That He would also display His sovereignty by over-ruling all adverse Powers, and by making them subservient to the promotion of His own glory. And,

(IV.) That, if the Acts of the Apostles was written, as we have affirmed it was, with the view of revealing Christ's working and teaching, by the agency of His Apostles, for the advancement of His Kingdom upon Earth, it would exhibit evidence of such antecedent arrangements, and of such subsequent application, and of such over-ruling controul.

In a word, all things would be seen in it to have been made à priori to converge to Christ's Session in Glory, and à posteriori to radiate from it.

i. First, then, as to the evidence, displayed in the Acts, of previous arrangements for the manifestation of Christ's power in the extension of His Kingdom;

1. In contemplating the social and religious phenomena of the world at the time of Christ's Ascension, we see the Jews dispersed for their sins; and, though, for the sake of commerce, dwelling in all the great cities of the earth, yet not intermingled and blended with the population of any. We see them distinguished every where by certain characteristics; by the sanctification of a certain day, the Sabbath; by weekly religious assemblies on that day, in certain public buildings, their Synagogues; by regular reading there of certain Books;—the Law and the Prophets. We see those Books, not like the mystic volumes of other Religions, concealed from public view, but diffused by copies of the Original, and by Translations from it, in every country under heaven.

We see this People, although thus scattered, "like chaff of the summer threshing-floor[3]," in all parts of the world, yet knit together by a strong and secret tie. We see them bound to a common centre, Jerusalem, by the triple cord of their Annual Festivals. We see them attracted to it year after year, by a silent centripetal force, and joined together as one man in the City and Temple there. We see that City and Temple surviving, as by a miracle, after many national revolutions. It had been razed to the ground by Nebuchadnezzar; it had been profaned and laid desolate by Antiochus Epiphanes; it had been dismantled by Ptolemy the First, it had been captured by Pompey, and plundered by Crassus; and ransacked by Cassius[1]. But still, as if it had been a living thing endued with perpetual youth, the Temple of Jerusalem, at the time of the Ascension, shone in magnificence and splendour, unparalleled since the age of Solomon. And yet, forty years after the Ascension, this bond of national union was severed. All that complex machinery of national organization, which had been so providentially contrived, and so wonderfully protected, was dissolved; the Temple was levelled to the dust, and has never risen more.

[1] Ps. cx. 4. [2] Heb. vii. 25. [3] Dan. ii. 35.

Surely we may say that the Temple of Jerusalem, with its sacred Ritual, had been preserved by Almighty God for some great purpose; and that that great purpose had been answered, and that the uses of the Temple and its ceremonial were exhausted, when it was destroyed.

What was the final cause of this providential arrangement, and of this divine dispensation?

The answer is found in the Acts of the Apostles. We see it there, and in that book alone. The Day of Pentecost explains it. There Christ is revealed, sitting on His heavenly throne, sending the Gift of the Holy Ghost, which He had received in virtue of His obedience and for the manifestation of His Glory[2]. "The Lord gave the Word, great was the company of the Preachers[3]." We see Him preaching by His Apostles, to crowds of devout men, who had thronged to that Festival from every nation under heaven. He it is, Who has brought by His providential power the multitudinous waters of these confluent nations to Jerusalem. He it is, Who by the preaching of His Apostles, inspired by the Holy Ghost, spiritualizes those national streams, by the infusion of the living waters of the Gospel, outpoured from the wellspring of His love, and sends them back on their homeward-ebbing course, to irrigate and fertilize the world.

2. Proceeding further in the history we may observe, that the first miracle of healing which Christ wrought by the hands of His Apostles, was done in a public place, at a public time; it was done in the city of Jerusalem, at "the Beautiful Gate of the Temple," and "at the hour of prayer[4];" and the people flocked to the Apostles, who preached Christ, as the sole author of the miracle, "in Solomon's Porch[5]." Thus the Temple, its Gates, its Porches, its Hours of Prayer, as well as its Annual Festivals, were preparatory and ministerial to the manifestation of Christ's Glory after His Ascension, and were used by Him for that end.

3. If we follow the Apostles from Jerusalem, and trace them in their Missionary Journeys, we see indications of similar preparations in all parts of the world. "Other men had laboured, and they enter into their labours[6]." Many centuries before, Christ had sent Moses and the Prophets, to be the Precursors of His Apostles. Go wherever they might, they heard the "voices of Moses and the Prophets read in the Synagogues every Sabbath Day[7]." The fallow ground of the [1] Cp. Jackson on the Creed, i. pp. 128. 136. 138.

[2] Acts ii. 33. 36.
[3] Ps. lxviii. 11.
[4] Acts iii. 1—6.
[5] Ib. iii. 11, 12. 16. Cp. iv. 10.
[6] John iv. 38.
[7] Acts xv. 21 and xiii. 27.

world had been broken up by that preparatory tillage, and had been ploughed into deep furrows for the reception of the seed of the Gospel.

The doctrine of Levitical Sacrifices, rightly understood, prepared the way for Evangelical Sacraments. The Jewish Sabbath died, and arose to life in new glory and beauty in the Lord's Day. The Synagogue was the Vestibule of the Church. The Pentateuch and the Prophets were sunned by the genial beams of Christ into full ripeness in the Gospel.

4. Heathenism itself had been silently leavened by the diffusion of the Hebrew Scriptures. Their venerable antiquity, their noble simplicity, their pure morality, had won for them the affections of many wise and noble minds, which were wearied and disgusted with the jarring contradictions and the licentious profligacy of Paganism, and recognized in the religion of the Old Testament, a divine echo responsive to the voices of Reason and Conscience speaking in their own hearts.

The Acts of the Apostles presents us with examples of this class in the Roman centurion Cornelius at Cæsarea, and in Sergius Paulus, the proconsul of Cyprus.

5. Besides, under the Providence of God the military successes of the Third Monarchy—the Macedonian—and after it those of the Fourth Monarchy—the Roman—had broken down the foundations of local reverence for national deities[1], and had cleared the ground for the planting of a purer faith. The deities which presided as patrons over special cities and districts, had been made to pass under the yoke of Rome; they had not been able to defend their own cities against the arms of the conquerors, and so their credit was weakened, especially among the enlightened classes, who were thus prepared to receive Christianity. We may observe a remarkable instance of this in the friendship and protection proffered by the Asiarchs themselves, the Presidents of the Games of Diana, to St. Paul the Apostle, at Ephesus[2].

These two causes,—namely, the diffusion of the Hebrew Scriptures, and the decomposition of Paganism,—had tended to produce a class of persons in all parts of the world, who may be said to have been the Seminary of the Gentile Church. These were the Proselytes—not the Proselytes of righteousness, but of the Gate—who are called in the Acts of the Apostles οἱ σεβόμενοι, οἱ φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεόν[3]. Tired of Polytheism, and yet unwilling to bend their necks under the yoke of the Ceremonial Law, they received with joy the tidings of the Gospel; they recognized in Christianity a religion which satisfied the wants of their nature, the requirements of their reason, and the yearnings of their hearts, without impairing any of the reverence with which they had learnt to regard the God of the Old Testament; but rather, and much more, enlarging and spiritualizing the ideas they had already conceived of His merciful purposes and glorious attributes. Here, therefore, in the Gospel, they found a treasure of unspeakable price; here they might well exclaim, εὑρήκαμεν, συγχαίρωμεν.

The Apostles, as the history of the Acts shows, met with this class of Pro-

[1] Cp. Bp. Pearson's lately recovered Concio iii., in his Minor Works, ii. 35.

[2] Acts xix. 30.

[3] Acts xiii. 43. 50; xvi. 14; xvii. 4. 17; xviii. 7.

selytes in their missionary journeys every where. And in it they found, as it were, a bridge already laid down by the Divine Hand, for the victorious passage and entrance of the Gospel into every city of the world.

6. Again; the conquests of the Third Empire had extended a common language, the Greek, over the greater part of Europe and Asia. And by the royal command of one of the princes of that empire [1], the Hebrew Scriptures had been translated into that common language. That translation, the Septuagint, had been executed by Jews, and had been received in their Synagogues. It was their Authorized Version; and therefore the Jews could not fairly make any exception to it; and thus a preparation had been made for the preaching and writing of the Gospel in that common tongue.

The Third Empire gave great impulse and encouragement to commerce and navigation; it built gallant fleets, and constructed noble docks, emporiums, arsenals, and seaports in various parts of the world. Thus it facilitated the intercommunion of nations, and prepared the way for the diffusion of the Gospel which would unite them all in Christ.

If the dynasties founded by the successors of Alexander the Great, and branching off from his monarchy, had taken deep root in the world, as independent and separate kingdoms, then the progress of Christianity would have been impeded by many hindrances; but providentially they were made to coalesce under the Roman or Fourth Empire.

The Third Monarchy had prepared the way for the Gospel by sea, the Fourth Monarchy accelerated its course by land. The warlike power of Rome constructed Roads, which linked all parts of the vast empire to the capital. These military roads of her Legions became highways for the Gospel. The martial Mistress of the world was a Pioneer of the Prince of Peace.

The Acts of the Apostles supplies evidence here. We may trace the Apostle St. Paul on his first entrance into Europe along the Egnatian Way—from Philippi to Amphipolis, Apollonia, and Thessalonica [2]. And it is worthy of remark, that the glorious event, which crowns the history of the Acts, and which is the pledge of the future conquests of Christianity,—namely, the arrival of the great Apostle of the Gentiles in the heathen metropolis of the world, Rome, in order to preach the Gospel there, and to bear witness to Christ before the throne of the Cæsars, was brought about by the agency of Ships of the Third Empire, and by Roads of the Fourth. St. Paul sails towards Rome in two vessels of Alexandria [3], and arrives at Rome by the Queen of roads, the Appian Way. And perhaps the Sacred Historian has noted the heathen name of one of those ships [4], and has specified two itinerary stations on that great military road [5],—things trivial it might seem, if any thing in Scripture can be so called,—with a view of suggesting to the reader a thankful acknowledgment, that the commercial and maritime activity and skill, and warlike prowess of heathenism, its engineering labours and [1] Ptolemy Philadelphus, king of Egypt, about B.C. 280.

[2] Ib. xxvii. 6; xxviii. 11.
[3] Acts xvii. 1.
[4] Ib. xxviii. 11.
[5] Ib. xxviii. 15.

locomotive powers, had been made subservient to Christ, and had been consecrated by Him, to the furtherance of His Gospel.

Such then are some of the intimations, which the Acts of the Apostles affords, of the previous preparations of the world for the advancement of Christ's Kingdom, and of the actual application of those preparations for that end.

II. But further. This History displays Christ in Glory, exercising His power, not only in using the machinery which He Himself had contrived for that purpose, but also in controlling and overruling all adverse powers, and manifesting His glory by the conversion of those powers into instruments for the propagation of the Gospel.

Here in a signal manner it displays the divine supremacy and universal sovereignty of Christ.

A few examples may suffice.

1. At the commencement of the Acts, we see the Gospel assailed by the Chief Priests at Jerusalem, especially by the Sect of the Sadducees[1]. They imprison Peter and John, and bring them before the Council. Thus the Apostles are brought forward to preach before the Sanhedrim the doctrine of the Resurrection, by the agency of the Sadducees who denied it. The Sadducees imprison the Apostles again[2], but the Angel of the Lord by night opens the prison doors. Thus Christ overrules the designs of the Sadducees, who denied the existence of Angels, and makes the Sadducees themselves to be the means of showing to the world that His Angels are ministering Spirits encamping about His Church.

2. The seven Deacons are appointed, and the fury of Jewish persecution rages against Stephen, and evokes from his mouth that noble speech, spoken before the Jewish Sanhedrim, and containing the very pith and marrow of all true interpretation of Jewish History, and declaring that its sum and substance is Jesus Christ. It elicits from His lips an appeal to Jesus, standing at the right hand of God, and a prayer to Him as God, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit;" and to pardon those who stoned him, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge[3]." Thus, under the power of Christ, the malice of the Jews became the means of proving, that He, Whom they had crucified, Who is the faithful Witness, the First-begotten of the Dead[4], the divine Proto-Martyr, the true Abel, Jesus Christ, now reigning in heaven, is the source of all the courage which animates the hearts of martyrs in their dying hour; that He is the fountain of all the Faith which illumines their inward eye, and of all the Hope which gives them a foretaste of bliss; and of all the Charity which makes them love and bless their persecutors, and enables them to be more than conquerors in death, over it, and by it, and makes death itself to be their birth to everlasting life.

3. The persecution which arose about Stephen scattered the disciples; but the disciples, being scattered by persecution, went every where scattering the seed of the word[5]. Thus Persecution promoted Preaching: the spirit of St. Stephen revived in St. Philip, and carried the Gospel to Samaria, to Azotus, to Cæsarea. The more Persecution rages, the more Preaching prevails. Saul is hastening from Damascus with a commission from the Chief Priests, to bind the Disciples there; he draws near to the gate of the City, and is eager to seize on his prey; but Jesus on His heavenly throne beholds him and checks him on his course, and dashes him to the ground, and blinds him with a light from heaven, and speaks to him with a voice of power, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me?" Saul the Persecutor becomes Paul the Preacher. The same Jesus, Who when on earth had called simple fishermen from their nets at the Sea of Galilee, and made them to be His Apostles, now manifests His power from heaven, by calling the learned Pharisee, breathing rage and slaughter, and making havoc of the Church, and bearing letters from the Jewish Sanhedrim empowering him to imprison the Christians of Damascus; and He sends him as His Apostle to the Gentiles, and enables him by the Holy Ghost to indite divine Epistles, for the comfort and edification of His Church in all ages of the world.

[1] Acts iv. 1; v. 17. [2] Ib. v. 17. [3] Acts vii. 56—60.
[4] Rev. i. 5. [5] Acts viii. 1. 4.

4. Saul, who had been the instrument of the Sanhedrim in persecuting Christ, is now persecuted by the Sanhedrim for Christ's sake. But the same divine power of Jesus, which had overruled his rage against the Church, and had converted it into an instrument for advancing His Kingdom, now overrules the rage of the Jews against Paul, for the same end. They arrest him in the Temple at Jerusalem [1], but that arrest is made an occasion for the spread of the Gospel. It leads to the preaching of that Gospel at Jerusalem by the mouth of St. Paul—the former Pharisee, the pupil of Gamaliel, the once zealous persecutor—first to the people in the Area of the Temple [2], and then, on the following day, to the assembled Sanhedrim [3]. The Jews, in their fury against him, lie in wait to destroy him [4]; but the more fiercely they rage, the more gloriously Christ triumphs. He uses their conspiracy against Paul as the occasion for bringing him to Cæsarea, the Roman capital of Palestine, in order that he may preach the Gospel there, first to Felix the Roman Governor, and his wife Drusilla, and next to Porcius Festus, his successor, and to Agrippa, the Jewish King, and Bernice his sister, and to the Chief Captains and principal men of the city [5]. And, finally, it is made to conduce to that glorious consummation, which Christ had promised [6], and Paul ardently desired [7], namely, the mission of St. Paul to Rome, and the preaching of the Gospel by his mouth in the heathen metropolis of the world. "I would therefore that ye should understand, brethren"—he himself declares,—"that the things which happened unto me," although they were contrived by the malice of the Tempter, "fell out for the furtherance of the Gospel [8]."

5. One more example of this kind. Herod the king stretches forth his hands to vex certain of the Church [9]; he kills one Apostle, St. James, and imprisons another, St. Peter. In the eye of the world, he seems to be triumphing over Christ. But what has he done? He has sounded an alarm which has called the

[1] Acts xxi. 27. 30.
[2] Ib. xxii. 1—21.
[3] Ib. xxiii. 1—9.
[4] Ib. xxiii. 12—21.
[5] Ib. xxv. xxvi.
[6] Ib. xxiii. 11.
[7] Rom. i. 13.
[8] Phil. i. 12.
[9] Acts xii. 1.

Church to her proper arms, prayer, unceasing prayer [1]. Thus Herod has taught Christendom where her strength lies. The prayer of the faithful brings down an angel from heaven, who delivers Peter from his chains, and smites Herod on his throne; and "the Word of the Lord grows and is multiplied." And the Church, like another Miriam, takes up her timbrel and says, "Sing ye to the Lord, for He hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath He thrown into the sea [2]."

6. Let us consider also the internal affairs of the Church. Temporary evils nascent there are overruled into means of endless good. A murmuring arises of the Grecians against the Hebrews in the primitive Church [3]. It is made an occasion for the growth of the Word [4], and for the extension of the Church, by the completion of the Christian ministry in the institution of the Diaconate. Thus a local and transitory evil is changed into a source of universal and perpetual good.

7. Again, a question is agitated concerning the necessity of circumcision for the Gentile Christians, and no small dissension and disputation prevails [5]. Therefore it is resolved that Paul and Barnabas should go up to Jerusalem unto the Apostles and Elders about this question [6]. The Apostles and Elders meet in council at Jerusalem, they frame and promulgate a decree, and the question is settled [7].

Thus the dispute was made to be a source of peace by which disputes are ended. It was made to supply a precedent and rule for the practice of the Church in all ages, and to establish a principle of universal application,—that for the settlement of controversies, whether concerning doctrine or discipline, and for the quieting of men's minds, and the appeasing of strife, resort should be had, not to any one man in the Church, not to Peter, not to the Bishop of Rome, but to the Holy Ghost Himself, speaking in Councils and Convocations of the Church, praying for His guidance, and building their decrees upon His Word [8].

8. Let us observe further how this history shows, that the direct agency of the Evil Spirit is made subservient to the cause of Christ. Satan filled the heart of Ananias to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the money that had been vowed to God. He who was the instrument of Satan is smitten in his sin; and thus the Tempter is made to preach to the world a perpetual warning against the sin of Sacrilege [9].

Satan meets Peter at Samaria, and offers him money for spiritual gifts by the hand of Simon Magus. "Thy money perish with thee," is the Apostle's reply [10]. Thus the bribe of the Tempter supplies occasion for a perpetual warning against the sin of Simony.

Satan encounters Paul at Paphos, and endeavours to turn away the Deputy from the faith by the sorceries of Elymas. But, "O full of all subtlety, thou child of the devil," exclaims the Apostle, and Elymas is smitten with blindness, and Satan is defeated, and Christ is glorified [11]. Satan meets the Apostle in the streets of Philippi, and flatters him by the mouth of her whom he had possessed [1]. But his adulations are rejected, and he is cast out, and the Gentile world is taught that the Spirit with which they dealt so familiarly in Divination and Oracles, is the Spirit of Darkness. In the city of Ephesus, the stronghold of magic and witchcraft, Satan owns the power of Jesus working by those whom He calls and sends; "Jesus I know, and Paul I know, but who are ye [2]?" And by overcoming and routing those who took upon them to usurp the name of Jesus, without being duly called and sent, Satan is made to proclaim the sin of those who presume to preach the Word, and to Minister the Sacraments of Christ, without a call and mission from Him.

[1] Acts xii. 5. [2] Exod. xv. 1. [3] Acts vi. 1.
[4] Ib. vi. 7. [5] Ib. xv. 1, 2. [6] Ib. xv. 2. [7] Ib. xv. 6—31.
[8] Cp. Hooker, i. [9] Acts v. 3—5. [10] Ib. viii. 20. [11] Acts xiii. 10—12.

9. The same may be said of physical evils: they are overruled by Christ for the good of the Church. Agabus stands up, and signifies by the Spirit that there shall be a great Dearth throughout all the world [3]. This pre-announcement awakens the love of the believers at Antioch, and they forestall the Famine by charitable supplies to the poor Saints at Jerusalem [4]. Thus Famines are made to be fruitful in Christian graces, flourishing unto life eternal. A Storm rages for many days in the Mediterranean Sea; it is made the occasion for the manifestation of the quiet calm, and placid peace in the heart of St. Paul, who cheers the courage of Roman Soldiers, and Grecian Mariners, with comfort and hope derived from the Holy Ghost [5]. They land at Malta, a viper fixes on his hand, and shows him to be sent from God [6].

On the whole, then, we see that the Acts of the Apostles displays evidence of a well-organized system of preparations, extending like a complex net-work over a great part of the world, and continued through many centuries, for the manifestation of the Glory of Christ in the progress of His Gospel. This History shows, that when He had ascended into Heaven, and was seated in Glory at God's right hand, He used these previous adjustments, as means and appliances for the advancement of His Kingdom. It shows also that He, enthroned in heavenly glory, overruled the workings of Satan against His Church, whether in external assault or internal discord, and made them subservient to His glory and her welfare. It traces her progress under His favour and protection, from the upper room at Jerusalem, till "the little one became a thousand, and a small one a strong nation [7]." "Her brook became a river, and her river became a sea [8]," and the waters replenished the Earth.

This History reveals to us Christ, not intervening immediately to subdue His enemies, but giving them time for repentance; and, if they will not repent, casting them down to the ground, when they are full of confidence, as Saul was smitten at the gates of Damascus, and Herod when sitting on his throne; and delivering His Church from her foes, when she seems to be on the brink of destruction. Then He rescues "her soul as a bird out of the snare of the fowler [9];" "when the enemy comes in like a flood, then the Spirit of the Lord lifts up a standard against him[1]."

[1] Acts xvi. 16. [2] Ib. xix. 15. [3] Ib. xi. 28.
[4] Ib. xi. 29; xii. 25. [5] Ib. xxvii. 14. 20. 25. 35, 36. [6] Ib. xxviii. 5, 6.
[7] Isa. lx. 22. [8] Ecclus. xxiv. 31. [9] Ps. cxxiv. 7.

Regarded in this light, this divine Book is a blessed possession for the Church in every time of her pilgrimage through this vale of tears. In it Christ sends the Holy Ghost the Comforter, to breathe hope and trust and peace and courage and joy into her heart. Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, and to-day, and for ever[2]. He, who eighteen centuries ago ascended on the clouds of heaven, and took His seat on the right hand of the Majesty on High, He ever sitteth there, Ruler and Lord of all. He continues, and ever will continue, to exercise the same power which this Book reveals, for the manifestation of His own glory, in the advancement of His Kingdom, even till the day of Judgment, when finally, and for ever, He will put all enemies under His feet.

Therefore this Book may be called the sum and substance of all Church History. In it we see the Laws, by which Christ, who is unchangeable, works: in it we see what He has done, and from it we may infer what He will continue to do, even to the end. Thus this Divine History, if we may so speak, is also a Divine Prophecy; it projects its shadow forward from the day of the Ascension even to the Day of Doom. Reading its sacred pages with such assurances as these, we feel a holy confidence, that all Persecutions from without, and all Perils from within the Church, will be overruled by the power of Christ, and be made ministerial to the triumph of His Gospel; that the gates of Hell will never prevail against His Church; that the fierceness of man will turn to the praise of God[3]; and all the weapons of the enemy will recoil against those who wield them, and be made instrumental for the promotion of Christ's Glory, and for the salvation of those who obey Him.

Thus the Acts of the Apostles is a precious gift from heaven; it is the Magna Charta of Kings who would reign well and prosperously, and be crowned hereafter by Christ; it is the Manual of Christian Statesmen in their glorious conflicts in public life, for Christ and His Church. It is the Pastoral of Christian Bishops in feeding Christ's Flock, and in teaching others to feed it; it is the Guide of the Parish-Priest in the cure of Souls, and in dispensing God's Word and Sacraments; it is the Martyrology of the Christian Confessor; it is the Itinerary of the Christian Missionary, in his voyages and journeys to plant the Gospel in distant lands; it is the companion and comforter of every Christian, in the troubles of life and in the hour of death.

With this divine Book in our hands, though our lot be cast in days of doubt and darkness, and even of rebuke and blasphemy, we need not faint and falter. The nearer Satan is, the nearer Christ is; the more fiercely Satan rages, the more gloriously will Christ conquer. As an ancient Father said, ἐγγὺς μαχαίρας, ἐγγὺς Θεοῦ, μεταξὺ θηρίων, μεταξὺ Θεοῦ[4], "When near the sword, we are near to God; when in the midst of wild beasts, we are in the hand of God."

We may be sure, that, as Christ rescued the great Apostle from his enemies, [1] Isa. lix. 19.

[2] Heb. xiii. 8.
[3] Ps. lxxvi. 10.
[4] Ignatius ad Smyrn., 4.

and made their malice conducive to the preaching of the Gospel at Rome, so He will make all things, however adverse, subservient to Himself. As He made the Commerce of Alexandria and the Roads of Italy ministerial to the march of the Gospel, so He will make all Arts and Sciences tributary to Himself. He will make the conquests of mechanical powers in the material universe, and the locomotive processes, by which some seek only for temporal ends, to be instruments for the evangelization of the world. And as, after that fierce tempest in the Mediterranean Sea, He brought St. Paul in peace along the Appian Way to the great Capital of the world, so after the tempest and the hurricane which in the latter days will rage against His Church, He will bring her in safety and victory to the haven where she would be.

Therefore, from reading this Book, we may raise our eyes to heaven, and look for that blessed time, when Christ, who ascended into heaven, and now sitteth there, will come again in His glorious Majesty, to judge the Quick and Dead. Then all the storms of this world will cease; then, willingly or unwillingly, all things will be made subject to Christ; then He will reign King of Kings, and Lord of Lords; and then they who have not failed in their duty here, but have stood firm in their allegiance to Him in the hour of trial, will mount with Him in triumph, to the City of the Living God.

VI. Let it, also, be remembered, that Christ is not only the King of the World, but He is also its Teacher: and that what His Apostles teach, as well as what they do, is by virtue of His Authority.

Accordingly, St. Luke says at the beginning of the Acts of the Apostles, "The former treatise I made of all that Jesus began to do and to teach," before He was taken up into heaven. And now, in this his latter treatise, he relates what Jesus continues to do and to teach, after He has been taken up into heaven.

We have been considering what Christ continued to do; let us now consider what He continues to teach.

When upon earth, at the commencement of His Ministry, He went up to the Mountain of Beatitudes, and "when He was set, He opened His mouth and taught[1]." So at His Ascension, He went up on High, He ascended the heights of Heaven, and when He was set at the Right Hand of God, He opened His Mouth and taught, and will ever continue to teach. He is ever preaching a Sermon on the Mount, from His seat in heaven, even to the Day of Doom.

What the Apostles taught, as well as what they did, is to be regarded as from Him. Their Miracles were the credentials of their Teaching, they were like seals impressed with His Royal Signet, and were attached to the message of the teaching which they delivered from Him. The seals of the Miracles were displayed to the world, in order to avouch the message of the Doctrine; and that it might be heard and read with that awful reverence which is due to a heavenly rescript coming from the King of Kings.

Therefore the Teaching of the Apostles, as displayed in this book—whether that Teaching was conveyed in words, or embodied in practice—demands the attention of mankind in every age, as being no other than the Teaching of Christ[1].

[1] Matt. v. 1.

Let us consider then, what this Teaching is, and whether it is represented by the Apostles as coming from Christ Himself.

1. First in historical order is an example of Teaching by action. It is seen in the provision made by the Apostles for the continuance of their own office. There, the choice of Matthias to fill the place of Judas, is expressly ascribed to Jesus: "Lord, show whether of these two Thou hast chosen[2]." Thus the world was taught that the Apostolic office was not to terminate with Christ's Ministry on earth, but to be continued after it. "The lot fell upon Matthias, and he was numbered with the eleven Apostles[3]."

2. The descent of the Holy Ghost at Pentecost gave a wider range to Christ's office of Teaching. It was Christ who sent the Holy Ghost[4]. "Behold, I send the promise of My Father upon you[5];" "He shall receive of mine. He shall glorify me[6];" "He shall bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have said unto you[7]."

Therefore the Day of Pentecost reveals to us Christ receiving a new accession of glory, in the Mission of the Comforter. The Holy Spirit comes from Him, and is the Interpreter of His will. Thenceforth the teaching of Christ, which, while He was on earth, was confined within a narrow space for a few years, became universal in place and time. It was also accompanied with new gifts and graces to those who received it, and communicated it to the world. It spake by their lips in all languages; and their hearts were fired with new zeal and courage, to preach it to the world; and they were endued with new powers of memory and understanding, to comprehend and expound the Scriptures, and to fly on eagles' wings as Missionaries of Christ to all parts of the world.

3. The Creed in which we profess our faith in Christ, is called the Creed of the Apostles; and it may well be so named; for every article of that Creed is to be found in the preaching of the Apostles as recorded in this book[8]. But the Apostles, who taught others, refer us to Christ as their own Teacher[9]. He commanded us to preach unto the people; He has poured out His Spirit upon us[10]. He made them His "witnesses in Jerusalem, and Judæa, and Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth[11];" He said unto them, "It is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost[12]." And therefore one of them says, "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard Him, God also bearing

[1] Therefore St. Augustine well says (De Civitate Dei, vi. 2), "Ipsa Veritas, Deus, Dei Filius, prius per Prophetas, deinde per se Ipsum, postea per Apostolos locutus."

[2] Acts i. 24. [3] Ib. i. 26. [4] Ib. ii. 33.

[5] Luke xxiv. 49. John xv. 26; xvi. 7. [6] John xvi. 14. [7] Ib. xiv. 26.

[8] See the evidence in Humphry's Introduction to the Acts, p. xix.

[9] Acts x. 42. [10] Ib. ii. 17. 33. Cp. Matt. x. 20.

[11] Ib. i. 8. [12] Matt. x. 20. Mark xiii. 11.

them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to His own will[1]?" Therefore we must look upward; and regarding the Apostles as taught by Christ, we may trace all these Apostolic verities to the divine source and well-spring of all truth, Jesus Christ.

4. The foundation of Christianity is a belief in the Inspiration of Holy Scripture. The public reception and reading of the New Testament as true and inspired of God, is the strongest proof that can be desired of its Truth and Inspiration. The Acts of the Apostles was so read and received, in the age in which it was written; and since it is a true and inspired history, it is clear that the Old Testament is true and divinely inspired. For Christ, speaking by His Holy Apostles, every where appeals to the books of the Old Testament as the lively oracles of God. He, by their hands, sets His divine seal on the Old Testament, and delivers it to the Christian Church, as the Word of God.

5. Another method in which Christ teaches the world by the agency of the Apostles and apostolic men, in this book, is by interpreting the Old Testament. Speaking by the mouth of St. Peter in the second chapter of the Acts, He enables us to understand the prophecy of Joel, and to apply it to the effusion of the Holy Ghost on the Day of Pentecost, as the last message of God to the world, before the second coming of Christ[2].

In various portions of the Acts He has given us a divine Commentary on the Psalms of David, and has authorized and commanded us to apply them to Himself. He bids us see in the second Psalm a prophecy of the rage of the heathen, and the vain imaginations of the people, the standing-up of the kings of the earth, and the gathering together of the rulers against Himself[3]. He reveals to us in the sixteenth Psalm a vision of His own Death and Resurrection and Session in glory[4]. He teaches us that He Himself is that Prophet who was pre-announced by Moses[5]; and that God had showed "by the mouth of all His Prophets that Christ should suffer[6]."

By the mouth of St. Stephen, who was full of the Holy Ghost[7], Christ Himself, our heavenly Teacher, propounds to us a pattern and model for the interpretation of the Old Testament. He establishes the typical relation of Joseph and of Moses to Himself[8]. By the mouth of St. Philip, He appropriates to Himself the prophecy of the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah[9], and condemns all who would wrest it from Him. By the mouth of St. Paul, in the synagogue of Pisidia, He reveals Himself again in the Psalms[10]; and shows by his mouth, and by that of St. James in the Council of Jerusalem, that God pre-announced in the Old Testament the extension of His covenant to all nations in Christ[11].

Thus in this divine book, Christ, sitting in His chair of teaching in heaven, has performed by the agency of the Apostles, inspired by the Holy Ghost Whom He sent, a blessed work of Divine instruction, which has enabled us to see by its

[1] Heb. ii. 3, 4.
[2] Acts ii. 17—21.
[3] Ib. iv. 25—27.
[4] Ib. ii. 30—35.
[5] Ib. iii. 22.
[6] Ib. iii. 18.
[7] Ib. vi. 5. 8.
[8] Ib. vii. 9—44.
[9] Ib. viii. 33.
[10] Ib. xiii. 33.
[11] Ib. xiii. 47; xv. 14.

glorious light the true meaning of the Old Testament. He is our Expositor, He is our Commentator; He has given us, by Apostolic agency, a clue to the right interpretation of its Types, and Histories, and Prophecies. He has delivered to us from heaven a divine protest against that sceptical system of infidel exegesis, which is rife in the present age, and which, with almost Titanic presumption, would shake the foundations of heaven; which would undermine the groundwork of the Genuineness and Authenticity, and Inspiration of Holy Writ; and would take away from the Church the Prophecies of the Psalms and of Isaiah, and despoil her of that heavenly inheritance which she has received through the hands of the Apostles from Christ Himself.

6. Let us consider also that we owe our knowledge of the Gospel itself to Christ teaching from heaven. He Himself wrote nothing; and no part of the New Testament was written by His Disciples while He was upon earth. None of them were then capable of recording His words and actions. They often confess in the Gospels that they did not understand His sayings, and that they were hid from them [1].

If, therefore, we were to confine ourselves to Christ's teaching on earth, we should not have any New Testament.

It was not till He had ascended into heaven, and had sent the Holy Ghost to teach His Apostles all things, and to bring to their remembrance whatever He had said [2], that they were qualified to write what they did. And therefore St. Peter says, that they preached the Gospel unto men "with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven [3]."

Thus, then, we receive the Gospel itself from the hand of Christ in heaven.

7. Another important respect in which Christ teaches the world by His Apostles in this book is in Church-Regimen and Polity. It is recorded as a fruit of the effusion of the Holy Ghost upon the primitive Church, that "all who believed were baptized [4];" and "they continued stedfastly in the Apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread" (that is, in the reception of the Holy Eucharist), "and in prayers;" that is (as the original expresses it), in the prayers or public Liturgy of the Church. Here we see reflected, as in a mirror, a divine image of Church-Communion. By it, Christ Himself instructs us, that the Christian life in the soul is begun by Him in Baptism, and is continually nourished by Him in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper; and that they who have been engrafted into His mystical Body must take care to maintain its Unity, and to cherish their own spiritual life, by communicating with it in the profession of a true faith, and by the reception of the means of grace in the public offices of religion.

He teaches us also in this book, that He has set apart certain persons as His Ministers, for the dispensation of the Word and Sacraments; and that they who desire to receive a blessing from Him, must seek for its bestowal by the agency of those whom He has authorized and commissioned to convey it by that dispensation.

[1] Mark ix. 32. Luke ii. 50; ix. 45; xviii. 34.
[2] John xiv. 26.
[3] 1 Pet. i. 12.
[4] Acts ii. 41.

For example, we find in this book, that although He spoke to Cornelius by an Angel, He commanded him by the voice of the Angel to send for St. Peter, in order to hear the Word preached, and to be received into the Church by the Ministry of man[1]. Similarly, though He called Saul by His own voice from heaven, yet He commanded him to go into the city, "where it should be told him what he must do[2]." And He sent to him Ananias, who received him into the Church by baptism[3], saying, "Now why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the Name of the Lord[4]."

8. Here, then, and in other places, He has shown the necessity of a Christian Ministry; and He has also taught the world, what the due organization of that Ministry is. As we have seen, He declared the continuity of the Apostolic office by the election of Matthias; and He proclaimed the duty of extending it, by calling Barnabas and Paul to the Apostleship[5]. He constituted Elders in every Church by their hands[6]. He instituted by the agency of the Apostles the Holy Order of Deacons[7]. Thus He has delivered a divine exhortation from heaven to all Churches, to take good heed to maintain the threefold Ministry of Bishops, Priests, and Deacons; and to seek for His Blessing by a right use of that Ministry in extending His Kingdom throughout the world.

All therefore who desire to have the blessing of Christ on their Missions at home and abroad, may not seek for it by any novel and unauthorized agency, but by the means which He has appointed for that end.

9. Again; by the practice of His Holy Apostles, as twice recorded in this book[8], He teaches from Heaven the use and necessity of the holy rite of Confirmation. It is Christ Himself sitting in glory, who sheds forth the full outpouring of the gift of the Holy Ghost, by the laying on of Apostolic hands on those who have been baptized. It cannot rightly be alleged, that Confirmation is less obligatory on Christians, because it was not instituted by Christ Himself on earth. For, by reason of what Confirmation is, it could not have been instituted by Christ while on earth. Confirmation is the appointed means for the plenary effusion of the gift of the Holy Ghost on those who have been baptized. And that gift could not be bestowed till after Christ's Ascension. While He was upon earth, "The Holy Spirit was not yet given, because Jesus was not yet glorified[9]."

The fact, that Confirmation was not instituted by Christ when on earth, is a necessary consequence of the dignity of the gift bestowed in it; and is therefore not a reason for its disparagement, but for its reverent use. Let no one therefore despise what was administered by the holy Apostles, who were taught by Christ, and inspired by the Holy Ghost; and was used by them for the conveyance of a gift, not of partial and temporary use, but of universal need for all men in all ages of the Church, the gift of the Holy Ghost. He who despises Confirmation, despises not man, but God[10]. He despises not the Apostles alone, but despises

[1] Acts x. 5. 48, and xi. 14. [2] Ib. ix. 6. [3] Ib. ix. 18.
[4] Ib. xxii. 16. [5] Ib. xiii. 2. [6] Ib. xiv. 23.
[7] Ib. vi. 6. [8] Ib. viii. 14. 17; xix. 5, 6. [9] John vii. 39. [10] 1 Thess. iv. 8.

Him Who said to the Apostles, "He that receiveth you receiveth Me[1], and He that despiseth you despiseth Me[2];" and he cannot be said to love the Lord Jesus; and he incurs the penalty pronounced by the Holy Ghost Himself; "If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema Maranatha[3]."

Consequently, since the administration of Confirmation is restricted to the Apostolic Office of Bishops, it is the duty of every Church, and of every Christian, to endeavour earnestly, that the Episcopate may be multiplied, so that no christian soul, for which Christ shed His blood, may be defrauded of that portion of its spiritual birthright which Christ Himself designs for it in the holy rite of Confirmation; and, after it, in timely access to the Holy Communion.

10. Again. Christ has taught us by the agency of His Apostles, what is the right mode of settling Controversies in the Church. By the Convention of the Apostles and Presbyters to the Council of Jerusalem, as recorded in the fifteenth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, and by the Mission of Paul and Barnabas to that Council, and by the part taken in it by St. Peter, St. James, and St. Paul, Christ, Who guided them by His Spirit, declares from Heaven, that for the appeasing of religious differences, men are not to resort to any one person, although he may call himself infallible, nor are they to follow the wayward devices of their own private imaginations; but that appeals are to be made to Synods of Bishops and Presbyters, invoking the aid of the Holy Ghost, and grounding their decrees on Holy Scripture; and that whatever, having been settled and promulgated by them, regulating their proceedings by these principles, is received by the consentient voice of Christendom, and takes root in the practice of the Universal Church, may be deemed to be a true exposition of Scripture, and conformable to the mind of Christ.

11. Other things there are in the Constitution and Regimen of the Christian Church, which are intimated in this book, and which may be ascribed to Christ teaching from Heaven by means of His Apostles upon earth.

One of these is the sanctification of the First Day of the week,—the Christian Sunday. Doubtless it is a part of positive Divine Law, dating from the Creation, as revealed in the Old Testament, that one day in seven should be hallowed; and by that Law, the day to be hallowed is the seventh day of the week. But that the seventh-day Sabbath is now abrogated, and that the first day of the week is to be hallowed in its stead, can hardly be proved by any, who do not take into consideration Christ's Teaching, as embodied in the practice of the Apostles, observing as holy the first day of the week, instead of the seventh.

The Acts of the Apostles supplies the necessary connecting link in this argument. There it is said[4] that "upon the First Day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread," that is, to receive the Holy Communion, "Paul preached unto them." This passage is to be taken together with other intimations in Holy Scripture, particularly the relation of Christ's appearances to His Apostles on this day, the day of His Resurrection[5], and the narrative of the sending of the Holy Ghost from Heaven on this day[6], and the record of Christ's revelation of

[1] Matt. x. 40. [2] Luke x. 16. [3] 1 Cor. xvi. 22.
[4] Acts xx. 7. [5] John xx. 19. 26. [6] Acts ii. 1.

Himself to St. John in Patmos when in the Spirit on the Lord's Day[1]. And these intimations collectively will suffice to convince an unprejudiced person, that while the sanctification of one day in seven still remains in full force, on its original foundation of positive Divine Law from the beginning, the Day to be sanctified by Christians is the First Day of the week.

It may indeed be objected that such conclusions as these are collected rather by probable inferences, than deduced directly by demonstrative proof. But perhaps it may be replied, that our moral probation in this world consists in the trial of our attention to such probabilities as these. They are the best tests of our obedience; they prove its sensibility; they show, whether we are actuated only by that servile fear, that does God's bidding, when it is commanded to do so under strong coercion and penal discipline; or whether we are animated by that clear-sighted and cheerful spirit of filial love, which divines, and almost anticipates, our heavenly Father's desires, and hastes with angelic alacrity at the least signification of His will.

These intimations therefore of the Will of Christ as to Christian Doctrine, and Church Discipline, as displayed in the Acts of the Apostles, are of inestimable value; they are not mere isolated incidents, and historical facts, limited in their uses to any particular age or country; they are general types and divine precedents, of universal application.

The Acts of the Apostles is a concise book, and it is an inspired book. In its brief compass the Holy Ghost describes the operations of Christ, acting by His Holy Apostles. It omits many things in their history which the world would desire to know; and these omissions are eloquent proofs, that the actions of the Apostles, which the Holy Spirit has not omitted, but has specially selected for commemoration in this book, are of paramount importance. The omissions serve to bring out in bolder relief, and in more salient prominence, the significance and value of what is not omitted, but distinctly set down in writing by the dictation of the Holy Spirit. The actions of the Apostles—or rather, the actions of Christ operating by them—which are recorded in this book, are doubtless designed to be patterns and examples for the faith and practice of the Church, in every country and in every age. They are like beams of the Sun of Righteousness, drawn together and concentrated in a brilliant focus, so that they may illumine the mind of the Church in every hour of her existence.

Therefore we need not hesitate to say, that in the Acts of the Apostles the Shepherd and Bishop of our souls[2], Jesus Christ, is revealed to us as sitting in His chair in His heavenly Cathedral, surrounded by His Angelic Hierarchy, and delivering to all Christian Bishops and Pastors a divine Charge, a holy Pastoral, a Symbol of Christian Doctrine, a Code of Ecclesiastical Polity, a Rule of Church Discipline, a chart of Missionary enterprise, a system of Biblical Evidences and Exegesis, for the perpetual instruction and regimen of every age and clime, even till He comes again, to judge the Quick and Dead.

[1] Rev. i. 10.

[2] 1 Pet. ii. 25

VII. What benefits may we derive from this contemplation?

First, the inestimable blessing of Unity. Christendom is rent by schisms. Our own Country is distracted by religious Discord. Surely the time is come, that we should seriously lay to heart the great dangers we are in by our unhappy divisions. Surely the hour is arrived, that we should consider more carefully the grounds of our differences, and meditate more earnestly on the sin of strife, and on the blessedness of peace.

Among the means available for the appeasing of strife and recovery of unity, none is more efficacious than this Divine Book, dictated by the Holy Spirit of Love; in which He reveals His own mission from Christ, and displays to us Christ acting and teaching by means of those who were sent by Him, and inspired by the Holy Ghost.

Therefore in referring to what the Apostles taught, we are referring to Christ Himself; and all who love Him may do well to remember His own words, "If ye love Me, keep My commandments[1];" and "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things that I say[2]." It cannot consist with love to Christ, to slight any, even the least, indications of His will, revealed in this book by the Holy Ghost.

Here is the true foundation of Apostolic Doctrine and Discipline. It rests on a foundation which cannot be shaken; it is a House built upon the Rock, the Rock of Ages, which is Christ.

Let us then consider, whether in this Divine Book we may not find a path of unity, in which we may walk together as Brethren toward our heavenly home.

On the one hand, they who revere the doctrinal symbols and primitive organization of the Church, and desire to restore and reinvigorate them, wheresoever they are decayed, and to propagate them where they are wanting, may be invited to consider, whether, in endeavouring to attain this end, some among us may not have placed the Church in too prominent an attitude, and in too independent a position; and whether it be not our duty, to raise our eyes, and to direct the eyes of others upward, from the Church upon earth to Jesus Christ her Lord, acting and teaching in and by her from Heaven. The Holy Ghost has taught us in this Divine Book not to rivet our minds even on the Apostles themselves[3]; but to concentrate all our thoughts and affections on Him Who sent them, and acts by them. Let us not regard the Church as separable from Christ; but ever think on her as dependent on Him, and as deriving all her grace and virtue, all her authority and power, from Him alone. Let us not forget the words of the Psalmist, speaking to her, the Queen at Christ's right hand, and saying, "He is thy Lord God, and worship thou Him[4]."

On the other hand, if we are tempted to think lightly of the Apostolic and Primitive Church, if we are disposed to treat with indifference any of the specific functions of the Christian Ministry, and its threefold orders, then let us pause and consider, whether we have rightly conceived the question at issue; and whether,

[1] John xiv. 15.
[2] Luke vi. 46.
[3] See above, pp. xii, xiii.
[4] Ps. xlv. 12.

by such a temper of mind, we may not be doing grievous wrong—not to men—but to Christ; to Christ our Lord and King, our Prophet and Priest, our Saviour and our Judge, seated in heavenly glory and majesty at God's right hand; to Christ, vouchsafing to send "His Holy Spirit from Heaven to teach His Apostles, and to guide them into all Truth[1];" and whether we may not be guilty of disobeying Him, and of sinning against the Holy Ghost.

To think less of men, and to think more of God; to lift up our eyes from the Church Militant on earth, to her Lord and Head triumphant in heaven,—this is what the Holy Ghost teaches us in the Acts of the Apostles. Therefore it is that He annexed it as a second volume to St. Luke's Gospel, and joined both together in one work; revealing in the former, Christ acting and teaching on earth, and in the latter, Christ acting and teaching in heaven. The Acts of the Apostles is the Gospel-History of Christ, now reigning in glory.

VIII. The Notes, which are contained in the present Volume, have been written with such persuasions as these.

They have also been dictated by a conviction, that the design of this Sacred Book has not been clearly understood by some; and that it has not, in recent times, nor perhaps even in ancient days, received that attention which it claims, and which, if duly bestowed upon it, would do much to settle the controversies of Christendom, and to advance the progress of the Gospel; and that the nearer the end of earthly things approaches, the greater its uses will be.

Accordingly, from these considerations, the Plan of the Book has been dwelt upon at large in the present Introduction.

The writer of these Notes cannot quit this subject, without an expression of thankfulness to Almighty God, that He has preserved in England a Church, which has not disqualified herself for interpreting the Acts of the Apostles.

One of the most painful feelings arising in the mind, from the perusal of interpretations of the Acts of the Apostles by learned members of those religious Communions, which have departed from the rule of primitive Christian Doctrine and Discipline, is caused by distortions or disparagements of the Apostolic Precedents recorded in this Book, and received and followed by the ancient Church.

By a dereliction of those Apostolic Precedents, those Communions have disabled themselves for expounding the Acts of the Apostles. They cannot interpret this Book, without, at the same time, pronouncing a sentence of condemnation on themselves.

From the infirmity of human nature, it is rather to be desired than expected, that they should prefer to censure their own principles, rather than to misinterpret that by which they are censured.

For this reason, the student of Scripture may need to be cautioned against those expositions; which, as if by a judicial retribution, are too often blemished by sceptical strictures on the History of the Acts, as well as by perversion of its teaching in matters of Christian Doctrine and Discipline, and by imputations of errors to those Saints and Martyrs, who were inspired by the Holy Ghost[1]. For this reason also, the English student of Holy Scripture, while he thankfully avails himself of all the aids—critical, philological, historical, and antiquarian—which the erudition of Protestant Germany has richly furnished,—may well be thankful to the Great Head of the Church, that the principles of the English Reformation were not innovating and revolutionary, but preservative and restorative; and that God has raised up Expositors in England, inferior to none in wisdom and learning, and placed on a sacred vantage-ground of sound Exposition, by the principles and constitution of the Church, to which they have the happiness to belong.

[1] John xvi. 13.

IX. In the Text of the present Edition of the Acts of the Apostles, more deviations from the Textus Receptus will be found, than, within the same compass, in the Edition of the Gospels. This is due to the fact, that there are many more discrepancies in the Manuscripts[2] of this Book, than of them, or of almost any other Book of the New Testament.

The reader, however, will find satisfaction in observing, that scarcely any of these variations affect the sense, in any perceptible degree; and that none in any respect touches the substance of any Christian Doctrine[3]. And he may thence derive an assurance, that while the collation of the vast variety of Manuscripts of the New Testament, which are derived from all parts of the world, serves to establish immovably the integrity of the Text of the Inspired Volume, and to confirm the Truth of the Gospel; not one of that countless multitude has been found to invalidate in the least degree any historical fact, or any doctrinal article on which the Christian religion is founded, and our hope of salvation rests.

[1] For a specimen of this, the Reader may refer to the notes on the speech of St. Stephen, Acts vii.

[2] Particularly MS. D, i. e. the Codex Bezæ or Cambridge Manuscript, on which see Bp. Middleton's Remarks, Appendix to his Work on the Greek Article, pp. 649—669. Bornemann's edition of the Acts is based upon that MS. Some of its principal discrepancies may be seen in Eichhorn's Einleitung in d. N. T. ii. p. 87, Kuinoel, Prolegomena, § 2.

[3] Except, perhaps, Acts xx. 18, and the question there is rather one of language than of substance.

Cloisters, Westminster Abbey,
May 14, 1857.

CHRONOLOGICAL SYNOPSIS

OF THE EVENTS RELATED IN THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES[1].

In the examination of this subject it is to be remembered—

1. That the common era—Anno Domini—begins about four years too late. (See Note on Matt. ii. 20.)

2. That our Blessed Lord's ministry, which began when He was thirty years of age (see Note on Luke iii. 23), and which seems to have lasted three years and a half (see on John v. 1), and which terminated at a Passover, commenced probably in the Autumn of A.D. 26, and ended at the Passover in A.D. 30. (See Note on John i. 14, and vii. 2; and cp. Africanus, Chronogr. Routh, R. S. ii. 187—190. Clinton, Fasti Rom. p. 14.)

3. That our Blessed Lord and Saviour was crucified on the 15th of Nisan, A.D. 30, that His Resurrection was on the 17th of Nisan of that year, and that the Ascension was forty days afterwards, and that the Day of Pentecost on which the Holy Spirit descended, was on a Sunday, the Seventh Lord's Day after that on which He rose from the Dead. (See Note on Acts ii. 1.)

4. That the only date in the history of the Acts of the Apostles which can be fixed with absolute certainty, is that of the death of Herod Agrippa at Cæsarea, described in Acts xii. 20—22; and that the determination of other points in the Chronology of the earlier portion of the Acts depends mainly on the date of this event.

It appears from Josephus (Ant. xix. 8. 2) that Herod Agrippa was made King of Judæa and Samaria by the Emperor Claudius on his accession, which took place early in the year A.D. 41 (his predecessor, Caligula, having been murdered on the 24th of January in that year), and that Agrippa died soon after the completion of the third year of his reign (Bell. Jud. ii. 11. 6). His death therefore took place A.D. 44, and it appears from the Acts (xii. 3) that it was after a Passover.

Besides, Josephus informs us (Ant. xxiii. 6. 10) that Herod Agrippa had been appointed by the predecessor of Claudius, Caligula, to the Tetrarchies of Philip and Lysanias, soon after his accession, which was in the month of March, A.D. 37 (Dio, lviii. 639. Basnage, Annales i. p. 458. Clinton, F. R. p. 28). And it is stated by Josephus (Ant. xix. 8. 2) that Herod Agrippa died in the seventh year of his government, dating from that appointment by Caligula, early in A.D. 37. And thus we are brought again to A.D. 44, as the year of Herod's death.

5. Thus we have two limits in the history of the Acts, an anterior limit, or terminus à quo, in our Lord's Ascension and the descent of the Holy Spirit in the Spring of A.D. 30, and a posterior limit, or terminus ad quem, in the Spring or Summer of A.D. 44, the date of Herod's death. And in this interval of fourteen years are to be arranged the events recorded in the first twelve chapters of the Acts of the Apostles.

[1] The principal works on this subject are those of Josephus, Eusebius, Hist. Eccles. and Chronicon (Venet. 2 vols. 4to. 1818), Prosper Aquitanus, Chronicon (Bassani, 1782), Bishop Pearson, Tillemont, Basnage, Lardner, and Paley, specified in the List of Authors prefixed to this volume; and in more recent times, those of Anger, A. de temporum in Actis ratione, Lips. 1833; Birks, Greswell, Lewin, Conybeare and Howson, Winer, B. W. B. Art. Paulus; Clinton's Fasti Romani, Oxford, 1845, and Wieseler, Chronologie des Apostolischen Zeitalters, Götting. 1848.

6. Another note of time is furnished by notices in the history of St. Paul, as narrated by himself in the first and second chapters of his Epistle to the Galatians.

In order to show that his preaching was not derived from men, but by revelation from Christ Himself, he there relates (Gal. i. 18) that he had no intercourse with the other Apostles, which could have imparted to him the knowledge he possessed; and that it was not till three years after his conversion that he went up to Jerusalem from Damascus to see Peter, and that he remained there only fifteen days, and thence went into Syria and Cilicia (Gal. i. 21).

He adds, that fourteen years afterwards he went again up to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and took Titus with him.

It has been doubted, whether these fourteen years are to be dated from his conversion, or from the expiration of the three years mentioned previously in Gal. i. 18.

On the whole, it seems most probable that the fourteen years are to be dated from the short visit to Jerusalem, and the journey thence to Tarsus at the end of those three years. For it is observable that in Gal. i. 18, the Apostle says, ἔπειτα, μετὰ ἔτη τρία, i. e. then, after three years from my conversion. But in Gal. ii. 1, he says, ἔπειτα διὰ δεκατεσσάρων ἐτῶν πάλιν ἀνέβην, i. e. having passed through an interval of fourteen years, from the last named date, I went up again to Jerusalem[2].

This visit was most probably the same as that described in Acts xv. 2—22, when St. Paul was sent from Antioch to the Council of Jerusalem (cp. Bede in Act. xv. Davidson, ii. 112—122. Howson, i. p. 539—547). It is true that St. Paul had been at Jerusalem some little time before that visit; but he had only gone to the Elders with alms (xi. 30; xii. 25), and he had no occasion to refer to this visit, in his Epistle to the Galatians. Besides, he says that in the visit which he is mentioning in his Epistle to the Galatians, he had recounted to the Apostles what he had been preaching to the Gentiles (Gal. ii. 2). But such an assertion as that is wholly inapplicable to the short visit mentioned in Acts xi. 30; xii. 25, on which he went up with alms to Jerusalem, and when he had not as yet been even ordained to preach to the Gentiles[3]. (See Note on Acts xiii. 1, 2.)

But in writing to the Galatians, concerning his intercourse with the other Apostles, he could not omit to notice the visit, which he made soon afterwards to Jerusalem, (viz.) that described in Acts xv. 2—22, when he went up to the Apostles and Elders assembled in Council there, to discuss a question in which St. Paul had a personal and official concern. Hence it would seem, that the Council of Jerusalem was held about seventeen years after the Conversion of St. Paul.

This conclusion cannot be regarded as more than an approximation to the truth, because it depends on the two passages above cited, where St. Paul speaks of years, which may be either complete years, or only, according to the Jewish method of reckoning, current years.

7. Another chronological clue seems to be supplied by the mention of the circumstances of St. Paul's escape from Damascus after his Conversion (ix. 25). It appears from 2 Cor. xi. 32, 33, where St. Paul himself is describing that escape, that the city of Damascus had then fallen into the hands of Aretas, King of part of Arabia Petræa, who had appointed an Ethnarch there.

In looking for a season when such a remarkable incident was likely to have occurred, we find none more probable than that in which Aretas had defeated the forces of Herod Antipas,

[2] Bishop Pearson, indeed, infers, p. 379, that the ἔπειτα (in Gal. ii. 1) must be deduced from the conversion, and not from the end of the three years, because another ἔπειτα intervenes in i. 21. But perhaps this circumstance may be rather alleged as an argument in favour of what is said above. For it is evident that the second ἔπειτα in i. 21, which introduces the visit of fifteen days to Jerusalem, and the journey thence to Tarsus, is dated from the first ἔπειτα, which specifies the end of the three years; and so it seems the third ἔπειτα is to be dated from the second.

[3] Bede says in Act. xiii., "Videtur Paulus xiii° post Domini passionem anno Apostolatum cum Barnabâ accepisse xiv^to^, autem anno ad Gentium magisterium profectus est. Nec Historia Ecclesiastica repugnat, docens Apostolis esse præceptum ut duodecim annis prædicarent in Judæâ."

to whom he had long been hostile, on account of Herod's ill-treatment of his daughter, whom he had abandoned for Herodias. (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 5. 1. Matt. xiv. 1—13.) Herod Antipas being defeated (late in A.D. 36), appealed for succour to the Emperor Tiberius, who commanded Vitellius, then President of Syria, to declare war against Aretas. (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 5. 1.) But soon after, Tiberius died (March, A.D. 37), and Vitellius drew off his forces, and went to Rome. (See Notes on ix. 2 and 24.)

It seems probable, that Aretas availed himself of the favourable opportunity thus presented for occupying the city of Damascus.

This occupation would be only of short duration. Caligula interfered in the affairs of Arabia, in the second year of his reign (Dio, lix. 9), and would hardly have allowed Aretas to retain what he had usurped. If these calculations are just, the date of St. Paul's Conversion would be A.D. 34.

It may be remarked, that the Jews do not seem to have had the same power of persecuting the Christians at Damascus when St. Paul escaped from that city, as they had when he came down from Jerusalem with a commission from the High Priest. (Acts ix. 1—14; xxvi. 11.) But now the Jews lie in wait for him, and endeavour to destroy him by the permission and agency of the Ethnarch of Aretas. (Acts ix. 23. 2 Cor. xi. 32.) The occupation of Damascus by Aretas seems therefore to have been after his Conversion.

8. Another note of time may be derived from Acts ix. 31, where it is related that "all the Churches in Judæa, and Galilee, and Samaria had rest, and walking in the fear of the Lord and the comfort of the Holy Ghost were multiplied."

The Christians had nothing to fear at that time from the Romans. Their persecutions were from the Jews; and if the Churches had rest, it was not to be ascribed to any cessation of desire, but to a suspension of power or opportunity on the part of the Jews to persecute them.

It has been suggested by Basnage, ad A.D. 40, Lardner (i. 55; iii. 252), and others (see Note on Acts ix. 31), that this "rest of the Churches" was due to the alarm in which the Jews themselves were, on account of the command given by the Emperor Caligula, to the President of Syria, Petronius, in A.D. 39, to set up the Imperial Statue in the Temple at Jerusalem. (Joseph. Bell. Jud. ii. 10. 1. Ant. xviii. 8. 2. Philo, Legat. 31.)

It was not till the death of Caligula and the accession of Claudius, 24th Jan. A.D. 41, that the Jews were relieved from this panic. And soon after that, Herod Agrippa, the person who had showed his zeal for the Jews by interceding with Caligula for a revocation of this command (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 8. 7. Philo, Leg. 35), "stretched forth his hands to vex certain of the Church, and killed James the brother of John with the sword; and because he saw it pleased the Jews, he proceeded to take Peter also." (Acts xii. 1.)

This Rest of the Churches cannot have commenced till after St. Paul's visit to Jerusalem, for then a persecution was going on, to which he was exposed. (Acts ix. 26—31.) Besides, when Paul came to Jerusalem, Peter was there; but during the Rest, Peter was absent from Jerusalem on a Missionary Tour. (Acts ix. 31—43; cp. Lardner, iii. 253.)

9. Certain notes of duration are set down in the Acts (viz.):—

(1) After St. Paul's first visit of fifteen days to Jerusalem and his journey to Cilicia (Gal. i. 18—23. Acts ix. 30; xi. 25), and his intercourse with Barnabas, who brought him from Tarsus to Antioch, he remains with Barnabas a whole year at Antioch, where the Disciples are first called Christians (xi. 25—27).

(2) Paul and Barnabas, after their first Missionary Journey, returned to the Syrian Antioch, and remained no small time there (διέτριβον χρόνον οὐκ ὀλίγον) with the Disciples (xiv. 28).

(3) After their return from the Council of Jerusalem to Antioch they again tarried there (διέτριβον, xv. 35).

(4) St. Paul, in his second Missionary Journey, came through Asia Minor and Macedonia into Achaia (Acts xvi. xvii.), and remained at Corinth a year and six months (ἐκάθισε ἐνιαυτὸν καὶ μῆνας ἕξ, xviii. 11).

(5) From Cenchreæ, the eastern port of Corinth, he set sail for Ephesus, where he remained only a short time, being desirous of being at Jerusalem for the feast (xviii. 19—21), probably Pentecost.

(6) After a short visit to Jerusalem he returned to Ephesus, where he spent three years (xx. 31).

(7) After these three years he went again to Macedonia (xx. 1), and came into Hellas, and spent there three months (xx. 3).

He then went back through Macedonia, came to Philippi (xx. 6), where he spent Easter, and passed by Troas (xx. 6—12) and Miletus (xx. 15) to Cæsarea and Jerusalem, where he had not been for several years (δι' ἐτῶν πλειόνων, xxiv. 17), and where he had desired to be at the feast of Pentecost.

(8) He was arrested in the Temple by the Jews, and was sent for safety to Cæsarea; and he was detained there in "custodia libera" two years by Felix, who (xxiv. 27) had been governor for many years (ἐκ πολλῶν ἐτῶν, xxiv. 10), and is succeeded in the procuratorship by Festus, who sends St. Paul by sea toward Rome.

(9) After his shipwreck in the Mediterranean, St. Paul remains during the winter at Malta; and after three months he sets sail again "in a ship which had wintered in the island" (xxviii. 11).

(10) He remains at Rome two whole years (διετίαν ὅλην, xxviii. 30).

(11) It is evident from St. Luke's narrative that St. Paul arrived at Rome in the Spring of the year after the succession of Festus to the Procuratorship in the room of Felix;

What year was that?

(1) Felix was Procurator of Judæa in A.D. 52[4]; and he had been many years (ἐκ πολλῶν ἐτῶν) Procurator when Paul pleaded before him at Cæsarea. (Acts xxiv. 10.)

(2) Felix, when recalled, was saved from the punishment due to his misgovernment by the influence of his brother Pallas with the Emperor Nero. (Joseph. Ant. xx. 8, 9.) Pallas was put to death by Nero A.D. 62; and Nero was suspected of having poisoned him. (Tacit. Ann. xiv. 65.)

(3) St. Paul, when brought a prisoner to Rome, was delivered into the charge of the prefect of the prætorian guard (τῷ στρατοπεδάρχῃ, Acts xxviii. 16). It seems then that there was only one prefect at that time.

But after the death of Burrhus, who was prefect till February, A.D. 62, when he died (Tacit. Ann. xiv. 51. Clinton, F. R. p. 44. Wieseler, p. 83), there were two prefects. See Bp. Pearson, ii. 389, and Wieseler, p. 86.

(4) Josephus relates (Ant. xx. 8. 11), that a dispute arose between the Jews and Festus the Procurator, and that they sent a deputation to Rome, where their cause was favoured by Poppæa, the wife of Nero. This could not have been before A.D. 62, when Poppæa became his wife. (Tacit. Ann. xiv. 49. Sueton. Ner. 35.) But some time may have elapsed after the appointment of Festus, before the dispute could have arisen, and the deputation have proceeded to Rome and have gained the favourable notice of Poppæa.

(5) Josephus also states (Vit. 3) that he himself went to Rome to intercede for some Jewish Priests whom Felix had sent there before his removal from the procuratorship. Josephus arrived at Rome A.D. 63 (Vit. 1). From his narrative it appears that they had been some time in detention at Rome, and that he engaged the interest of Poppæa in their favour.

(6) Eusebius says (H. E. ii. 23) that James, the Bishop of Jerusalem, was martyred by the Jews at Jerusalem, because they were disappointed by the escape of St. Paul from their hands. The martyrdom of St. James took place at the Passover, A.D. 62. (Euseb. ii. 23. Joseph. Ant. xx. 9. 1.) It appears that Festus the Procurator had recently died, and that his successor had not arrived; and that Ananus the High Priest, who was a Sadducee, and of a cruel temper, and his adherents, took advantage of this interval to destroy St. James and others. (Joseph. Ant. xx. 9. 1.) St. Paul's arrival at Rome would therefore have been before—but not long before—that time.

[4] It is said by Wieseler, p. 67, and others, that Felix was appointed by Claudius in the thirteenth year of his reign, i.e. after Jan. 24, A.D. 53; and this is inferred by him from Josephus, Ant. xx. 7. 1, δωδέκατον ἔτος ἤδη ἐκπληρωκώς. But Josephus applies these words to the appointment of Agrippa, and not of Felix. It appears from that passage, and from Bell. Jud. ii. 12. 8, that Felix was appointed Procurator before, though probably not long before, the appointment of Agrippa to the tetrarchy of Philip; which took place early in A.D. 53. The appointment of Felix is placed still earlier by Tacitus, Ann. xii. 54, "Pallas jampridem Judææ impositus." Cp. Lewin, p. 1080, and Eusebius (Chron. ii. p. 271) assigns it to the eleventh year of Claudius, i.e. A.D. 51. Clinton (Fasti Rom. pp. 34—36) is in favour of an earlier date than A.D. 52, for the appointment of Felix.

(7) On the whole, therefore, it seems most probable that Festus succeeded Felix in the Spring or Summer of A.D. 60, and that St. Paul's arrival at Rome is to be placed in the Spring of A.D. 61, and that he remained at Rome till the Spring of A.D. 63. Lardner (iii. 279) says, "Paul came to Jerusalem at the Feast of Pentecost, A.D. 58, and was sent away to Rome at the end of A.D. 60," and he is followed by Wieseler, 66—80. Winer, R. W. B. i. p. 368. Birks, Horæ Apostolicæ, pp. 167—182. Howson, ii. 669—672. Hackett, p. 15.

From the above premises we arrive at these chronological results, which may be arranged as probable in the following order:—

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

A.D.

30. The Crucifixion of Christ, on the 15th Nisan, probably April 7th.
His Ascension, probably on the 18th May.
The Descent of the Holy Spirit, probably on the 27th May.

31—32. The Events described in Chapters iii.—vi. of the Acts.

33. St. Stephen's Martyrdom (Acts vii.). Saul was then a νεανίας (vii. 58).
St. Philip's Missionary Journey (Acts viii. 5—40).
St. Peter and St. John at Samaria. Simon Magus (Acts viii. 14—24).

34. St. Paul's Conversion (ix. 1—25).
Retires to Arabia (Gal. i. 17).

36. Pontius Pilate is recalled from his procuratorship in Judæa (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 4. 2).
Damascus occupied by Aretas, who appoints an Ethnarch there.

37. 'After many days' (ix. 23), St. Paul escapes from Damascus.
Goes up to Jerusalem; where he remains fifteen days, and sees Peter and John (Gal. i. 18, 19. Acts ix. 26, 27); and Disputes with the Grecians;
Sent to Tarsus (ix. 30).
The Emperor Tiberius dies 16th March, and Caligula succeeds.

38—41. Rest of the Churches (Acts ix. 31).
St. Peter's Missionary Journey (ix. 32—43).
Tarries at Joppa many days (ix. 43).
Conversion of Cornelius (x. 1—48).

41. The Emperor Caligula dies 24th January, and is succeeded by Claudius.

43. Euodius, first Bishop of Antioch (Euseb. Chron. ii. p. 269. Clinton, F. R. App. ii. p. 548).
The Disciples called CHRISTIANS at Antioch (Acts xi. 26).

44. James the brother of John is killed with the sword (Acts xii. 2), and Peter is imprisoned by Herod Agrippa, before Easter (xii. 4). Peter is delivered; and Herod is smitten by an Angel, and dies at Cæsarea (xii. 23).
Peter retires from Jerusalem (xii. 17).
Paul and Barnabas having been deputed by the Christians at Antioch (xi. 27—30) to bring supplies to the Brethren in Judæa, on account of the anticipation of the famine foretold by Agabus, which "came to pass in the reign of Claudius Cæsar" (xi. 28), i. e. after January, A.D. 41, return from Jerusalem to Antioch, with John Mark, who was connected with Peter (xii. 12), and with Barnabas. (See on xv. 39.)

A.D.

45. Ordination of St. Paul and Barnabas, at Antioch, to the Apostleship of the Gentiles. (See on xiii. 1.)

Their first Missionary Journey to Cyprus (Paphos), and Pisidia, and Perga in Pamphylia (xiii. 4—13), whence Mark returns to Jerusalem. They visit Antioch of Pisidia, Iconium, Lystra; return to Perga and Pamphylia, and thence to Antioch, where they remain a considerable time with the disciples.

49. A Controversy arises at Antioch concerning the obligation of the Ceremonial Law (xv. 1, 2).

Paul and Barnabas, and some others, are deputed to go from Antioch to Jerusalem, "to the Apostles and Elders," concerning this matter (xv. 2, 3).

50, 51. Council of Jerusalem (xv. 6—29).

Paul and Barnabas return to Antioch, where they remain some time (xv. 35, 36).

Their παροξυσμός (xv. 39).

Paul takes Silas (xv. 40) on his second Missionary Journey, and afterwards Timothy also at Lystra (xvi. 1).

52—54. Passes through Phrygia and Galatia to Troas (xvi. 6. 8). Thence crosses over to Philippi (xvi. 12), and Thessalonica (xvii. 1), and Berea (xvii. 10); thence to Athens (xvii. 15) and Corinth, where Paul spends a year and six months (xviii. 1. 11).

Aquila and Priscilla come to Corinth.

Epistles to the Thessalonians.

54. Sets sail from Cenchreæ in the Spring for Ephesus, on his way to Jerusalem, for the feast, probably Pentecost (xviii. 18, 19).

After a short visit at Jerusalem (xviii. 21),

St. Paul returns to Ephesus; where he spends three years (xx. 31)—three months in the Synagogue, and two years in the School of Tyrannus (xix. 8—10).

The Emperor Claudius dies (13th October), and Nero succeeds.

57. First Epistle to the Corinthians.

St. Paul, after three years' stay at Ephesus, quits it for Macedonia (xx. 1).

Second Epistle to the Corinthians.

Comes into Hellas, and spends three months there (xx. 3).

58. Epistle to the Romans, written at Corinth or Cenchreæ.

Returns to Macedonia in the Spring, and arrives at Philippi for Easter (xx. 6).

Passes over to Troas (xx. 6). Touches at Miletus (xx. 17) and Tyre (xxi. 3), and lands at Cæsarea (xxi. 8).

Comes to Jerusalem, after several years (xxiv. 17), for the Feast of Pentecost (xx. 16; xxi. 17).

Is arrested at Jerusalem in the Temple (xxi. 28).

Is conveyed to Cæsarea (xxiii. 23—33).

58—60. Remains two years in detention at Cæsarea (xxiv. 27).

Is sent by Festus, in the Autumn of A.D. 60, by sea toward Rome (xxvii. 1).

Winters at Malta (xxviii. 11).

61. Spring: arrives at Rome.

62. Martyrdom of St. James the Bishop of Jerusalem, at the Passover.

62, 63. St. Paul is at Rome, where he writes Epistles to the Ephesians, Colossians, and Philippians, and perhaps to Philemon, in which he calls himself "Paul the Aged" (Phil. 9. See above on A.D. 33).

Is detained at Rome till the Spring of A.D. 63 (xxviii. 30); where the History of the "ACTS of the APOSTLES" concludes.

The CONTEMPORARY CHRONOLOGY of the Emperors of Rome, the Presidents of Syria, the Procurators of Judæa, and the High Priests of Jerusalem, may be exhibited in the following TABLE[1].

A.D.	Emperor.	President of Syria.	Procurator of Judæa.	High Priest.
30.	Tiberius, since A.D. 14, Aug. 19.	. . . . .	Pontius Pilate from A.D. 26 or 27 (Jos. Ant. xviii. 4. 2).	Caiaphas, since A.D. 25.
34.	. . . . .	Vitellius (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 4. 4. Tacit. Ann. vi. 27).	. . . . .	. . . . .
36.	. . . . .	. . . . .	Pontius Pilate recalled (Jos. Ant. xviii. 4. 2).	. . . . .
37.	Caligula succeeds March 16.	. . . . .	. . . . .	Caiaphas removed by Vitellius. Jonathan, son of Ananus (Jos. Ant. xviii. 4. 3).
39.	. . . . .	Petronius (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 8. 2).	. . . . .	Theophilus, son of Ananus (Jos. Ant. xviii. 5. 3).
41.	Claudius succeeds Jan. 24.	. . . . .	HEROD AGRIPPA, King of Judæa.	. . . . .
42.	. . . . .	Vibius Marsus (Ant. xix. 6. 4).	. . . . .	Simon, son of Boëthus (Joseph. Ant. xix. 6. 2). Matthias, son of Annas (Ant. xix. 6. 4).
43.	. . . . .	. . . . .	. . . . .	Elionæus, son of Cantheras (Ant. xix. 8. 1).
44.	. . . . .	C. Cassius Longinus (Ant. xx. 1. 1).	Cuspius Fadus (Ant. xix. 11. 2; xx. 5. 1).	. . . . .
45.	. . . . .	. . . . .	Herod, King of Chalcis, obtains from Claudius the appointment of the High Priests, and the charge of the Temple (Ant. xx. 1. 3).	Joseph, son of Cami (Ant. xx. 1. 3).
46.	. . . . .	. . . . .	Tiberius Alexander (Ant. xx. 5. 2).	. . . . .
47.	. . . . .	. . . . .	Ventidius Cumanus (Ant. xx. 5. 2). Herod, King of Chalcis, dies, is succeeded by his nephew, Herod Agrippa II.	Ananias, son of Nebedæus, appointed by Herod, King of Chalcis (Ant. xx. 5. 1).
48.	. . . . .	. . . . .	. . . . .	. . . . .
49.	. . . . .	Titus Ummidius Quadratus (Ant. xx. 6. 2. B. J. ii. 12. 5).	. . . . .	. . . . .
53.	. . . . .	. . . . .	Felix (Ant. xx. 7. 1). HEROD AGRIPPA II., who had been King of Chalcis since A.D. 48, and had the charge of the Temple and the appointment of the High Priests, and was advanced, about the close of A.D. 52, to the Tetrarchies of Philip and Lysanias, with the title of King (Ant. x. 7. 1. B. J. ii. 12. 8; iii. 3. 5).	. . . . .
54.	Nero succeeds Oct. 13.	. . . . .	. . . . .	. . . . .
59.	. . . . .	. . . . .	. . . . .	Herod Agrippa appoints Ishmael, son of Phabi (Ant. xx. 8. 8).
60.	. . . . .	Domitius Corbulo.	Festus succeeds Felix (Ant. xx. 8. 9).	. . . . .
61.	. . . . .	. . . . .	Festus dies. The province without a procurator.	Agrippa appoints Joseph, surnamed Cabi, son of Simon (Ant. xx. 8. 11).
62.	. . . . .	. . . . .	Albinus (Ant. xx. 9. 1. B. J. ii. 14. 1).	Ananus (xx. 9. 1).
63.	. . . . .	. . . . .	. . . . .	Jesus, son of Damnæus (xx. 9. 1).

[1] See Zeittafeln in Winer, B. W. B. ii. p. 763. Wieseler, p. 594. Lewin, pp. 1022—1107, and Alford, Proleg. pp. 23—25.

Inferences deducible from the preceding CHRONOLOGICAL SYNOPSIS and TABLE.

The consideration of the results represented above may suggest the following reflection:—

1. The Times and Numbers which are recited in Holy Scripture, and which serve as landmarks of Sacred History, seem to be regulated by certain laws.

For example, the periods of Forty Days and Forty Years recur frequently in Holy Scripture as Times of Probation. (See Numb. xiv. 33; xxxii. 13. Ps. xcv. 10. Heb. iii. 9. 17, and Notes on Acts i. 3; vii. 23.)

2. If the dates assigned in the above Table are correct, it appears that the period of probation which was allowed to the city Jerusalem after the crucifixion of Christ was Forty Years; i. e. from A.D. 30 to A.D. 70, when it was taken by the Romans and the Temple was destroyed.

This result being consistent with the general dealings of Divine Providence with His people, confirms the conclusion stated in the Table.

3. St. Luke's work is divided into two parts, viz.:

1. his Gospel.
2. the Acts of the Apostles.

If the dates specified above are correct, then the Ascension of Christ, with which St. Luke's Gospel ends, and the Book of the Acts begins, stands at the middle point between both; and each portion of St. Luke's work records the events of about Thirty-three Years.

4. It is related in Holy Scripture of King David, the type of Christ, that he reigned forty years; seven, or seven and a half, in Hebron, and thirty and three years in Jerusalem over all Israel and Judah. (2 Sam. v. 4, 5. 1 Chron. xxix. 27.)

Perhaps these times may be typical of Christ's kingdom after His Ascension; at first limited to the literal Israel, and then, in the eighth year after the Ascension, extended, in the Conversion of Cornelius, to all Nations.

David reigns forty years; and Solomon, the peaceful, also a type of Christ, succeeds, who builds the Temple, the figure of the Church.

In the fortieth year after the Ascension of Christ, the literal Temple is destroyed; but this destruction of the material fabric conduced to the construction of the spiritual; the demolition of the Temple was the building-up of the Church. It weaned the hearts of the people of God from the earthly Jerusalem, and raised their eyes to the graces and glories of the heavenly, which is the Mother of us all. (Gal. iv. 26.) It tended to unite both Jew and Gentile in Christ and His Church; and thus the forty years led to a peaceful union of all the people of God under the divine Son of David, the true Solomon, the Prince of Peace.

5. The number seven generally introduces in Scripture a period of Rest after toil and affliction. (See on Matt. i. 17; xxvii. 52. 62. Luke xxiii. 56.)

In looking at the Chronological Table of the History of the Acts we find,

(1) The first seventh year, i. e. A.D. 37, marked by the "Rest of the Churches."

(2) The second, or fourteenth year (i. e. A.D. 44), distinguished by another Rest, after the death of Herod Agrippa I. (See Acts xii. 24.)

(3) The third septennium, A.D. 51, by Rest after controversy (xv. 23—30; xvi. 4, 5).

All these periods of seven are marked in the history by what may be called sabbatical sentences, expressive of Rest after labour and suffering. See ix. 31; xii. 24; xv. 31; xvi. 5.

Such analogies as these will appear more or less worthy of notice to the reader, accordingly as he is disposed to attach more or less importance to a subject which has hitherto received little consideration in modern times, viz. the significance of periods of time in Sacred History. In the present state of our knowledge in this respect, it would be rash to build any thing upon them as a foundation; but the observation of them, if otherwise deducible by reasoning, may be confirmatory of the results to which that reasoning leads; and may perhaps induce others to pursue the inquiry further, which, while it demands patience of investigation, and soberness of deliberation, and diffidence in stating its results, has so much to commend it to the thoughtful student of Scripture, in the records of Inspiration, and in the testimony of Christian Antiquity, that it will not be lightly set aside by any who desire to understand the "whole counsel of God."

ANCIENT GREEK MANUSCRIPTS, IN UNCIAL LETTERS, CONTAINING

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

A Alexandrine, of IVth or Vth century, in British Museum, London; a facsimile published by C. G. Woide, Lond. 1786. Folio.

B Vatican, of IVth or Vth century; in the Vatican at Rome, No. 1209. No accurate collation yet published. A transcript has been printed, but not published, by Cardinal Mai[1]. Cp. Tregelles, p. 156.

C Codex Ephraem Syri rescriptus (Palimpsest), in Imperial Library at Paris. Num. 9. Published by Constantine Tischendorf, Lips. 1843.

D Codex Bezæ, Greek and Latin, of VIth or VIIth century?; in the University Library at Cambridge. A facsimile published by Kipling, Cantabr. 1793. Folio.

E Laudianus, Greek and Latin, of VIth or VIIth century; in the Bodleian Library at Oxford; originally from Sardinia. Published by Hearne, Oxon. 1715.

F Coislimanus; VIIth century; published by Tischendorf, Monumenta Sacra, p. 404.

G Angelicæ Bibliothecæ, at Rome, IXth century.

H Mutinensis, IXth century.

In the Acts of the Apostles

A is complete.

B is complete.

C contains only some portions, viz.:

Chap. i. 2—iv. 3.
v. 35—x. 42.
xiii. 1—xvi. 36.
xx. 10—xxi. 30.
xxii. 21—xxiii. 18.
xxiv. 15—xxvi. 19.
xxvii. 16—xxviii. 4.

[1] "Monstravit mihi," says Tischendorf, N. T., p. lviii., "Angelus Mai anno 1843, volumina impressa quinque, quorum quatuor Vetus quinto Novum continetur Testamentum. Quæ editio, brevi opinor proditura quamquam non erit ejusmodi ut ipsum Codicem accuratissimè exprimat, magnoperè tamen varias Codicis lectiones supplebit."

D is defective, as follows:

From viii. 29—x. 14.
xxi. 2—xxi. 10.
xxi. 15—xxi. 19.
xxii. 10—xxii. 20.
xxii. 29 to end.

E is defective, as follows:

From xxvi. 29—xxviii. 26.

F contains only some portions:

iv. 33, 34.
ix. 24, 25.
x. 13. 15.
xxii. 22.

G begins at viii. 10, and is thence complete to the end.

H contains only some portions:

v. 28—ix. 38.
x. 19—xiii. 36.
xiv. 3 to end; the portion after xxvii. 4 being supplied by a later hand.

PRINCIPAL CRITICAL EDITIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

Erasm. Basil, 1516, 1519, 1522, 1527, 1535.

Complutensis, in the fifth Volume of the Complutensian Polyglot: printed in A.D. 1514, and published at Complutum or Alcala, in 1520.

Stephens. Paris, 1546, 1549, 1550, 1551.

Beza. Genev. 1565, 1576, 1589, 1598.

Elzevir, commonly called the "Textus Receptus." Lug. Bat. 1624.

Fell. Oxon. 1675.

Mill. Lond. 1707. Roterod. 1710, by Kuster.

Bentley. On his proposed edition, see Bentley's Correspondence passim, and Tregelles on the Printed Text of N. T. p. 57—78.

Bengel. Tubing. 1734.

Wetstein. Amstelodami, 1751, 1752. 2 vols. folio.

Griesbach. 1st ed. 1774; 2nd ed. 1796—1806.

Matthæi. Riga, 1782—1788. 12 vols.

Alter. Viennæ, 1786, 1787.

Birch. 1788—1801.

Scholz. Lips. 1830—1836. 2 vols. 4to.

Lachmann. 1st ed. 1831; 2nd ed. Berolin, 1842—1850. See Tregelles, pp. 97—115, and Tischendorf, pp. xli.—xlvii.

Tischendorf. Lips. 1841. Two at Paris, 1842.

His first critical edition appeared at Leipzig, 1849: with copious Prolegomena. See there, p. xli., his own account of his editions.

His seventh Edition, now in course of publication (1857), is intended to present a complete conspectus of all the critical subsidia, as yet available, for the revision of the Text of the New Testament.

The following extracts from the prospectus are of importance, as indicating the present views of the learned Editor:—

"Auf Grund dieser dokumentlichen Vorarbeiten, wie sie wohl nochnie für eine Neutest. Ausgabe unternommen worden sind, wird zum ersten Male ein solcher kritischer Apparat dargeboten, der für alle aufgenommenen Lesarten, ohne Ausnahme die Zeugnisse für und wider enthält, so wie auch die Angabe aller anderen Lesarten, die in den griechischen Unzialhandschriften gefunden werden oder sonst irgend beachtenswerthe Auctorität für sich haben.

"Der Textconstituirung ist die grösse Sorgfalt und Gewissenhaftigkeit gewidment worden. Forgesetzte und immer tiefer eingehende Beobachtungen haben den Herausgeber zu mancher Aenderung der frühern Entscheidungen geführt; namentlich hat er die Bevorzung einiger unseren-ältesten Zeugen austriftigen Gründen beschränken zu müssen geglaubt.

"In diesem Betrachte gewährt die neueste Ausgabe eine gewiss willkommene Förderung kritischer Studien dadurch, dass sie sehr häufig eine Andeutung der Entscheidungsgründe über die einzelnen Lesarten enthält."

Alford. Lond. 1855-6. Second edition. 3 vols.

Bloomfield. Lond. 1855. Ninth edition. 2 vols.

For List of ANCIENT VERSIONS see the Edition of the Gospels, p. xxxviii.

For Special Editions of the ACTS of the APOSTLES, see the following List:—

LIST OF AUTHORS AND EDITIONS

REFERRED TO IN THE FOLLOWING NOTES TO THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

Akerman, John Yonge, F.S.A., Numismatic Illustrations of the New Testament. London. 1846.

A Lapide, Cornelius. Lugd. 1732. Folio.

Alford, Henry, B.D., Greek Testament. 3 vols. 1855-6.

Ambrose, St., Ambrosii Opera. 4 vols. Paris. 1836.

Ammonius. See Catena.

Andrewes, Bp., Works. Oxford. 11 vols. 1841—1854.

Arator, Ecclesiæ Romanæ Diaconus; de Actibus Apostolorum ad Papam Vigilium Libri duo. A Latin Poem in Hexameter Verse, consisting of 2326 lines, written about the middle of the Sixth Century. It is contained in the Bibliotheca Patrum Maxima, Vol. x. Lugd. 1677; and in the Abbé Migne's Patrologia, Vol. lxviii. Paris. 1847.

Athanasius, St., Opera. Ed. Bened. 2 vols. folio. Patavii. 1777.

Augustine, St., Augustini Opera. Ed. Benedict. 12 vols. 8vo. Paris. 1836.

Barrow, Isaac, D.D., Works. 6 vols. 8vo. Oxford. 1841.

Basil, St., Basilii Cæsar. Opera. Ed. Paris. 1721. 3 vols. folio.

Basnage, Sam., Annales Ecclesiastici à Cæsare ad Phocam. Roterodam. 3 vols. folio. 1706.

Baumgarten, M., Apostelgeschichte. English Translation by Morrison and Meyer. Edinb. 1854.

Beda, Venerabilis, in Acta Apostolorum, et Retractationes. Tom. xii. Lond. 1844.

Bengel, J. A., Gnomon N. T. 2 vols. Tubingæ. 1835.

Beveridge, Bp., on the Thirty-nine Articles. Oxford. 1840. 2 vols.

Bingham, Joseph, Origines Ecclesiasticæ. Lond. 1834. 8 vols. 8vo.

Birks, Rev. T. R., M.A., Horæ Evangelicæ. Lond. 1852. See also Paley.

Biscoe, Richard, M.A., Boyle Lectures on the Acts of the Apostles. 2 vols. Lond. 1742.

Bloomfield, S. T., D.D., Greek Testament. 2 vols. 8vo. Ninth ed. 1855.

Blunt, J. J., B.D., History of the Christian Church during the first Three Centuries. Lond. 1856.

Bornemann, F. A., Acta Apostolorum ad Codicis Cantabrigiensis fidem recensita. Grossenhain. 1848.

Browne, Professor E. H., on the Thirty-nine Articles. London. 1850. 2 vols.

Bruder, C. H., Concordantia Novi Testamenti. Lips. 1842. 4to.

Bull, Bp., Works. Ed. Burton. 7 vols. Oxford. 1827.

Burton, Edward, D.D., Lectures on the Ecclesiastical History of the First Century. Oxford. 1831.

Buxtorf, Johannes, Synagoga Judaica. Basil. 1680.

Cassiodorii Senatoris Complexiones in Acta Apostolorum. Roter. 1723.

Catena in Acta SS. Apostolorum è Cod. Nov. Coll. edidit J. A. Cramer, S.T.P. Oxon. 1838.

Chrysostom, Homilies on the Acts, Tom. iv. Ed. Savil. 1612. Pp. 607—919.

Clemens Alexandrinus, St., Opera. Ed. Potter. 2 vols. folio. Oxon. 1715.

Clinton, H. F., M.A., Fasti Romani. 1845 and 1850.

Conybeare, Rev. W. J., M.A., and Howson, Rev. J. S., M.A., The Life and Epistles of St. Paul. 2 vols. Lond. 2nd ed. 1856.
Cook, Rev. F. C., M.A., The Acts of the Apostles, with a Commentary. Lond. 1850.
Cosin, Bp., on the Canon of Holy Scripture. Lond. 1672.
Cyril, St., Alexandrin., Opera. Lut. Paris. 1638.
———, Hierosolym., Opera. Ed. Venet. 1763.
Davidson, Samuel, LL.D., Introduction to New Test. Lond. 1848.
De Wette, W. M. L., Handbuch zum N. T. Leipzig. 1845. 3te Auflage. 2 vols. 8vo.
Didymus. See Catena.
Elz., Elzevir Edition of Nov. Test. Græc. Lug. Bat. 1624.
Epiphanii, S., Opera. Ed. Petavii. 2 vols. folio. Colon.
Eusebii Historia Ecclesiastica. Ed. Burton. Oxon. 1838.
Ford, Rev. James, M.A., Prebendary of Exeter, Acts of the Apostles Illustrated from Ancient and Modern Authors. Lond. 1856.
Gieseler, C. L., Ecclesiastical History. Vol. i. English Translation. Edinb. 1846.
Glassii, Salom., Philologia Sacra. Amst. 1711. 4to.
Gregory, St., Gregorii Magni Opera. Ed. Paris. 1705. 4 vols. folio.
Greg. Nazian., St., Gregorii Nazianzeni Opera. Ed. Bened. Paris. 1778—1840. 2 vols. folio.
Grinfield, E. W., Editio Hellenistica N. T. et Scholia Hellenistica N. T. Lond. 1843-8. 4 vols. 8vo.
Grotius in "Poli Synopsis Criticorum."
Guerike, Einleitung in das N. T. Leipzig. 1843.
Hackett, Professor, Commentary on the Acts. Boston, U. S. 1852.
Hammond, H., D.D., Paraphrase of and Annotations on the New Testament. Lond. 1681.
Hilary, St., Opera. Oberthür. 4 vols. Wiceberg. 1785.
Hooker, Rd., Works. 3 vols. 8vo. Oxford. 1841.
Hottinger, J. H., Thesaurus Philol. Tigur. 1659.
Howson. See Conybeare.
Humphry, William Gilson, B.D., A Commentary on the Acts of the Apostles. 2nd ed. Lond. 1854.
Irenæus, St. Ed. Stieren. Lips. 1853. 2 vols. 8vo.
Jackson, Thomas, D.D., Works. 12 vols. Oxford. 1844.
Jahn, Archæologia Sacra. Viennæ. 1814.
Jerome, St., Hieronymi Opera. Ed. Bened. Paris. 1693—1706. 5 vols. folio.
Josephus, Opera. Richter. 6 vols. Lips. 1826.
Justin Martyr, St. Ed. Paris. 1742. Folio, and 2 vols. 8vo. Jenæ. 1842.
Kirchofer, Joh., Quellensammlung zur Geschichte d. N. T. Canons. Zürich. 1844.
Kitto, John, D.D., Daily Bible Illustrations, "The Apostles and Early Church." Edinb. 1854.
Kuinoel, C. T., Novum Testamentum Græcum. Ed. Lond. 1834. 3 vols.
Lachmann, C., Novum Testamentum. See above, p. xliv.
Lardner, Nathaniel, Works. 5 vols. 4to. Lond. 1815.
Leo, M., Opera. Lugd. 1700.
Lewin, Thomas, M.A., The Life and Epistles of St. Paul. Lond. 2 vols. 1851.
Lightfoot, John, D.D., Commentary on the Acts of the Apostles. Works, Vol. i. p. 733. Lond. 1682.
——— Hebrew and Talmudical Exercitations on the Acts of the Apostles. Vol. ii. p. 633.
Lorinus, Johannes, in Acta Apostolorum. Lugduni, 1609. Folio.
Mede, Joseph, Works. Lond. 1677. Folio.
Meyer, H. A. W., Ueber die Apostelgeschichte. Second edition. Göttingen, 1854.
Middleton, Bp., on the Greek Article in the N. T. Cambridge. 1828.
Mintert, Petri, Lexicon N. T. Francofurti. 1728. 2 vols. 4to. A Lexicon illustrating the language of the N. T. from the LXX.

Mishna, sive Totius Hebræorum Juris Rituum, Antiquitatum ac Legum Oralium Systema, cum clarissimorum Rabbinorum Maimonidis et Bartinoræ Commentariis, ed. Surenhusii. 6 voll. folio. Amst. 1698.

Œcumenius in Acta Apostolorum, Tom. i. Lut. Paris. 1630.

Olshausen, Hermann, Apostelgeschichte. (English Translation. Edinb. 1850.)

Origenis Opera. Ed. De la Rue, folio, and ed. Lommatzsch, Berlin. 1831—45.

Paley, W., D.D., Horæ Paulinæ. Edited by Rev. T. R. Birks, with additions. Lond. 1850.

Patres Apostolici (St. Clemens Romanus, St. Ignatius, St. Polycarpus). Ed. Jacobson. Oxon. 1847. 2 vols.

Pearson, Bp., on the Creed. Ed. Chevallier. Cambridge. 1849.

——— Annales Paulini, in his Opera Posthuma, ed. Churton, i. pp. 371—396.

——— Lectiones in Acta Apostolorum; on the first Nine Chapters, ibid. pp. 317—368.

Poli, Matth., Synopsis Criticorum in Sacram Scripturam. Lond. 1699. 4 vols. folio.

Rosenmüller, Jo. Georg., Scholia in N. T. Ed. 1815. 5 vols.

Routh, Martin, S. T. P., Reliquiæ Sacræ. 5 vols. Oxon. 1846—1848.

Sanderson, Bp., Works. Ed. Jacobson. Oxford. 1854. 6 vols.

Schoettgen, Christian, Horæ Hebraicæ in N. T. Dresd. 1733.

Septuaginta, Interpretes Veteris Testamenti. Oxon. 1848. 3 vols.

Severian. See Catena.

Severus. See Catena.

Smith, James, Esq., of Jordanhill, F.R.S., &c. The Voyage and Shipwreck of St. Paul. Second edit. Lond. 1856.

Surenhusii, Cul., βίβλος καταλλαγῆς, on the Passages of the Old Testament quoted in the New. Amst. 1713.

Theophylactus in Acta Apostolorum; two distinct Commentaries; one edited by Sifanus, 1557, the other from a MS. in the Vatican, first printed in 1758. Both are contained in Tom. iii. of his Works, ed. Venet. 1758.

Tillemont, Lenain De, Mémoires pour servir à l'Histoire Ecclésiastique. Tomes i. and ii. Bruxelles. 1732.

Tischendorf, Constantin. See above, p. xliv.

Tregelles, S. P., LL.D., on the Greek Text of the Gospels. Lond. 1854.

Valckenaër, L. C., Scholæ in Actus Apostolorum. Ed. Amst. 1815.

———— Annotationes Criticæ in loca quædam N. T. In his Opuscula. Lips. 1808.

Vorstius, Johan., De Hebraismis N. T. Ed. Fischer. Lips. 1778.

Waterland, Daniel, D.D., Works. Ed. Van. Mildert. Oxford. 1823. 11 vols. 8vo.

Webster, W., and Wilkinson, W. F., Greek Testament. Vol. i. Lond. 1855. See on the Gospels.

Wetstein, J. J., Novum Testamentum Græcum. Amst. 1752. 2 vols. folio.

Whitby, Daniel, D.D., Annotations on the Acts of the Apostles. Reprinted at Lond. 1842.

Wieseler, Karl, Chronologie des Apostolischen Zeitalters. Göttingen. 1848.

Williams, George, B.D., The Holy City. 2 vols. Lond. 1849. 2nd ed.

Winer, Biblisches Realwörterbuch. 3te Auflage. Leipzig. 1842.

——— Grammatik des N. T. Sprachidioms. 6te Auflage. Leipzig. 1855.

ΠΡΑΞΕΙΣ ΑΠΟΣΤΟΛΩΝ.

I. [1] [a] ΤΟΝ μὲν πρῶτον λόγον ἐποιησάμην περὶ πάντων, ὦ Θεόφιλε, ὧν a Luke i. 3. ἤρξατο Ἰησοῦς ποιεῖν τε καὶ διδάσκειν [2] [b] ἄχρι ἧς ἡμέρας ἐντειλάμενος τοῖς b Luke 24. 51.
ἀποστόλοις διὰ Πνεύματος ἁγίου, οὓς ἐξελέξατο, ἀνελήφθη· [3] [c] οἷς καὶ παρ- c ch. 13. 31.
έστησεν ἑαυτὸν ζῶντα μετὰ τὸ παθεῖν αὐτὸν ἐν πολλοῖς τεκμηρίοις δι' ἡμερῶν τεσσαράκοντα ὀπτανόμενος αὐτοῖς, καὶ λέγων τὰ περὶ τῆς βασιλείας τοῦ Θεοῦ.

On the Title of this Book, see the Preface to this Volume.

Ch. I. 1. τὸν μὲν πρῶτον λόγον] τὸν πρῶτον λόγον, a modest name for his Gospel. (Chrys.) πρῶτον for πρότερον, as Luke ii. 2, see note.

On μὲν without δὲ expressed, see Acts iii. 21; iv. 16; xxvii. 21; xxviii. 22. Winer, Gr. Gr. § 63, p. 508.

This expression πρῶτον λόγον is important for determining the time of the publication of the Gospels.

The Acts are carried down to A.D. 63. If they were written then (as seems probable), the Gospel of St. Luke, his πρῶτος λόγος, was written before A.D. 63.

The Gospels of St. Matthew and St. Mark, which are prior to St. Luke's, were published before that time.

It is probable that the Gospel of St. Luke, which is said by ancient Church-History to have been written under St. Paul's eye, was, as well as the Acts, composed in his διετία, or two years' sojourn at Rome (see Introductory Note to the Gospels, p. xlvi).

— περὶ πάντων] Not that St. Luke narrated them all (cp. John xxi. 25); but πᾶς is used in Scripture in a relative sense, i.e. for all those things which are "apta et congrua et officio sufficientia" (Aug. de Consens. Evang. iv. 8), requisite, convenient, and sufficient for the purpose in view. Acts xxi. 27. Ephes. vi. 21.

Cp. πάντοτε προσεύχεσθαι, Luke xviii. 1; ἦσαν διαπαντὸς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, Luke xxiv. 53.

— ἤρξατο] By this word, as here used, and at v. 22, as well as by the word Θεόφιλε, St. Luke connects his δεύτερον λόγον, or Acts of the Apostles, with his πρῶτος λόγος (the Gospel); see on Luke iii. 23. St. Luke (says Valck.) wrote one work, divided into two parts.

Besides, the word ἤρξατο as here used has a deeper sense;

St. Luke intimates by it, that our Lord's Ministry on earth was only the ἀρχή, or beginning of His Mediatorial Kingdom; and that this kingdom, so begun, received a fresh accession of majesty at His Ascension into heaven, and at His Session at the Right Hand of God; and that its sway is now exercised in the protection of His Church, and in the Government of the World, and that it will be continued till He appears again in glory, when all His enemies will be put under His feet; and then the Kingdom which was begun at His Baptism will be consummated, by the complete subjugation of Satan and of Death, and by the full and final triumph of Christ; and "God will be all in all." 1 Cor. xv. 28.

In the Gospels the Holy Spirit has described the beginning of that Kingdom as inaugurated by Christ on earth.

In the Acts of the Apostles He describes the continuance and extension of that Kingdom through the power of Christ exalted and glorified in heaven.

Cp. Olshausen, p. 348, Baumgarten, i. 11—15, and below, note on x. 11.

2. ἐντειλάμενος τ. ἁ. διὰ Πνεύματος ἁγίου] He gave charge to His Apostles by the Holy Spirit (Chrys., Theophylact, Valck.), when He breathed on them and said, Λάβετε Πνεῦμα ἅγιον, John xx. 22, and so gave them an earnest of the gift of Pentecost. Cp. Heb. ix. 14, διὰ Πνεύματος αἰωνίου ἑαυτὸν προσήνεγκεν ἄμωμον τῷ Θεῷ, and below, xi. 28, and xxi. 4, ἔλεγον διὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος, and Winer, § 61, p. 491.

— οὓς ἐξελέξατο] whom He chose out of the world for Himself (John xv. 16), obscure and humble though they were, and advanced them to the high dignity of seeing His miracles and hearing His Words, and finally to be witnesses of His Resurrection and Ascension. Such was His love and mercy to them.

3. ἐν πολλοῖς τεκμηρίοις] Matt. xxviii. 17. Mark xvi. 14. Luke xxiv. 13—50. John xx. 19. 1 Cor. xv. 5. 7.—τεκμήρια, as distinguished from σημεῖα, are evidences derived from logical induction. (Valck.)

— δι' ἡμερῶν τ.] not during forty days, but at intervals, in the period of forty days; for He appeared to them from time to time, and then disappeared (Chrys.), proving to them His humanity by eating and drinking with them; yet weaning them, by vanishing suddenly, from dwelling on His corporal presence; and instructing them in His Divine power, and perpetual, though unseen, presence, by unexpected appearances among them, and disappearances from them.

On this text, see Barrow's Sermon 29, vol. v. pp. 39—63.

The period of "Forty Days" seems to be marked in Holy Scripture as significant of probation before some great event. Examples may be seen in the History of the Flood, Gen. vii. 4. (See Aug. Serm. de Ascens. 264.) Moses in the Mount before the giving of the Law, Exod. xxiv. 18; xxxiv. 28. Deut. ix. 9; x. 10 (see Blunt, Lectures, p. 12); the time of the spies in searching the Land, Numb. xiii. 25; xiv. 34; the time of Elias before coming to Horeb, 1 Kings xix. 8; the time of probation for Nineveh, Jonah iii. 4.

Compare the same period before our Lord's Presentation in the Temple (Luke ii. 22), and of His Fasting before He entered on His Ministry (Matt. iv. 2, where see note).

As He was forty days after His Birth before He was presented in the Temple in the earthly Jerusalem, and again forty days after His Baptism, before He entered on His Ministry, so now He waits forty days after His Birth from the Grave, before He presents Himself in the Temple of the heavenly Jerusalem, and enters on His Ministry in the true Holy of Holies, where He "ever liveth to make intercession for us." Heb. vii. 25.

The Forty Days, a term of Probation, have also a preparatory reference to the Pentecost or Fiftieth, the Day of Jubilee. (Lorin.)

Forty years after this (a year for a day, Numb. xiv. 33) Jerusalem was destroyed, because the people would not believe in Christ, who had so mightily declared Himself the Son of God by His Resurrection, which had been so plainly proved by so many proofs for Forty Days. (Lightfoot.) — ὀπτανόμενος] not θεωρούμενος. On the difference between ὄπτομαι and θεωρῶ, see on John xvi. 16.—ὀπτανόμενος (cond Luke 24. 49. John 14. 26. & 15. 26.

e Matt. 3. 11. Mark 1. 8. Luke 3. 16. John 1. 26.
ch. 2. 4. & 11. 16. & 19. 4.
f Matt. 20. 21. Luke 17. 20. Isa. 1. 26. Amos 9. 11.
g Matt. 24. 36.
h ch. 2. 2. Luke 24. 48, 49. John 15. 26, 27.
i Mark 10. 19. Luke 24. 51.

4 [d] Καὶ συναλιζόμενος αὐτοῖς παρήγγειλεν ἀπὸ Ἱεροσολύμων μὴ χωρίζεσθαι, ἀλλὰ περιμένειν τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν τοῦ Πατρὸς, ἣν ἠκούσατέ μου· 5 [e] ὅτι Ἰωάννης μὲν ἐβάπτισεν ὕδατι, ὑμεῖς δὲ βαπτισθήσεσθε ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ οὐ μετὰ πολλὰς ταύτας ἡμέρας. 6 [f] Οἱ μὲν οὖν συνελθόντες ἐπηρώτων αὐτὸν λέγοντες, Κύριε, εἰ ἐν τῷ χρόνῳ τούτῳ ἀποκαθιστάνεις τὴν βασιλείαν τῷ Ἰσραήλ; 7 [g] Εἶπε δὲ πρὸς αὐτούς, Οὐχ ὑμῶν ἐστι γνῶναι χρόνους ἢ καιροὺς, οὓς ὁ Πατὴρ ἔθετο ἐν τῇ ἰδίᾳ ἐξουσίᾳ· 8 [h] ἀλλὰ λήψεσθε δύναμιν, ἐπελθόντος τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος ἐφ' ὑμᾶς· καὶ ἔσεσθέ μοι μάρτυρες ἔν τε Ἱερουσαλὴμ καὶ ἐν πάσῃ τῇ Ἰουδαίᾳ καὶ Σαμαρείᾳ, καὶ ἕως ἐσχάτου τῆς γῆς. 9 [i] Καὶ ταῦτα εἰπὼν βλεπόντων αὐτῶν ἐπήρθη, καὶ νεφέλη ὑπέλαβεν αὐτὸν ἀπὸ τῶν nected with ὕπτομαι) means appearing suddenly, from time to time.

---

— λέγων τά] Observe the Article τὰ, the things, i. e. all that was requisite for them to know and do.

— περὶ τῆς βασιλείας τ. Θ.] Concerning the Christian Church (Matt. xiii. 11. 19. 24. 31. 33. Luke iv. 43; vi. 20; vii. 28; viii. 10), her Doctrines, Government, Trials, Hopes, and future Consummation. See Professor Blunt's Lectures "on the History of the Church during the first three Centuries," pp. 12—16.

4. συναλιζόμενος] Associated, and assembling together with, = συναχθεὶς συναθροισθεὶς (Hesych.), so used by Xenophon, Cyrop. i. 4. 14. Anab. vii. 3. 48. Joseph. Ant. viii. 4. 1; xix. 7. 4. Cp. Bp. Pearson in Ignat. ad Magnes. 10, and Valck. here.

— ἀπὸ Ἱεροσολύμων] The form Ἱεροσόλυμα is used about twenty times in the Acts, but never except after a preposition; in all other cases we have Ἱερουσαλήμ.

The same peculiarity is found in St. Luke's Gospel.

— μὴ χωρίζεσθαι] As they would otherwise have been disposed to do. But they were to remain at Jerusalem, in order that the miracle of the descent of the Holy Ghost upon them might be more striking and convincing as wrought in the capital of Judea, and at the next great Festival after the Crucifixion, viz. at the Festival of Pentecost, when strangers from all parts of the world would be gathered to Jerusalem, and would carry back the tidings of that manifestation into all lands; and also that the Christian Law might go forth from Mount Zion (Isa. ii. 3. Micah iv. 2), and so show its harmony with the Levitical Dispensation.

It is recorded on ancient authority, that our blessed Lord enjoined His Apostles to remain at Jerusalem for twelve years after the Ascension. See the passages cited by Bp. Pearson, in Acts, § xi. Routh, Rel. S. i. pp. 471. 484. Blunt, Lectures, pp. 43, 44.

Cp. below, vi. 2; viii. 1.

It is probable that the Apostles made circuits in Palestine during that time, and did not quit the Holy Land till about A. D. 42.

— τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν τοῦ Πατρός] Another expression connecting the Acts of the Apostles with the Gospel of St. Luke. See there, xxiv. 49, ἰδοὺ ἐγὼ ἀποστέλλω τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν τοῦ Πατρός μου ἐφ' ὑμᾶς.

— ἣν ἠκούσατέ μου] For a similar change of the oratio obliqua to recta, cp. Luke v. 14, and below, xvii. 3, and xxiii. 22, and see Winer, § 63, 2, p. 511.

5. ὑμεῖς δὲ βαπτισθήσεσθε ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ]

See below, xi. 16. But were not the Disciples baptized before?

It would seem that they were, and with Christ's Baptism (John iii. 22; iv. 2), and that Baptism differed from the Baptism of John; for John baptized unto repentance and faith in Christ to come (Acts xix. 4), and they who were baptized by John, were baptized afterwards into Christ (Acts xix. 5). But we do not hear that any which were baptized into Christ before the Ascension and day of Pentecost, were baptized again after it. What the Disciples received by Baptism with water into Christ before the day of Pentecost, is a question on which various opinions have been offered (see Aquinas, 3, p. 9. 66, art. 2, and 73, art. 5, and A Lapide here).

But this is clear, that whatever it was, it was consummated as it were by a χρίσις τελειωτική, in the full effusion of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost.

See further on, Acts x. 47.

— οὐ μετὰ πολλὰς ταύτας ἡμέρας] After not many days, and those days ταύτας, namely, dating from this present time. Cp. Winer, § 23, p. 146.

He says that they are not many, that they may hope; but He does not say how few they are, in order that they may watch. (Chrys.)

6. Κύριε] Jesus is often called in this book, written for Hellenists, by the name Κύριος. And (as Valck. well observes) the word Κύριος in the LXX Version, read by the Hellenists, is used for Jehovah; "ut adeò parùm intersit (adds Valck.), utrum Jesus Κύριος dicatur an Θεός." See below, on v. 21.

— ἀποκαθιστάνεις τ. β.] The ordinary meaning of ἀποκαθίστημι in the LXX and N. T. is restituo. In the LXX it is used for the Hebr. הֵשִׁיב reverti fecit, from root שׁוּב reverti, reducere. See Gen. xxix. 3; xl. 13. 21. Ps. xxxv. 17, and passim.

In the N. T. it often means restoration or return, Matt. xii. 13. Mark iii. 5; viii. 25. Luke vi. 10. Heb. xiii. 19. It seems to have this meaning here; but it signifies something more.

According to the Jewish expectation of the Jews, the times of the Messiah would bring more than all the pristine glory to the City and Nation of the ancient people of God.

They looked for an amplification of the power and splendour of David and Solomon, in Christ. See the Hebrew authorities in Lightfoot here. Therefore it seems that the word ἀποκαθίστημι and ἀποκατάστασις, as used in this respect, imply something more than restitution; viz. a consummation of all that had, in their opinion, been promised by God to His people when redeemed and restored under the glorious reign of the Messiah. And this sense of the word appears clearly in iii. 21.

The question therefore addressed to our Lord is, Art Thou at this time intending fully to establish the Kingdom of the Messiah? καθιστάνω is stabilio, and the preposition ἀπὸ (as in ἀποδοῦναι, Matt. xxii. 21) intimates that what is established is, as it were, due, and to be paid as a debt. The temporal kingdom of the Messiah for which they looked, was, they supposed, promised in ancient Prophecy, and pledged by solemn stipulations of God.

Hence ἀποκαθιστάναι is used by the LXX for to pay, Gen. xxiii. 16: cp. Job v. 18. See also Gloss. Hesych., ἀποκαταστῆσαι = τελειῶσαι, and cp. Mark ix. 12, and note below, iii. 21.

The question of the Apostles appears to be mentioned here, in order to show how much they needed the grace of the Holy Ghost to enlighten their minds as to the true nature of Christ's Kingdom. They thought of temporal Sovereignty, but He spoke to them of the witness which they must give (v. 8), and by which the Kingdom was to be advanced. Compare the similar conversation, Matt. xx. 21—23.

7. χρόνους ἢ καιρούς] "The times or seasons." χρόνος = πολλῶν καιρῶν συνοχή, καιρὸς = μέρος χρόνου. (Thom. Mag.) Hence Sophocles, Elect. 1306, χρόνου καιρός.

It is not for you to know the time which will elapse before My Kingdom will be established; nor the season in which it will be established.

— ὁ Πατήρ] See on Mark xiii. 32.

8. ἔσεσθε μοῦ] So A, B, C, D, and others.

Elz., ἔσεσθέ μοι. Μοῦ is emphatic, and the genitive is expressive of property in, and protection of. Ye shall be witnesses of Me, and I will defend you. Cp. ii. 32; iii. 15; v. 32; xiii. 31.

— ἕως ἐσχάτου τῆς γῆς] Here is the clue to the design of this Book—to trace the progress of the Church from its origin at Jerusalem to the "ends of the earth."

9. ἐπήρθη] Our Lord is said ἀναληφθῆναι (Mark xvi. 19. Acts i. 2. 11. 22. 1 Tim. iii. 16) and ἐπαρθῆναι here; and He is also said to go, as on a journey, πορεύεσθαι, v. 10; and so St. Peter says (1 Pet. iii. 22), πορευθεὶς εἰς οὐρανόν. As His Resurrection is said to be God's act (Acts ii. 24. 32; iii. 26; xiii. 33, 34; xvii. 31), and yet His own act (John ii. 19; x. 18); so His Ascension (as Chrysostom observes) is called in Scripture an ἀνάβασις, as well as an ἀνάληψις, showing at once His ὀφθαλμῶν αὐτῶν. [10] [k] Καὶ ὡς ἀτενίζοντες ἦσαν εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν πορευομένου αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἰδοὺ ἄνδρες δύο παρειστήκεισαν αὐτοῖς ἐν ἐσθῆτι λευκῇ, [11] [l] οἳ καὶ εἶπον, Ἄνδρες Γαλιλαῖοι, τί ἑστήκατε ἐμβλέποντες εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν; οὗτος ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ὁ ἀναληφθεὶς ἀφ' ὑμῶν εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν, οὕτως ἐλεύσεται, ὃν τρόπον ἐθεάσασθε αὐτὸν πορευόμενον εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν. [12] [m] Τότε ὑπέστρεψαν εἰς Ἰερουσαλὴμ ἀπὸ ὄρους τοῦ καλουμένου Ἐλαιῶνος, ὅ ἐστιν ἐγγὺς Ἰερουσαλήμ, σαββάτου ἔχον ὁδόν.

k Luke 24. 4. John 20. 12.
l Matt. 24. 30.
m Luke 24. 52.

Humanity and also His Divine power and Unity with the Father.

By His Ascension into Heaven, our Great High Priest fulfilled the type of the Levitical Law (Levit. xvi. 2), and entered with His own Blood, once for all, into the Holy of Holies, even Heaven itself, where He ever liveth to make intercession for us. Heb. ix. 12; vii. 25. Bp. Pearson, On the Creed, Art. vi. p. 505.

— νεφέλη] He did not vanish by degrees; but a cloud comes as a chariot to convey Him to Heaven. Ps. civ. 3. (Chrys.) And in like manner He will reappear at the last Day. Rev. i. 7, ἰδοὺ ἔρχεται μετὰ νεφελῶν.

10. ἀτενίζοντες] 'intentis oculis, rectis:' "tendere oculos," Lucret. i. 67: "tendens lumina," Virg. Æn. ii. 405, one of the words used only by St. Luke (iv. 20; xxii. 56. Acts iii. 4, and eight other times in the Acts, iii. 12; vi. 15; vii. 55; x. 4; xi. 6; xiii. 9; xiv. 9; xxiii. 1) and by St. Paul (2 Cor. iii. 7. 13).

One of the numerous evidences from diction of identity of St. Luke with the Author of the Acts, and of his connexion with St. Paul.

On the origin of the word ἀτενίζω, see Valck. here, who says "ἀτενὴς significat valdè tendens, nervos tendens, valdè intentus. Euripides (in Alcmæon. ap. Hesych.), ἥκω δ' ἀτενὴς ἀπ' οἴκων de homine qui cum summâ virium contentione festinabat: hinc ἀτενίζειν adhibetur de iis qui rectis atque intentis oculis intuentur: cp. Bentl. ad Horat. i. 3. 18."

— ἄνδρες δύο παρειστήκεισαν] 'while the Apostles were gazing up to heaven, behold two men were standing near them.' The ἰδοὺ and the imperfect sense of the verb mark the suddenness of the appearance of the Angels.

He calls them ἄνδρες, men, as Luke xxiv. 4, ἄνδρες δύο, which he explains in v. 23 to be Angels (cp. also x. 3 with x. 30); so that there is no ground in this word for the allegation of some modern writers, that St. Luke does not mean to affirm that these two ἄνδρες were angels. And these two men announce Christ's reception into heaven, and declare that He will come again from heaven in like manner.

But why did not the Holy Spirit call them Angels?

Because their message showed them so to be, and because they appeared as ἄνδρες. Observe also they address the Apostles as ἄνδρες,—ἄνδρες Γαλιλαῖοι,—and thus remind them and us of the dignity to which our nature is raised by the Ascension of the Man Christ Jesus, and of our own nearness to Angels, and of the glorious hope to which we men—even though we be obscure Galilæans—are thus advanced of being equal to the Angels (ἰσάγγελοι) in the world to come. (Luke xx. 36.) The name of the Angel Gabriel, who is specially employed on embassies concerning the Incarnation, is equivalent to ἀνὴρ Θεοῦ. See on Luke i. 19.

Angels are always ministering to Christ as their Lord at His Birth, at the Temptation in the Garden, at the Resurrection, at the Ascension. (Theophyl.) Cp. our Lord's prophecy, John i. 51.

"Ascendit Judex cœli; sonuit præco cœli; audierunt Apostoli angelicam vocem, 'sic veniet,' ad homines veniet; homo veniet, sed Deus, homo veniet ut impleatur quod scriptum est, videbunt in quem pupugerunt" (Zech. xii. 10). Aug. Serm. 265, on the Ascension,—a festival observed in his time on the fortieth day after the Resurrection. See ibid.

The Festival of the Ascension is reckoned by Augustine (Epist. ad Januar. 54) as one of universal observation; and as dating perhaps "ab ipsis Apostolis."

12. σαββάτου ἔχον ὁδόν] Two thousand cubits. The distance between the Tabernacle and the furthest point of the camp in the wilderness. (Origen. in caten. Lightfoot, i. p. 740, and ii. p. 637.) The distance is not very clearly determined, on account of the difference of the measure of the cubit. Lightfoot and De Dieu reckon it at about five stadia; Reland, Pal. i. 52, at six. See Williams, Holy City, p. 371.

Chrysostom's remark, δοκεῖ μοι ἐν σαββάτῳ γεγονέναι ταῦτα, is only put forth as a private conjecture, to account for what is very remarkable. But Bengel well says (p. 489), "Colligit hinc Chrysostomus die Sabbati eos reversos esse in urbem. Malim statuere proprium in toto Oliveti Monte Ascensionis locum hâc ab urbe distantiâ notari." See next note.

Lightfoot says (i. 252), "The Jews' Chorography will here help us. They tell us, two thousand cubits was the suburbs of a city. (Maym. in Schabh. per. 27.)

"Two thousand cubits were the bounds of a Sabbath, or a Sabbath-day's journey. (Talm. in Sotah, per. 5.)

"Bethphage was of this nature; it was not a town upon Mount Olivet, as it hath been very generally supposed, and accordingly placed in most maps, but it was that space of ground that lay from Jerusalem wall forward towards Mount Olivet, and up Mount Olivet to the extent of two thousand cubits from the wall, or thereabout; and hereupon it was reputed by the Jews of the same qualification with Jerusalem, as a part of it, in divers respects. Talm. Bab. Pesachin. fol. 63, fac. 2, 'He that slays a thanksgiving sacrifice within, while the bread belonging to it is without the wall, the bread is not holy. What means without the wall?' R. Tochanan saith, 'without the wall of Bethphage.' And the same gloss useth the very same words again upon the same Tract, fol. 91, fac. 1. And again in the same Treatise, fol. 95, fac. 2, the Mishna saith thus: 'The two loaves and the shewbread are allowable in the Temple court, and they are allowable in Bethphage.' Nay, the Gloss in Sanhedr. fol. 14, fac. 1, saith, 'Bethphage was a place which was accounted as Jerusalem for all things.' So that the place called Bethphage began from Jerusalem, and went onwards to and upon Mount Olivet, for the space of a Sabbath-day's journey, or thereabout, and then began the coast that was called Bethany. And hence it is that Luke saith that Christ, when He ascended into heaven, led forth His disciples as far as Bethany (Luke xxiv. 50), which elsewhere he showeth was the space of a Sabbath-day's journey (Acts i. 12), which cannot be understood of the town Bethany; for that was fifteen furlongs (John xi. 18), or very near two Sabbath-days' journey from Jerusalem, but that He led them over that space of ground which was called Bethphage, to that part of Olivet where it began to be called Bethany, and at that place it was where Christ began His triumphant riding into the city."

Note on the place of the Ascension. St. Luke says that our Lord led out His disciples from Jerusalem, ἕως εἰς Βηθανίαν, as far as Bethany (xxiv. 50), and blessed them, and ascended into heaven.

The village of Bethany was about fifteen furlongs from Jerusalem (John xi. 18), or about twice a Sabbath-day's journey (see on v. 12).

The village of Bethany was also on the eastern slope of the Mount of Olives, which was reckoned as five or six furlongs from Jerusalem. (Joseph. Ant. xx. 8. 6. B. J. v. 2. 3.)

Hence it has been inferred that our Lord did not ascend from the summit of the Mount of Olives, but from the eastern slope of it. See note on Luke xxiv. 50.

But perhaps this opinion, which has been strongly affirmed by Dr. Robinson (Palest. i. 375), may be questioned; and it may be thought more probable that the Ascension took place either at the summit of Mount Olivet or near that point. See Williams, Holy City, pt. ii. chap. v. pp. 441—445.

The passage in the Acts (i. 12) being written by St. Luke after the passage in his Gospel (xxiv. 50), ought to be taken to explain and complete it; and not vice versâ; i. e. the mention of the Mount of Olives is designed to be supplementary to the reference to Bethany, and to interpret it.

The term Bethany, as Lightfoot has shown (i. 252; ii. 485), is often used to describe the district of that village; which stretched toward Jerusalem, and touched the suburb called Bethphage, which extended eastward from Jerusalem to a distance of about 2000 cubits, or six furlongs, or a Sabbath-day's journey, on the Mount of Olives. (See Lightfoot, i. 252.)

When, therefore, St. Luke says that our Lord led His disciples out as far as Bethany, he means that He led them to its point of contact with Bethphage on the Mount of Olives.

This opinion, which has been well illustrated by Lightfoot, is confirmed by what Dr. Robinson himself calls (i. 375) one of the "earliest traditions of Palestine, and which points out the place of our Lord's Ascension on the summit of the Mount of Olives."

n ch. 9. 39. & 20. 8. Matt. 10. 2—4. Luke 6. 15.

13 n Καὶ ὅτε εἰσῆλθον, ἀνέβησαν εἰς τὸ ὑπερῷον οὗ ἦσαν καταμένοντες ὅ τε Πέτρος καὶ Ἰωάννης καὶ Ἰάκωβος καὶ Ἀνδρέας, Φίλιππος καὶ Θωμᾶς, Βαρθο-

This tradition is mentioned by Eusebius, Bishop of Cæsarea in Palestine, in his Demon. Evang. vi. 18, written about A.D. 315. Referring to the prophecy (Zech. xiv. 4, "His feet shall stand upon the Mount of Olives"), he says, "The feet of our Lord and Saviour—the Logos, or Word, Himself—by means of the Tabernacle of Humanity which He hath exalted (i. e. in His human Flesh), stood on the Mount of Olives, near the grotto there shown at this day, after that He had prayed, and had delivered to His disciples the Mysteries concerning the consummation of all things, on the summit of the Mount of Olives, whence He made His ascent into heaven." It is also corroborated by St. Cyril writing at Jerusalem in the fourth century, and Bishop of that city. See on Luke xxiv. 50. So Cassiodor. p. 159.

In pictures of the Ascension, the prints of our Lord's feet are often represented, impressed on the soil of the Mount of Olives.

This tradition is sometimes traced to S. Jerome, and he is quoted as saying (de locis Hebraicis, in Acta, in v. Olivetum), "Ultima vestigia Domini humi impressa hodie cernuntur." This Treatise is not by S. Jerome (he is cited in it v. Smyrna); but it is not without its use, as representing the local opinion.

It has indeed been alleged as an objection, that on this supposition the Ascension would have been in sight of Jerusalem.

But this opinion seems to be grounded on a misconception of the nature of our Lord's personal appearances after His Resurrection.

When He walked on the public road to Emmaus, He was not recognized for some time even by the two disciples (Luke xxiv. 16). And He Who appeared suddenly on several occasions to the disciples in the city of Jerusalem (John xx. 19. 26), and on the sea-shore in Galilee (xxi. 1), and to more than five hundred brethren at once (1 Cor. xv. 6), so ordered His disappearance at His Ascension, that He made it manifest, "not to all the people, but to witnesses chosen before of God, even to those who did eat and drink with Him after He rose from the dead." (Acts x. 41.)

This opinion that our Lord ascended from the Mount of Olives, at a distance of about six furlongs from Jerusalem, sheds light on other passages of Scripture, and is fraught with spiritual instruction.

David, the type of Christ, wept as he went up the Mount of Olives, when he was rejected and resisted by his own people and son. (2 Sam. xv. 30—32.)

On the Mount of Olives Christ, the Son of David, wept over Jerusalem. (Luke xix. 41.)

When David came to the top of the Mount of Olives, he worshipped, and sent his friend, Hushai the Archite, back to the city of Jerusalem (2 Sam. xv. 32—37), and Hushai's counsel prevailed over that of Ahitophel, the type of Judas. (2 Sam. xvii. 1—23.)

May there not be here some typical reference to the parting of our Lord from His faithful Apostles in this place?

Dr. Lightfoot says (ii. p. 486), "So far from the city was that place of Mount Olivet, where Christ ascended, viz. that part of the mount where Bethphage ended and Bethany began. Perhaps the very same place mentioned 2 Sam. xv. 32, or certainly not far off, where David in his flight taking leave of the Ark and Sanctuary, looked back and worshipped God; where, if any one would be at the pains to inquire why the Greek interpreters retain the word Ῥώς, Ros, both here and in ch. xvi. 1, ἦν Δαβὶδ ἐρχόμενος ἕως τοῦ Ῥώς, and David came unto Ros; and Δαβὶδ παρῆλθεν βραχύ τι ἀπὸ τοῦ Ῥώς, and David passed on a little way from Ros, he will find a knot not easy to be untied."

So Lightfoot. But is not the word Ῥώς of the LXX the same as the Hebrew word used in both these places, רֹאשׁ rosh, the head, or summit of the Mount (of Olives)? And was not the summit so called in the popular language?

And if the analogy suggested by Lightfoot is just, then this circumstance seems to increase the probability that our Lord ascended from the summit of that mount.

Again, on the Mount of Olives Christ predicted the future destruction of Jerusalem (Matt. xxiv. 3), and His own second coming to Judgment (xxiv. 30).

What more suitable than that the scene of suffering should also be the scene of glory purchased by suffering?

What more proper, than that He should ascend in that place, where He had pre-announced His future coming in glory?

The angels themselves seem to refer to this fitness of place in their address to the Apostles (Acts i. 11); and it is worthy of remark, that the voice of Ancient Prophecy points to some future manifestation of the Messiah's glory on the Mount of Olives. (Zech. xiv. 4. Ezek. xi. 23.)

Again; it was from the border of Bethany, and its point of contact with Bethphage on the Mount of Olives (see on Mark xi. 1), that our Lord began to ride in triumph, as King and Saviour, into the City of Jerusalem. That triumphal entry seems to have been typical and prophetical. It is, perhaps, an appropriate and beautiful circumstance, that, at that point in the Mount of Olives where He began His triumphal entry into the earthly city, He also began His triumphal journey to the Jerusalem that is above, as King and Saviour of the World, riding on the clouds of heaven.

Hence also we may perhaps recognize the reason why the remarkable term a "Sabbath-day's journey" is used here to describe the distance which the Apostles walked, from what (as Bengel observes) is here specified as the place of the Ascension.

This is the only passage in the New Testament where "a Sabbath-day's journey" is mentioned at all; and it seems surprising at first that it should be mentioned by St. Luke writing for Gentiles, and should be specified in reference to an event posterior to the Resurrection, when the Jewish seventh-day Sabbath had ceased to be obligatory.

There surely must be therefore some inner meaning in this expression, "a Sabbath-day's journey," used in connexion with that glorious event, the consummation of Christ's earthly ministry, His Ascension into heaven. What can that be?

The Sabbath was a type of that rest which, after their week of this world's work, remaineth to the people of God in that place of repose where they rest from their labours (Heb. iv. 9. Rev. xiv. 13), and whence they will pass, by a joyful Resurrection and Ascension, to the heavenly city of the great King.

The return of the Apostles with joy by a Sabbath-day's journey to the earthly Jerusalem from the place of Ascension, whence their Saviour mounted in glory to the heavenly Jerusalem, may be designed to suggest the cheering assurance, that they who contemplate on earth the Ascension of the Lord, and stand looking up stedfastly into heaven, and ascend in heart and mind with Him, and continually dwell in spirit with Him there, will pass by a Sabbath-day's journey through the grave and gate of death into the Jerusalem that is above, and there enjoy the beatific vision of eternal peace. "Qui gloriam Domini ad Patrem ascendentis intus intueri merebitur, hic Sabbati itinere urbem perpetuæ pacis ingreditur." (Bede.)

13. τὸ ὑπερῷον] sc. οἴκημα. ὑπερῷον is properly an adjective (Valck.), not an upper room, but the upper room, עֲלִיָּה (Vitringa, de Synag. p. 145, and Lightfoot here, p. 638). The definite article points to some place already used as the resort of the Apostles, οὗ ἦσαν καταμένοντες, as is said here. Ancient authorities assert that this was no other than the large ἀνάγεον (see on Mark xiv. 15), in which our Blessed Lord had celebrated the last Passover, and had instituted the first Eucharist, and where He had appeared on the two successive Sundays after His Resurrection from the dead.

Here it would seem the Apostles were assembled when the Holy Ghost descended upon them. See S. Cyril, Bishop of Jerusalem, who affirms (Catech. xvi.) that τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον κατῆλθεν ἐνταῦθα ἐν τῇ Ἱερουσαλὴμ, and that this Upper Room was afterwards called ἡ ἀνωτέρα τῶν ἀποστόλων ἐκκλησία. Cp. S. Jerome, Epist. 86, Ep. Paulæ, and Bede, De locis sanctis, c. 3. Cave, Primitive Christianity, i. 6, and Alford here. Hither they resorted for prayers and for the Holy Communion. See note below on Acts ii. 2. 46; v. 42.

"Ibi," says Bp. Pearson here, "Ecclesia videtur esse constituta. Nam, ut narrat Epiphanius, lib. de Pond. c. 14, cùm Adrianus imperator Hierosolyma adiret, invenit urbem totam funditus eversam, et templum Dei dirutum, παρεκτὸς ὀλίγων οἰκημάτων, καὶ τῆς τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐκκλησίας, μικρᾶς οὔσης, quam ibi collocatam asserit, ubi discipuli reversi, cùm Salvator ascendit à Monte Oliveti, ἀνέβησαν εἰς τὸ ὑπερῷον. Ἐκεῖ γὰρ φκοδόμητο, τουτέστιν ἐν τῷ μέρει Σιών. Nicephorus etiam tradit, Helenam Constantini matrem amplissimum in Sione templum erexisse; in cujus postico domum circumclusit, ubi facta est ἡ τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος κάθοδος ἐν τῷ ὑπερῴῳ, lib. viii. c. 30."

If this assertion is well grounded, then this "upper room" on Mount Zion at Jerusalem was the first Church in the world,—the primitive Church of Christendom.

There is one God, and in this one Godhead there is one Father, one Son, and one Holy Ghost; and there is one Church of God from the beginning to the end of the world. Perhaps the continuous unity of the Church was marked by the fact, that the same upper room which had seen the celebration of the last Passλομαῖος καὶ Ματθαῖος, Ἰάκωβος Ἀλφαίου καὶ Σίμων ὁ Ζηλωτὴς, καὶ Ἰούδας Ἰακώβου. 14 ° Οὗτοι πάντες ἦσαν προσκαρτεροῦντες ὁμοθυμαδὸν τῇ προσευχῇ, σὺν γυναιξὶ καὶ Μαρίᾳ τῇ μητρὶ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, καὶ τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς αὐτοῦ. ° ch. 2. 1. Luke 24. 10. & 23. 49.

15 Καὶ ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ταύταις ἀναστὰς Πέτρος ἐν μέσῳ τῶν ἀδελφῶν εἶπεν, ἦν τε ὄχλος ὀνομάτων ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ ὡς ἑκατὸν εἴκοσιν, 16 p Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοὶ, p Ps. 41. 10. John 13. 18. & 18. 3. ἔδει πληρωθῆναι τὴν γραφὴν, ἣν προεῖπε τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον διὰ στόματος Δαυὶδ περὶ Ἰούδα τοῦ γενομένου ὁδηγοῦ τοῖς συλλαβοῦσι τὸν Ἰησοῦν· 17 ὅτι κατηριθμημένος ἦν ἐν ἡμῖν, καὶ ἔλαχε τὸν κλῆρον τῆς διακονίας ταύτης.

18 q Οὗτος μὲν οὖν ἐκτήσατο χωρίον ἐκ μισθοῦ τῆς ἀδικίας, καὶ πρηνὴς γενό- q Matt. 27. 5. & 26. 15.

---

over, saw also the administration of the first Eucharist by Christ. And perhaps this unity was displayed further when this same upper room saw the first appearance of the Son of God to His assembled Apostles after His Resurrection on the First Lord's Day, and when this upper room, to which they resorted for prayer to God the Father (see Acts iv. 23, 24), saw also the descent of God the Holy Ghost upon them. See below, ii. 46.

— ὁ τε Πέτρος] Matt. x. 2. Mark iii. 16. Luke vi. 14.

— Ἰωάννης] So A, B, C, D. Elz. places James before John. In the three Lists of the Apostles (Matt. x. 2. Mark iii. 16. Luke vi. 14) before the Ascension, James comes before John, and in the two former of them, Andrew comes next to Peter. In the three Lists in the Gospels, Bartholomew comes before Thomas: in both of St. Luke's lists, Simon Zelotes comes before Jude. The only names which occupy the same places in all are,

1. Peter.

5. Philip.

9. James, the son of Alphæus, probably the same as the Lord's Brother.

It has been inferred by some, that St. James the Apostle was not the 'Lord's brother,' because it is added here that οἱ ἀδελφοὶ τοῦ Κυρίου (v. 14) were also present. But James may be distinguished from the other ἀδελφοὶ τοῦ Κυρίου, as Mary is from the other γυναῖκες here, and as Joseph is from the other Patriarchs in vii. 9. See below, on xii. 17.

12. Judas, succeeded by Matthias.

— ὁ Ζηλωτὴς] Formerly such. See Matt. x. 4.

— Ἰούδας Ἰακώβου] i. e. Brother of James: cp. Luke vi. 16. Jude 1. Examples of this ellipsis of ἀδελφός from profane writers may be seen in Valck. and Kuin. Cp. Winer, G. G., p. 171. He was Bishop of Jerusalem after St. James the Less, his brother. Euseb. iii. 11, and iii. 32.

14. προσκαρτεροῦντες] One of the words often repeated in the Acts in relation to Church communion, and declaring its duties and privileges. Here the duty prescribed is perseverance and stedfastness in Christian faith and worship. See ii. 42. 46; vi. 4. Cp. Rom. xii. 12.

— ὁμοθυμαδὸν] With one heart and soul. The Holy Spirit writing by St. Luke, is constantly inculcating this word in this history of the Primitive Church. He applies it to the Apostles here; to the 120 (ii. 1), to the whole body of believers (ii. 46). Cp. iv. 24; v. 12; xv. 25, and Rom. xv. 6.

He thus reminds all future generations, that maintenance of Unity of Pastors among themselves, and of Pastors and People, is the duty of each and all, and is the characteristic of the Church. It was a fruit of Christ's doctrine (John xv. 12) and prayer (xvii. 21), and of His legacy (xiv. 27), and of His breathing upon them (xx. 22), and was matured by the descent of the Holy Ghost.

On ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό, see v. 15.

— τῇ προσευχῇ] Elz. adds, καὶ τῇ δεήσει, which is not in A, B, C, D, E, H, nor in the Vulgate, Syriac, and other Versions.

Another note of connexion with St. Luke's Gospel. See on Luke v. 16.

— γυναιξὶ] Probably Mary Magdalene, Salome, Joanna, and Susanna, and others. Luke viii. 2, 3.

— Μαρίᾳ] "Propter excellentiam distinguitur à cæteris." (Valck.) In the Gospels the blessed Virgin Mary is not mentioned as accompanying Christ from place to place with his Apostles; and this is the last time where her name occurs in Holy Scripture.

The Holy Spirit takes leave of her here, associated with the Apostolic company of worshippers in the Upper Room at Jerusalem. She is one of those who there continue steadfast in prayer. How unlike the spirit and language of the Holy Ghost is that will-worship which takes her out of that holy fellowship, and makes her an object of adoration!

In recent times the blessed Virgin is often represented in Paintings as present at the Ascension; but Arator, writing at Rome in the sixth century, in his poetical Version of the Acts, addressed to Pope Vigilius, speaks of her as waiting at Jerusalem for the return of the Apostles from the Mount of Olives, v. 55:

"Mœnia nota petunt, quá tunc statione sedebat
Porta Maria Dei, Genetrix intacta Creantis
A Nato formata suo."

15. ἀδελφῶν] So A, B, C. Elz. μαθητῶν.

— ὀνομάτων] A Hebraism for persons. Vorst. de Hebr. p. 350. Cp. Rev. ii. 13; iii. 4.

See also below, on iv. 36.

— ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό] together; at the same place and time. A favourite expression with the Author of the Acts, and like ὁμοθυμαδὸν, a note of Church-unity (see v. 14), a watchword of the Church, and of every faithful member of it. See below, ii. 1, ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό. ii. 44, ἦσαν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό. Cp. ii. 47. Hence Ignat. ad Magnes. 7, ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ μία προσευχὴ, μία δέησις, εἷς νοῦς, μία ἐλπὶς, ἐν ἀγάπῃ. Clemens Romanus, i. 34, ἡμεῖς ἐν ὁμονοίᾳ ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ συναχθέντες.

16. ἄνδρες ἀδελφοὶ] On this speech, see S. Iren. iii. 12.

17. ὅτι] Because He was their ὁδηγὸς, or leader; because being one of us "he knew the place" (John xviii. 2) where, and the time when, He might be taken: and because it had been prophesied that one of His familiar friends should betray Christ. Ps. xli. 9.

— ἐν ἡμῖν] Elz. has σὺν ἡμῖν. But ἐν is in A, B, C, D, E, H, and in Vulg., Syriac, and other Versions, and is more expressive. He was not only numbered with us, but in us, i. e. in our Apostolic body.

— ἔλαχε τὸν κλῆρον] He calls it a lot (see below, v. 26), because it was not by their own desert, but by God's grace that they were called to their office. (Chrys.) Hence the word Clerus, or Clergy.

The Acts of the Apostles, if we may so speak, prepared a Christian Onomasticon, or Vocabulary for the Church, e. g. in its use of the words ἐπισκοπὴ, v. 20, πρεσβύτεροι, χριστιανοί, and others.

18. ἐκτήσατο] he was the moving cause of the purchase (see Gregor. Moral. i. c. 9). It has been alleged by some recent Expositors that this statement is at variance with Matt. xxvii. 6—8, where it is said that the Chief Priests purchased the field with thirty pieces of silver; and that St. Luke could not have been acquainted with St. Matthew's Gospel, or he would not have inserted this statement. But the fact is, that St. Luke's assertion is in harmony with St. Matthew's, and is supplementary to it.

The Holy Spirit in Scripture is wont to trace human actions to their first causes, and to treat the principal agents as accountable for the whole transaction, though done, as Scripture itself records, by the instrumentality of others.

There is a solemn moral lesson in this.

Thus in this book the Jews are four times said to have crucified Jesus (Acts ii. 23 and 36, and iv. 10 and v. 30), though they could not put any one to death (John xviii. 31); because they were the main actors who used the instrumentality of Pilate for that purpose. Thus also (vii. 9) the Patriarchs are said to have sold Joseph into Egypt, though they had no intention that he should go there. Thus the Jews are even said to have laid Christ in the tomb (xiii. 29), though this was only a consequence in which they took no part, of his death, which was not inflicted by them, but by a heathen power, at their instance.

If such modes of speech as these—and others that could be adduced—are considered, it will hardly be denied, that Judas, who received the thirty pieces of silver, and who returned them to the Chief Priests, and, as it were, forced them upon them by throwing them down in the Temple (Matt. xxvii. 5), was the cause and prime mover of the purchase of the field which was bought with that sum, and that he may be said to have been its purchaser.

It cannot be rightly argued, that St. Luke was not acquainted with St. Matthew's statement, because he does not repeat it. It μενος ἐλάκησε μέσος, καὶ ἐξεχύθη πάντα τὰ σπλάγχνα αὐτοῦ· 19 καὶ γνωστὸν ἐγένετο πᾶσι τοῖς κατοικοῦσιν Ἰερουσαλὴμ, ὥστε κληθῆναι τὸ χωρίον ἐκεῖνο r Ps. 69. 26. & 109. 8. τῇ ἰδίᾳ διαλέκτῳ αὐτῶν Ἀκελδαμά· τουτέστι χωρίον αἵματος· 20 r γέγραπται γὰρ ἐν βίβλῳ Ψαλμῶν, Γενηθήτω ἡ ἔπαυλις αὐτοῦ ἔρημος, καὶ μὴ ἔστω ὁ κατοικῶν ἐν αὐτῇ. καί, Τὴν ἐπισκοπὴν αὐτοῦ λαβέτω ἕτε-s ver. 8. & ch. 4. 33. John 15. 27. ρος. 21 s Δεῖ οὖν τῶν συνελθόντων ἡμῖν ἀνδρῶν ἐν παντὶ χρόνῳ ἐν ᾧ εἰσῆλθε might as well be inferred, that St. Luke in writing the Acts did not remember what he himself had said in his "former treatise," his Gospel—because he does not repeat his own words, concerning the same events, but adds some new incidents to his narrative: e.g. with regard to the Ascension.

Rather, he thus shows the independence of his own testimony.

It may also be conjectured with probability, that Judas might in other respects be regarded as the purchaser of the field;

For, it is evident from St. Matthew's account (xxvii. 5), that as soon as he had cast down the thirty pieces in the Temple he went and hanged himself;

It appears also from St. Peter's speech here (Acts i. 19), that the field was the place of his death: see on v. 19;

And the Field was purchased after his death (Matt. xxvii. 6).

It is remarkable, that a field in the neighbourhood of a great City, which was to serve as a Public Cemetery, should have been purchaseable for so small a sum as thirty pieces of silver, or shekels, i.e. for less than five pounds;

How is this to be explained? Probably from the circumstance intimated by St. Peter, that it had been polluted by the horrible death of Judas; whence it was called Aceldama; and that it was regarded with a feeling of execration on that account. Hence also it was, that when purchased for this paltry sum, it was applied to an unclean use, i. e. to be a burial-place; a burial-place for ξένοι, strangers, heathens, unclean persons, whom the Jews would not admit into their cemeteries.

It might well be said then, that in this sense, by defiling it with his death, Judas had been the purchaser of the field; he had made it unavailable for any other than an unclean use, and had rendered it purchaseable by the Chief Priests for the miserable sum of thirty pieces of silver, which he had received from them as the wages of iniquity, and had then thrown back in remorse into their hands.

See below, vii. 9; xiii. 29, and Whitby's note here.

— ἐκ μισθοῦ] So A, B, C, D, E, H. Elz., τοῦ μισθοῦ.

— πρηνὴς γενόμενος] "pronus in faciem prolapsus. πρηνὴς, ἐπὶ πρόσωπον." (Hesych.) ἐπὶ στόματος. (Phavorin.)

Judas, the betrayer of Christ, was prefigured in the manner of his death, i. e. hanging, by Ahitophel the traitor, and Absalom the rebel against David. (Bede.)

— ἐλάκησε μέσος] See on Matt. xxvii. 5, where Kuin. after Valck. (p. 324) well says, "Locus Matthæi cum loco Lucæ facilimè potest componi, si statuitur, Matthæum exposuisse mortis genus, Lucam verò attigisse ejus eventum. Judas ægritudine animi commotus, laqueo sibi mortem conscivit (ἀπήγξατο), laqueo autem, sive pendentis corporis Judæ gravitate, sive aliâ quâcunque de caussâ disrupto, ex altiore loco, è rupe, præceps ac pronus delapsus est, ita, ut diffisso corpore, intestina diffusa sint. Apuleius Met. i. p. 12, ascenso grabatulo ad exitium sublimatus immisso capite laqueum induo; sed dum pede altero fulcimentum, quo sustinebar, repello, ut ponderis deductu restis ad ingluviem adstricta spiritus officia discluderet, repentè putris alioqui et vetus funis rumpitur, atque ego de alto decidens in terram devolvor." Meyer says (p. 30) that St. Luke is at variance with St. Matthew, and "follows another tradition, according to which Judas did not destroy himself." Others (Strauss and Zeller), on the plea of this alleged descrepancy, deny the fact of his death altogether!

With this account in the speech of St. Peter compare the narrative of the death of Judas by Papias, the contemporary of the Apostles, and Bishop of Hierapolis, in the fragment preserved by Theophylact (pp. 16. 195. Œcumen. p. 11), and in Cramer's Catena, p. 12, where Apollinarius says, οὐκ ἐναπέθανεν τῇ ἀγχονῇ Ἰούδας, ἀλλ' ἐπεβίω, καθαιρεθεὶς πρὸ τοῦ ἀποπνιγῆναι: and he then introduces the relation under the name of Papias (cp. Routh, R. S. i. p. 9), which explains St. Peter's words, πρηνὴς γενόμενος ἐλάκησε μέσος, by the πρησμὸς and ὄγκωσις of the body, and which states that Judas died in his own field, ἐν ἰδίῳ χωρίῳ.

Cp. also the lines of Arator:—

> "Mercedem sceleris solvit sibi, tædia vitæ
> Horruit ipse suæ, stringens in gutture vocem;
> Aëris in medio, cœlo terrâque perosus
> Inter utrumque perit —— > Viscera rupta cadunt nullis condenda sepulchris."

On the death of the hæresiarch Arius as compared with that of Judas, see Athanas., Ep. ad Serapion, Vol. i. § 3, p. 270.

19. Ἰερουσαλήμ] See above, i. 4.

— Ἀκελδαμά] Syr. ⁱ⁾ⁱ⁾ⁱ⁾ Chald. חֲקַל דְּמָא ager cædis, ἀγρὸς αἵματος, Matt. xxvii. 8. (Kuin.)

So called for a double reason,

As bought with price of blood, Matt. xxvii. 8.

As sprinkled with the blood of him who took that price. (Lightfoot.)

It was near Mount Zion, to the south side of it. (Jerome, de locis Hebr.) Cp. Routh, R. S. i. 24. Robinson, Palestine, i. 524. Winer, i. 188. It would therefore be near the valley of Hinnom. S. Chrys. (on v. 26) observes that this name was given by the Jews, by a providential dispensation from God: ὠνόμασαν οὕτω, οὐκ εἰδότες, καθάπερ Καϊάφας προεφήτευσεν, οὐκ εἰδώς.

20. γέγραπται γάρ] This citation is from two Psalms, lxix. 25, cix. 8, and almost verbatim from the LXX Version used by the Hellenistic Jews, for whom, as well as for Gentile converts, St. Luke specially wrote, and has been well harmonized with the original Hebrew by Surenhusius, p. 383.

The only notable variation is αὐτοῦ for αὐτῶν.

This substitution of αὐτοῦ for αὐτῶν may be explained from St. Peter's own words, that Judas was leader to those who took Jesus, v. 16. In a word, Ἰούδας, the false Apostle who betrayed his Master to death, stands forth as the representative of the faithless Ἰουδαῖοι. His end is a type of theirs. What the Messiah, the King and Judge of all men, pronouncing a divine sentence by the mouth of the Psalmist [1] (Ps. cxix. 5—7; lxix. 22—29. Cp. lix. 11—15) imprecates on them, He imprecates on him; and the death of their leader is a warning to those who were led by him, what their destruction will be unless they repent. In Judas the Holy Spirit sees the Jewish nation personified; and finally, Jerusalem herself, because she would not repent, became an Aceldama, or field of blood.

— ἔπαυλις] An allusion to the pastoral office of Judas. "Scilicet ἔπαυλις respondet Hebraico nomini חָצֵר quod propriè domum pastoritiam cum stabulo significat, deinde verò etiam de castello et domicilio quocunque adhiberi solet v. Michaëlis Supplem. ad Lexx. Hebrr. p. 1011 sqq. Hesych.: ἔπαυλις, μάνδρα βοῶν, ἢ οἴκημα, ἢ αὐλὴ, ἢ στρατοπεδία, καὶ ἡ ποιμενικὴ αὐλή." (Kuin.)

— ἐπισκοπήν] פְּקֻדָּה inspectionem, visitationem (Numb. iv. 16; xvi. 29. Isa. x. 3. Jer. x. 15); and so prepared by the use of the LXX Version to designate the Episcopal office (τὴν ἱερωσύνην, Chrys.), in which Matthias succeeded to Judas; and thence adopted for that purpose in the New Testament, 1 Tim. iii. 1. Cp. Clem. Rom. i. 42. 44.

The same may be said of the word κλῆρος as used here, vv. 17. 25, 26 (see note there), as a preparation for its application to the Ministers or Clergy of the Church.

We may observe here the purpose of Almighty God in having prepared a Greek Version, made by Jews themselves, of the Old Testament Scriptures, i. e. the LXX, for the use of the Apostles and Evangelists, in adopting names for the regimen and officers of the Church, and for disseminating the Gospel throughout the world.

— λαβέτω] So A, B, C, D. Elz. λάβοι.

[1] This, as St. Augustine has already shewn (see his Serm. 22, where he refers to St. Peter's speech), is the true view of the maledictions in the Psalms. They are not curses pronounced by David or by any man, in his own person, but they are Prophetical Commi-nations, Judicial Sentences, uttered by the Great God and Judge of all—Christ; they are rehearsals of the Sentence of the Great Day; and as such they are evidences of the Inspiration of the Psalms.

καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ἐφ' ἡμᾶς ὁ Κύριος Ἰησοῦς, 22 ἀρξάμενος ἀπὸ τοῦ βαπτίσματος Ἰωάννου ἕως τῆς ἡμέρας ἧς ἀνελήφθη ἀφ' ἡμῶν, μάρτυρα τῆς ἀναστάσεως αὐτοῦ σὺν ἡμῖν γενέσθαι ἕνα τούτων. 23 Καὶ ἔστησαν δύο, Ἰωσὴφ τὸν καλούμενον Βαρσαβᾶν, ὃς ἐπεκλήθη Ἰοῦστος, καὶ Ματθίαν. 24 [t] Καὶ προσευξάμενοι εἶπαν, Σὺ, Κύριε, καρδιογνῶστα πάντων, ἀνάδειξον ὃν ἐξελέξω ἐκ τούτων τῶν δύο ἕνα, 25 λαβεῖν τὸν κλῆρον τῆς διακονίας ταύτης καὶ ἀποστολῆς, ἀφ' ἧς παρέβη Ἰούδας, πορευθῆναι εἰς τὸν τόπον τὸν ἴδιον. 26 [u] Καὶ ἔδωκαν κλήρους αὐτῶν, καὶ ἔπεσεν ὁ κλῆρος ἐπὶ Ματθίαν, καὶ συγκατεψηφίσθη μετὰ τῶν ἕνδεκα ἀποστόλων.

[t] 1 Sam. 16. 7.

[u] 1 Chron. 24. 5.

II. 1 [a] Καὶ ἐν τῷ συμπληροῦσθαι τὴν ἡμέραν τῆς Πεντηκοστῆς ἦσαν ἅπαντες

[a] Lev. 23. 15. ch. 1. 14.

---

21. ὁ Κύριος Ἰησοῦς] 'the Lord Jesus.' The word Κύριος = Lord, Jehovah (see on v. 6 and ii. 36), applied to Christ, the Lord of the world, and Head of the Κυριακή, or Church, and regulating her affairs by His Spirit, and maintaining her cause by His Power from His Throne in heaven, may be regarded as the Key-note to the History of the Acts of the Apostles. (Cp. Baumgarten, i. 28.)

He it is who chooses Matthias in place of Judas (i. 24). He sends the Holy Ghost to His Church (ii. 33—35). He adds believers to her daily (ii. 47). He works Miracles by the hands of His Apostles (iii. 6; iv. 10). To Him St. Stephen prays at the hour of death (vii. 59, 60). He calls Saul with a voice from heaven (ix. 5). He sends Ananias to baptize him (ix. 10. 15). He sends Peter to Cornelius (x. 4. 14. 36). His Angel delivers Peter and destroys Herod (xii. 7. 23). He calls Paul to Macedonia (xvi. 9, 10). He comforts Paul at Jerusalem (xxiii. 11). And, finally, the book closes with the declaration, that Paul preaches at Rome, the heathen capital of the world, "the things concerning the Lord Jesus" (xxviii. 31).

22. ἀρξάμενος] See v. 1, and Luke xxiii. 5. Winer, p. 547.

— μάρτυρα τῆς ἀναστάσεως] Because this was the question at issue,—Is Christ risen from the dead? All other things in His history were manifest; this was more private, and known comparatively to a few, and it was to be believed and confessed by all. (Chrys.)

23. καὶ ἔστησαν] Our Lord did not supply the place of Judas when He was on earth, but left that place vacant at His Ascension, and to be supplied after it; and He did supply it from heaven in answer to their prayer to Him as God. See vv. 24—26: "Shew whom Thou hast chosen." "The lot was cast into the lap, but the disposing thereof was of the Lord." (Prov. xvi. 33.)

Thus He educated them in the fundamental doctrine of Church polity, viz. that the Church is ruled and protected by Him,—not visibly present in body, but sitting on His Royal Throne, in power and glory, at the right hand of God.

24. Κύριε] This prayer is addressed to Christ. Cp. ἐξελέξω here, and ἐξελέξατο, i. 2. The Apostles are sent by Him. Cp. Olshausen, p. 365, and see v. 21.

25. ἀφ' ἧς] So A, B, C, D. Elz. has ἐξ ἧς, but it seems more fitting to say that he went aside from it than out of it.

— εἰς τὸν τόπον τὸν ἴδιον] See S. Ignat. ad Magnes. c. 5, ἐπεὶ οὖν τέλος τὰ πράγματα ἔχει, καὶ ἐπίκειται τὰ δύο ὁμοῦ, ὅ τε θάνατος καὶ ἡ ζωή, καὶ ἕκαστος εἰς τὸν ἴδιον τόπον μέλλει χωρεῖν. So in a good sense St. Peter is said by St. Clement of Rome (i. 5) to have gone, after his labours and martyrdom, εἰς τὸν ὀφειλόμενον τόπον τῆς δόξης. Cp. Polycarp ad Phil. 9, where he speaks of St. Paul and other Christian martyrs: ὅτι οὗτοι πάντες οὐκ εἰς κενὸν ἔδραμον, ἀλλ' ἐν πίστει καὶ δικαιοσύνῃ, καὶ ὅτι εἰς τὸν ὀφειλόμενον αὐτοῖς τόπον εἰσὶ παρὰ τῷ Κυρίῳ, ᾧ καὶ συνέπαθον. The Rabbinical writers interpret Numb. xxiv. 25 in a cognate sense: "Balaam ivit in locum suum, i. e. in gehennam. Targum Eccles. vi. 6, Die mortis suæ descendit anima ejus in gehennam, in locum unum, quo omnes peccatores abeunt." (Lightfoot, Hor. Hebr. et Talm. ad h. l.) And this, though it be perhaps an incorrect exposition, yet shows the meaning conveyed by the phrase to a Jewish ear.

"The place of Judas," says Hooker, Appendix to bk. v. p. 571, "was locus suus, a place of his own proper procurement; devils were not ordained of God for hell-fire, but hell-fire for them."

On this text see also Bp. Bull's two Sermons, proving that "the soul subsists after death in a place of abode prepared for it by God till the Resurrection; and that this middle state of happiness or misery is allotted by God to every man immediately after death, according as he has done good or evil in this life." (Serm. ii. and iii. vol. i. pp. 23—82.) Against the erroneous notions of a sleep of the soul, and of a purgatory, see above, on Luke xvi. 22.

26. καὶ ἔδωκαν κλήρους] For the Holy Spirit was not yet given. While this was so, they committed the matter to lot, but never resorted to it after the day of Pentecost. (Chrys.) They had a precedent in the Scripture of the Old Testament for the use of lots. The Land of Promise was divided by lot (Josh. x.), and the first king of Israel was chosen by lot (1 Sam. x. 17).

The word Clerus, as applied to the Clergy, appears to have been suggested by the use made of the term in the LXX and in this passage. As Chrys. says on ἔλαχε: Ἔλαχε τὸν κλῆρον τῆς διακονίας ταύτης· κλῆρον δὲ αὐτὸν καλεῖ δεικνὺς τῆς τοῦ Θεοῦ χάριτος τὸ πᾶν ὄν, καὶ ἀναμιμήσκων αὐτοὺς τῶν παλαιῶν, ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς αὐτοὺς ἐκληρώσατο καθάπερ τοὺς Λευίτας.

Num. xviii. 24. Vers. LXX.: ἐγὼ ἡ μερίς σου καὶ ἡ κληρονομία σου.

S. Hieron. (ad Nepotian. de vitâ Clericorum): "Propterea vocantur Clerici vel quia de sorte sunt Domini vel quia Dominus sors, id est pars, Clericorum est."

Suidas: κλῆρος, τὸ σύστημα τῶν διακόνων καὶ πρεσβυτέρων.

— αὐτῶν] A, B, C, D, have αὐτοῖς, which may be the right reading, and then the sense would be, 'They presented lots to them.' Perhaps they placed in an urn two papers, on one of which the word 'Apostle' was written, and he who drew that lot (τὸν κλῆρον) was numbered with the Eleven.

κλήρους αὐτῶν does not mean 'their lots' (which would have been τοὺς κλήρους), but lots on which their names were written; and if this is the right reading, then it is probable that the names of the two were put into an urn, and he whose name fell out first (ἔπεσε) was elected. (Cp. Levit. xvi. 8. Homer, Il. v. 316.)

The precise mode which was here used in the election of Matthias seems to have been left in uncertainty, that it might not be used as an example for the future ordinations of the Christian Ministry. See the note of Mr. Humphry here.

Ch. II. 1. ἐν τῷ συμπληροῦσθαι τ. ἡ.] When the day of Pentecost, or the Fiftieth, was being filled up, as the complement to the forty-nine which were counted from the morrow of the day of unleavened bread. Cp. Luke ix. 51, ἐν τῷ· συμπληροῦσθαι τὰς ἡμέρας τῆς ἀναλήψεως αὐτοῦ. St. Luke is the only one of the writers of the New Test. who uses the word συμπληροῦν.

As to the day on which the Holy Ghost was given, it is to be observed,

(1) That after forty-nine days from the sixteenth day of Abib or Nisan had passed, the next day was the Feast of Pentecost, or Fiftieth. (Jahn, Archæol. § 354.)

(2) This is clear from the texts of Scripture (Levit. xxiii. 15, 16. Numb. xxviii. 26. Deut. xvi. 9), when explained by Jewish writers, especially Josephus, Antiq. iii. 10. 5: τῇ δευτέρᾳ τῶν Ἀζύμων ἡμέρᾳ, ἥκτη δ' ἐστὶν αὕτη (cp. Levit. xxiii. 6) καὶ δεκάτῃ τοῦ μηνὸς ὃς Νισὰν παρ' ἡμῖν καλεῖται, τῶν καρπῶν οὓς ἐθέρισαν μεταλαμβάνουσι . . . θύουσι δ' ἐπὶ ταῖς ἀπαρχαῖς τῶν καρπῶν ἀρνίον εἰς ὁλοκαύτωσιν τῷ Θεῷ· ἑβδόμης δὲ ἑβδομάδος διαγεγενημένης μετὰ ταύτην τὴν θυσίαν, αὗται δ' εἰσὶν αἱ τῶν ἑβδομάδων ἡμέραι τεσσαράκοντα καὶ ἐννέα, τῇ Πεντηκοστῇ προσάγουσι τῷ Θεῷ ἄρτον.

(3) The counting of the forty-nine days began from the end of the sixteenth of Nisan. See R. Solomon in Lightfoot, i. p. 746, and Maimonides quoted by Whitby (in loc.).

(4) Hence, therefore, in the year of our Lord's Passion, we have the following calendar of days (cp. Lightfoot, i. p. 748, and ii. p. 642):

Thursday, XIVth Day of the Month Nisan, Christ institutes the Holy Eucharist.

Friday, XVth Day of Nisan, He is crucified.

Saturday, XVIth Day of Nisan, He rests in the Grave.

Sunday, XVIIth Day of Nisan, He rises from the Dead.

From the end of Saturday, the XVIth Day of Nisan, forty-nine days are counted; and the Fiftieth, or Feast of Pentecost, falls on a Sunday. And it was the universal belief of the ancient b ch. 4. 31. ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό. 2 [b] Καὶ ἐγένετο ἄφνω ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἦχος, ὥσπερ φερομένης πνοῆς βιαίας, καὶ ἐπλήρωσεν ὅλον τὸν οἶκον οὗ ἦσαν καθήμενοι.

c Matt. 3. 11. 3 [c] Καὶ ὤφθησαν αὐτοῖς διαμεριζόμεναι γλῶσσαι ὡσεὶ πυρὸς, ἐκάθισέ τε ἐφ'

Christian Church, that the Holy Ghost came down from heaven on the same day of the week as that on which our Lord arose from the dead, viz. the First Day of the week.

These particulars are to be noted, because in modern times some have been found to deny that our Lord was crucified on a Friday, or that the day of His Crucifixion was the XVth of Nisan, or that the Holy Spirit descended on the Lord's Day.

It may be enquired,—

Why was the Holy Spirit given at the Feast of Pentecost? And Why at this particular Feast of Pentecost?

(1) Because Pentecost was the Feast on which two loaves of common leavened bread were offered (Levit. xxiii. 17—20). The corn sown was ripened and made into bread. And now in Christ, who is the bread of Life, the corn which had fallen into the ground and was risen, had reached its perfect maturity.

Also, the Feast of Pentecost was the ingathering of the Harvest, and now the Holy Spirit would enable the Apostles to gather from the Field, "which is the World," the spiritual harvest of which the seed had been sown by Moses, the Prophets, and by Christ. Now the sickle was to be put to the corn of the spiritual harvest of souls (Theophyl.) by the Apostolic reapers, who were to gather them in sheaves, and consecrate them to God.

(2) Because, at that time the Law, graven in stone, had been given on Mount Sinai (Exod. xix. 1, 2), and it was fitting that the new Law should be written on the hearts of the Disciples (Jer. xxxi. 33. Heb. viii. 10) at the same time on Mount Sion, from which it was to come forth, and that it might be understood that the Law and the Gospel are from the same Divine Author. (Severian, Theophyl.) See on i. 4.

"Supputemus numerum (says Jerome, de xlii. Mansion. Mans. xii. vol. ii. p. 593), et inveniemus quinquagesima die egressionis ex Ægypto in vertice montis Sinai Legem datam. Unde et Pentecostes celebratur solemnitas, et postea Evangelii Sacramentum Spiritûs Sancti descensione completur—et divisis linguis credentium totus Evangelicâ prædicatione mundus impletur."

(3) Because the Feast of Pentecost was the first great Feast following after the Passover; and because it was fitting that the vast numbers of people who were at Jerusalem at the Passover (about two millions and a half; see Whiston's note on Josephus, vi. 9. 3), and saw or heard of the Crucifixion of Christ (Luke xxiv. 18), might also see the glorious and triumphant manifestation of His Exaltation and power in the descent of the Holy Ghost. (Chrys., Severus ap. Theophyl.) And thus on their return to their several countries, the Pilgrims of the Law might become Preachers of the Gospel.

(4) Because the Law had been given to the Israelites on Mount Sinai, at the season (afterwards called Pentecost) next following the first Passover, which commemorated their Deliverance from Egypt, and prefigured the universal Redemption by Christ. And it was fitting that the Christian Law, which was to be written not on tables of stone, but on the fleshly tables of the heart, by the finger of the Holy Ghost (Severian), should be given at the Pentecost next following the completion of the work of Redemption by the sacrifice of the True Passover, which is Christ.

(5) The name itself πεντηκοστὴ, the Fiftieth, might suggest the name of Jubilee, which was significant of the preaching of "the acceptable year of the Lord." And on this Fiftieth Day the Holy Spirit anointed the Church, Christ's mystical Body, to preach that acceptable year to the world (see Aug. Epist. cxix. and Jerome, in Mens. xii.), "sicut priori populo,—quinquagesimo die, vero Jubileo et vero anno remissionis Lex data est, in Apostolos quoque descendit Spiritus Sanctus."

Cp. Bp. Andrewes, Sermons, iii. p. 111, on Acts ii. 1—4.

(6) Besides, this was the first great Festival after Christ's Ascension to Heaven, and it was fitting that, according to the sure word of Prophecy (Ps. lxviii. 18), the great event of His triumphant Inauguration in glory, of His Coronation in His glorified Humanity, and of His Enthronization at God's right hand in Heavenly places, should be solemnized and celebrated by public manifestations on earth of royal bounty and spiritual largesses to His Church, proving His Ascension, and verifying His own word to His Apostles (John xvi. 7. Acts ii. 33).

Cp. Bp. Andrewes, pp. 226, 227, and Barrow's Whit-Sunday Sermon, iii. pp. 473—494.

(7) Because Seven is the number of perfection; and when Seven times seven days had been completed, then came the fulness of Christ's power in the Holy Ghost (Greg. Naz. Or. xli. pp. 732—734). He came personally in His first Advent, after seven times seventy years from the command to rebuild Jerusalem (Dan. ix. 24—27). And now He comes in the power of the Spirit, after seven times seven Days from the day of restoration, by His own death and burial in the grave.

It is observable that in this year the fifteenth of Nisan fell on a Friday, the day on which man had been first created; and so man was created in the first Adam, and restored in the Second Adam, on the same day of the week. The Resurrection, which according to types and prophecies, was to be the third day after the Passion, took place on the first day of the week; the day on which God said, "Let there be light" (Gen. i. 4, 5). And the Feast of Pentecost in this year fell also on the First Day of the week. And thus the First Day of the week has been consecrated to all the Three Persons of the ever-blessed and undivided Trinity; and the blessings of Creation, Redemption, and Sanctification are commemorated on the Christian Sunday.

On this text see Greg. Nazian. Orat. xl. Sermones, p. 733. Leo M., Sermones lxxii.—lxxv. S. Aug., Sermones, pp. 266—270, and Appendix, pp. 182—187. Bp. Andrewes, Sermons, "On the Sending of the Holy Ghost," vol. iii. pp. 107. 130. 221. 301.

— ἅπαντες] stronger than πάντες.—"ἅπαντες in his libris universos nemine excepto designat; πάντες sæpè tantùm plerosque." (Valck.)—πάντες· ἀντὶ τοῦ πλείστοι. (Hesych.) — ὁμοθυμαδόν] They were prepared to receive the Spirit of unity, by unity of heart, unity of time, and unity of place.

— τὸ αὐτό] Perhaps because it was the Lord's Day. (Lightfoot.) The place is called οἶκος: a conclave, v. 2. In one οἰκία there are many οἶκοι. S. Cyril, Bp. of Jerusalem, states that it was a large apartment which afterwards was converted into a Church (Catech. xvi. 4), well known in his day, probably the ὑπερῷον mentioned i. 13. (See Valck. and note there, and Greg. Nazian. in Caten.)

If it had been, as some have supposed, a chamber in the Temple, St. Luke would hardly have failed to mention that circumstance; and it does not seem likely that the use of an οἶκος in the Temple would have been conceded to the Apostles by the Priests. Indeed, after the Sacrifice of Christ on the Cross, and the rending of the Veil, the Christian Church had now become the Temple of God; and it is not probable that any spiritual dispensation, such as the outpouring of the Holy Ghost, would be connected with the material Temple at Jerusalem.

As Chrys. says, the οἶκος in which they were assembled may be regarded as typical of the universal Church, which is illumined by the Holy Spirit in the Gospel, and which was humble and private in its primitive state, but afterwards spread itself from the ὑπερῷον at Jerusalem throughout the world; and by its instrumentality the graces of the Holy Ghost which are poured forth on the Apostles, flow down as it were from one heavenly source, by the streams of those different nations, which were assembled at the Day of Pentecost, and thence returned to their own homes, and so diffuse themselves in all parts of the earth, and irrigate and fertilize the world.

2. ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἦχος—πνοῆς] From heaven, the place whence the Spirit came. The wind shows His power and vehemence, and reminds them of the wonders of Sinai at the delivery of the old Law. Cp. Bp. Andrewes, p. 118.

— τὸν οἶκον] The chamber. See on v. 1, and below on v. 46, κατ' οἶκον. It must have been a large apartment, as it seems to have held 120 persons (cp. i. 13. 15; ii. 1). They were all assembled there early (see v. 15), either by a previous direction from Christ, or by some special intimation, or because it was the First Day of the week, when they met for public worship. They there remained in an attitude of expectation, sitting.

3. διαμεριζόμεναι—ἐκάθισε] The Tongues of Fire parted themselves off (Valck.) from one source (ἐκ μιᾶς ῥίζης, Chrys.), and distributed themselves among them.

See St. Luke's use of διαμερίζω, Acts ii. 45. Luke xxiii. 34, and cp. St. Paul's words, 1 Cor. xii. 4—11, διαιρέσεις χαρισμάτων, and πάντα ταῦτα ἐνεργεῖ τὸ ἓν καὶ τὸ αὐτὸ Πνεῦμα, διαιροῦν ἰδίᾳ ἑκάστῳ, and Heb. ii. 4, Πνεύματος ἁγίου μερισμοῖς.

Also the Tongues rested on the head of each. Hence the singular number ἐκάθισε (cp. Valck. and Winer, § 58, p. 458), showing that these gifts were from one Spirit, and that they were not to be a mere transitory boon, but an abiding presence. Christ ascended up on high and gave gifts to men, that the Lord God might dwell among them. (Ps. lxxviii. 18.)

ἕνα ἕκαστον αὐτῶν. [4] [d] Καὶ ἐπλήσθησαν ἅπαντες Πνεύματος ἁγίου, καὶ ἤρξαντο λαλεῖν ἑτέραις γλώσσαις, καθὼς τὸ Πνεῦμα ἐδίδου ἀποφθέγγεσθαι αὐτοῖς. [d] ch. 1. 5. & 19. 6. Mark 16. 17. 1 Cor. 12. 10.

They had
(1) Tongues given them that they might preach.
(2) Of Fire, that they might do it with power.
(3) The Tongues were distributed among them, that none might envy the other, and none exalt himself over the other, and that each of them might do his part in edifying the whole.
(4) They sat on the head of each of them, that each might do that work constantly, especially by the Word of God.

"Hence," says Theoph., "when a Bishop is ordained, the Gospel, which is the Tongue of Fire of the Spirit, is laid on his head."

— ἐφ' ἕνα ἕ.] "Cp. omnino ἐπὶ super Joh. i. 32, 33." (Bengel.) Thus the inauguration of the Apostles by the Holy Ghost resembled that of Christ. Matt. iii. 16.

On whom did the Holy Ghost come? S. Aug. (in Joann. xcii.) says, "Venit in die Pentecostes Sanctus Spiritus in centum viginti homines congregatos, in quibus et Apostoli omnes erant qui illo impleti linguis omnium gentium loquebantur." So Chrys.: "Other believers besides the Apostles received the Holy Ghost, enabling them to speak with tongues. But the Apostles alone appear to have been endued with the power of conveying to others the gift of the Holy Ghost, enabling them to speak with tongues." See viii. 18.

4. ἤρξαντο λαλεῖν ἑτέραις γλώσσαις] "They began to speak in languages not their own,—other than they had ever learned." (Bp. Andrewes, p. 138.) The phrase is from Isa. xxviii. 11, LXX, διὰ γλώσσας ἑτέρας, and it announces the fulfilment of the prophecy of Ps. xix. 3, 4 (Ambrose); and is explained by v. 8, τῇ ἰδίᾳ διαλέκτῳ, and v. 11, ταῖς ἡμετέραις γλώσσαις.

Hence, ἐλάλουν ξέναις γλώσσαις καὶ οὐ πατρίοις, says Greg. Nazian. (p. 742, Orat. xli.), but ταῖς ἰδίαις τῶν ἀκουόντων. Some of them spake in the language of India, some of Scythia, some of Crete and Arabia,—nations hostile to the Jews. (Œcum.) "Prædicaturi multis gentibus accipiunt genera linguarum." (Jerome, iv. 178, ad Hedib. 9, where are some excellent remarks on this text.) "Loquebantur linguis omnium gentium." (S. Aug., Serm. 316. Cp. below, x. 46; xi. 15, 16.) "Quia futura Ecclesia in omnibus linguis prænuntiabatur." (Serm. 266.) "Loquebatur unitas Ecclesiæ in linguis omnium gentium." (Aug. Serm. 267.)

The Apostles were gifted with the Tongues of all nations, because they were to preach to all nations,—ἐπειδὴ πανταχοῦ διέρχεσθαι ἔμελλον. (Chrys., Theophyl.)

All other interpretations of the words ἑτέραις γλώσσαις are irreconcilable with grammatical rules and historical truth. The miracle was not (as some have thought) in the ears of the hearers, but in the tongues of the speakers. The appearance of tongues indicates this; of tongues sitting on the heads of the Apostles. As S. Cyril says (in Caten.), "they spake with languages they had never learnt;" and thus was fulfilled the prophecy, "there is neither speech nor language, but their voices are heard among them; their sound is gone out into all lands, and their words into the ends of the world." (Ps. xix. 3, 4. Rom. x. 18.) The Spirit was given in the form of Tongues in order to consecrate [1] the preaching of Apostolic doctrine (Severus); and thus they were ordained by the χειροτονία of the Spirit, laying as it were His own Hands on their heads, to the Apostleship of the world. (Severian, in Caten. Chrys. Aug. Tr. xciii. in Joan. Cyril, Catech. 17. Nazian. Orat. xli. p. 743; xliv. Leo, Serm. in Pentec., and Greg., Hom. 30 in Evang. cited by A Lapide.) "Thus each of them became as it were a θρόνος of the Holy Ghost." (Severian.)

Besides, as the Fathers observe (see Chrys. here, and Aug. passim. Cp. Bp. Andrewes, p. 130), the miracle of Pentecost at Sion was the ἀντίστοιχον, or antithesis of the Confusion of Tongues at Babel. "There," says Chrys., "the one language was divided into many; here many languages are united in one man;" and it is truly and beautifully said by Leo M. (Serm. lxxiii. p. 155), "O quàm velox est sermo sapientiæ, et ubi Deus magister est, quàm citò discitur, quod docetur! Non est adhibita interpretatio ad audiendum, non consuetudo ad usum, non tempus ad studium, sed spirante ubi voluit Spiritu Veritatis, propriæ Gentium voces factæ sunt in Ecclesiæ ore communes. Ab hoc igitur die tuba evangelicæ prædicationis intonuit; ab hoc die imbres charismatum, flumina benedictionum omne desertum et universam aridam irrigaverunt." Cp. ibid. Serm. lxxiv. p. 159.

This is also well expressed by Arator, v. 122:

"—— igne magistro
Imbuit ora calor, dictisque fluentibus exit
Linguarum populosa seges; non littera gessit
Officium, non ingenii stillavit ab ore
Vena, nec egregias signavit cera loquelas;
Sola fuit doctrina Fides."

The Building of the Church by the Divine Spirit of Love at Sion was designed to remove the evil of the Building of the Tower by the human spirit of pride at Babel. And though it did not please God to bring all Nations back to one lip (Gen. xi. 1), yet by enabling the one Apostolic company to speak the same Gospel of Peace in all languages, He showed how the sin and misery of Babel would find their remedy in Sion. The same member, the tongue, which had scattered mankind through all the world, was now, when attuned by the Spirit of peace, used to bring back the world "to the fold of Unity." So the curse was taken away, and a blessing poured forth in its place.

Therefore, "It is very meet, right, and our bounden duty, that we should at all times and in all places give thanks unto Thee, O Lord, Holy Father, Almighty Everlasting God, through Jesus Christ our Lord, according to whose most true promise the HOLY GHOST came down, as at this time, from Heaven, with a sudden great sound as it had been a mighty wind, in the likeness of fiery tongues, lighting upon the Apostles to teach them, and to lead them to all truth, giving them both the gift of divers languages, and also boldness with fervent zeal to preach the Gospel unto all Nations, whereby we have been brought out of darkness and error into the clear light and true knowledge of Thee and Thy Son Jesus Christ. Therefore with Angels and Archangels, and with all the company of heaven, we laud and magnify Thy glorious Name, evermore praising Thee and saying, Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God of hosts, heaven and earth are full of Thy glory, Glory be to Thee, O Lord most high."

On the Gift of Tongues—its Design and Use.

One of the most convincing proofs of the truth of the Ancient Interpretation of this text, as thus declared by the CHURCH of ENGLAND, is to be found in the almost countless discrepancies of the Expositors who have deserted that Interpretation.

There is a large and consistent body of Interpreters, dating from the second century, and continued for many hundred years in all parts of Christendom, in favour of the Ancient Exposition; whereas, on the contrary, the Expositions at variance with it, which have been propounded in modern times, have no ancient authority in their favour; and are as inconsistent with one another, as they are irreconcilable with the teaching of Christian Antiquity.

It would be fruitless to enumerate all these conflicting speculations. They may be seen in De Wette's Einleitung, where they occupy ten pages (pp. 27 to 37), or in Meyer's Kommentar, p. 42; and see Mr. Alford's note here, and Bunsen's Hippolytus, &c., ii. p. 12, 2nd ed.

It has been recently alleged, even by some English Expositors, who allow that the Apostles spoke with foreign tongues on the Day of Pentecost, that there is no evidence in the Acts of the Apostles, or in any other part of Holy Scripture, that the Apostles—as the Church of England affirms—were supernaturally endued with power "to preach the Gospel in divers languages," which they had never learnt, or that they ever did preach it in such languages.

But on this allegation it may be observed,

1. That our Lord's promise to His Disciples was general, Mark xvi. 17, 18, "These signs shall follow them that believe; In my Name they shall cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; . . . they shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover."

The signs there mentioned by Christ were not for momentary display, but for continual profit and edification.

The power of speaking with new tongues is combined in Christ's promise with that of healing the sick, and casting out devils. The Apostles were led to expect to receive a supernatural ability to do all these things, and the need of the gift of new tongues was certainly not less than that of those other gifts which are joined with it. And it can hardly be said that the Divine Promise was fulfilled, if the power of speaking with new tongues was limited to one or two special occasions, and not applied to the noblest of all uses of speech, that of preaching the Gospel.

[1] The words in the printed edition of the Catena (p. 20) are, ὑπὲρ τοῦ τὸ κήρυγμα ΑΝΘΗ ΟΥΝ τῆς ἀποστολικῆς διδασκαλίας—read ΑΝΑΘΕΙΟΥΝ.

5 Ἦσαν δὲ ἐν Ἰερουσαλὴμ κατοικοῦντες Ἰουδαῖοι ἄνδρες εὐλαβεῖς ἀπὸ παντὸς ἔθνους τῶν ὑπὸ τὸν οὐρανόν. 6 Γενομένης δὲ τῆς φωνῆς ταύτης, συνῆλθε τὸ πλῆθος, καὶ συνεχύθη, ὅτι ἤκουον εἷς ἕκαστος τῇ ἰδίᾳ διαλέκτῳ λαλούντων

2. The miraculous power of preaching in new tongues may also be said to have been presupposed in our Lord's commission to His Apostles, Galilæan Fishermen, "unlearned and unlettered men" (ἰδιώτας καὶ ἀγραμμάτους), "Go ye and teach all Nations." "Go ye, μαθητεύσατε, make ye disciples of the learned Greek and of the proud Roman; convert the many-tongued Nations of the Earth; 'Preach the Gospel to every creature.' 'Ye shall be My Witnesses to the ends of the Earth.'" (Acts i. 8.)

But how were they to do this without the knowledge of foreign languages? It is not sufficient to reply that they knew Greek, and that with a knowledge of Greek they could preach to all the world.

For, first, it is not clear that they did know Greek, or at least, know it in such a way as to speak it with fluency, and in such a manner as not to expose their message to contempt.

And if Greek was all that was necessary, why were they gifted with the tongues of so many nations on the Day of Pentecost?

They did not go forth to preach till they had received the gift of Pentecost; but they complied with Christ's command, when they had been endued with power from on high. As Irenæus says, iii. 1, "Posteà quàm induti sunt supervenientis Spiritûs Sancti virtutem ex alto, exierunt in fines terræ—evangelizantes."

Their prompt obedience to Christ's command, and the immediate success which attended their Missionary labours in all parts of the world, seem to indicate that they had the power of communicating readily with all Nations in their vernacular languages. And how could this be but by a supernatural gift?

3. The evidence derivable from the Acts of the Apostles of the possession of this power, is also cogent,— 1st, Positively.

We see the Apostles in the first instance using their confessedly miraculous power, in order to preach the Gospel to the various tribes, speaking different languages, collected at Jerusalem on the Day of Pentecost. Here certainly is a proof that the power was employed for the propagation of the Gospel. And this specimen of its use for a permanent and necessary end, seems to suggest a belief that it was vouchsafed to, and used by the same persons according to the need, on other occasions for the same purpose.

It is worthy of remark here that the Apostle, who takes the lead in preaching on this occasion, is St. Peter. And he is also prominent in preaching to different congregations and persons in the earlier portion of this History. And his preaching is invariably attended with success. Yet of St. Peter it is noticed in the Gospel that he could not, of himself, speak his own vernacular language with accuracy. (Matt. xxvi. 73. Mark xiv. 70.) How was the fisherman of Bethsaida, with his Galilæan barbarisms, to work such effects as he did in preaching, without a supernatural gift of language? Cp. note on xxiv. 1.

Again; in the Acts of the Apostles we see St. Paul preaching to the various Tribes of Asia Minor, and to the barbarous (i. e. foreign) inhabitants of Malta (see notes on xiii. 15; xiv. 11, and xxviii. 2–4), doubtless in their own languages.

And St. Paul's case seems to afford a strong corroboration of what has been now asserted.

He was the most learned of the Apostles. Humanly speaking, he had more of ordinary qualifications for addressing foreign congregations, than any of the rest. And yet he was more gifted supernaturally than others with the power of speaking with γλῶσσαι, or foreign languages. (1 Cor. xiv. 18.) And why? Because his Missionary travels were more extensive than theirs. He who, as "the Apostle of the Gentiles" (Rom. xi. 13), had a commission to preach to more nations, was more gifted; and his case shows the need and reason of the gift.

2ndly, Negatively, also

The evidence from the Acts of the Apostles is strong.

In this divinely-inspired record of the Missionary labours of the Primitive Church, we never hear that any one of the Apostolic Missionaries of the Gospel ever sat down for a single hour to learn a foreign language, or ever was retarded or deterred for a single moment by ignorance, or defective knowledge, of any foreign language, from preaching the Gospel to any person or congregation in any part of the world. What is there similar to this in any annals of Modern Missions? (See further below, xiv. 11.) And how is this to be explained but by a supernatural ability to preach in foreign tongues?

It has also been recently objected in some Expositions of this passage that there is no early patristic evidence of a spiritual gift of speaking in different Languages for the preaching of the Gospel.

On this it may be observed;

There is early Patristic evidence that the Apostles went forth to preach the Gospel in all lands; and that they did preach it. But there is no evidence that the Apostles ever learnt a foreign language, or could not speak the language of the country to which they went.

Besides; even if there existed no testimony such as is described from the few surviving works of the Fathers of the Second and Third Centuries, yet the concurrent Testimony of the Fathers of the Fourth and Fifth centuries proves what the Tradition of the Church was on this point.

But there is early patristic testimony of the continuance of the gift of tongues for preaching the Gospel.

St. Irenæus, the disciple of Polycarp, the Scholar of St. John, says (v. 6; cp. Euseb. v. 7), "We hear many brethren in the Church, having prophetic gifts, and speaking with all kinds of tongues by means of the Spirit, παντοδαπαῖς λαλούντων διὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος γλώσσαις, and bringing to light the hidden things of men's hearts for edification, and declaring the mysteries of God."

How Irenæus understood the passage before us, appears also from his words (iii. 17), "Luke relates that the Spirit descended on the disciples after the Ascension of the Lord, on the Day of Pentecost, in order that all Nations might be enabled to enter into life; wherefore they united in all languages in praising God the Holy Spirit, bringing distant Tribes into Unity, and offering the first fruits of all Nations to God."

It is not indeed necessary to suppose, nor is it probable, that the power of speaking in foreign languages, without previous study, was long continued in the Church. Soon after the completion of the Canon of the New Testament the Holy Scriptures were translated into various languages, and native Churches were formed in the principal countries of the world. As St. Gregory I. says (in Marc. xvi. 16), when the Tree of the Gospel was first planted, it was watered with extraordinary effusions of the Holy Ghost; but when it had taken root, then ordinary means sufficed for its growth.

— ἀποφθέγγεσθαι αὐτοῖς] So A, B, C, D. Elz. has αὐτοῖς ἀποφθέγγεσθαι. The alteration may have been made for greater ease of construction; but trajections of this kind (as Alford well observes) are usual with St. Luke. And there is something marked in the reservation of αὐτοῖς, i. e. them especially (according to Christ's promise), them, who were lately so weak and timid,—the last and emphatic word. Cf. αὐτοῖς and αὐτῶν in the preceding verse.

The word ἀποφθέγγεσθαι (used only in the Acts, ii. 14; xxvi. 25) has a special force; it is not simply to speak, but "magnificè loqui" (Valck.), to pour forth short sentences (Chrys., Œcum., and Bloomfield here). This word seems to explain the mode in which those who received the gift of tongues on the day of Pentecost spoke, viz. by ejaculatory ascriptions, perhaps in orderly sequence, of glory to God, and by short and fervent exhortations to their several hearers.

5. κατοικοῦντες] Some residing there in expectation of the appearance of the Messiah then expected (see Lightfoot here), others who had come up for the Feast.

6. συνεχύθη] was confounded, or was in confusion, from doubt and astonishment; and the confusion showed itself in the conflux of people, and in the passions by which they were agitated, and in the variety of languages which they spoke; an image of Babel.

St. Luke here happily uses a word (συνεχύθη) which reminds the reader of בָּבֶל (Babel), which the LXX render by σύγχυσις, ὅτι ἐκεῖ συνέχεεν ὁ κύριος τὰ χείλη πάσης τῆς γῆς, Gen. xi. 9. Babel, built by human pride, is on the one side; and the Church of Christ, animated by the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of Love, on the other. Here are two opposite powers brought into contact on the Day of Pentecost. The Din of the one rages against the Peace of the other, and the eddying streams flow together. The confusion of Tongues is calmed by the effusion of the Holy Ghost; and by the diffusion of the Truth, under the gracious influence of the Holy Spirit, the Tongues of Babel are brought into harmony, and preach the One Gospel of Christ, and sing in a holy concert the Songs of Sion.

— διαλέκτῳ] dialect. Something more than γλώσσῃ, or language. See Valck. p. 327. The Apostles—illiterate Galilæans, αὐτῶν. 7 Ἐξίσταντο δὲ πάντες καὶ ἐθαύμαζον, λέγοντες πρὸς ἀλλήλους, Οὐκ ἰδοὺ πάντες οὗτοί εἰσιν οἱ λαλοῦντες Γαλιλαῖοι; 8 καὶ πῶς ἡμεῖς ἀκούομεν, ἕκαστος τῇ ἰδίᾳ διαλέκτῳ ἡμῶν ἐν ᾗ ἐγεννήθημεν, 9 Πάρθοι καὶ Μῆδοι καὶ Ἐλαμῖται, καὶ οἱ κατοικοῦντες τὴν Μεσοποταμίαν, Ἰουδαίαν τε καὶ Καππα-δοκίαν, Πόντον καὶ τὴν Ἀσίαν, 10 Φρυγίαν τε καὶ Παμφυλίαν, Αἴγυπτον καὶ τὰ μέρη τῆς Λιβύης τῆς κατὰ Κυρήνην, καὶ οἱ ἐπιδημοῦντες Ῥωμαῖοι Ἰουδαῖοί τε καὶ προσήλυτοι, 11 [e] Κρῆτες καὶ Ἄραβες, ἀκούομεν λαλούντων αὐτῶν ταῖς [e] ch. 1. 22. & ver. 24.

ἡμετέραις γλώσσαις τὰ μεγαλεῖα τοῦ Θεοῦ; 12 Ἐξίσταντο δὲ πάντες καὶ διηπόρουν, ἄλλος πρὸς ἄλλον λέγοντες, Τί ἂν θέλοι τοῦτο εἶναι; 13 ἕτεροι δὲ διαχλευάζοντες ἔλεγον, Ὅτι γλεύκους μεμεστωμένοι εἰσί.

---

who, as Valck. observes, p. 349, knew only one dialect of one language—spake in different languages and in different dialects of the same language (Bede, Retract. p. 104). For example, the Medes and Elamites (Persians) spake the same tongue, but in different dialects. And so it was with many other races enumerated in vv. 9—11. Hence we may explain Ἰουδαίαν in v. 9. See note there.

The Christian Church speaks in all dialects of all languages. It shoots out its roots and fibres every where, and consecrates all nations and races of the world.

8. πῶς ἡμεῖς ἀκούομεν, ἕκαστος] It is not said that each of the Apostles had the power of speaking all languages. But as at Babel the tongue which a certain number of persons spoke served as a guide to lead them away together to settle in a given place, and so the world was colonized: so, it would seem, at Pentecost, the foreign tongue which each disciple was enabled to speak collected about him a group of those strangers then at Jerusalem who spoke that particular tongue; and so all were evangelized.

It has been supposed by some (e. g. Severus in Caten. here), that the gift of a special language was like a spiritual intimation to each of the Apostles signifying to what country he should direct his attention δίδοται ἑκάστῳ γλῶσσα καθάπερ κανών; that is, it was as it were his appointment or χειροτονία to a particular charge; and St. Jerome says (iv. 178), "accipiunt genera linguarum, ut nosceretur qui Apostolorum quibus deberent gentibus nunciare."

9—11. Πάρθοι καὶ Μῆδοι—Ἄραβες] The arrangement of these words is remarkable. It follows the order of the three principal διασποραὶ or Dispersions of the Jews throughout the world, as follows:—

(1) The earliest διασπορὰ, that of the Ten Tribes in Media and Syria, and the two Tribes in the neighbourhood of Babylon, now subject to the Parthians, who are therefore placed first.

(2) The διασπορὰ of Asia Minor, the dwellers in Cappadocia, &c., an offset from the Assyrian dispersion.

(3) The Egyptian, planted by Ptolemy Lagus.

On these dispersions cp. Mede's excellent Essay, Works, book i. Disc. xx. pp. 74—77; Lightfoot, ii. p. 1144; and Howson, i. pp. 21, 22.

It is observable, that St. Peter, the Apostle of the Circumcision, provided instruction for all these dispersions;

(1) He went in person to the Parthians, for he wrote from Babylon (1 Pet. v. 13). Cp. Wieseler, p. 557.

(2) He wrote his two Epistles to the Asiatic διασπορά.

(3) He sent "Marcus his son" to the Egyptian διασπορά. S. Jerome (Ser. Eccl. 8.) Other authorities for these statements may be seen in the Editor's Lectures on the Canon of Scripture, pp. 291—297. On the providential pre-arrangement for the spread of Christianity by means of these διασποραὶ, or Dispersions, throughout the world, see Bp. Pearson's admirable remarks in one of his excellent discourses recently recovered by Archdn. Churton, ii. pp. 30, 31. He there says: "On the day of Pentecost Jews were present from every nation under heaven. Sojourners also were there, the causes and witnesses of the miracle. And when they returned to their own land, what did they report with greater joy, than that their own mother-tongue had been ennobled at Jerusalem by the revelation of divine mysteries? Thus the preaching of the Gospel at first communicated to the Jews of all nations at Jerusalem followed them to their own homes." He adds, p. 36: "In order that the kingdom of Satan might be overthrown by the Gospel, preached by the Apostles and Apostolic men, it was requisite that they should speak in tongues understood by all nations."

The enumeration of these tribes (Parthians and Medes, &c.) as present at the day of Pentecost, and as then evangelized by the Apostles (v. 41), has a special interest as displaying the fulfilment in part of Ancient Prophecy. See the passage in Isa. xi. 11, "It shall come to pass in that day that the Lord shall set His hand again the second time to recover the remnant of His people that shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the Islands of the Sea," καὶ τοὺς διεσπαρμένους Ἰούδα συνάξει ἐκ τῶν τεσσάρων πτερύγων τῆς γῆς. (LXX.)

The regions mentioned by Isaiah correspond very nearly with those specified here by St. Luke; and in the reception of the first-fruits of these various Dispersions into the Christian Sion the Church, it may be rightly said that they have been recovered, and brought back again to their true home in Christ, the spiritual Jerusalem.

9. Ἰουδαίαν] Since they who spake were Galilæans (v. 7), and the Galilæan dialect differed from that spoken in Judæa (Mark xiv. 70), they who dwelt in Judæa might well express surprise at what they heard; and therefore there is no reason for abandoning the reading of the MSS. here for Ἰδουμαίαν, Ἰνδίαν, or Βιθυνίαν, with some Commentators.

— Ἀσίαν] That district called Ionia and Lydia, of which Ephesus was the capital, and sometimes called Proconsular Asia. Cp. Acts vi. 9; xvi. 6; xx. 16. Rev. i. 4. 11. The Asia of the New Testament may be said to bear the same relation to "Asia Minor" that Portugal does to Spain.

10. ἐπιδημοῦντες Ῥωμαῖοι] There should be no stop after Ῥωμαῖοι, and the sentence should be rendered, 'Jews of Rome,' whether by birth or conversion, and now sojourning at Jerusalem for the Feast. (Valck.)

13. ἕτεροι δὲ διαχλευάζοντες] The native Jews mocked because they did not know the foreign languages spoken by the Apostles, and those foreign tongues seemed to them like a jargon of unmeaning sounds,—a proof that the miracle was not in the ears of the hearers (as some thought even in ancient times; see Bede, Retractat. in Act. ii. p. 103), but in the tongues of the Apostles, and a refutation of several modern theories on this subject.

διαχλευάζοντες, the compound, is a stronger word than the simple verb. Cp. διαγογγύζω, Luke xv. 2; xix. 7.

— γλεύκους] Pentecost being a time of convivial rejoicing (Deut. xvi. 11). They say 'new wine,' though the Vintage was not come. (Chrys.) But no wonder that they who mock at the work of the Spirit, and call it a mere jargon, should be confuted not only by reference to the time of day (as St. Peter confutes them), but from the time of year. "Behold," says Severian, "their folly convicted by the season itself. How could there be new wine at Pentecost? But calumny is blind."

And yet, like Caiaphas, and Pilate, and other enemies of the truth, they were overruled unconsciously to declare what was true. For now the new wine of the Spirit was poured into new bottles. (See on Matt. ix. 17. Luke v. 38.) "Jam enim," says Bede after Cyril. Hieros. Cat. 17, "vinum novum in utres novos venerat, cùm Apostoli, non in vetustate literæ sed in novitate Spiritûs, Dei magnalia resonarent." This is happily versified by Arator, v. 150, after Augustine and others. See on v. 15:—

> "Hos etiam musto typicâ ratione moveri > Error verus ait, quos ebria fonte recenti
> Complevit doctrina poli; nova vasa liquorem
> Suscepere novum; nec corrumpuntur acerbo
> Quo veteres maduere lacus, de Vite bibentes
> Quæ, Christo cultore, dedit convivia verbis, > Unde rubent quas vertit aquas."

The word γλεῦκος is rightly rendered 'mustum' in Vulg. and 'new wine' in the Auth. Vers. And the suggestions that have been made of another rendering would destroy the spiritual sense of the passage, as declared by ancient Expositors.

14 Σταθεὶς δὲ Πέτρος σὺν τοῖς ἕνδεκα, ἐπῆρε τὴν φωνὴν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἀπ-ἐφθέγξατο αὐτοῖς, Ἄνδρες Ἰουδαῖοι καὶ οἱ κατοικοῦντες Ἰερουσαλὴμ ἅπαντες, f 1 Thess. 5. 7. τοῦτο ὑμῖν γνωστὸν ἔστω, καὶ ἐνωτίσασθε τὰ ῥήματά μου. 15 f Οὐ γὰρ, ὡς ὑμεῖς ὑπολαμβάνετε, οὗτοι μεθύουσιν· ἔστι γὰρ ὥρα τρίτη τῆς ἡμέρας·
g Joel 2. 28—32. 16 g ἀλλὰ τοῦτό ἐστι τὸ εἰρημένον διὰ τοῦ προφήτου Ἰωήλ, 17 Καὶ ἔσται Is. 44. 3. John 7. 38. ἐν ταῖς ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις λέγει ὁ Θεὸς, ἐκχεῶ ἀπὸ τοῦ πνεύματός μου ἐπὶ πᾶσαν σάρκα· καὶ προφητεύσουσιν οἱ υἱοὶ ὑμῶν καὶ αἱ θυγατέρες ὑμῶν· καὶ οἱ νεανίσκοι ὑμῶν ὁράσεις ὄψονται, καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι ὑμῶν ἐνυπνίοις ἐνυπνιασθήσονται. 18 Καί γε ἐπὶ τοὺς δούλους μου καὶ ἐπὶ τὰς δούλας μου, ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ἐκείναις, h Joel 2. 30. ἐκχεῶ ἀπὸ τοῦ πνεύματός μου, καὶ προφητεύσουσι. 19 h Καὶ δώσω τέρατα ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ ἄνω, καὶ σημεῖα ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς κάτω, αἷμα καὶ i Matt. 24. 29. πῦρ καὶ ἀτμίδα καπνοῦ. 20 i Ὁ ἥλιος μεταστραφήσεται εἰς σκότος, καὶ ἡ σελήνη εἰς αἷμα, πρὶν ἢ ἐλθεῖν τὴν ἡμέραν Κυρίου τὴν k Rom. 10. 13. μεγάλην καὶ ἐπιφανῆ. 21 k Καὶ ἔσται, πᾶς ὃς ἂν ἐπικαλέσηται τὸ l ch. 10. 38. ὄνομα Κυρίου σωθήσεται. 22 l Ἄνδρες Ἰσραηλῖται, ἀκούσατε τοὺς λόγους τούτους· Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον, ἄνδρα ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἀποδεδειγμένον εἰς ὑμᾶς δυνάμεσι καὶ τέρασι καὶ σημείοις, οἷς ἐποίησε δι' αὐτοῦ ὁ Θεὸς ἐν

---

14. σταθεὶς] having taken up his station,—a sign of boldness; see next note. So ἀπεφθέγξατο, he spoke aloud.

In his reports of speeches, St. Luke is wont to begin with describing the attitude and gesture of the speaker (x. 34; xiii. 16; xvii. 22; xxiii. 1; xxvi. 1).

— σὺν τοῖς ἕνδεκα] It is probable that the Eleven spoke also to several companies of persons in various languages, and that St. Peter's speech is recorded as a specimen of what was spoken by the Apostles, and because it was addressed specially to the Jews of Jerusalem, and was probably spoken in their language. See Lightfoot here (i. p. 754), and note on v. 41.

A proof of the gift of the Holy Spirit is here shown in the change wrought in the recipients. What a contrast between Peter in the hall of Caiaphas before the Crucifixion, and the same Peter on the day of Pentecost after the descent of the Holy Ghost! He who had faltered at the voice of a woman and denied his Master, now confronts the multitude which had killed Him, and reproves them for the deed, ἔνθα γὰρ ἂν παραγένηται τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, χρυσοῦς ἀντὶ πηλίνων ποιεῖ. (Chrys. Severian.) See further below, iv. 8, and the admirable specimen of sacred eloquence in Greg. Nazian. Or. xli. pp. 741, 742.

15. οὐ—μεθύουσιν] "Homo ebrius non alienam discit linguam; sed suam perdit; sed facti sunt Apostoli novi utres pleni vino novo. Cf. Matt. ix. 17." (Aug. Serm. 266.)

— ὥρα τρίτη] The hour at which the Morning Sacrifice was offered in the Temple, and until which it was the custom to fast. On Sabbaths and Festivals the fast was continued to noon. See Lightfoot here.

16—21. ἀλλὰ τοῦτο—σωθήσεται] On the harmony of this citation with the original, see Surenhusius, καταλλαγὴ, pp. 388—391.

The ἔσχαται ἡμέραι are the Days of the Messiah, or the Christian Dispensation. See Moses Stuart on Heb. i. 2. St. Luke adopts here almost verbatim the words of the LXX.

On these verses (vv. 16—21) see Bp. Andrewes' Sermon, vol. iii. p. 301.

17. ἐνυπνίοις] So A, B, C, D, H, and some cursives. A Hebraism, as in Joel iii. 1. (Meyer.) Elz. ἐνύπνια, and so LXX.

18. ἐκχεῶ] future, a later form (Winer, § 13, p. 71), found in the LXX, Ezek. vii. 8; xxi. 31, and elsewhere.

19. δώσω τέρατα] The Fathers apply this—

(1) To the signs at the Crucifixion—the eclipse—the rending of the rocks—the earthquake at the Resurrection. (Cyril.)

(2) To the phænomena before the siege and fall of Jerusalem. (Chrys. and Theophyl. referring to Josephus, B. J. vi. 5.)

— τέρατα καὶ σημεῖα] The LXX thus render the single word מוֹפְתִים Cp. Exod. xi. 9. 10. For the most part they use מוֹפֵת for τέρας, as in Exodus iv. 21; vii. 3. 9; and Deut. iv. 34; vi. 22.

"Differt τέρας à σημείῳ, hoc enim sumitur etiam pro quolibet signo extra miraculum; at τέρας semper sumitur pro portento vel prodigio." (Mintert.) A Miracle is a δύναμις as wrought by divine power; a τέρας as a supernatural prodigy; a σημεῖον as a sign or credential of a mission from God.

— αἷμα] The Jews had said, "His blood be upon us and upon our children" (Matt. xxvii. 25), and it was upon them when the blood of 1,100,000 persons was shed in the siege of Jerusalem: and then the πῦρ καὶ ἀτμὶς καπνοῦ consumed the Temple and the City. (Cyril, Severian.)

20. πρὶν ἢ ἐλθεῖν τ. ἡμέραν—ἐπιφανῆ] St. Luke adopts ἐπιφανῆ from the LXX, from נוֹרָא terribilis, which they render elsewhere in the prophetical books (Hab. i. 7; Mal. i. 14; iv. 5) by ἐπιφανὴς, which is very proper to describe our Lord's coming to judge Jerusalem, and to judge the world. As at the Ascension, the Angels pass immediately from speaking of that event to speak of Christ's Second Coming to Judgment (i. 11), so here on the Day of Pentecost, St. Peter proceeds to speak of that Second Advent, because (as Bp. Andrewes says, iii. 315), "from Christ's Departure till his Return again, from this Day of Pentecost, 'a great and notable Day,' till the last 'great and notable Day,' between these two Days no more such Day. Therefore he called them the last Days." No other Revelation or pouring out of the Spirit is to be expected.

21. πᾶς] all—not Jew only, but Gentile also.

— ὃς ἂν ἐπικαλέσηται τὸ ὄνομα] this expression both in the Greek and in Hebrew is much stronger than to invoke; the Hebrew is אֲשֶׁר־יִקְרָא בְשֵׁם, whosoever shall call on the Name of—and signifies, whosoever shall trust in, adore, and obey the Lord in all his glorious attributes.

See below, ix. 14; xxii. 16; 1 Cor. i. 2; 2 Tim. ii. 22.

"Hebraica phrasis ἐπικαλεῖσθαι τὸ ὄνομα Κυρίου significat Deum colere Gen. iv. 26; xii. 8." (Rosenmüll. So Chrys., Didymus, and Theophyl.)

Some of the ancient Fathers (e. g. Julius Africanus, in Routh, R. S. 238) understand this phrase to mean προσαγορεύεσθαι ὀνόματι Κυρίου. (Cp. Gen. iv. ult.)

22. Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον] St. Peter begins by preaching Christ in his humanity and condescension,—Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον, Jesus the Nazarene. So styled by Pilate in the Inscription on the Cross. He then raises His hearers gradually by appealing to His mighty works, known to them. (Athanas. Chrys.)

On this speech see also Iren. iii. 12.

It may be observed here that S. Irenæus (in iii. 12) cites a large portion of the Acts of the Apostles (i. 16; ii. 4. 22. 37; iii. 2; iv. 8. 22. 31; v. 30; vii. 2. 55; viii. 26. 32; ix. 4. 20; x. 1. 15. 34, 35. 37; xiv. 1; xv. 7. 23; xvii. 24) to show that the Apostles acknowledged and preached one and the same God as the Author of both Testaments and Dispensations, the Mosaic and Christian; and one and the same Christ, God and Man, the Creator of all things by His word, and the Redeemer of all men by His death.

— ἄνδρα ἀπὸ τ. Θεοῦ ἀ.] avouched, accredited, declared by and from God to you—ἀπὸ, by, used to signify the authority which originates, sanctions, and sends—Rom. xiii. 1; Gal. i. 1; Col. i. 2. Winer, § 47, p. 332.

μέσῳ ὑμῶν, καθὼς καὶ αὐτοὶ οἴδατε, [23] τοῦτον τῇ ὡρισμένῃ βουλῇ καὶ προγνώσει τοῦ Θεοῦ ἔκδοτον λαβόντες, διὰ χειρῶν ἀνόμων προσπήξαντες ἀνείλατε· [24] [m] ὃν ὁ Θεὸς ἀνέστησε, λύσας τὰς ὠδῖνας τοῦ θανάτου, καθότι οὐκ ἦν δυνατὸν κρατεῖσθαι αὐτὸν ὑπ' αὐτοῦ. [25] [n] Δαυὶδ γὰρ λέγει εἰς αὐτόν, Προωρώμην τὸν Κύριον ἐνώπιόν μου διὰ παντὸς, ὅτι ἐκ δεξιῶν μου ἔστιν, ἵνα μὴ σαλευθῶ· [26] διὰ τοῦτο ηὐφράνθη ἡ καρδία μου, καὶ ἠγαλλιάσατο ἡ γλῶσσά μου· ἔτι δὲ καὶ ἡ σάρξ μου κατασκηνώσει ἐπ' ἐλπίδι· [27] ὅτι οὐκ ἐγκαταλείψεις τὴν ψυχήν μου εἰς ᾅδην, οὐδὲ δώσεις τὸν Ὅσιόν σου ἰδεῖν διαφθοράν. [28] Ἐγνώρισάς μοι ὁδοὺς ζωῆς· πληρώσεις με εὐφροσύνης μετὰ τοῦ προσώπου σου. [29] [o] Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοὶ, ἐξὸν εἰπεῖν μετὰ παῤῥησίας πρὸς ὑμᾶς περὶ τοῦ πατριάρχου Δαυὶδ, ὅτι καὶ ἐτελεύτησε καὶ ἐτάφη, καὶ τὸ μνῆμα αὐτοῦ ἐστιν ἐν ἡμῖν ἄχρι τῆς ἡμέρας ταύτης. [30] [p] Προφήτης οὖν ὑπάρχων, καὶ εἰδὼς ὅτι ὅρκῳ ὤμοσεν αὐτῷ ὁ Θεὸς, ἐκ καρποῦ τῆς ὀσφύος αὐτοῦ τὸ κατὰ σάρκα ἀναστήσειν τὸν Χριστὸν, καθίσαι m ver. 32. & ch. 3. 15. & 4. 10. & 10. 40. & 13. 30, 34. & 17. 31. Rom. 4. 24. & 8. 11. 1 Cor. 6. 14. & 15. 15. 2 Cor. 4. 14. Gal. 1. 1. Eph. 1. 20. Col. 2. 12. 1 Thess. 1. 10. Heb. 13. 20. n Ps. 16. 8—11.

o 1 Kings 2. 10. ch. 13. 36. p 2 Sam. 7. 11—16. Ps. 132. 11. Rom. 1. 13. 1 Tim. 2. 8.

---

23. ὡρισμένῃ βουλῇ] In order that they may not imagine that they have triumphed over God, and conquered Christ by the Crucifixion, he says that it was done with the Divine foreknowledge and counsel.

But in order that they may not therefore think themselves innocent, he adds, διὰ χειρῶν ἀνόμων. Cp. Matt. xvi. 21. Acts iii. 18; iv. 28.

There was no excuse to them; "but yet the act was done by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, Who most wisely and powerfully ordered those various and vicious motions of the creature, for the effectuating of His own most glorious and gracious purposes." Bp. Sanderson, Serm. ix. 1 Tim. iii. 16. Vol. i. p. 231; and below note on iv. 28.

The Speeches of St. Peter recorded in the Acts are to be compared with and illustrated by the writings of the same Apostle in his two Epistles. On this verse see 1 Pet. i. 11. 20.

24. λύσας τ. ὠδῖνας τ. θανάτου] The ὠδῖνας θ.—birth-pangs of death, as showing that Death and the Grave instead of being the destruction of Christ were by the Divine power made, as it were, the Womb from which He was to be born to new life. See below on Acts xiii. 33.

By that glorious Birth from Death the whole world was delivered from darkness into light through Him Who was the First-born from the dead (Col. i. 18. Rev. i. 5). Cp. the beautiful expressions of Ignatius (ad Rom. 6), looking forward to a Martyr's death as his own birth: ὁ τοκετός μοι ἐγκειται· μὴ ἐμποδίσητέ μοι ζῆσαι· μὴ θελήσητέ με ἀποθανεῖν· ἐκεῖ παραγενόμενος ἄνθρωπος Θεοῦ ἔσομαι· ἐπιτρέψατέ μοι μιμητὴν εἶναι τοῦ πάθους τοῦ Θεοῦ μου· ἅφετέ με καθαρὸν φῶς λαβεῖν. What Sophist could have written thus?

How appropriate therefore was the name given to the day of the Christian's martyrdom. It was his Natalis or Birth-day. Cp. on Rom. viii. 22. Life was death; and death was birth to him. To him the darkness of the tomb was the womb of Immortality.

In considering such expressions as this (ὠδῖνες θανάτου), in the LXX Version—prepared for the Gospel—we can scarcely fail to notice the work of a superintending Providence; ὠδὶν is the word used by the LXX for חֶבֶל (Angl. cable), vinculum, funis qui astringit, coarctat, angit (see Ps. xviii. 5, and Theodoret there, and Ps. cxvi. 3).—ὠδῖνες θανάτου are חֶבְלֵי מָוֶת. Hence the combination of the word with λύσας here.

25. εἰς αὐτόν] εἰς, i. e. with reference to. Eph. v. 32. Gal. iii. 24. So πρὸς, Heb. i. 7. Cp. Job xlii. 8. Ezek. xxi. 33. Gloss. Phil. p. 486, and so Ignat. Phil. 9.

25—28. Προωρώμην—προσώπου σου] The Holy Ghost, speaking by St. Peter, interprets here the prophecy which He had delivered by King David (Ps. xvi. 8—11). The words of the Psalm are given almost verbatim as they stand in the LXX Version, read in the Synagogues by the Hellenistic Jews. Particularly (v. 26) where the Hebrew original has כְּבוֹדִי (my glory), the LXX, whom St. Luke follows, have γλῶσσά μου. On the reason of this rendering, see Surenhusius, p. 393, and Bengel here. The Tongue may be called the glory of man, either because it is "the best member that he has" (Ps. cviii. 1), or as the instrument by which he glorifies God (James iii. 9), and so procures true glory to himself. And this paraphrase of the word Glory was very appropriate on the day of Pentecost, when in a special manner the Tongues of the Apostles were made instruments for declaring God's Glory in the world, and of promoting their own glory in heaven.

25. ἔστιν] to be accentuated thus,—not ἐστίν.

26. κατασκηνώσει] "will pitch its tabernacle," i. e. only for a time. Cp. St. Peter's application of the same figure to himself, 2 Pet. i. 13, 14.

27. οὐκ ἐγκαταλείψεις τὴν ψυχήν μου εἰς ᾅδην] Elz. Ἅιδου. But A, B, C, D have Ἅιδην, which seems preferable, as showing that Hades is not (as the Gentiles thought) a Person, and this being understood, Ἅιδου might afterwards be used without offence, v. 31.

Some interpret this as meaning that God did not leave His body in the grave; but this sense is weak and tautologous. The signification seems to be, as St. Peter himself explains it, v. 31, —making a distinction between Christ's Human σὰρξ and ψυχὴ, which were severed by death,—Thou didst not leave my soul in שְׁאוֹל Sheol, i. e. in the place of departed Spirits. Cp. the use of ᾅδης, Luke xvi. 23, and note.

Next, "Thou didst not suffer my body to see corruption," which, strictly speaking, can be said of no one's body but Christ's. As S. Aug. explains it (on Ps. xvi.), "non sanctificatum corpus, per quod alii sanctificandi sunt, corrumpi patieris." Cp. Bp. Pearson On the Creed, Art. v. pp. 351. 377. The opinion of that great Expositor, that our Lord's human soul went to the place where the souls of men are kept that died in their sins, seems hardly compatible with our Lord's words, "To-day thou (i. e. thy human soul) shalt be with Me in Paradise." (Luke xxiii. 43.) Cp. Barrow on the text, v. pp. 34—36. Serm. 28. Bp. Bull, i. p. 33.

— τὸν Ὅσιόν σου] Thy Holy One, where some MSS. of the original have in the plural חֲסִידֶיךָ, Thy Holy Ones; but the Masorites, and the best ancient Versions, read the singular. And so the LXX, τὸν ὅσιον. It is of little moment which reading is preferred. The deliverance of God's Saints and Holy Ones from the corruption of the grave is due to the Resurrection of The Holy One, their Head, "Who is the First-fruits of them that slept," and "in Whom all are made alive." (1 Cor. xv. 20—22.) See also next note, and cp. xiii. 36.

One of the blessed fruits of the Day of Pentecost was that the Holy Spirit, Who had spoken of old by the Prophets, and in the Psalms (2 Pet. i. 20, 21), now interprets their words by the Apostles. On that day He founded in the Church a School of Scriptural Hermeneutics. He declared on His own Divine authority that certain Scriptures, which He expounded by the mouth of St. Peter, inspired by the Divine Teacher the Comforter, refer to Christ. Thus He has provided a safeguard against that scepticism of modern times, which would wrest them aside from their true sense (2 Pet. iii. 16). He teaches us how they apply to Christ, and has put into our hand a key for unlocking other prophecies of a like import.

29. ἐξὸν (sc. ἔστω)—τὸ μνῆμα αὐτοῦ] See Joseph. Ant. xiii. 8, 4, on Δαυΐδου τάφος, sacrilegiously opened by Herod. Joseph. Antiq. xvi. 7, 1.

An opinion is grounded by some on the fact that St. Peter does not say σῶμα but μνῆμα, and it is said that his σῶμα was one of those which rose a little before (Matt. xxvii. 53), and was carried by Christ with others into heaven. But not to say more, this opinion is contradicted by v. 34.

30. τὸ κατὰ σάρκα—Χριστόν] These words are omitted by some MSS. (e. g. A, C, D, *H) and Versions. But there is a ἐπὶ τοῦ θρόνου αὐτοῦ, 31 [q] προϊδὼν ἐλάλησε περὶ τῆς ἀναστάσεως τοῦ Χριστοῦ, ὅτι οὔτε κατελείφθη ἡ ψυχὴ αὐτοῦ εἰς ᾅδου, οὔτε ἡ σὰρξ αὐτοῦ εἶδε διαφθοράν. 32 Τοῦτον τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἀνέστησεν ὁ Θεὸς, οὗ πάντες ἡμεῖς ἐσμεν μάρτυρες. 33 [r] Τῇ δεξιᾷ οὖν τοῦ Θεοῦ ὑψωθεὶς, τήν τε ἐπαγγελίαν τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος λαβὼν παρὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς, ἐξέχεε τοῦτο ὃ νῦν ὑμεῖς βλέπετε καὶ ἀκούετε. 34 [s] Οὐ γὰρ Δαυὶδ ἀνέβη εἰς τοὺς οὐρανούς, λέγει δὲ αὐτός, Εἶπεν ὁ Κύριος τῷ κυρίῳ μου, Κάθου ἐκ δεξιῶν μου, 35 ἕως ἂν θῶ τοὺς ἐχθρούς σου ὑποπόδιον τῶν ποδῶν σου. 36 Ἀσφαλῶς οὖν γινωσκέτω πᾶς οἶκος Ἰσραὴλ, ὅτι καὶ [t] Κύριον αὐτὸν καὶ Χριστὸν ὁ Θεὸς ἐποίησε τοῦτον τὸν Ἰησοῦν, ὃν ὑμεῖς ἐσταυρώσατε.

q Ps. 16. 10. ch. 13. 35. 1 Pet. 1. 11, 12.

r ver. 17. ch. 10. 45. John 14. 26. & 15. 26. Phil. 2. 9—11.

s Ps. 110. 1. Matt. 22. 44. Heb. 1. 13.

t Ps. 2. 2, 6—8.

37 Ἀκούσαντες δὲ κατενύγησαν τῇ καρδίᾳ, εἶπόν τε πρὸς τὸν Πέτρον καὶ τοὺς λοιποὺς ἀποστόλους, Τί ποιήσομεν, ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί; 38 [u] Πέτρος δὲ ἔφη πρὸς αὐτούς, Μετανοήσατε, καὶ βαπτισθήτω ἕκαστος ὑμῶν ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ εἰς ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν, καὶ λήψεσθε τὴν δωρεὰν τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος· 39 [v] Ὑμῖν γάρ ἐστιν ἡ ἐπαγγελία καὶ τοῖς τέκνοις ὑμῶν, καὶ [w] πᾶσι τοῖς εἰς μακρὰν, ὅσους ἂν προσκαλέσηται Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν. 40 Ἑτέροις τε λόγοις πλείοσι διεμαρτύρατο καὶ παρεκάλει αὐτοὺς λέγων, Σώθητε ἀπὸ τῆς γενεᾶς τῆς σκολιᾶς ταύτης. 41 Οἱ μὲν οὖν ἀσμένως ἀποδεξάμενοι τὸν λόγον αὐτοῦ ἐβαπτίσθησαν· καὶ προσετέθησαν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ ψυχαὶ ὡσεὶ τρισχίλιαι.

u ch. 3. 19. & 19. 6. Luke 24. 47.

v Joel 2. 28. ch. 3. 25. & 10. 45

w Eph. 2. 13, 17.

42 [x] Ἦσαν δὲ προσκαρτεροῦντες τῇ διδαχῇ τῶν ἀποστόλων, καὶ τῇ κοινωνίᾳ, καὶ τῇ κλάσει τοῦ ἄρτου, καὶ ταῖς προσευχαῖς.

x ch. 1. 14. John 9. 8. Heb. 10. 25.

---

considerable amount of external evidence in their favour. And the sense appears to be incomplete without them, or something like them. See also Bornemann's note here.

31. ἡ ψυχὴ αὐτοῦ] omitted by A, B, C, *D, and some Versions.

33. τῇ δεξιᾷ] "to the right hand," as in Engl. Vers. See v. 31, and Winer, § 31, 5, p. 192. The δεξιὰ Θεοῦ is never specified in the New Testament as the instrument by which He works.

34. εἶπεν ὁ Κύριος] See on Matt. xxii. 44.

36. καὶ Κύριον αὐτὸν καὶ Χριστόν] So A, B, C, D, and other MSS. and Versions, more clearly explanatory of St. Peter's argument (which is that Jesus is both Lord Jehovah and Christ) than the reading of Elz., Κύριον καὶ Χριστὸν αὐτόν.

— ὃν ὑμεῖς ἐσταυρώσατε] On the purport of this speech, see Athanas. Orat. 11, adv. Arian., pp. 379 – 383, who observes that it is to be interpreted by reference to the opinions of the Jews, viz.

(1) That Christ would not suffer (see John xii. 34); and

(2) That He would not be the Eternal Word, God incarnate, but only man, like other kings of the Earth. Cp. Luke xxiv. 26.

Athanasius therefore compares the Jews to the Arians, and confutes both by the same Scriptures.

As has been observed by Professor Blunt, some of the passages of Scripture which the Fathers used against the Jews, and some of the arguments with which the Fathers confuted them afford the strongest armoury against the Socinians.

At the close of this speech we may add the comment of St. Augustine (Tract. in Joann. xcii.):

"When the Comforter is come, ye shall bear witness of Me" (John xv. 26, 27). So said Christ, for the Comforter will give you courage, which Peter had not, when being affrighted by a woman's voice, he would not bear witness to Christ, but through fear denied Him. After the Resurrection He thrice professed his love for his Master, but as yet his love was infirm, till it was strengthened by the Holy Ghost, which was poured into his heart in a copious stream of grace, and inspired him with such fervour and eloquence, that more eagerly than the rest he rushed forth to bear witness of Christ, and to confound His adversaries with the doctrine of the Resurrection. If any one is delighted with so joyful and holy a sight, let him read the Acts of the Apostles. There the same Peter, for whom we had wept when denying Christ, is seen, and admired, preaching Him. There that Apostolic tongue is transfigured from fear to valour, from slavery to liberty; that tongue, which at the sound of one was driven to denial, now inspires many thousand enemies to confess Christ. "Quid plura? Tantus in illo fulgor gratiæ, tanta Spiritus Sancti plenitudo apparebat, tanta de ore prædicantis pretiosissimæ veritatis pondera procedebant, ut ingentis multitudinis adversarios, interfectores Christi Judæos, faceret pro Illo paratos mori, à quibus cum illo formidarat occidi. Hoc fecit Spiritus Sanctus tunc missus, ante promissus."

37. κατενύγησαν] "Compuncti, defixi sunt corde." See on Rom. xi. 8.

38. βαπτισθήτω ἕκαστος ὑμῶν ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ] Since Jesus commanded His Apostles to baptize in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, therefore the Baptism administered by them in Christ's Name was Baptism in the Name of the Holy Trinity.

He that is baptized in the Name of Christ, is baptized in the Name of the Holy Trinity; for the Father and the Holy Spirit are inseparable from the Son. (Didym.) One Person of the Holy Trinity does not exclude another, but includes it. Therefore the Scripture sometimes mentions one Person, sometimes another Person, sometimes all the Persons, to show that all the Three Persons are of the same substance and power. (S. Aug. c. Maximin. 17.)

Hence also we may prove the Divinity of Christ. To be baptized in the Name of Jesus, is to be baptized in the Name of the Triune God, which could not be, unless Jesus Christ were God.

40. σώθητε] Be ye saved by God, Who desires your salvation and that of all men. 1 Tim. ii. 4, πάντας ἀνθρώπους θέλει σωθῆναι. Do not, by obstinacy or carelessness, frustrate His gracious purposes for your everlasting good. (Luke vii. 30.)

41. ἀσμένως] Omitted by A, B, C, D, and some Versions; perhaps rightly.

— ἐβαπτίσθησαν—τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ] A strong text (as Mr. Alford and others have rightly observed) against those that would limit the sense of βαπτισμὸς to immersion. It is by no means probable that 3000 persons were dipped by the Apostles and their assistant ministers in one day at Jerusalem.

For an explanation of the readiness with which they accepted the invitation to Baptism, see on John i. 25.

— τρισχίλιαι] The 3000 who were then converted, were not converted by St. Peter alone; but the rest of the Apostles, speaking in different tongues to people of different nations, were sharers in the work. Therefore it is said Peter stood up with the eleven (v. 14); and the hearers said to Peter and the rest of the Apostles, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" (v. 37.) (Cp. Lightfoot.)

42. προσκαρτεροῦντες τῇ διδαχῇ τ. ἀ.—τῇ κοινωνίᾳ—καὶ ταῖς προσευχαῖς] "Here," says Bp. Pearson (in Acta Ap. i. 33; ii. 41. 48), "is the image of the Primitive Church. They who 43 y Ἐγένετο δὲ πάσῃ ψυχῇ φόβος, πολλά τε τέρατα καὶ σημεῖα διὰ τῶν ἀποστόλων ἐγίνετο. 44 z Πάντες δὲ οἱ πιστεύοντες ἦσαν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ, καὶ εἶχον ἅπαντα κοινά· 45 καὶ τὰ κτήματα καὶ τὰς ὑπάρξεις ἐπίπρασκον, καὶ διεμέριζον αὐτὰ πᾶσι, καθότι ἄν τις χρείαν εἶχε· 46 a Καθ' ἡμέραν τε προσκαρτεροῦντες ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, κλῶντές τε κατ' οἶκον ἄρτον μετελάμβανον τροφῆς ἐν ἀγαλλιάσει καὶ ἀφελότητι καρδίας, 47 b αἰνοῦντες τὸν Θεὸν, καὶ ἔχοντες χάριν πρὸς ὅλον τὸν λαόν.

Ὁ δὲ Κύριος προσετίθει τοὺς σωζομένους καθ' ἡμέραν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ.

y Mark 16. 17.
z ch. 4. 32, 34.
a ch. 20. 7.
b Rom. 14. 18. ch. 5. 14. & 11. 21.

---

received the Apostles' word were admitted into the Church by Baptism (neque alio modo unquam recipi potuerunt aut Christiani fieri); being admitted, they resorted to the Assemblies of the Church, in which they gave diligent heed to the teaching of the Apostles, and partook of the Holy Eucharist, and joined in the Common Prayers. And thus they were a model to all Churches, even to the end of the world."

Bp. Andrewes, in his admirable Sermon on this text (vol. ii. p. 55, "On the worshipping of Imaginations"), has fully developed these principles, and has applied them to the history of the Church in every age, and as a safeguard against all innovations in Doctrine and Discipline.

To examine particulars,

(1) They communicated in the same Faith, τῇ διδαχῇ. Cp. Ephes. iv. 5.

(2) καὶ τῇ κοινωνίᾳ, rendered by the Vulgate in communicatione fractionis panis, the words being understood according to an ἓν διὰ δυοῖν. Cp. 1 Cor. x. 16. And so Blunt, Early Church, p. 32. But 'fellowship' seems to be the true rendering. They were all of one heart, and they made open profession of communion in the same faith by external acts of fellowship with the same Apostolic Ministry. Cp. Bp. Andrewes, ii. 62, who observes that the Ministry of the Church consisted at this time "in two degrees,—(1) the Twelve, (2) the Seventy; both which were over the people in things pertaining to God," and the λαὸς, or people, communicated in holy offices with them.

(3) τῇ κλάσει τοῦ ἄρτου,—the Breaking of Bread preparatory to the Holy Communion. Cp. 1 Cor. x. 16. "Eucharistiæ mentionem hic facit Syrus." (Rosenm.) See also Blunt, p. 32, and note below on v. 46.

Bp. Pearson says here, "Licet fractio panis possit victum communem tantùm significare, tamen cùm in cœna Domini panis signanter frangi dicatur; cùm in vetustissimis ecclesiis quotidie Eucharistiam celebrare moris esset; cùm ex oblationibus à populo factis sumi solerent panis et vinum ad eum usum sacrum; dubitari vix potest, quin hic ter mille homines in quotidiana communione et fractione panis cœnam Domini celebraverint."

(4) ταῖς προσευχαῖς, the Prayers; probably some stated common form of prayer or liturgy. Cp. Blunt, on the Early Church, p. 32.

Bp. Pearson remarks here, "Erant perseverantes in orationibus publicis nempe atque communibus, in ipso cœtu ab Apostolis etiam factis. Sub lege Mosis nullum de precibus conceptum videtur mandatum: pii tamen sæpius in templo orabant, Baptista discipulos suos docuit orare. Unde unus ex discipulis Christo dixit, Domine, doce nos orare, sicut docuit et Joannes discipulos suos. (Luc. xi. 1.) Unde Christus Orationem eam protulit, quam Dominicam vocamus. Apostoli igitur, quibus Spiritus Sanctus omnia in memoriam revocavit quæcunque antea Christus illis revelaverat, et eâ Oratione usi sunt, et etiam alias usurpabant, à quibus vetustissimæ precum formulæ in omnibus ecclesiis pene eædem derivatæ sunt."

43. ἐγένετο—ἐγίνετο] Mark the difference of tense. Fear was inspired into the hearts of the multitude once for all, and remained there: signs and wonders were wrought by the Apostles often.

— τέρατα καὶ σημεῖα] Cp. v. 19.

44. εἶχον ἅπαντα κοινά] See on iv. 32—35. "Liberum cuique fuit facere hoc, aut non facere, ut ostendit Ananiæ exemplum (v. 4) et Apostolorum tempore collectæ in usum pauperum frequentatæ sunt ex Apostolorum præscripto. 1 Cor. xvi." (Rosenm.)

There was a special reason for this communion of goods at Jerusalem, where converts to Christianity would be regarded as renegades by the Jews, and be cut off from domestic intercourse and from former means of subsistence. Cp. Bp. Beveridge on Art. xxxviii. "Christian Men's goods not common."

However, though the example may not bind now in the strictness of the letter, yet it always does in spirit. See Rom. xii. 13. Gal. vi. 6. Heb. xiii. 16.

45. ἐπίπρασκον] were selling.—Observe the imperfects here and in the next verses, ἐπίπρασκον, διεμέριζον, μετελάμβανον, προσετίθει—giving a vivid picture of what was happening then, in the infancy of the Church, and has never been seen since that time in the same degree.

46. καθ' ἡμέραν π. ὁ. ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ] A warning against the sin of schism. Although the Priests who officiated in the Temple at Jerusalem had slain the Prince of Life (v. 23. 36; iii. 15), yet His Disciples did not separate themselves from the public offices of Prayer and Praise in that Temple. At the same time they refused to submit to any sinful conditions imposed by the Rulers of Jerusalem, v. 29. See also next note.

— κλῶντες κατ' οἶκον ἄρτον] breaking Bread at home. So our English margin and the Syriac, and so Bengel, Meyer, and Alford. For this use of κατ' οἶκον, see Rom. xvi. 5. Philem. 2. 1 Cor. xvi. 19. Clem. Rom. i. 1. Mart. Ignat. 7. There is a contrast between Public Worship of the Temple and the religious offices of Christian Assemblies.

The sense is, While they resorted daily to the public service of the Temple, they celebrated (what they could not have in the Temple) the Holy Communion in their own oratory at home, perhaps the same οἶκος as that mentioned above, ii. 2 (see note there), where the Holy Ghost descended on the Church at the Day of Pentecost. See also below, v. 42, ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, καὶ κατ' οἶκον, where there is the same contrast.

On κλῶντες ἄρτον, see St. Ignatius, Ep. 20, ἕνα ἄρτον κλῶντες, i. e. receiving the Holy Eucharist. See on v. 42. "Significat (says Bengel) victus quotidianus, cum quo perssepe conjuncta erat Eucharistiæ administratio: cf. xx. 7. 1 Cor. xi. 20." Doubtless it describes the Christian ἀγάπαι. The words "daily bread," in the Lord's Prayer, were applied by Primitive Fathers to the reception of the Holy Eucharist as joined to the daily meal. See Clem. Alex. Pædolog. ii. 10. Cyprian, Ep. 54. Blunt, p. 106. The Apostles and primitive Disciples would not separate themselves from the Temple, but resorted habitually to it, in order that it might not be supposed that the Gospel which they preached was at variance with the Law of Moses; and in order that they might give a practical confirmation to their argument that Christ had been foretold by Moses and the Prophets, whose office it was to prepare the way for Him. At the same time they would not tempt any one to imagine that the Temple, with its ceremonial, "which was a shadow of good things to come" (Heb. x. 1), and whose body and substance was Christ (Col. ii. 17) could supply the spiritual needs of the faithful worshipper, they therefore assembled κατ' οἶκον, for prayer and praise, and the administration of the Sacraments, in their own upper room, which had now become the Church of God. Happily for her, the difficulties hence arising were solved a few years afterwards by the destruction of the Temple, and by the abolition of its services. The demolition of the Jewish Temple was the building up of the Christian Church.

— μετελάμβανον τροφῆς ἐν ἀ. κ. ἀ. κ.] They were partaking of food with one another, the rich being glad to distribute (1 Tim. vi. 18).—ἐν ἀγαλλιάσει, rejoicing in the privilege of giving; and not doing it in a scrupulous or ostentatious spirit, but in singleness of heart, ἐν ἁφελότητι, in simplicity (Rom. xii. 8. Col. iii. 22). On the sense of ἁφελής—properly applied to land exempt from stones and pebbles, rendering the land sterile; and to smooth roads,—see Ruhnken, Lex. Tim. v. φέλλια, and Valck. here. And the poor were thankful for what they received (James i. 9), and did not conceal their gratitude. "Divites in eo lætabantur, quod liberalitatem erga pauperes exercere possent, pauperes sibi ditiorum liberalitatem gratulabantur. Hæc eorum lætitia non fucata, sed ex mutuo amore et animorum consensione enata erat, alieni erant divites ab omni fastu et ostentatione; pauperes, ab omni malignitate et invidiâ." (Kuin.)

47. Κύριος] Observe the word Κύριος as used here. The Apostles preached and baptized; but it was the Lord Who was adding those who received the Word and Sacrament of Salvation to the Church. Κύριος in the Old Testament is Jehovah, and in the New is Christ. Christ is one with Jehovah, and He adds

c ch. 2. 46. III. [1] [c]Ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ δὲ Πέτρος καὶ Ἰωάννης ἀνέβαινον εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν ἐπὶ τὴν ὥραν τῆς προσευχῆς, τὴν ἐνάτην. [2] Καί τις ἀνὴρ, χωλὸς ἐκ κοιλίας μητρὸς αὐτοῦ ὑπάρχων, ἐβαστάζετο· ὃν ἐτίθουν καθ' ἡμέραν πρὸς τὴν θύραν τοῦ ἱεροῦ τὴν λεγομένην ὡραίαν, τοῦ αἰτεῖν ἐλεημοσύνην παρὰ τῶν εἰσπορευομένων εἰς τὸ ἱερόν. [3] [a]Ὃς ἰδὼν Πέτρον καὶ Ἰωάννην μέλλοντας εἰσιέναι εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν ἠρώτα ἐλεημοσύνην λαβεῖν. [4] Ἀτενίσας δὲ Πέτρος εἰς αὐτὸν σὺν τῷ Ἰωάννῃ εἶπε, Βλέψον εἰς ἡμᾶς. [5] Ὁ δὲ ἐπεῖχεν αὐτοῖς, προσδοκῶν τι παρ' αὐτῶν λαβεῖν. [6] Εἶπε δὲ Πέτρος, Ἀργύριον καὶ χρυσίον οὐχ ὑπάρχει μοι· d ch. 4. 10. ὃ δὲ ἔχω, τοῦτό σοι δίδωμι· [d]ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ Ναζωραίου ἔγειραι καὶ περιπάτει. [7] Καὶ πιάσας αὐτὸν τῆς δεξιᾶς χειρὸς ἤγειρε· Παραe Isa. 35. 6. χρῆμα δὲ ἐστερεώθησαν αὐτοῦ αἱ βάσεις καὶ τὰ σφυρά· [8] καὶ [e]ἐξαλλόμενος believers to the Church, Κυριακῇ, the Lord's House; cp. on Luke x. 1, and above on i. 6, and i. 21.

---

— προσετίθει] was adding.

— τοὺς σωζομένους] present participle in a middle sense; and it designates those who were escaping (as it were) from the Flood, and taking refuge in the Ark, the Church; those who were flying from the bondage of a spiritual Egypt, and were entering on the way of salvation, toward the land of Promise; those who were being delivered from the death of sin, by incorporation into the σωτήριον σῶμα τοῦ Σωτῆρος, Eph. v. 23. Cf. v. 40, σώθητε ἀπὸ τῆς γενεᾶς τῆς σκολιᾶς ταύτης, and S. Ignat. Polyc. i. πάντας παρακαλεῖν ἵνα σώζωνται, to escape, save themselves. And see below on xiii. 48.

Professor Blunt (Duties of the Parish Priest, Sect. ii. p. 51) well says, Acts ii. 47: "Calvinism has made great use of this text, and important consequences have been deduced from it. But the phrase of the original is τοὺς σωζομένους, where the tense employed shows that the expression applies only to those who are in a state of salvation; as τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις (1 Cor. i. 18) applies to the opposite; discouraging the Calvinistic interpretation." As Bp. Middleton says here (p. 369): "It is remarkable that the tense used (viz. the present) is the only tense which excludes the Calvinistic interpretation; both the Future (σωθησομένους) and the Past (σεσωσμένους) would have favoured it." See further below on the kindred text, xiii. 48.

— καθ' ἡμέραν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ] So E and the great majority of cursive MSS. D has ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ. The words τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ are not in A, B, C, and some ancient Versions, which read καθ' ἡμέραν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ Πέτρος δὲ καὶ Ἰωάννης ἀνέβαινον, as in the next chapter, v. 1. It is not improbable that τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ may be a gloss here. In v. 41, St. Luke says simply προσετέθησαν ψυχαὶ ὡσεὶ τρισχίλιαι, but we have προσετίθεντο τῷ Κυρίῳ in v. 14. The use of ἐπὶ after προστίθημι is illustrated by Luke xii. 25, προσθεῖναι ἐπὶ τὴν ἡλικίαν αὐτοῦ πῆχυν ἕνα. And the junction of ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ with ἀνέβαινον is somewhat constrained and harsh. Perhaps therefore with Bengel, Lachmann, and Alford we ought to read προσετίθει τοὺς σωζομένους ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ, and commence the next chapter, Πέτρος δὲ καὶ Ἰωάννης. The words ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ are also very significant, as expressing the Unity of Faith in which all were knit together; see i. 15.

Other Editors (Tischendorf, Bloomf., Meyer) retain the words τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, with Elz. And in such a case as this it seems best to allow the words to remain undisturbed, and to leave the question to the judgment of the learned reader.

If the words τῇ Ἐκκλησίᾳ are genuine, then this is the first place where the term Ecclesia, or Church, occurs, in this the divinely inspired History of the Church, where the word Ecclesia is repeated about twenty times.

The Holy Ghost does not specify any time of the imposition of the name "Church" on the congregation of Christians, but He introduces the word at once with the definite article (see v. 11). He displays the Church as already in being, and known as the divinely instituted Society which Christ had redeemed and purchased by His own blood. See xx. 28.

On the word Ἐκκλησίᾳ, see Matt. xvi. 18, and cp. below, v. 11, the next place in the Acts where Ἐκκλησίᾳ occurs.

From the circumstance that St. John is so often mentioned in combination with St. Peter, up to the time when Peter and John are sent to Samaria to confirm the baptized converts (viii. 14), and that St. John is never afterwards mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles, though St. Peter is mentioned nearly forty times after that occasion, it may perhaps be reasonably inferred that St. John departed from Judæa, perhaps into Asia, not long after that time. St. John is mentioned as present at Jerusalem on the occasion of St. Paul's visit (Gal. ii. 9), and he could hardly have been absent from the Council. Acts xv. 2.

The connexion between St. John's Epistles and St. Peter's Epistles has been noticed in the Editor's Lectures on the Canon of Scripture (Lect. xi. 288).

The Fathers generally regard St. Peter as a representative of the πρακτικὸς βίος, and St. John of the θεωρητικός. The union of both under the influence of the Holy Ghost is necessary for the building up of the Church. Both must go up together to the Temple to pray.

— ἀνέβαινον] were going up to the Temple, a public place, at a time of general resort.

The miracle was wrought in a spot much frequented, and at a time when it was most crowded.

2. ἐβαστάζετο] was being carried. Observe also the other imperfects here, ἀνέβαινον v. 1, ἐτίθουν v. 2, ἠρώτα v. 3.

— θύραν—ὡραίαν] Either the Gate of Nicanor, Joseph. B. J. v. 5, 3, or the Door named Susan, perhaps so called διὰ τὴν ὡραιότητα, as the City Susa was the City of Lilies (see Kuin. and Winer, ii. 580). Both these were on the eastern side of the Temple.

Here we have the word θύρα, in v. 10, πύλη. The reason seems to be, that they used to bring the man to the θύρα, or door, before it was opened (see xiv. 27; xvi. 26, 27; xxi. 30), and when persons were passing through it he lay at the πύλη, or gate.

4. βλέψον εἰς ἡμᾶς] "This suffices (says Sever. in Caten., where the MS. has ἀρέσκει, read ἀρκεῖ) for thy instruction and health. Look on us, the Apostles of Christ. In His Name, by His power (not ours), Rise, and Walk."

It appears that the Apostles had the power of discerning the spirit of this man whom they healed; for he showed his thankful piety by entering the Temple, and praising God (v. 9). And he clung to Peter and John (v. 11), and continued with them in their perils (iv. 14). Cp. Acts xiv. 9, and see below, v. 16, where they speak of his faith, which may supply a comment on this passage.

Compare the healing of those who were bitten by fiery serpents in the wilderness. The brazen serpent healed them by the power of Him Who is the Saviour of all (Wisd. xvi. 7). But in order to be healed they must look at it. (Numb. xxi. 8.)

5. ἐπεῖχεν αὐτοῖς] sc. τὸν νοῦν, Luke xiv. 7.

6. ἀργύριον καὶ χρυσίον οὐχ ὑπάρχει μοι] A proof of his compliance with Christ's command, Matt. x. 9, μὴ κτήσησθε χρυσὸν μηδὲ ἄργυρον εἰς τὰς ζώνας ὑμῶν.

"Legi apud auctores graves (says A Lapide here), S. Thom. Aquinatem, cùm ad Innocentium IV. Pontificem venisset, coram quo forte magna vis auri signati numerabatur, et Pontifex ei dixisset, 'Videsne, Thoma, Ecclesiam non amplius, sicut olim, cùm primùm inceperat, dicere posse Argentum et aurum non habeo? modestè respondisse, Fatendum est, sancte Pater; sed etiam Ecclesia non potest, sicut primitiva, ad claudum dicere, Surge, et ambula."

— ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι Ἰησοῦ] See below, on ix. 34.

7. βάσεις—σφυρά] The soles first were strengthened, then the ankles; then he leapt up.

8. ἐξαλλόμενος] springing up from the ground. Cp. Isa. xxxv. 6.

Ch. III. 1. ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό] See on ii. 47.

— Πέτρος καὶ Ἰωάννης] S. Chrys. remarks on the constant union of Peter and John in the later portions of the Gospel, and the earlier ones of the Acts. See John xviii. 16; xx. 3; xxi. 2—21. Acts iii. 3, 4. 11; iv. 19; viii. 14, and an excellent note by Mr. Humphry here, and on v. 6.

ἔστη, καὶ περιεπάτει· καὶ εἰσῆλθε σὺν αὐτοῖς εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, περιπατῶν καὶ ἀλλόμενος καὶ αἰνῶν τὸν Θεόν. 9 Καὶ εἶδεν πᾶς ὁ λαὸς αὐτὸν περιπατοῦντα καὶ αἰνοῦντα τὸν Θεόν· 10 ἐπεγίνωσκόν τε αὐτὸν ὅτι οὗτος ἦν ὁ πρὸς τὴν ἐλεημοσύνην καθήμενος ἐπὶ τῇ ὡραίᾳ πύλῃ τοῦ ἱεροῦ, καὶ ἐπλήσθησαν θάμβους καὶ ἐκστάσεως ἐπὶ τῷ συμβεβηκότι αὐτῷ.

11 Κρατοῦντος δὲ αὐτοῦ τὸν Πέτρον καὶ Ἰωάννην, συνέδραμε πρὸς αὐτοὺς πᾶς ὁ λαὸς ἐπὶ [f]τῇ στοᾷ τῇ καλουμένῃ Σολομῶνος ἔκθαμβοι. 12 Ἰδὼν δὲ Πέτρος ἀπεκρίνατο πρὸς τὸν λαόν, Ἄνδρες Ἰσραηλῖται, τί θαυμάζετε ἐπὶ τούτῳ, ἢ ἡμῖν τί ἀτενίζετε, ὡς ἰδίᾳ δυνάμει ἢ [g]εὐσεβείᾳ πεποιηκόσι τοῦ περιπατεῖν αὐτόν; 13 [h]Ὁ Θεὸς [i]Ἀβραὰμ καὶ Ἰσαὰκ καὶ Ἰακὼβ, ὁ Θεὸς τῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν, [j]ἐδόξασε τὸν παῖδα αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦν, ὃν ὑμεῖς μὲν παρεδώκατε, καὶ ἠρνήσασθε αὐτὸν κατὰ πρόσωπον Πιλάτου, κρίναντος ἐκείνου ἀπολύειν. 14 [k]Ὑμεῖς δὲ τὸν Ἅγιον καὶ Δίκαιον ἠρνήσασθε, καὶ ἠτήσασθε ἄνδρα [l]φονέα χαρισθῆναι ὑμῖν· 15 [m]τὸν δὲ ἀρχηγὸν τῆς ζωῆς ἀπεκτείνατε, ὃν ὁ Θεὸς ἤγειρεν ἐκ νεκρῶν, οὗ ἡμεῖς μάρτυρές ἐσμεν. 16 Καὶ ἐπὶ τῇ πίστει τοῦ ὀνόματος αὐτοῦ τοῦτον ὃν θεωρεῖτε καὶ οἴδατε ἐστερέωσε τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ· καὶ ἡ πίστις ἡ δι' αὐτοῦ ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ τὴν ὁλοκληρίαν ταύτην ἀπέναντι πάντων ὑμῶν. 17 [n]Καὶ νῦν, ἀδελφοὶ, οἶδα ὅτι κατὰ ἄγνοιαν ἐπράξατε, ὥσπερ καὶ οἱ ἄρχοντες ὑμῶν. 18 [o]Ὁ δὲ Θεὸς ἃ προκατήγγειλε διὰ στόματος πάντων τῶν προφητῶν αὐτοῦ, παθεῖν τὸν Χριστὸν αὐτοῦ, ἐπλήρωσεν οὕτω. 19 [p]Μετανοήσατε οὖν καὶ ἐπιστρέψατε, [q]εἰς τὸ ἐξαλειφθῆναι ὑμῶν τὰς ἁμαρτίας, ὅπως ἂν ἔλθωσι καιροὶ ἀναψύξεως f ch. 5. 12. John 10. 23.

g 2 Cor. 3. 5.
h ch. 5. 30, 31.
i Matt. 22. 32.
j John 17. 1. Eph. 1. 20—22. Phil. 2. 9—11. Heb. 2. 9. k Matt. 27. 20. Mark 15. 11. Luke 23. 18. John 18. 40.
l Luke 23. 19.
m ch. 2. 24.
n ch. 13. 27. Luke 23. 34.
o Luke 24. 44 ch. 26. 22, 23.
p ch. 2. 38.
q Isa. 1. 16—20. & 43. 25. Joel 2. 13.

---

11. αὐτοῦ] So A, B, C, E. Elz. τοῦ ἰαθέντος χωλοῦ, which seems to be a gloss.

— στοᾷ τ. κ. Σολομῶνος] The porticus,—corridor, arcade, or cloister,—where Jesus had walked at the Feast of Dedication, John x. 23, where see note.

12. ἡμῖν τί ἀτενίζετε] sc. ὀφθαλμούς. Why do you fix your eyes on us? (Valck.) The Holy Spirit had bestowed on them the grace of humility, as well as the gift of Tongues.

— πεποιηκόσι τοῦ π.] This use of ποιεῖν, followed by τοῦ, and an infinitive, and indicating the effect designed, is derived from the LXX. See Josh. xxii. 26, ποιῆσαι τοῦ οἰκοδομῆσαι. Cp. 1 Kings xvi. 19. A somewhat similar use occurs below, vii. 19, ἐκάκωσε τοῦ ποιεῖν. Cp. Winer, § 44, p. 292.

13. τὸν παῖδα αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦν] παῖς, an expression applied to Christ in Acts iii. 26; iv. 27. 30. It is observable that it is followed by the word Ἰησοῦς, and is never used to describe the Eternal generation of the Divine Logos, but employed to designate His generation in time as the Man Christ Jesus, and so marks the distinction of the two natures in One Person.

It appears probable that παῖς in these passages is not to be rendered child, but servant (see Humphry, on iv. 27, and Alford here), being used by the LXX for the Hebr. עֶבֶד servus, and in this sense applied to Christ: see Isa. xlii. 1; xlviii. 20; xlix. 3. 5, 6; lii. 13; liii. 11; liv. 17. Zech. iii. 8, where δοῦλος is used by LXX. Cp. Matt. xii. 18, and so Theophyl. p. 207, δοῦλον τὸν Ἰησοῦν καλεῖ διὰ τὸ ἀνθρώπινον: cp. iv. 25.

The expression παῖς Θεοῦ, as applied in this sense to Christ by His disciples, is peculiar to the Acts of the Apostles. But this is what might be expected; and is an evidence of its genuineness and truth. At the time described in these earlier Chapters of this book, the minds of the Apostles must have been deeply impressed with a sense of the condescension, humiliation, and obedience of Christ, as seen in the scenes they had lately witnessed of His Agony and Passion. And it was a doctrine which they were most concerned in inculcating now on the minds of the Jews — that Christ must have suffered these things, and so enter into His glory. (Luke xxiv. 26. 46.) See Acts iii. 18; xvii. 3, and on xxvi. 23. Cp. St. Peter's words (1 Pet. i. 11), τὰ εἰς Χριστὸν παθήματα καὶ τὰς μετὰ ταῦτα δόξας. His Obedience to Death (both as piacular and exemplary) was to be preached as the cause of His Exaltation. See on Matt. xxviii. 18.

In the next age, the term παῖς Θεοῦ was applied to Christ as a Son. See Polycarp. Mart. § 14, p. 621. Jacobson and S. Hippolyt. Philosoph. p. 336, and contra Noëtum, § 5 and § 7 and § 11, and the note of Fabricius, ii. p. 10.

— ὑμεῖς] A, B, C, E add the μὲν, which is not in Elz.

14, 15. ἄνδρα φονέα — ἀρχηγὸν τ. ζωῆς] You craved as a favour from Pilate the life of one who killed others; and you extorted the death of Him Who is the life of the dead. (Chrys.)

16. πίστει τοῦ ὀνόματος αὐτοῦ] faith in Him.—"ὄνομα Ἰησοῦ est Jesus Ipse, ut in V. T. Nomen Jehovæ est Jehovah Ipse." (Rosenm.)

— ἡ πίστις ἡ δι' αὐτοῦ] The faith wrought through Him in us the Apostles, and in him who has been healed. "Fides quæ per Eum est" (Vulg.); i. e. "per Eum Apostolis data, ipsique sanato." See Acts xiv. 9. So διὰ, John vi. 57. Rom. i. 5; v. 2; xi. 36. Gal. ii. 1. Heb. ii. 10. Glass. Phil. p. 491. δεῖ (says Ammon.) τὴν πίστιν συνδραμεῖν, καὶ τοῦ ὑγιαζομένου καὶ τοῦ ὑπερευχομένου.

17. κατὰ ἄγνοιαν] On the difference between sins of Presumption, or wilful sins, and sins of Ignorance, and how far, and in what cases, Ignorance excuses, see Bp. Sanderson (Serm. vi. ad Pop. on Gen. xx. 6, § 11—28; iii. pp. 223—240). Cp. Luke xxiii. 34. John xvi. 3. 1 Cor. ii. 8. 1 Tim. i. 13.

18. αὐτοῦ] So B, C, D, E. His Christ (cp. iv. 26) though rejected by you. Elz. omits αὐτοῦ.

On this text see Dr. Barrow, Serm. lxxvi. vol. iii. p. 451, "The sufferings of Christ foretold in the Old Testament."

19. ὅπως ἄν] "Ut veniant vobis," say Iren. iii. 12, and Tertullian, de Resurr. c. 23. "Ut veniant," Vulg. D. The sense is, In order that the seasons of refreshing may come. Cp. Winer, § 42, pp. 277. 410;

St. Peter's speech is addressed to the Jewish people, and is still applicable to them. In it the Holy Spirit declares a solemn truth, viz. that the coming of the seasons of Refreshment from the presence of the Lord and of the Second Advent of Christ and the Restitution of all things, are so ordered by Divine Wisdom as to depend on the Repentance of the Jews and their reception of the Gospel. Cp. Rom. xi. 25—27. Zech. xii. 10, and xiii. xiv.

Their conversion must precede those glorious manifestations;

Here is the true ground of appeal to the Jews. Repent, and believe, in order that the number of God's elect (which cannot be completed without you, cp. Heb. xi. 39, 40) may be accomplished, and His coming and kingdom be hastened, and the happiness of the saints of old, who have departed in faith, may be consummated by the resurrection of their bodies, and they may be admitted in soul and body to the full fruition of the felicity of heaven.

19. καιροὶ ἀναψύξεως] ἀνάψυξις is used by the LXX for רְוָחָה, from root רוּחַ, respiravit se, Exod. viii. 15, applied to Pharaoh when he had a respite, or breathing-time, from the plagues.

The re-appearing of Christ is compared to a season of deliverance from antecedent grievous calamities. Cp. Luke xxi. 28, and Rom. viii. 19—23, quoted here by Chrys. The Church must r Jer. 31. 23—25. Zeph. 3. 14—20. s ch. 1. 11. 1 Pet. 3. 22.

t Deut. 18. 15—19. ch. 7. 37. u Gen. 12. 3. & 22. 18. & 26. 4. Rom. 15. 8. Gal. 3. 8.
v Matt. 10. 5. Luke 24. 47. ch. 13. 46.

r ἀπὸ προσώπου τοῦ Κυρίου, 20 καὶ ἀποστείλῃ τὸν προκεχειρισμένον ὑμῖν Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν· 21 s ὃν δεῖ οὐρανὸν μὲν δέξασθαι ἄχρι χρόνων ἀποκαταστάσεως πάντων, ὧν ἐλάλησεν ὁ Θεὸς διὰ στόματος τῶν ἁγίων αὐτοῦ προφητῶν ἀπ' αἰῶνος. 22 t Μωϋσῆς μὲν πρὸς τοὺς πατέρας εἶπεν, Ὅτι προφήτην ὑμῖν ἀναστήσει Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ὑμῶν ἐκ τῶν ἀδελφῶν ὑμῶν ὡς ἐμέ· αὐτοῦ ἀκούσεσθε κατὰ πάντα ὅσα ἂν λαλήσῃ πρὸς ὑμᾶς. 23 Ἔσται δὲ, πᾶσα ψυχὴ, ἥτις ἂν μὴ ἀκούσῃ τοῦ προφήτου ἐκείνου, ἐξολοθρευθήσεται ἐκ τοῦ λαοῦ. 24 Καὶ πάντες δὲ οἱ προφῆται ἀπὸ Σαμουὴλ καὶ τῶν καθεξῆς ὅσοι ἐλάλησαν, καὶ κατήγγειλαν τὰς ἡμέρας ταύτας. 25 u Ὑμεῖς ἐστε οἱ υἱοὶ τῶν προφητῶν, καὶ τῆς διαθήκης ἧς διέθετο ὁ Θεὸς πρὸς τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν, λέγων πρὸς Ἀβραάμ, Καὶ ἐν τῷ σπέρματί σου ἐνευλογηθήσονται πᾶσαι αἱ πατριαὶ τῆς γῆς. 26 v Ὑμῖν πρῶτον ὁ Θεὸς ἀναστήσας τὸν παῖδα αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦν ἀπέστειλεν αὐτὸν εὐλογοῦντα ὑμᾶς, ἐν τῷ ἀποστρέφειν ἕκαστον ἀπὸ τῶν πονηριῶν ὑμῶν.

IV. 1 Λαλούντων δὲ αὐτῶν πρὸς τὸν λαὸν, ἐπέστησαν αὐτοῖς οἱ ἱερεῖς καὶ ὁ στρατηγὸς τοῦ ἱεροῦ καὶ οἱ Σαδδουκαῖοι, 2 διαπονούμενοι διὰ τὸ διδάσκειν expect severe tribulation from the power of Antichrist, before the Second Advent of Christ. The one will be followed by the other.

---

— ἀπὸ προσώπου] A Hebraism. See Vorst. p. 337. Cp. 2 Thess. ii. 19.

20. καί] καὶ appears to have here the sense of the Hebrew Vau, and to be used to join clauses which we should combine by when. See Gen. xix. 23. 2 Sam. iv. 7. Schroeder, Synt. Hebr. § 109, p. 329.

— προκεχειρισμένον] So A, B, C, D, E, and many cursive MSS. and Versions, for προκεκηρυγμένον. προκεχειρισμένον = προβεβλημένον, ἡτοιμασμένον. (Hesych.) "Præparatum" (Iren.). "Destinatum" (Tertullian). Cp. Acts xxii. 14; xxvi. 16.

21. δέξασθαι] δέχομαι—connected with δεξιὰ—to contain, to hold, to keep, suscipere. (Vulg.) Cp. Acts vii. 38; xxi. 17. James i. 21.

This sense is authorized by Justin Martyr (Apol. i. 60), who uses the word κατέχειν, and by Theophyl., Œcumen., and others. The heavens contain Christ as Man; but as God He is ἀκατάληπτος.

The Divines of Rome have endeavoured to reconcile this statement of St. Peter with the doctrine of Transubstantiation: but with what success may be seen by the following note of one of the most learned and ingenious among them, Corn. a Lapide: "Non docemus Christum cœlo evocandum ad Eucharistiam, quasi cœlum deserens locali motu descendat, hoc enim tantùm fiet in die Judicii; sed quod manens in cœlo per Omnipotentiam Dei præsentem (i. e. carnaliter) se sistat in Eucharistiâ, sive id fiat per corporis Ejus replicationem, sive per acquisitionem novi loci (de quo disputant scholastici) idque invisibiliter et indivisibiliter, cùm in cœlo sit visibiliter et divisibiliter respectu loci; alio enim loco (sc. cœli) est Christi caput, in alio collum, in alio pectus, in alio pedes; cùm in Eucharistiâ omnia Christi Membra sint in eodem loco puta in eâdem hostiâ eodemque hostiæ puncto."

— ἄχρι χρόνων ἀποκαταστάσεως] Not to the season, καιροῦ, as if transitory, but to the times (as permanent) of the fulfilment and consummation of those things which God promised by the Prophets. See on Mark ix. 12, and Acts i. 6. ἀποκατάστασις = τελείωσις (Hesych.); συμπλήρωσις (Schol. Mosq. ap. Grinfield); "plena rerum exhibitio" (Valck. on Luke vii. 10). So Œcumen. and Didym., who says, "Christ, having been received into heaven, remains there till the end of the world, when He will come again with power, and all that the Prophets have foretold will be accomplished;" and then all Christ's enemies, Satan and the world, will be put under His feet, and His mediatorial kingdom be complete, and God will be all in all. See 1 Cor. xv. 25, 26. Heb. x. 12, 13; and Grotius and Rosenm. here, and note above on Matt. xxviii. 18.

The καιροὺς ἀναψύξεως is the season when Christ will reappear. Cp. Luke xxi. 28, "Look up, for your redemption draweth nigh." But the χρόνοι ἀποκαταστάσεως, in which Christ will be visible to the faithful, will never end. Cp. 2 Pet. iii. 13.

On the distinction of καιρὸς and χρόνος see i. 7.

— ἀπ' αἰῶνος] מִשְּׁלֹם 'ab antiquissimo tempore,'—'as long as time was.' Cp. John ix. 32, ἐκ τοῦ αἰῶνος οὐκ, i. e. never. Isa. lxiv. 4; xl. 21. 1 Cor. viii. 13. Vorst. de Hebr. p. 737. All the Prophets, i. e. Prophecy as a whole, of all time, has spoken of Christ and His kingdom.

22. Μωϋσῆς μέν] Having said that the Prophets all speak of Christ, he next appeals to Moses, the giver of the Law; and proves that Jesus Christ is not contrary to the Law and the Prophets, but was preached by them, i. e. by all the Scriptures of the Jews whom he is addressing.

— ὡς ἐμέ] Deut. xviii. 15; i. e. as a man persecuted in childhood, and saved in Egypt; resisted by those whom He came to save, and even by some of his own household, and as confronting and vanquishing the false prophets of Egypt, and a Mediator with God; speaking to God face to face,—speaking as "the meekest of men," yet zealous for God; a worker of miracles; dividing the sea (a type of Baptism); giving water from the rock and bread from heaven (types of the Word and Sacraments); raising the serpent in the wilderness, as Christ gave Himself to die.

Like unto me, and yet greater than me (cf. Heb. v. 3—6); for ye shall hear Him in whatever He shall say to you; as He fulfilled the Levitical Law, and so took away that which was published by Moses, and therefore is greater than he.

23. ἐξολοθρευθήσεται ἐκ τοῦ λαοῦ] The LXX have here (Deut. xviii. 19) ἐγὼ ἐκδικήσω ἐξ αὐτοῦ.—ἐκδικήσω in the original is אֶדְרשׁ, from root דָּרַשׁ, exquisivit, 'I will require it of him;' which is explained here by the Holy Spirit speaking by St. Peter to be tantamount to—He shall be punished with death, he shall be cut off, ἐξολοθρευθήσεται,—a word familiar to St. Luke's readers from the LXX, where ἐξολοθρεύω occurs frequently for כָּרַת, excidit, Gen. xvii. 14. Exod. xii. 15. 19. Lev. xvii. 4. 9. 14, and passim. See Aben Ezra in Surenhus. p. 401.

St. Luke does not follow here the LXX exactly, nor the Hebrew, but he gives the sense. This is one example among many of the practice of the Holy Spirit in the New Testament giving an explanatory paraphrase of His own words in the Old. See on Matt. ii. 23.

24. ἀπὸ Σαμουήλ] Cp. 2 Sam. vii. 12—15.

CH. IV. 1. στρατηγὸς τοῦ ἱεροῦ] The officer of the Priest and Levites who kept guard at the Temple,—not a Roman functionary. See on Luke xxii. 4. The Romans do not appear, in the Acts, as Persecutors of the Apostles.

— οἱ Σαδδουκαῖοι] Who say there is no resurrection (Matt. xxii. 23. Acts xxiii. 8); and therefore foresaw that their own influence with the people would be impaired, if the Apostles succeeded in convincing them of the truth of the Resurrection in Christ. Hence their activity against the Gospel after the Resurrection. The High Priest and many of his assessors and associates were Sadducees. See v. 17. Cp. Joseph. Antiq. xiii. 9; xviii. 2.

Referring to a son of Annas, Ananus, who was afterwards High Priest, and a Sadducee, Josephus observes, that the Sadducees were distinguished above all his fellow-countrymen for cruelty in judicial causes,—περὶ τὰς κρίσεις ὠμοὶ παρὰ πάντας τοὺς Ἰουδαίους. (Joseph. xx. 9. 1.) Such were the judges before whom the Apostles were arraigned (see v. 17). This circumstance, and the fact that the Sadducees rejected the belief in all spiritual and Angelic agency, and in the doctrine of a future αὐτοὺς τὸν λαὸν, καὶ καταγγέλλειν ἐν τῷ Ἰησοῦ τὴν ἀνάστασιν τὴν ἐκ νεκρῶν· 3 καὶ ἐπέβαλον αὐτοῖς τὰς χεῖρας, καὶ ἔθεντο αὐτοὺς εἰς τήρησιν εἰς τὴν αὔριον· ἦν γὰρ ἑσπέρα ἤδη. 4 [a] Πολλοὶ δὲ τῶν ἀκουσάντων τὸν λόγον ἐπίστευσαν, a ch. 28. 24.

καὶ ἐγενήθη ὁ ἀριθμὸς τῶν ἀνδρῶν ὡσεὶ χιλιάδες πέντε.
5 Ἐγένετο δὲ ἐπὶ τὴν αὔριον συναχθῆναι αὐτῶν τοὺς ἄρχοντας καὶ πρεσβυτέρους καὶ γραμματεῖς ἐν Ἰερουσαλὴμ, 6 [b] καὶ Ἅνναν τὸν ἀρχιερέα καὶ Καϊάφαν b Luke 3. 2.
καὶ Ἰωάννην καὶ Ἀλέξανδρον, καὶ ὅσοι ἦσαν ἐκ γένους ἀρχιερατικοῦ. 7 Καὶ στήσαντες αὐτοὺς ἐν τῷ μέσῳ ἐπυνθάνοντο, [c] Ἐν ποίᾳ δυνάμει ἢ ἐν ποίῳ c Matt. 21. 23.
ὀνόματι ἐποιήσατε τοῦτο ὑμεῖς; 8 Τότε Πέτρος [d] πλησθεὶς Πνεύματος ἁγίου d ch. 7. 55.

Resurrection, may serve to account for what has been deemed incredible by some, viz. the obstinate infatuation of the Sanhedrim in continuing to persecute the Apostles after the miraculous interference of God in their behalf.

For another reason see below on v. 28.

Gamaliel the Pharisee is better disposed to receive that evidence in their behalf. See v. 17. 33, 34.

3. ἐν τῷ Ἰησοῦ] The truth of the Resurrection,
(1) in the case of Jesus Himself, and
(2) of all men through Him. 1 Cor. xv. 22.

3. ἑσπέρα] The miracle had been wrought about 3 P.M. See iii. 1.

4. ἐγενήθη] became.

— ὡσεὶ χιλιάδες πέντε] Here was a spiritual fulfilment of the prophecy contained in Christ's miracle on the mountain of Bethsaida, when He said to His Apostles, "Give ye them to eat." (Luke ix. 13. See Chrys.) Those who ate of the food provided by Him were about five thousand men,—ἄνδρες; cp. ἀνδρῶν here, and Matt. xiv. 21. Both miracles were wrought in the evening, Cp. Mark vi. 35.

He Who fed the bodies of the 5000 on the mountain, by the hands of His Apostles, now feeds the souls by an Apostolic Ministry with the bread of life from heaven, and He will always continue to do so. Cp. on John vi. 9. 13, and at end of the chapter.

5. ἐν] So A, B, D, E. Elz. εἰς.

6. καὶ Ἅνναν τὸν ἀρχιερέα καὶ Καϊάφαν] Why is Annas here called the High Priest, and placed before Caiaphas—who was High Priest?

The reason seems to be, that though Caiaphas was High Priest de facto, being intruded into the office by the civil power of Rome (see on Matt. xxvi. 3), yet Annas was High Priest de jure (see on Luke iii. 2), and was regarded as such ecclesiastically. Hence our Lord was taken to Annas first (John xviii. 13, where see note).

Hence also St. Luke designates Annas as the High Priest here and in his Gospel (iii. 2), at the same time that he mentions Caiaphas in both places with, and next after, Annas.

After the Crucifixion, and for many years, the Civil power of Rome seems to have done no overt act spontaneously against the Christian Church;

Pontius Pilate, though he was Procurator till A.D. 36, is never mentioned as a persecutor in the Acts (see Burton, Lectures, p. 32);

Indeed, what Tertullian records concerning the "Acta Pilati"—almost in conscience a Christian, "conscientiâ suâ Christiani,"—and the consequent proposition of the Emperor Tiberius to the Roman Senate to divinize Christ (Tertullian, Apol. 21, and Apol. 5. Euseb. ii. 2), is too well grounded to be rejected (see Bp. Pearson, Opera Post. i. 342, and ii. 21); and it derives some confirmation from the remarkable fact, which appears from the silence of St. Luke, that for some years after the Ascension, Christianity had nothing to fear from the Roman power.

The persecutions of the Apostles and Christians at Jerusalem and in Palestine were set on foot, and carried on, by the spiritual power of the Jewish Hierarchy. Thus the bitterness of the Jewish Rulers against Christ and His Church is brought out more strongly by the contrast of the comparative mildness of the Heathen power of Rome. No wonder that the agency of Rome was employed by God to destroy Jerusalem.

Annas was the Head of the Jewish Hierarchy. The nominee of Rome, Caiaphas, had, as such, a subordinate place. This seems to be the reason why in the Evangelical narratives of the Crucifixion, which was the act of the Roman power, instigated by the Chief Priest and people,—and could not have been done without the fiat of the Roman Procurator (John xviii. 31),—Caiaphas, the Roman High Priest, holds the chief place. But, after that act, the Roman power was quiescent, and the responsibility and guilt of persecution lay with the Jewish Sanhedrim; and Annas, the spiritual Head of the Nation, is mentioned first, as here.

Cp. notes on Luke iii. 2 and John xviii. 13. It was probably on account of the position of Annas, as Spiritual Head of the Jewish Hierarchy, that five of his Sons were appointed to the High Priest's office by those who desired to conciliate the Jews, and paid some regard to the original law of hereditary succession in that office.

Yet we read such observations as the following, in one of the most celebrated modern Commentaries on this passage: "Da damals nicht Hannas, sondern Kaiaphas regiernender Oberpriester war, so muss hier wie Luk. iii. 2 eine irrige Angabe zugestanden werden." (Meyer, p. 87.) As if St. Luke, the friend and companion of St. Paul, the scholar of Gamaliel, and commissioner of the Sanhedrim, to say nothing of St. Luke's inspiration, did not know who the High Priest was, and is to be set right by a modern Expositor! Can any good fruits be looked for from a system of exegesis grounded on such assumptions as these? The above extract is from an Exposition which professes to have been written in order to counteract the evils of Rationalism. What must be the poison, if such is the antidote?

6. Ἰωάννην καὶ Ἀλέξανδρον] "Joannes, Annæ, ut creditur, filius. Quartus autem est Alexander, ut videtur, Lysimachus, Philonis Judæi scriptoris celeberrimi frater. Josephus (Antiq. lib. xviii. c. 8, 1), φίλων ὁ προεστὼς τῶν Ἰουδαίων τῆς πρεσβείας, ἀνὴρ τὰ πάντα ἔνδοξος, Ἀλεξάνδρου τε τοῦ Ἀλαβάρχου ἀδελφὸς ὤν. De fratre ejus Hieronymus in Catalogo: 'Philo Judæus, natione Alexandrinus, de genere sacerdotum.' Fuit igitur Alexander de genere sacerdotum, et quidem Judæorum ditissimus; scilicet procurator fuerat Antoniæ matris Claudii imperatoris, ut testatur Josephus (Antiq. lib. xix. cap. 5) et templi Hierosolymitani novem portis argentum et aurum infudit, ut Josephus testatur (lib. v. Ἁλώσεως, cap. 5, 3)." Bp. Pearson.

7. ἐν τῷ μέσῳ] The Sanhedrim sate in a semicircle.

— ἐποιήσατε τοῦτο] done this; they will not say this miracle; they insinuated that it was done by some evil power, or by magic, as they had said of Christ's miracles (Luke xi. 15. John viii. 48), and so some said even in the fourth century. See Aug. de Con. Evang. i. 8 (quoted by A Lapide).

— ὑμεῖς] spoken with contempt, and therefore reserved as the last word of the sentence—you Galilæans!

8. Πέτρος πλησθεὶς Πνεύματος ἁγίου] Compare Peter a few days since in the Palace of the High Priest, thrice denying his Master from fear of prison and death, and now brought forth from prison, and confessing Christ before the same High Priest and the Sanhedrim, which had delivered Christ up to Pilate for crucifixion, and charging them with His murder; and declaring that the stone rejected by you, the builders of God's house, is become the Head of the Corner; nor is the salvation which is promised by God to be found in any other than Him, Who was crucified by you. How is this change to be accounted for? By inspiration—by the gift of the Holy Ghost. This is the only solution of this and of a vast number of other phenomena in Holy Scripture. Faith in the Holy Ghost, and in His Divine agency on the soul, makes those phenomena clear; without it they are unintelligible.

In the earlier Chapters of the Acts of the Apostles we see Peter and John on one side, and Caiaphas and Annas on the other. The former the Representatives of the Christian Church, the latter of the Jewish Hierarchy. There is a remarkable contrast between these two parties. May not Caiaphas and Cephas perhaps be from the same root כפף? At first Cephas had quailed before Caiaphas, but now that the Holy Ghost is given, Caiaphas cannot resist Cephas (v. 14); the one falls, the other rises. The reason is, because Caiaphas rejects the Corner Stone, and is bruised to pieces by it. (Matt. xxvi. 64. Luke xx. 18.) But Cephas is a lively stone, and is built upon it. (Matt. xvi. 18. 1 Pet. ii. 4.)

In like manner, Annas and Jo-hannes are from the same

εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, Ἄρχοντες τοῦ λαοῦ καὶ πρεσβύτεροι τοῦ Ἰσραήλ, [9] εἰ ἡμεῖς σήμερον ἀνακρινόμεθα ἐπὶ εὐεργεσίᾳ ἀνθρώπου ἀσθενοῦς, ἐν τίνι οὗτος e ch. 2. 24. & 3. 6, 16. σέσωσται, [10] e γνωστὸν ἔστω πᾶσιν ὑμῖν καὶ παντὶ τῷ λαῷ Ἰσραήλ, ὅτι ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ Ναζωραίου, ὃν ὑμεῖς ἐσταυρώσατε, ὃν ὁ Θεὸς f Ps. 118. 22. Isa. 28. 16. Matt. 21. 42. Rom. 9. 33. 1 Pet. 2. 7. ἤγειρεν ἐκ νεκρῶν, ἐν τούτῳ οὗτος παρέστηκεν ἐνώπιον ὑμῶν ὑγιής. [11] f Οὗτός g Matt. 1. 21. 1 Tim. 2. 5, 6. ἐστιν ὁ λίθος ὁ ἐξουθενηθεὶς ὑφ' ὑμῶν τῶν οἰκοδομούντων, ὁ γενόμενος εἰς κεφαλὴν γωνίας. [12] Καὶ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν ἄλλῳ οὐδενὶ ἡ σωτηρία· g οὐδὲ γὰρ ὄνομά ἐστιν ἕτερον ὑπὸ τὸν οὐρανὸν τὸ δεδομένον ἐν ἀνθρώποις, ἐν ᾧ δεῖ σωθῆναι ἡμᾶς.

[13] Θεωροῦντες δὲ τὴν τοῦ Πέτρου παῤῥησίαν καὶ Ἰωάννου, καὶ καταλαβόμενοι ὅτι
h Matt. 11. 25. 1 Cor. 1. 27. h ἄνθρωποι ἀγράμματοί εἰσι καὶ ἰδιῶται, ἐθαύμαζον, ἐπεγίνωσκόν τε
i ch. 3. 11. αὐτοὺς ὅτι σὺν τῷ Ἰησοῦ ἦσαν· [14] i τὸν δὲ ἄνθρωπον βλέποντες σὺν αὐτοῖς ἑστῶτα, τὸν τεθεραπευμένον, οὐδὲν εἶχον ἀντειπεῖν. [15] Κελεύσαντες δὲ αὐτοὺς
j John 11. 47. ἔξω τοῦ συνεδρίου ἀπελθεῖν συνέβαλον πρὸς ἀλλήλους [16] λέγοντες, j Τί ποιήσομεν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις τούτοις; ὅτι μὲν γὰρ γνωστὸν σημεῖον γέγονε δι' αὐτῶν πᾶσι τοῖς κατοικοῦσιν Ἰερουσαλὴμ φανερὸν, καὶ οὐ δυνάμεθα ἀρνήσασθαι· [17] ἀλλ' ἵνα μὴ ἐπὶ πλεῖον διανεμηθῇ εἰς τὸν λαὸν, ἀπειλῇ ἀπειλησώμεθα αὐτοῖς μηκέτι λαλεῖν ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι τούτῳ μηδενὶ ἀνθρώπων. [18] Καὶ καλέσαντες αὐτοὺς παρήγγειλαν αὐτοῖς τὸ καθόλου μὴ φθέγγεσθαι μηδὲ διδάσκειν k ch. 5. 29. ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. [19] k Ὁ δὲ Πέτρος καὶ Ἰωάννης ἀποκριθέντες εἶπον πρὸς αὐτούς, Εἰ δίκαιόν ἐστιν ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ ὑμῶν ἀκούειν μᾶλλον ἢ τοῦ
l ch. 22. 15. 1 John 1. 1, 3. Θεοῦ κρίνατε· [20] l οὐ δυνάμεθα γὰρ ἡμεῖς ἃ εἴδομεν καὶ ἠκούσαμεν μὴ λαλεῖν. [21] Οἱ δὲ προσαπειλησάμενοι ἀπέλυσαν αὐτοὺς, μηδὲν εὑρίσκοντες τὸ πῶς m ch. 5. 26. Matt. 21. 26. κολάσωνται αὐτοὺς, m διὰ τὸν λαόν, ὅτι πάντες ἐδόξαζον τὸν Θεὸν ἐπὶ τῷ γεγονότι. [22] Ἐτῶν γὰρ ἦν πλειόνων τεσσαράκοντα ὁ ἄνθρωπος ἐφ' ὃν ἐγεγόνει τὸ σημεῖον τοῦτο τῆς ἰάσεως.

n ch. 2. 44—46. [23] n Ἀπολυθέντες δὲ ἦλθον πρὸς τοὺς ἰδίους, καὶ ἀπήγγειλαν ὅσα πρὸς αὐτοὺς οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι εἶπον. [24] Οἱ δὲ ἀκούσαντες, ὁμοθυμαδὸν o 2 Kings 19. 15. ἦραν φωνὴν πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν, καὶ εἶπον, Δέσποτα, o σὺ ὁ Θεὸς ὁ ποιήσας τὸν root יָחַן (gratiosus fuit), but John is strong in the Grace of God, and conquers thereby.

---

9. εὐεργεσίᾳ ἀνθρώπου] The genitive of the object. See on Matt. x. 1, ἐξουσίαν πνευμάτων. Luke vi. 12, προσευχῇ τ. Θεοῦ.

10. Ἰησοῦ Χ.τοῦ Ναζωραίου, ὃν ὑμεῖς ἐσταυρώσατε] Think not that we desire to conceal His country or His death. Ye crucified Him, but He was raised by God, and He now works miracles from heaven. (Chrys.) He quotes the title on the Cross.

11. ὑμῶν τῶν οἰκοδομούντων] You the builders (τῶν οἰκοδόμων, A, B, E), the appointed Teachers of Israel. Cp. Matt. xxiii. 2, and John iii. 10, σὺ εἶ ὁ διδάσκαλος Ἰσραήλ.

— εἰς κεφαλὴν γωνίας] Cp. St. Peter's declaration in his Epistle (1 Pet. ii. 6—8).

12. ἡ σωτηρία—τὸ δεδόμενον] Observe the articles ἡ and τὸ, which find a proper place in a speech to the Rulers of the Jews, who confessed that man's salvation had been provided for by God, and that in His Name men might be saved. St. Peter teaches them that the means of that salvation are to be found in Christ, and in His Name alone, which is therefore declared to be Divine.

13. καταλαβόμενοι] does not seem to mean, "having perceived by their speech," but having ascertained from enquiry, or previous knowledge. See xxv. 25.

— ἰδιῶται] ἰδιώτης, properly a private person, as opposed to a public magistrate, or minister or professor of art or science, hence illiterate. Cp. 2 Cor. xi. 6. 1 Cor. xiv. 16. 23, 24. See Bentley's excellent remarks on the passage in Victor's Chronicon, "Sancta Evangelia tanquam ab idiotis Evangelistis composita reprehenduntur et emendantur." Disc. on Free-thinking, pp. 112—120, 8th ed. 1743.

Here is a proof of Inspiration. The Apostles and Evangelists were ἀγράμματοι καὶ ἰδιῶται. They themselves confess it. And yet, who ever spoke, or has written as they did?

14. τὸν δέ] τόν τε, A, B, E.

17. ἀπειλῇ ἀπειλησώμεθα] a Hebraism. See Isa. vi. 9. Exod. v. 12, and John iii. 29. Acts v. 28; xxiii. 14. Vorst, de Hebr. pp. 624, 625. The Hebraisms show that St. Luke has been studious to preserve the very words of the speakers. Cp. on Luke xxii. 15.

19, 20.] On this text, as defining the limits of Obedience to human Authority, see Bp. Sanderson, iii. p. 287; iv. pp. 80. 98. (De Conscient. Prælect. iv. and v.)

21. προσαπειλησάμενοι] having added threats.

23. ἀρχιερεῖς] Under this name seem to be comprised,—

(1) All who had held the office of High Priest.

(2) Also the Sagans or Deputies, the Treasurers and Chief Warders of the Temple. Lightfoot, i. pp. 911—918. Selden, de Synedr. iii. 8.

(3) The Heads of the Twenty-four courses of Priests, and all who were chosen into the Sanhedrim. Lightfoot, i. p. 439; ii. p. 109. And see on Matt. ii. 4.

24. ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἦραν φωνὴν πρὸς Θεόν] The circumstances here mentioned confirm the opinion that the primitive Church at Jerusalem had a common place of resort for united prayer. As soon as Peter and John are released, they come to their own people (πρὸς τοὺς ἰδίους), and immediately all join in prayer, and the place is shaken where they were assembled, and they are all filled with the Holy Ghost. See above, ii. 2. Williams, Holy City, ii. 507.

The refuge of the Church in the time of Persecution is Common Prayer. Cp. xii. 5.

One of the many incidents recorded in the Acts of the Apostles, by which the Holy Ghost teaches the Church her duty in all emergencies that may arise. This Book may, therefore, be called the sacred Chart and Compass of the Church, in her voyage over the sea of this world to the haven of Eternity.

— Δέσποτα] The Hebrew Adonai, Lord of the Universe. The God of the physical world is here invoked by the Church as one with the God of Grace; a refutation of the false notion which afterwards grew into a Heresy, in the hands of Marcion οὐρανὸν καὶ τὴν γῆν καὶ τὴν θάλασσαν, καὶ πάντα τὰ ἐν αὐτοῖς· 25 [p] ὁ διὰ στόματος Δαυὶδ παιδός σου εἰπών, Ἵνα τί ἐφρύαξαν ἔθνη, καὶ λαοὶ ἐμελέτησαν κενά; 26 παρέστησαν οἱ βασιλεῖς τῆς γῆς, καὶ οἱ ἄρχοντες συνήχθησαν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ κατὰ τοῦ Κυρίου καὶ κατὰ τοῦ Χριστοῦ αὐτοῦ. 27 [q] Συνήχθησαν γὰρ ἐπ' ἀληθείας ἐν τῇ πόλει ταύτῃ ἐπὶ τὸν ἅγιον παῖδά σου Ἰησοῦν ὃν ἔχρισας Ἡρώδης τε καὶ Πόντιος Πιλάτος σὺν ἔθνεσι καὶ λαοῖς Ἰσραήλ· 28 [r] ποιῆσαι ὅσα ἡ χείρ σου καὶ ἡ βουλή σου προώρισε γενέσθαι. 29 [s] Καὶ τὰ νῦν, Κύριε, ἔπιδε ἐπὶ τὰς ἀπειλὰς αὐτῶν, καὶ δὸς τοῖς δούλοις σου μετὰ παῤῥησίας πάσης λαλεῖν τὸν λόγον σου, 30 ἐν τῷ τὴν χεῖρά σου ἐκτείνειν σε εἰς ἴασιν, καὶ σημεῖα καὶ τέρατα γίνεσθαι διὰ τοῦ ὀνόματος τοῦ ἁγίου παιδός σου Ἰησοῦ.

31 [t] Καὶ δεηθέντων αὐτῶν ἐσαλεύθη ὁ τόπος ἐν ᾧ ἦσαν συνηγμένοι· καὶ ἐπλήσθησαν ἅπαντες τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος, καὶ ἐλάλουν τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ μετὰ παῤῥησίας.

32 [u] Τοῦ δὲ πλήθους τῶν πιστευσάντων ἦν ἡ καρδία καὶ ἡ ψυχὴ μία· καὶ οὐδὲ εἷς τι τῶν ὑπαρχόντων αὐτῷ ἔλεγεν ἴδιον εἶναι, [v] ἀλλ' ἦν αὐτοῖς ἅπαντα κοινά. 33 [w] Καὶ μεγάλῃ δυνάμει ἀπεδίδουν τὸ μαρτύριον οἱ ἀπόστολοι τῆς p Ps. 2. 1, 2.

q Matt. 26. 3.
r ch. 2. 23. & 3. 18.
s ch. 9. 27.
t ch. 2. 2, 4.
u ch. 2. 44. Rom. 15. 5, 6. 2 Cor. 13. 11. Phil. 2. 2. 1 Pet. 3. 8.
v ch. 2. 44.
w ver. 30. & 1. 8, 22. Luke 1. 48, 49.

---

and the Manichæans, who separated the One from the other, and made an opposition between them. Cp. S. Polycarp's Prayer at his Martyrdom, p. 620, ed. Jacobson, and Clem. Rom. i. § 33, pp. 119, 120.

25. ὁ—εἰπών] A, B, E read ὁ τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν διὰ Πνεύματος ἁγίου στόματος Δαβὶδ παιδός σου εἰπών. D has ὃς διὰ Πνεύματος ἁγίου διὰ τοῦ στόματος λαλήσας Δαβὶδ παιδός σου, and Iren. "qui per Spiritum Sanctum ore David patris nostri pueri tui dixisti,"—which may suggest what appears to be the true reading, ὁ διὰ Πνεύματος ἁγίου διὰ στόματος Δαβὶδ, τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν, παιδός σου εἰπών.

25, 26. Ἵνα τί—αὐτοῦ] verbatim from the LXX. Ps. ii. 1, 2, ἔθνη (the Gentiles), and λαοὶ (the Tribes of the Jews collected at the Passover and the Crucifixion), have no article here: they have none in the Hebrew.

25. ἐφρύαξαν] properly said of horses, and their fremitus or snorting. (Ammon., Suidas, Valck.) The Gentile world was typified by the untamed colt ridden by Christ. Matt. xxi. 2.

The word φρυάσσω is used by the LXX for the Hebrew רָגַשׁ, strepuit cum furore, tumultuatus est, and φρύαγμα is used for גַּאֲוָה, superbia, elatio.—φρυάσσεται = γαυριᾷ. (Hesych.) It expresses, therefore, rage and pride.

27. σ. γὰρ ἐπ' ἀληθείας] for in very deed. See x. 34. Luke iv. 25.

— ἐν τῇ πόλει ταύτῃ] Omitted by Elz., but found in A, B, D, E.

— παῖδα] servant. See note on iii. 13. At the same time (see Matt. xii. 18), there seems to be a happy accommodation in the word παῖς to a secondary sense, that of Son; especially in this passage, with reference to Ps. ii. 7. 12, "Thou art My Son; kiss the Son."

28. ποιῆσαι ὅσα—γενέσθαι] γενέσθαι not πεποιῆσθαι. God decreed the salvation of the World by Christ, but He did not command or approve the means by which that consummation was brought about. But He showed His infinite power and wisdom by eliciting the greatest good from the worst evil, and by making Satan himself, the Arch-Enemy of God and men, to be an instrument in advancing God's glory and the Salvation of Mankind. Cp. S. Leo (Serm. xvi. de Passione Christi, p. 142), who says—Did the sin of those who killed Christ arise from the Counsel of God? No—we must not so deem of divine Justice. Very different and altogether contrary was that which was foreknown in the malice of the Jews, and that which was fore-ordained in the Passion of Christ. "Impias furentium manus non immisit in se Dominus, sed admisit: nec præsciendo quid faciendum esset, coëgit ut fieret; nec egit ut hæc vellent, sed cessit ut possent; et sic usus est occæcatæ plebis insaniâ quomodo et perfidiâ traditoris quem ab immanitate concepti sceleris beneficiis est revocare dignatus," &c. Besides (as S. Leo observes), "Nec ipsis interfectoribus suis misericordiam denegavit; sed impiorum malum in bonum credentium commutavit."

Cp. Bp. Sanderson's Lectures on Conscience, Lect. ii. 7, "Deus utitur alieno malo in bonum, sed nunquam facit malum ut inde proveniat bonum; et omninò cavendum est, ne ejusmodi locutiones intelligantur ac si Deus malum aliquod antecedenter vellet, approbaret, aut eligeret, velut medium ex sui naturâ conveniens ad alicujus boni finis consecutionem." See above, ii. 23.

In all discussions on this and other similar texts we must not lose sight of certain great principles,

1. That God is the One Great First Cause.

2. That He wills that all should act according to the Law which He has given them.

3. That it is His Will that Man's will should be free. As Aquinas says, 1ma qu. 83, Art. 1 ad 3.

"Non hoc est de necessitate libertatis, quod sit prima causa sui ad quod liberum est; sicut nec ad hoc quod aliquid sit causa alterius requiritur, quod sit prima causa ejus. Deus igitur est prima causa movens, et naturales causas et voluntarias; et sicut naturalibus causis movendo, eis non aufert quin actus earum sint naturales, ita movendo causas voluntarias, non aufert quin actiones earum sint voluntariæ. Sed potius hoc in eis facit, operatur enim in unoquoque secundum ejus proprietatem."

30. ἴασιν—Ἰησοῦ] Seemingly a paronomasia. The Greek and Latin Fathers gladly availed themselves of the resemblance in sound between Ἰησοῦς and ἴασις (e. g. Cyril, Catech. x. Cp. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. ii. p. 130), as they did of that between πάσχα and πάσχω. See Matt. xxvi. 2. And indeed these allusions do not seem to be despised by Holy Scripture itself. Cp. Luke xxii. 15.

Below, in chap. ix. 34, we have the expression, Ἰᾶταί σε Ἰησοῦς, perhaps the very words uttered by St. Peter, who may have had a special satisfaction in combining them together, as having felt the healing comfort of his Saviour's love after his own fall. And the writer of the Acts, 'the beloved Physician,' may also have felt peculiar pleasure in connecting the name of Jesus with his own healing art, and in fixing on the memories of his Greek readers, by a happy play of words, the gracious assurance that Jesus is the true Physician both of body and soul.

Again, in x. 38 we read, Ἰησοῦς ὃς διῆλθεν, ἰώμενος πάντας.

31. τοῦ ἁγ. Πν.] So A, B, D.—Elz. Πνεύματος ἁγίου.

32.] See Bp. Sanderson's Sermon on Romans xv. 5, vol. i. p. 197, for an application of this text to the doctrine of Christian Unity.

— ἅπαντα κοινά] See ii. 44. They regarded themselves as one family, with one heart and one soul, with common needs and common joys and common sufferings. This is the perfection of that Unity in His Church for which Christ prayed (John xvii. 21), and it showed as in a pattern what all should aim to realize in spirit, though in this world it be not possible to exemplify it in the letter, as the history of the primitive Church itself shows, for even John the Apostle of Love had a house to offer to the Blessed Mary, and the Apostolic Epistles abound with precepts of almsgiving. And this unity of the primitive Church at Jerusalem is like a vision and foretaste of that perfect Love which will be the Life of the Church glorified in the heavenly Sion.

33. ἀπεδίδουν] were rendering (Matt. xxii. 21) their appointed testimony.

ἀναστάσεως τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ· χάρις τε μεγάλη ἦν ἐπὶ πάντας αὐτούς.
34 οὐδὲ γὰρ ἐνδεής τις ὑπῆρχεν ἐν αὐτοῖς· ὅσοι γὰρ κτήτορες χωρίων ἢ οἰκιῶν x ver. 37. ch. 5. 2. ὑπῆρχον, πωλοῦντες ἔφερον τὰς τιμὰς τῶν πιπρασκομένων, 35 x καὶ ἐτίθουν y ch. 2. 4. & 6. 1. παρὰ τοὺς πόδας τῶν ἀποστόλων· y διεδίδοτο δὲ ἑκάστῳ καθότι ἄν τις χρείαν εἶχεν.

36 Ἰωσὴφ δὲ ὁ ἐπικληθεὶς Βαρνάβας ἀπὸ τῶν ἀποστόλων, ὅ ἐστι μεθερμη-νευόμενον Υἱὸς παρακλήσεως, Λευίτης, Κύπριος τῷ γένει, 37 ὑπάρχοντος αὐτῷ ἀγροῦ, πωλήσας ἤνεγκε τὸ χρῆμα, καὶ ἔθηκε παρὰ τοὺς πόδας τῶν ἀποστόλων.

V. 1 Ἀνὴρ δέ τις Ἀνανίας ὀνόματι, σὺν Σαπφείρῃ τῇ γυναικὶ αὐτοῦ, ἐπώλησε a ch. 4. 34, 37. κτῆμα, 2 a καὶ ἐνοσφίσατο ἀπὸ τῆς τιμῆς, συνειδυίας καὶ τῆς γυναικὸς αὐτοῦ, b Luke 22. 3. & ver. 4, 9. καὶ ἐνέγκας μέρος τι παρὰ τοὺς πόδας τῶν ἀποστόλων ἔθηκεν. 3 b Εἶπε δὲ c Num. 30. 2. Deut. 23. 21. Eccles. 5. 4. Πέτρος, Ἀνανία, διατί ἐπλήρωσεν ὁ Σατανᾶς τὴν καρδίαν σου ψεύσασθαί σε τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, καὶ c νοσφίσασθαι ἀπὸ τῆς τιμῆς τοῦ χωρίου; 4 Οὐχὶ

---

34. κτήτορες χωρίων ἢ οἰκιῶν] They gave the price of their lands and houses—not the lands and houses themselves. Perhaps there was a reason for this—partly in the commission of Christ to the Apostles to go forth "into all the world," and partly in the knowledge derived from the prophecies of Christ, that wars and public commotions were about to arise in Judæa, and from a feeling that it was their duty to wean their affections from the things of the earthly Canaan, and to fix them on those of their heavenly inheritance. The zeal of the primitive Church is happily described by Arator, v. 389:

"—— turba perennem
Portatura crucem Dominumque secuta fidelem
Sprevit agros, habitura polos; hæc nempe facultas
Fortior est de parte magis conquirere totum, Et quæstum per damna sequi."

35. πόδας τῶν ἀποστόλων] At the feet. Cp. v. 2. Among the Jews sitting was the attitude of teaching; and the Apostles are thus represented as sitting in the chair of teaching, as the instructors of the Church. Cp. xxii. 3, παρὰ τ. πόδας Γαμαλιήλ. Mat. xxiii. 2, ἐπὶ τῆς Μωσέως καθέδρας, κ.τ.λ., and Luke ii. 46.

In giving to the Apostles they gave to Christ, thus fulfilling the prophecy of Psalm cx. 3. (Mede.) What a striking contrast to the case of Judas in Matt. xxvii. 3—10!

36. Ἰωσήφ] So A, B, D, E.—Ἰωσῆς, Elz.

— Βαρνάβας—Υἱὸς παρακλήσεως] The sense in which παράκλησις is here used is explained below, xi. 23, Βαρνάβας—παρεκάλει πάντας τ. π. τ. κ. προσμένειν τῷ Κυρίῳ. He was the Son of Exhortation (on this Hebrew use of Υἱός, see on Matt. ix. 15), and therefore his name is derived from בַּר נְבוּאָה, filius prophetiæ. Cp. xiii. 1.

It is also added there, where Barnabas is called a Prophet, that this name which is here rendered Υἱὸς παρακλήσεως was given him by the Apostles, probably at his baptism, soon after the descent of the Holy Ghost, when he was received into the Church of Christ. Perhaps also the word παράκλησις was adopted to mark his mission from the Paraclete; for it is said that he was a good man full of the Holy Ghost (xi. 24).

This may suggest the question whether new names, ὀνόματα καινὰ (cp. Rev. ii. 17; iii. 12), were not commonly given at Baptism to those who were received into the Church; and whether the word ὀνομάτων may not therefore be used (Acts i. 15) with special significance for members of the Church,—"Christian or baptismal Names."

Bp. Pearson here says: "Quando hic Josephus primùm fidem Christi amplexus, non docent Sacræ Literæ. Veteres autem eum unum ex LXX discipulis fuisse tradunt. Clemens Alexandrinus (Strom. lib. ii. c. 20), οὗ μοι δεῖ πλειόνων λόγων παραθεμένῳ μάρτυν τὸν ἀποστολικὸν Βαρνάβαν· ὁ δὲ τῆς ἑβδομήκοντα ἦν, καὶ συνεργὸς τοῦ Παύλου. Quod et in septimo Hypotyposeon, primò eum tradidisse testatur Eusebius (Hist. Eccles. ii. 1, unde et ipse i. 12), τῶν δὲ ἑβδομήκοντα μαθητῶν κατάλογος μὲν οὐδεὶς οὐδαμῇ φέρεται· λέγεταί γε μὴν εἷς αὐτῶν Βαρνάβας γεγονέναι.

"Sub hujus nomine extat Epistola tum Græcè tum Latinè ex MSS. eruta. Sed neque Græca neque Latina integra sunt. Apparet autem hanc epistolam eandem esse quam veteres in manibus habuerunt. Multa enim ex illa citant Clemens Alexandrinus, Origenes, et Autor Constit. Apostolicarum, Eusebius eam inter Apocrypha numerat; Nicephorus, inter eas scripturas quæ ἀντιλέγονται.

"S. Hieron in Catalogo: 'Barnabas Cyprius, qui et Joseph Levites, cum Paulo gentium Apostolus constitutus, unam ad ædificationem Ecclesiæ pertinentem epistolam composuit, quæ inter Apocryphas Scripturas legitur.' Et rursus in cap. xliii. Ezekiel: 'Vitulum autem qui pro nobis immolatus est, et multa Scripturarum loca, et præcipuè Barnabæ Epistola, quæ habetur inter Scripturas Apocryphas, nominat.' Nemo certe fuit qui hanc epistolam Barnabæ non tribuerit, neque in ea quidquam apparet quod eam ætatem non ferat." Cp. Pearson, Vind. Ignat. pp. 128, 186, 195, 585; Tillemont, Mémoires, i. p. 174 and p. 298; and Hefele, Patr. Apost. p. 1.

36, 37. Λευίτης—ὑπάρχοντος αὐτῷ ἀγροῦ] Cp. Numb. xviii. 20 with Numb. xxxv. 1—8. Jerem. xxxii. 17. The case of Barnabas is mentioned here separately as a peculiar one: he was a Levite, and so connected with the Jewish Hierarchy, and entitled to receive tithe. The sacrifices therefore that he made in embracing Christianity, and in contributing to the needs of his fellow Christians, were more than ordinary, and gained for him justly the title which he bore. Besides, his deference to the Apostolic office is an intimation that the ministry of the Levitical Priesthood was now "ready to vanish away" (Heb. viii. 13), and that the Apostles and their successors in the Christian Church were henceforth to be regarded as the true Priests of the Israel of God. His submission was blessed by God, when he himself became an Apostle (xiii. 2). And thus in his person the Levitical priesthood passed by a spiritual transition into the Christian Church.

CH. V. 1. Ἀνανίας ὀνόματι, σὺν Σαπφείρῃ τῇ γυναικί] As Adam with Eve his wife at the beginning.—"The woman is not without the man, nor the man without the woman" (1 Cor. xi. 11) in punishment for sin, or in blessing for obedience.

2. ἐνοσφίσατο] Something more than 'kept back part of,'—it signifies embezzled, purloined (see Tit. ii. 10), ἔκλεψεν (Gloss. Albert.), robbed another of what was his property; and here the Person defrauded is God. The offerings made were made to God, and He Who was despoiled was God. See v. 3.

It is observable, the same word had been used by the LXX to describe the sin of Achan, Josh. vii. 1, ἐνοσφίσατο ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀναθέματος, which was a sin of sacrilege.

Similarly, the sin of which Ananias was guilty was sacrilege, and so Augustine considers it: "Detraxit de pecuniâ quam voverat Deo" (Serm. 148), and Ammonius (in Caten. p. 85) calls it ἱεροσυλία, and so Chrys. here (Hom. xii.), and S. Jerome (Ep. 8), and Œcumen. here, and others. Cp. Mede's learned and instructive Essay on this narrative (Works, Book i. Dis. xxvii. p. 115), and Lord Clarendon "On Sacrilege" (Tracts, pp. 211—217, in Christian Institutes, iii. p. 405).

The substance of the comments above cited may be earnestly commended in connexion with the awful history recorded in this chapter, to the consideration of those persons who have been, or may be, tempted to be guilty of a like sin, by robbing God in "tithes and offerings" (Mal. iii. 8), or in the matter of Church Rates. (See on Matt. xvii. 27.)

3. εἶπε δὲ Πέτρος, Ἀνανία—χωρίου] Thus showing that he (Peter) was enabled by the Holy Ghost to discern the spirits of men. (See above, iii. 4.)

— ψεύσασθαί σε τὸ Πνεῦμα] 'fraude fallere' (Rosenm.); 'cum accusativo (Deut. xxxiii. 29. Ps. lxvi. 3. Job vi. 10; viii. 18), aliquantò plus notat quàm cum dativo' (Bengel). Why hast thou permitted Satan to enter thy heart, and to tempt thee to endeavour to defraud the Holy Ghost, Who is in us the Apostles, and to Whom thou liest in lying to us; and to purμένον σοὶ ἔμενε; καὶ πραθὲν ἐν τῇ σῇ ἐξουσίᾳ ὑπῆρχε; Τί ὅτι ἔθου ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ σου τὸ πρᾶγμα τοῦτο; οὐκ ἐψεύσω ἀνθρώποις, ἀλλὰ τῷ Θεῷ. 5 Ἀκούων δὲ ὁ Ἀνανίας τοὺς λόγους τούτους πεσὼν ἐξέψυξε· [d] Καὶ ἐγένετο φόβος μέγας ἐπὶ πάντας τοὺς ἀκούοντας ταῦτα. 6 Ἀναστάντες δὲ οἱ νεώτεροι συνέστειλαν αὐτὸν, καὶ ἐξενέγκαντες ἔθαψαν. 7 Ἐγένετο δὲ ὡς ὡρῶν τριῶν διάστημα, καὶ ἡ γυνὴ αὐτοῦ μὴ εἰδυῖα τὸ γεγονὸς εἰσῆλθεν. 8 Ἀπεκρίθη δὲ αὐτῇ ὁ Πέτρος, Εἰπέ μοι, εἰ τοσούτου τὸ χωρίον ἀπέδοσθε; ἡ δὲ εἶπε, Ναὶ τοσούτου. 9 Ὁ δὲ Πέτρος εἶπε πρὸς αὐτήν, Τί ὅτι [e] συνεφωνήθη ὑμῖν πειράσαι τὸ Πνεῦμα Κυρίου; ἰδοὺ, οἱ πόδες τῶν θαψάντων τὸν ἄνδρα σου ἐπὶ τῇ θύρᾳ, καὶ ἐξοίσουσί σε. 10 Ἔπεσε δὲ παραχρῆμα παρὰ τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐξέψυξεν· εἰσελθόντες δὲ οἱ νεανίσκοι εὗρον αὐτὴν νεκράν, καὶ ἐξενέγκαντες ἔθαψαν πρὸς τὸν ἄνδρα αὐτῆς. 11 [f] Καὶ ἐγένετο φόβος μέγας ἐφ' ὅλην τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, καὶ ἐπὶ πάντας τοὺς ἀκούοντας ταῦτα.

[d] Ps. 64. 9.

[e] ver. 2. Ps. 50. 18.

[f] ch. 2. 43. & 19. 17.

---

loin a part of the purchase-money of the possession dedicated by thee to God?

4. οὐχὶ μένον] 'We did not covet thy money.' "Si nolles vendere, quis te cogeret? Si velles offerre dimidium, quis exigeret totum?" (S. Aug. Serm. cxlviii.)

— τί ὅτι] 'What is the reason that?' Cp. v. 9, and Luke ii. 49.

— οὐκ ἐψεύσω ἀνθρώποις] Thou hast not told a lie to us, but to God, Whom thou hast endeavoured to defraud; thou hast not lied to us, but to the Holy Ghost in us; Θεὸς οὖν τὸ πνεῦμα, Caten. p. 85. Cp. Greg. Nyss. Orat. de Filio et Spiritu Sancto. Jerom. in Isa. lxiii. Ambrose, de Spir. Sancto, iii. c. 10, cited by Lorinus and A Lapide here, and Athanas. (de Incarn. p. 704). Greg. Naz. (p. 576), and Bp. Pearson on the Creed (Art. viii. p. 480), who says, "As certainly as the Apostles were men, so certainly was the Holy Ghost, in the esteem of St. Peter, God."

5. πεσὼν ἐξέψυξε] It is not said that St. Peter pronounced any sentence or imprecation upon Ananias (see Anonym. in Caten. p. 86, and S. Jerome's reply, Ep. 97, to the objections of Porphyry, who abused this Scripture as an occasion for charging the Apostle with cruelty), but that "he fell down and died." Almighty God was pleased to execute judgment without any human intervention. As Aug. says, "Spiritus Sanctus mendacem sic punivit." God thus punished robbery of Himself—Sacrilege. Porphyry's allegation (as Theophyl. observes) is an accusation against the Holy Ghost.

It is much to be regretted, that some Romish Divines, in their desire to claim the temporal sword for St. Peter, and for the Roman See, have given credit and currency to the objection of Porphyry. See note on Luke ix. 54, and cp. below, xiii. 11, the case of Elymas.

A Lapide here is an honourable exception: "Fuit mors Ananiæ plaga à Deo inflicta. Vox Petri fuit tantùm occasio et causa instrumentalis occisionis, eaque non physica sed moralis."

Bp. Pearson observes on this point, "Crudelem in hâc pœnâ S. Petrum fuisse clamabat Porphyrius, unde Veteres sæpe eam excusant.

"S. Hieron. Ep. 97, p. 792, 'Apostolus Petrus nequaquam imprecatur iis mortem, ut stultus Porphyrius calumniatur; sed Dei judicium prophetico spiritu annunciat, ut pœna duorum hominum sit doctrina multorum.'

"Ita S. Augustin. contra Parmenianum, lib. iii. c. 1. Cassian. et Isidor. Pelusiota et ante ipsam Porphyrii objectionem Origenes (Comment. in Matthæum, tom. xv. § 15), οὐ Πέτρον γε νομιστέον ἀνῃρηκέναι τὸν Ἀνανίαν, ἀλλ' ἐκεῖνος οὐκ ἤνεγκε τὸν ἔλεγχον, καθικομένων τῶν λόγων Πέτρου τῆς ψυχῆς αὐτοῦ, βασανιζόμενος τοσοῦτον ὥστε καὶ ἐκψῦξαι."

God also showed by this signal visitation that the Holy Spirit was indeed in St. Peter and the Apostles, and had enabled them to read the heart of Ananias, and to reveal his secret deeds; and so He established their authority in the eyes of the Church. If the artifice of Ananias and Sapphira had been successful, and had become known, then it would have been imagined that the Apostles had been guilty of falsehood and hypocrisy in claiming divine inspiration for themselves, and that our Lord's promise to them had failed (John xvi. 13), and so the foundations of the Church would have been broken down.

It is observable, that at the first promulgation of God's laws, any breach of them has been generally punished in a signal and awful manner, for the sake of example and prevention of sin. So it was now in the case of Ananias on the first effusion of the Holy Spirit, and at the first preaching of the Gospel, "non crudelitate sententiæ sed correctionis exemplo," says St. Jerome, Ep. 97. (Cp. S. Aug. c. Parmen. iii. 1, and Origen in Matth. Tract 8.) So it was in the case of Uzzah touching the ark when about to be placed on Mount Zion. (2 Sam. vi. 6—12.) So it was in the case of the man who gathered sticks on the Sabbath Day, at the first publication of the Decalogue. (Numb. xv. 32—36.) So, above all, it had been at the beginning, in the case of Adam and Eve.

Almighty God speaks audibly in His judgments upon sin once for all. He intervenes visibly in mercy, in order to prevent other transgressions, and so to save men's souls from sin and death. And having once spoken He holds His peace. He leaves these awful judgments—more awful because single—to be tests of men's faith, attention, and obedience; and for the most part He reserves subsequent transgressions for the Universal Judgment of the Great Day, of which these primary judgments have been a rehearsal, an earnest, and a warning. (See Chrys. here and Cassian.) Especially let the awful denunciations of Holy Scripture on the future punishment of liars be remembered here. (Rev. xxi. 8, 27.)

Whether Ananias and Sapphira repented in the hour of death, and whether they incurred death eternal as well as temporal by their sin (see Aug. l. c.), would be presumptuous to inquire. The mysteries of Divine Judgment are inscrutable. Here is an exercise of humility. This we know, that there will be degrees of punishment and happiness in another world, and that "every one will be equitably dealt with." (Cp. Butler.) "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?" (Gen. xviii. 25.)

6. οἱ νεώτεροι] called οἱ νεανίσκοι in v. 10, perhaps having an office in the Church. Cp. Blunt, p. 47. The word נְעָרִים = νεανίσκοι, is used for the military attendants of Abraham, Gen. xiv. 24.

— ἔθαψαν] Cp. v. 10, where it is said that Sapphira was buried by the side of her husband.

Why is it mentioned that they were buried?

(1) To show that they were really dead, and to anticipate an objection which scepticism would suggest that they only fell down in a swoon.

(2) To show that there was no feeling of personal vindictiveness on the part of the Apostles or the Church. A persecuting spirit in later times has mangled the dead body of those it has charged with heresy. It has even exhumed their bones (e. g. Wickliffe's) sleeping in the grave, and scattered them to the winds and waves. But Primitive Christianity warred not with the dead; it wound up the bodies even of Ananias and Sapphira in a funeral sheet, and committed them to a decent grave.

(3) On the Christian duty of burying the dead, see below, viii. 2.

9. οἱ πόδες] On this Hebraism, see Luke ix. 53. The Spirit in Peter hears the sound of their feet. St. Peter had read the heart of Ananias: he now foretells the future concerning Sapphira. In neither case does he execute judgment; but in both cases he shows that he is inspired by the Holy Ghost, and that his authority is ratified by God. See on v. 5.

11. ἐκκλησίαν] Hebr. קָהָל (whence Gr. καλέω, κλητοί, English call. See on Matt. xvi. 18). Here the Church of Christ is represented as already founded. Cp. above on ii. 47. Our Lord had spoken of His Church prophetically, and had used a word which St. Matthew represents by Ἐκκλησία to designate it (Matt. xvi. 18; xviii. 17). But it is not till after the day of Pentecost and the events recorded in the first four chapters of the Acts that the word appears to have been used to designate the Christian

g ch. 14. 3. & 3. 11.

12 g Διὰ δὲ τῶν χειρῶν τῶν ἀποστόλων ἐγίνετο σημεῖα καὶ τέρατα πολλὰ ἐν τῷ λαῷ· καὶ ἦσαν ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἅπαντες ἐν τῇ στοᾷ Σολομῶνος· 13 τῶν δὲ λοιπῶν οὐδεὶς ἐτόλμα κολλᾶσθαι αὐτοῖς, ἀλλ' ἐμεγάλυνεν αὐτοὺς ὁ λαός·

h ch. 2. 41.

14 h μᾶλλον δὲ προσετίθεντο πιστεύοντες τῷ Κυρίῳ, πλήθη ἀνδρῶν τε καὶ

i ch. 19. 12.

γυναικῶν· 15 i ὥστε κατὰ τὰς πλατείας ἐκφέρειν τοὺς ἀσθενεῖς, καὶ τιθέναι ἐπὶ κλινῶν καὶ κραβάττων, ἵνα ἐρχομένου Πέτρου κἂν ἡ σκιὰ ἐπισκιάσῃ τινὶ αὐτῶν. 16 Συνήρχετο δὲ καὶ τὸ πλῆθος τῶν πέριξ πόλεων εἰς Ἰερουσαλὴμ, φέροντες ἀσθενεῖς καὶ ὀχλουμένους ὑπὸ πνευμάτων ἀκαθάρτων· οἵτινες ἐθεραπεύοντο ἅπαντες.

k ch. 4. 1. & 2. 6.

17 k Ἀναστὰς δὲ ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς καὶ πάντες οἱ σὺν αὐτῷ, ἡ οὖσα αἵρεσις τῶν Σαδδουκαίων, ἐπλήσθησαν ζήλου, 18 καὶ ἐπέβαλον τὰς χεῖρας ἐπὶ τοὺς ἀπο-

l ch. 17. 7. & 16. 26.

στόλους, καὶ ἔθεντο αὐτοὺς ἐν τηρήσει δημοσίᾳ. 19 l Ἄγγελος δὲ Κυρίου διὰ

m John 6. 68.

τῆς νυκτὸς ἤνοιξε τὰς θύρας τῆς φυλακῆς, ἐξαγαγών τε αὐτοὺς εἶπε, 20 m Πορεύ-

---

Society then founded and constituted. Before that time we hear of ὀνόματα and ἀδελφοί (i. 15), οἱ πιστεύοντες (ii. 44; iv. 4). Cp. notes below, vi. 3; xi. 26. But henceforth the word ἐκκλησία is of frequent occurrence, viii. 1. 3; ix. 31. αἱ ἐκκλησίαι, xi. 22; xii. 1, &c.

12. στοᾷ Σολομῶνος] See above on iii. 2. The recollection of our Lord's Discourse delivered there may have supplied a special motive for resort thither. Cp. John x. 23.

13. λοιπῶν] Perhaps a temperate expression for the Rulers, as contrasted with the λαὸς, as in v. 26, which was more courageous in professing Christianity (see the next verse) than their superiors, who had more to lose. So it had been with regard to Christ. See John vii. 48. Cp. 1 Cor. i. 20. 1 Cor. ii. 8. A change for the better takes place vi. 7.

On the sense of κολλᾶσθαι, to attach oneself and to cleave to, see Luke xv. 15. Acts ix. 26; x. 28.

14. γυναικῶν] St. Luke is careful to mention the extension of the privileges of the Gospel to Women. See above, i. 14, and cp. Introductory Note to St. Luke, p. 132.

15. κατὰ τὰς πλ.] along the streets. Winer, § 49, p. 356.

— κραβάττων] So A, B, D, and other MSS., which seems to be preferable to κραββάτων (Elz.), for the first syllable in 'grabātum' is short. See Catull. x. 22.

— κἄν] at least. 2 Cor. xi. 16.

— Πέτρου ἡ σκιά] From what is said in the verse following it would appear most probable that cures actually ensued. The act itself of bringing the sick and laying them in the streets showed faith, and it might please God to bless such an act in a special manner at that time, in order to give additional authority to the doctrine preached by St. Peter and the Apostles; and to show that they were in an extraordinary degree filled with the Holy Ghost recently poured out upon them on the Day of Pentecost.

There was no cause for fear lest the people should regard the Apostles as sources of divine power, and not as channels: for Peter and the rest took special care to obviate and remove any such supposition. See iii. 13; xiv. 15. They assumed nothing to themselves, and ascribed all their efficiency to Christ. Indeed, these signs of a special outpouring of divine effluence were proofs of Christ's Ascension, and were manifestations of His glory. They showed that He had received gifts to give to men; and that He had sent what He promised. These miracles therefore were confirmatory of the faith and courage of the Apostles. They showed that though absent from them in person, Christ was present in power (cp. Matt. xxviii. 20). Christ, when on earth, had shed forth divine virtue on those who touched with faith the hem of His garment (Matt. ix. 20; xiv. 36. Mark vi. 56. Luke viii. 44). And now that He was glorified in heaven He works by the shadow of Peter, and by handkerchiefs from the body of Paul (Acts xix. 12). So (says Chrys.) He fulfils His own prophecy, that they who should believe in Him when glorified should do greater works than He had done on earth (John xiv. 12), and shows that they who touch Him by faith in His Word and Sacraments, duly ministered in His Church, may receive divine virtue from Him in their immortal souls.

Besides, the incident related in these two cases is a remarkable proof of the reality of the miracles wrought by the Apostles. The works done by them must have made a great impression to have produced such a result. They were not done in a corner. The sick were carried into the broad streets (πλατείας), and they were brought from the neighbouring cities and were healed.

16. πνευμάτων ἀκαθάρτων] Another remarkable testimony against the Sadducees, now assailing the Apostles.

(1) The Sadducees said that there is no Resurrection. (Matt. xxii. 23.) Peter preached it, and proved his doctrine by miracles.

(2) They said there was "no Angel." (Acts xxiii. 8.) Peter was delivered by one (v. 19).

(3) They said there was no Spirit. Peter was inspired by the Holy Spirit; defeated the lie of Ananias, whose heart was filled with the Evil Spirit (v. 3), and casts out unclean Spirits.

So mercifully did the Holy Ghost confute error and teach the Truth. The following summary of some recent comments on St. Luke's narrative of the liberation of the Apostles, may serve to show that the same Spirit which animated the Sadducees in their persecution of the Apostles, is still actively at work in endeavouring to invalidate the truth of the narrative which the Holy Ghost has vouchsafed to the Church of their sufferings and deliverances: "Der historische Bestand der wunderbaren Art und Weise dieser Befreiung ist nicht zu ermitteln. Luk. berichtet das Factum in sagenhafter Ausschmückung; jeder Versuch aber, die Umstände dieses Befreiungsactes auf einen blos natürlichen Hergang zurückzuführen (ein Blitzschlag, oder ein Erdbeben habe die Thür geöffnet, oder, wie Thiess, Eck, Eichhorn, Eckerm. u. Heinrichs wollen, ein befreundeter Mensch, etwa der Gefangenwärter selbst oder ein beherzter Christ, habe den Kerker aufgethan) alterirt ganz die Tendenz und das Wesen des Textes. S. Storr Opusc. III. p. 186 f. Auffallend bleibt, dass in den nachherigen Verhandlungen. V. 27 ff. nichts über diese Befreiung und deren Thatbestand vorkommt. Daraus ergiebt sich die Unvollständigkeit des Berichts, nicht aber die Ungeschichtlichkeit der Thatsache selbst (Baur, Zeller), welche, wenn sie eine tendenzmässige Erfindung wäre, gewiss auch im Verhöre mit angebracht worden wäre. Auch die scheinbare Nutzlosigkeit der Befreiung (denn die Apostel werden doch wieder festgenommen) zeugt nicht gegen ihre Wirklichkeit, da sie, zur Festigung und Erhebung des Glaubensmuthes der Apostel selbst gereichend, schon hierin eine genügende ethische Bestimmung hat; dahingegen die Annahme, Christus habe durch seinen Engel dem Sanhedrin seine Machtlosigkeit darthun lassen wollen (Baumg. p. 108), nur dann hinreichenden Grund hätten, wenn der weitere Bericht dahin lautete, dass die Richter hier wirklich das Eingreifen himmlischer Macht in der Art der Befreiung erkannt hätten. Lange apost. Zeitalt. II. 2, p. 68, führt die Erscheinung auf einen visionären Zustand zurück; die Apostel seien befreit worden 'im Zustande des Geniuslebens, des zweiten Bewusstseins.' Das ist eingelegt." (Meyer, p. 107.)

17. ἡ οὖσα αἵρεσις τῶν Σαδδουκαίων] they who were the sect of the Sadducees. On this use of ἡ οὖσα, see Kühner, G. G. 429. (Meyer.) The Sadducees were attached to Annas, in persecuting the Apostles, by their prejudice against the doctrine of the Resurrection. Ananias, afterwards High Priest, Son of Annas, and brother-in-law of Caiaphas, was a Sadducee. Joseph. Antiq. xx. 8: cf. Acts iv. 1; xxiii. 6.

18. δημοσίᾳ] The public prison; and therefore the evidence of the miracle of their release was more notorious. So the malice of the Evil One is overruled for the glory of Christ.

19. ἄγγελος Κυρίου] Lest it should be said that this was an earthquake, or other natural phenomenon, St. Luke adds the words which the Angel spake.

Lest also it should be thought by themselves or others that they either might not communicate with the officers of the Temple, or were in antagonism to them, the Angel commands them to go and preach there.

εσθε καὶ σταθέντες λαλεῖτε ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ τῷ λαῷ πάντα τὰ ῥήματα τῆς ζωῆς ταύτης. 21 n Ἀκούσαντες δὲ εἰσῆλθον ὑπὸ τὸν ὄρθρον εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, καὶ ἐδί- n ch. 4. 5, 6.
δασκον.

Παραγενόμενος δὲ ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς καὶ οἱ σὺν αὐτῷ συνεκάλεσαν τὸ συνέδριον καὶ πᾶσαν τὴν γερουσίαν τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ, καὶ ἀπέστειλαν εἰς τὸ δεσμωτήριον ἀχθῆναι αὐτούς. 22 Οἱ δὲ ὑπηρέται παραγενόμενοι οὐχ εὗρον αὐτοὺς ἐν τῇ φυλακῇ· ἀναστρέψαντες δὲ ἀπήγγειλαν 23 λέγοντες, Ὅτι τὸ δεσμωτήριον εὕρομεν κεκλεισμένον ἐν πάσῃ ἀσφαλείᾳ, καὶ τοὺς φύλακας ἑστῶτας πρὸ τῶν θυρῶν· ἀνοίξαντες δὲ ἔσω οὐδένα εὕρομεν. 24 o Ὡς δὲ ἤκουσαν τοὺς λόγους τούτους o ch. 4. 1.
ὅ τε ἱερεὺς καὶ ὁ στρατηγὸς τοῦ ἱεροῦ καὶ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς, διηπόρουν περὶ αὐτῶν, τί ἂν γένοιτο τοῦτο. 25 Παραγενόμενος δέ τις ἀπήγγειλεν αὐτοῖς, Ὅτι ἰδοὺ οἱ ἄνδρες, οὓς ἔθεσθε ἐν τῇ φυλακῇ, εἰσὶν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ ἑστῶτες καὶ διδάσκοντες τὸν λαόν. 26 Τότε ἀπελθὼν ὁ στρατηγὸς σὺν τοῖς ὑπηρέταις ἤγαγεν αὐτούς, οὐ μετὰ βίας, ἐφοβοῦντο γὰρ τὸν λαὸν ἵνα μὴ λιθασθῶσιν. 27 Ἀγαγόντες δὲ αὐτοὺς ἔστησαν ἐν τῷ συνεδρίῳ· καὶ ἐπηρώτησεν αὐτοὺς ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς 28 p λέγων, Οὐ παραγγελίᾳ παρηγγείλαμεν ὑμῖν μὴ διδάσκειν ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι p ch. 4. 18.
τούτῳ; καὶ ἰδοὺ, πεπληρώκατε τὴν Ἰερουσαλὴμ τῆς διδαχῆς ὑμῶν, καὶ βούλεσθε ἐπαγαγεῖν ἐφ' ἡμᾶς τὸ αἷμα τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τούτου. 29 q Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ q ch. 4. 19.
ὁ Πέτρος καὶ οἱ ἀπόστολοι εἶπον, Πειθαρχεῖν δεῖ Θεῷ μᾶλλον ἢ ἀνθρώποις.
30 r Ὁ Θεὸς τῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν ἤγειρεν Ἰησοῦν, ὃν ὑμεῖς διεχειρίσασθε κρεμά- r ch. 2. 24. & 3. 15.
σαντες ἐπὶ ξύλου· 31 s τοῦτον ὁ Θεὸς ἀρχηγὸν καὶ σωτῆρα ὕψωσε τῇ δεξιᾷ s Phil. 2. 9. H-b. 2. 10.
αὐτοῦ, δοῦναι μετάνοιαν τῷ Ἰσραὴλ καὶ ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν· 32 t καὶ ἡμεῖς ἐσμεν Luke 24. 47. t John 15. 26, 27. ch. 2. 4.
αὐτοῦ μάρτυρες τῶν ῥημάτων τούτων, καὶ τὸ Πνεῦμα δὲ τὸ ἅγιον, ὃ ἔδωκεν ὁ Θεὸς τοῖς πειθαρχοῦσιν αὐτῷ.
33 u Οἱ δὲ ἀκούσαντες διεπρίοντο, καὶ ἐβουλεύοντο ἀνελεῖν αὐτούς. u ch. 7. 54.
34 v Ἀναστὰς δέ τις ἐν τῷ συνεδρίῳ Φαρισαῖος, ὀνόματι Γαμαλιὴλ, νομοδι- v ch. 22. 3. δάσκαλος, τίμιος παντὶ τῷ λαῷ, ἐκέλευσεν ἔξω βραχὺ τοὺς ἀποστόλους ποιῆσαι,

---

21. συνέδριον — γερουσίαν] Concerning the συνέδριον, see Acts iv. 5—7; xxii. 8; xxiii. 6, and on Matt. v. 22, and Winer, R. W. B. ii. pp. 551, 552.

The γερουσία included πρεσβύτεροι (see iv. 8; xxv. 15), who were elected from each tribe, and were associated with the seventy of the Sanhedrim. See Selden, Rosenm., and Kuinoel.

23. φύλακας] Elz. adds ἔξω, not in A, B, D, E.

— πρό] A, B, D have ἐπί, which may be the true reading.

24. ὅ τε ἱερεύς] A, B, D, Vulg. and other Versions omit these words, perhaps rightly; ὁ ἱερεὺς occurs no where else in N. T. for ὁ ἀρχιερεύς.

— ὁ στρατηγὸς τοῦ ἱεροῦ] See Luke xxii. 52. Acts iv. 1.

28. παραγγελίᾳ παρηγγείλαμεν] Cp. on iv. 17, ἀπειλῇ ἀπειλησώμεθα.

— τῷ ὀνόματι τ.—τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τ.] "This name," "this man," the Priests falter and stammer, and do not venture to pronounce the Name of Christ.

It has been alleged (e.g. by Zeller. See above, v. 16) that it is incredible that, after the miracle wrought for the deliverance of the Apostles, the Sanhedrim should continue to persecute them. And thence an exception has been taken against the veracity of St. Luke.

This objection would invalidate the whole of the History of the Gospel, and of the Old Testament also;

For example, see the confession made by the Sanhedrim (John xi. 47), "this man doeth many miracles," and yet they who say this are conspiring to kill Him Who wrought them.

Consider also the stoning of St. Paul at Lystra (Acts xiv. 19), after the miracle he had wrought there.

The solution of the question is to be found in the power of Satan over the human mind when it resists the evidence of truth, and is abandoned by the Holy Spirit, and left to itself.

Besides, from the dominion then exercised by Satan in the world, and showing itself in lying wonders, the evidence from miracles was not so potent as might be supposed. The miracles of Christ and His Apostles were ascribed to the same agency as showed itself in Magic, Witchcraft, and Sorcery, even among the Heathen, and were confounded with their phenomena. (Cp. Blunt Lectures, p. 126.) See the prophecies of Christ and the Apostles as to the Latter Days.

Another reason has been suggested above, on iv. 2.

But why (it has been asked by Zeller) were the Apostles delivered from prison, if on the next day they were to be arrested and brought before the Sanhedrim? Was not the miracle in vain?

No; it was a part of the evidence that God was pleased to give to the Jews, and particularly to their Rulers, of the truth of the Doctrine preached by the Apostles. It was a probationary exercise of their faith. Doubtless, though some hardened their hearts, others were persuaded. And so the work of sifting of the Nation went on, till the wheat was made ready for the barn, and the chaff for the fire. Cp. Baumgarten, i. p. 121.

— καὶ βούλεσθε] The language of alarm, as Chrys. says, "Dost thou scourge [1], and yet fear? Insult, and yet tremble? Judge, and yet quake? So cowardly is sin."

He had forgotten that all the people had said (Matt. xxvii. 25), "His blood be upon us, and upon our children." (Bede.)

30. ξύλου] Hebr. עץ. Cp. x. 39. Gal. iii. 13.

31. ὕψωσε τῇ δεξιᾷ] You lifted Him up on the Cross (cp. John iii. 14), God raised Him to His own Right Hand. Cp. above, ii. 33.

33. διεπρίοντο] 'dissecabantur' (Vulg.), 'tanquam serrâ' = πικρῶς ἐχαλέπαινον (Gloss. Alb.).

34. Γαμαλιήλ] The Master of St. Paul (Acts xxii. 3). Gamaliel the elder, the grandson of the famous Hillel.

It is observable that three persons bearing this name, Gamaliel, are mentioned in the Talmud, and all bear the name of Rabban, a title given only to four other doctors in Jewish history, and all were Presidents of the Council. (See Lightfoot and Rosenm. Biscoe, p. 77.)

These circumstances strengthen what will be said concerning Theudas in the following note.

---

[1] In Caten. here, p. 93, where for Σὺ βατίζειν καὶ σὺ φοβῇ read Σὺ μαστίζειν (see v. 40); the confusion arose from the similarity of β and μ in the MS.

35 εἶπέ τε πρὸς αὐτούς, Ἄνδρες Ἰσραηλῖται, προσέχετε ἑαυτοῖς, ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀν-θρώποις τούτοις τί μέλλετε πράσσειν. 36 Πρὸ γὰρ τούτων τῶν ἡμερῶν ἀνέστη Θευδᾶς, λέγων εἶναί τινα ἑαυτὸν, ᾧ προσεκλίθη ἀνδρῶν ἀριθμὸς ὡς τετρα-κοσίων· ὃς ἀνῃρέθη, καὶ πάντες ὅσοι ἐπείθοντο αὐτῷ διελύθησαν, καὶ ἐγένοντο εἰς οὐδέν. 37 Μετὰ τοῦτον ἀνέστη Ἰούδας ὁ Γαλιλαῖος, ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις τῆς ἀπογραφῆς, καὶ ἀπέστησε λαὸν ἱκανὸν ὀπίσω αὐτοῦ· κἀκεῖνος ἀπώλετο, καὶ w Prov. 21. 30. Isa. 8. 10. Matt. 15. 13. πάντες ὅσοι ἐπείθοντο αὐτῷ διεσκορπίσθησαν. 38 w Καὶ τὰ νῦν λέγω ὑμῖν, ἀπόστητε ἀπὸ τῶν ἀνθρώπων τούτων, καὶ ἐάσατε αὐτούς· ὅτι ἐὰν ᾖ ἐξ ἀνθρώπων x ch. 9. 5. & 23. 9. ἡ βουλὴ αὕτη ἢ τὸ ἔργον τοῦτο, καταλυθήσεται· 39 x εἰ δὲ ἐκ Θεοῦ ἐστιν, οὐ δύνασθε καταλῦσαι αὐτό· μήποτε καὶ θεομάχοι εὑρεθῆτε.

y ch. 4. 18. z Matt. 10. 17. 40 y Ἐπείσθησαν δὲ αὐτῷ, καὶ προσκαλεσάμενοι τοὺς ἀποστόλους, z δείραντες παρήγγειλαν μὴ λαλεῖν ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, καὶ ἀπέλυσαν αὐτούς.
a Matt. 5. 10—12. Rom. 5. 3. 2 Cor. 12. 10. Phil. 1. 29. James 1. 2. 1 Pet. 4. 13—16. 41 a Οἱ μὲν οὖν ἐπορεύοντο χαίροντες ἀπὸ προσώπου τοῦ συνεδρίου, ὅτι ὑπὲρ τοῦ ὀνόματος κατηξιώθησαν ἀτιμασθῆναι· 42 πᾶσάν τε ἡμέραν, b ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ b 2 Tim. 4. 2. καὶ κατ' οἶκον, οὐκ ἐπαύοντο διδάσκοντες καὶ εὐαγγελιζόμενοι Ἰησοῦν τὸν Χριστόν.

VI. 1 Ἐν δὲ ταῖς ἡμέραις ταύταις πληθυνόντων τῶν μαθητῶν, ἐγένετο γογγυ-c ch. 9. 29. & 11. 20. σμὸς c τῶν Ἑλληνιστῶν πρὸς τοὺς Ἑβραίους, ὅτι παρεθεωροῦντο d ἐν τῇ δια-d ch. 4. 35.

---

36. Θευδᾶς] St. Luke has been charged with an historical error here (by Eichhorn, Credner, De Wette, Meyer, and even Neander), because it is related by Josephus (Antt. xx. 5. 1) that an insurrection was headed by Theudas, in the reign of Claudius and Procuratorship of Fadus, more than ten years after this speech of Gamaliel.

On the plea of this supposed error, others (Baur and Zeller) have proceeded to deny the historical veracity of the speech of Gamaliel altogether.

The inaccuracy would be more glaring,—if inaccuracy there were,—because it is asserted by Gamaliel that the revolt of the Theudas mentioned here by him was prior to "the days of the taxing," which took place only about ten years after the Nativity of Christ. (See on Luke ii. 2.)

In fact, if the allegation of inaccuracy were true, St. Luke must have committed an anachronism of more than thirty years.

But there is no ground for such a surmise. The circumstances of the two cases are different: Theudas here has only about 400 followers, who προσεκλίθησαν αὐτῷ—a very gentle expression—Theudas in Josephus πείθει τὸν πλεῖστον ὄχλον.

If the Pharisee Josephus is to be believed when he writes of one Theudas, why should the Pharisee Gamaliel not be believed when he speaks of another? The name Theudas was a common Hebrew one (see Origen, c. Cels. i. 6, and Wetstein here), from יָדָה, confessio. Two persons bearing that name are mentioned by Lightfoot here (ii. p. 657). Indeed it is probably either the same name as Thaddæus and Judas (see Lightfoot and cp. Mintert in v.); or, if it is a Greek name, it is identical with Θεόδωρος—a very common appellation. And if there were two Apostles at the same time bearing the name of Judas, and two also bearing the name of John, and if there were at least three persons of distinction, living nearly at the same time, bearing the name of the speaker himself, Gamaliel—why should any one be led, by the Critics above mentioned, to doubt the assertion, reported by St. Luke, that, in an age when such impostors were plentiful, there was more than one named Theudas within a space of forty years? Such doubts as these, however, have their use. They show, that there are many—of great reputation for critical acumen—who are in love with scepticism, and who doubt for doubting's sake. Their doubts are, therefore, of less value. They will have less weight with reasonable men. Thus Infidelity overleaps itself, and confirms the Truth.

— λέγων εἶναί τινα ἑαυτόν] Some MSS. add μέγαν (so also viii. 9) for λέγων εἶναι τὶς αὐτὸς μέγας. Very different was the language of Ignatius (ad Ephes. iii.), οὐ διατάσσομαι ὑμῖν ὡς ὤν τις.

— προσεκλίθη] This reading is authorized—though not literatim—by the best MSS., A, B, C, D, E, H, none of which have προσεκολλήθη, the reading of Elz.

37. Ἰούδας ὁ Γαλιλαῖος, ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις τῆς ἀπογραφῆς] Judas is called here a Galilæan, but Josephus (Ant. xviii. 1. 1) calls him ἄνδρα Γαυλανίτην. And if that were the only passage of Josephus in which Judas was mentioned, St. Luke would, doubtless, have been charged with an inaccuracy here also by some. But, fortunately, Judas is mentioned in another place by Josephus, and there he is called a Galilæan (Joseph. Ant. xx. 5. 2. B. J. ii. 8. 1).

Similarly, if Josephus had written more fully on the times preceding Judas, doubtless he would have mentioned another Theudas. See v. 36. In the present case, Gamaliel and St. Luke are confirmed by Josephus (Ant. xviii. 1. 1; xx. 5. 2. B. J. ii. 9. 1), and St. Luke's words "in the days of the taxing," are happily explained by the fact recorded by the Jewish Historian, that, in the presidency of Quirinius, A.D. 6, when the Taxing, which had been only an ἀπογραφή, or Enrolment of names or Census at the time of the Nativity (see on Luke ii. 2), was followed up by an ἀποτίμησις, or levying of imposts and rates in money on the persons and property registered, Judas of Galilee (as he is called here and by Josephus, Ant. xviii. 1. 6, and xx. 5. 2), or Gaulanites (of Gamala, on S.E. of the sea of Galilee), arose in revolt, and said that "the ἀποτίμησις brought with it manifest slavery" on the people of God from a heathen power; and he excited the people to rise in defence of their freedom and religion.

The words of Josephus (Ant. xviii. 1. 1) are, παρῆν Κυρήνιος εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν, προσθήκην τῆς Συρίας γενομένην, ἀποτιμησόμενος αὐτῶν τὰς οὐσίας . . . οἱ δὲ, καίπερ τὸ κατ' ἀρχὰς ἐν δεινῷ φέροντες τὴν ἐπὶ ταῖς ἀπογραφαῖς ἀκρόασιν ὑποκατέβησαν . . . . καὶ ἀπετίμων χρήματα. Ἰούδας δὲ, Γαυλανίτης ἀνὴρ . . . ἠπείγετο ἐπ' ἀποστάσει, κ.τ.λ.

41. μὲν οὖν] A very frequent formula in the Acts of the Apostles, with which the Author sums up what he has to say on the topic in hand, and prepares his readers for a transition to something else. See viii. 4; ix. 31; xi. 19; xv. 3; xvi. 5.

— ὑπὲρ τοῦ ὀνόματος] So A, B, C, D, and other MSS. Elz. adds αὐτοῦ. A remarkable expression—"in behalf of the NAME." Cp. v. 28. The NAME of JESUS in the Acts of the Apostles is what the NAME of JEHOVAH is in the Old Testament. See ii. 38; iii. 6. 16; iv. 10. 12. 30. Cp. ἡ ὁδός, the WAY, ix. 2; xix. 9.

42. κατ' οἶκον] in their private oratory. See above, on ii. 46.

— Ἰησοῦν τὸν Χριστόν] 'Jesus the Christ;' i. e. they preached Him as such.

CH. VI. 1. γογγυσμός] An example of evil made an occasion of good. The Church, guided by the Holy Spirit, grows by danger and difficulty. (Chrys.) "Ecclesiæ proprium est, ut vincat, cùm læditur." (Hilary, de Trin. vii.)

A prelude of Church-History. "Persecutiones primùm passa est Ecclesia; deinde schismata." (Lorin.)

— τῶν Ἑλληνιστῶν] Not Gentiles (Œcumen.), but Jews of the various διασπορά mingled with the Gentiles in Asia and Egypt (see above, on ii. 9, and below, ix. 29, and John xii. 20), and who spoke the Greek tongue, Ἑλληνιστὶ φθεγγόμενοι (Chrys., who contrasts them with the βαθεῖς Ἑβραῖοι), and did not use the original Hebrew Bible, but the Septuagint Version of the Old κονίᾳ τῇ καθημερινῇ αἱ χῆραι αὐτῶν. 2 Προσκαλεσάμενοι δὲ οἱ δώδεκα τὸ πλῆθος τῶν μαθητῶν εἶπον, Οὐκ ἀρεστόν ἐστιν ἡμᾶς καταλείψαντας τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ διακονεῖν τραπέζαις. 3 Ἐπισκέψασθε οὖν, ἀδελφοί, ἄνδρας ἐξ ὑμῶν [e] μαρτυρουμένους ἑπτά, πλήρεις Πνεύματος ἁγίου καὶ σοφίας, οὓς καταστήσωμεν ἐπὶ τῆς χρείας ταύτης· 4 [f] ἡμεῖς δὲ τῇ προσευχῇ καὶ τῇ διακονίᾳ τοῦ λόγου προσκαρτερήσομεν. 5 [g] Καὶ ἤρεσεν ὁ λόγος ἐνώπιον παντὸς τοῦ πλήθους· καὶ ἐξελέξαντο Στέφανον, ἄνδρα [h] πλήρη πίστεως καὶ Πνεύματος ἁγίου, καὶ [i] Φίλιππον, καὶ Πρόχορον, καὶ Νικάνορα, καὶ Τίμωνα, καὶ Παρμενᾶν, καὶ Νικόλαον e ch. 16. 2. 1 Tim. 3. 7, 8, 10. f 1 Tim. 4. 15.

g ch. 8. 5, 26. & 21. 8.
h ch. 11. 24.
i ch. 8. 5, 26. & 21. 8.

Testament. See Grot. and Valck., and Glass., Phil. S. p. 149, and particularly Lightfoot's excellent note here (ii. pp. 658—662), in which he gives numerous examples of rivalries and jealousies on the part of the Ἑβραῖοι, disparaging the Hellenistic language, literature, and population. (Cp. John vii. 35, also Biscoe, pp. 85—91.)

On the other hand, some of the most learned Hellenistic Jews (e. g. Philo) did not know Hebrew. Cp. Howson, i. pp. 47. 83.

— τοὺς Ἑβραίους] The Jews specially of Palestine, who spoke the Syro-Chaldaic tongue, and read the Scriptures in Hebrew or in Chaldaic paraphrases, and who claimed to themselves special privileges on account of their Hebrew extraction. Cp. 2 Cor. xi. 22, Ἑβραῖοί εἰσι; κἀγώ. Phil. iii. 5, Ἑβραῖος ἐξ Ἑβραίων.

2—6. προσκαλεσάμενοι οἱ δώδεκα τὸ πλῆθος] A pattern of the true principles of Church-Polity. The Twelve convene the πλῆθος, or People, and propose what is to be done; the People approve the proposal (v. 5), and elect seven persons, who are presented to the Apostles, and ordained by them. Cp. Hooker, Eccl. Polity, VIII. vii.

— οἱ δώδεκα] The Twelve Apostles therefore were still at Jerusalem. Cp. viii. 1.

2. οὐκ ἀρεστόν] "non est placitum" (Pagnin.), "non placet" (Rosenm.); the Apostles omit ἡμῖν in modesty. Cf. v. 5, ἤρεσεν, and xii. 3, and John viii. 29.

— τραπέζαις] Not for money-changing (as Matt. xxi. 12. Luke xix. 23), but public tables of the Church; for εἶχον ἅπαντα κοινά (ii. 44; iv. 32), at which the widows were fed. Cp. the use of τράπεζα, Acts xvi. 34. 1 Cor. x. 21. The daily ministration did not consist in distributing money, but food.

It is probable that the Holy Eucharist was administered at these daily repasts. See Bp. Pearson here, who observes that these τράπεζαι were partly common and also sacred: "hoc est, in communi convictu sacramentum Eucharistiæ celebrabant."

3—6. ἐπισκέψασθε οὖν — καὶ προσευξάμενοι ἐπέθηκαν αὐτοῖς τὰς χεῖρας] Up to this time there were two Orders of Ministers in the Church,—ἀπόστολοι καὶ πρεσβύτεροι (see on Luke x. 1); now, under the direction of the Holy Ghost, the Apostles institute a third—that of Deacons.

The institution of this Order arose from an occasion of a secular kind, though not altogether so; for the τράπεζαι were in some respects sacred (see on v. 2); and, as Bp. Pearson here observes, the office to which these seven were appointed was not only œconomical but ecclesiastical. They were chosen and ordained to a sacred function. Men full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom were chosen (v. 3), and they were ordained with prayer and laying on of hands of the Apostles (v. 6); and having been so chosen and ordained, they performed the sacred functions of baptizing and preaching the Word (Acts viii. 36. 38), and they are distinguished from the Apostles in that they could not administer Confirmation (viii. 14, 15). See also Dr. Whitby's note here, p. 440.

On the necessity of the Order of Deacons, as well as of Bishops and Presbyters, to the due constitution of a Church, S. Ignatius says, ad Trallianos 3, πάντες ἐντρεπέσθωσαν τοὺς διακόνους . . . καὶ τὸν ἐπίσκοπον . . . τοὺς δὲ πρεσβυτέρους χωρὶς τούτων ἐκκλησία οὐ καλεῖται.

These Seven are not here called by the name which the Church in, and ever since, the time of the Apostles, has assigned to the third Order of Ministers, viz. the name of Deacons.

But this is according to the ordinary manner of the writer of the Acts of the Apostles. We do not hear of the imposition of the word Ecclesia on the Society of believers (see above, ii. 47; v. 11; and on the word χριστιανοί, xi. 26). But the Society is formed first, and then a name (not a new word, but one already in use in the Greek language) is used in speaking of it.

So it was with all the three orders in the Church. First the thing existed; there was no display made in giving it a name—but a word is used to describe the thing, as already received and practised in the Church. A striking instance of this may be seen in the first mention of πρεσβύτεροι, xi. 30, where we find that they have been already installed, and were exercising authority in the Church, before we have ever heard of their name.

So it is here. Seven men are appointed, and it is said, not without some prophetic intimation of their future name, that their office is διακονεῖν, (v. 2) διακονεῖν τραπέζαις. The manner of their election and ordination is carefully described; their functions and acts are recorded. And so the matter rests for a time. But when we come to read the Epistles of St. Paul we find an order of the Church in well-defined existence, and with functions fully recognized—and that Order is there called, by a name then generally known, the Order of Deacons (Phil. i. 1. 1 Tim. iii. 8. 12), and that Order can be traced downward from those Epistles through the writings of the early Fathers, e. g. Ignat. Eph. 2, Mag. 2, Trall. 2, where he says that "Deacons are not merely ministers of food and drink, but servants of the Church of God;" Philad. init. and 10, 11; Polyc. Phil. 5; Mart. Ignat. 3; Justin M. Apol. ii. p. 92; Origen in Matt. xxi., who says, "we learn from the Acts of the Apostles that Deacons preside over the Tables of the Church." Cp. Basil, ii. 306, περὶ διακόνων. Jerome, ad Evangel. Epist. 101, p. 803; Tertullian, de fugâ, c. 11: S. Cyprian, Ep. 65. See Bingham, Book ii. chap. xv. and the remarks of Hughes, Dissert. Proœm. in Chrys. de Sacerdot. p. lxxi.

No other time has ever been assigned for the appointment of Deacons than the occasion which is described in this chapter, and which has been regarded from ancient times as the date of their institution. See for example, S. Iren. i. 27, who calls Nicolas one of the Seven "qui primi ad diaconium ab Apostolis ordinati sunt." As Bp. Pearson says here, "ἀπὸ τοῦ διακονεῖν dicti sunt διάκονοι, de quibus sæpe in Epistolis Apostolicis legimus; quorum officium nullibi quàm in hoc loco (Act. vi. 1) legitur institutum. Ut autem hi septem viri Apostolis adjuncti sunt in procurando ministerio quotidiano, ita in primitivâ Ecclesiâ Diaconi semper Episcopis Apostolorum successoribus adjuncti sunt."

Accordingly the CHURCH of ENGLAND, which declares that "it is evident unto all men, diligently reading the Holy Scripture and ancient Authors, that from the Apostles' time there have been these Orders in Christ's Church,—Bishops, Priests, and Deacons" (Preface to the Ordinal), says, in the heading of this chapter in the Authorized Version, that "the Apostles appoint the office of deaconship to seven chosen men, of whom Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, is one;" and in her office for the Ordering of Deacons she says, that "God did inspire the Apostles to choose into the Order of Deacons the first martyr St. Stephen with others;" and she appoints the beginning of this chapter of the Acts to be read as an Epistle at the Ordering of Deacons. Cp. Hooker, V. lxxviii. 5, and Bp. Andrewes, Serm. iii. p. 66, on Acts ii. 42, and Letter to De Moulin, p. 168.

3. ἑπτά] Not that the number of Deacons was to be limited to seven (cf. Euseb. vi. 43), but probably as being a sacred number, and perhaps as indicating the completion of the Ecclesiastical Orders; and, with reference also to the Sevenfold gifts of the Spirit (Isa. xi. 2).

5. Στέφανον, κ.τ.λ.] The names here of the Seven are Hellenistic, and show a deference to the desires and needs of the Ἑλληνισταί (v. 1).

St. Irenæus (iii. 12) says that "Stephanus electus est ab Apostolis primus Diaconus," and S. Aug. (Serm. 300) observes that St. Stephen is named first among the Deacons, "Sicut inter Apostolos Petrus"—a significant intimation of his view of the nature of St. Peter's Primacy.

— Φίλιππον] The Evangelist, Acts xxi. 8. Cp. viii. 5, 6. 12. 26—40. Tillemont, ii. p. 30. 226.

The Acts of the two first-mentioned Deacons, Stephen and Philip, are hereafter described in this book (chaps. vi., vii., and viii.) as specimens of what was done by the Diaconate in primitive times, and as an example to Deacons of all times; in the same way as the Acts of the two Apostles, Peter and Paul, are described in this Book as specimens and examples also.

— Νικόλαον] Holding the last place in the catalogue, and προσήλυτον Ἀντιοχέα, 6 [k] οὓς ἔστησαν ἐνώπιον τῶν ἀποστόλων· καὶ προσευξάμενοι ἐπέθηκαν αὐτοῖς τὰς χεῖρας.

7 [l] Καὶ ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ ηὔξανε, καὶ ἐπληθύνετο ὁ ἀριθμὸς τῶν μαθητῶν ἐν Ἰερουσαλὴμ σφόδρα, πολύς τε ὄχλος τῶν ἱερέων ὑπήκουον τῇ πίστει.

8 Στέφανος δὲ πλήρης χάριτος καὶ δυνάμεως ἐποίει τέρατα καὶ σημεῖα μεγάλα ἐν τῷ λαῷ. 9 Ἀνέστησαν δέ τινες τῶν ἐκ τῆς συναγωγῆς τῆς λεγομένης Λιβερτίνων καὶ Κυρηναίων καὶ Ἀλεξανδρέων, καὶ τῶν ἀπὸ Κιλικίας καὶ Ἀσίας, συζητοῦντες τῷ Στεφάνῳ· 10 [m] καὶ οὐκ ἴσχυον ἀντιστῆναι τῇ σοφίᾳ καὶ τῷ πνεύματι ᾧ ἐλάλει. 11 [n] Τότε ὑπέβαλον ἄνδρας λέγοντας, Ὅτι ἀκηκόαμεν αὐτοῦ λαλοῦντος ῥήματα βλάσφημα εἰς Μωϋσῆν καὶ τὸν Θεόν· 12 συνεκίνησάν τε τὸν λαὸν καὶ τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους καὶ τοὺς γραμματεῖς. Καὶ ἐπιστάντες συνήρπασαν αὐτὸν, καὶ ἤγαγον εἰς τὸ συνέδριον, 13 ἔστησάν τε μάρτυρας ψευδεῖς λέγοντας, Ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος οὐ παύεται ῥήματα λαλῶν κατὰ τοῦ τόπου τοῦ ἁγίου καὶ τοῦ νόμου· 14 [o] ἀκηκόαμεν γὰρ αὐτοῦ λέγοντος, Ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος οὗτος καταλύσει τὸν τόπον τοῦτον, καὶ ἀλλάξει τὰ ἔθη ἃ παρέδωκεν ἡμῖν Μωϋσῆς. 15 Καὶ ἀτενίσαντες εἰς αὐτὸν ἅπαντες οἱ καθεζόμενοι ἐν τῷ συνεδρίῳ [p] εἶδον τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ ὡσεὶ πρόσωπον ἀγγέλου.

VII. 1 Εἶπε δὲ ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς, εἰ ἄρα ταῦτα οὕτως ἔχει; Ὁ δὲ ἔφη, Ἄνδρες

k ch. 8. 17. & 13. 3.

l ch. 12. 24. & 19. 20. John 12. 42.

m Luke 21. 15.

n 1 Kings 21. 10, 13. Matt. 26. 59, 60.

o ch. 25. 8. Dan. 9. 26.

p Exod. 34. 30, 35.

---

charged with heresy and licentiousness by S. Irenæus (i. 27), S. Hippol. (Philosophumena, p. 259), and by Tertullian, S. Hilary, S. Jerome, and others. See Tillemont, Mémoires, ii. 20 and 223, and identified by them with the leader of the Nicolaitans, Rev. ii. 6. 14, 15.

It has been supposed by some that the word Nicolaitan in the Apocalypse is only a Greek accommodation to the Hebrew Balaam, בִּלְעָם, from root בָּלַע, dominatus est, or יָבַל, devoravit, and עָם, populus. The charges against Nicolas have been denied by Clem. Alex. Strom. iii. p. 436. Cp. Euseb. iii. 29.

If they are true, then the case of the last in the list of the Seven Deacons may convey similar instruction to that suggested by the last in the list of the Twelve Apostles. See on Matt. x. 4.

— προσήλυτον] Hence it is clear that Proselytes as well as born Jews were now admitted into the Church. It is probable that St. Luke himself was also "a Proselyte of Antioch."

On the providential dispensation traceable in the existence of the class of Proselytes of the Gate, as a preparatory provision for the extension of the Gospel, see the excellent remarks in Bp. Pearson's Concio, p. 32.

6. ἐπέθηκαν α. τ. χεῖρας] "Ordination" (says Ammon.) "is accompanied with Prayer and Laying-on of hands, and so the dignity of the Diaconate was given at the beginning; and this custom is still observed."

They were ordained with Prayer. Ordination consists in this. The hand of him who ordains is laid upon the head of him who is to be ordained; but the whole effect of the act is from God. (Chrys.)

"Precibus impositio manuum accedebat, more Judæorum (Num. xxvii. 23), ut demonstrarent δεικτικῶς pro quo precarentur, et cui bona apprecarentur, et quem sisterent Deo. Hinc fluxit ille ritus, quem Græci χειροτονίαν, Latini Ordinationem vocant. Quod enim hic fecerunt Apostoli, idem Episcopi postea, tum in Presbyteris, tum in Diaconis, ordinandis." (Rosenmüller.)

7. ὁ λόγος ηὔξανε] Good elicited from evil. There had been a murmuring (v. 1), but it was made the occasion of fresh growth in the Church. Such is the History of the Church, guided by the Holy Ghost. She derives strength from opposition. One of the most instructive characteristics of the Acts of the Apostles is its frequent record of the Victories achieved by her over evil and from it.

— ὄχλος τῶν ἱερέων] The number of Priests who returned from Babylon was 4289 (Ezra ii. 36); it would propably be greater now. (Alford.)

8. χάριτος] So A, B, D, and others. Elz. πίστεως.

9. Λιβερτίνων] The Talmudists reckon 480 different Synagogues at Jerusalem. Lightfoot, i. p. 362; ii. p. 664.

St. Luke distinguishes the name of this Synagogue from the following names which are geographical, by prefixing the words τῆς λεγομένης. If the word Libertini had been designed, as some suppose, to describe the inhabitants of a country, he would hardly have described them as he does. The Λιβερτῖνοι, libertini, were Jewish freedmen of Rome and Italy, Ῥωμαῖοι ἀπελευθερωθέντες (Chrys.), descendants of some who had been carried away captive to Rome by Pompey. See Philo, legat. ad Caium, ii. p. 568, who mentions many Jews inhabiting the Transtiberine region at Rome; and adds that Ῥωμαῖοι ἦσαν οἱ πλείους ἀπελευθερωθέντες. Tacitus, Annal ii. 85, speaks of "quatuor Millia libertini generis, Judaicâ superstitione infecta." Cp. below, xviii. 2; xxviii. 17.

— Κυρηναίων καὶ Ἀλεξανδρέων] A fourth part of the population of Cyrene consisted of Jews (Joseph. Antt. xiv. 7, 2; xvi. 6, 1), and three of the five districts of Alexandria were occupied by them. Joseph. Ant. xiv. 7, 2; xiv. 10. 1; xix. 5, 2. (Meyer.)

Perhaps we may explain the presence of these Hellenists at Jerusalem at this time, by the supposition that it was now some great Festival,—perhaps the Passover,—when they came up to Jerusalem; and when many of the Jews would be in a more excited state of zeal for the Law, and against the Gospel.

— τῶν ἀπὸ Κιλικίας] Perhaps Saul of Tarsus, in Cilicia (xxi. 39; xxii. 3), was among them. Cp. Wieseler, p. 63.

— Ἀσίας] namely, Proconsular Asia or Lydia, and its neighbourhood, of which Ephesus was the μητρόπολις. See above, ii. 9.

12. εἰς τὸ συνέδριον] The Sanhedrim, consisting of ἀρχιερεῖς, πρεσβύτεροι, and γραμματεῖς, and usually assembled under the presidency of the High Priest, sat in the conclave, or chamber called גזית (Gazith), on the south side of the Temple. Whether it continued to sit there at this time is not certain. The members of the Council were arranged in a semicircle, the President occupying the seat in the middle point of the curve. See the authorities in Winer, ii. p. 552.

13, 14. ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος—Μωϋσῆς] A similar charge had been made against Christ, Mark xiv. 56. 58. Cp. Matt. xxvi. 61. John ii. 19. 21.

This accusation is the clue to the interpretation of St. Stephen's speech in the following Chapter.—Elz. adds βλάσφημα after ῥήματα, but it is not in A, B, C, D.

— Μωϋσῆς] emphatic; and as such reserved for the last word in the sentence.

15. πρόσωπον ἀγγέλου] O prima ovis, pugnans in medio luporum, sequens, non adhuc perveniens ad Dominum; et jam amicus est Angelorum! Quàm manifestè familiaris Angelis erat amicus, qui in medio luporum ut Angelus parebat. Cœpit tanquam Sole illustratus Justitiæ ita splendere, ut humanam speciem non haberet ipsis inimicis. Serm 214, in Append. Aug. v. p. 2900. For Sermons on his Martyrdom, cf. ibid. pp. 2892—2911, and Augustin, Opera, Serm. 314—319, and S. Iren. iii. 12. Gregor. Nyssen. de Stephano, iii. p. 357. Asterius, Orat. xii. p. 288. Tillemont, Mémoires, pp. 1—4.

CH. VII. 1, 2. ὁ δὲ ἔφη] PRELIMINARY NOTE on the Seventh Chapter.

The SPEECH of ST. STEPHEN before the Jewish Sanhedrim ἀδελφοὶ καὶ πατέρες, ἀκούσατε. ² Ὁ Θεὸς τῆς δόξης ὤφθη τῷ πατρὶ ἡμῶν Ἀβραὰμ, ὄντι ἐν τῇ Μεσοποταμίᾳ, πρὶν ἢ κατοικῆσαι αὐτὸν ἐν Χαρράν, at Jerusalem, may be regarded as the first Christian "Apologia contra Judæos."

On this Oration it may be premised,

First, that it cannot be understood unless it be regarded as the language of the HOLY GHOST (see vi. 10; vii. 55), speaking by the mouth of St. Stephen, and replying, not only to the words, but also to the thoughts of his hearers. It is full of indirect and allusive refutations of Error, and of similar assertions of Truth, concerning Jesus Christ, Who is always present to the mind of the speaker, though he does not once mention His Name, till at length it bursts forth in his dying ejaculation, "LORD JESUS, Receive my spirit" (v. 59).

This speech is of inestimable value, as a divinely-inspired Summary of the Old Testament History; and as a divinely-inspired Commentary upon it; and as teaching the world, on the authority of the Holy Ghost, how that History is to be read; especially with regard to Christ and Christianity.

St. Stephen, the Hellenist and Deacon of the Christian Church, is arraigned before the Jewish Sanhedrim, who would have restrained God's favours to particular persons (viz. themselves and their own nation) and to a particular place, viz. Jerusalem. They charged him with contempt of the Temple and Law, which were confessedly of Divine Institution; and with asserting that Jesus of Nazareth would destroy their Holy Place, and "change those customs" which Moses, the Lawgiver delegated by God, had delivered to them (vi. 14). St. Luke distinctly says that these charges were false (see vi. 13); and St. Stephen retorts them on his accusers.

The following is a PARAPHRASE of the Speech:—

St. Stephen shows that the presence and grace of God is not limited to Judæa; that the "God of glory appeared to Abraham, our Father;" and thus St. Stephen affirms that he himself,—a Christian, is a son of Abraham (see also vv. 11, 12)—God, he says, appeared to Abraham, not in Judæa, but when a stranger in a heathen land, Mesopotamia; Abraham was, in fact, a foreigner. And in this land, Judæa, which they regarded as the special abode of God, Almighty God appeared to Abraham before any Temple existed, or any sacrifice was offered at Jerusalem (Chrys.), and did not give to Abraham, "the friend of God," "the father of the faithful," even "so much as to set his foot on." God said, also, that the promised seed would be foreigners in a strange land, and be in bondage there; and that afterwards they would come out and serve God in this place.

All these promises, he shows, were independent of, and prior to, the Levitical Law. They were made before Abraham received the seal of circumcision, by which Infants of eight days old were admitted into covenant with God under the Law (v. 8).

He then shows that the practice of particular persons, especially of their own ancestors and of themselves, is no safe measure and rule of what is right in the eyes of God; and thus he tacitly replies to their imaginations, that because Jesus of Nazareth, claiming to be the Messiah, had been rejected and put to death by themselves, the seed of Abraham, the favoured People, the ministers of God's Temple, therefore Jesus was justly condemned and punished. For, says St. Stephen, the Patriarchs themselves, being filled with envy, sold Joseph their brother into Egypt[1]; as you for envy delivered Christ to Pilate (Matt. xxvii. 18). They rejected Joseph as you rejected Jesus.

But God was with Joseph as He was with Jesus. He delivered Joseph from all his afflictions, as He delivered Jesus from the grave; He made Joseph ruler of Pharaoh's house, as He has exalted Jesus with His own right hand to be ruler of His Church and of the world. And when a great dearth and famine came on the land, then Joseph—the despised and rejected Joseph—sold by his brethren the Patriarchs, in whose name you glory so much, Joseph—not in Judæa, your favoured land—no, but in Egypt, heathen Egypt—he fed Jacob and the Patriarchs there. And in due time—not at first—he was made known to his brethren; as you in God's good time and by His grace may look on your brother whom ye have pierced (Zech. xii. 10), and who fed the bodies of five thousand with a word, and Who in His Word and Sacraments is providing for the immortal souls of all true Israelites, in what you regard as little better than a heathen Egypt, viz. the Christian Church, now open to you and to all nations, who hunger for the bread of life; and so all the world may be reconciled and meet together in a fraternal embrace in the true Joseph, Christ Jesus.

Jacob and the Patriarchs died—not in Canaan, but in Egypt—and the bones of the Patriarchs were taken from Egypt and were buried, not in Egypt it is true, but yet not in Machpelah at Hebron, the royal, priestly city in Judæa, where those of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob lie. And therefore, although it be very fitting that those of the same family should be buried together,—yet do not imagine that the sanctity and blessedness of a peaceful death and burial is limited to a particular spot. No; the bones of the Patriarchs themselves were taken to a place which you now abhor, and to which you now give an opprobrious name (see on John iv. 5)—Sychem—not a Jewish city—but in the hands of those with whom you will have "no dealings" (John iv. 9)—the Samaritans.

That place itself, Sychem, was originally the property of heathens. It was not an inheritance of Abraham; he had no inheritance in Canaan, but it was purchased by him for money of those who were uncircumcised. (See v. 16.)

In course of time Moses, our great Lawgiver, was born, and was exceeding fair (v. 20), as Christ is fairer than the children of men (Ps. xlv. 3). Moses was not born in Canaan, but in Egypt, and he did not scorn to be a learner in all the wisdom of that country (v. 22); and so was an example to you, who despise all foreign learning, especially the Hellenistic literature.

The Holy Spirit, speaking by St. Stephen, now proceeds to answer their thoughts concerning Christ, by reference to the history of their own divinely-appointed Lawgiver Moses. In speaking of Moses he tacitly refers to Christ; and while we hear what he says of Moses, we may understand him as speaking of Christ.

When forty years were fulfilled, he came to visit his people, as Christ after forty days was presented in the Temple, and is come in the fulness of time to visit you; and when he saw an Israelite in distress he delivered him, as Christ has delivered those who were afflicted and oppressed by the devil (Acts x. 38). But his brethren understood not his mission; as Christ came to His own and His own received Him not (John i. 11). And when Moses would have reconciled them they resented it, and said, "Who made thee a Ruler and a Judge over us?" And so you have dealt with Christ, Who desired to unite all God's children, Jews, Samaritans, and Gentiles, in one,—and you have said of Him, "We will not have this man to reign over us." (Luke xix. 14. John xix. 15.)

When forty years more were passed, Moses came forth from the wilderness, as Christ came forth from the forty days' fast in the desert, and began his ministry with a visible mission from God, Who sent him by the hand of the Angel of His presence (Christ Himself) in the fire of the Bush, the type of His Church, not always triumphant in this world, but often tried in the furnace of affliction, and yet never consumed. Therefore do not suppose that because Christ allowed Himself to be afflicted by you, and because His Church is now persecuted by you, therefore He is not God. Do not imagine that Jerusalem is the only place which is holy in God's sight. No; the Bush, the type of God's Church, was on holy ground, though it was not in Judæa, but in the wilderness of Mount Sina in Arabia (v. 33). The whole world is the field, the Church. (Matt. xiii. 38.)

Your Fathers rejected Moses, and you have crucified Christ. Yet Moses was a deliverer appointed by God (v. 35). Moses was "mighty in words and deeds," and so was Christ; Moses wrought wonders in Egypt and in the Red Sea, and in the wilderness. Christ has wrought greater wonders in delivering you from a worse bondage, and drowning the enemies of our souls by Baptism in the Red Sea of His blood; and He is ever working wonders during the whole pilgrimage of His Church in the wilderness of this world. Moses foretold that another Prophet should arise from among them like unto himself, that is, in human form; like Him in acts, and like Him in being resisted by those whom He came to save. (Chrys.) "Him shall ye hear" (v. 37). That Prophet has risen among you. In rejecting Him ye have despised Moses, of whom you boast. Not I, but you, have spoken blasphemous words and have done blasphemous deeds "against Moses, and against this place and the Law." Moses was with the Church in the wilderness. So Christ is ever with His Church in her journey to the heavenly Canaan. He was with Moses then (v. 38. 1 Cor. x. 3–5). Your fathers resisted Moses, and in tempting him they tempted Christ (1 Cor. x. 9). Moses received the lively oracles of God's Holy Word to give to you. Christ has authorized that Word; He is the living Word of God.

Your fathers would have returned to heathen Egypt, the [1] In this Paraphrase certain points of allusion are expressed which may be justly supposed to have been in St. Stephen's mind, and to have suggested the topics of his Speech, though they are not explicitly developed in it. If they had been expressed, he would have been stopped by his hearers. But he spoke to Posterity and the World; and we by the light of the Gospel are able to understand his allusions, which were not clear to them.

a Gen. 12. 1. b Gen. 12. 5.

3 [a] καὶ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτόν, Ἔξελθε ἐκ τῆς γῆς σου καὶ ἐκ τῆς συγγενείας σου, καὶ δεῦρο εἰς τὴν γῆν ἣν ἄν σοι δείξω. 4 [b] Τότε ἐξελθὼν ἐκ γῆς land of bondage; they made a calf even in Horeb, where God gave the Law. God has witnessed against them by the mouth of His Prophet (Amos v. 25. Cp. here, vv. 43, 44). Did you offer sacrifices to Me? No; but (καὶ, vv. 43, 44) you preferred the Tabernacle of Moloch to My Tabernacle, and the Star of your God Remphan, to the Pillar of Fire and the Cloud. He therefore threatened to carry them into captivity beyond Babylon.

God vouchsafed all these revelations to Abraham, Joseph, and Moses, at a time before even the Tabernacle existed; ἕως ἔτι οὐδαμοῦ ναὸς, οὐδαμοῦ θυσία. (Chrys.) That Tabernacle was made from a pattern in the heavens, anterior to all God's revelations; and God in His love and mercy vouchsafed to lead you into this land by Jesus the Son of Nun, the type of the true Jesus, the Saviour of the world.

God vouchsafed His favour to David while as yet no Temple stood. The Temple of which you boast, saying, "The Temple of the Lord, the Temple of the Lord" (Jer. vii. 4), was not built by David, "the man after God's own heart," but by Solomon, whose heart was turned away from God to worship idols. God was pleased to place His Name at Jerusalem, and to show His Glory in the Temple of Solomon; yet He declares by His prophet (Isa. lxvi. 1), that "Heaven is His Throne: what House will ye build Me? hath not my hand made all these things?" His Temple is the Universe.

Ye who boast of your Circumcision are uncircumcised in heart and ears. Ye who call yourselves the children of the Prophet, "Which of the Prophets have ye not killed?" (Matt. xxiii. 27.) Ye are always rebelling against the Holy Ghost, Who spake by them; and you have betrayed and murdered the Just One, whose coming they foretold. Ye who make your boast of the Law, and accuse me of blaspheming it, me who acknowledge it to have been given by the ministry of Angels, and honour it as such, ye have received that Law, but have not kept it.

As to the language in which this speech was delivered, it may, perhaps, have been Greek (so Meyer and others). From Acts xxi. 40; xxii. 2, it appears that St. Paul's audience at Jerusalem were agreeably surprised when St. Paul addressed them in Hebrew. They expected that he would speak in Greek: St. Stephen was a Hellenist, and almost all his references to the Old Testament are to the LXX Version. And the use of the Greek tongue in proclaiming the Gospel to the Jewish Sanhedrim would seem to be in accordance with the purport of his speech, which was, to show that God's favour was not limited to the Hebrew Nation.

On the other hand, it may be observed, that St. Stephen would be desirous to conciliate his auditory and to consult their feelings, which were not favourable to Hellenism, and to show them that he revered the language in which the Ancient Scriptures, to which he refers, were written; and that standing, as he was, arraigned of despising the Law of Moses, he would comply with their reasonable prepossessions, and become, as St. Paul afterwards did—of whom he was the forerunner—"a Jew to the Jews." (1 Cor. ix. 20.)

The use of the Hebrew tongue by St. Paul at Jerusalem, in a speech beginning with the same words as St. Stephen's, i.e. addressed to the πατέρες as well as ἀδελφοὶ (xxii. 1), renders it probable that St. Stephen also spoke to the Sanhedrim in Hebrew; and perhaps this may have been one reason why they listened so long to his address.

There is an expression at its close which seems to confirm this opinion, θεωρῶ τοὺς οὐρανοὺς ἀνεῳγμένους, v. 56. The word οὐρανὸς in the singular occurs about sixty times in St. Luke's Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles. But there are scarcely two or three passages where οὐρανοὶ in the plural is used. The only one in the Acts is ii. 34, in a speech addressed by St. Peter to the men of Israel (v. 22), probably in Hebrew. The plural οἱ οὐρανοὶ is the Hebrew הַשָּׁמַיִם; and if Stephen had spoken in Greek, he would probably have used the singular, or St. Luke, according to his custom, would have used that number, and not the plural.

Dr. Lightfoot does not hesitate to say (ii. 662), that St. Stephen "would not plead before the Sanhedrim in any language but Hebrew."

Some cautionary words are requisite here in reference to certain criticisms of several statements in this speech.

Our Lord promised to His Disciples to give them the Holy Ghost; and accordingly, as this book informs us, He sent the Holy Spirit from heaven upon them, on the Day of Pentecost. He foretold that they would "be brought before Councils (συνέδρια) for His Name's sake;" and that "the Holy Ghost would speak by their mouth" (Matt. x. 17. Mark xiii. 11. Luke xii. 11), and that "He would give them a mouth and wisdom, which all their adversaries should not be able to gainsay or resist" (Luke xxi. 15. Acts vi. 10). And that all this should be for a Witness or Martyrdom. St. Luke here adopts the words of Christ and applies them to St. Stephen (Acts vi. 10), who is brought before the Council; and he calls him "a man full of the Holy Ghost," and says that his adversaries could not resist the wisdom with which he spake, and he dies the first Martyr for Christ.

Let us consider the words of Christ's promise in the Original. Mark xiii. 9, παραδώσουσιν ὑμᾶς εἰς συνέδρια ἔνεκεν ἐμοῦ εἰς μαρτύριον αὐτοῖς, ὅταν δὲ ἀγάγωσιν ὑμᾶς, μὴ προμεριμνᾶτε τί λαλήσητε· . . . οὐ γάρ ἐστε ὑμεῖς οἱ λαλοῦντες, ἀλλὰ τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον. Luke xxi. 15, ἐγὼ δώσω ὑμῖν στόμα καὶ σοφίαν ᾗ οὐ δυνήσονται ἀντειπεῖν οὐδὲ ἀντιστῆναι πάντες οἱ ἀντικείμενοι ὑμῖν, and Luke xxi. 13, ἀποβήσεται ὑμῖν εἰς μαρτύριον.

Compare with these promises the narrative concerning Stephen, Acts vi. 5. 10, Στέφανος πλήρης Πνεύματος ἁγίου. 8, Στέφανος πλήρης χάριτος (cp. vii. 55) . . . καὶ οὐκ ἴσχυον ἀντιστῆναι τῇ σοφίᾳ καὶ τῷ πνεύματι ᾧ ἐλάλει.

It is true that our Lord did not make this promise to St. Stephen personally. But surely there is no violence in applying His words to one, who is characterized, as St. Stephen is, by the Holy Ghost in Holy Scripture as the First Martyr (cp. Acts xxii. 20), and whose Martyrdom is so fully described by Him, and occupies so prominent a place in the history of the Christian Church as the chosen specimen of all Christian Martyrdoms; and it could hardly have been said by St. Luke, that Stephen was full of the Holy Ghost, and that they could not resist his words, if (as some recent criticisms allege [1]) there are mis-statements in St. Stephen's speech concerning the very rudiments and alphabet of Jewish History, which any pupil of Gamaliel, and much more the learned Rabbis of the Sanhedrim, before whom he spoke, would have refuted and exploded, and which would have exposed him and his cause to derision.

The allegations in question, when reduced to their plain meaning, involve the assumption, that the Holy Ghost, speaking by St. Stephen (who was 'full of the Holy Spirit'), forgot what He Himself had written in the Book of Genesis; and that His memory is now to be refreshed by biblical commentators of the nineteenth century!

This kind of Criticism is animated by a spirit very alien from that Christian temper of reverential modesty, gentleness, and humility, which are primary requisites for the discovery and reception of truth. Mysteries are revealed to the meek (Ecclus. iii. 19). Them that are meek shall He guide in judgment, and such as are gentle them shall He learn His way (Ps. xxv. 8). But this spirit of criticism seems willing to accept any supposition, however fanciful, except that of its own fallibility! It is ready to allege that St. Luke is in error in saying that St. Stephen was full of the Holy Ghost. It is ready to affirm that St. Stephen was forgetful of the elements of Jewish History. It will concede, in short, any thing and every thing, except that itself can err; or that there are some things which the Evangelists and First Martyrs knew better than itself.

No wonder that it is given over by God to a reprobate mind. No wonder that it falls into strange errors, and, what is worse, misleads others into fatal delusions; and yet it professes to guide them into the truth. It pretends to explain Scripture, and

[1] For instance, De Wette says (in the third edition of his Commentary on the Acts, Leipzig, 1848, p. 68), "Auffallend sind die vielen historischen Fehler, welche sich am leichtesten einem unvorbereitet Sprechenden zuschreiben lassen." On v. 16, he says, "hier sind zwei Fehler."

Meyer concurs in the allegation of historical errors, but says that they are not surprising. "Die historischen Verirrungen bei dem in Drange des Augenblicks extemporirten Vortrage gar nichts Auffallendes haben." (Meyer, p. 131, 3rd ed. 1854.) And on v. 1, "Stephen hat irrthumlich u. s. w." And on v. 16, he says, "Mithin hat Steph. eine Verwechselung begangen."

No wonder that other Expositors, proceeding on the same suppositions, should advance a step further, and deny the genuineness and authenticity of the speech,—as has been done by Baur and Zeller. It is to be deplored, that similar allegations have found their way into some English Expositions of this Speech. It is therefore more necessary to examine them.

Χαλδαίων κατῴκησεν ἐν Χαρράν· κἀκεῖθεν, μετὰ τὸ ἀποθανεῖν τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῦ, μετῴκισεν αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν γῆν ταύτην, εἰς ἣν ὑμεῖς νῦν κατοικεῖτε. 5 Καὶ οὐκ ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ κληρονομίαν ἐν αὐτῇ, οὐδὲ βῆμα ποδός· καὶ ἐπηγγείλατο [c] δοῦναι αὐτὴν εἰς κατάσχεσιν αὐτῷ, καὶ τῷ σπέρματι αὐτοῦ μετ' αὐτὸν, οὐκ [c] Gen. 13. 15.
ὄντος αὐτῷ τέκνου. 6 [d] Ἐλάλησε δὲ οὕτως ὁ Θεός, ὅτι ἔσται τὸ σπέρμα [d] Gen. 15. 13, 16.
αὐτοῦ πάροικον ἐν γῇ ἀλλοτρίᾳ καὶ δουλώσουσιν αὐτὸ καὶ κακώσουσιν [e] ἔτη τετρακόσια· 7 καὶ τὸ ἔθνος, ᾧ ἐὰν δουλεύσωσι κρινῶ Ἐγώ, [e] Exod. 12. 40, 41.

yet shakes their belief in its Inspiration, and saps the foundations of the Faith.

Can it therefore be said that there is nothing hard to be understood in this Speech of St. Stephen—or rather in this Divine Oration of the Holy Ghost speaking by St. Stephen's lips? No. But (as the candid reader will allow) the greatest difficulties here are those which are not in St. Stephen's Speech, but have been created by misstatements of some who have criticized it.

As will be shown presently (see below on v. 16), the difficulties themselves, when more nearly examined and explained, are seen to be fraught with divine power and beauty.

If the speech be regarded as it ought to be, not as a mere human effort, but as the outpouring of a divinely inspired mind, then many of these difficulties will disappear at once. For instance, the mode in which the Speaker deals with passages of the Old Testament, may occasion perplexity to those who consider St. Stephen merely as an ordinary man commenting on Scripture; but if it be remembered that the Holy Spirit is speaking by his mouth, and is expounding His own word, then those expositions command our assent as coming to us on the same authority as Scripture itself. And after all, some difficulties there will be ever in God's Holy Word—not from itself, but on account of our ignorance in reading what is written. The Written Word—like the Incarnate Word—is "set for the fall and uprising of many in Israel" (Luke ii. 34). These difficulties of Scripture are appointed exercises of our faith, trials of our meekness, stimulants of our hope, and the discipline of our wisdom; and if we treat them as we ought to do, then the time will come when they will all be cleared from our sight, and we shall see the Truth as it is, and know even as we are known.

Having said thus much on the general tenour of the Speech, we may now address ourselves to a consideration in detail of the Objections that have been raised against certain statements in it. It will be most convenient to place these Objections together, and to consider them seriatim, in the order of the Speech.

For the Notes on other portions of the Speech see below, p. 35.

Objections.

3. εἶπε πρὸς αὐτόν] Objection.—Nothing is said in Gen. xi. 31, of any call that Abraham received in Mesopotamia before he dwelt in Haran.

Reply.—But it is said, Gen. xv. 7, "I am the Lord that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees to give thee this land;" and cp. Joshua xxiv. 3, "I took your father Abraham from the other side of the flood;" Neh. ix. 7, "Thou art God which didst choose Abraham, and broughtest him forth out of Ur of the Chaldees."

It is therefore acknowledged by the Rabbis that there were two calls of Abraham (see Lightfoot, i. 780; ii. 665):—

(1) from his country and kindred (Ur);

(2) from his father's house (in Haran).

See also Philo de Abrahamo, t. ii. p. 11. 16, ed. Mang. ἅμα τῷ κελευσθῆναι μεανίστατο—τὸ μὲν πρῶτον ἀπὸ τῆς Χαλδαίων γῆς εὐδαίμονος χώρας—εἰς τὴν Χαρράνων γῆν· ἔπειτα οὐ μακρὰν ὕστερον, καὶ ἀπὸ ταύτης εἰς ἕτερον τόπον. P. 12, 8, ὅτως δ' οὖν βεβαιόσῃ τὴν φανεῖσαν ὄψιν ἐν διανοίᾳ παγιώτερον, φησὶν αὐτῷ ὁ ἱερὸς λόγος—μετανάστηθι—διὰ τοῦτο τὴν πρώτην ἀνοικίαν ἀπὸ τῆς Χαλδαίων γῆς εἰς τὴν Ἀρραίων λέγεται ποιεῖσθαι. Joseph. Ant. i. 7. 1, Ἄβραμος καταλείπει τὴν Χαλδαίαν, ἐβδομήκοντα καὶ πέντε ἔτη γεγονὼς, τοῦ Θεοῦ κελεύσαντος. Cp. Clem. Rom. i. 10.

S. Chrys. and Œcumenius have suggested as probable, that Terah was induced to emigrate from Ur by the vision in which God appeared to Abraham his Son; and that his obedience to the exhortation of his Son, is contrasted with the disobedience of the Jews to God their Father. And so Lightfoot, and cp. Schoettgen, p. 433, and Whitby, p. 442.

4. μετὰ τὸ ἀποθανεῖν τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῦ] Objection.—This is inconsistent with the history in Genesis. Terah begat Abraham when he was seventy years old (Gen. xi. 26). Abraham came from Haran into Canaan when he was seventy-five years old (Gen. xii. 4).

If then Abraham left Haran after Terah's death (as St. Stephen here says), then Terah could not have lived more than 70 + 75 years = 145 years. But in Gen. xi. 32, it is said that the days of Terah were 205 years.

Therefore (it is alleged) either St. Stephen or St. Luke is mistaken here.

Reply.—It is not said in Gen. xi. 26, that Terah was not more than seventy years old when he begat Abraham. But it is said that he lived seventy years and begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran.

According to the objection above specified, Terah had three sons in one year. But it may be said, Abraham is mentioned first, and was therefore his first-born, and was born soon after his father attained his seventieth year. But this is inaccurate. Abraham is mentioned first, not because he was the first-born, but because he was the Father of the Chosen Seed; cp. Gen. v. 32, where Shem is mentioned first for a similar reason. It is acknowledged by several of the Rabbis, that Abraham was Terah's youngest son. See Theodoret p. Lorinum. Lightfoot, ii. 666. Bp. Kidder on the Messiah, ii. 225. Cp. Lord A. Hervey on the Genealogies, pp. 83. 200.

It is observable, that Isaac, Abraham's son, married Rebecca, the granddaughter of Abraham's brother Nahor by the youngest of his eight sons, Bethuel (Gen. xxii. 22). And such a marriage would seem to intimate that Abraham was younger brother of Nahor.

Isaac was born late, it is true, when his father was a hundred years old (Gen. xxi. 5), but this was only thirty years more than Terah was when his eldest son was born. If, as many of the earliest Rabbinical and Christian Expositors suppose, Sarah was the same as Iscah (Gen. xi. 29), then since Abraham was only ten years older than Sarah (Gen. xvii. 17), it would seem that Abraham was born many years after Haran.

On the whole, nothing has been adduced to show that Abraham was more than seventy-five years old at the time when Terah died, being 205 years of age, and that Abraham did not abide in Haran till the time of his father's death; which indeed, on many accounts, is very likely that he should do, as otherwise it might be said that Canaan was given by promise to Abraham's father, rather than to Abraham, and that he inherited it from his earthly father, and not directly from God.

St. Stephen is therefore careful to distinguish Abraham's acts from those of his father; hence his mention of his father's death. Abraham stands independently and alone, as the father of the faithful. It is for this reason that his call from Ur of the Chaldees is specified by St. Stephen (see above on v. 3), and not Terah's.

6. ἔτη τετρακόσια] Objection.—The Israelites were not in Egypt more than 215 years. Cp. Gal. iii. 17. Exod. xii. 40.

Reply.—It is not said by St. Stephen that they sojourned in Egypt 400 years, any more than it is in Gen. xv. 13. 16, that they would be in Egypt 400 years. But St. Stephen says that they were strangers for that time.

St. Stephen's argument is, that God's favour is not confined to a particular place or nation. And it was enough for him to show that Abraham and the chosen seed were sojourners,—without pausing to specify the several places in succession where they sojourned. For a considerable time the Land of Promise itself was to them a strange country. See Heb. xi. 9.

The chronology is as follows:—

Abraham in Haran	5 years
——— in Canaan	11
From birth of Ishmael to that of Isaac	14
	30
From birth of Isaac to birth of Jacob	60 years
From birth of Jacob to birth of Joseph	90
To Joseph's death	110
To birth of Moses	60
To the Exodus	80
	400 ὁ Θεὸς εἶπεν· καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα ἐξελεύσονται καὶ λατρεύσουσί μοι [f] ἐν τῷ τόπῳ τούτῳ. [8] [g] Καὶ ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ διαθήκην περιτομῆς· καὶ οὕτως ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰσαὰκ, καὶ περιέτεμεν αὐτὸν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ ὀγδόῃ· καὶ ὁ Ἰσαὰκ τὸν Ἰακὼβ, καὶ ὁ Ἰακὼβ τοὺς δώδεκα πατριάρχας. [9] [h] Καὶ οἱ πατριάρχαι ζηλώσαντες τὸν Ἰωσὴφ ἀπέδοντο εἰς Αἴγυπτον. [10] Καὶ ἦν ὁ Θεὸς μετ' αὐτοῦ· [i] καὶ ἐξείλατο αὐτὸν ἐκ πασῶν τῶν θλίψεων αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ χάριν καὶ σοφίαν ἐναντίον Φαραὼ βασιλέως Αἰγύπτου, καὶ κατέστησεν αὐτὸν ἡγούμενον ἐπ' Αἴγυπτον καὶ ὅλον τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ. [11] [k] Ἦλθε δὲ λιμὸς ἐφ' ὅλην τὴν γῆν Αἰγύπτου καὶ Χαναὰν, καὶ θλῖψις μεγάλη· καὶ οὐχ εὕρισκον χορτάσματα οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν. [12] [l] Ἀκούσας δὲ Ἰακὼβ ὄντα σίτια εἰς Αἴγυπτον ἐξαπέστειλε τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν πρῶτον· [13] [m] καὶ ἐν τῷ δευτέρῳ ἀνεγνωρίσθη Ἰωσὴφ τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς αὐτοῦ, καὶ φανερὸν ἐγένετο τῷ Φαραὼ τὸ γένος τοῦ Ἰωσήφ. [14] [n] Ἀποστείλας δὲ Ἰωσὴφ μετεκαλέσατο Ἰακὼβ τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῦ καὶ πᾶσαν τὴν συγγένειαν αὐτοῦ ἐν ψυχαῖς ἑβδομήκοντα πέντε. [15] [o] Καὶ κατέβη Ἰακὼβ εἰς Αἴγυπτον, καὶ ἐτελεύτησεν αὐτὸς καὶ οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν. [16] [p] Καὶ μετετέθησαν f Exod. 3. 12.

g Gen. 17. 9—11. & 21. 1—4. & 25. 24. 26. & 29. 32. & 30. 5. & 35. 23.
h Gen. 37. 28. Ps. 105. 17.
i Gen. 41. 37—40.
k Gen. 41. 54.
l Gen. 42. 1.
m Gen. 45. 3.
n Gen. 46. 27. Deut. 10. 22.
o Gen. 46. 5. & 49. 33
p Gen. 47. 30. & 50. 13. Gen. 23. 16. & 33. 19. Jos. 24. 32.

---

7. λατρεύσουσί μοι ἐν τῷ τόπῳ τούτῳ] i.e. not in Canaan, but in Horeb.

Objection.—These words are not found with the previous ones in Gen. xv. 13, 14.

Reply.—No: but they are found in substance in Exod. iii. 12. 18; vii. 16, with which St. Stephen rightly supposes his hearers to be conversant.

Nothing was more common among the Hebrews than the combination of two prophecies of Holy Scripture, especially in rapid addresses by word of mouth. Our Lord Himself authorized the practice. See note on Luke iv. 17, and on Matt. ii. 23.

St. Stephen's statement is, that God had said, that the Israelites would be sojourners and bondmen in a strange land, and that He would punish the Nation which oppressed them (Gen. xv. 13, 14), and that afterwards they should worship Him ἐν τόπῳ τούτῳ, where the second prophecy was delivered; i.e. not in the promised land, but in the wilderness of Sinai. And St. Stephen's argument is, that therefore the Jews are not to imagine that God can be worshipped only in Judæa and at Jerusalem. God Himself had appointed, that He should be worshipped by their forefathers in the wilderness of Arabia, at Mount Sinai, before any worship was offered to Him in the City of Jerusalem, on Mount Sion.

9. ἀπέδοντο εἰς Αἴγυπτον]

Objection.—Joseph's brethren sold him to the Midianites (Gen. xxxvii. 28), but they did not sell him into Egypt.

Reply.—This is a common use of the middle voice. Judas is said to have purchased a field, because he gave occasion to its purchase (Acts i. 18.) They sold him to persons who they saw were going into Egypt (Gen. xxxvii. 25). And therefore Joseph himself says that they sold him into Egypt (Gen. xlv. 4). Let not St. Stephen be censured for adopting Joseph's words in relating Joseph's history.

St. Stephen, in speaking of Joseph, has his thoughts fixed upon Christ (see PARAPHRASE above, p. 29). And he intends here to say, that as Joseph's brethren were guilty of selling their brother into Egypt, because they sold him to some who carried him there, so the Jews themselves were guilty of crucifying Christ, because they delivered Him up to Pilate to be crucified. Cp. St. Peter's words, Acts ii. 23. 36; iv. 10; v. 30.

14. ἐν ψυχαῖς ἑβδομήκοντα πέντε]

Objection.—This is inconsistent with Gen. xlvi. 27. Exod. i. 5. Deut. x. 22, where it is said that the Souls which went down with Jacob to Egypt were seventy.

Reply.—It is said by some that St. Stephen follows the LXX, in saying that seventy-five came down with Jacob. But this is doubtful. In Gen. xlvi. 27, the Alexandrine MS. of the LXX has not the words μετὰ Ἰακώβ. And it is said by the LXX in Exod. i. 5, that all the souls from Jacob (i.e. including those of Joseph) were seventy-five; and it is also said in the LXX (Deut. x. 22), that they who came into Egypt were seventy.

The true answer seems to be;—

St. Stephen (as his argument led him to do) is reckoning up all the family of Jacob, inclusive of his own children and their children, and not only those who came down with Jacob into Egypt.

The Hebrew Original does not say that the souls which went down with Jacob were seventy, but

1. That all the souls that came with Jacob into Egypt, which came out of his loins, were sixty-six (Gen. xlvi. 26).

It says also,

2. That all the souls of the house of Jacob which came into Egypt were seventy (Gen. xlvi. 27).

In the former of these two statements the following are not enumerated—

Jacob himself,
Joseph, and Joseph's two Sons, viz.
Manasseh,
Ephraim; which being added, make up seventy; the number specified in the latter statement.

But St. Stephen says that Joseph sent for his father Jacob, and all his own kindred, συγγένειαν αὐτοῦ, not ἐκγόνους Ἰακώβ: ἐν ψυχαῖς ἑβδομήκοντα, i.e. so as to make up, or which in course of time made up, a number of seventy-five souls.

This use of ἐν with a dative for the Hebrew ב (see Winer, Gr. Gr. p. 349), and equivalent to εἰς with an accusative, is very common. See Glass. Phil. p. 485.

The number seventy-five, which St. Stephen specifies, consists of the seventy mentioned (Gen. xlvi. 27), together with the issue of the sons of Joseph's own sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, Machir (son of Manasseh),

Galaad (son of Machir),
Sutalaim, Taam (sons of Ephraim),
Edom (son of Sutalaim), as stated in the LXX of Gen. xlvi. 20. Cp. Numb. xxvi. 28—37. 1 Chron. vii. 14—20.

And thus the number 75 is made up.

The addition of these five was not accidental. Indeed the reader may be sure that in this and all the other seeming variations between this speech and the Hebrew Original, there is no inconsistency, but agreement, and something more, viz. there is the groundwork of an additional argument in the pleading of the Speaker. The addition in question was very relevant to St. Stephen's cause; for thus he may be understood to affirm that those born of Jacob's line in Egypt were equally children of the promise with those born in Canaan, the promised land; according to what Jacob himself says of the Sons of Joseph born in Egypt, "as Reuben and Simeon, they (i.e. Ephraim and Manasseh) shall be mine" (Gen. xlviii. 5).

Thus St. Stephen suggests the antecedent probability of the extension of God's promises to all nations of the earth; which was in fact intimated in the preference given by Jacob to the younger son, Ephraim, before the elder, Manasseh (Gen. xlviii. 17—20).

16. μετετέθησαν εἰς Συχὲμ, καὶ ἐτέθησαν ἐν τῷ μνήματι ᾧ ὠνήσατο Ἀβραὰμ τιμῆς ἀργυρίου παρὰ τῶν υἱῶν Ἐμμὼρ τοῦ Συχέμ]

Objection.—This assertion of St. Stephen is wholly inconsistent with the history in the Book of Genesis. For,

1. Jacob was not buried in Sychem, but in Machpelah, before Mamre at Hebron, in the region which afterwards belonged to Judæa; about 20 miles South of Jerusalem, and where Abraham and Sarah, Rebecca and Isaac were buried; see Gen. xlvii. 30; xlix. 29; l. 13. Cf. Jerome, ad Pammach. Ep. 33, p. 254, where the difficulty is stated, and he says, "differo solutionem istius quæstiunculæ."

εἰς Συχὲμ, καὶ ἐτέθησαν ἐν τῷ μνήματι ᾧ ὠνήσατο Ἀβραὰμ τιμῆς ἀργυρίου παρὰ τῶν υἱῶν Ἐμμὼρ τοῦ Συχέμ. 17 [q] Καθὼς δὲ ἤγγιζεν ὁ χρόνος τῆς ἐπαγ- q Exod. 1. 7, 8.

Reply.—It is not said by St. Stephen that Jacob was buried at Sychem—but that the Patriarchs were.

Joseph was buried in Shechem, or Sychem (see Joshua xxiv. 32), near Mount Gerizim (see John iv. 5. 20. 21), in Samaria. And at this day there is at Sichem a tradition to this effect, "in which, by a singular coincidence, Jews and Samaritans, Christians and Mohammedans agree." Robinson, Palestine iii. 109.

And the other Patriarchs were buried there also. See S. Jerome, Ep. 86, who says, concerning Paula, "Venit Sichem quæ nunc Neapolis appellatur, atque inde divertens vidit duodecim Patriarcharum sepulchra." And in his treatise De optimo genere interpretandi: "Duodecim Patriarchæ non sunt sepulti in Arbes (Hebron), sed in Sychem." Cp. Bede in loc. p. 34, and Whitby here, p. 443—4. See also the authorities from the Jewish Commentators quoted by Lightfoot here (vol. ii. p. 668), and Wetstein, and Robinson, Palestine iii. 119.

Therefore it is not affirmed by St. Stephen that Jacob was buried at Sichem. He knew that well. But to mention that fact would have been irrelevant to his argument. For he knew that Jacob's bones were carried to Macpelah, or Hebron, where Abraham's were; and that was a royal and priestly city of Judæa, the seat of David's kingdom. And it might perhaps have been retorted on St. Stephen, that the fact of the transfer of Jacob's bones to that place showed that there was a special sanctity restricted to the region of Judæa, which was so preferred. He therefore says nothing of Jacob's bones; but proceeds to speak of those of the Patriarchs, which he says were conveyed to Sichem.

To Sichem! here is the strength of St. Stephen's assertion. And Sichem is therefore repeated by him, and stands the last word in the sentence, to leave as it were a κέντρον ἐν τοῖς ἀκροωμένοις.

And why? Because, from jealousy of Sichem, in Samaria, some of the Jews had falsely affirmed that the Patriarchs were not buried there, but at Hebron (cp. Joseph. B. J. iv. 9. 7), and Stephen would refute this falsehood, even though he would thus be vindicating the honour of the Samaritans against the Jews. And even because Sichem was not in Judæa, the favoured Land, nor was it in the hands of Jews, but of Samaritans their enemies, with whom they would have "no dealings," and whom they reviled as heretics and unbelievers, and Cuthite dogs; and was a place whose inhabitants they despised and hated (Ecclus. l. 26), and which they called by an opprobrious name, Συχάρ. (See on John iv. 5.)

This was worth saying; in order to show (according to his great argument) that holiness and blessedness are not limited, in death and burial, any more than in life, to any particular spot. Nay, more: Almighty God manifested Himself first to our father Abraham in Mesopotamia (v. 2), a heathen land; and his first appearance to Abraham in Canaan was not at Hebron, but at Sichem, now in the hands of Samaritans. And there, at Sichem, the bones of Joseph and the Patriarchs lie. They were even brought from a long distance, and laid there as in a chosen spot. Sichem was preferred to Hebron, Samaria to Judæa! How instructive was this! And be it observed, that in the very next chapter to this, where the Jews stone St. Stephen at Jerusalem, the word of God takes root in Samaria (Acts viii. 5, 6). The Jews rush "with one accord" (ὁμοθυμαδὸν) and stone Stephen the Deacon (vii. 57). The Samaritans with one accord (ὁμοθυμαδὸν) receive Philip the Deacon (viii. 6), and are baptized into Christ.

Objection 2. The place at Sychem where the Patriarchs were buried was not purchased by Abraham, but by Jacob, who bought it of the Sons of Hamor (Emmor), the Father of Shechem, for a hundred pieces of silver (Gen. xxxiii. 19. Joshua xxiv. 32).

It is alleged that St. Stephen ("from forgetfulness or inattention") has confounded this purchase of the plot of ground at Sychem by Jacob with that which Abraham made of the burial-place of Macpelah from Ephron the Hittite (Gen. xxiii. 16; xlix. 29).

Reply.—It has never been shown, nor ever can be, that Abraham did not purchase a plot of ground at Sichem, where Joseph and the Patriarchs were buried.

Indeed (independently of St. Stephen's assertion) it is highly probable that he did;

For (1) Sichem was the first place in Canaan where Almighty God vouchsafed His presence to Abraham. (Gen. xii. 6, 7.)

It was thence called by the name Moreh (מוֹרֶה), or Vision (cp. Lightfoot, ii. p. 669), and there Abraham built an altar to the Lord.

He built an altar there. He must therefore have had some land there. Now Abraham was not the man to occupy land which belonged to others. And this is intimated by the words, "the Canaanite was then in the land" (Gen. xii. 6; xiii. 7); and he would not take from others, even "from a thread to a shoe-latchet" (Gen. xiv. 23). And he had no land of his own there, not so much as to set his foot on (Acts vii. 5). Therefore it is probable that Abraham purchased the site on which he erected an altar, and where God first appeared to him. Cp. Lightfoot's judicious remarks here, ii. p. 670.

(2) The importance of this place (i. e. Sichem or Shechem) is further testified by the fact, that it was the first in Canaan to which Jacob repaired on his return from Padan-Aram, and at which he also erected an altar (Gen. xxxiii. 17). It is not indeed said that God appeared to him there. But he called it El-Elohe-Israel; and he purchased a site there for the altar which he built (Gen. xxxiii. 18–20).

If, now, Jacob bought the place at Sichem where he built his altar, it is yet more probable that Abraham secured by purchase the place at Sichem where he built his altar, and where God first appeared to him in the land of Canaan.

(3) The sanctity of this place is still further attested by what is recorded in Gen. xxxv. 4, and particularly in Joshua xxiv. 1. 25—27.

Sichem was in fact the national Sanctuary of Israel. And why? Probably from its connexion with Jacob and with Abraham; as the place which he on his first entrance into the land of Canaan had dedicated to God, Who had first manifested Himself to him there.

(4) The paternal portion or allotment of Joseph was at Sichem (John iv. 5, 6). Jacob, it is true, acquired land at Sichem by purchase; but something more than the site so purchased was conveyed by him in his blessing to Joseph (Gen. xlviii. 22). He gave him the plot he purchased at Sichem for 100 pieces of silver (the cave and field at Macpelah cost Abraham 400, Gen. xxiii. 15), and he also gave him the plot there which he had taken out of the hands of the Amorite with his sword and with his bow. See Gen. xlviii. 22, compared with Gen. xxxiii. 19. Josh. xxiv. 32. John iv. 5.

Jacob was a man of peace. What he tells us he took out of the hand of others by his sword and by his bow, we may be sure was not violently usurped by him, but justly recovered. And it may be, that the spot to which he refers was that which had been purchased originally by Abraham, and on which he had built an altar; and if that had been occupied by others (i. e. the Amorite), what more likely than that Jacob, from a feeling of piety and zeal, should feel it his duty to restore it, and secure it for ever to his posterity, as Isaac re-opened the wells which Abraham had digged, and the Philistines had stopped? (Gen. xxvi. 15. 18, 19.)

(5) This supposition that Sichem was originally acquired and dedicated by the Father of the Faithful, Abraham, and afterwards recovered by Jacob, suggests the reason why not only Joseph (whose inheritance it was), but why the other Patriarchs also were buried at Sichem rather than at Macpelah. It was not perhaps without reference to these and other interesting circumstances in the early history of Sichem, that when God was manifest in the flesh, He chose Sychar for a special Revelation of Himself as the Messiah (see note on John iv. 5; cp. iv. 26), and discoursed there to the woman of Samaria concerning the future extension of God's Worship to every place in the world (John iv. 21).

Lastly, it is objected

That St. Stephen says Abraham purchased the land at Sichem of the children of Emmor the son of Sichem;

And this, it is said, is a proof that he confounded a purchase supposed to be made by Abraham, for that made by Jacob of the sons of Hamor, the father of Shechem (Gen. xxxiii. 19. Josh. xxiv. 32).

Reply.—St. Stephen is speaking of a different Emmor, or Hamor, from the person bearing that name with whom Jacob dealt. Jacob dealt with the sons of a Hamor who was the father of Shechem. St. Stephen says that Abraham bought the field from the sons of Hamor, the son of Shechem.

Hamor was the name of the Prince of the Shechemites (Gen. xxxiv. 2). And it is no more surprising that there should be two princes of Shechem called Hamor, than that there should be many Candaces in succession in Meroe, and many Pharaohs in Egypt and Cæsars at Rome.

Hamor seems to have been the hereditary title of the king γελίας ἧς ὡμολόγησεν ὁ Θεὸς τῷ Ἀβραὰμ, ηὔξησεν ὁ λαὸς καὶ ἐπληθύνθη ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ, 18 ἄχρις οὗ ἀνέστη βασιλεὺς ἕτερος, ὃς οὐκ ᾔδει τὸν Ἰωσήφ. 19 Οὗτος κατασοφισάμενος τὸ γένος ἡμῶν ἐκάκωσε τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν, τοῦ r Exod. 2. 2. Heb. 11. 23. ποιεῖν ἔκθετα τὰ βρέφη αὐτῶν, εἰς τὸ μὴ ζωογονεῖσθαι. 20 r Ἐν ᾧ καιρῷ ἐγεννήθη Μωϋσῆς, καὶ ἦν ἀστεῖος τῷ Θεῷ· ὃς ἀνετράφη μῆνας τρεῖς ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ

s Exod. 2. 7. t Exod. 2. 10. u Luke 21. 19. τοῦ πατρός. 21 s Ἐκτεθέντα δὲ αὐτὸν ἀνείλατο αὐτὸν ἡ θυγάτηρ Φαραὼ, t καὶ ἀνεθρέψατο αὐτὸν ἑαυτῇ εἰς υἱόν. 22 u Καὶ ἐπαιδεύθη Μωϋσῆς ἐν πάσῃ σοφίᾳ Αἰγυπτίων· ἦν δὲ δυνατὸς ἐν λόγοις καὶ ἐν ἔργοις αὐτοῦ. 23 Ὡς δὲ ἐπληροῦτο v Exod. 2. 11, &c. αὐτῷ v τεσσαρακονταετὴς χρόνος, ἀνέβη ἐπὶ τὴν καρδίαν αὐτοῦ ἐπισκέψασθαι τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς αὐτοῦ, τοὺς υἱοὺς Ἰσραήλ. 24 Καὶ ἰδών τινα ἀδικούμενον ἠμύνατο, καὶ ἐποίησεν ἐκδίκησιν τῷ καταπονουμένῳ, πατάξας τὸν Αἰγύπτιον.
w Exod. 2. 13. 25 Ἐνόμιζε δὲ συνιέναι τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς αὐτοῦ, ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς διὰ χειρὸς αὐτοῦ δίδωσι σωτηρίαν αὐτοῖς· οἱ δὲ οὐ συνῆκαν. 26 w Τῇ δὲ ἐπιούσῃ ἡμέρᾳ ὤφθη αὐτοῖς μαχομένοις, καὶ συνήλασσεν αὐτοὺς εἰς εἰρήνην εἰπών, Ἄνδρες, ἀδελφοί ἐστε, ἱνατί ἀδικεῖτε ἀλλήλους; 27 Ὁ δὲ ἀδικῶν τὸν πλησίον ἀπώσατο αὐτὸν εἰπών, Τίς σὲ κατέστησεν ἄρχοντα καὶ δικαστὴν ἐφ' ἡμῶν; 28 μὴ ἀνελεῖν με σὺ θέλεις, ὃν τρόπον ἀνεῖλες χθὲς τὸν Αἰγύπτιον; 29 Ἔφυγε δὲ Μωϋσῆς ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τούτῳ, καὶ ἐγένετο πάροικος ἐν γῇ Μαδιὰμ, οὗ ἐγέννησεν υἱοὺς δύο.
x Exod. 3. 2, &c. 30 x Καὶ πληρωθέντων ἐτῶν τεσσαράκοντα, ὤφθη αὐτῷ ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ τοῦ ὄρους Σινᾶ ἄγγελος Κυρίου ἐν φλογὶ πυρὸς βάτου. 31 Ὁ δὲ Μωϋσῆς ἰδὼν ἐθαύμαζε τὸ ὅραμα· προσερχομένου δὲ αὐτοῦ κατανοῆσαι, ἐγένετο φωνὴ Κυρίου πρὸς y Matt. 22. 32. Heb. 11. 16. αὐτόν, 32 y Ἐγὼ ὁ Θεὸς τῶν πατέρων σου, ὁ Θεὸς Ἀβραὰμ, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς Ἰσαὰκ, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς Ἰακώβ. Ἔντρομος δὲ γενόμενος Μωϋσῆς οὐκ ἐτόλμα κατανοῆσαι. 33 Εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ ὁ Κύριος, Λῦσον τὸ ὑπόδημα τῶν ποδῶν σου· ὁ γὰρ τόπος ἐν ᾧ ἕστηκας γῆ ἁγία ἐστίν. 34 Ἰδὼν εἶδον τὴν κάκωσιν τοῦ λαοῦ μου τοῦ ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ, καὶ τοῦ στεναγμοῦ αὐτῶν ἤκουσα· καὶ κατέβην ἐξελέσθαι αὐτούς· καὶ νῦν δεῦρο ἀποστείλω σε εἰς Αἴγυπτον. 35 Τοῦτον τὸν Μωϋσῆν ὃν ἠρνήσαντο εἰπόντες, Τίς σὲ κατέστησεν ἄρχοντα καὶ δικαστήν; τοῦτον ὁ Θεὸς ἄρχοντα καὶ λυτρωτὴν ἀπέσταλκεν σὺν χειρὶ ἀγγέλου τοῦ ὀφθέντος αὐτῷ ἐν z Exod. 7. & 8 & 9. & 10. & 11. & 14. & 16. 1. τῇ βάτῳ. 36 z Οὗτος ἐξήγαγεν αὐτοὺς ποιήσας τέρατα καὶ σημεῖα ἐν γῇ Αἰγύπτου, καὶ ἐν Ἐρυθρᾷ θαλάσσῃ, καὶ ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ ἔτη τεσσαράκοντα.
a Deut. 18. 15, 18. ch. 3. 22. Matt. 17. 5. John 5. 46. b Matt. 17. 5. c Exod. 19. 3, 20. Isa. 63. 9. Heb. 2. 2. Gal. 3. 19. d Exod. 19. 3, 17. e Deut. 5. 27, 31. f Rom. 3. 2. 37 a Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Μωϋσῆς ὁ εἰπὼν τοῖς υἱοῖς Ἰσραήλ, Προφήτην ὑμῖν ἀναστήσει Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ὑμῶν ἐκ τῶν ἀδελφῶν ὑμῶν ὡς ἐμέ· b αὐτοῦ ἀκούσεσθε. 38 c Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ γενόμενος ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ μετὰ τοῦ ἀγγέλου τοῦ λαλοῦντος αὐτῷ d ἐν τῷ ὄρει Σινᾶ, καὶ τῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν, e ὃς ἐδέξατο f λόγια ζῶντα δοῦναι ἡμῖν. 39 e Ὧι οὐκ ἠθέλησαν ὑπήκοοι γενέσθαι οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν, ἀλλ' ἀπώσαντο, καὶ ἐστράφησαν ταῖς
g Exod. 32. 1. καρδίαις αὐτῶν εἰς Αἴγυπτον, 40 g εἰπόντες τῷ Ἀαρών, Ποίησον ἡμῖν θεοὺς οἳ προπορεύσονται ἡμῶν· ὁ γὰρ Μωϋσῆς οὗτος, ὃς ἐξήγαγεν ἡμᾶς ἐκ γῆς h Deut. 9. 16. Ps. 106. 19, 20. Αἰγύπτου—, οὐκ οἴδαμεν τί γέγονεν αὐτῷ. 41 h Καὶ ἐμοσχοποίησαν ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ἐκείναις, καὶ ἀνήγαγον θυσίαν τῷ εἰδώλῳ, καὶ εὐφραίνοντο ἐν τοῖς i Jer. 19. 13. Amos 5. 25, 26. k Ps. 81. 12. l Deut. 4. 19. 2 Kings 17. 16. ἔργοις τῶν χειρῶν αὐτῶν. 42 i Ἔστρεψε δὲ ὁ Θεὸς, k καὶ παρέδωκεν αὐτοὺς l λατρεύειν τῇ στρατιᾷ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, καθὼς γέγραπται ἐν βίβλῳ τῶν προφητῶν, Μὴ σφάγια καὶ θυσίας προσηνέγκατε μοι ἔτη τεσσαράκοντα ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, οἶκος Ἰσραήλ; 43 Καὶ ἀνελάβετε τὴν σκηνὴν τοῦ Μολὸχ, καὶ τὸ ἄστρον τοῦ Θεοῦ ὑμῶν Ῥεφὰν, τοὺς τύπους οὓς ἐποιήσατε
m Exod. 25. 40. Heb. 8. 5. προσκυνεῖν αὐτοῖς· καὶ μετοικιῶ ὑμᾶς ἐπέκεινα Βαβυλῶνος. 44 m Ἡ of the country. See Judges ix. 28, where the name occurs 500 years after Jacob's time.

---

43. Βαβυλῶνος] Objection.—This is inconsistent with Amos v. 27, who has Δαμασκοῦ.

Reply.—In order to enforce his argument, St. Stephen adds to the prophecy of Amos some other declarations of the same Spirit Who inspired Amos, and Who had pronounced by them that the Israelites would be carried for their sins still further σκηνὴ τοῦ μαρτυρίου ἦν ἐν τοῖς πατράσιν ἡμῶν ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, καθὼς διετάξατο ὁ λαλῶν τῷ Μωϋσῇ, ποιῆσαι αὐτὴν κατὰ τὸν τύπον ὃν ἑωράκει· 45 ᵘ ἣν καὶ ᵘ Josh. 3. 14.

than Damascus (Jer. xx. 4. 2 Chron. xxxvi. 20) even to Babylon and beyond it. There was something significant in the fact here mentioned, that God would carry them away for their sins from Canaan to beyond Babylon; i. e. that for their unbelief He would invert in their case the course He had followed with Abraham their father for his faith. God brought him from Chaldæa to Canaan, He would carry them from Canaan to beyond Chaldæa. And observe, St. Stephen uses the same word here (μετοικίζω) as he had done in v. 4, when speaking of Abraham.

There must have been a sharp sting in this word Βαβυλῶνος reserved for the end of the sentence, where they perhaps only expected to hear Δαμασκοῦ.

On this practice, so reasonable in itself, of blending several prophecies into one, and also condensing their substance (which is imputed in St. Stephen's case to inaccuracy and forgetfulness!), see the excellent observations of Surenhusius, pp. 43. 45. 343, and the numerous examples cited by him of this practice. Cp. Acts iii. 22. 25, and see note above on Matt. ii. 23, Luke iv. 17, and above on vii. 3, below on Acts xiii. 22.

On the whole, on reviewing the Objections above recited, we may affirm, that there is nothing in them which can invalidate the claims of St. Stephen to Inspiration; or those of St. Luke, who has preserved his speech, and asserts that St. Stephen "was full of the Holy Ghost," and that "they could not resist the wisdom with which he spake."

There is nothing in St. Stephen's statements to countenance the assertion of some recent Criticism, that he confounded Abraham with Jacob, and Sichem with Hebron, and one purchase with another. There is nothing to authorize the assumption and conceit of that Criticism, that it can penetrate with a keener glance into the records of early Jewish History, than he "who was full of the Holy Ghost," and whose eye, being enlightened by Him, pierced through the clouds, and saw "the heavens opened, and Jesus standing at the right hand of God." On the other hand, we are constrained to ask, can there be any reasonable expectation of "progress, or further illumination" in Biblical Criticism, or of any other result but of degeneracy, degradation, disbelief, and demoralization, from such allegations as these of a shallow and presumptuous sciolism, putting them forth, not as doubtful, but as proved, and as even furnishing data to be accepted and arranged by a calm Inductive Philosophy as valuable acquisitions of Theological Science?

But they who read Holy Scripture with right dispositions will derive spiritual comfort and intellectual delight even from those portions of Holy Writ which, like St. Stephen's speech, may appear at first sight to be beset with difficulties, and have been most frequently made occasions of sceptical cavils. They will feel persuaded that there are some good reasons for statements in Scripture, which at first may seem perplexing. They will be sure that some valuable truths—like precious pearls in rough and hard shells—lurk concealed there. They will endeavour by God's grace and with earnest endeavour to extract them. And their labour will often be rewarded. As in the instances above noticed in St. Stephen's speech, they will see gleams of divine light where they once saw obscurity. Objections against Scripture will resolve themselves into Arguments for it. Difficulties will be changed into Evidences. And from this process of critical proselytism they will derive a persuasion, that when the mists of human infirmity which hang over us in this world are dispersed, and our eyes are illumined by the same Spirit Who shed His bright beams of light on St. Stephen, all the other difficulties of Scripture will disappear; we shall acquire new faculties of spiritual vision, and where before we saw mists and clouds, we shall see the heavens opened, and the glory of Jesus Christ standing at the right hand of God.

NOTES on other portions of the speech,—

2. Θεὸς τῆς δόξης] The fountain of glory. (Chrys.) On this Hebraism (Ps. xxviii. 3), see on Matt. xxii. 11, and cp. Eph. i. 17. Col. i. 11. Heb. ix. 5. Phil. iii. 21.

— Χαρράν] Haran; Κάρραι, Carræ. (Lucan i. 104.)

3.] On the supposed discrepancy in this verse, see above under "Objections," p. 31.

4.] On this verse, see above under "Objections," p. 31.

— μετῴκισεν] God removed him. Cp. Valck. here, p. 417, on the difference between κατοικίσαι and κατοικῆσαι, and the present Editor's note on Theocritus, p. 242.

5. βῆμα ποδός] Deut. ii. 5. LXX.

6.] See above, under "Objections," p. 31.

7.] See above, under "Objections," p. 32.

8. πατριάρχας] the heads of the twelve patriæ, or tribes.

9.] See above, under "Objections," p. 32.

For an excellent summary of certain points in which Joseph was typical of Christ, cp. Bp. Pearson, On the Creed, Art. vi. p. 414, and Mather, On the Types, p. 86, ed. 1705.

12. σῖτια] So A, B, C, D, E. Elz. σῖτα.

— εἰς Αἴγυπτον] So A, B, D, E. Elz. ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ. Cp. viii. 40, εὑρέθη εἰς Ἄζωτον.

The accusative is more expressive here, as indicating that provisions were stored up, and, as it were, brought together into Egypt; as distinct from other countries.

14.] See above, under "Objections," p. 32.

16.] See above, under "Objections," p. 32.

17. ὡμολόγησεν] So A, B, C.—Elz. ὤμοσε.

19. ἐκάκωσε τοῦ ποιεῖν] On the construction, see iii. 12; xv. 20. Luke ii. 21. Winer, § 44, p. 292. It seems to be derived from the Hebrew use of ל with the Infinitive.

20. ἀστεῖος τῷ Θεῷ] The LXX apply the word ἀστεῖος to Moses (Exod. ii. 2), for the Hebr. טוֹב, goodly, fair. Comp. Heb. xi. 23. χαρίεις. (Hesych.) The addition of τῷ Θεῷ is a Hebraism, denoting what is really and eminently such. Cp. Vorst. de Hebr. cap. xvi., and Valck. here, p. 425. See Jonah iii. 3, πόλις μεγάλη τῷ Θεῷ. Ruth iii. 10. He was goodly, not only in men's sight, who look only on the countenance, but in the eyes of God, Who reads the heart. See above, on Luke i. 6, and Winer, § 36, p. 221.

21, 22. ἐκτεθέντα αὐτὸν—αὐτόν] So A, B, C, D. Elz. has ἐκτεθέντος αὐτοῦ.

On the repetition of the pronoun αὐτόν, see Matt. viii. 1; xxvi. 71. Mark ix. 28.

22. ἐν πάσῃ σοφίᾳ Αἰγυπτίων] An argument for the consecration of heathen Literature to the service of Christianity. See the eloquent passage of Origen, Epist. ad Greg. Thaumaturg. S. Jerome, ad Magnum, Epist. 84, and ad Damas. 146, and Augustin. de doctr. Christ. (ii. 40), and c. Faust. (xxii. 91), who argues for this consecration from the example of the ancient people of God applying the gold of Egypt to the beautifying of the Tabernacle, and cites the examples of Christian Fathers. "Nonne aspicimus quanto auro et argento et veste suffarcinatus exierit de Ægypto Cyprianus, Doctor suavissimus et Martyr beatissimus? quanto Lactantius, quanto Victorinus, Optatus, Hilarius, ut de vivis taceam, quanto innumerabiles Græci? Quod prior ipse fidelissimus Dei famulus Moyses fecerat, de quo Scriptum est 'quòd eruditus fuerat omni sapientiâ Ægyptiorum.'" Cp. Hooker, quoted above, Luke v. 39, and below, xxvi. 14.

— δυνατὸς ἐν λόγοις] Though by nature "slow of speech" (Exod. iv. 10); but God gave him eloquence (Exod. iv. 10), and he is called ὁμιλεῖν πιθανώτατος by Josephus, Ant. iii. 1. 4.

— ἔργοις] See Josephus, Ant. ii. 10. 1.

23. τεσσαρακονταετὴς χρόνος] The repeated mention of forty years in the history of Moses (here and in v. 30, and vv. 36. 42), is surely not without some meaning in reference to Christ. See above, i. 3.

24. ἐκδίκησιν] See Luke xviii. 3. 7, 8.

26. συνήλασσεν] was reconciling: so A, B, C, D; a much preferable reading to that of Elz., συνήλασεν. They rejected Moses, when he was engaged in the work of Reconciliation, as the Jews rejected Christ, the Mediator between God and Man.

27. σέ] emphatic; thee, so feeble and obscure a person.

28. με] emphatic; me, as well as the Egyptian.

30. ἄγγελος Κυρίου] Generally supposed by the Fathers to be the Second Person of the Blessed Trinity. See Hilary, de Trin. v. Augustin. de Trin. ii. 13; iii. 10. Hieronym. in Galat. c. 3. Ambrose, de Fide, cap. 5. (Lorin.)

34, 35. ἰδὼν εἶδον] "plenissimè agnovi;" another Hebraism. Exod. iii. 7. See Gen. ii. 17. Deut. xv. 10. Matt. xiii. 14. Heb. vi. 13. Valck. and Vorst. p. 610, cap. xxxiv.

34. ἀποστείλω] So A, B, C, D. Come, let me send thee. Cp. Numb. xxiii. 27, δεῦρο παραλάβω σε. (Bornemann.) Elz. has ἀποστελῶ.

35. ἀπέσταλκεν] has sent, although they little supposed it. The reading of A, B, D, E, and others. Elz. has ἀπέστειλεν.

— σὺν χειρὶ] A, B, C, D, E. Elz., ἐν χ.

36. γῇ Αἰγύπτου] a common Hebraism, Matt. x. 15; xi. 24, supplanted in some MSS. by γῇ Αἰγύπτῳ; as other Hebraisms have been by Hellenic forms.

38. ἐκκλησίᾳ ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ] A remarkable confirmation of his argument. God's Church is not limited to Judæa. It was in εἰσήγαγον διαδεξάμενοι οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν μετὰ Ἰησοῦ, ἐν τῇ κατασχέσει τῶν ἐθνῶν, ὧν ἔξωσεν ὁ Θεὸς ἀπὸ προσώπου τῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν ἕως τῶν ἡμερῶν Δαυὶδ· 46 [o] ὃς εὗρε χάριν ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ ᾐτήσατο εὑρεῖν σκήνωμα τῷ Θεῷ Ἰακώβ· 47 [p] Σολομὼν δὲ ᾠκοδόμησεν αὐτῷ οἶκον. 48 Ἀλλ' οὐχ ὁ ὕψιστος ἐν χειροποιήτοις κατοικεῖ, καθὼς ὁ προφήτης λέγει, 49 [q] Ὁ οὐρανός μοι θρόνος, ἡ δὲ γῆ ὑποπόδιον τῶν ποδῶν μου· ποῖον οἶκον οἰκοδομήσετέ μοι, λέγει Κύριος, ἢ τίς τόπος τῆς καταπαύσεώς μου; 50 οὐχὶ ἡ χείρ μου ἐποίησε ταῦτα πάντα; 51 [r] Σκληροτράχηλοι, καὶ ἀπερίτμητοι ταῖς καρδίαις καὶ τοῖς ὠσὶν, ὑμεῖς ἀεὶ τῷ Πνεύματι τῷ ἁγίῳ ἀντιπίπτετε· ὡς οἱ πατέρες ὑμῶν, καὶ ὑμεῖς. 52 Τίνα τῶν προφητῶν οὐκ ἐδίωξαν οἱ πατέρες ὑμῶν; καὶ ἀπέκτειναν τοὺς προκαταγγείλαντας περὶ τῆς ἐλεύσεως τοῦ Δικαίου, οὗ νῦν ὑμεῖς προδόται καὶ φονεῖς ἐγένεσθε· 53 [s] οἵτινες ἐλάβετε τὸν νόμον εἰς διαταγὰς ἀγγέλων, καὶ οὐκ ἐφυλάξατε·

54 [t] Ἀκούοντες δὲ ταῦτα διεπρίοντο ταῖς καρδίαις αὐτῶν, καὶ ἔβρυχον τοὺς ὀδόντας ἐπ' αὐτόν.

55 Ὑπάρχων δὲ πλήρης Πνεύματος ἁγίου ἀτενίσας εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν εἶδε δόξαν o 1 Sam. 16. 12, 13. 2 Sam. 7. 1, &c. 1 Chron. 17. 12. Ps. 132. 3. p 1 Kings 6. 1. & 8. 27. ch. 17. 24.

q Isa. 66. 1, 2.
r Jer. 4. 4. & 6. 10. & 9. 25, 26. Ezek. 44. 7. s Exod. 19. 3, et seqq. Gal. 3. 19. 2 Esd. 14. 30.
t ch. 5. 33.

---

the Wilderness, and there Moses, your great Lawgiver, was with it; and, remember, he died there in the Wilderness; and was never permitted to enter the promised Land to which you would restrain the favours of God.

The Church in the Wilderness. This sentence is not without its prophetic significance for Christian times. The Church of God is represented in the Apocalypse as persecuted by the Great City; She is the Woman in the Wilderness (Rev. xii. 1—6), and there she is nourished by God forty-two months (v. 6), the number of the 'Mansiones,' or haltings, of the Ancient Church of God in the Wilderness of Sinai.

40. ὁ γὰρ Μωϋσῆς] On the construction, see xix. 34; xx. 3. Winer, § 63, p. 501.

41. ἐμοσχοποίησαν] they made a Calf—in imitation of the Apis of Memphis in Egypt, which they had left (cp. Winer, R. W. B. i. p. 644); and so in heart returned to Egypt (v. 39).

Thus ye have dealt with Christ. He came to deliver you from worse than Egyptian bondage, and ye have fallen back into worse slavery than before.

— ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ἐκείναις] Even when the Law was being delivered to him by God, they were guilty of rebellion against Him.

42. ἐν βίβλῳ τῶν προφητῶν] Of the Twelve lesser Prophets, who were reckoned as forming one βίβλος, or volume, by the Jews. See Bp. Cosin on the Canon, p. 12, and below, xiii. 40.

— μοί] emphatic. Did ye offer to Me? No—but to Moloch!

43. ἀνελάβετε] The word used by Amos (v. 26), נָשָׂא, sustulit. Ye were not ashamed of your idol, but ye raised him aloft in the air, and carried him and his tabernacle on high, as a sacred banner, standard, or trophy, when you ought to have fixed your hearts on Me and Mine.

Moloch is opposed to Jehovah, and Moloch's idolatrous σκηνὴ to the σκηνὴ or Tabernacle of God.

The Alexandrine MS. has Ραιφὰν here. C, E have Ρεφὰν, D has Ρεμφάν. The LXX have Ραιφὰν for Hebr. כִּיּוּן It seems probable that Kiun, Kivun, and Rephan or Remphan, signify the Kronos or Saturnus of the Egyptians. And ἄστρον would be the Planet of Saturn. See the authorities in Lightfoot, ii. p. 673. Glass. Phil. p. 645, 646. Surenhus. p. 413. Rosenm. here, and Winer, p. 386, in v. Saturn.

S. Cyril's note (in Catenâ, p. 123, cp. Theophyl. p. 68, and Œcum. p. 71) deserves attention particularly from his connection with Alexandria in Egypt. He affirms after Aquila and Theodotion that Ρεφὰν signifies blindness: the idol was that of a Star, but it was εἰς τύφλωσιν· ἐσκοτίσθησαν γὰρ (read ἐσκοτίσθησαν γὰρ) αἱ καρδίαι αὐτῶν. They worshipped the idol as their ἑωσφόρος or Day-star (ἄστρον), but it became to them a Ρεφὰν or σκότισμα, or darkness.

Perhaps therefore this name Rephan was given by the more devout Jews to this idol in contempt and abhorrence; for the same reason as they called the god of the Ekronites, Beelzeboul. And St. Stephen adopts this name Rephan from the LXX instead of Chiun, as much as to say: Ye set up the Star of a blind god in opposition to the God of heaven!

— Μολόχ] from מוֹלֵךְ, regnans: perhaps the Milcom (i.e. their King) of the Ammonites (1 Kings xi. 5. 33). The worship of Moloch accompanied with human sacrifices (see on Matt. v. 22) is specially forbidden in Leviticus xviii. 21 and xx. 2, and it may thence be inferred to have been practised by the Israelites.

— Βαβυλῶνος] See above under "Objections," p. 35.

45. Ἰησοῦ] Joshua the son of Nun. Cp. Heb. iv. 8. On the meaning of the name, see on Matt. i. 1.

It is observable that the name of Jesus, though ever in the thoughts of St. Stephen, and, as it were, hovering on his lips in almost every sentence, is never expressed in his Speech but here, where it does not mean Jesus of Nazareth, but Jesus (or Joshua) the son of Nun.

How much wisdom was there in this! If he had openly spoken as he felt concerning Jesus of Nazareth, he would have been stopped at once by the rage of his hearers (see v. 53, 54), and the Christian Church would never have had the speech of St. Stephen. There was divine eloquence in his silence. And all his words were, and ever will be—φωνᾶντα συνετοῖσι—vocal to the wise. And this word Jesus—not used for Christ, but for Joshua, the type of Christ, is full of meaning. It is significant of the fact already insisted on—that the whole speech is allusive to Christ.

— ἐν τῇ κατασχέσει] in the portion or possession of the Gentiles—κατάσχεσις = אֲחֻזָּה Num. xxvii. 4. 7, and passim in LXX. See also above, v. 5.

κατάσχεσις ἐθνῶν can hardly mean occupation of the land of the Nations.

48.] After χειροποιήτοις Elz. adds ναοῖς, which is not in A, B, C, D, E, H. Cp. Acts xvii. 24.

53. εἰς διαταγάς] at the disposition or ordinance of angels, i. e. ordained by God through them. διαταγέντα δι' ἀγγέλων, Schol. Mosqu. Cp. διετάξατο, v. 44.

On this use of εἰς, see Matt. xii. 41. Eph. i. 10. Glass. Phil. p. 484, 5. And as to the fact, viz. the Ministry of Angels at Mount Sinai, see Deut. xxxiii. 2, where God is said to appear on Sina, σὺν μυριάσιν . . . ἐκ δεξιῶν αὐτοῦ ἄγγελοι μετ' αὐτοῦ. Gal. iii. 19, νόμος διαταγεὶς δι' ἀγγέλων. Heb. ii. 2, λαληθεὶς δι' ἀγγέλων. Joseph. Ant. xv. 5. 3, ἡμῶν τὰ δοιώτατα ἐν τοῖς νόμοις δι' ἀγγέλων μαθόντων. Surenhus. p. 420, who, after many of the Fathers, says, "tota res eò redire videtur postquam Act. vii. 36 (where there is mention of the Angel at the Bush), cum hoc loco (Gal. iii. 19) contulerimus, ut dicamus Christum stipantibus Ipsum myriadibus Angelorum tradidisse Legem."

The reason of the expression seems to be, that Christ Himself was the Angel of the Covenant (see vv. 30. 35. 38); He, when He promulgated the Law, was attended by Angels (Deut. xxxiii. 2), and therefore, in a rapid mode of expression, the Law given by the Angel, accompanied with Angels, might be said to have been given by the disposition of Angels; and so Josephus says (Ant. xv. 5. 3) that the Jews had received their Law from God by Angels, δι' ἀγγέλων παρὰ Θεοῦ. That διαταγὴ is to be understood in this sense, may be inferred from St. Stephen's use of διατάσσομαι just before, v. 44.

55. ὑπάρχων] Not γενόμενος, and something more also than ὤν. It shows his antecedent spiritual state; and is an assertion Θεοῦ, καὶ Ἰησοῦν ἑστῶτα ἐκ δεξιῶν τοῦ Θεοῦ, 56 καὶ εἶπεν, Ἰδοὺ, θεωρῶ τοὺς οὐρανοὺς διηνοιγμένους, καὶ τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐκ δεξιῶν ἑστῶτα τοῦ Θεοῦ.

57 Κράξαντες δὲ φωνῇ μεγάλῃ συνέσχον τὰ ὦτα αὐτῶν, καὶ ὥρμησαν ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἐπ' αὐτὸν, u καὶ ἐκβαλόντες ἔξω τῆς πόλεως ἐλιθοβόλουν. 58 Καὶ οἱ μάρτυρες ἀπέθεντο τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτῶν παρὰ τοὺς πόδας νεανίου καλουμένου Σαύλου· 59 v καὶ ἐλιθοβόλουν τὸν Στέφανον, ἐπικαλούμενον καὶ λέγοντα, Κύριε Ἰησοῦ, δέξαι τὸ πνεῦμά μου. 60 Θεὶς δὲ τὰ γόνατα ἔκραξε φωνῇ μεγάλῃ, w Κύριε, μὴ στήσῃς αὐτοῖς ταύτην τὴν ἁμαρτίαν. Καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν ἐκοιμήθη.

u ch. 22. 20. 1 Kings 21. 13.

v Luke 23. 46.

w Luke 6. 28. & 23. 34.

---

of the inspiration with which this Speech was delivered. See the use of ὑπάρχων, iii. 2; xvii. 24; xxii. 3.

56. διηνοιγμένους] So A, B, C. Parted asunder, and opened. Elz. ἀνεῳγμένους.

— ἑστῶτα] "Sedere judicantis est; stare pugnantis vel adjuvantis." (Greg. M. hom. xix. in S. Stephan.)

57. ὥρμησαν ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἐπ' αὐτὸν—ἐλιθοβόλουν] They, filled with the Evil Spirit, rushed with one accord against him filled with the Holy Spirit. But what evil could Satan and the Jews do to St. Stephen? As S. Aug. says (Serm. 215), they procured punishment to themselves and a crown of glory to him. What benefits do we reap even from the agency of the Devil, through the overruling power of Christ! "Diabolus quanta præstitit! Omnes Martyres ipse nobis fecit!" (Aug.)

58. ἀπέθεντο τὰ ἱμάτια] So as to be more ready for stoning. The witnesses cast the first stone (Deut. xvii. 7).

— νεανίου] He might be thirty years of age. David was thirty years of age when he fought with Goliath, and is called νεανίσκος by Josephus.

— Σαύλου] "Magis sæviens omnes adjuvando, quàm suis manibus lapidando." (Aug. Serm. 279.)

"Iste Saulus," says Aug., Serm. 315, "et postea Paulus, persecutor Saulus, et prædicator Paulus. Magna et divina spectacula. Qui erat in cæde Stephani Persecutor, factus est regni cœlorum Prædicator."

This is the first mention of St. Paul in Holy Scripture. His agency in the martyrdom of St. Stephen is mentioned with peculiar emphasis here, and again viii. 1, with the design probably of showing the power of Divine Grace in the change wrought thereby from Saul, the Persecutor of the Church, to Paul, the Preacher of the Gospel.

Here also, it seems, we may be permitted to recognize one main reason why the History of the Acts is principally occupied in narrating the actions and sufferings of the two Apostles, St. Peter and St. Paul,—the one having shown his weakness in denying Christ, the other his fury in persecuting Him.

In those two names are seen the noblest trophies of the conquests of the Holy Ghost. The name of Saul mentioned here may also suggest the conjecture that we are indebted, under the divine influence of the Holy Ghost, to the recital of St. Paul for this report of St. Stephen's speech before the Jewish Sanhedrim.

St. Paul would doubtless have been anxious to make public reparation, as far as he was able, for the wrong done by himself to the blessed Martyr. This desire manifested itself afterwards in his public declaration at Jerusalem recorded Acts xxii. 20. He could not make better amends than in confessing his own share in the martyrdom, as is done here (vii. 58; viii. 1), and in giving universal and perpetual publicity to the words of St. Stephen in the pages of Canonical Scripture, so that it might ever be said of St. Stephen, the Protomartyr of the Church, as of the first Martyr of the world, Abel, "though dead, he yet speaketh." (Heb. xi. 4.)

This supposition is in some degree confirmed by the resemblance which (as is well shown by Mr. Humphry) may be traced between passages in St. Stephen's speech and St. Paul's speeches and Epistles; e. g.

St. Stephen ὰ Μωϋσῆς ἀστεῖος.

St. Paul, Heb. xi. 23.

St. Stephen, vii. 48, οὐχ ὁ ὕψιστος ἐν χειροποιήτοις κατοικεῖ.

St. Paul, Acts xvii. 24, ὁ Θεὸς οὐκ ἐν χειροποιήτοις ναοῖς κατοικεῖ.

St. Stephen, vii. 53, ἐλάβετε νόμον εἰς διαταγὰς ἀγγέλων.

St. Paul, Gal. iii. 19, ὁ νόμος διαταγεὶς δι' ἀγγέλων.

St. Stephen, vii. 51, ἀπερίτμητοι τῇ καρδίᾳ.

St. Paul, Rom. ii. 29, περιτομὴ καρδίας ἐν πνεύματι.

It is observable also, that St. Paul's first recorded speech in the Acts (xiii. 16) bears a striking resemblance to St. Stephen's. Cp. Howson, i. 87. 211.

Whether St. Paul reported St. Stephen's speech to St. Luke or no, this is certain, that St. Luke wrote it under St. Paul's eye, and that he published it with St. Paul's sanction. St. Paul, an inspired Apostle, deeply versed in the History and Antiquities of his own nation, read it and approved it. This consideration may serve to confirm us in our conclusion that there are no "errors or inaccuracies" in it. See above, pp. 30. 35.

59. ἐλιθοβόλουν] 'were stoning.' The punishment for blasphemy. (Levit. xxiv. 16. Deut. xvii. 35.)

It has been inferred by some from the infliction of this punishment on St. Stephen, that the Sanhedrim had the power of life and death in matters of religion, without reference to the Roman Governor. But this is not clear. He generally resided at Cæsarea, not at Jerusalem; and in his absence they often proceeded in a summary and irregular way in questions of religion. See on xxvi. 10, and Burton's Lectures, p. 32.

In the case of St. Stephen, there is no mention of any judicial sentence being pronounced. The assault upon him is represented as a tumultuary act of fury. (See vv. 57. 58.)

That popular outbreaks, followed by stoning, were not uncommon at this time at Jerusalem, may be inferred from what is said above, even of the captain of the temple and the officers of the Chief Priests themselves in ch. v. 26, ἐφοβοῦντο τὸν λαὸν μὴ λιθασθῶσιν, and from what is recorded in the history of our Lord, John viii. 59; x. 31—33. Cp. Matt. xxiii. 37.

The question whether the Jewish Sanhedrim had the power of life and death in such cases as this (as Professor Blunt has observed, Lectures, p. 141), is best illustrated by a passage of Origen (ad African. § 14), who says, "Though the Jews are under tribute to the Romans, their Ethnarch, by the permission of Cæsar, is allowed to have considerable power among them; insomuch that their trials are conducted according to their own laws, though clandestinely; and even capital punishment is inflicted, not as an absolute right, but with the imperial connivance."

"Thus it would seem that St. Stephen suffered capital punishment," adds Professor Blunt, "at the hands of the Jews, even in spite of its not being exactly lawful for them to put any one to death; the majesty of the Roman law being contented to lie in abeyance, though ready at any time to assert itself and resume its functions."

— ἐπικαλούμενον] Bentley (on Freethinking, xxxvi. p. 138) conjectures that ΘΝ (Θεὸν) "was absorpt by the preceding syllable ON." Perhaps, however, there is a design in the omission. St. Stephen called upon Him Whom he beheld in heaven, and said to Him, "Lord Jesus, receive My Spirit." Thus St. Stephen teaches with his dying breath that the Name of Jesus is to be called upon and worshipped; i. e. that He is God. Hence in ix. 14. 21. 1 Cor. i. 2, and 2 Tim. ii. 22, "all that call on the Name of the Lord," is a periphrasis for Christians. See also xxii. 16, and Whitby here, p. 454.

— Κύριε Ἰησοῦ] St. Stephen at his death prays to Jesus, and addresses the same prayer to Jesus, as Jesus, dying on the cross, had addressed to His Father, Luke xxiii. 34. 46. Jesus, as man, taught us to pray; St. Stephen, inspired by the Holy Ghost, teaches us to pray to Jesus, and to pray to Him as He as Man prayed to His Father,—that is, as God.

— δέξαι τὸ πνεῦμά μου] A proof that the spirit of man survives, and does not sleep, when separated from the body by death. See on Luke xvi. 22, 23, and above on i. 25.

60. μὴ στήσῃς—ἁμαρτίαν] So A, B, C, D. * Elz. τὴν ἁμαρτίαν ταύτην,—but ἁμαρτίαν, the emphatic word, has its proper place at the close, "Lay not to their charge this sin." He warns them of their danger in committing the sin, and shows His love by prayer for the sinning.

The word στήσῃς involves the idea of weighing. See Matt.

a ch. 22. 20. & 7. 58.

VIII. 1 [a] Σαῦλος δὲ ἦν συνευδοκῶν τῇ ἀναιρέσει αὐτοῦ. Ἐγένετο δὲ ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ διωγμὸς μέγας ἐπὶ τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τὴν ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις· πάντες τε διεσπάρησαν κατὰ τὰς χώρας τῆς Ἰουδαίας καὶ Σαμαρείας, πλὴν τῶν ἀποστόλων.

xxvi. 15, "When Thou, the Judge of all, weighest their actions in Thy balance, do not place this sin in the scale against them."

By this prayer St. Stephen proved that all he had said in his speech, however bitter to them, was the language of charity. It came from the Spirit of Truth and Love, and it had its firstfruits in the conversion of Saul, and in that of thousands by him. As S. Aug. says (Serm. 315), "Sævire videbatur Stephanus; lingua ferox, cor lene: clamabat, et amabat; sæviebat, et salvos fieri volebat."

— ἐκοιμήθη] ἱερὸν ὕπνον κοιμᾶται, θνήσκειν μὴ λέγε τοὺς ἀγαθούς. (Callimachus, Epig. 10.)

On the rythmical cadence of this sentence in the word ἐκοιμήθη (˘ – – –), see note at the end of the Book, xxviii. 31.

The following comments on this Divine History are from S. Augustine's Sermons in Natali (the Martyrdom; see on Acts ii. 24) Stephani Martyris (Serm. 314—320, vol. v. pp. 1856—1878).

S. Aug. (p. 1859) thus speaks of the History of his Martyrdom in the Acts of the Apostles: "Cùm aliorum martyrum vix gesta inveniamus quod in solemnitatibus earum recitare possimus (a remarkable declaration [1]) hujus passio in canonico libro est; Actus Apostolorum de Canone Scripturæ est: ipse liber incipit legi à Dominico Paschæ, sicut se consuetudo habet Ecclesiæ (from Easter to Whitsuntide, Aug., Tract. vi. in Joan.; cp. Chrys. in Acta, Hom. 63 and 48). In hoc ergo libro audistis quomodo sint electi et ab Apostolis ordinati septem Diaconi, in quibus Sanctus Stephanus erat; prior Martyr de Diaconis quàm de Apostolis: prior victima de Agnis, quàm de Arietibus."

He draws a parallel between

(1) The charges against our Lord, and those against Stephen. Compare John ii. 19—21. Matt. xxvii. 40, with Acts vi. 14.

(2) Our Lord's prayer for His enemies, and commendation of His soul to the Father; and St. Stephen's prayer and commendation of His soul to the Lord Jesus.

He traces St. Stephen's graces at his death to the influence of Christ's example. "Sedebat in cathedrâ crucis Christus, et docebat Stephanum regulam pietatis. Ecce discipulus Tuus orat pro inimicis suis, orat pro lapidatoribus suis." He refers his hearers to the Divine Source from which all St. Stephen's graces flowed. "Ecce hoc Stephanus fecit. De se? De suo fecit? Non ita; de dono Dei fecit. Si autem de dono Dei fecit, numquid intravit, et contra te clausit? Numquid pontem transivit et præcidit? Pete et tu; Fons manat, non siccavit.

"Non mortem timebat Stephanum, quia Christum, quem pro se occisum sciebat, viventem videbat; ac per hoc festinabat etiam ipse mori pro Illo, ut viveret cum Illo. Ejà, fratres, sequamur eum; si enim sequamur Stephanum, coronabimur (alluding to his name Στέφανος, the Fathers love to dwell on the circumstance, that he who bore the name of Στέφανος was the first to win the crown of Martyrdom for Christ) maximè autem imitandus est nobis in dilectione inimicorum: persistens beatissimus Martyr in testimonio Veritatis et Charitatis ardens Spiritu, pervenit ad gloriosissimum finem."

S. Aug. (p. 1878) applies to St. Stephen the deacon the promise of Christ (John xii. 26), "where I am, there shall My servant be," observing that in the Greek original the word is διάκονος, and in some Latin Versions Diaconus, and that St. Stephen was indeed a deacon to Christ, that he did follow Christ, and that in him Christ's promise was made good, "ubi sum Ego illic erit diaconus Meus." To this remark it might be added, that the verb also is used twice there, ἐὰν ἐμοὶ διακονῇ τις ἐμοὶ ἀκολουθείτω, καὶ ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγὼ, ἐκεῖ καὶ ὁ διάκονος ὁ ἐμὸς ἔσται, καὶ ἐάν τις ἐμοὶ διακονῇ, τιμήσει αὐτὸν ὁ Πάτηρ.

S. Jerome (in Ezek. xliii.) seems to assert that St. Stephen was martyred at the Passover, on the second day of unleavened bread. If this was the case, and is rendered probable by the presence of many Hellenists (vi. 9), here was another point of resemblance to Christ. Cp. below, on xii. 3.

Lastly, on St. Stephen's death, Augustine says (p. 1873), "Cùm tanta esset in docendo constantia, videte qualis fuerit in morte patientia. Hi ictibus corpus ipsius quatiebant; ille pro inimicis orabat; contundebatur homo exterior, et supplicabat interior. Sed Dominus qui cinxerat, qui probaverat, spectabat desuper militem Suum juvaturus certantem, coronaturus vincentem. Denique Se ostendit illi. Ecce enim, inquit, video cœlos apertos, et Filium hominis stantem ad dexteram Dei. Et quid ait pro se? Domine Jesu, accipe spiritum meum; et pro illis genuflectit, et ait Domine, ne statuas illis hoc peccatum. Et hoc dicto, obdormivit." O sweet slumber! He who fell asleep among the stones of his enemies, how triumphantly will his ashes awake from the stones of the tomb! He fell asleep in confidence, quietness, and peace, for he commended his spirit to the Lord.

Ch. VIII. 1—3. Σαῦλος ἦν συνευδοκῶν] Saul (says Aug., Serm. 316, p. 1868) heard St. Stephen's speech; and then perhaps he scoffed at it; but he was concerned in St. Stephen's prayer. St. Stephen prayed for him. And mark the effects of that prayer. "Saulus, cui non sufficit occisus Stephanus, accepit Epistolas à Sacerdotibus ut ubicunque inveniret Christianos alligatos adduceret ad supplicia sumenda, qualia sumpserat Stephanus. Iratus ibat Saulus, ibat lupus ad gregem Domini. Et Dominus de sursum, Saule, Saule, quid Me persequeris? Lupe, quid Agnum persequeris? Ego, quando sum occisus, Leonem occidi. Exue te lupo; esto de lupo, ovis; de ove, Pastor. Stratus est Persecutor, erectus est Prædicator. Stephanus tunc agnus, Paulus tunc lupus erat; modò autem ambo agni."—May we all with them follow the Lamb in heaven!

1—4. πάντες διεσπάρησαν—εὐαγγελιζόμενοι τὸν λόγον] being scattered abroad by persecution they scattered abroad the seed of the Word. First, in Samaria, where Christ's prophetic eye had seen "the fields white unto harvest" (John iv. 35), and then in the world.

It is one of the purposes of this divine History, to show that "the fierceness of man turns to the praise of God." Ps. lxxvi. 10.

As it was in the Apostolic age, so it ever has been and ever will be with the Church, governed and guided by the Spirit of God;

As Tertullian says to the Roman Persecutors of the Church (Apolog. ad fin.), "Crudelitas vestra illecebra est magis sectæ. Plures efficimur quoties metimur à vobis; semen est sanguis Christianorum," and ad Scapulam, "Hanc sectam magis ædificari videas, cùm cædi videtur." Compare the language of S. Nilus (hom. 2 de Ascens.), "Succidebantur Ecclesiæ palmites, et Fidei fructus augescebat. E radice enim Illâ nati sunt Qui dixerat 'Ego vici Mundum: Ego sum Vitis, Vos Palmites.'" And Chrysostom says, the blood of Martyrs waters the garden of the Church, and makes it fruitful; and S. Leo (Serm. i. in Natal. Petri), "Non minuitur persecutionibus Ecclesia, sed augetur (cp. Exod. i. 12) et Dominicus ager segete altiore vestitur, dum grana quæ singula cadunt multiplicata nascuntur."

Besides, by their dispersions they destroyed the power of the Enemy. As Aug. observes (Serm. 316), "Occiso Stephano, persecutionem gravissimam Ecclesia Hierosolymis passa est. Fugati sunt fratres qui ibi erant; soli Apostoli remanserunt. Cæteri fugabantur, sed, tanquam ardentes faces, accendebant. Stulti Judæi, quando illos de Hierosolymis fugabant, carbones ignis in silvam mittebant." Thus, by the controlling power of Christ, the devices of the Arch-enemy of the Church were overruled into instruments against himself.

— πλὴν τῶν ἀποστόλων] It would seem that a special charge had been laid on the Apostles to remain at Jerusalem; see above, on i. 4, and below, viii. 14; ix. 27; xi. 1; xv. 2.

There was a peculiar reason for the mention of this circumstance in the case of St. Stephen, because (as Lightfoot shows,

[1] On the right observance of Saints' Days, he says (ibid. p. 1870), "Quod nobis beatus Martyr imitandum in suâ passione proposuit—hoc attendere, hoc credere, hoc implere—verè est solemnia Martyris celebrare."

The position of St. Stephen's Day, the morrow after Christmas Day, has a beautiful significance. It intimates that all the graces of all the Martyrs are due to the Incarnation of Christ, Who is, in fact, the Great Proto-Martyr, "the true and faithful Martyr or Witness" (Rev. i. 5; iii. 14), of Whose "fulness all have received, and grace for grace." (John i. 16.) And this idea is strengthened by the sequence of the Martyrdom of Long Life in St. John the Evangelist, and of Infancy in the Holy Innocents. And so the Incarnation of Christ is like the famous Mountain from which all the principal rivers of continental Greece flow, and fertilize the land. He is the One Well-spring of Living Water—"the True Light that lighteth every one that cometh into the world." (John i. 9.)

2 Συνεκόμισαν δὲ τὸν Στέφανον ἄνδρες εὐλαβεῖς, καὶ ἐποίησαν κοπετὸν μέγαν ἐπ' αὐτῷ. 3 [b] Σαῦλος δὲ ἐλυμαίνετο τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, κατὰ τοὺς οἴκους εἰσπο- b ch. 22. 4. & 26. 10, 11.
ρευόμενος, σύρων τε ἄνδρας καὶ γυναῖκας παρεδίδου εἰς φυλακήν. 4 Οἱ μὲν οὖν διασπαρέντες διῆλθον, εὐαγγελιζόμενοι τὸν λόγον.

5 [c] Φίλιππος δὲ κατελθὼν εἰς πόλιν τῆς Σαμαρείας ἐκήρυσσεν αὐτοῖς τὸν c ch. 6 5.
Χριστόν. 6 Προσεῖχον δὲ οἱ ὄχλοι τοῖς λεγομένοις ὑπὸ τοῦ Φιλίππου ὁμοθυ-μαδὸν, ἐν τῷ ἀκούειν αὐτοὺς καὶ βλέπειν τὰ σημεῖα ἃ ἐποίει· 7 [d] πολλῶν γὰρ d Mark 16. 17.
τῶν ἐχόντων πνεύματα ἀκάθαρτα, βοῶντα φωνῇ μεγάλῃ ἐξήρχοντο, πολλοὶ δὲ παραλελυμένοι καὶ χωλοὶ ἐθεραπεύθησαν· 8 καὶ ἐγένετο χαρὰ μεγάλη ἐν τῇ πόλει ἐκείνῃ.

9 [e] Ἀνὴρ δέ τις ὀνόματι Σίμων προϋπῆρχεν ἐν τῇ πόλει μαγεύων καὶ ἐξιστῶν e ch. 5. 36.
τὸ ἔθνος τῆς Σαμαρείας, λέγων εἶναί τινα ἑαυτὸν μέγαν· 10 ᾧ προσεῖχον πάντες ἀπὸ μικροῦ ἕως μεγάλου λέγοντες, Οὗτός ἐστιν ἡ δύναμις τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡ καλουμένη

---

ii. p. 677) it was not lawful among the Jews to make outward demonstrations of grief for persons condemned by the Sanhedrim.

It is said by some interpreters that these "devout" men must have been Jews (see Kuin., Meyer), because the word εὐλαβεῖς is connected with Ἰουδαῖοι (ii. 5), and because Christians would not have ventured to bury Stephen. But εὐλάβεια is characterized as a Christian grace (Heb. v. 7; xii. 28); and though their κοπετὸς was a remnant of Judaism (see Chrys. here, and below, on ix. 37), yet probably it is specially mentioned that these men buried Stephen, because it was an act of Christian courage, and exposed them to danger.

The burial of the dead seems to be here commended as an act of Christian piety, and thus the duty is inculcated of reverence for the bodies of Christians,

(1) As being temples of the Holy Ghost;

(2) And, as committed to the keeping of the grave, in order to rise again in glory, and to be "made like unto Christ's glorious Body." (Phil. iii. 21.)

See the treatise of S. Aug. (vi. p. 866), De curâ pro mortuis gerendâ, and cp. what Bp. Pearson says, On the Creed, Art. iv. p. 339, "When Ananias died, though after his sin, yet they wound him up and carried him out and buried him (Acts v. 6); when Stephen was stoned, devout men carried him to his burial; and when Dorcas died, they washed her and laid her in an upper chamber (Acts ix. 37). So careful were the primitive Christians of the rites of burial." And the pious and learned Expositor observes on the effect which Christianity had on national usages of Sepulture. In the Roman Empire, before the reception of the Gospel, the bodies of the dead were burnt, and their ashes only reserved in funeral urns. But after a few Emperors had received baptism, there was not a body burnt in the Roman Empire.

So great a social change was wrought by Christianity. The religious sanctity of the Churchyards and Cemeteries of Europe is due to its influence. "And the decent custom of the primitive Christians (says Bp. Pearson) was so acceptable unto God, that under His Providence it proved most effectual in the conversion of the Heathen, and in the propagation of the Gospel."

But where Funeral Rites are neglected and violated, there Christianity will decline—a warning not unnecessary in our own age and country, where, on account of the closing of Churchyards by reason of their repletion, in our great Cities, there may be a danger of heartlessness and irreverence in the interment of the dead,—especially of the poor.

2. κοπετὸν μέγαν] "planctum magnum;" with wringing of hands and beating of breasts. See Luke xxiii. 48. Cp. below, ix. 37.

3. ἐλυμαίνετο] Saul was making havoc of the Church, while some were burying Stephen; and others were preaching the word. A striking contrast.

5. Φίλιππος] Not Philip the Apostle; for the Apostles remained at Jerusalem (v. 1). And if Philip had been an Apostle, it would not have been necessary for Peter and John to leave Jerusalem for Samaria, to lay their hands on those whom Philip had baptized there (vv. 12, 13). But this Philip was the Deacon, also called Philip the Evangelist (Acts xxi. 8). So Chrys. and Epipham., who says (Caten. p. 135), that Philip being a Deacon had not authority to give the Holy Spirit by laying on of hands. And Aug. (Serm. 266, 4) says, that he was called Philip the Evangelist, "propter promptam prædicationis eloquium."

— Σαμαρείας] Not a city of Samaria, but the city of Samaria, "in urbem ipsam Samariæ" (Bp. Pearson), the ancient residence of the Kings of Israel, the Metropolis, Σεβαστή—now Sebustieh (see Robinson iii. 144, and "Later Researches," p. 126).

On this use of the genitive, see Glass., p. 250, and Meyer here. The article is often omitted after prepositions. See Middleton here, p. 381. And A, B have the Article, which is received by Lachmann and Tischendorf.

If St. Luke had meant Sychar, or any other city than the capital, he would probably have specified its name (see John iv. 5): πόλις, used by itself frequently stands for μητρόπολις. And from v. 14 it may also be inferred that πόλις τῆς Σαμαρείας here signifies the Capital. It is true that the Capital was now commonly called Σεβαστή. But this name is never used in the New Testament; and St. Luke, writing for Hellenistic readers, would be disposed to preserve the name by which the City was known from the LXX, and which is also used by Josephus, Ant. xx. 6, 2.

No reason can be assigned why St. Luke should not have specified the name Sychar, or Sychem, if that had been the City of which he is here speaking; whereas there are many causes why he should not have mentioned the Sebasté, the name of the Capital of Samaria. They may have visited Sichem also. For the city of Samaria stood at a short distance to the north of Sichem, Νεάπολις, now Nablous, on which see above, vii. 16.

7. ἐξήρχοντο] So A, B, C, D, E, and other MSS. Elz. ἐξήρχετο. But the plural number seems to be studiously used in these cases in order to show the personal plurality of the Evil Spirits. Cp. on Mark ix. 20. 26.

— παραλελυμένοι] This word is never used for paralytic by St. Matthew or St. Mark, who use the word παραλυτικὸς ten times (Matt. iv. 24; viii. 6; ix. 2. 6. Mark ii. 3, 4, 5. 9, 10).

But it is used in St. Luke's Gospel (v. 18. 24), where the word παραλυτικὸς does not occur; and it is used twice in the Acts (here, and ix. 33), where the word παραλυτικὸς does not occur. And thus we have a double coincidence between the Acts of the Apostles and the Gospel of St. Luke.

9. Σίμων] Magus, the first heretic. See Justin M. Apol. i. 26. Iren. i. 23. Tertullian, Præscr. c. 46. S. Cyril. Hierosol. p. 95, 96, πάσης αἱρέσεως εὑρετής. Cp. on Acts xxi. 7. Euseb. ii. 1; ii. 13. Ambrose, Hexaëm. v. 8. Epiphan. xxi. 1; Tillemont, Mémoires Eccl. ii. p. 16. Burton, Lectures, p. 74—82. 294. Evans, Biog. Early Church, p. 140.

— ἐξιστῶν] On this form of the Verb, see Winer, § 14, p. 72.

— λέγων εἶναι, κ.τ.λ.] Iren. ii. 2, "Simone mago primo dicente semetipsum esse super omnia Deum." While Philip preached Christ, Simon vaunted himself, as God.

This is not the place for discussing the question concerning Justin Martyr's (Apol. i. 26) account of the Statue, "Simoni Deo Sancto," at Rome; but there is reason to think that it has been too hastily rejected as groundless. See Dr. Burton's Lectures, p. 232, Professor Norton's Essay on the subject, and Dr. Kitto's Illustrations of the Acts, p. 84—7.

It has been thought by some that Simon Magus is the person mentioned by Josephus (Ant. xx. 7. 2) as Σίμωνα, Ἰουδαῖον, Κύπριον δὲ γένος, μάγον εἶναι σκηπτόμενον, who was employed by Felix to decoy Drusilla from her husband Azizus that she might marry him.

10. ἡ καλουμένη μεγάλη] So A, B, C, D, E, and other MSS. Elz. omits καλουμένη, which however has a special force. This man is that mighty power of God which is so called in the Word of God. Cp. Aug. in Hæres. 1, who says that Simon called himself the Messiah; and Theodoret, de fabulis hæretic. c. i. Indeed μεγάλη. 11 Προσεῖχον δὲ αὐτῷ, διὰ τὸ ἱκανῷ χρόνῳ ταῖς μαγείαις ἐξεστακέναι αὐτούς. 12 Ὅτε δὲ ἐπίστευσαν τῷ Φιλίππῳ εὐαγγελιζομένῳ περὶ τῆς βασιλείας τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ τοῦ ὀνόματος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ἐβαπτίζοντο ἄνδρες τε καὶ γυναῖκες. 13 Ὁ δὲ Σίμων καὶ αὐτὸς ἐπίστευσε· καὶ βαπτισθεὶς ἦν προσκαρτερῶν τῷ Φιλίππῳ· θεωρῶν τε δυνάμεις καὶ σημεῖα μεγάλα γινόμενα ἐξίστατο.

14 Ἀκούσαντες δὲ οἱ ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις ἀπόστολοι, ὅτι δέδεκται ἡ Σαμάρεια Ich. 2. 38. τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀπέστειλαν πρὸς αὐτοὺς Πέτρον καὶ Ἰωάννην. 15 οἵτινες

---

he seems to have claimed to himself the names of the three persons of the Trinity.

See Iren. i. 23, who says, "Hic à multis, quasi Deus glorificatus est, et docuit semetipsum esse qui inter Judæos quasi Filius apparuerit, in Samariâ autem quasi Pater descenderit, in reliquis verò Gentibus quasi Spiritus Sanctus adventaverit. Esse autem se sublimissimam virtutem (τὴν μεγάλην δύναμιν), hoc est eum qui sit super omnia Pater; et sustinere vocari se quodcunque eum vocant homines" (δύναμιν—καλουμένην).

Thus we see that even the father of Heresy bears witness to the doctrine of the Trinity.

11. διὰ τὸ ἐξεστακέναι] they had been bewitched. "Intransitive" (Brüder). The Vulgate has an active sense, "quia dementâsset eos," which is followed in the English Version.

13. ἐπίστευσε] made a public profession of faith, and became one of the members of the visible Church, who were called πιστοί. On this use of πιστεύω, see Acts ii. 44; iv. 32; and on Rom. xiii. 2.—ὅτε ἐπιστεύσαμεν οἱ ἅγιοι designate the members of the Church generally, Acts ix. 32, 41, and cp. οἱ σωζόμενοι, ii. 47.

— ἐξίστατο] he who had himself been ἐξιστῶν τὸ ἔθνος (Meyer).

14. πρὸς αὐτούς] to them at Samaria, the city.

14—18. Πέτρον καὶ Ἰωάννην] On the continuance of the Apostles at Jerusalem after the Ascension, see above on i. 4; viii. 1. As to St. John particularly, see Blunt, Lectures, p. 66, who observes, that though Asia Minor was his ultimate destination, there is no evidence of his having been there during the life (qu. visits) of St. Paul; and wherever he is mentioned in the Acts it is in connexion with Palestine. The Apostles sent Peter and John from Jerusalem to Samaria in order to do what Philip the Deacon, who was there, could not do, and what Paul the Apostle afterwards did (see xix. 6), i. e. to give to those who had been baptized by a deacon, the full outpouring of the Holy Ghost by laying on of Apostolic hands.

To the authorities cited above (on v. 5), may be added what is said by S. Jerome, a Presbyter, and one not over eager to exalt the rights of the Episcopate: "Are you ignorant that this is the custom of our Churches, that hands are laid on those who are Baptized, and the Holy Spirit invoked over them? Do you inquire where this is written? It is in the Acts of the Apostles" (ad Lucifer. c. 4, p. 294). "This is the usage of our Churches. The Bishop goes forth (excurrit) and makes a tour in order to lay his hands and to invoke the Holy Spirit on those who in smaller towns have been baptized by our Priests and Deacons" (ibid.). And Augustine (de Trin. xv. 26) "Ecclesia in Præpositis suis nunc servat morem, quem habebant Apostoli, oratione et manuum impositione tribuendi Spiritum Sanctum;" and S. Cyprian (Epist. 73), "They who are baptized are brought to the Chief Pastors of the Church, that by our prayer (Cyprian being a bishop) and the laying on of hands they may receive the Holy Ghost, and be completed by the seal of Christ;" and before him, Tertullian, a presbyter, de Bapt. c. 8, and Theophyl. says, "After Baptism the Holy Spirit is given by laying on of hands; and this order is observed μέχρι νῦν."

Here is the answer to the question sometimes put now, as indeed it was of old, "Quid mihi prodest?" &c. (Hammond, iv. 895.) "What profit is there to me from the Ministry of Confirmation after the Sacrament of Baptism?" The Holy Spirit (says Eusebius Emisenus, or perhaps Salvian. Cp. Hammond, iv. 895) which descends on the waters of Baptism with healing on His Wings (salutifero illapsu) gives, at the baptismal font, complete remission of sins. And in Confirmation He supplies grace, for growth in holiness. In Baptism we are regenerated unto life; in Confirmation we are invigorated for life's warfare. Baptism suffices for those who are called away by God in tender years; Confirmation arms and equips the young soldier (who has been enlisted in Baptism under Christ's banner) to fight a good fight in the conflicts of this world.

It appears from v. 16 that the Holy Ghost had not visibly fallen upon any of the converts before the Apostles had laid their hands upon them. That is, the full effusion of the Holy Ghost, with its then visible manifestations of tongues and other signs, had not been vouchsafed to them. As S. Aug. says (in Joann. Tract. vi.), "Nondum acceperunt Spiritum Sanctum, sicut tunc descendebat ad ostendendam significationem gentium crediturarum, ut linguis loquerentur."

The reasons of this seem to be, to show the need of union with the Apostles, and to secure due respect to their persons and office; and to assure the Church, in all ages, of the reality of the inward grace ministered to all worthy recipients of Confirmation.

Hence Confirmation was called the Consummating Unction, χρῖσις τελειωτική, as completing Baptism. See Bp. Taylor's Dissertation with that title, Works, xi. 215. As S. Ambrose teaches (de Sacram. iii. 2): "Post fontem (baptismi) superest ut perfectio fiat, quando ad invocationem sacerdotis Spiritus Sanctus infunditur." And as Hooker says (V. lxvi.), "It confirms and perfects that which the grace of the Spirit has already begun in Baptism;" and cp. Hammond's Treatise "de Confirmatione," Works, iv. 851. Bp. Pearson, Lectures in Acts, v. 6; and Dr. Comber, Companion to the Temple, iii. p. 451. Bingham, Antiq., bk. xii. here. Blunt, Lectures, p. 40; and see also Calvin here, "in whose opinion," says R. Nelson, "this passage in the Acts shows that Confirmation was instituted by the Apostles."

In another important respect Confirmation is the consummation of Baptism,—not from any defect in Baptism itself, but from the circumstances of persons who have been baptized;

In primitive times, from the nature of the case, the majority of those who were baptized were Adults. But now that Christianity has been long preached in the world, they who are baptized are, for the most part, Infants. "The astipulation of a good conscience is an essential part of Baptism" (1 Pet. iii. 21). And "for all such as have been baptized in their Infancy the personal resumption or ratification of that vow which they made by their sponsors at the sacred laver is to be exacted in the public congregation." And this is done at Confirmation. (Dr. Jackson on the Creed, bk. x. ch. 1. vol. ix. p. 548.) And they, who boldly confess Christ with their lips and lives on earth, will be confessed by Him at the Great Day. Matt. x. 32. Luke xii. 8.

On the Doctrine of Confirmation as the appointed ordinary means for the full effusion of the gift of the Holy Ghost on the baptized, see the valuable Manual entitled "Catechesis," by the Bishop of St. Andrew's, Lond. 1857, and the remarks made and authorities quoted in an excellent Essay by the late Rev. John Frere, M.A., Rector of Cottenham. Lond. 1845.

The mind of the Church of England in this matter is declared in her Office for Confirmation.

"Then the Bishop shall say:

. . . . Almighty and everlasting God . . . we make our humble supplication unto Thee for these thy servants, upon whom after the example of thy Holy Apostles we have now laid our hands . . . ."

The Church of England (in her sixtieth Canon) says, that "it hath been a solemn, ancient, and laudable custom in the Church of God, continued from the Apostles' times, that all Bishops should lay their hands upon children baptized and instructed in the Catechism of Christian Religion, praying over them and blessing them,—which we commonly call Confirmation."

In the earlier editions of the Book of Common Prayer, the Order commenced with the words, "Our help is the Name of the Lord." The collation of the Blessing is the groundwork of the Office. The public profession on the part of those who are to be confirmed was happily added in the last review of the Prayer-book, A.D. 1662; and the substance of what had been before a Rubric or Rubrics prefixed to the Catechism, was introduced, in 1662, as a Preface to the Office of Confirmation.

Hooker's pathetic lament for the insufficient administration of Confirmation in his own day (see Eccl. Pol. V. lxvi. 8) might be reiterated with a hundred-fold force in the present times, when, from the inadequate number of our Spiritual Fathers, an immense majority of our population grows up without ever receiving the completion of their baptismal privileges, by the reception of Confirmation, and the subsequent graces of the Holy καταβάντες προσηύξαντο περὶ αὐτῶν ὅπως λάβωσι Πνεῦμα ἅγιον· 16 [g] οὐδέπω γὰρ ἦν ἐπ' οὐδενὶ αὐτῶν ἐπιπεπτωκὸς, μόνον δὲ βεβαπτισμένοι ὑπῆρχον εἰς τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ. 17 Τότε ἐπετίθουν τὰς χεῖρας ἐπ' αὐτοὺς, καὶ ἐλάμβανον Πνεῦμα ἅγιον. 18 Ἰδὼν δὲ ὁ Σίμων, ὅτι διὰ τῆς ἐπιθέσεως τῶν χειρῶν τῶν ἀποστόλων δίδοται τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, προσήνεγκεν αὐτοῖς χρήματα, 19 λέγων, Δότε κἀμοὶ τὴν ἐξουσίαν ταύτην, ἵνα ᾧ ἐὰν ἐπιθῶ τὰς χεῖρας, λαμβάνῃ Πνεῦμα ἅγιον. 20 [h] Πέτρος δὲ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτόν, Τὸ ἀργύριόν σου σὺν σοὶ εἴη εἰς ἀπώλειαν, ὅτι [i] τὴν δωρεὰν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐνόμισας διὰ χρημάτων κτᾶσθαι· 21 οὐκ ἔστι σοι μερὶς οὐδὲ κλῆρος ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τούτῳ· [j] ἡ γὰρ καρδία σου οὐκ ἔστιν εὐθεῖα ἔναντι τοῦ Θεοῦ. 22 [k] Μετανόησον οὖν ἀπὸ τῆς κακίας σου ταύτης, καὶ δεήθητι τοῦ Κυρίου, εἰ ἄρα ἀφεθήσεταί σοι ἡ ἐπίνοια τῆς καρδίας σου· 23 εἰς γὰρ χολὴν πικρίας καὶ σύνδεσμον ἀδικίας ὁρῶ σε ὄντα. 24 [l] Ἀπο-

g ch. 19. 2.

h 2 Kings 5. 16. Matt. 10. 8.

i ch. 10. 45. & 19. 5, 6. 1 Cor. 1. 13.

j Ps. 78. 36, 37. Ezek. 14. 3.

k 2 Tim 2. 25. Dan. 4. 27.

l Numb. 21. 7.

Spirit given in the Lord's Supper, and, consequently, are never brought into full communion with the Church; and though they may have been baptized by her, yet, being never made fully partakers of her privileges, they fall away into indifference or unbelief, or are arrayed in hostility against her.

It seems as if Confirmation, being restricted in its administration to those who are successors of the Apostles, were designed by Divine Providence to serve the important purpose of maintaining a vital principle of Church Unity, by bringing all the children of God in a Diocese, as members of one spiritual household, to receive the benediction of their Spiritual Father in God; thus reminding them of their filial adoption in Christ the Son of God into the family of One heavenly Father; and of the gracious overshadowing of the One Spirit of Unity—the Divine Dove—whose invisible wings are spread over them, and shed grace from heaven upon them.

It also seems as if this restriction of Confirmation to the Episcopal office were divinely ordered, in order to show more clearly the necessity of elasticity and expansion of Episcopacy, in proportion to the growth of the population of a country, and so to ensure (short of absolute compulsion) those other blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit on the Church through the ministrations of a pious, learned, zealous, and faithful Episcopate.

15. λάβωσι Πνεῦμα ἅγιον] Cp. v. 17, ἐλάμβανον Πν. ἅγ. and our Lord's own words, John xx. 22, λάβετε Πνεῦμα ἅγιον.

17. τότε ἐπετίθουν τὰς χεῖρας—ἅγιον] The going down of Peter and John to the city of Samaria, in order to receive its inhabitants who had been baptized into full communion with the spiritual Israel of God's Church in Christ, is an event full of interest when considered with reference to the history of the Old Testament concerning that region.

As was observed above (vii. 16), Sychem or Shechem, in Samaria, was the first place in Canaan where God appeared to Abraham when he came from Haran, and there he built his first altar to the Lord. It was also the first place to which Jacob went, on his coming from Padan Aram, with his children the Patriarchs; and there also he built the altar El-Elohe-Israel. (Gen. xxxiii. 20.) There it was that two of the twelve Patriarchs, Simeon and Levi, in cruelty and subtlety, constrained the inhabitants to communion with the literal Israel by Circumcision. (Gen. xxxiv. 15—30.) But now, after that the Holy Ghost has been poured out from heaven upon the Church,—two of the Twelve Apostolic Patriarchs of the Spiritual Israel,—Peter and John,—go down to the same region,—perhaps also to the same city,—and receive its inhabitants into full communion with the true children of Abraham, or Israel of God, the Christian Church, by the Spiritual Circumcision of the heart, i. e. by the Gift of the Holy Ghost.

The names of the two Apostles so employed deserve notice. Simeon and Levi had been the Ministers of Wrath; Peter and John are the Ministers of Grace. Peter's name was Simeon (Acts xv. 14); and John, as joined (Gen. xxix. 34) constantly to him (see on John xviii. 15, 16. Acts iii. 1), was well typified by Levi, the brother, by both parents of Simeon (Gen. xxix. 33, 34; xlix. 5).

We may observe also, that the gracious work of the Spirit on the hearts of the Apostles themselves, and through them on the Church, is made more significant by the contrast of the former conduct of two of the Apostles in this region. Before they had been baptized with "the Holy Ghost and fire," the two brethren, James and John, even when in the company of Christ upon earth, had been eager to call down fire from heaven and destroy the village of the Samaritans, which would not receive them. (Luke ix. 54.) They had been ready to do the vindictive work of Simeon and Levi. But now that they have been baptized with fire, the two Apostolic brethren, Peter and John, call down from heaven on the Samaritans the pure and holy flame of zeal and love. Such was the change wrought by the Holy Ghost, poured down from heaven by Christ, now ascended into heaven, and there sitting in glory.

18. ἰδὼν ὁ Σίμων, ὅτι—δίδοται] ἰδὼν, A, B, C, D, E. Eth. θεασάμενος.

It is observable, that, whereas miraculous powers were exercised by the Deacons, and other disciples, yet it does not appear (as Hooker remarks, V. lxvi.) that they had the power "to derive or communicate them to other men."

"Simon Magus," says Hooker (V. lxvi. 2), "perceiving that power to be in none but the Apostles, and presuming that they which had it could sell it, sought to purchase it of them with money." Thus even Simon himself, the arch-heretic, supplies a strong argument for the reality of the Divine Grace dispensed by prayer and laying on of Apostolic hands. He would never have offered to give money for what did not exist.

On the sin of Simony hence deriving its name, see the authorities in Bingham, Antiq. xvi., and Dupin, On the Study of Theology, p. 469.

20. Πέτρος δὲ εἶπε—κτᾶσθαι] Thou thoughtest to purchase the gift of God by money. A remarkable proof of St. Peter's honesty, courage, and disinterestedness.

Simon Peter would not receive any thing from Simon Magus for the dispensation of a spiritual gift—although at that time the Church subsisted on alms (see iv. 35). He claimed no merit to himself for the power which he was enabled to use. It was δωρεὰ Θεοῦ, the gift of God. He boldly rebuked Simon, who was adored by the people of Samaria. And Simon Magus, who had bewitched the people, feels Simon Peter's power, and submits to it, acknowledges his prophetic gifts (v. 24), and craves his prayers.

22. μετανόησον καὶ δεήθητι—εἰ ἄρα ἀφεθήσεται] A strong passage

(1) Against all Donatistic iteration of Baptism.

(2) Against all Novatian denials of Remission of sin, after commission of deadly sin after Baptism. See the Expositors of Article XVI. of the Church of England.

(3) For the reality of Divine Grace in Baptism, which though dormant in a Simon Magus, in a death-like sleep of sin, may be awakened, and be made available by Repentance and Prayer, for salvation not to be repented of.

(4) And consequently for the possibility and duty of Prayer and Repentance, on the part of baptized persons after falling into deadly sin. See XXXIX Articles, Art. xvi.

St. Augustin has some excellent remarks on the case of Simon (in Joann. Tract. vi.), "Cui dicit hæc Petrus? Utique baptizato. Jam baptisma habebat; sed Columba visceribus non hærebat. Baptisma illi quid proderat? Noli ergo de Baptismo gloriari, quasi ex ipso salus tibi sufficiat. Noli irasci; depone fel, veni ad Columbam . . . habeto humilitatem, charitatem, pacem; habeto bonum quod nondum habes, ut prosit tibi bonum quod habes—veni ad Columbam (i. e. ad Ecclesiæ unitatem), hìc tibi proderit quod foris non solum non proderat, sed etiam oberat."

23. τοῦ Κυρίου] So A, B, C, D, E, and others. Eth. τοῦ Θεοῦ. Cf. v. 24.

23. εἰς χολήν] Something more than ἐν χολῇ. You who have been baptized into Christ (εἰς Χριστὸν), have plunged yourself into the gall of bitterness. Cp. v. 40.

κριθεὶς δὲ ὁ Σίμων εἶπε, Δεήθητε ὑμεῖς ὑπὲρ ἐμοῦ πρὸς τὸν Κύριον, ὅπως μηδὲν ἐπέλθῃ ἐπ' ἐμὲ ὧν εἰρήκατε.

25 Οἱ μὲν οὖν διαμαρτυράμενοι καὶ λαλήσαντες τὸν λόγον τοῦ Κυρίου ὑπέστρεφον εἰς Ἰερουσαλὴμ, πολλάς τε κώμας τῶν Σαμαρειτῶν εὐηγγελίζοντο.

26 Ἄγγελος δὲ Κυρίου ἐλάλησε πρὸς Φίλιππον λέγων, Ἀνάστηθι καὶ πορεύου κατὰ μεσημβρίαν, ἐπὶ τὴν ὁδὸν τὴν καταβαίνουσαν ἀπὸ Ἰερουσαλὴμ εἰς Γάζαν· αὕτη ἐστὶν ἔρημος· 27 Καὶ ἀναστὰς ἐπορεύθη· καὶ ἰδοὺ, ἀνὴρ Αἰθίοψ, εὐνοῦχος,

---

25. ὑπέστρεφον] they were returning. So A, B, D.. Elz. ὑπέστρεψαν.

— πολλὰς Σαμαρειτῶν] a fulfilment of our Lord's prophecy (Acts i. 8).

— κώμας] villages. See on Matt. ix. 35. On this word is an interesting Homily of S. Chrysostom here, exhorting owners of property to build and endow Churches and Chapels on their estates—a counsel very seasonable for these and all times.

— εὐηγγελίζοντο] they were evangelizing in their way. As to the accusative, see xiv. 21; xvi. 10. So A, B, C, D, E.—Elz. εὐηγγελίσαντο.

26. Γάζαν] Γάζα Hebr. עַזָּה, a fortress, the Hebrew ע being changed into the Greek γ. Gen. x. 19. Josh. xiii. 3. 1 Sam. vi. 17. An old Canaanitish fortified town of Philistia, celebrated in the history of Samson; situated on a hill twenty stadia from the sea, stormed and plundered by Alexander the Great (Plutarch, Alex. 25. Q. Curt. iv. 6), and dismantled by the Jewish Prince Alexander Jannæus, B.C. 96 (see Joseph. Ant. xiii. 13, 3), but not long afterwards restored by Gabinius (Joseph. xiv. 5, 3). For a description, see Robinson, ii. 375—384.

In the sending forth of the Gospel toward Gaza, celebrated in Philistian History, and for the conversion of the chamberlain of Ethiopia, we may recognize an intimation and earnest of the fulfilment of the Prophecy concerning Christ (Ps. lxxxvii. 4), "Behold Philistia, with Tyre and Ethiopia, there shall He be born," and Ps. lx. 8, "Philistia, be thou glad of Me," and cviii. 9, "Over Philistia will I triumph," and lxviii. 31, "Ethiopia shall stretch out her hands unto God."

The incidents in the Acts of the Apostle are, for the most part, prophetical as well as historical; they show what has been, and is; and in the past and present they give a pledge of the future progress and triumphs of Christianity.

— αὕτη ἐστὶν ἔρημος] These words are regarded by many as a parenthesis of St. Luke, distinguishing it as the old City, ruined by Alexander, from the other Gaza. See A Lapide, Wetstein, Rosenm., and others;

But this does not seem to be a correct view.

The site of the new City was near that of the old one. The same roads led to them both; and what did Philip do there? Nothing. He did not meet the Eunuch at Gaza,—new or old,—but in the wilderness. See also on v. 36 and v. 40, whence it appears that Philip did not ever arrive at Gaza.

The meaning seems to be this;

Philip had been very successful in preaching in a populous metropolitan City to vast multitudes (see v. 6). God would now try his faith, and show His own Divine power, and present an example in him to other Preachers of the Gospel. He would also reward the devout Ethiopian, who could little expect to meet a preacher in the wilderness;

The address of the Angel to St. Philip may be therefore paraphrased thus;—Quit the City of Samaria, but do not go to the north, to populous Galilee, where thou mightest make many converts; nor yet to Jerusalem, but beyond it, to the very extremity of Palestine. Go along the road which leads to Gaza,—which is desert; Almighty God has something for thee to do there. He can enable thee to do the work of an Evangelist, not only in the city of Samaria, but in the wilderness of Philistia.

This was a speech something like our Lord's question to the Apostle Philip in the wilderness (ἐν τῇ ἐρημίᾳ), "Whence shall we buy bread for these that they may eat?" (Matt. xiv. 15. John vi. 5.)

It may also be compared to His command to the Apostles, to cast in their net for a draught in a place in the sea where they had toiled all night, and caught nothing. (Luke v. 5. John xxi. 6.)

But still the command of the Lord to Philip was,—"Go along the road to Gaza, to the southern extremity of Palestine, the wilderness." And he arose and went. And there, in the wilderness, he saw a chariot, and was commanded by the Spirit to join himself to it; he ran and overtook it, he fed the soul of the Ethiopian Courtier with the bread of life; he caught, if we may venture so to speak (see John xxi. 9), this 'great Fish' in the Net of the Gospel, even in the wilderness. He baptized him; and perhaps through means of the example and influence of this great Courtier, the Morians' land soon stretched forth her hands unto God (Ps. lxviii. 31. Cf. Zeph. iii. 10). And thus even in Philip the Evangelist was the prophecy fulfilled, "The voice of him that crieth in the Wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God." Isa. xl. 3.

As to the word ἔρημος, it is generally considered as an adjective here; and if so, it is to be connected with ὁδός. And so the Arabic and Syriac Versions, and Lightfoot here, and Winer (Gr. Gr. pp. 108. 142) and Robinson (ii. p. 380), who says that it indicates the southern road, leading from Eleutheropolis to Gaza, through the desert, or region without villages; as is the case at the present day.

The sense then would be: Go along that road which is deserted, and where therefore you may not expect to meet any one. But still, Go.

Or, αὕτη ἐστὶν ἔρημος may mean, 'that region is uninhabited,' an ἔρημος: where you may expect to find no one; but here is the force of the command, here is the trial of your faith. Go and see. And it may be observed that the word ἔρημος occurs eight other times in the Acts of the Apostles, and in seven of these (vii. 30. 36. 38. 42. 44; xiii. 18; xxi. 38) it is a substantive. In one only (i. 20, a quotation from the LXX) it is an adjective.

It does not seem therefore that the words αὕτη ἐστὶν ἔρημος are a parenthesis inserted by St. Luke; but they are words of the Angel to St. Philip; and their meaning is either, "this road is desert," or, "this is a wilderness."

On this sending of St. Philip, see below, ix. 6.

27. εὐνοῦχος] rendered by some here a Chamberlain or Courtier. See on Matt. xix. 12.

It must however be observed, that a strong reason in favour of the literal translation of the word (as adopted in the English Version) may be derived from the promise in Isaiah lvi. 3—8. And it may have been a part of St. Luke's design, in this narrative, to show that that promise was fulfilled in the Christian Church, as described by St. Paul, Gal. iii. 28.

Besides; the case of this εὐνοῦχος may be compared with that of the faithful and merciful Ebed-melech, also an Ethiopian and an Eunuch, who is contrasted with the rebel King and Courtiers of Judah—as the faithful Ethiopian here is contrasted with the obdurate Rulers of Jerusalem—and who received a special promise and blessing from God (Jeremiah xxxviii. 7—13; xxxix. 16—18. Cp. Baumgarten, i. p. 205).

Indeed this history of the Ethiopian, and that which soon follows, of Cornelius the first-fruits of the Gentile world, derive additional interest from the consideration that in them may be recognised a fulfilment of ancient Prophecies, particularly in that chapter of Isaiah (lvi. 3) which speak of the extension of the blessings of God's Covenant in Christ—

(1) to the "Eunuchs that keep His Sabbaths and choose the things that please Him," and in them to all who are alone and childless in this world, and yet are made members of the household of God in Christ, and so receive "a place and a name better than of sons and daughters;" and

(2) to the "Sons of the Stranger" (such as Cornelius), who were once afar off and aliens from God, but are now made near in Christ, and are brought to His Holy Mountain, and "made joyful in His House of Prayer, which shall be for 'all people.'" See Isaiah lvi. 4—7.

It may be here suggested for the reader's consideration whether these Chapters (viii.—x.) of the Acts of the Apostles do not also display the fulfilment of another Prophecy concerning the Evangelical Conquests of Christ (viz. Psalm cviii. 7). Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens (v. 5), i. e. by the Ascension. God hath spoken in His Holiness, I will rejoice and divide Shechem, or Sychem—fulfilled in the Evangelization of Samaria—perhaps Sychem itself. The triumphs of the Gospel in that region and in Galilee, mentioned in the Acts of the δυνάστης Κανδάκης βασιλίσσης Αἰθιόπων, ὃς ἦν ἐπὶ πάσης τῆς γάζης αὐτῆς, ὃς ἐληλύθει προσκυνήσων [m] εἰς Ἰερουσαλὴμ, [28] ἦν τε ὑποστρέφων, καὶ καθήμενος ἐπὶ τοῦ ἅρματος αὐτοῦ ἀνεγίνωσκεν Ἡσαΐαν τὸν προφήτην. [29] [n] Εἶπε δὲ τὸ Πνεῦμα τῷ Φιλίππῳ, Πρόσελθε καὶ κολλήθητι τῷ ἅρματι τούτῳ. [30] Προσδραμὼν δὲ ὁ Φίλιππος ἤκουσεν αὐτοῦ ἀναγινώσκοντος τὸν προφήτην Ἡσαΐαν, καὶ εἶπεν, [o] Ἆρά γε γινώσκεις ἃ ἀναγινώσκεις; [31] Ὁ δὲ εἶπε, Πῶς γὰρ ἂν δυναίμην, ἐὰν μή τις ὁδηγήσῃ με; παρεκάλεσέ τε τὸν Φίλιππον ἀναβάντα καθίσαι σὺν αὐτῷ. [32] [p] Ἡ δὲ περιοχὴ τῆς γραφῆς ἣν ἀνεγίνωσκεν ἦν αὕτη, Ὡς πρόβατον ἐπὶ σφαγὴν ἤχθη, καὶ ὡς ἀμνὸς ἐναντίον τοῦ κείροντος αὐτὸν ἄφωνος, οὕτως οὐκ ἀνοίγει τὸ στόμα αὐτοῦ· [33] ἐν τῇ ταπεινώσει αὐτοῦ ἡ κρίσις αὐτοῦ ἤρθη, τὴν δὲ γενεὰν αὐτοῦ τίς διηγήσεται; ὅτι αἴρεται ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς ἡ ζωὴ αὐτοῦ. [34] Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ εὐνοῦχος τῷ Φιλίππῳ εἶπε, Δέομαί σου, περὶ τίνος ὁ προφήτης λέγει τοῦτο; περὶ ἑαυτοῦ, ἢ περὶ ἑτέρου τινός; [35] [q] Ἀνοίξας δὲ ὁ Φίλιππος τὸ στόμα αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἀρξάμενος ἀπὸ τῆς γραφῆς ταύτης, [r] εὐηγγελίσατο αὐτῷ τὸν Ἰησοῦν. [36] Ὡς δὲ ἐπορεύοντο κατὰ τὴν ὁδὸν ἦλθον ἐπί τι ὕδωρ· καί φησιν ὁ εὐνοῦχος, Ἰδοὺ, ὕδωρ· τί κωλύει με βαπτισθῆναι; [37] [s] εἶπε δὲ ὁ Φίλιππος, Εἰ πιστεύεις ἐξ ὅλης τῆς καρδίας, ἔξεστιν. ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ εἶπε, Πιστεύω τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ εἶναι τὸν Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν. [38] καὶ ἐκέλευσε στῆναι τὸ ἅρμα· καὶ κατέβησαν

m 2 Chron. 6. 32, 33.
n Isa. 65. 24. Hos. 6. 3.
o Matt. 12. 33, 51. Eph. 5. 17. p Isa. 53. 7, 8.
q Luke 24. 27.
r ch. 18. 28.
s Mark 16. 16.

Apostles (ix. 31), seem to be predicted by the words of the Psalm (v. 8), "Manasseh is mine, Ephraim also is the strength of my head;" and Christ triumphed over Philistia by the preaching of Philip in the road to Gaza and at Azotus, and of Peter at Joppa. Perhaps also the promise of the conquest over Edom (which was a name for the enemies of God's Church, and is especially applied by the Rabbis to Rome) may have been begun to be fulfilled by the reception of the Roman soldier Cornelius, the representative of the heathen and Roman world, into the Christian Church. Doubtless also it had a literal fulfilment in the Victories of the Gospel in Idumæa.

The gracious consequences of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, in the propagation of the Gospel, are prophetically declared in Psalm lxviii. 7—31. In v. 7 the description of the giving of the Law on Sinai is immediately followed by that of the promulgation of the Gospel at Sion, and its fruits are foreshown. See particularly v. 27 of that Psalm, perhaps in reference to the Conversion of St. Paul, and v. 31, to the baptism of the Ethiopian.

Indeed the History of the Acts of the Apostles is an Inspired Comment on the language of the Psalms and of the Prophets.

— Κανδάκης] The common title of Queens of Meroë. Cp. Strabo, xvii. p. 820. Plin. N. H. vi. 35. Biscoe, p. 69.

— γάζης] He who was over all the earthly γάζα of a Queen finds heavenly treasure in the desert road from Jerusalem to Gaza. And why? Because he had left his earthly Treasury to go up to the Temple to worship, and was seeking for goodly treasure in the field of the written Word. Cp. Matt. xiii. 44. Is this an unmeaning paronomasia? See v. 30.

— προσκυνήσων] He was therefore a proselyte, not a Gentile. The firstfruits of the Heathen world was Cornelius. See x. 1.

28. ἀνεγίνωσκεν] was reading, and reading aloud; Statesman and Courtier as he was. A celebrated passage, often cited by the Fathers, as showing the blessed fruits of reading the Scriptures. See S. Chrys. here, and hom. 35 in Gen. S. Jerome, Epist. 103, ad Paulin. A lesson to travellers. "Legendum, audiendum, percontandum, etiam in itinere, etiamsi parùm intelligis (vide v. 34) Habenti datur." (Bengel.)

30. γινώσκεις ἃ ἀναγινώσκεις] On similar paronomasias, see Luke xxi. 11, and 2 Cor. iii. 2, γινωσκομένη καὶ ἀναγινωσκομένη, 2 Thess. iii. 11.

It seems probable from this verbal parallelism, that Philip spoke in Greek; and that the Eunuch was reading Isaiah in the Septuagint version made in Egypt.

Valck. compares the celebrated paronomasia of Julian the Apostate,—ἀνέγνων, ἔγνων, κατέγνων, and the courageous reply of the Christian Bishop to him, ἀνέγνως, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἔγνως· εἰ γὰρ ἔγνως, οὐκ ἂν κατέγνως.

32. ἡ περιοχή] the passage,—χωρίον or τόπος. See Valck. Cp. 1 Pet. ii. 6, περιέχει ἐν τῇ γραφῇ.

— ὡς πρόβατον—αὐτόν] Isa. liii. 7, 8. From the LXX Version.

Here ἐν τῇ ταπεινώσει ἡ κρίσις αὐτοῦ ἤρθη represents the Hebrew מֵעֹצֶר וּמִמִּשְׁפָּט לֻקָּח, i. e. he was taken from oppression and judgment; and it seems the LXX means to say that by his humiliation his condemnation was taken away, i. e. He was justified: and thus the words are a paraphrase of the original, and mean that "He was made perfect through (as well as from) sufferings," and was exalted not only from his humiliation, but because "He humbled Himself and became obedient to death" (Phil. ii. 8. Heb. ii. 10).

33. τὴν δὲ γενεὰν αὐτοῦ, κ.τ.λ.] γενεὰ is יֵזַע, dor (whence Latin durus, duratio). Who shall declare his duration? i. e. although He is cut off as man, yet He is the eternal God. He is ἀγενεαλόγητος ὡς Θεός. (Œcum.)

— ὅτι αἴρεται] because His life is cut off from earth (see Daniel ix. 26) He endures for ever in heaven; that is, He as God-Man is exalted for ever by His temporary Humiliation on earth. See Phil. ii. 8.

35. τὸν Ἰησοῦν] Hence it is clear (whatever may be alleged by some modern critics to the contrary) that the Fifty-third Chapter of the Prophet Isaiah has rightly been deemed by the Church to be a prophecy concerning Christ; and that the Criticism which propounds allegations inconsistent with such an exposition is entitled to little regard from those who desire to be faithful members of Christ and of His Church.

36. ὕδωρ] At Bethsor (say the Scholia on S. Jerome, loc. Hebr. p. 277) or Bethsoron, twenty miles S. of Jerusalem, and only two miles from Hebron. "Ibi," says Bede, p. 41, "mutavit Æthiops pellem suam, id est sorde peccatorum ablutâ de lavacro Jesu dealbatus ascendit." If so, Philip overtook the Ethiopian long before he came to Gaza; and this seems to be another reason why ἔρημος cannot be connected with Γάζα in v. 26.

37. εἶπε — Χριστόν] This verse is not found in A, B, C, G, H, and in some ancient Versions, and has been omitted by most recent Editors. Perhaps rightly: and it may be observed also that the words τὸν Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν (as they stand in Elz.) are no where thus used by St. Luke in the Acts of the Apostles or the Gospel.

But, on the other hand, the verse is found in substance in E, and in the Codex Amiatinus of Vulg., and in numerous cursive Manuscripts. And it appears to be at least as ancient as the age of Irenæus, who says, iii. 12, "Hunc esse Jesum, et impletam in Eo esse Scripturam, quemadmodum ipse Eunuchus credens et statim postulans baptizari dicebat Credo Filium Dei esse Jesum,"—omitting Χριστόν. I have not therefore ventured to expunge the verse; which is retained, in brackets, by Bornemann.

The words, "he preached to him Jesus," intimate, says Augustine (de Fide et Oper. 6), that he declared to him the sum of Christian Doctrine, and of Christian Practice, as grounded on Faith in Christ.

ἀμφότεροι εἰς τὸ ὕδωρ, ὅ τε Φίλιππος καὶ ὁ εὐνοῦχος· καὶ ἐβάπτισεν αὐτόν.

t 1 Kings 18. 12. Ezek. 3. 12, 14. u Ps. 119. 14, 111.

39 τ Ὅτε δὲ ἀνέβησαν ἐκ τοῦ ὕδατος, Πνεῦμα Κυρίου ἥρπασε τὸν Φίλιππον· καὶ οὐκ εἶδεν αὐτὸν οὐκέτι ὁ εὐνοῦχος, ἐπορεύετο γὰρ τὴν ὁδὸν αὐτοῦ u χαίρων. 40 Φίλιππος δὲ εὑρέθη εἰς Ἄζωτον· καὶ διερχόμενος εὐηγγελίζετο τὰς πόλεις πάσας, ἕως τοῦ ἐλθεῖν αὐτὸν εἰς Καισάρειαν.

a ch. 26. 10. Gal. 1. 13. 1 Tim. 1. 13.
b ch. 8. 3. Gal. 1. 13.
c ch. 22. 6. & 26. 12. 1 Cor. 15. 8. 2 Cor. 12. 2.

IX. 1 a Ὁ δὲ Σαῦλος ἔτι b ἐμπνέων ἀπειλῆς καὶ φόνου εἰς τοὺς μαθητὰς τοῦ Κυρίου, προσελθὼν τῷ ἀρχιερεῖ 2 ἠτήσατο παρ' αὐτοῦ ἐπιστολὰς εἰς Δαμασκὸν πρὸς τὰς συναγωγὰς, ὅπως ἐάν τινας εὕρῃ τῆς ὁδοῦ ὄντας, ἄνδρας τε καὶ γυναῖκας, δεδεμένους ἀγάγῃ εἰς Ἰερουσαλήμ. 3 c Ἐν δὲ τῷ πορεύεσθαι ἐγένετο αὐτὸν ἐγγίζειν τῇ Δαμασκῷ, ἐξαίφνης τε αὐτὸν περιήστραψεν φῶς ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ· 4 καὶ

---

38. ἐβάπτισεν αὐτόν] See Greg. Naz. ii. p. 711 (an Oration to those who delay their Baptism). Philip was a married man, and only a Deacon, and was sent by the Angel to baptize the Ethiopian. "Let me be a Philip; be thou a minister of Candace. Say, 'Here is water, what hindereth me to be baptized?' Seize the opportunity. Though an Ethiop in body, be thou pure in heart. And do not say, 'Let a Bishop baptize me;' or, if a Presbyter, let him be unmarried. Man looketh on the face, but God on the heart. Any Minister can cleanse you by Baptism, if he is not alien from the Church. One Minister may be of gold, another of iron, but they are both like rings which have the seal of Christ; let them stamp on thee, who art the wax, the image of the Great King. There is a difference in the metal but not in the seal."

39. ἥρπασε] Cp. the case of Elijah, 1 Kings xviii. 12. 2 Kings ii. 16. Ezekiel iii. 12. 14. St. Paul, 2 Cor. xii. 2. 4. See Didymus and Chrys. here, who observe, that by this sudden disappearance of Philip, the Ethiopian was assured that the message he had received was from heaven; and that, if the Ethiopian had asked Philip to remain with him, and he had refused to do so, he would not then have gone on his way rejoicing. Cp. Robinson's Palestine, i. 320; iii. 14.

40. εὑρέθη εἰς Ἄζωτον] Showing that the object of his mission was attained. Ἄζωτος, Ashdod, now Esdud (Robinson, ii. p. 368),—being on the coast, half-way between Gaza on the south, and Joppa on the north, and in the same latitude with Jerusalem. On εἰς see v. 23; vii. 4, and viii. 23. Winer, p. 369.

— εὐηγγελίζετο—Καισάρειαν] Going northward along the sea-coast from Azotus to Cæsarea, he passed through Joppa, and did the work of an Evangelist (εὐηγγελίζετο), and prepared the way for St. Peter's visit to that place (ix. 34—43), and for the conversion of Cornelius at Cæsarea (x. 1—24), where we find Philip again (Acts xxi. 8).

On Cæsarea itself see x. 1.

The house of Philip the Evangelist was still standing at Cæsarea in St. Jerome's age, and was even shown in Bede's time. (Jerome, Epist. Paul. p. 150. Bede, in Acta, p. 43.)

CH. IX. 1. Σαῦλος] Saul, God's σκεῦος ἐκλογῆς for the conversion of the Gentiles, was of the tribe of Benjamin (Acts xiii. 21); and the Fathers (Tertullian adv. Marcion, v. 1. Chrys. Ambrose, de Ben. Patr. ad fin. Aug., Serm. 279) apply to him, in a spiritual sense, Jacob's prophecy, Gen. xlix. 27, "Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf. In the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil."—"Escas dividet" (Aug., Serm. 279, and Append., Serm. 189); and "escas divisit," says Ambrose (de Bened. Patriarch. 12), "evangelizans gentibus verbum."

Benjamin's birth was the occasion of his mother's death, so "Sauli nativitas in Evangelium matri ejus Synagogæ mortem attulit." At first he might be called Benoni (a child of sorrow), but by God's grace he became Benjamin (Gen. xxxv. 18), the son of a right hand. Benjamin was the last among the twelve Patriarchs; so Paul among the Apostles (1 Cor. xv. 8, 9). Benjamin was preferred above the rest by Joseph (Gen. xliii. 34); so Paul by Christ (1 Cor. xv. 10).

Benjamin is called 'little' (צָעִיר, Ps. lxviii. 27), and yet "a Ruler;" and so Saul is 'Paul,' or little (see on xiii. 9), and calls himself "the least of the Apostles" (1 Cor. xv. 9), and yet "not a whit behind the very chiefest Apostles" (2 Cor. xi. 5; xii. 11). Even Cornelius à Lapide here says, "Ita Paulus à Christo dotatus fuit præ aliis Apostolis."

— ἐμπνέων ἀπειλῆς] Something more than πνέων ἀπειλῆς, inwardly breathing of slaughter; his very breath was impregnated with threats and slaughter. (Meyer, who compares Josh. x. 40, ἐμπνέον ζωῆς.) On the genitive of the material after πνέω, cp. Winer, G. G. § 30, p. 183, who quotes Aristoph. Equit. 437, οὗτος ἤδη κακίας καὶ συκοφαντίας πνεῖ.

— προσελθὼν τῷ ἀρχιερεῖ] See xxii. 5. Saul even outran the High Priest in furious zeal against the Church: he was not sent, but craved a commission against it.

2. εἰς Δαμασκόν] "Damascus, civitas olim celeberrima, in planitie amœnissimâ et fertilissimâ inter Libanum et Antilibanum sita, in eâ Syriæ parte, quæ in literis sacris Syria Damascena 2 Sam. viii. 5. Ies. vii. 8, à Strabone lib. 16, p. 755. Cœle-Syria vocatur. Quanta Judæorum frequentia ibi fuerit, ex eo colligi potest, quod Joseph. B. J. ii. 25 narret, sub Nerone Damascenos in suâ urbe decem Judæorum millia, quos in publicis thermis collectos fortè habebant, inermes oppressisse et trucidasse." (Kuin.) Cp. Howson, i. 106. Lewin, pp. 54—63.

It may at first seem surprising, that the power of the High Priest and the Sanhedrim of Jerusalem should have extended beyond the limits of Palestine so far as Damascus, and that they should have been allowed to send Saul on a commission to bind in that city, and to bring bound to Jerusalem men and women, without any reference to the power of Rome.

The solution of this question appears to be supplied,—not by the Acts of the Apostles, but by the circumstance which appears incidentally from the statement of St. Paul in one of his Epistles, viz. "that in Damascus the Governor, or Ethnarch, under Aretas, the king (i. e. of Arabia Petræa), was guarding (ἐφρούρει) the city of the Damascenes, desirous to seize him, and that he was let down in a basket by a window in the wall, and so escaped his hands." (2 Cor. xi. 32, 33.)

Hence it appears that Damascus was now garrisoned by a military force of king Aretas—a remarkable circumstance—and not, as heretofore, by the Romans, and by the forces of the President of Syria. (Cp. Joseph. xiv. 4, 5.)

By what means Damascus had come into the hands of Aretas is not clear. Probably Aretas, after his victory over Herod Antipas (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 5. 1), had been induced by his successes to make inroads into Syria; and a favourable opportunity seems to have been presented by the departure of Vitellius, the President of Syria, to Rome, on hearing the news of the death of the Emperor Tiberius (in the spring of A.D. 37), for the occupation of Damascus by Aretas.

The Roman power lay as it were in abeyance; and Aretas, whose victory was welcome to the Jews, who detested Herod Antipas, was desirous to conciliate them (cp. Burton's Lectures, p. 87), and seconded the endeavours of the officials of the Sanhedrim to arrest Saul, whom they had sent as a commissioner to bind the Christians at Damascus, and who was now, in their eyes, a renegade and apostate, and who "confounded the Jews at Damascus" by preaching the doctrine which he had been sent by them to destroy.

If these suppositions are correct, then we see in them an additional proof of St. Paul's sincerity and courage, in his conversion to Christianity.

The assertion in pp. 145—155 of Biscoe's Lectures, that the words of the Jews in John xviii. 31, "It is not lawful for us to put any man to death," intimate only a temporary disability, on account of the sanctity of the Passover, does not seem satisfactory.

— τῆς ὁδοῦ] דֶּרֶךְ, often used for saving doctrine and practice; the way that leads to heaven (Chrys.); "Via, in quâ ambulandum, non otiandum" (Bengel). "Iter hoc facientibus patria cœlum est" (Valck.). As τὸ ὄνομα—the Name—was, to the primitive Church, the holy and saving Name of Jesus (see v. 40), so ἡ ὁδός—the Way—was the holy and saving Way of the Gospel. See below, xix. 9. 23; xxii. 4; xxiv. 14. 22; xxvi. 13.

3. ἐγγίζειν τῇ Δαμασκῷ] The distance from Jerusalem to πεσὼν ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν ἤκουσε φωνὴν λέγουσαν αὐτῷ Σαοὺλ, Σαοὺλ, τί [d] μέ διώκεις ; [d] Matt. 25. 40, 45.

5 [e] Εἶπε δέ· Τίς εἶ, κύριε ; ὁ δὲ, Ἐγώ εἰμι Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος ὃν σὺ διώκεις· [e] ch. 5. 39.

6 Ἀλλὰ ἀνάστηθι καὶ εἴσελθε εἰς τὴν πόλιν, καὶ λαληθήσεταί σοι τί σε δεῖ ποιεῖν.

7 [f] Οἱ δὲ ἄνδρες οἱ συνοδεύοντες αὐτῷ εἱστήκεισαν ἐνεοὶ, ἀκούοντες μὲν τῆς [f] ch. 22. 9. & 26. 13.

Damascus was about 140 miles. Saul was permitted by God to go on his journey, and was not checked till he approached its end, and was now about to enter the city, and to seize upon his prey. (See Acts xxii. 6; xxvi. 12. 1 Cor. xv. 8.)

Thus the reason of this divine interposition was more clearly evinced. It showed God's watchful Providence, and fatherly mercy to His Church, in the critical hour of her need (see below, xii. 6. 23). Then Saul was arrested; and then, in the crisis of peril, the Church was delivered. This is in exact accordance with the general operations of Almighty God, as seen in Holy Scripture. See Dr. Barrow's excellent remarks in Sermon xi. vol. i. p. 232, where he says,—

"God beholdeth violent men setting out in their unjust attempts. He letteth them proceed on in a full career, until they reach the edge of their design; then instantly he checketh, He stoppeth, He tumbleth them down, or turneth them backward. Thus was Haman's plot dashed (Esther iii.), when he had procured a royal decree, when he had fixed a time, when he had issued forth letters to destroy God's people. Thus was Pharaoh overwhelmed (Exod. xiv.), when he had just overtaken the children of Israel. Thus were the designs of Abimelech, of Absalom, of Adonijah, of Sanballat nipped. Thus when Sennacherib with an unmatchable host had encamped against Jerusalem, and had to appearance swallowed it, God did put a hook into his nose, and turned him back into his own land (2 Kings xix. 28). Thus when Antiochus Epiphanes was marching on furiously to accomplish his threat of turning Jerusalem into a charnel, a noisome disease did intercept his progress (2 Macc. ix. 5). Thus when the profane Caligula did mean to discharge his bloody rage on the Jews for refusing to worship him (Joseph. xviii. 12), a domestic sword did presently give vent to his revengeful breath. Thus also, when Julian had by his policy and authority projected to overthrow our religion, his plot soon was quashed, and his life snapped away by an unknown hand (Chrysost. in Babyl. Orat. 2. Naz. Orat. 4). Thus whenever the enemy doth come in like a flood (threatening immediately to overflow and overturn all things), the Spirit of the Lord doth lift up a standard against him (Isa. lix. 19); that is, God's secret efficacy doth suddenly restrain and repress his outrage. This usually is the method of Divine providence. God could prevent the beginnings of wicked designs; He could supplant them in their first onsets; He could anywhere sufflaminate and subvert them; but He rather winketh for a time, and suffereth the designers to go on till they are mounted to the top of confidence, and good people are cast on the brink of ruin; then ἀπὸ μηχανῆς, surprisingly, unexpectedly He striketh in with effectual succour; so declaring how vain the presumption is of impious undertakers; how needful and sure his protection is over innocent people; how much reason the one hath to dread Him, and the other to confide in Him. Then is God seen, then his care and power will be acknowledged, when He snatcheth us from the jaws of danger, when our soul doth escape as a bird out of the snare of the fowler." (Ps. cxxiv. 7.) Cp. Barrow, vol. iv. p. 218, Serm. ix.

This, and something more than this was done by God in the case of Saul. He was not checked before he was near Damascus; if he had been stopped near Jerusalem, or midway, he would perhaps never have entered Damascus. But it was so ordered that Saul might preach the Gospel in the same city whither he had come to persecute; and thus under the controlling power of God, the very instrument which had been chosen by Satan to destroy the Church at Damascus, was used by God to build it up.

So will it be at the end—when the power of Satan and of Antichrist seems nearly to have achieved a Victory over the Church, then will Christ appear from heaven to destroy them with "the brightness of His coming," and to deliver His faithful people from their hands.

4. πεσὼν ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν] In pictures of his conversion Saul is generally represented on horseback, which is not very probable. S. Augustine says, "eum ambulâsse;" and "Pharisei vix equis utebantur." (See Salmeron and A Lapide here, and ad Deuteron. xvii. 17.)

— φωνήν] in the Hebrew Tongue. See Acts xxii. 9; xxvi. 14.

— Σαοὺλ, Σαούλ] The Hebrew of the Apostle's name, which is never used in the New Testament, except by Christ (ix. 4. 11; xxii. 7; xxvi. 14) and by Ananias (ix. 17; xxii. 13). In all other cases he is called Σαῦλος and Παῦλος.

This repetition of the name, and the fact that he alone (see v. 7) was permitted to see Jesus and to hear His words while others only saw the light, and heard the sound, showed that the vision was addressed to him.

— τί μὲ διώκεις] μὲ is emphatic (see Matt. xvi. 18, and on John xxi. 2). "Persecutorem suum vocavit persecutorem membrorum suorum (says Aug. in Joann. tract. x., and Serm. 279). Membris adhuc in terrâ positis, Caput in cœlo clamabat, et non dicebat, Quid persequeris servos meos, sed, Quid ME persequeris?" And S. Bernard (Serm. de Convers. Paul. ap. A Lapide), "Persequebatur Eum qui adversus Corpus Ejus, quod est Ecclesia, odio furebat iniquo." See therefore Christ's love to His Members (Isa. lxiii. 9. Matt. xxv. 40), and the exceeding sinfulness of injuries against the Church.

See also above, on viii. 1.

5. ἐγὼ Ἰησοῦς] He does not say, I am the Son of God, but I am Jesus of Nazareth (ὁ Ναζωραῖος is in A, C, E, not Elz.), He who was crucified; He to whom St. Stephen prayed, in thy hearing, when thou wast consenting to His death.

It is distinctly said that Saul saw Jesus in heaven (see vv. 17. 27. Acts xxii. 14, and 1 Cor. xv. 8). Hence it has been argued by some Romanist Divines (e.g. A Lapide here), that Christ's human body, which is in heaven, was also near to St. Paul. "Fuit ergo Christi corpus tunc in duobus locis, puta in cœlo et in aëre; quod nota, contra eos qui negant Christi corpus posse esse in cœlo et in Eucharistiâ simul." But see on Acts iii. 21, and vii. 56, where St. Stephen sees the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing at the right hand of God. That vision of St. Stephen explains the vision of St. Paul; and that vision of St. Stephen, and his prayer to Jesus in heaven, may have been instrumental in procuring this vision of St. Paul and his conversion.

— διώκεις] After this word Elz. adds σκληρόν σοι πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζειν· τρέμων τε καὶ θαμβῶν εἶπε, Κύριε, τί με θέλεις ποιῆσαι; καὶ ὁ Κύριος πρὸς αὐτόν. But these words are not in any MS., and seems to be borrowed from xxvi. 14, and xxii. 10.

6. εἰσελθε εἰς τὴν πόλιν, καὶ λαληθήσεταί σ. τ. σ. δ. π.] Observe that Saul, the future Apostle of the Gentiles, though arrested in his course by Jesus Christ Himself, was sent by Him into the City to be taught and baptized by one of the inferior ministers of the Church, perhaps a Deacon (Chrys.) or a Presbyter (Aug. quæst. Evang. ii. 47). Even in Saul's case, the ordinary means of reception into the Church were not dispensed with. He was sent by Christ to Ananias. Thus in a remarkable manner did the Great Head of the Church show the necessity of conformity to His own appointments and ordinances, and of a thankful acceptance, and a devout use, of the means of Grace which He dispenses by the agency of His Ministers, in the Word and Sacraments.

S. Augustine's words on this subject are deserving of the especial attention of those who are tempted by the Evil One to despise that agency;—

"Let the devout soul learn without pride what is to be learnt through the ministry of man; and let us not tempt Him in Whom we believe; lest, being deluded by the wiles of the Enemy, we refuse to go to Church to hear the Gospel read and preached by man, or even to read the Bible itself; and expect to be caught up into the third heaven, and to behold Christ, and to hear the Gospel from His mouth rather than from that of men.

"Let us be on our guard against these proud and perilous imaginations, and let us reflect that even the Apostle Paul himself, though dashed prostrate on the earth by a divine voice from heaven, was nevertheless sent by it to a man, in order to receive the Sacraments, and to be incorporated into the Church.

"Let us remember also, that although the Centurion Cornelius was assured by an Angel that his prayers were heard, and his alms had in remembrance before God, yet he was referred to Peter for baptism, in order to receive the Sacrament from him, and also to learn what he should believe, hope, and love." Aug. de Doctr. Christ. i. pp. 15. 131, and Prolog. ad lib. i. De Civ. Dei, p. 131. Cp. also Hooker, V. lxxvi. 9.

So Philip was sent by the Angel to instruct and baptize the Ethiopian. Acts viii. 26—29. Cp. Rom. x. 15.

7. εἱστήκεισαν] It is said (by Meyer, p. 184, and others) that this assertion is at variance with what St. Paul himself says, xxvi. 14, πάντων καταπεσόντων ἡμῶν εἰς τὴν γῆν. Here, it is alleged, his companions are represented as standing; there, as having fallen to the earth. But this is not the case. The word φωνῆς, [g] μηδένα δὲ θεωροῦντες. [8] Ἠγέρθη δὲ Σαῦλος ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς· ἀνεῳγμένων δὲ τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν αὐτοῦ οὐδὲν ἔβλεπε· χειραγωγοῦντες δὲ αὐτὸν εἰσήγαγον εἰς Δαμασκόν. [9] Καὶ ἦν ἡμέρας τρεῖς μὴ βλέπων, καὶ οὐκ ἔφαγεν οὐδὲ ἔπιεν.

[10] [h] Ἦν δέ τις μαθητὴς ἐν Δαμασκῷ ὀνόματι Ἀνανίας· καὶ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐν ὁράματι ὁ Κύριος, Ἀνανία· ὁ δὲ εἶπεν, Ἰδοὺ ἐγώ, Κύριε. [11] Ὁ δὲ Κύριος πρὸς αὐτόν, Ἀναστὰς πορεύθητι ἐπὶ τὴν ῥύμην τὴν καλουμένην Εὐθεῖαν, καὶ g Dan. 10. 7.

h ch. 22. 12.

εἱστήκεισαν here is joined with συνοδεύοντες (travelling together), and is contrasted with it; and it means, that they who had till then been in motion were suddenly arrested in their course. The opposition here is not between standing and falling, but between halting and going on. Cp. viii. 38, ἐκέλευσε στῆναι τὸ ἅρμα. Luke vii. 14, οἱ βαστάζοντες ἔστησαν. viii. 44, ἔστη ἡ ῥύσις τοῦ αἵματος. Therefore the two accounts are quite consistent. St. Luke describes here the suddenness with which the cavalcade was checked in its course; St. Paul, their prostration on the ground.

— ἐνεοί] Elz. ἀνεοί: but the other form is preferable as connected with ἄνεως, silent, dumb, speechless,—κωφός, Valck. Cp. Winer, § 5, p. 43. It is used by LXX, Prov. xvii. 28. Isa. lvi. 10, and elsewhere, and often means stunned by fear, ἐμβροντηθεῖς (Hesych.), as here.

— ἀκούοντες μὲν τῆς φωνῆς] It is said in v. 4 that St. Paul ἤκουσε φωνὴν λέγουσαν,—and so xxvi. 14, ἤκουσα φωνὴν λαλοῦσαν. Observe the accusative in both places, i. e. he heard and understood its articulate utterance. But they who were with him, ἤκουον τῆς φωνῆς (genitive), heard the sound, not the words of the speaker.

There is therefore no discrepancy, as is alleged by some foreign and English Expositors, between the assertion here and that in Acts xxii. 9, where it is said that they τὴν φωνὴν οὐκ ἤκουσαν τοῦ λαλοῦντος. Here we have the genitive of the thing, there the accusative. The reason is, that Saul's companions ἀκούοντες τῆς φωνῆς οὐκ ἤκουσαν τὴν φωνὴν τοῦ λαλοῦντος,—i. e. they heard, but did not understand what they heard. As is well said in Catenâ, p. 361, by Ammonius, who understood and wrote Greek well, his native tongue, Our Lord made a distinction between Saul and his fellow-travellers in regard to both senses,—i. e. of eye and of ear. He saw Jesus; they only saw the light of His appearance; he heard and understood the words of His voice; they only heard its sound;

The original words of Ammonius are, σημειωτέον, ὅτι καὶ εἶδε τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ ἤκουσεν αὐτοῦ ὁ Παῦλος· οἱ δὲ συνόντες τὴν λαμπηδόνα μόνον τοῦ φωτὸς αὐτοῦ εἶδον, οὐ μὴν αὐτόν· καὶ τὸν ἦχον ἤκουον τῆς φωνῆς, οὐ μὴν συνῆκαν τὰ λεγόμενα: one who ἀκούει φωνὴν, xxii. 14 also ἀκούει φωνῆς, but one who ἀκούει φωνῆς does not necessarily ἀκούει φωνήν. Examples of the genitive of the person, ἀκούειν λέγοντος (which is an elliptical expression), are irrelevant. As Grotius well says: "φωνὴν οὐκ ἤκουσαν est vocem non intellexerunt." And another scholar, inferior to none of the present age, Valckenaer, says, p. 450, "Dici possunt ἀκούειν τῆς φωνῆς, τὴν φωνὴν οὐκ ἀκούειν, ut prius significet sonum audire, alterum loquentis verba non intelligere." See also Schoettgen, p. 445. Hammond, p. 374. Bengel, p. 551. Hengstenberg, History of Balaam, p. 378, and Baumgarten here, pp. 217—219.

It would be endless and fruitless to recount the speculations of some Expositors (such as Eichhorn, Ammon, Wittig, Schulze, Greiling, Boehme, Hezel, Heinrichs, &c.), who have endeavoured to account for St. Paul's Conversion from ordinary physical phenomena, and to explain away all that is supernatural in St. Luke's and St. Paul's own narratives of it; or such as Lange, who regard it as a visionary reverie; or who, with Bretschneider and Emmerling, confound it with his rapture into the third heaven (2 Cor. xii. 1—7), or with Bahrdt, Venturini, and Brennecke, venture to affirm that Jesus merely died in appearance, and so presented Himself to Saul on His way; or of the Tubingen school of Critics, who deny the fact altogether. Meyer, who censures these hypotheses (pp. 182—184), yet does not hesitate to say, that there is a discrepancy between the account here (ix. 7) and xxvi. 14, and xxii. 9, and even imputes it to the "conscientiousness of St. Luke in not forcing the different narratives he had received of St. Paul's Conversion into harmony and conformity with one another;"

This is not a question (as sometimes represented) of "verbal variety," but of substantive truth. To imagine (as some have done) that St. Luke, having given an account of St. Paul's conversion in the Ninth chapter, puts into St. Paul's mouth in the Twenty-second chapter a speech which, in an important point, contradicts that account, is to suppose—not only that St. Luke was not inspired—but that he was destitute of common sense. To imagine that St. Luke really contradicts St. Paul, or makes St. Paul contradict himself, is indeed to imitate the spirit of a notorious unbeliever, and to degrade the Writer of the Acts from "St. Luke the beloved Physician, whose praise is in the Gospel," to "an idiot Evangelist." (Cp. Bentley on Free-thinking, p. 112.)

If such suppositions as these are once accepted, then a door is opened to an inundation from the whole flood and torrent of sceptical speculations referred to above, which commence with assumptions of "verbal discrepancies" between St. Paul's account and St. Luke's, and thence proceed to deny the veracity of the one or the other, or both, and then go on to doubt the reality of St. Paul's miraculous Conversion, and even of the Death of Christ, and the Atonement itself.

8. οὐδὲν ἔβλεπε] He was committed by God like a prisoner to the chains of a three days' blindness, as it were to a soldier to guard, lest from previous prejudice he or others should say that it was a mere phantom of the brain that he had seen in the way (Euseb. in Caten. p. 154).

Compare the case of Zacharias in the Temple whose dumbness after the Vision of the angel was a proof of its reality (Luke i. 20—22), and also an appropriate punishment for unbelief, like St. Paul's blindness, inflicted on him to show how blind he had been in his zeal and rage against the Church. And as the loosing of the tongue of Zacharias, when he wrote "his name is John" (Luke i. 63), showed why his tongue had been bound, so the visible sign of the scales falling from the eyes of St. Paul (v. 18) when Ananias laid his hands on him, served further to show not only the reality of the blindness, but also the reason of it. And as the voice of Zacharias was taken away, that he might afterwards prophesy, so St. Paul's bodily sight was eclipsed for a time, that he might afterwards shine as a glorious light in the world.

As Aug. says (Serm. 279), "Cæcus factus est Saulus; ut interiore luce fulgeret cor ejus, exterior ad tempus erepta est; subtracta est persecutori, ut redderetur prædicatori. Et eo tempore, quo cætera non videbat, Jesum videbat: ita et in ipsâ cæcitate mysterium informatur credentium; quoniam qui credit in Jesum, Ipsum intueri debet, cætera nec nata computare; ut creatura vilescat, Creator in corde dulcescat."

— χειραγωγοῦντες] like a spoil rescued from the strong man (Chrys.) whose house had been spoiled by a stronger than he.

9. μὴ βλέπων] On the force of μὴ here, see Winer, G. G. p. 431.

— οὐκ ἔφαγεν] An example of repentance. See his sorrow for persecuting the Church. (Theoph.)

10. Ἀνανίας] See above on v. 6, and compare S. Aug. Serm. 279, who says, "Adductus est ad Ananiam; et Ananias interpretatur Ovis; ecce lupus adducitur ad ovem; Ipse Pastor de cœlo nuntiavit lupum venturum ovi, sed non sæviturum." As to this etymology of Ananias, A Lapide says, "Nescio quâ linguâ interpretur Ovis." Perhaps they who so interpreted it connected it with ἀμνός, ἀμνίον, and Agnus.

If (with Mintert and Kuin.) we derive it from חָנַן, gratiosus fuit, and יָהּ, Dominus, it happily illustrates St. Paul's assertion —"by the Grace of God I am what I am" (1 Cor. xv. 10).

11. ῥύμην] Not πλατεῖα, platea, a broad way, but ῥύμη, a narrow one (see Luke xiv. 21), and it was εὐθεῖα, recta, or straight;

Seemingly a trivial incident; if any thing in Scripture and in the lives of the Apostles, and especially in the history of the "Vas electionis," and of so marvellous an event as St. Paul's Conversion, can rightly be so called. With reverence be it said, even this slight circumstance, which the Holy Spirit has thought fit to record, may perhaps seem to have its moral. Saul the persecutor had now passed from the broad way of worldly power and honour, on which he was lately hurrying to Damascus, and which was leading him to destruction (Matt. vii. 13), and he had now been brought to the right or straight way (cp. Acts xiii. 10), and narrow (Matt. vii. 14), called κατ' ἐξοχὴν the Way (Acts ix. 2), in which he would now be led to everlasting life.

ζήτησον ἐν οἰκίᾳ Ἰούδα Σαῦλον ὀνόματι, Ταρσέα· ἰδοὺ γὰρ προσεύχεται, 12 καὶ εἶδεν ἐν ὁράματι ἄνδρα ὀνόματι Ἀνανίαν εἰσελθόντα καὶ ἐπιθέντα αὐτῷ χεῖρα, ὅπως ἀναβλέψῃ. 13 Ἀπεκρίθη δὲ Ἀνανίας, Κύριε, ἀκήκοα ἀπὸ πολλῶν περὶ τοῦ ἀνδρὸς τούτου, [t] ὅσα κακὰ ἐποίησε τοῖς ἁγίοις σου ἐν Ἰερουσαλήμ· [t] 1 Tim. 1. 13.
14 καὶ ὧδε [k] ἔχει ἐξουσίαν παρὰ τῶν ἀρχιερέων, δῆσαι πάντας τοὺς ἐπικαλου- [k] ver. 21.
μένους [l] τὸ ὄνομά σου. 15 Εἶπε δὲ πρὸς αὐτὸν ὁ Κύριος, Πορεύου, ὅτι [m] σκεῦος [l] 1 Cor. 1. 2. 2 Tim. 2. 22.
ἐκλογῆς ἐστί μοι οὗτος, τοῦ βαστάσαι τὸ ὄνομά μου [n] ἐνώπιον ἐθνῶν τε καὶ [m] ch. 13. 2. Rom. 1. 1.
[o] βασιλέων, [p] υἱῶν τε Ἰσραήλ. 16 [q] Ἐγὼ γὰρ ὑποδείξω αὐτῷ ὅσα δεῖ αὐτὸν [o] 1 Cor. 15. 10. Gal. 1. 15. Eph. 3. 7, 8.
ὑπὲρ τοῦ ὀνόματός μου παθεῖν. [n] Rom. 11. 13. Gal. 2. 7, 8.
17 [r] Ἀπῆλθε δὲ Ἀνανίας καὶ εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν, καὶ [s] ἐπιθεὶς ἐπ' αὐτὸν [o] ch. 25. 23. &c. τὰς χεῖρας εἶπε, Σαοὺλ ἀδελφέ, ὁ Κύριος ἀπέσταλκέ με, Ἰησοῦς ὁ ὀφθείς σοι [p] ch. 26. 17, &c.
ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ ᾗ ἤρχου, ὅπως ἀναβλέψῃς, καὶ [t] πλησθῇς Πνεύματος ἁγίου. 18 Καὶ [q] ch. 20. 23. & 21. 11.
εὐθέως ἀπέπεσον ἀπὸ τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν αὐτοῦ ὡσεὶ λεπίδες, ἀνέβλεψέ τε παρα- [r] ch. 22. 13.
χρῆμα, καὶ ἀναστὰς ἐβαπτίσθη· 19 καὶ λαβὼν τροφὴν ἐνίσχυσεν. [s] ch. 8. 17.
[t] ch. 2. 4.

Ἐγένετο δὲ μετὰ τῶν ἐν [u] Δαμασκῷ μαθητῶν ἡμέρας τινάς. 20 Καὶ εὐθέως [u] ch. 26. 20. Gal. 1. 17.
ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς ἐκήρυσσε τὸν Ἰησοῦν ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ.
21 [v] Ἐξίσταντο δὲ πάντες οἱ ἀκούοντες, καὶ ἔλεγον, Οὐχ οὗτός ἐστιν [x] ὁ πορ- [v] Gal. 1. 13, 23.
θήσας ἐν Ἰερουσαλὴμ τοὺς ἐπικαλουμένους τὸ ὄνομα τοῦτο· καὶ ὧδε εἰς τοῦτο [x] ch. 8. 3.
ἐληλύθει ἵνα δεδεμένους αὐτοὺς ἀγάγῃ ἐπὶ τοὺς ἀρχιερεῖς; 22 Σαῦλος δὲ μᾶλλον [y] ἐνεδυναμοῦτο, καὶ [z] συνέχυνε τοὺς Ἰουδαίους τοὺς κατοικοῦντας ἐν Δαμασκῷ, [y] Ps. 84. 7. συμβιβάζων ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Χριστός. [z] ch. 18. 28.

23 Ὡς δὲ ἐπληροῦντο ἡμέραι ἱκαναί, συνεβουλεύσαντο οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι [a] ἀνελεῖν [a] ch. 23. 12. & 25. 3.

— προσεύχεται] He prayeth—the attitude most proper for the reception of the moral, intellectual, and spiritual light, which was now illuminating him; and though his eyes were dark, yet he had a vision from above, and saw more clearly than before. See v. 12.

12. εἶδεν ἐν ὁράματι] This pair of visions, one vouchsafed to Saul and the other to Ananias, and the one tallying with the other, takes away all suspicion of self-deception. The same providential arrangement is to be observed in the next chapter, with regard to the two corresponding visions of Cornelius and St. Peter, and the narrative of the one pair confirms that of the other pair.

15. σκεῦος ἐκλογῆς] A double Hebraism.

(1) σκεῦος, Hebr. כְּלִי, any instrument, ὄργανον, utensil, vessel. As applied to men, see Rom. ix. 21. 23, σκεύη ἐλέους. 2 Tim. ii. 20.

(2) ἐκλογῆς, the genitive for the adjective or participle. See above on Matt. xxii. 11. Acts vii. 2. Cp. Voret. de Hebr. pp. 33. 246. James i. 25, ἀκροατὴς ἐπιλησμονῆς. 1 Cor. x. 16, τὸ ποτήριον τῆς εὐλογίας. Heb. i. 8, ῥάβδος εὐθύτητος. 2 Pet. ii. 1, αἱρέσεις ἀπωλείας.

On the meaning of the term see further, xxii. 14, and St. Paul's own comment, Gal. i. 15. 1 Cor. xv. 10. "Saulus singulare exemplum gratiæ gratuitæ amplissimæ." (Bengel.) — βαστάσαι] "Vas electionis Paulus, quia vas legis, et Scripturarum armarium." (Jerome, in Oseam viii.) Also as βαστάζον, or carrying like a living vehicle what he contained. Cp. the chariot seen by Ezekiel, in the wheels of which the Spirit was (Ezek. i. 21). So the Spirit was in this Apostolic "Vas electionis," and gave him life and motion, though in his own esteem he held the spiritual treasure in an earthen vessel (2 Cor. iv. 7); and so, by humility as well as zeal, he was a vessel fitted for the Master's use (2 Tim. ii. 21).

16. παθεῖν] 'to suffer.' The word παθεῖν is happily reserved for the close of the sentence, so that the mind may dwell on that. He who came to inflict suffering on others must now be taught to suffer, and be perfected by suffering,—a proof of the reality of his Conversion. He was not drawn to Christ by promises of earthly good; he left all, lost all, for Christ. But note how he rejoices in his sufferings; see what he says, Gal. vi. 17. 2 Cor. i. 5. Rom. v. 3; viii. 18. Cp. Aug. Serm. 279, 4. A Lapide adds, "Fortia agere Romanum est: fortia pati Christianum."

17. ἦρχου] wert coming, i. e. when thou wast suddenly stopped by the Divine Voice. There is something more observable in this tense, because (as Valck. observes) the form ἠρχόμην from ἔρχομαι is very rare. It is found in Mark i. 45; ii. 13.

18. λεπίδες] that his blindness might not be supposed to be imaginary. (Chrys.) See above, on v. 8.

— ἐβαπτίσθη] See below, xxii. 14.

20. Ἰησοῦν] So A, B, C, E, and others. Elz., Χριστόν.

21. οὐχ οὗτός ἐστιν] Is Saul also among the Prophets? 1 Sam. x. 11, 12; xix. 24. The case of St. Paul's conversion being extraordinary, and not to be drawn into an example of God's dealings with men, and not to be made by them a ground of hope for such interpositions (cp. 1 Tim. i. 15), it is not surprising that the Christian Fathers should have seen types and prophecies concerning St. Paul in the history of the Ancient People of God. See above concerning Benjamin (viii. 1).

There appears also to be a connexion, both by way of resemblance and contrast, between Saul the first King of Israel, and Saul the last of the Apostles;

Both were of the tribe of Benjamin; both were at once Persecutors; the one the persecutor of David, the other of the Son of David (cp. Aug. Serm. 279). Saul the persecuting King is among the Prophets (1 Sam. x. 12; xix. 24); and Saul the persecuting Pharisee is among the Apostles. Who would have expected either of these events? Saul the King resisted the grace of God, and gave himself up to the Evil Spirit. But Saul the Pharisee was not disobedient to the heavenly vision. (Acts xxvi. 19.) Both the one and the other afford remarkable examples of the freedom and power of Divine Grace. But extraordinary as these examples are, they show also that Divine Grace, free and powerful as it is, is not irresistible. Saul the King might have been like Paul the Apostle, if he had cherished the Spirit within him; and Paul the Apostle would have been like Saul the King if he had grieved and resisted the grace of God.

22. συμβιβάζων] proving by a collation of passages cited and compared. See Valck.

23. ἡμέραι ἱκαναί] 'many days.' He had now been for some time in Arabia, i. e. "that part of Arabia which bordered on Syria, and there received a full revelation of the Gospel from God." (Bp. Pearson in Acta, p. 368, and Annal. Paulin. ad A. D. XXXVI.)

"Arabia," as used by St. Paul, does not necessarily mean the wilderness of Arabia, commonly so called. Early Christian writers (Justin and Tertullian) assign Damascus itself to Arabia; and the region of Auranitis, on the south of Damascus, is reckoned by Roman writers as belonging to Arabia. (Kitto, p. 143.) Bp. Pearson dates St. Paul's three years (Gal. i. 18) from his conversion to his return to Jerusalem.

Arabia was St. Paul's school for the Apostleship. Afterwards he returned to Damascus, where the events here recorded αὐτόν· 24 [b] ἐγνώσθη δὲ τῷ Σαύλῳ ἡ ἐπιβουλὴ αὐτῶν· [c] παρετηροῦντό τε τὰς πύλας ἡμέρας τε καὶ νυκτὸς, ὅπως αὐτὸν ἀνέλωσι· 25 [d] λαβόντες δὲ αὐτὸν οἱ μαθηταὶ νυκτὸς καθῆκαν διὰ τοῦ τείχους, χαλάσαντες ἐν σπυρίδι.

26 [e] Παραγενόμενος δὲ εἰς Ἰερουσαλὴμ ἐπειρᾶτο κολλᾶσθαι τοῖς μαθηταῖς· καὶ πάντες ἐφοβοῦντο αὐτὸν, μὴ πιστεύοντες ὅτι ἔστιν μαθητής. 27 [f] Βαρνάβας δὲ ἐπιλαβόμενος αὐτὸν ἤγαγε πρὸς τοὺς ἀποστόλους· καὶ διηγήσατο αὐτοῖς πῶς ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ εἶδε τὸν Κύριον, καὶ ὅτι ἐλάλησεν αὐτῷ, καὶ πῶς ἐν Δαμασκῷ ἐπαῤῥησιάσατο ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. 28 [g] Καὶ ἦν μετ' αὐτῶν εἰσπορευόμενος καὶ ἐκπορευόμενος εἰς Ἰερουσαλὴμ, καὶ παῤῥησιαζόμενος ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Κυρίου· 29 [h] ἐλάλει τε καὶ συνεζήτει πρὸς τοὺς Ἑλληνιστάς· [i] οἱ δὲ ἐπεχείρουν ἀνελεῖν αὐτόν.

30 Ἐπιγνόντες δὲ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ κατήγαγον αὐτὸν εἰς Καισάρειαν, καὶ ἐξαπέστειλαν αὐτὸν εἰς Ταρσόν. 31 [k] Ἡ μὲν οὖν ἐκκλησία καθ' ὅλης τῆς Ἰουδαίας καὶ Γαλιλαίας καὶ Σαμαρείας [k] εἶχεν εἰρήνην, [l] οἰκοδομουμένη, καὶ πορευομένη τῷ φόβῳ τοῦ Κυρίου, καὶ τῇ παρακλήσει τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος ἐπληθύνετο.

b 2 Cor. 11. 32.
c 2 Cor. 11. 26, &c Ps. 21. 11. & 37. 32, 33.
d Josh. 2. 15. 1 Sam. 19. 12.
e Gal. 1. 18.
f ch. 4. 36. & 13. 2.
g Gal. 1. 18.
h ch. 6. 1. & 11. 20.
i ver. 23.
k ch. 8. 1. Zech. 9. 1. 1 Col. 1. 10. John 14. 16, 17. Zech. 8. 20—22.

---

occurred. St. Luke passes over an interval of three years (see Gal. i. 17, and Rosenm.). And it is observable that "many days" are equivalent to three years in 1 Kings ii. 38. Cp. Howson, i. 122.

This is more carefully to be noted, because from this expression some have taken occasion to say (Baur, p. 106, and Meyer, p. 188), that St. Luke did not know that St. Paul was three years in Arabia.

But the fact is, this mode of speaking is a proof that St. Luke does not profess to give a full history of St. Paul or any one Apostle. He does not mention how and when St. Paul was fully instructed in the doctrines of Christianity. And if we had only the Acts of the Apostles, we should not know that St. Paul had ever written a single Epistle. No argument, therefore, can be drawn from what perhaps some may call omissions in this history. Least of all may we venture to say, that they are proofs of ignorance, inadvertence, or forgetfulness, on the part of the Sacred Historian, as some Expositors have done; e. g. one writing on this passage, "Hoc iter in Arabiam Lucas silentio præteriit, quoniam ut videtur, ignorabat à Saulo iter in Arabiam susceptum fuisse, aut hujus rei oblitus erat." St. Paul himself omits it Acts xxii. 16, 17, and yet mentions it Gal. i. 17.

How much sounder is the criticism of S. Chrysostom here! "The historian (St. Luke) passes by, designedly and modestly, St. Paul's visions in Arabia." And of S. Jerome (in Galat. i.), "Lucas idcirco de Arabiâ præteriit, quia forsitan nihil dignum Apostolatu in Arabiâ Saulus perpetravit,—et quod aliqua dispensatio et Dei præceptum fuerit, ut taceret."

As Bede observes here, St. Paul himself appears to intimate that he did not preach in Arabia; for the Apostle says (Acts xxvi. 20) that he preached to them at Damascus first, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coast of Judæa, and then to the Gentiles. Perhaps this retirement of St. Paul after his Conversion was designed to be exemplary and instructive to the Church, that new converts should not be admitted to exercise all the functions of the ministerial office, without some probationary term of silence, after their conversion.

24. παρετηροῦντο] So A, B, C, E, F, G. Elz. παρετήρουν.

The Jews were assisted in their stratagem against Saul by the Ethnarch, or Governor of Damascus, then in the hands of Aretas, "the King" of Arabia Petræa (2 Cor. xi. 32, 33), the father-in-law of Herod Antipas, whose territory Aretas invaded on account of his abandonment of his daughter for Herodias (Matt. xiv. 3. Joseph. Ant. xviii. 5. 1). Antipas appealed for protection to Rome, and Vitellius, then at the head of the Roman forces in Syria, of which he was President, was commanded by Tiberius to assist him.

25. διὰ τοῦ τείχους] As the spies by Rahab from Jericho (Josh. ii. 15), and David by Michal (1 Sam. xix. 12), where the words are, διὰ τῆς θυρίδος, and see 2 Cor. xi. 33, where he says, ἐχαλάσθην ἐν σαργάνῃ, and the expression of St. Luke, διὰ τοῦ τείχους, is explained by διὰ θυρίδος—διὰ τείχους.

— ἐν σπυρίδι] a corn-basket. (Hesych.) See on Matt. xvi. 9.

26. εἰς Ἰερουσαλήμ] Gal. i. 17.

— πάντες ἐφοβοῦντο, μὴ πιστεύοντες] How was this, it may be said, after the miraculous intervention of God at his Conversion? This question may be answered by reference to a fact not stated in the Acts but by St. Paul himself. Immediately after his Conversion he did not confer with "flesh and blood," nor went up to the Apostles; doubtless lest it should be imagined that he had received his Gospel from man. But he went forthwith into Arabia (see Gal. i. 17),—a circumstance not mentioned by St. Luke,—and there he received his revelations from Jesus Christ himself, and he then returned to Damascus (Gal. i. 12). It might therefore be supposed by the Disciples at Jerusalem that he had shunned the Apostles from fear or antipathy, and thence suspicions might arise concerning his sincerity.

27. Βαρνάβας—ἤγαγε] Barnabas of Cyprus might well have had previous acquaintance with Paul of Tarsus in Cilicia. It has been said by some that he was St. Paul's fellow-disciple under Gamaliel: it is not improbable; but there is no sufficient evidence of this. It was however a fitting act for the υἱὸς παρακλήσεως to commend him to the Apostles. Cp. his similar act, xi. 25.

— τοὺς ἀποστόλους] namely, Peter and James, Gal. i. 18, Rosenm., who well adds, concerning the honourable testimony of St. Barnabas to the circumstances of St. Paul's conversion, and to St. Paul's own courage, "Conveniebat id potiùs narrari ab aliis qui id scirent, quàm ab ipso Saulo prædicari."

— πῶς ἐπαῤῥησιάσατο] "Quantâ cum fiduciâ doctrinam Jesu sit professus." (Rosenm.)

28. εἰς Ἰερουσαλήμ] when he had a trance in the Temple, xxii. 17.

29. συνεζήτει πρὸς τοὺς Ἑλληνιστάς] He now confuted some of the same persons with whom he had formerly cooperated, and who had been most eager and furious in their zeal against Stephen, and had been the originators of the accusation which led to his death (vi. 9—14).

Thus St. Paul endeavoured to make amends at Jerusalem, and at the peril of his life, for former sins committed there against Christ and the Church.

In both cases St. Luke uses the same word, συζητεῖν.

30. Ταρσόν] to his own country and friends—to which he specially owed the duty of communicating the blessings of Christianity. Cp. John i. 42.

31. ἡ μὲν οὖν ἐκκλησία—ἐπληθύνετο] So A, B, C, and many Cursive MSS. and Versions. Elz. has the plural, αἱ μὲν ἐκκλησίαι. Cp. Gal. i. 22. The singular number rests on the best authority, and seems most fitted to describe the unity and harmony of the Church in that period of peace.

— εἶχεν εἰρήνην] Because the Jews were so much occupied in endeavouring to frustrate the order which the Emperor Caligula, who claimed divine worship (Lightfoot, i. p. 834. 857. Burton, Lectures, p. 132. Howson, i. 136), had given to Petronius to set up his statue in the Temple (Joseph. xviii. 8), that they had not leisure to persecute the Church—a remarkable instance of the manner in which the evil passions of men are made subservient by God to the edification of the Church.

This order was afterwards rescinded at the intervention of Herod Agrippa, then at Rome; and with the death of Caligula the persecution recommenced under Herod Agrippa (Acts xii. 1—19).

It is observable, that, in the primitive ages, the Church had less to fear from some of the worst Emperors, such as Tiberius and Caligula, than from those Princes of Judæa, such as Agrippa, who were most honoured by the Jews.

32 Ἐγένετο δὲ Πέτρον διερχόμενον διὰ πάντων κατελθεῖν καὶ πρὸς τοὺς ἁγίους τοὺς κατοικοῦντας Λύδδαν. 33 Εὗρε δὲ ἐκεῖ ἄνθρωπόν τινα ὀνόματι Αἰνέαν, ἐξ· ἐτῶν ὀκτὼ κατακείμενον ἐπὶ κραβάττου, ὃς ἦν παραλελυμένος. 34 Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Πέτρος, Αἰνέα, [m] ἰᾶταί σε Ἰησοῦς Χριστός, ἀνάστηθι καὶ στρῶσον σεαυτῷ. Καὶ εὐθέως ἀνέστη· 35 καὶ εἶδον αὐτὸν πάντες οἱ κατοικοῦντες Λύδδαν καὶ τὸν Σάρωνα, οἵτινες [n] ἐπέστρεψαν ἐπὶ τὸν Κύριον.

m ch. 3. 6, 16. & 4. 10.

n ch. 11. 21. 2 Cor. 3. 16.

36 Ἐν Ἰόππῃ δέ τις ἦν μαθήτρια ὀνόματι Ταβιθά, ἣ διερμηνευομένη λέγεται Δορκάς· αὕτη ἦν [o] πλήρης ἔργων ἀγαθῶν καὶ ἐλεημοσυνῶν ὧν ἐποίει. 37 Ἐγένετο δὲ ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ἐκείναις ἀσθενήσασαν αὐτὴν ἀποθανεῖν. Λούσαντες δὲ αὐτὴν ἔθηκαν ἐν ὑπερῴῳ. 38 Ἐγγὺς δὲ οὔσης Λύδδης τῇ Ἰόππῃ, οἱ μαθηταὶ ἀκούσαντες ὅτι Πέτρος ἐστὶν ἐν αὐτῇ, ἀπέστειλαν δύο ἄνδρας πρὸς αὐτὸν, παρακαλοῦντες, μὴ ὀκνήσῃς διελθεῖν ἕως ἡμῶν. 39 Ἀναστὰς δὲ Πέτρος συνῆλθεν αὐτοῖς· ὃν παραγενόμενον ἀνήγαγον εἰς τὸ ὑπερῷον, καὶ παρέστησαν αὐτῷ πᾶσαι αἱ χῆραι κλαίουσαι καὶ ἐπιδεικνύμεναι χιτῶνας καὶ ἱμάτια, ὅσα ἐποίει μετ' αὐτῶν οὖσα ἡ Δορκάς. 40 Ἐκβαλὼν δὲ ἔξω πάντας ὁ Πέτρος, καὶ θεὶς τὰ γόνατα, προσηύξατο, καὶ ἐπιστρέψας πρὸς τὸ σῶμα εἶπε, Ταβιθά, ἀνάστηθι. Ἡ δὲ ἤνοιξε τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς αὐτῆς, καὶ ἰδοῦσα τὸν Πέτρον ἀνεκάθισε. 41 Δοὺς δὲ αὐτῇ χεῖρα ἀνέστησεν αὐτήν· φωνήσας δὲ τοὺς ἁγίους καὶ τὰς χήρας παρέστησεν αὐτὴν ζῶσαν. 42 Γνωστὸν δὲ ἐγένετο καθ' ὅλης τῆς Ἰόππης· καὶ [p] ἐπίστευσαν πολλοὶ ἐπὶ τὸν Κύριον. 43 Ἐγένετο δὲ ἡμέρας ἱκανὰς μεῖναι αὐτὸν ἐν Ἰόππῃ, παρά τινι Σίμωνι βυρσεῖ.

o 1 Tim. 2. 10. Tit. 2. 7, 14.

p John 12. 11. & 11. 45.

X. 1 Ἀνὴρ δέ τις ἐν Καισαρείᾳ ὀνόματι Κορνήλιος, ἑκατοντάρχης ἐκ σπείρης — πορευομένη] πορεύεσθαι, the Hebr. הָלַךְ.

32. διὰ πάντων] Kuin. supplies τόπων. Cp. Luke xi. 24. Meyer, ἁγίων. Both, places and persons, may be meant. Cp. v. 38.

The foundation of the See of Antioch in Syria has been assigned to St. Peter at this period by some, e. g. Baronius and A Lapide. But, however this may be, it does not appear that he resided there at this time as Bishop, for he is said here διέρχεσθαι; his visit to Antioch, if he did visit it, was only of short duration.

— Λύδδαν] A, B have Λύδδα, C and E have Λύδδαν here and v. 35. Josephus uses both Λύδδα (B. J. iv. 8. 1) and Λύδδαν (Ant. xx. 6. 2) in the accusative. Almost all the MSS. and Editions have Λύδδης in v. 38.

34. ἰᾶταί σε Ἰησοῦς] Christ in heaven heals thee by me on earth. (Didym.) Contrast this language of Peter with our Lord's expressions of sovereign will and divine power. (Chrys.) θέλω, καθαρίσθητι (Matt. viii. 3). ἆρον τὸν κράβαττόν σου (Mark ii. 11). Ταλιθὰ κοῦμι (Mark v. 41). Λάζαρε, δεῦρο ἔξω (John xi. 43).

Christ heals αὐθεντικῶς καὶ αὐτοκρατικῶς, Peter ὑπουργικῶς καὶ ὑπηρετικῶς. See also above, iii. 6, and below, v. 40, θεὶς τὰ γόνατα προσηύξατο.

On the paronomasia ἰᾶταί σε Ἰησοῦς, see on iv. 30.

— στρῶσον σεαυτῷ] i. e. forthwith do for thyself what others have done for thee.

35. Σάρωνα] A fulfilment of the prophecy in Isa. xxxv. 2, "The excellency of Carmel and Sharon shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God." Cp. on viii. 40. "Σάρων, Ies. xxxiii. 9; xxxv. 2; lxv. 10. Non est nomen urbis, ut nonnulli opinati sunt, sed nomen regionis campestris et pascuosæ, multis viculis repletæ inter Lyddam et Joppen, v. Lightfoot. in Chorograph. Matt. c. xvii. Relandi Palæstina p. 370. Hieronym. ad Ies. xxxiii. 9. Saron omnis circa Joppen Lyddamque appellatur regio, in quâ latissimi campi fertilesque." (Kuin.)

36. Ἰόππῃ] celebrated in the history of Jonah (i. 3). Now Jaffa. See Robinson, iii. 31. See below, x. 5.

— Ταβιθά] probably so called from her beauty. "Ταβιθὰ est nomen Syriacum טביתא formatum ex צְבִי 1) decus 2) capra gazella, mutato צ in ט. Gaudebant, scribit Buxtorfius in Lex. Talm. olim mulieres nominibus ab amabilibus et placidis animalibus petitis. Nomen Tabitha Judæis, ut Δορκὰς Græcis, usitatum erat. Vaiikra Rabba Sect. 19. Tabitha, ancilla Gamalielis. Lightfoot. in Chorogr. Matthæo præmissa c. cxviii. Capra Gazella Orientalibus erat imago pulchritudinis, v. Cant. ii. 9. iv. 5. Hinc Rosenmüllerus et Heselius conjecerunt ob formæ venustatem à parentibus hanc mulierem Tabitham appellatam esse." (Kuin.)

37. λούσαντες—ὑπερῴῳ] The third instance, in this book, of reference to the decencies of Christian burial. See above, viii. 2. S. Chrys. p. 753, contrasts the quietness of this laying out of Dorcas with the κοπετὸς over St. Stephen (p. 712), which he attributes to a residue of Jewish habits in the earlier Christians. Perhaps they had now learnt to regard death with greater calmness and joy. Cp. St. Paul's reproof on immoderate grief for the dead, in one of his earliest Epistles (1 Thess. iv. 13—18).

38. ὀκνήσῃς—ἕως ἡμῶν] So A, B, C, E.—Elz. ὀκνῆσαι—αὐτῶν.

39. ὅσα] 'how many.' Something more than ἃ, 'which.' See John xxi. 25.

40. Ταβιθά, ἀνάστηθι] Words not very different from our Lord's, Ταλιθὰ κοῦμι (Mark v. 41), but very different in the circumstances and manner with which they were uttered. See on v. 34.

43. βυρσεῖ] A proof of his humility, and a trial of the faith of the Roman Centurion Cornelius, see x. 6. The Shepherds were sent by the Angel to the King, who was lying in a stable (Luke ii. 7. 12); the Roman Centurion was commanded by the Angel to send for instruction in divine things, from the royal city Cæsarea, to one Simon surnamed Peter, who lodges παρά τινι Σίμωνι βυρσεῖ. Therefore "mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate." (Rom. xii. 16.) Some have entertained Angels unawares (Heb. xiii. 2).

CH. X. 1. Καισαρείᾳ] Not to be confounded with Cæsarea Philippi (Matt. xvi. 13. Mark viii. 27).

This city is Καισάρεια Σεβαστὴ, ἡ παράλιος,—celebrated for its Harbour,—ἡ πρότερον Στράτωνος πύργος ἐκαλεῖτο, but called Cæsarea by Herod the Great, who beautified it, in honour of Aug. Cæsar, μεγίστη τῆς Ἰουδαίας πόλις (Joseph. Ant. xix. 8, 2), then garrisoned by the Romans; and the residence of the Roman Procurator. In a word, it was a miniature of Rome, in Palestine. Cp. Acts xxiii. 23. 33, and Howson, ii. 344.

We may observe, therefore, that the Gospel made its first Conquest over Heathenism in a large City, Cæsarea, named from the Roman Cæsar, the military stronghold and naval arsenal of the Roman Power. And it made that conquest over a soldier, called Cornelius, one of the noblest Roman names borne by the Scipios and Sylla, and the mother of the Gracchi (see Wetstein), and associated with the greatest victories of the Roman arms; and an officer of the Italic band, not of a Cohort raised in Syria, but τῆς καλουμένης Ἰταλικῆς, 2 [a] εὐσεβὴς καὶ φοβούμενος τὸν Θεὸν σὺν παντὶ τῷ οἴκῳ αὐτοῦ, ποιῶν ἐλεημοσύνας πολλὰς τῷ λαῷ, καὶ δεόμενος τοῦ Θεοῦ διαπαντὸς, 3 εἶδεν ἐν ὁράματι φανερῶς, ὡσεὶ περὶ ὥραν ἐννάτην τῆς ἡμέρας, ἄγγελον τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰσελθόντα πρὸς αὐτὸν, καὶ εἰπόντα αὐτῷ, Κορνήλιε. 4 Ὁ δὲ ἀτενίσας αὐτῷ καὶ ἔμφοβος γενόμενος εἶπε, Τί ἐστι, κύριε; εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ, Αἱ προσευχαί σου καὶ αἱ ἐλεημοσύναι σου ἀνέβησαν εἰς μνημόσυνον [b] ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ. 5 Καὶ νῦν πέμψον ἄνδρας εἰς Ἰόππην, καὶ μετάπεμψαι Σίμωνα ὃς ἐπικαλεῖται Πέτρος· 6 [c] οὗτος ξενίζεται παρά τινι Σίμωνι βυρσεῖ, ᾧ ἐστιν οἰκία παρὰ θάλασσαν.

a ch. 8. 2. & 22. 12. Eccl. 7. 18.

b Isa. 45. 19.

c ch. 9. 43.

---

of native Roman blood. He was "the antesignanus, or standard-bearer to us, who were heathens." See Bp. Andrewes, Sermon on Acts x. 34.

Here, as S. Chrys. says, "the Door was first opened to the Gentile World;" and concerning Cornelius, he adds (p. 738), "he was uncircumcised, and had nothing in common with the Jews." This is noted, because it has been said by some that Cornelius was a proselyte (see on v. 2).

— ἑκατοντάρχης] The Roman supremacy of the world being one of arms—

> "Tu regere imperio populos, Romane, memento, > Hæ tibi erunt artes, pacisque imponere morem, > Parcere subjectis, et debellare superbos," > (Virg. Æn. vi. 852,)

—therefore the first-fruits of the Gentile world, now under the sway of Rome, are gathered from the Roman Camp, in the seat of government of the Roman Procurator; and so the victorious power of the Gospel is made more visible, and the triumph of Christ more glorious.

This was a prelude of the future triumphs of Christianity at Rome, and in the Roman world. In the conversion of Cornelius at Cæsarea, we may see a prophetic intimation of the submission of the Great Fourth Monarchy, the Mistress of the Gentile world, and of the subjection of the Military Empire of Rome to the mild yoke of the Gospel.

— σπείρης—Ἰταλικῆς] Cohors Italica, levied in Italy, and distinguished from the Syrian cohorts of Cæsarea. This Cohort is probably referred to in the ancient Inscription in Gruter, 434, "COHORS MIL. ITALIC. VOLUNT. QUÆ EST IN SYRIA." See Akermann, pp. 33, 34.

2. εὐσεβὴς καὶ φοβούμενος τὸν Θεόν] i.e. a worshipper of One God, in contradistinction to polytheists and idolaters; not however a proselyte, but a Gentile, one of the ἔθνη. See Acts x. 45; xi. 3; xv. 7. 14, and Lightfoot, i. pp. 842—846.

— διαπαντός] See Luke xxiv. 53.

3. ὥραν ἐννάτην] St. Luke in the Acts notes several important events as taking place at the ninth hour (see iii. 1; x. 30: cf. Luke xxiii. 44), the hour of our Lord's death; prefigured by the daily sacrifice,—"the evening sacrifice,"—offered at that hour. Cp. Dan. ix. 21, "Whiles I was speaking in prayer, the man Gabriel touched me about the time of the evening oblation."

In the case of Cornelius, it may have been intimated providentially by this and other incidents, that though it was not now necessary for him to conform to the ceremonial of the Levitical Law—which was figurative and prophetical of Christ—yet he must not therefore suppose that the Levitical Law was not of Divine Institution, as well as the Gospel.

5. καὶ νῦν πέμψον] See above on ix. 6 and 43, for the argument thence to be derived for the necessary uses of an appointed ministry of the Word and Sacraments.

Hence also the Fathers infer the insufficiency of what are called moral virtues, alms, and prayers, and even a theoretical knowledge of religious evidence, such as Cornelius had (see vv. 37—43), without profession of faith in Christ, and reception into His Church. See Severian here, and the authorities cited by the Expositors of the XXXIX Articles, Art. xii. xviii.

But to those who, like Cornelius, use aright what they have by natural light, more is offered by God. See Ammonius here. Cornelius is represented as a person who profited, as far as he could, by the light of Reason and natural Theology. His case, therefore, is an evidence that God did not "leave Himself without a witness" in the Gentile world (Acts xiv. 17), corrupt as it was, especially at that time—the age of Tiberius and Caligula—and sunk almost to the lowest degree of demoralization, particularly in the city, the camp, and the court.

Still, Reason, Conscience, and Natural Light, were not extinct. The Moral Law was still in force; the Gentile world was responsible to God for the use it made of those gifts (see Rom. ii. 14, and Barrow, Serm. lxxi. vol. iii. p. 367), and to those who used them aright, greater degrees of light and grace were vouchsafed by God.

Thus it would appear that a difference will be made hereafter between those heathens who have, and those who have not, lived up to the law under which they were placed by God.

The following paragraphs from one of Dr. Barrow's excellent Sermons on Universal Redemption (Serm. lxxiii.) are pertinent to this and other like operations of God, as related in the Acts.

"Christ enjoined His Disciples, in their travels for the promulgation and propagation of the Gospel, to inquire concerning the worthiness or fitness of persons, and accordingly to make more close applications to them: Into what city or village ye enter, inquire who therein is worthy (Matt. x. 11), and entering in abide there.

"Of this proceeding we have a notable instance in Cornelius, who, for his honest piety (correspondent to the proportion of knowledge vouchsafed him), was so acceptable to God, that in regard thereto he obtained from Him the revelation of truth in a peculiar and extraordinary manner. And St. Paul was another most remarkable example thereof; who for the like reason was so wonderfully called, as himself intimates, describing himself to have been ζηλωτὴς Θεοῦ, zealously affected toward God, according to the righteousness in the law blameless (Acts xxii. 3; xxiii. 1); one that had continually behaved himself with all good conscience toward God (Phil. iii. 6. Acts xxvi. 9. Gal. i. 14); who even in the persecution of God's truth did proceed with an honest meaning, and according to his conscience; for which cause he saith that God had mercy on him, foreseeing how willingly he would embrace the truth, and how earnestly promote it. We may also observe how, in the Acts of the Apostles, the Holy Spirit commonly directed the Apostles to such places where a competent number of people were well disposed to receive the truth (Acts xxvi. 1. 1 Tim. i. 3), who were εὐθετοι εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ (Luke ix. 62), well disposed to the kingdom of heaven; such people as the Bereans, men ingenuous and tractable, who consequently entertained the word with all promptitude and alacrity. (Acts xvii. 11; xxviii. 22.)

"To such persons God sometimes, by extraordinary revelation, directed the Apostles to preach; as to the Corinthians, in respect to whom the Lord spake to St. Paul in a vision, saying, Fear not, but speak, and be not silent; for I am with thee, because πολύς ἐστί μοι λαός, there is for me much people in this city (Acts xviii. 9, 10); much people whom I see disposed to comply with my truth. So in behalf of the Macedonians, a certain man of Macedonia was in a vision seen by St. Paul, exhorting him and saying, Passing into Macedonia, help us. (Acts xvi. 9.)

"Thus, on that hand, doth God take special care that His truth be manifested to such as are fitly qualified to embrace it and use it well; thus is God ready to make good that answer of Pothinus (Bishop of Lyons, and immediate successor to St. Irenæus) to the Prefect, who asking him who was the Christians' God, was answered, ἣν ᾖς ἄξιος, γνώσῃ. If thou be worthy, thou shalt know (Euseb. v. 1); thus, as the Wise Man divinely saith, the Divine Wisdom goeth about seeking such as are worthy of her; showeth herself, favourable unto them in their ways, and meeteth them in every thought. (Wisd. vi. 16.)

"On the other hand, that God withholds the special discoveries of His truth, upon account of men's indispositions and demerits, may likewise very plainly appear. We may suppose our Lord to have observed Himself, what He ordered to His Disciples, Not to give that which is holy to dogs, nor to cast pearls before swine. (Matt. vii. 6.)" See below, xvi. 6, 7.

5. Ἰόππην] The ancient Philistine city, where Jonah had embarked in his endeavour to escape from the presence of God, and from the task of executing the divine commission against Nineveh (Jonah i. 3), is now to be made the scene of a divine vision, revealing God's gracious dispensations to the Gentile world. Contrast Jonas and Bar-Jonas here. (Cp. Bp. Andrewes.)

7 Ὡς δὲ ἀπῆλθεν ὁ ἄγγελος ὁ λαλῶν αὐτῷ, φωνήσας δύο τῶν οἰκετῶν, καὶ στρατιώτην εὐσεβῆ τῶν προσκαρτερούντων αὐτῷ, 8 καὶ ἐξηγησάμενος αὐτοῖς ἅπαντα, ἀπέστειλεν αὐτοὺς εἰς τὴν Ἰόππην.

9 [d] Τῇ δὲ ἐπαύριον, ὁδοιπορούντων ἐκείνων καὶ τῇ πόλει ἐγγιζόντων, ἀνέβη d ch. 11. 5.
Πέτρος ἐπὶ τὸ δῶμα προσεύξασθαι περὶ ὥραν ἕκτην. 10 Ἐγένετο δὲ πρόσ-πεινος, καὶ ἤθελε γεύσασθαι· παρασκευαζόντων δὲ αὐτῶν, ἐγένετο ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἔκστασις. 11 [e] Καὶ θεωρεῖ τὸν οὐρανὸν ἀνεῳγμένον, καὶ καταβαῖνον σκεῦός e ch. 7. 56. & 11. 5, &c. τι, ὡς ὀθόνην μεγάλην, τέσσαρσιν ἀρχαῖς δεδεμένον, καὶ καθιέμενον ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς· 12 ἐν ᾧ ὑπῆρχε πάντα τὰ τετράποδα καὶ τὰ ἑρπετὰ τῆς γῆς καὶ τὰ πετεινὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ. 13 Καὶ ἐγένετο φωνὴ πρὸς αὐτόν, Ἀναστὰς, Πέτρε, θῦσον καὶ

---

6. θάλασσαν] Elz. adds οὗτος λαλήσει σοι τί σε δεῖ ποιεῖν, which is not found in A, B, C, E, G, H, and other MSS., nor in Vulg. and other Versions; and was probably introduced from ch. xi. 14. Cp. ix. 6; xxii. 10.

9. ὁδοιπορούντων] The distance from Cæsarea to Joppa was thirty Roman miles.

— τὸ δῶμα] the house-top. See on Matt. xxiv. 17. Luke v. 19; xvii. 31, and Valck. here.

— ὥραν ἕκτην] The stated hour of prayer. See iii. 1.

10. γεύσασθαι] to taste (food). Hence in the modern language of Greece, γεῦμα and πρόγευμα, dinner and breakfast. "Respondet Hebræorum verbo טָעַם cui modò addunt nomen לֶחֶם ut 1 Sam. xiv. 25, ubi Alexandrini, ἐγεύσατο πᾶς ὁ λαὸς ἄρτου· modò טְעַם nudè ponunt, quod saltem ita posuerunt Judæi recentiores, v. Buxtorfii Lex. Chald. sub h. v. Etiam verbo אָכַל apud Hebræos modò jungitur לֶחֶם modò simpliciter ponitur, v. Gen. xliii. 25. 1 Regg. xix. 5. 7. Sic etiam legitur ap. Appian. bell. civ. lib. ii. p. 799, de Catone: περὶ ἑσπέραν ἀμφὶ λουτρὰ καὶ δεῖπνον ἦν· καθεζόμενός τε ἐγεύετο, circa vesperam lotus cœnabat, et sedens cibum capiebat. (Joseph. Ant. vii. 15.) Saulum regem συνηνάγκασεν ἡ γυνὴ γεύσασθαι." (Kuin.)

— παρασκευαζόντων αὐτῶν] Peter was hungering for bodily food, and the servants were making it ready for him. But at this time God was preparing for him spiritual food. Peter was to be the instrument for receiving the Gentiles into the body of the Church (see on v. 13); and therefore at this instant God invites him to partake of the animals in the sheet let down from heaven, and the messengers of Cornelius arrive. As Aug. says (Serm. 266), "Non Petro carnalis cibus affertur, sed mundatus Cornelius nuntiatur." — ἐγένετο] So A, B, C, E, and others. Elz. ἐπέπεσεν.

— ἔκστασις] The highest kind of spiritual revelation.

There are seven extraordinary modes and degrees in which God revealed Himself in ancient times;

1. Dreams.
2. Apparitions to the person when awake.
3. Visions to him when asleep.
4. Voices from heaven.
5. Urim.
6. Inspiration, or revealing to the ear.
7. Rapture, or ecstasy, when the person was in the Spirit (Rev. i. 10. Acts xxii. 17), and this was the highest degree of all. See Lightfoot here, i. p. 844.

11, 12. θεωρεῖ τὸν οὐρανὸν ἀνεῳγμένον, καὶ καταβαῖνον σκεῦός τι—τοῦ οὐρανοῦ] See below, xi. 5—10, where St. Peter says, εἶδον καταβαῖνον σκεῦός τι, ὡς ὀθόνην μεγάλην τέσσαρσιν ἀρχαῖς καθιεμένην ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, καὶ ἦλθεν ἄχρις ἐμοῦ.

— The words δεδεμένον, καὶ are not found in A, B, E, and some Versions.

— σκεῦος] A word of wide signification for any vessel. Hebr. כְּלִי. See above, ix. 15.

— ὀθόνην] σινδόνα (Hesych.), a linteum, or linen sheet, ὀθόναι (read ὀθονία, John xix. 40) are explained in Hesych. by περιβόλαια. Cp. Luke xxiv. 12. John xx. 5—7. Linen is generally seen in Scripture as connected with what is sacred, holy, and pure; and it is not liable to be moth-eaten; "hence," says Aug., "this linen sheet is a fit emblem of the Church."

— ἀρχαῖς] Ends of ropes or cords, as Valck. has shown; and after him Kuin., who says, "ἀρχὴ dicitur omne quod extremum est in aliquâ re, sic de funis extremitate legitur ap. Diod. Sic. t. i. p. 109, ἀρχὴ σχοινίου. Lucian. t. iii. p. 83, δεσμῶν ἀρχάς. Eurip. Hippol. 772, πλεκτὰς πειςμάτων ἀρχάς, ubi v. Markland. Herodot. iv. 60, σώσας τὴν ἀρχὴν τοῦ στρόφου· ubi v. Valck."

The σκεῦος or ὀθόνη is the world. "Discus est orbis terrarum." (Aug., Serm. 266. 6.) Its demission from heaven bespeaks the world's origin from God, the heavenly Father of all. Its τέσσαρες ἀρχαί represent its comprehensiveness and extension to the four winds of heaven. See Matt. xxiv. 31, and cp. the τέσσαρες γωνίαι τῆς γῆς, Rev. vii. 1; xx. 8.

"Quatuor lineæ," says Aug. (Serm. 149 and 266), "discum continentes, et quibus dependebat, sunt quatuor orbis cardines, vel quatuor partes orbis terrarum, per quas tenditur Ecclesia Catholica, quæ ubique diffusa est."

Further; some ancient Expositors (e. g. Œcumen.) speak of the four ἀρχαί (properly beginnings, "initia," Vulg.) that support the σκεῦος, or Vessel, which symbolizes the Church Universal—as a prophetical emblem of the Four Gospels, proclaiming the knowledge of Christ to the Four Corners of the world, and bringing many from the East and from the West, from the North and from the South, to sit down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob in the kingdom of God (Luke xiii. 29. Matt. viii. 11).

This suggestion deserves consideration. And it is not unworthy of remark that each of the Four Gospels commences with a reference to their initiatory character as describing the beginning of the new Creation in Christ, which is eternal, as the Old Testament, which is the record of the Old Creation, opens in Genesis with—"In the beginning God created Heaven and Earth," i. e. the visible heavens and the earth, which have an end;

This initial character of the Gospels is declared by the word ἀρχὴ or ἄρχομαι at the beginning of each, thus,— Matt. iv. 17, ἤρξατο ὁ Ἰησοῦς κηρύσσειν.

Mark i. 1, ἀρχὴ εὐαγγελίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.
Luke i. 2, οἱ ἀπ' ἀρχῆς αὐτόπται.
iii. 23, ἦν ὡσεὶ ἐτῶν τριάκοντα ἀρχόμενος.
John i. 1, ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν ὁ Λόγος.

Hence in the opening of the Acts of the Apostles, as if to mark that the Gospel is the Beginning of the new life which never ends, St. Luke says (i. 1), ὧν ἤρξατο ὁ Ἰησοῦς ποιεῖν τε καὶ διδάσκειν, in reference to its History. (See note there.)

Lastly, the sacred Canon of both Testaments closes with the words, Ἐγώ εἰμι τὸ Α καὶ τὸ Ω, Ἀρχὴ καὶ τέλος (Rev. xxii. 13).

The Gospel, as thus viewed, both supports and elevates the Church; it is that by which the invisible Hand of God maintains and keeps it together, and by which He raises it to heaven.

It may be said, How can this be? The Four Gospels had not then been written. No: nor had the σκεῦος of the Church been extended to all the world: nor, as yet, had it enclosed any unclean animals. The Vision was not a History of the Past; but a Prophecy of the Future extending forward to all Time.

This symbol is not dissimilar to that of the Four Evangelical Cherubim in Ezekiel and the Apocalypse, on which the Spirit of God rides, as on a chariot-like throne, into all lands.

See Preface to the Gospels, p. xliv.

The πάντα τὰ τετράποδα κ.τ.λ., are representatives of all Nations. And in this respect S. Aug. (c. Faust. xii. 15) compares it to the Ark, another figure of the Church, because commensurate with the world: "Cuncta genera animalium in Arcâ clauduntur sicut omnes Gentes; quas etiam Petro demonstratus ille discus significat; omnes Gentes, quæ pertinent ad quatuor partes orbis terræ quâ disseminatur Ecclesia, quam significant quatuor lineæ, quibus Vas illud connectebatur."

The sheet which was let down from heaven to earth was drawn up again (ἀνελήφθη, v. 16; ἀνεσπάσθη, xi. 10), into heaven, showing that all are designed by God to be inheritors of heaven, all are δεκτοὶ Θεῷ in Christ (x. 34, 35).

Also, that after the pilgrimage of the Church Militant on earth, it will be received up and be glorified in heaven. "Post hujus sæculi conversationem, quâ per Fidem et Baptismum mundata peregrinatur Ecclesia, cœlestis habitatio felix et æterna sequitur." (Bede.)

Compare Rev. xxi. 2, where the Holy City, the new Jerusalem, the Church glorified, is seen coming down from heaven.

13. θῦσον καὶ φάγε] The act of eating is here represented as figurative of receiving into communion, or incorporation;

f Lev. 11. 4. & 20. 25. Deut. 14. 3. 7. Ezek. 4. 14.
g Matt. 15. 11. Rom. 14. 14.
h ver. 28. Matt. 15. 11. 1 Cor. 10. 25. 1 Tim. 4. 4.

φάγε. 14 [f]Ὁ δὲ Πέτρος εἶπε, Μηδαμῶς, Κύριε· ὅτι οὐδέποτε ἔφαγον πᾶν κοινὸν ἢ ἀκάθαρτον. 15 [g]Καὶ φωνὴ πάλιν ἐκ δευτέρου πρὸς αὐτόν, [a]Ἃ ὁ Θεὸς ἐκαθάρισε, [h]σὺ μὴ κοίνου. 16 Τοῦτο δὲ ἐγένετο ἐπὶ τρίς· καὶ εὐθὺς ἀνελήφθη τὸ σκεῦος εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν.

17 Ὡς δὲ ἐν ἑαυτῷ διηπόρει ὁ Πέτρος, τί ἂν εἴη τὸ ὅραμα ὃ εἶδε, καὶ ἰδοὺ, οἱ ἄνδρες οἱ ἀπεσταλμένοι ἀπὸ τοῦ Κορνηλίου, διερωτήσαντες τὴν οἰκίαν τοῦ Σίμωνος, ἐπέστησαν ἐπὶ τὸν πυλῶνα· 18 καὶ φωνήσαντες ἐπυνθάνοντο, εἰ Σίμων ὁ ἐπικαλούμενος Πέτρος ἐνθάδε ξενίζεται. 19 Τοῦ δὲ Πέτρου διενθυμουμένου περὶ τοῦ ὁράματος, εἶπεν αὐτῷ τὸ Πνεῦμα, Ἰδοὺ, ἄνδρες τρεῖς ζητοῦσί σε· 20 [1]ἀλλὰ ἀναστὰς κατάβηθι, καὶ πορεύου σὺν αὐτοῖς, μηδὲν διακρινόμενος, ὅτι ἐγὼ ἀπέσταλκα αὐτούς. 21 Καταβὰς δὲ Πέτρος πρὸς τοὺς ἄνδρας εἶπεν, Ἰδοὺ, ἐγώ εἰμι ὃν ζητεῖτε· τίς ἡ αἰτία δι' ἣν πάρεστε; 22 Οἱ δὲ εἶπον, Κορνήλιος ἑκατοντάρχης, ἀνὴρ δίκαιος καὶ φοβούμενος τὸν Θεὸν, μαρτυρούμενός τε ὑπὸ ὅλου τοῦ ἔθνους τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἐχρηματίσθη ὑπὸ ἀγγέλου ἁγίου μεταπέμψασθαί σε εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἀκοῦσαι ῥήματα παρὰ σοῦ. 23 Εἰσκαλεσάμενος οὖν αὐτοὺς ἐξένισε.

1 ch. 15. 7.

Τῇ δὲ ἐπαύριον ἀναστὰς ἐξῆλθε σὺν αὐτοῖς, καί τινες τῶν ἀδελφῶν τῶν ἀπὸ Ἰόππης συνῆλθον αὐτῷ· 24 τῇ δὲ ἐπαύριον εἰσῆλθον εἰς τὴν Καισάρειαν· ὁ δὲ Κορνήλιος ἦν προσδοκῶν αὐτοὺς, συγκαλεσάμενος τοὺς συγγενεῖς αὐτοῦ καὶ τοὺς ἀναγκαίους φίλους.

25 Ὡς δὲ ἐγένετο τοῦ εἰσελθεῖν τὸν Πέτρον, συναντήσας αὐτῷ ὁ Κορνήλιος,

---

The Prophet Ezekiel (iii. 1) and St. John (Rev. x. 9) are commanded to eat a roll or book, in order to make its spirit and its words a part of themselves. So Peter is commanded to eat these animals, in order that he may know that the Gentiles are to be incorporated through his ministry into the Church or body of Christ;

As S. Aug. says, Serm. 149, "Occide et manduca, ut interficiatur in iis vita præterita et transeant in corpus tuum, tanquam in novam vitam societatis Ecclesiæ; ut tanquam mundus cibus incorporentur Ecclesiæ;" and Bede says here, "Occide in gentibus quod erant, et fac quod es."

Here then "Petrus figuram gestat Ecclesiæ," and according to Christ's promise (Matt. xvi. 19) he is to be Christ's agent in opening the door of the Church, or Kingdom of Heaven, to all Nations by the Keys of the Word and Sacraments. He is to be Christ's instrument for incorporating the Gentiles in the Church by communion with them.

14. οὐδέποτε πᾶν κοινόν] On the Hebraism οὐ πᾶς = none, see Matt. xxiv. 22.

On the Levitical distinction between clean and unclean animals, and on the moral purposes of it, see Aug. Serm. 149. 4, and Rev. Wm. Jones (of Nayland), "Zoologia Ethica," Works, ii. 107.

The Jewish Rabbis allowed that in the time of the Messiah no animals would be unclean. See R. Moyses and R. Salomon on Gen. ix. 8.

15, 16. φωνὴ πάλιν ἐκ δευτέρου—ἐπὶ τρίς] It was done three times, for greater assurance, and for more solemn admonition. Repetition is usual in divine Visions and Prophecies, Gen. xli. 28—32; xxxvii. 6—10. So in Daniel's Visions (Dan. ii. and vii.) the same thing is represented twice.

See above, Preface to the Gospels, p. xxiii., on Repetition as a characteristic of Inspiration.

S. Chrys. and S. Aug. (Serm. 149) suggest another reason why it is mentioned that this linen sheet, held by its four corners, was let down three times. It represented the world as a Church, purified and cleansed by God; and this cleansing is effected by immersion in the waters of Baptism in the Name of the Holy Trinity. "In Nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritûs Sancti, credentes innovantur ut pertineant ad communionem sanctorum." So also Œcumen.

The four corners intimate the extension of the Church to the Four winds of heaven; and the multiplication of the number Four into the other number here specified, Three, produces the number Twelve, which is specially characteristic of the Church of Christ, extended to the Four Quarters of the Globe, and baptized in the Name of the Trinity by the ministry of the Twelve Apostles and their successors, and militant here on earth, and glorified hereafter in heaven. See Augustine, quoted in note on Matt. x. 2, and Rev. vii. 5—8; xii. 1; xxi. 12. 14. 16. 21; xxii. 2.

15. ἃ ὁ Θεὸς ἐκαθάρισε] God hath cleansed the Gentiles also, who were unclean according to the Law, by the Blood of His dear Son. (Irenæus in Caten.) Cp. Eph. ii. 13. 16. Acts xv. 9.

— μὴ κοίνου] do not call common, do not deem unclean,—μὴ ἀκάθαρτον νόμιζε. (Hesych.)

On κοινὸς, profane, unclean, see Mark vii. 21. This usage of language, when a person is said to make what he treats as made, is very common, especially in prophecy—"ubi res dicitur fieri, quando facienda prænuntiatur." Is. vi. 10. Jer. i. 10. Ezek. xliii. 3. Zech. xi. 13. See Glass. Phil. p. 364—6, and Valck. here, who refers to Thom. Mag., γεννᾷ ὁ Πλάτων τὸν οὐρανόν, i. e. γεννητὸν λέγει. So in Leviticus xiii. 3. 13. 17, the Priest, who declares the leper unclean or the contrary, is said μαίνειν and καθαρίζειν.

19. εἶπε τὸ Πνεῦμα] a proof of the personality of the Holy Ghost. Cp. xiii. 2. 4, for another proof of the Divinity and Personality of the Holy Ghost, and see Œcumen.

20. ἐγὼ ἀπέσταλκα αὐτούς] "What God does that the Spirit is said to do." (Chrys.)

21. τοὺς ἄνδρας] Elz. adds τοὺς ἀπεσταλμένους ἀπὸ τοῦ Κορνηλίου πρὸς αὐτόν. But this is not in A, B, C, D, and other MSS., nor in Vulg. and other Versions.

22. ἐχρηματίσθη] See Matt. ii. 12. Cornelius had therefore related the Vision to others, before he knew of any result from it. An answer to the objections of those who suppose that the Vision was a delusion, or contrived after the event; a remark which will not be deemed unnecessary by those, who are, in any degree, familiar with the cavils of scepticism against the historic veracity of the supernatural agency revealed in this divine book.

23. τῇ ἐπαύριον] on the morrow. He waits from soon after noon (v. 9) till the next day. There are no marks of a heated imagination here. St. Peter had seen a vision; and he hears of another Vision of an Angel desiring that he should be sent for to Cæsarea. But he waits till the morrow. Though by natural temperament he was eager and forward, the Holy Spirit in him was a Spirit of caution and circumspection, prudence and wisdom; not of rashness and haste.

25. ὡς ἐγένετο τοῦ εἰσελθεῖν] Elz. omits τοῦ, but it is found in A, B, C, E, and other MSS., and has been received by recent Editors.

It has been alleged by some (e. g. Meyer, p. 203) that such an use of τοῦ before an infinitive is unauthorized, and is a grammatical error, incapable of analysis, and is to be ascribed to an oversight of the writer, either in composition or transcription. But it is not without example. See Luke xvii. 1, ἀνέκδεκτόν ἐστι τοῦ μὴ ἐλθεῖν σκάνδαλα.

πεσὼν ἐπὶ τοὺς πόδας προσεκύνησεν. 26 [k] Ὁ δὲ Πέτρος ἤγειρεν αὐτὸν λέγων, Ἀνάστηθι· κἀγὼ αὐτὸς ἄνθρωπός εἰμι. 27 Καὶ συνομιλῶν αὐτῷ εἰσῆλθε, καὶ εὑρίσκει συνεληλυθότας πολλούς, 28 [l] ἔφη τε πρὸς αὐτούς, Ὑμεῖς ἐπίστασθε ὡς ἀθέμιτόν ἐστιν ἀνδρὶ Ἰουδαίῳ κολλᾶσθαι ἢ προσέρχεσθαι ἀλλοφύλῳ· καὶ ἐμοὶ ὁ Θεὸς ἔδειξε μηδένα κοινὸν ἢ ἀκάθαρτον λέγειν ἄνθρωπον. 29 Διὸ καὶ ἀναντιρρήτως ἦλθον μεταπεμφθείς· πυνθάνομαι οὖν, τίνι λόγῳ μετεπέμψασθέ με; 30 [m] Καὶ ὁ Κορνήλιος ἔφη, Ἀπὸ τετάρτης ἡμέρας μέχρι ταύτης τῆς ὥρας ἤμην νηστεύων, καὶ τὴν ἐννάτην ὥραν προσευχόμενος ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ μου· καὶ ἰδοὺ, ἀνὴρ ἔστη ἐνώπιόν μου ἐν ἐσθῆτι λαμπρᾷ, 31 καί φησι, Κορνήλιε, [n] εἰσηκούσθη σοῦ ἡ προσευχὴ, καὶ αἱ ἐλεημοσύναι σου ἐμνήσθησαν ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ. 32 Πέμψον οὖν εἰς Ἰόππην, καὶ μετακάλεσαι Σίμωνα ὃς ἐπικαλεῖται Πέτρος· οὗτος ξενίζεται ἐν οἰκίᾳ Σίμωνος βυρσέως παρὰ θάλασσαν· ὃς παραγενόμενος λαλήσει σοι. 33 Ἐξαυτῆς οὖν ἔπεμψα πρός σε· σύ τε καλῶς ἐποίησας παραγενόμενος. Νῦν οὖν πάντες ἡμεῖς ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ πάρεσμεν ἀκοῦσαι πάντα τὰ προστεταγμένα σοι ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ.

34 [o] Ἀνοίξας δὲ Πέτρος τὸ στόμα εἶπεν, Ἐπ' ἀληθείας καταλαμβάνομαι, ὅτι οὐκ ἔστι προσωπολήπτης ὁ Θεός· 35 ἀλλ' ἐν παντὶ ἔθνει ὁ φοβούμενος αὐτὸν καὶ ἐργαζόμενος δικαιοσύνην δεκτὸς αὐτῷ ἐστι. 36 [p] Τὸν λόγον, ὃν ἀπέστειλε τοῖς υἱοῖς Ἰσραὴλ, εὐαγγελιζόμενος εἰρήνην διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, οὗτός ἐστι k ch. 14. 14, 15. Rev. 19. 10. & 22. 9.

l John 4. 9. & 18. 28.
m ch. 1. 10. Matt. 28. 3.
n ver. 4, &c. Dan. 10. 12. Heb. 6. 10.
o Deut. 10. 17. 2 Chron. 19. 7. Rom. 2. 11. Eph. 6. 9. Col. 3. 25. 1 Pet. 1. 17.
p Isa. 57. 19. Eph. 2. 14, 16, 17. Rom. 10. 12.

And these two remarkable instances of this construction connect the Author of the third Gospel with the Writer of the Acts. And thus the rarity of the combination has its use in supplying evidence to the student of Scripture.

One or two other instances of the use may be seen in Winer, § 44, p. 293. The analysis of the expression does not seem difficult. The phrase means, "When the hour arrived, so long expected, of Peter's arrival." In like manner, the other kindred expression in St. Luke's Gospel may be explained (xvii. 1), ἀνέκδεκτόν ἐστι τοῦ μὴ ἐλθεῖν τὰ σκάνδαλα, i. e. the time of the non-existence of offences is not to be looked for in this world, it is to be looked for only in the world to come.

— προσεκύνησεν—ἀνάστηθι] Such an act of homage, though not uncommon among Orientals, was unknown to the Romans, except in divine worship, and therefore forbidden by St. Peter in the words "Stand up; I also am a man," not a superior spirit.

St. Peter, great as he was, would not permit any one, even a heathen, to do this; what shall we say of other men who allow it? asks Ammonius here. And what shall we say of him who calls himself St. Peter's successor, and yet seats himself on the high Altar of St. Peter's Church, and offers his feet to be kissed by Bishops and others, bowing and kneeling before him? See the Ceremoniale Romanum, iii. 1, 1, and other Roman authorities quoted in the Editor's Lectures on the Apocalypse, pp. 399. 340, 2nd ed. Appendix, pp. 163, 164.

27. καὶ συνομιλῶν] He not only declined the προσκύνησις, but entered in with him, and conversed with him side by side, thus showing his humility, and also his compliance with the divine revelation, that he should consider no man common or unclean. On ὁμιλεῖν, to speak, used only by St. Luke in this sense, see Luke xxiv. 14, 15. Acts xx. 11; xxiv. 26.

30. ἀπὸ τετάρτης ἡμέρας] four days ago. So 2 Cor. viii. 10; ix. 2, ἀπὸ πέρυσι, a year ago. Cp. John xi. 18; xxi. 8.

— μέχρι ταύτης τῆς ὥρας] i.e. to three o'clock. See chap. x. 3.

— ὥραν] omitted by A, B, C, D. And it is probable that (as Bornemann observes) ἐνάτην is a gloss upon ταύτης; and that the true reading is νηστεύων καὶ προσευχόμενος.

— ἀνὴρ] So modest is Cornelius, he does not call him an angel who had praised him so highly, and yet by the purport of his words he represents him as coming from ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ. (Chrys.) Cp. i. 10.

31. ἡ προσευχή] See the power of Prayer. (Chrys.)

33. καλῶς ἐποίησας] An observable phrase. It is not the language of approval, on the Centurion's part, of St. Peter's conduct. This would ill have accorded with his humility. But it is an idiomatic and elegant expression of courtesy and gratitude—a "welcome." "Benè est quòd venisti—multùm amo te." As Casaubon on Cicero, ad Att. i. 1, observes, it has been often rendered erroneously. Cp. St. Paul's words, Phil. iv. 14. 2 Pet. i. 19. 3 John 6. See Valck. here.

35 δεκτός] = רָצוּי, from רָצָה, voluntas (cp. ἀρέσκω, ἀρεστός), to be translated acceptable, capable of being accepted, rather than actually accepted. (Severian, Caten. p. 173.) No one is accepted, except ἐν τῷ ἠγαπημένῳ, Eph. i. 6. (See Chrys. and others here.) Cp. Luke iv. 24. Phil. iv. 18. 2 Cor. vi. 2.

And in Him, and Him alone, all Nations are blessed. As Bengel says well, "Non indifferentismus Religionum, sed indifferentia Nationum, hìc asseritur." Cp. Art. xviii. of the Church of England.

36. τὸν λόγον κ.τ.λ.] As Meyer and Winer observe, the three clauses, τὸν λόγον v. 36, τὸ γενόμενον ῥῆμα v. 37, Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον, seem to be put in apposition, and to depend on ὑμεῖς οἴδατε, and οὗτός ἐστι πάντων Κύριος is introduced parenthetically. So the Authorized Version. Valck. observes that ῥῆμα is more than λόγος, and signifies "non verbum sed rem quæ accidit;" the matter, the whole transaction. See Luke i. 37; ii. 15.

Valck. also compares the similar structure in another speech of the same Apostle, Acts ii. 22—36.

It has indeed been said by some, that Cornelius could not have known the facts here mentioned. But let it be remembered, that he was quartered at Cæsarea,—a centurion of the Italian band,—and probably had often attended the Roman Procurator, who resided at Cæsarea, in the periodical visits which he made to Jerusalem, to be present at the annual Jewish festivals for the purpose of maintaining order there. (Cp. Burton, Lectures, p. 112.)

He might have conversed with other soldiers who had been there on those occasions. He might have conversed with the faithful Centurion of Capernaum (Luke vii. 2—9), perhaps with the Centurion who stood at the Cross (Matt. xxvii. 54. Luke xxiii. 47), perhaps with the soldiers who had watched the sepulchre, and had been affrighted by the earthquake, and thus have heard of the Resurrection.

Besides (as Chrys. suggests), this speech was not only intended for Cornelius and his friends, but also for the Jews who were with Peter, and to whom he appeals as witnesses of what he says, and it was designed to justify his own communion with the Gentiles.

Accordingly, it is observable that St. Peter is careful to represent the Jews as receiving, by virtue of their prerogative, the first offer of the Gospel from Christ. The word, he says, was sent to the children of Israel, τηρεῖ τὴν εὐγένειαν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις.

"In this speech (says Bede) St. Peter briefly sums up all the articles of the Creed, viz. that Jesus is the Christ, the Lord of all; sent to reconcile the world to God; preached by the Baptist; anointed by the Spirit; manifested in miracles by God dwelling in Him; crucified; raised from the dead; seen alive after His Resurrection; and the Future Judge of all at the end of the world; and that He will extend His Church by Faith throughout the World." See also p. 114 of the Rev. F. C. Cook's edition of the Acts; containing many excellent "practical and devotional suggestions."

πάντων Κύριος, 37 [q] ὑμεῖς οἴδατε, τὸ γενόμενον ῥῆμα καθ' ὅλης τῆς Ἰουδαίας, ἀρξάμενον ἀπὸ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, μετὰ τὸ βάπτισμα ὃ ἐκήρυξεν Ἰωάννης, 38 [r] Ἰησοῦν τὸν ἀπὸ Ναζαρὲθ, ὡς ἔχρισεν αὐτὸν ὁ Θεὸς Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ καὶ δυνάμει, ὃς διῆλθεν εὐεργετῶν καὶ ἰώμενος πάντας τοὺς καταδυναστευομένους ὑπὸ τοῦ Διαβόλου, ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς ἦν μετ' αὐτοῦ. 39 [s] Καὶ ἡμεῖς μάρτυρες πάντων ὧν ἐποίησεν ἔν τε τῇ χώρᾳ τῶν Ἰουδαίων καὶ ἐν Ἱερουσαλήμ· ὃν καὶ ἀνεῖλον κρεμάσαντες ἐπὶ ξύλου. 40 [t] Τοῦτον ὁ Θεὸς ἤγειρε τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, καὶ ἔδωκεν αὐτὸν ἐμφανῆ γενέσθαι, 41 [u] οὐ παντὶ τῷ λαῷ, ἀλλὰ μάρτυσι τοῖς προκεχειροτονημένοις ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῖν, οἵτινες συνεφάγομεν καὶ συνεπίομεν αὐτῷ μετὰ τὸ ἀναστῆναι αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν. 42 [v] Καὶ παρήγγειλεν ἡμῖν κηρῦξαι τῷ λαῷ, καὶ διαμαρτύρασθαι, ὅτι αὐτός ἐστιν ὁ ὡρισμένος ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ κριτὴς ζώντων καὶ νεκρῶν. 43 [w] Τούτῳ πάντες οἱ προφῆται μαρτυροῦσιν, ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν λαβεῖν διὰ τοῦ ὀνόματος αὐτοῦ πάντα τὸν πιστεύοντα εἰς αὐτόν.

44 [x] Ἔτι λαλοῦντος τοῦ Πέτρου τὰ ῥήματα ταῦτα, ἐπέπεσε τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἐπὶ πάντας τοὺς ἀκούοντας τὸν λόγον· 45 καὶ ἐξέστησαν οἱ ἐκ περιτομῆς πιστοὶ, ὅσοι συνῆλθον τῷ Πέτρῳ, ὅτι καὶ ἐπὶ τὰ ἔθνη ἡ δωρεὰ τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος ἐκκέχυται· 46 ἤκουον γὰρ αὐτῶν λαλούντων γλώσσαις, καὶ μεγαλυνόντων τὸν Θεόν.

Τότε ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Πέτρος, 47 [x] Μήτι τὸ ὕδωρ κωλῦσαι δύναταί τις τοῦ μὴ q Luke 4. 14.

r Luke 4. 18.
s ch. 2. 32.
t ch. 2. 24.
u ch. 13. 31. Luke 24. 30, 43.
v ch. 17. 31. Rom. 14. 10. 2 Cor. 5. 10.
w Jer. 31. 34. Micah 7. 18. ch. 15. 9.
x ch. 15. 8.

37. ἀρξάμενον] A, C, D, E, H have ἀρξάμενος, but compare Luke xxiv. 47.

38. ἔχρισεν] a preparation for the word Χριστιανοί, xi. 26.

41. οἵτινες συνεφάγομεν] See S. Ignatius ad Smyrn. 3 (who seems to refer to these words of St. Peter)—μετὰ τὴν ἀνάστασιν συνέφαγεν αὐτοῖς καὶ συνέπιεν.

See also the note of Severus, Archbishop of Antioch, here (in Catenâ, p. 188), who calls this eating of our Lord, after His Resurrection, καινὴν βρῶσιν, because οὐ κατὰ χρείαν ἔφαγε καὶ ἔπιεν, ἀλλὰ πιστούμενος καὶ ἐπιδεικνύων τοῖς οἰκείοις μαθηταῖς, καὶ τοῖς μετὰ ταῦτα δεῖ κείνων (read διὰ κείνων) πιστεύειν μέλλουσι τὴν ἀληθῆ φύσιν τοῦ σώματος, ὃ καὶ πέπονθεν ἑκὼν, καὶ ἀνέστη θεοπρεπῶς, παντα χόθεν ἀπελαύνων τὴν τῆς ἐπαράτου δοκήσεως (the heresy of the Docetæ) καὶ φαντασίας ὑπόνοιαν.

42. κριτής] On the certainty of a Future Judgment, see Barrow's Sermon on this text, vol. v. 129—160.

44. Ἔτι λαλοῦντος] See the dispensation of God. He did not allow Peter to finish his speech, and to command them to be baptized. But God anticipated him, and showed that He knew their hearts; and the Holy Spirit came, and so provided an answer and defence for St. Peter, against those who would charge him with surrendering the privileges of the Jews, and with a breach of the Law of God by communion with the Gentiles. (Chrys.)

44—46. ἐπέπεσε τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον—λαλούντων γλώσσαις] The Holy Spirit fell on them, as the Holy Spirit fell at the day of Pentecost on the Apostles. See xi. 15, 16. He fell on them while Peter was preaching the word; and thus the Word was confirmed; and He fell on them while hearing the Word. And they who were present heard them speak with tongues—

> "Spiritus almus
> Indulgens varias opulento munere linguas > Implevit sine more domum," (Arator,) —showing by the same sign that the same gift was bestowed on them who were Gentiles at Cæsarea, as had been vouchsafed to the first believers at Jerusalem; and that therefore the Holy Spirit is not limited to place, time, or person, but is offered to all persons, in all places, at all times.

It is, indeed, affirmed by some (e.g. Meyer, p. 210), that this manifestation at Cæsarea was altogether different from that at Jerusalem, on the day of Pentecost; and, that the expression γλώσσαις λαλεῖν, as used here and in xix. 6, and 1 Cor. xiv. 18, does not mean "to speak in foreign languages," as it does in Acts ii. 4, but it means only to speak with tongues not guided or controlled by the νοῦς, or reason of the speakers, but moved by the Holy Ghost.

But this theory destroys the force of St. Peter's subsequent argument and comment on this manifestation. See Acts xi. 15. 17, where he states that as he began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them (i.e. on the Gentile Cornelius and on his companions) as on us at the beginning. Then remembered I the Word of the Lord, how that He said, "John indeed baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost." Here St. Peter comprehends Cornelius in the same promise with the Apostles; and he adds, "Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as He did unto us, what was I that I could withstand God?"

Since, then, the disciples at Jerusalem, at Pentecost, had the power of speaking in foreign tongues, Cornelius and the Gentiles with him at Cæsarea, had the same power also.

It is indeed probable, that this power of speaking foreign languages was not long continued to those who had not, like the Apostles, occasion to use them in preaching to foreign nations.

But if Cornelius and his Gentile companions had not received the same spiritual gift, as the Apostles received at first, it never would have been inferred by St. Peter, or have been acknowledged by the Jewish Christians, as it was, that the Gentiles were to be admitted to the same spiritual privileges as those of the circumcision, who believed in Christ. See xi. 18.

Besides, as Aug. observes (Serm. 99), there was another reason for this gift to the Gentiles, as well as to the Jews and Proselytes, in the first age of the Church: "Tunc (i.e. in the first age of the Church) sic dabatur Spiritus Sanctus, ut etiam appareret datus. Qui enim Eum accipiebant linguis omnium gentium loquebantur, ut significarent Ecclesiam, in gentibus, linguis omnium locuturam."

47. μήτι τὸ ὕδωρ κωλῦσαι δ. τ.] Now that they have received the Spirit, can any man forbid the water of Baptism (τὸ ὕδωρ), which is necessary for their reception into the Church; according to Christ's saying, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God?" (John iii. 5.) A reply, by anticipation, to those Jewish Christians who would have forbidden baptism to the Gentiles. (Chrys.)

"Non dicit habent Spiritum, ergo aquâ carere possunt" (Bengel): but he commands them to be baptized; a warning to Quakers and others, who profess that they have the Spirit, and do not therefore need the outward means of grace. St. Peter teaches them to invert the argument. If men have the Spirit, they ought also to have the water; and if men refuse the water, it may be presumed that they have not the Spirit.

Two important questions arise here:—

(1) Why were these converts not baptized first, before the Holy Spirit was given?

(2) If the Holy Spirit was given, as we have seen it was, before Baptism,—is Baptism necessary,—and is Confirmation necessary,—for the reception of the Holy Ghost?

These questions have been considered by the Ancient Fathers as follows:—

(1) S. Irenæus says (Caten. p. 183, c. Hæres. iii. 12), "Probably St. Peter would not have readily admitted them to Baptism, unless he had heard them prophesying, and had seen the Holy Ghost resting upon them. Therefore he asked, 'Can any one forbid them the water, now that they have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?' thus persuading the Jews, who were with him, and intimating that unless the Holy Spirit had rested upon them, there would have been some who would have forbidden them Baptism."

βαπτισθῆναι τούτους, οἵτινες τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἔλαβον, καθὼς καὶ ἡμεῖς;
48 [y] προσέταξέ τε αὐτοὺς βαπτισθῆναι ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Κυρίου. y 1 Cor. 1. 17. ch. 8. 16.
Τότε ἠρώτησαν αὐτὸν ἐπιμεῖναι ἡμέρας τινάς.

XI. 1 [z] Ἤκουσαν δὲ οἱ ἀπόστολοι καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ οἱ ὄντες κατὰ τὴν Ἰουδαίαν, ὅτι καὶ τὰ ἔθνη ἐδέξαντο τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ. 2 [a] Καὶ ὅτε ἀνέβη Πέτρος εἰς a ch. 10. 45. Gal. 2. 12 Ἱεροσόλυμα, διεκρίνοντο πρὸς αὐτὸν οἱ ἐκ περιτομῆς 3 [b] λέγοντες, Ὅτι εἰσῆλθες b ch. 10. 28.
πρὸς ἄνδρας ἀκροβυστίαν ἔχοντας, καὶ συνέφαγες αὐτοῖς. 4 Ἀρξάμενος δὲ Πέτρος ἐξετίθετο αὐτοῖς καθεξῆς λέγων, 5 [c] Ἐγὼ ἤμην ἐν πόλει Ἰόππῃ προσ- c ch. 10. 9.
ευχόμενος, καὶ εἶδον ἐν ἐκστάσει ὅραμα, καταβαῖνον σκεῦός τι, ὡς ὀθόνην μεγάλην τέσσαρσιν ἀρχαῖς καθιεμένην ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, καὶ ἦλθεν ἄχρις ἐμοῦ· 6 εἰς ἣν ἀτενίσας κατενόουν, καὶ εἶδον τὰ τετράποδα τῆς γῆς, καὶ τὰ θηρία καὶ τὰ ἑρπετὰ, καὶ τὰ πετεινὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ· 7 ἤκουσα δὲ φωνῆς λεγούσης μοι,

---

S. Cyril (in Caten. p. 190) adds, "If any one enquires, How it was that Cornelius, and they that were with him, were allowed to receive the Holy Ghost before Baptism, let him know that this was with a view to the debate that afterwards arose, between St. Peter and those of the Circumcision."

This is evident from what follows in ch. xi. 2, where St. Peter shows that κωλῦσαι τὸ ὕδωρ would have been κωλῦσαι τὸν Θεόν (see xi. 17).

It appears from xi. 18, that the debate was appeased by reference to the fact here stated; and it is clear that there would have been a schism in the Church, unless such a divine manifestation as the descent of the Holy Spirit, enabling them to speak with tongues, had been made to authorize the act of St. Peter in admitting Cornelius, and other Gentiles with him, into the Church by Baptism.

Hence S. Augustine (Serm. 99) says, "Cùm dubitarent qui erant cum Petro, utrùm incircumcisi baptizandi essent, . . . ut hanc Deus tolleret quæstionem, cùm loquitur Petrus, venit Spiritus Sanctus; implevit Cornelium, implevit illos qui cum illo erant; et ipsâ attestatione rei magnæ quasi clamatum est (à Spiritu) ad Petrum, Quid de aquâ dubitas? jam Ego hìc sum."

So again (Serm. 266), "Ante Baptismum venit Spiritus Sanctus; de potestate, non de necessitate. Venit ante Baptismum ablutionis, ut auferret controversiam circumcisionis."

See also Aug. in Ps. xcvi.

(2) Another reason why the Holy Ghost was given before Baptism was, that it might be understood by all, that though men are tied to the use of the means which God appoints for the reception of divine grace, yet God's power is not tied to means. As Hugo (de Sacram. i. 5) says, "In potestate Dei est præter Sacramenta hominem salvare: sed in potestate hominis non est sine istis ad salutem pervenire."

Hence it is evident, that the grace which He has given us by means—such as the Sacraments, and from Confirmation,—does not reside in, or proceed from the means, but from Him who has appointed the means; and that they are only channels, and He is the sole source of Grace and Salvation to man. The minister is one thing, the Ministry is another; and the Author and Giver of all is God.

As Chrys. says (p. 191), "No one can forbid the Holy Spirit from descending, even before Baptism." And Aug. (Serm. 276), "Behold now the fulfilment of what our Lord says, 'the wind bloweth where it listeth'" (John iii. 8). But to use the words of Hooker (V. lvii. 4), "It is not ordinarily God's will to bestow the grace of Sacraments on any but by the Sacraments, which grace they that receive by Sacraments receive from Him, and not from them" (see also VII. vi. 10). And therefore we may add with him (V. lx. 4), "If Christ Himself who gives us salvation do require Baptism, it is not for us that look for salvation, to examine Him whether unbaptized men may be saved, but seriously to do what is required, and religiously to fear the danger which may grow from the want thereof."

(3) Indeed, it may be added, "Exceptio probat regulam;" and "Privilegium probat Legem."

We have seen the reason of the extraordinary effusion of the Holy Ghost, in this special case of the Gentile converts before Baptism. We find that it is a solitary case. We find also, that to the Jewish Converts the full effusion had not been vouchsafed before Baptism, nor till they were confirmed by the laying on of the Apostles' hands (see above on viii. 14—17). And we find that other succeeding converts were baptized; and that they received the imposition of hands before they received the full effusion, visibly and audibly, of the Holy Ghost (Acts xix. 5, 6). And it is evident, that the Apostle St. Peter judged Baptism to be the Sacrament of admission into Christ's Church; for otherwise he would not have commanded these to be baptized, who had received visibly and audibly the gift of the Holy Ghost. See this point well argued by S. Cyril Hierosolym., Catech. iii. p. 41, Κορνήλιος ἦν ἀνὴρ δίκαιος κ.τ.λ. We do not indeed read, that Peter laid his hands on Cornelius and the other Gentile Converts; with reverence therefore it may be said, that the full gift of the Spirit—the Baptism of the Holy Ghost Himself—is specially represented by the laying on of hands, or Confirmation. This χρῖσις τελειωτικὴ had been administered in this case (as at Pentecost; see Euseb. Emisen., quoted on viii. 14), directly and immediately by the Holy Ghost. But the Sacrament of Baptism which Christ had instituted, in the name of the Holy Trinity, had not been administered, and therefore they were baptized.

(4) Lastly, it may be added that the reason of visible signs and audible sounds on hearing the Gospel and on reception of the Holy Ghost, in the first ages of Christianity, is to be seen in the need of a proof, that God gives grace, and gives it by the Word and Sacraments in His Church. That proof was given in the earliest ages; and it is the duty and privilege of those who live now to build on the faith and practice of the past, and to believe stedfastly, and receive thankfully, the grace given by the same Holy Spirit, in the ordinary means of grace, without the evidence of the same visible signs and audible sounds. For "blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed." (John xx. 29.)

48. προσέταξε—αὐτοὺς βαπτισθῆναι] Christ preached; but He administered Baptism by His Apostles. For the reason of which see John iv. 2. And after the Ascension the Apostles preached; but they administered Baptism, for the most part, by the hands of inferior ministers, see 1 Cor. i. 17; from which passage one reason of their conduct in this respect is obvious,—i. e. lest they should be supposed to be desirous of forming sects of those whom they baptized, and lest they who had been baptized by them respectively should say, "I am of Paul, I am of Cephas." (1 Cor. i. 12—15.)

Again; if the Apostles, who had special gifts of working miracles, and of giving the Holy Ghost, had baptized with their own hands, it might have been thought by some that the grace of Baptism came from them, who administered it, and not from Him whose Baptism it is, and so an error with regard to Baptism be propagated.

Besides; after their death it might have been imagined that Baptism had lost some of its efficacy, being no longer administered by those who were called by Christ, and had received extraordinary graces of the Holy Ghost; and so the Sacrament of Baptism, which God has instituted for the remission of sins, and for reception into the Church in all ages and countries of the world, might fall into discredit and disuse.

Therefore the Apostles did not usually baptize with their own hands; but it would be a great mistake thence to infer that Baptism is of minor account. On the contrary, these considerations show its importance.

CH. XI. 2. διεκρίνοντο] See on x. 47.

4—12. ἀρξάμενος—διακρινόμενον] See x. 9—16.

A remarkable instance of Repetition; showing the importance of the subject; and that the Holy Spirit does not disdain to use the same or similar words in relating the same events. Compare the Repetitions in this book of the account of St. Paul's conversion, ix. 1; xxii. 6; xxvi. 12.

These Repetitions occur in one and the same Book. There is therefore no reason for surprise that the Holy Spirit should repeat in one Gospel what He had said in another. See Preface to the Gospels, p. xxii.

Ἀναστὰς, Πέτρε, θῦσον καὶ φάγε. 8 Εἶπον δέ, Μηδαμῶς, Κύριε· ὅτι κοινὸν ἢ ἀκάθαρτον οὐδέποτε εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸ στόμα μου. 9 Ἀπεκρίθη δέ μοι φωνὴ ἐκ δευτέρου ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, [a] Ἃ ὁ Θεὸς ἐκαθάρισε, σὺ μὴ κοίνου. 10 Τοῦτο δὲ ἐγένετο ἐπὶ τρὶς, καὶ πάλιν ἀνεσπάσθη ἅπαντα εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν. 11 Καὶ ἰδοὺ, ἐξαυτῆς τρεῖς ἄνδρες ἐπέστησαν ἐπὶ τὴν οἰκίαν ἐν ᾗ ἤμην, ἀπεσταλμένοι d John 16. 13. ch. 10. 19. ἀπὸ Καισαρείας πρός με. 12 [d] Εἶπε δέ μοι τὸ Πνεῦμα συνελθεῖν αὐτοῖς μηδὲν διακρινόμενον· ἦλθον δὲ σὺν ἐμοὶ καὶ οἱ ἓξ ἀδελφοὶ οὗτοι, καὶ εἰσήλθομεν εἰς τὸν οἶκον τοῦ ἀνδρός· 13 ἀπήγγειλέ τε ἡμῖν πῶς εἶδε τὸν ἄγγελον ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ αὐτοῦ σταθέντα καὶ εἰπόντα αὐτῷ, Ἀπόστειλον εἰς Ἰόππην, καὶ μετάπεμψαι Σίμωνα τὸν ἐπικαλούμενον Πέτρον, 14 ὃς λαλήσει ῥήματα πρός e Ps. 19. 7—11. John 6. 63, 68. & 17. 20. σε, [e] ἐν οἷς σωθήσῃ, σὺ καὶ πᾶς ὁ οἶκός σου. 15 [f] Ἐν δὲ τῷ ἄρξασθαί με
f ch. 2. 4. λαλεῖν, ἐπέπεσε τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἐπ' αὐτοὺς, ὥσπερ καὶ ἐφ' ἡμᾶς ἐν ἀρχῇ· g ch. 1. 5. & 19. 4. Matt. 3. 11. Luke 3. 16. 16 [g] Ἐμνήσθην δὲ τοῦ ῥήματος τοῦ Κυρίου ὡς ἔλεγεν, Ἰωάννης μὲν ἐβάπτισεν h ch. 10. 47. ὕδατι, ὑμεῖς δὲ βαπτισθήσεσθε ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ. 17 [h] Εἰ οὖν τὴν ἴσην δωρεὰν ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Θεὸς ὡς καὶ ἡμῖν, πιστεύσασιν ἐπὶ τὸν Κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χρι-στὸν, ἐγὼ δὲ τίς ἤμην, δυνατὸς κωλῦσαι τὸν Θεόν; 18 Ἀκούσαντες δὲ ταῦτα ἡσύχασαν, καὶ ἐδόξαζον τὸν Θεὸν λέγοντες, Ἄραγε καὶ τοῖς ἔθνεσιν ὁ Θεὸς τὴν μετάνοιαν εἰς ζωὴν ἔδωκεν.

i ch. 8. 1. 19 [i] Οἱ μὲν οὖν διασπαρέντες ἀπὸ τῆς θλίψεως τῆς γενομένης ἐπὶ Στεφάνῳ διῆλθον ἕως Φοινίκης καὶ Κύπρου καὶ Ἀντιοχείας, μηδενὶ λαλοῦντες τὸν λόγον, k ch. 6. 1. εἰ μὴ μόνον Ἰουδαίοις. 20 [k] Ἦσαν δέ τινες ἐξ αὐτῶν, ἄνδρες Κύπριοι καὶ Κυρηναῖοι, οἵτινες ἐλθόντες εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν ἐλάλουν πρὸς τοὺς Ἑλληνιστὰς,

---

13. τὸν ἄγγελον] The Angel, of which you have already heard from others. The circumstances of the vision of Cornelius, which were recounted by him in the presence of many (x. 24. 30. 45), must have been notorious at Jerusalem.

16. ῥήματος τοῦ Κυρίου—βαπτισθήσεσθε ἐν Πν. ἁ.] See on i. 5.

17. ἐγὼ δὲ τίς ἤμην, δυνατός] Two questions in one. Cp. Luke xix. 15, τίς τί ἐπραγματεύσατο; xvi. 2, τί τοῦτο ἀκούω; Winer, G. G. § 66, p. 553.

The δὲ after ἐγὼ is omitted by A, D. But it was not likely to be interpolated, and it gives force to the question,—"You may doubt, and debate, and censure me; but who was I, to resist God?"

— κωλῦσαι τὸν Θεόν] See on x. 47.

19. οἱ μὲν οὖν διασπαρέντες] A recapitulation. See viii. 1.

— ἐπὶ Στεφάνῳ] So G, H, and probably B, and the great majority of cursive MSS. A, E have ἐπὶ Στεφάνου, 'in the time of Stephen,' and Vulg. 'sub Stephano.' Cp. ἐπὶ Κλαυδίου, v. 28. But ἐπὶ Στεφάνῳ appears to be the true reading. ἐπὶ = super, 'upon' Stephen,—i. e. the persecution against him while living, and over him when dead; that persecution to which he gave occasion by his boldness (vi. 11), and in which he was killed, and which was stimulated by his preaching and death. His persecutors and murderers were not convinced by his miracles and teaching, or satisfied with his death; but having once tasted blood, they thirsted for other victims (see ix. 1); and yet by Persecution the cause which they persecuted was advanced. See viii. 1.

— Ἀντιοχείας] On the Orontes, 120 stadia from its port Seleucia; founded by Seleucus Nicator, who called it from his father Antiochus; the residence of the Seleucid Dynasty of Syria; and afterwards, when under Roman rule, the residence of the Præses of Syria. "Syriæ metropolis, tertium inter omnes Romani orbis locum obtinens, hoc est post Romam et Alexandriam." (Jerome ad Amos. vi. quoted by A Lap.) Cp. Winer, R. W. B. i. 60. Howson, i. 150. Lewin, p. 107.

20. Ἑλληνιστάς] The determination of the true reading here concerns an important point in the history of the Church.

B (probably) and D, E, G, H, and almost all the Cursive MSS., without exception, have Ἑλληνιστὰς, the reading of the received text. And so the text of Chrys., Œcum., and Theophylact, and both the commentaries of Theophyl. p. 98 and p. 251, διὰ τὸ μὴ εἰδέναι Ἑβραϊστὶ Ἑλληνιστὰς ἐκάλουν.

But A has Ἕλληνας.

This authority however is of less weight, because A has Ἕλληνας also in ix. 29, where Ἑλληνιστὰς is confessedly the true reading.

D* has Ἕλληνας, but its reading was afterwards altered to Ἑλληνιστάς.

The authority of several Versions (e. g. Vulg., Syriac, Coptic, Arabic) in this question, is not of any value; because (as Whitby observes, p. 463) they use the same word for Ἕλληνες and Ἑλληνισταί.

Eusebius (ii. 3) is in favour of Ἑλλήνων, and so is Chrys. in his exposition, ὅρα Ἑλλησιν εὐαγγελίζονται, but he supposes the events here mentioned to be posterior to the reception of Cornelius into the Church. And so Lyranus, Cajetanus, Lorinus, and others.

Most recent Editors, Griesbach, Lachmann, Scholz., Tischendorf, Bornemann, Alford, have introduced Ἕλληνας into the text. But they (with the exception of Alford) give no interpretation of the meaning which they would affix to the word. They may have supposed it to comprise Jewish proselytes, as Meyer does (p. 215 and p. 259, on chap. xiv. 1); and he observes that the ἔθνη are distinguished from the Ἕλληνες. Cp. xiii. 42; xviii. 4. 6.

But Alford, in his note here, understands it as not signifying Hellenists, but "Gentiles uncircumcised," and them only; and he says that "the advocacy of the reading Ἑλληνιστὰς has mainly arisen from a mistaken view that the baptism of Cornelius must necessarily have preceded the conversion of all other Gentiles."

Two questions arise here—

1. Which is the true reading, Ἑλληνιστὰς or Ἕλληνας?

2. In what sense is the true reading to be understood?

1. The authority of the MSS. is in favour of Ἑλληνιστὰς, and it is mainly on supposed internal evidence that preference has recently been given to Ἕλληνας.

2. It is said that the word here used, whether Ἕλληνες or Ἑλληνισταί, is opposed to the word Ἰουδαίοις in v. 19, and that therefore the only word that the passage admits is Ἕλληνας, and that this word must be understood to mean Gentiles.

But this is not certain;

It is true that some MSS. (A, B, and some Cursives) insert καὶ after ἐλάλουν, but they are more than counterbalanced by the great preponderance of MSS.; and καὶ is not admitted by Griesbach or Tischendorf.

If Ἑλληνιστὰς is the true reading, then the word Ἰουδαίοις in v. 19 includes Ἑλληνιστὰς in v. 20; and the men of Cyprus, probably Hellenistic Jews, who had embraced the Gospel, spoke the Word to other Hellenistic Jews, in order that they also might embrace it.

Nor would the reading Ἕλληνας exclude this meaning.

The word (Ἕλληνες) does not always mean unbelieving εὐαγγελιζόμενοι τὸν Κύριον Ἰησοῦν· 21 [l] καὶ ἦν χεὶρ Κυρίου μετ' αὐτῶν· πολύς τε ἀριθμὸς πιστεύσας ἐπέστρεψεν ἐπὶ τὸν Κύριον. 22 Ἠκούσθη δὲ ὁ λόγος εἰς τὰ ὦτα τῆς ἐκκλησίας τῆς ἐν Ἰερουσαλὴμ περὶ αὐτῶν, καὶ ἐξαπέστειλαν Βαρνάβαν διελθεῖν ἕως Ἀντιοχείας· 23 ὃς παραγενόμενος καὶ ἰδὼν τὴν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐχάρη, καὶ παρεκάλει πάντας τῇ προθέσει τῆς καρδίας προσμένειν τῷ Κυρίῳ, 24 [m] ὅτι ἦν ἀνὴρ ἀγαθὸς, καὶ πλήρης Πνεύματος ἁγίου καὶ πίστεως· καὶ προσετέθη ὄχλος ἱκανὸς τῷ Κυρίῳ. 25 [n] Ἐξῆλθε δὲ εἰς Ταρσὸν ὁ Βαρνάβας ἀναζητῆσαι Σαῦλον, καὶ εὑρὼν αὐτὸν ἤγαγεν αὐτὸν εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν. 26 Ἐγένετο δὲ αὐτοὺς ἐνιαυτὸν ὅλον συναχθῆναι ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, καὶ διδάξαι ὄχλον ἱκανὸν, χρηματίσαι τε πρῶτον ἐν Ἀντιοχείᾳ τοὺς μαθητὰς Χριστιανούς.

[l] Luke l. 66. ch. 2. 47.

[m] ch. 5. 14. & 6. 5.

[n] ch. 9. 30.

heathens. See particularly John xii. 20, where Ἕλληνες came up to worship at Jerusalem, and Acts xiv. 1, where Ἕλληνες are among the attendants at the Jewish Synagogue. Cp. xviii. 4, and Howson, i. 144. 218. 252. 312. See also on xvii. 4, σεβομένων Ἑλλήνων, where A, D introduce καὶ before Ἑλλήνων, showing that copyists did not always rightly understand the word, which is there used for proselytes. And yet Vulg. there renders it Gentiles, the word which Cassiodor. (p. 175) has here.

Still further:

Even if Ἕλληνας were the true reading, it does not seem probable, from internal evidence, that it can here mean the heathen.

The events here described, as Alford rightly observes here, and on x. 1. p. 99, appear to be prior to the baptism of Cornelius. See v. 19. Cp. viii. 1.

If so, the words τοὺς Ἕλληνας cannot mean the Gentiles. For St. Peter, as Christ had prophesied (Matt. xvi. 18), and as St. Peter himself affirms, was chosen by God to be the first to open the door to the Gentiles (cp. Acts xv. 7). And Cornelius was the first-fruits of the Gentile world (xi. 1. 18). And if these Ἕλληνες had been Gentiles, and if they had been the first Gentiles who were admitted into the Church, it is probable that their reception into the Church would have been authorized and signalized by Visions from heaven, and by other miraculous interventions, similar to those of which we read in the history of Cornelius; and those visions and interventions would not have been necessary in the case of Cornelius (xi. 1). And the gravamen of the charge of receiving uncircumcised Gentiles into the Church would have been directed against these men of Cyprus, and not, as it was, against St. Peter (xi. 2).

If then we receive the word Ἕλληνας, and translate it Gentiles, then we must place this incident after the baptism of Cornelius.

And this seems to have been Bp. Pearson's opinion; see his Ann. Paulin. ad A.D. XLI.

But suppose now that this reception into the Church at Antioch was after that of Cornelius;

Still it would not be certain that the word Ἕλληνας means Gentiles here. For we read afterwards, in xiv. 27, that Paul and Barnabas announced in this same city, Antioch, that God had opened a door of faith to the Gentiles;

But this would not have been news to them, if they, who had been converted in large numbers at Antioch (v. 24), had been Gentiles.

Nor does it seem that Barnabas had as yet received a mission to the Gentiles (see on xiii. 2).

And if the reception of a single Gentile, Cornelius, and of a few with him at Cæsarea, made such a commotion as it did in the Church, it is probable that the reception of such large multitudes as are here mentioned at Antioch, would have made more noise, if they were Gentiles.

On the whole, it seems,

1. That there is not sufficient evidence to justify the insertion of Ἕλληνας in the text.

2. That Ἑλληνιστὰς is probably the true reading.

3. That even if Ἕλληνας was written by St. Luke, it would not be certain that he meant by that term Gentiles only.

4. That if he had meant Gentiles only, he would probably have written τὰ ἔθνη (as x. 45; xi. 18; xiii. 46. 48; xiv. 2. 5. 27; xv. 3. 7. 15), and not τοὺς Ἕλληνας. Indeed it is doubtful whether Ἕλληνες, with the definitive article, is ever used in the N. T. for the Heathen—as opposed to the Jews.

What then (it may be asked) was the advance here made in the progress of the Church?

It was the conversion of a large body of Hellenists or Greek-speaking Jews; i. e. of that class who had been most hostile to St. Stephen, and caused his death (see vi. 9—14, and on ix. 29).

Hence we may see why St. Luke mentions, that they who converted them had been dispersed by the persecution upon Stephen (xi. 19).

St. Stephen had been killed at Jerusalem by Hellenists; and they had attempted to kill Paul, Stephen's persecutor, when, soon after his conversion, he preached Christ there (ix. 29). But now Hellenists are rescued from the death of sin, and brought to the saving knowledge of the gospel of eternal life, by some of those very persons who had been driven from Jerusalem by the persecution which Hellenists had excited, and who had come from Jerusalem to seek and to save them in their own homes.

Hence also we see why Barnabas now goes to Tarsus to seek Saul (v. 25): how happy must have been the reconciliation effected between the Hellenists and him whom they had attempted to destroy when he preached Christ (ix. 29)!

So God over-ruled evil for good. Here was a great step gained. A victory achieved over a large number of the bitterest enemies of the Church; a conquest gained beyond the region of Palestine, and therefore in this respect also different from the successes at Jerusalem and Cæsarea; achieved in the third great city of the world, Antioch; and introductory to the triumphs of which we are about to read in the sequel, and which were mainly won by the agency of the great Apostle to the Gentiles, who is now presented to us at Antioch, the Apostle St. Paul, and who will proceed on his triumphal march till he arrives at the Capital of the world—Rome.

In examining the important question considered in this note, use has been made of an able paper by the learned Principal of Bishop's College, Calcutta, the Rev. W. Kay, D.D. Calcutta, 1856.

There is also an excellent note of Valckenaer (in his Scholæ, p. 481), where his Editor, Wassenberg, observes, that if Griesbach had read Valckenaer's observations in favour of the common reading Ἑλληνιστὰς, he would not have been so eager to receive Ἕλληνας into the text. See also Whitby here, and on vi. 1.

22. Βαρνάβαν] of Cyprus, iv. 36, and therefore sent to confer with the Cypriots mentioned in v. 20.

23. παρεκάλει] For he was υἱὸς παρακλήσεως. See on iv. 36, and ix. 27.

— πάντας προσμένειν] A strong evidence of the probability and necessity of the concurrence of the human will with divine grace for the salvation of men. Cp. below, xiii. 43, and xiv. 22. Phil. ii. 12, 13. 2 Pet. i. 10; iii. 14.

24. ἀνὴρ ἀγαθὸς] Something more than δίκαιος. See St. Paul's distinction, Rom. v. 7. (Ford.)

25. Ταρσόν] His native city (xxii. 3), where he had been sent by the Apostles (ix. 30),—another proof of the sincerity of St. Paul's conversion, and of his courage and affection for his own countrymen.

— ἀναζητῆσαι Σαῦλον] A similar act of kindness to that rendered by him to St. Paul at Jerusalem, ix. 27. Why Saul was now specially sought for, see on v. 20.

26. χρηματίσαι] "(1) negotiari. (2) ita ut nomen inde adipiscaris. (3) denominari. Vide Rom. vii. 3, μοιχαλὶς χρηματίσει."

— Χριστιανούς] The name Christians was not given till about twelve years after the Ascension of Christ, in the reign of Claudius. Suidas v. Χριστιανοί. Cp. Joh. Malel. p. 318, ed. Mill, who says that ἐπὶ Εὐοδίου Χριστιανοὶ ὠνομάσθησαν.

Another remarkable instance of the priority of facts to names, in the history of the Church. See above, on the word Ἐκκλησία v. 11, διάκονοι vi. 3, and πρεσβύτεροι xi. 30.

The disciples did not make haste to adopt a name which might repel the Jews. But when time had been given to the Jews to examine the evidence of the case, they proclaimed the doctrine that "Jesus is the Christ" as the very essence of their religious profession, in their name.

The word 'Christian' occurs only three times in the New Testament,—here, Acts xxvi. 28, and 1 Pet. iv. 16. It is used frequently by St. Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch and Martyr, ad

27 Ἐν ταύταις δὲ ταῖς ἡμέραις κατῆλθον ἀπὸ Ἰεροσολύμων προφῆται εἰς o ch. 21. 10. Ἀντιόχειαν· 28 o ἀναστὰς δὲ εἷς ἐξ αὐτῶν, ὀνόματι Ἄγαβος, ἐσήμανε διὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος λιμὸν μεγάλην μέλλειν ἔσεσθαι ἐφ' ὅλην τὴν οἰκουμένην· ἥτις p Rom. 15. 25, 26. 1 Cor. 16. 1. 2 Cor. 9. 1. Gal. 2. 10. καὶ ἐγένετο ἐπὶ Κλαυδίου. 29 p Τῶν δὲ μαθητῶν, καθὼς ηὐπορεῖτό τις, ὥρισαν ἕκαστος αὐτῶν εἰς διακονίαν πέμψαι τοῖς κατοικοῦσιν ἐν τῇ Ἰουδαίᾳ ἀδελφοῖς· q ch. 12. 25. 30 q ὃ καὶ ἐποίησαν, ἀποστείλαντες πρὸς τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους διὰ χειρὸς Βαρνάβα καὶ Σαύλου.

Ephes. ii. 14, ad Magnes. 4. Trall. 6. Rom. 3. Polyc. 7. Cp. Mart. Polycarp 3, Χριστιανός εἰμι.

Eusebius appears to ascribe its imposition to the Church herself, and not, as some have done, to her enemies. And this opinion seems most probable;

The Jews would never have conceded such a title to the Nazarene,—a title which involved the acknowledgment that Jesus of Nazareth is the Messiah.

The termination -anus is no proof of a Roman extraction. We have Ἡρῳδιανοί in the Gospels (Matt. xxii. 16. Mark iii. 6; xii. 13). Many Roman names and modes of expression had found their way with the Roman arms into Palestine, as may be readily seen by an inspection of Buxtorf's Lexicon Talmudicum. Besides, many other names with the same termination were given by Greeks and other Orientals; viz. Ἀρειανοί, Νεστοριανοί. See Ammonius, in Caten. p. 339.

The Romans did not understand the name when imposed. "Perperam Chrestianus appellatur à vobis." (Tertullian.)

"Ignari rerum nostrarum Christum Chrestum et Christianos Chrestianos vocant." (Lactant.)

The word is not from Hebrew, but of Greek origin; although, happily, by its termination it accommodated itself alike to Greek and Roman use, and was well fitted to circulate throughout the world; and being first given in a Gentile city, it was an earnest of the future extension of the Church. Derived from the three-fold office of Christ, the anointed One of God to be the Prophet, Priest, and King of the world, the name intimates the obligation of those who bear it, to faith in Him, to worship through Him, and to obedience to Him, as the Christ; and it also declares their participation in His unction. (S. Aug. Ps. xxvi.) As Ignatius says, Magn. 10, "Whoever is called by any other name than this of Christian is not of God, and (ad Rom. 3) it is our duty not only to be so called, but to be." Since also the Christ is the Son of the living God (Matt. xvi. 16), these duties are elevated proportionably to His Divine Majesty.

"A title so honourable and of such concernment," says Bp. Pearson on the Creed (Art. ii. p. 194), "that St. Luke has thought fit to mention the city in which that name was first heard, and given by Euodius, the Bishop of that place, as Ecclesiastical History informs us (Suidas v. Χριστιανοί. Johann. Antioch. p. 318); in which the primitive Christians so much delighted, that before the face of their enemies they would acknowledge no other than that, though hated, reviled, tormented, martyred for it." See Euseb. v. 1.

"Christianus est cui Christus semper in corde, ore, et opere." (A Lap.)

The name Christian is also a protest against all religious titles derived from human leaders. εἷς γὰρ ὑμῶν καθηγητὴς ὁ Χριστός (Matt. xxiii. 8. 10).

Hence Greg. Nazian. says (p. 656), "I honour Peter, but am not called Petrianus; I honour Paul, but am not called Paulianus; I will not consent to be named of men, having been born of God. If I worshipped a Creature I should not be a Christian. For why is the name of Christian precious? Because Christ is God." Similar language is used by S. Augustine. What would they have said of the names Arminian, Wesleyan, &c.?

The name Christian was not given at Jerusalem, the capital of the Jewish world, where 3000 had been converted at once, but at Antioch, a Gentile city (Chrys.), the residence of the President of Syria, who had the supreme command of Judæa; an intimation of the future diffusion of Christianity throughout the Heathen world.

It is not unworthy of remark, that the name Christian was given, for all time, to the followers of Christ in that great Syrian capital, in which Antiochus Epiphanes had reigned, whose own name was connected by origin with that city, and who was the type of Antichrist.

Bp. Pearson has expressed an opinion, that as the word Χριστιανὸς was first used at Antioch, so also the word Χριστιανισμὸς, as opposed to Ἰουδαϊσμὸς, was first used by St. Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch. See on Ignat. ad Philad. 6.

The writer of the Acts of the Apostles, probably a native of Antioch, might well rejoice in the appellation, as St. Chrysostom, the Homilist on the Acts, did, from his connexion with that city.

27. προφῆται] Another proof of the gift of the Holy Ghost to the Church, and of the truth of Christ. See John xvi. 13. Cp. Acts xx. 23; xxi. 11. Eph. iv. 11. 1 Tim. iv. 1. For Prophecy had ceased with Malachi,—thence called by the Jews themselves "the seal of the Prophets." See Hottinger, Thes. Phil. p. 483.

28. λιμὸν μεγάλην ἥτις] So the best MSS. On λιμός, feminine, see Valck., who observes that the feminine is the Doric form, and that many forms passed from that dialect into Hellenistic Greek. See also Lobeck, Phryn., p. 188, and Bornemann and Meyer here.

In order that it might not be alleged (as it was by Heathens) that Famines and Troubles were due to Christianity, the Holy Spirit predicts them, and prepares the Christians for them, and makes them to be occasions of Christian Benevolence. So all things work for good to those who love God. See Chrys. here.

— ὅλην τὴν οἰκουμένην] The Roman Empire. See Luke ii. 1. On this famine, Euseb. ii. 8. 11.

— ἥτις καὶ ἐγένετο] i. e. came to pass; therefore there is an interval of some time to be supplied here. Cp. the similar use of ἐγένετο, Luke ii. 2.

It is to be understood from the context that St. Luke is speaking of its coming to pass in Judæa.

— ἐπὶ Κλαυδίου] It was not prophesied that it would prevail in all parts of it at the same time, and this seems to be the reason why St. Luke says ἐπὶ Κλαυδίου, without specifying the year; and hence it is easily intelligible that the Christians of Antioch, a great commercial city having traffic with all countries, might be comparatively at ease, while their brethren in the heart of Judæa might be in distress.

The introduction of the words ἐπὶ Κλαυδίου seems to intimate that the prophecy itself was delivered before he was Emperor.

There were numerous famines in the reign of Claudius. See Dio Cass. lx. Sueton. Claud. 28. Tacit. Ann. xii. 43. Joseph. Ant. xx. 5, A.D. 45, under Cuspius Fadus appointed Procurator of Judæa by Claudius after the death of King Herod Agrippa. "Quam famem respexisse Agabum testatur Euseb. ii. 11." Pearson, p. 376. See also Biscoe, pp. 60. 66. Lardner, Credib. i. 11. 2. After Κλαυδίου Elz. adds Καίσαρος, which is not found in the best MSS.

29. ὥρισαν πέμψαι] They did not wait for the Dearth, but anticipated it in faith and love. They no sooner believe but they bear fruit. Such was the good effect of the Famine (Chrys.); it is an occasion of spiritual plenty—another example of good elicited from evil.

30. ὃ καὶ ἐποίησαν—Σαύλου] It appears from xii. 25, that Barnabas and Saul arrived at Jerusalem and fulfilled their mission of relief to the brethren there, and returned to Antioch soon after the death of Herod, which took place after Easter, in A.D. 44.

— πρὸς τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους] the Presbyters; already well known, but now first mentioned as such. See above on vi. 3. Luke x. 1.

Hitherto St. Luke had applied the word πρεσβύτεροι to the elders of the Jews (iv. 5. 8. 23; vi. 12); henceforth the πρεσβύτεροι are officers recognized in the Church, xiv. 23; xv. 2. 4. 6. 22; xxi. 18.

Thus the Church almost insensibly succeeds to the Synagogue, and occupies its place.

The contributors did not send the money to the Deacons, though it is probable that the alms were to be dispensed by their instrumentality (vi. 5).

While the Apostles were at Jerusalem, the sums of money arising from the sale of the lands were laid at their feet (iv. 35. 37; v. 2).

It would seem therefore from the circumstance here mentioned, that the Apostles were not now at Jerusalem. St. James, the Bishop of that See, was probably there; and in the word πρεσβυτέρους his presidency may be supposed (see xii. 17), as St. Paul's is in 1 Tim. iv. 14 compared with 2 Tim. i. 6.

XII. [1] Κατ' ἐκεῖνον δὲ τὸν καιρὸν ἐπέβαλεν Ἡρώδης ὁ βασιλεὺς τὰς χεῖρας κακῶσαί τινας τῶν ἀπὸ τῆς ἐκκλησίας. [2] [a] Ἀνεῖλε δὲ Ἰάκωβον τὸν ἀδελφὸν Ἰωάννου μαχαίρᾳ. [3] Καὶ ἰδὼν ὅτι ἀρεστόν ἐστι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, προσέθετο συλλαβεῖν καὶ Πέτρον· ἦσαν δὲ αἱ ἡμέραι τῶν ἀζύμων· [4] ὃν καὶ πιάσας ἔθετο εἰς φυλακήν, παραδοὺς τέσσαρσι τετραδίοις στρατιωτῶν φυλάσσειν αὐτὸν, βουλόμενος μετὰ τὸ πάσχα ἀναγαγεῖν αὐτὸν τῷ λαῷ. [5] Ὁ μὲν οὖν Πέτρος ἐτηρεῖτο ἐν τῇ φυλακῇ· προσευχὴ δὲ ἦν ἐκτενὴς γινομένη ὑπὸ τῆς ἐκκλησίας πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ. [6] Ὅτε δὲ ἔμελλεν αὐτὸν προάγειν ὁ Ἡρώδης, τῇ νυκτὶ ἐκείνῃ ἦν ὁ Πέτρος κοιμώμενος μεταξὺ δύο στρατιωτῶν δεδεμένος ἁλύσεσι δυσὶ, φύλακές τε πρὸ τῆς θύρας ἐτήρουν τὴν φυλακήν. [7] [b] Καὶ ἰδοὺ, ἄγγελος Κυρίου ἐπέστη, καὶ φῶς ἔλαμψεν ἐν τῷ οἰκήματι· πατάξας δὲ τὴν

[a] Matt. 4. 21.

[b] ch. 5. 19.

CH. XII. 1. κατ' ἐκεῖνον τὸν καιρόν] St. Luke here returns to an earlier date than the famine in xi. 28, which took place soon after the death of Herod Agrippa I., which is described xii. 21—24, and occurred soon after the Passover of A.D. 44.

— Ἡρώδης ὁ βασιλεύς] The word βασιλεὺς here is a proof of St. Luke's accuracy. This Herod is Agrippa, son of Aristobulus and Bernice, and grandson of Herod called the Great, by whom, after his father's death, he was sent to the court of Tiberius, at Rome, who, after the death of Drusus, put him in custody, in which he remained till the death of Tiberius. Caligula gave him the tetrarchy of Philip (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 6. 10; xix. 8. 2) and the tetrarchy of Herod his brother, who was banished to Lyons, and the title of βασιλεύς. The Emperor Claudius added to his kingdom whatever else had belonged to his grandfather, Herod the King (Joseph. Ant. xix. 5. 1; xix. 8. 2).

A coin of Herod Agrippa has been preserved with the inscription, ΒΑΣΙΛΕΤΣ ΜΕΓΑΣ ΑΓΡΙΠΠΑΣ ΦΙΛΟΚΑΙΣΑΡ, and on the reverse, ΚΑΙΣΑΡΙΑ (sic) Ἡ ΠΡΟΣ ΤΩι ΣΕΒΑΣΤΩι ΛΙΜΕΝΙ (Akermann, p. 38), a remarkable memento of his attachment to Rome, and of his connexion with this Cæsarea, where he was smitten by the Angel when doing homage to Cæsar.

2. ἀνεῖλε Ἰάκωβον τ. ἀδελφὸν Ἰωάννου] and so fulfilled the prophecy of Christ (Matt. xx. 23). James tasted the first draught of Christ's cup of suffering, and his brother John had the longest draught of it. See also on v. 3.

The Lord sometimes surrenders the life of His most faithful servants; and so the measure of guilt of those who persecute them is filled up, and their punishment hastened, and the victory of Christ consummated. Cp. Baum. i. 342.

It is related by Clemens Alex. in Euseb. ii. 9, "that the person who accused him, having been present at his testimony to Christ, was so moved by it as to profess himself a Christian; and that he and the Apostle were led together to execution, and on the way thither he craved pardon of St. James for the wrong he had done him; and that the Apostle, having looked at him for a short time, said, 'Peace be with you,' and kissed him. And so both were beheaded together."

As to the time of his martyrdom, see on v. 3.

Surprise has been expressed by some (see Meyer, p. 221) that the writer of the Acts does not dilate on the circumstances of the Martyrdom of the First of the Apostles who shed his blood for Christ.

But it was no part of St. Luke's plan to write a Martyrology. His work is the book of their "Acts" in life, and not of their sufferings by death. He does not describe death-beds. The martyrdom of life is what he teaches. He fixes the reader's attention on that; and thus leads him to conclude that they who live as Martyrs will die as Martyrs, and that the true way to die well is to live well.

He thus guards him against the common error of dwelling too much on the circumstances of death-beds; and draws him off from them, to the practical duties of daily life.

Having described one Martyrdom in such a manner as none but an inspired writer could have done—the Martyrdom of St. Stephen the Deacon (vi. vii.)—he leaves the reader to infer that the same Spirit Who encouraged and animated the Protomartyr in his death, was with the whole of the Noble Army of Martyrs who followed him on the road of suffering to glory; and he therefore will not describe the martyrdom of the first Apostle, nor even of him whose friend and historian he is, the Apostle St. Paul.

Another reason may perhaps have weighed with him here. He and his brother Evangelists are very full and circumstantial in their history of the first and greatest of Martyrdoms—the source of all the Grace and of all the Glory of all Martyrdoms, both in life and death, even to the end of time, the Martyrdom of "the true and faithful WITNESS" (Rev. i. 5; iii. 14), the Martyrdom of CHRIST.

Perhaps he was unwilling to disturb the unapproachable dignity and holiness of that astonishing act of love, and of that unique source of life; or to draw off the attention of his readers by details of the subordinate and derivative martyrdoms of his followers, even of a St. James, and a St. Paul, from contemplating with unwavering faith and undivided love the Martyrdom of Christ.

— μαχαίρᾳ] i. e. not by the sentence of the Sanhedrim, according to which he would have been stoned, but by the civil sword. On μάχαιρα, as the ensign of civil power, see Rom. xiii. 4. Rev. vi. 4.

3. ἀρεστὸν Ἰουδαίοις] "Herodis posteri, Herodis Magni exemplo, id tantùm satagebant, ut Cæsaribus partim, partim Judæis placerent." (Grotius.) — προσέθετο συλλαβεῖν] a Hebraism. See on Luke xx. 12, προσέθετο πέμψαι. Cp. Gen. iv. 2; viii. 10; xxxviii. 26. 1 Sam. xix. 21. See Vorst de Hebr. p. 592.

— τῶν ἀζύμων] St. Jerome (in Ezek. xliii.) appears to say (though cp. Tillemont, p. 270) that St. James was martyred on the Second day of the Passover, i. e. on the XVth Nisan, the same day as the crucifixion of Christ; if so there was in this coincidence also an appropriateness in the prophecy of his participation in Christ's cup of suffering. See v. 2.

4. τέσσαρσι τετραδίοις] a quaternion for each of the four watches of the night, he being chained (v. 6) to two of each of the quaternions in succession; and the other two being posted at the door.

Agrippa, who had been himself kept a prisoner at Rome by Tiberius, had not learnt mercy by adversity. He who had been bound, binds Peter; but Peter is loosed from his chains, and Agrippa is deprived of life.

— μετὰ τὸ πάσχα] As if in reverence for the sanctity of the season ("non judicant die festo," says the Talmud, Moed Katon)—when he was intent on murder! Compare the hypocrisy of the Jews, when thirsting for the blood of Christ, John xviii. 28.

6. ὅτε δὲ ἔμελλεν προάγειν] on the remarkable timeliness of divine interferences, see above, ix. 3, and below, v. 23.

— κοιμώμενος] Peter sleeps calmly in body, because he watches in his heart to God; Who "neither slumbers nor sleeps." Chrys. (Hom. 8, ad Ephes.)

He cast all his care on God. He who is bound sleeps; they who are at large pray. (Chrys.)

7. ἄγγελος Κυρίου] See also v. 23.

This Chapter presents a Prophetical Epitome of the History of the Persecutions of the Church.

Herod, the Edomite, favoured by the Roman Empire, admired and applauded by the world, acting with a view to popularity (xii. 3), and administering his kingdom on principles of political expediency, with an eye mainly to material and mercantile interests (v. 20), and by the arts of diplomacy, and with the pomp and display of human eloquence and glory (v. 21), is a striking Personification of the power of the World as arrayed against the Church.

"He stretches forth his hands to vex certain of the Church." He is at first successful. The Apostle St. James is killed by the Sword; as the Baptist was by Herod's uncle. Herod is elated by his success. He proceeds to seize another Apostle, St. Peter, the foremost of the Twelve, and thus he is hurried on to his own destruction.

The Church resorts to her proper weapon of defence—Prayer (vv. 5. 12), united and unremitting Prayer. In answer to c ch. 16. 26. πλευρὰν τοῦ Πέτρου ἤγειρεν αὐτὸν, λέγων, Ἀνάστα ἐν τάχει. Καὶ [c] ἐξέπεσον αὐτοῦ αἱ ἁλύσεις ἐκ τῶν χειρῶν· [8] εἶπέ τε ὁ ἄγγελος πρὸς αὐτόν, Περίζωσαι, καὶ ὑπόδησαι τὰ σανδάλιά σου· ἐποίησε δὲ οὕτω. Καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, Περιβαλοῦ τὸ ἱμάτιόν σου, καὶ ἀκολούθει μοι. [9] Καὶ ἐξελθὼν ἠκολούθει αὐτῷ· καὶ οὐκ ᾔδει ὅτι ἀληθές ἐστι τὸ γινόμενον διὰ τοῦ ἀγγέλου, ἐδόκει δὲ ὅραμα βλέπειν. [10] Διελθόντες δὲ πρώτην φυλακὴν καὶ δευτέραν ἦλθον ἐπὶ τὴν πύλην τὴν σιδηρᾶν τὴν φέρουσαν εἰς τὴν πόλιν, ἥτις αὐτομάτη ἠνοίχθη αὐτοῖς· καὶ ἐξελθόντες προῆλθον ῥύμην μίαν· καὶ εὐθέως ἀπέστη ὁ ἄγγελος ἀπ' αὐτοῦ. [11] Καὶ ὁ Πέτρος ἐν ἑαυτῷ γενόμενος εἶπε, Νῦν οἶδα ἀληθῶς, ὅτι ἐξαπέστειλε Κύριος τὸν ἄγγελον αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐξείλατό με ἐκ χειρὸς Ἡρῴδου, καὶ πάσης τῆς προσδοκίας τοῦ

d ch. 4. 23. λαοῦ τῶν Ἰουδαίων. [12] [d] Συνιδών τε ἦλθεν ἐπὶ τὴν οἰκίαν τῆς Μαρίας τῆς μητρὸς Ἰωάννου τοῦ ἐπικαλουμένου Μάρκου, οὗ ἦσαν ἱκανοὶ συνηθροισμένοι καὶ προσευχόμενοι. [13] Κρούσαντος δὲ αὐτοῦ τὴν θύραν τοῦ πυλῶνος, προσῆλθε παιδίσκη ὑπακοῦσαι, ὀνόματι Ῥόδη· [14] καὶ ἐπιγνοῦσα τὴν φωνὴν τοῦ her supplications, one Angel of the Lord is sent to deliver Peter from prison; and another Angel is sent from God to smite Herod, in the height of his pride and glory. The princely Persecutor is summoned from the βῆμα, on which he sate in royal state (v. 21), to the βῆμα of Christ, the King of kings. He dies miserably. But "the Word of the Lord grows, and is multiplied."

This narrative forms a striking sequel to another divine History of Persecution in the Annals of the Ancient Church of God—in the Old Testament. There, another king, the victorious King of Assyria, Sennacherib, rages against Jerusalem and blasphemes God. The Church of God, in the person of her king Hezekiah, resorts to her armour against Persecution and Impiety—Prayer in God's House (see 2 Kings xix. 1. 14. Isa. xxxvii. 1).

The word of God, delivered by the prophet Isaiah, comforts Hezekiah. An Angel of the Lord is sent to smite the army of Sennacherib, in the hour of his impious exultation and triumph. Hezekiah, who had gone up to the Lord's house to pray, is miraculously rescued by God. And he who had blasphemed God, falls basely by the hands of his own children, while worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god (2 Kings xix. 37. Isa. xxxvii. 38).

These two Chapters (Acts xii. and Isa. xxxvii.) beautifully illustrate each other, by displaying the rage of the World and its furious passions against God and His Church, and the impotent futility and shameful discomfiture of all its pride and power when warring against Him; and the duty of the Church to trust in God and to pray, in the hour of her trial. They are dictated by the Holy Spirit for the encouragement of the Church in every age, and in order to cheer her with the prophetic assurance, that although all help of man should fail, the rage of the Kingdom of Darkness against her will not prevail, but be made conducive in the end to the more glorious Victory of the Word of God.

It is not unworthy of remark, as a happy coincidence, that these two Chapters are appointed to be read on the same day in the Calendar of Daily Lessons in the English Church (viz.) on December 12. May the same Divine Power who watched over the Church of Zion under both dispensations, watch over her Jerusalem, may she have grace to imitate that Church in faith and trust and prayer; and may she be ever blessed with Princes and Pastors, mindful of the example and animated with the spirit of Hezekiah the King, Isaiah the Prophet, and Peter the Apostle!

— φῶς κ.τ.λ.] that he might not suppose it to be a dream. (Chrys.) — οἰκήματι] an euphemism for prison (δεσμωτηρίῳ). Cp. ἀπαγχθῆναι, v. 19, an expression for φονευθῆναι, also said of Herod, the enemy and persecutor of the Church. Cp. εἰς τὸν τόπον τὸν ἴδιον, said of Judas, i. 25.

These examples of λιτότης, or charitable extenuation, are deserving of notice, as showing that the inspired Writers and Speakers, in the Apostolic age, were not actuated by passion, when relating the worst actions of their enemies, but were enabled to cherish a spirit of gentleness and moderation, even under circumstance of severe provocation.—A genuine fruit of the Spirit of Grace.

8. σανδάλια] See on Matt. x. 10, and Mark vi. 9, whence it appears that the Apostles did not wear the heavier ὑποδήματα, but the lighter σανδάλια, more suitable for missionary activity. Σανδάλια are the Latin soleæ, and are interpreted βλαυτία by Hesych.

The words Arise quickly, are not designed to show that there was any need of haste, but to prove the celerity with which the deliverance of Peter from his chains was executed.

Indeed (as has been observed by Valck.), all these commands of the Angel concerning St. Peter's attire, are recited to show that there was no hurry in the transaction. "Do not stay to bind on your sandals," was a common phrase among the Greeks, when they would excite a person to make haste. See Theocrit. xxiv. 35, Ἄνστα, μηδὲ πόδεσσι θεοῖς ὑπὸ σάνδαλα θείης.

And so Hesiod, to contrast speed with delay, uses a metaphor from the girding of the tunic, γείτονες ἄζωστοι ἕκιον, ζώσαντο δὲ πηοί. Cp. Juvenal, v. 20, "rumpere somnum Debeat et ligulas demittere," and Ruperti's note.

— περιβαλοῦ τὸ ἱμάτιόν σου] cast thy pallium about thee; he had already girded his tunic.

10. διελθόντες—τὴν πόλιν] See Lightfoot, who shows reason for believing that this prison was without the City's inner wall, and between its two walls.

— ἀπέστη] The Angel's actions show that God's extraordinary grace is not wanting in what is needful, nor exerted where not necessary; but where human care and labour can act, there divine grace does not supersede, but quicken them. (Chrys.)

12. Μάρκου] See xii. 25; xv. 37. 39. Probably Mark the Evangelist (Ammonius, Origen, Euthym., Œcumen.), whom St. Peter calls his son (1 Pet. v. 13). This opinion, though controverted by some, seems to be correct, for the following reasons:—

(1) We find St. Peter here connected with John, whose surname, or additional name, was Mark.

(2) This John Mark was the companion and ἀνεψιὸς of Barnabas (Acts xii. 25; xv. 37. 39. Col. iv. 10).

(3) Barnabas was under the influence of Peter. "Barnabas, Petro familiarissimus" (Bp. Pearson), was led away by Peter's example at Antioch (Gal. ii. 13).

(4) This swerving of Barnabas under St. Peter's influence, appears to have prepared the way for the παροξυσμὸς between Paul and Barnabas (Acts xv. 36–39). See Bp. Pearson, A. P. ad A.D. 50.

(5) St. Mark was mixed up with this dispute, and after it went away with Barnabas.

(6) St. Peter calls Mark his son (1 Pet. v. 13).

(7) This Mark is identified with the Evangelist by the Early Church, which records that the Gospel of St. Mark was written under the eye of St. Peter (Euseb. ii. 15; iii. 39). See also Preliminary note to the Gospel of St. Mark.

— προσευχόμενοι] by night. Cp. v. 5. Angelus orationis (see Malachi ii. 7, and cp. Bp. Andrewes, Serm. v. 355) ascendebat in Ecclesiâ, ad invocandum Deum; Angelus Potestatis descendebat à Deo ad liberandum Petrum.

Herod's soldiers were watching under arms at the door of the prison. Christ's soldiers were watching unto prayer in the house of Mary. Christ's soldiers are more powerful with their arms, than Herod's soldiers with theirs. They unlock the prison door, and bring Peter to the door of Mary's house.

See the beautiful Homily of Chrysostom on this history, pp. 761—764.

13. τὴν θύραν τοῦ πυλῶνος] The door or wicket of the gate.

— προσῆλθε παιδίσκη ὑπακοῦσαι] We hear of a παιδίσκη θυρωρὸς also in John xviii. 16, 17.

— ὑπακοῦσαι] To answer and announce. Xenophon, Sympos. i. 11.

Πέτρου ἀπὸ τῆς χαρᾶς οὐκ ἤνοιξε τὸν πυλῶνα, εἰσδραμοῦσα δὲ ἀπήγγειλεν ἑστάναι τὸν Πέτρον πρὸ τοῦ πυλῶνος. 15 Οἱ δὲ πρὸς αὐτὴν εἶπον, Μαίνῃ· ἡ δὲ διϊσχυρίζετο οὕτως ἔχειν. Οἱ δὲ ἔλεγον, Ὁ ἄγγελος αὐτοῦ ἐστιν. 16 Ὁ δὲ Πέτρος ἐπέμενε κρούων· ἀνοίξαντες δὲ εἶδον αὐτὸν, καὶ ἐξέστησαν. 17 Κατασείσας δὲ αὐτοῖς τῇ χειρὶ σιγᾷν διηγήσατο αὐτοῖς πῶς ὁ Κύριος αὐτὸν ἐξήγαγεν ἐκ τῆς φυλακῆς. Εἶπε δέ, Ἀπαγγείλατε Ἰακώβῳ καὶ τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς ταῦτα. Καὶ ἐξελθὼν ἐπορεύθη εἰς ἕτερον τόπον. 18 Γενομένης δὲ ἡμέρας, ἦν τάραχος οὐκ ὀλίγος ἐν τοῖς στρατιώταις, τί ἄρα ὁ Πέτρος ἐγένετο. 19 Ἡρώδης δὲ

---

14. ἀπὸ τῆς χαρᾶς] A touching incident, full of truth and beauty,—showing the love with which the Apostle was regarded by a servant, perhaps a slave. S. Chrys. here observes, σκόπει πῶς αἱ παιδίσκαι αὐτῶν ὁμότιμοι αὐταῖς ἦσαν. A lesson for modern times. Remark also St. Luke's knowledge of facts extends even to the name of the servant-maid at Mary's door.

15. ὁ ἄγγελος αὐτοῦ ἐστιν] "It is his Angel." This was said by holy persons who had been engaged in earnest prayer, and at a time when the graces of the Holy Spirit in the knowledge of divine things was bestowed in extraordinary abundance on the Church. And the Holy Spirit has vouchsafed to place this speech here upon record in Scripture. There is therefore doubtless something significant in it. Some of the Fathers did not hesitate to say that it appears from this and other passages of Holy Writ, especially Matt. xviii. 10, ὅτι ἕκαστος ἡμῶν ἄγγελον ἔχει (Chrys.), and παντὶ πεπιστευκότι εἰς Κύριον ἄγγελος παρεδρεύει (Basil, in Ps. xxxiii.), ἕκαστος ἔχει δδηγὸν (Ammon.), "unless we drive him from us by our sins" (Basil, in Caten. Theophyl. S. Hieron. in Esai. c. 66), and see the passages in Petavii Dogm. Theol. iii. de Angelis, ii. 6, and Bp. Bull's two Sermons, xi. and xii. "On the existence of Angels," and "the Office of the Holy Angels towards the Faithful," vol. i. pp. 261—325.

It was also a received opinion among the devout Jews of our Lord's age, that every one of the faithful has a tutelary Angel, and that the Angel sometimes appeared in the likeness of the person whose Angel he was. (See Lightfoot here, ii. p. 683.)

It may be observed also, that this speech had a singular fitness on the present occasion. For St. Peter had just said (v. 11), "Now I know that God has sent His Angel and hath delivered me;" and the very fact that he was now at Mary's door was due to God's interposition by an Angel.

It was God's power exerted by the ministry of an Angel which brought him out of the prison and enabled him to stand there. The speech therefore seems to have been uttered not without some intimation from above.

Thus far at least we may venture to say concerning it,—

(1) That it affords a remarkable illustration of the truth of the assertion, that the Angels of God "are sent forth to minister for them that shall be heirs of salvation" (Heb. i. 14), especially when labouring in the cause of Christ and His Church, and in peril of death, as Peter was. (Cp. Ps. xxxiv. 7; xci. 9—12.)

(2) That this speech, coming forth so naturally as it did from the mouth of this Christian assembly in the house of Mary, affords a cogent proof of the reality of the angelic appearances described in the New Testament, which some rationalizing Expositors would endeavour to explain away into figures of speech. Here is a person described, knocking at a door, speaking with a human voice. It cannot, they think, be Peter; for he is in prison; who, then, is it? It is his Angel.

(3) The frequency with which Angels appear, or are mentioned in the History of the Acts of the Apostles (in which the word Angel occurs twenty times) is remarkable. See v. 19; viii. 26; x. 3; xii. 7. 23; xxvii. 23. And in this same book the Sadducees appear prominently as persecutors of the Church, and they believed "neither Angel nor Spirit" (xxiii. 8);

Thus Almighty God affords the most appropriate and seasonable corrections of error, in perilous times to His Church. The angelic appearances in the Apostolic age comforted the hearts of persecuted Churches, and refuted the errors of persecuting Sadducees.

On the Angelic Appearances in the Acts see further below, note, vv. 21, 22.

17. κατασείσας—τῇ χειρί] See on xxi. 40.

— Ἰακώβῳ] "the brother (i. e. cousin) of our Lord," and first Bishop of Jerusalem (Euseb. ii. 1). See on Matt. x. 3. Known as "brother of Jesus" even to Josephus (Ant. xx. 9. 1). He was martyred, A.D. 62, by the Jews, who, being disappointed by the escape of St. Paul, wreaked their vengeance on him. Euseb. ii. 23.

This message to St. James appears to intimate that he held a special position in the Church at Jerusalem. And this is confirmed by other passages in the Acts, particularly xxi. 18, where St. Paul makes a special report to James; and by Gal. ii. 12, where persons coming from Jerusalem are said to come "from James."

This office is affirmed by ancient Church History to have been that of Bishop of Jerusalem. See Euseb. ii. 1, where he says that James, "the Lord's brother, commonly called James the Just, was ordained the first Bishop of Jerusalem."

It has been questioned by some whether "James the Lord's brother" was one of the twelve Apostles. (Burton, p. 105. Baumgarten, i. p. 326. Gieseler, § 25, 26, and others.) But this question seems to be decided by St. Paul, who says (Gal. i. 19), "Other of the Apostles saw I none, save James the Lord's brother." Compare this with Acts ix. 27, "Barnabas brought him (Paul) to the Apostles," i. e. Peter and James.

There are only two Apostles named James; and if James the Lord's brother had been the same as James the son of Zebedee, then St. John the Evangelist would have been the Lord's brother, which is never said by any writer of Scripture.

Among the women at the crucifixion, according to St. Mark (xv. 40), were Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the Less; according to St. John (xix. 25), Mary Magdalene and Mary ἡ τοῦ Κλωπᾶ, probably, wife of Cleophas. Therefore James the Less was, it would seem, son of Cleophas. And according to St. Matthew (x. 3), one of the two Apostles who was called James, was the son of Alphæus, which is probably the same name as Cleophas. See on Matt. x. 3; xii. 46. Therefore James the Lord's brother was son of Cleophas. And this is confirmed by Epiphan., Chrys., Lardner, iii. 331, and others, particularly by Papias, the scholar of St. John. See on Matt. xii. 46.

Probably his relationship to our Lord conduced to his appointment as first Bishop of Jerusalem, and several of his successors are said to have been chosen on this ground. Hegesip. in Euseb. iii. 20. Cp. the article on St. James the Less in Tillemont, Mémoires, i. pp. 163. 281, where he discusses the question; and Lardner, iii. 384, and particularly Dr. Mill's Essays, ii. p. 239, and Blunt, On the Early Church, p. 71.

— ἕτερον τόπον] Some Roman Divines say Rome (Baronius), but this is uncertain, as Lorinus acknowledges; and see Pearson, Ann. Paul. A.D. xliv. Others (Lightfoot, Heinrichs, Kuinoel) say Antioch. We find Peter again at Jerusalem at the Council, Acts xv. 7, the last time he is mentioned in this book;

The fact of his departure is perhaps mentioned to show that he would not expose himself needlessly to danger, or tempt Herod to the sin of persecution: οὐ γὰρ ἐπείραζε τὸν Θεόν (says Chrys.).

More than twelve years had now elapsed from the Ascension (see on i. 4), and he had discharged his duty of witnessing Christ's Resurrection to the Jews at Jerusalem. He would now go and preach elsewhere;

Perhaps in the word ἕτερος, other of two—contrasted with each other—there is reference to our Lord's own command (Matt. x. 23), If they persecute you in one city, fly εἰς τὴν ἑτέραν—and to His own practice when rejected by the Samaritan Village (Luke ix. 56), ἐπορεύθη εἰς ἑτέραν κώμην.

The time of the probation of Jerusalem and her Rulers was now over, as far as the preaching of the Twelve to her and to them was concerned. Her cup of iniquity had been filled to the brim by the murder of James the Apostle, and by the attempt made by her King to murder St. Peter—because that other murder had pleased the Jews;

Now, therefore, the Witness of Apostolical Preaching is withdrawn from Jerusalem, and migrates to another and better place;

Probably it is for this reason that the place to which Peter went is not specified. The non-specification of its name brings out more clearly its contrast as another place than Jerusalem. If its name had been mentioned, it might have been supposed ἐπιζητήσας αὐτὸν καὶ μὴ εὑρὼν, ἀνακρίνας τοὺς φύλακας ἐκέλευσεν ἀπαχθῆναι.

e 1 Kings 5. 9, 11. Ezek. 27. 17.

Καὶ κατελθὼν ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰουδαίας εἰς Καισάρειαν διέτριβεν. 20 e Ἦν δὲ θυμομαχῶν Τυρίοις καὶ Σιδωνίοις· ὁμοθυμαδὸν δὲ παρῆσαν πρὸς αὐτὸν, καὶ πείσαντες Βλάστον, τὸν ἐπὶ τοῦ κοιτῶνος τοῦ βασιλέως, ἠτοῦντο εἰρήνην, διὰ τὸ τρέφεσθαι αὐτῶν τὴν χώραν ἀπὸ τῆς βασιλικῆς. 21 Τακτῇ δὲ ἡμέρᾳ ὁ Ἡρώδης, ἐνδυσάμενος ἐσθῆτα βασιλικὴν, καὶ καθίσας ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος, ἐδημηγόρει πρὸς αὐτούς. 22 Ὁ δὲ δῆμος ἐπεφώνει, Θεοῦ φωνὴ καὶ οὐκ ἀνθρώπου.

f 1 Sam. 25. 38.

23 f Παραχρῆμα δὲ ἐπάταξεν αὐτὸν ἄγγελος Κυρίου, ἀνθ' ὧν οὐκ ἔδωκε τὴν δόξαν τῷ Θεῷ· καὶ γενόμενος σκωληκόβρωτος ἐξέψυξεν.

---

that he went from Jerusalem because he was attracted to that other place by some special recommendations of its own.

19. ἀπαχθῆναι] An euphemism for "to be put to death," εἰς θάνατον ἕλκεσθαι. (Hesych.) An instance of St. Luke's lenity of language—especially concerning Kings. See on v. 7.

20. θυμομαχῶν] properly fighting in his θυμὸς, the seat of passion, against—enraged with—not actually at war. So Polybius, Plutarch, and Dion. Halic. use θυμομαχεῖν (see Valck. and Kuin.).

— Τυρίοις καὶ Σιδωνίοις] "quæ civitates tunc sub Romanis erant, cum umbrâ quâdam libertatis." (Grot.) — διὰ τὸ τρέφεσθαι] Cp. 1 Kings v. 11. Ezek. xxvii. 17.

21—23. τακτῇ ἡμέρᾳ—Κυρίου] With the simple narrative of these three verses compare the ornate description in Josephus (Joseph. Ant. xix. 8. 2);

The events here described took place in the theatre at Cæsarea, when Herod was celebrating festive and votive games in honour of his Imperial patron Claudius; perhaps on the occasion of his return from Britain (cp. Lewin, p. 120, 121. Joseph. xix. 8. 2). Wetstein (p. 525) refers to coins of Herod Agrippa inscribed ΚΛΑΥΔΙΑ ΚΑΙΣΑΡΕΙΑ, and ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥΣ ΗΡΩΔΗΣ, ΦΙΛΟΚΛΑΥΔΙΟΣ ΑΓΡΙΠΠΑ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥ, and ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ ΗΡΩΔΟΥ ΚΛΑΥΔΙΩι ΚΑΙΣΑΡΙ ΣΕΒΑΣΤΩι ΕΤ. Γ.

The passage of Josephus deserves to be transcribed, as illustrating and confirming the narrative of St. Luke, and in order that it may be seen from the comparison of it with St. Luke's relation, how little the Sacred Writers are disposed to overstate things, or to adopt what is legendary and apocryphal. Ἡρώδης δευτέρᾳ τῶν θεωριῶν ἡμέρᾳ στολὴν ἐνδυσάμενος, ἐξ ἀργύρου πεποιημένην πᾶσαν, ὡς θαυμάσιον ὑφὴν εἶναι, παρῆλθεν εἰς τὸ θέατρον, ἀρχομένης ἡμέρας. Ἔνθα ταῖς πρώταις τῶν ἡλιακῶν ἀκτίνων ἐπιβολαῖς ὁ ἄργυρος καταυγασθεὶς θαυμασίως ἀπέστιλβε, μαρμαίρων τι φοβερὸν καὶ τοῖς εἰς αὐτὸν ἀτενίζουσι φρικῶδες· εὐθὺς δὲ οἱ κόλακες τὰς οὐδὲ ἐκείνῳ πρὸς ἀγαθοῦ ἄλλας ἄλλοθεν φωνὰς ἀνεβόων, Θεὸν προσαγορεύοντες, Εὐμενής τε εἴης, ἐπιλέγοντες . . . Οὐκ ἐπέπληξε τούτοις ὁ βασιλεὺς, οὐδὲ τὴν κολακείαν ἀσεβοῦσαν ἀπετρίψατο. Ἀνακύψας δὲ οὖν μετ' ὀλίγον τὸν βουβῶνα τῆς ἑαυτοῦ κεφαλῆς ὑπερκαθεζόμενον (cf. Joseph. Ant. xviii. 8) εἶδεν ἐπὶ σχοινίου τινὸς, ἄγγελόν τε τοῦτον εὐθὺς ἐνόησεν κακῶν εἶναι, τὸν καί ποτε τῶν ἀγαθῶν γενόμενον, καὶ διακάρδιον ἔσχεν ὀδύνην· ἄθροον δὲ αὐτῷ τῆς κοιλίας προσέφυσεν ἄλγημα μετὰ σφοδρότητος ἀρξάμενον . . . συνεχῶς δὲ ἐφ' ἡμέρας πέντε τῷ τῆς γαστρὸς ἀλγήματι διεργασθεὶς τὸν βίον κατέστρεψεν.

Ἀγρίππας μὲν οὖν ὁ βασιλεὺς τρόπῳ τοιούτῳ κατέστρεψε τὸν βίον.

If such a narrative as this had been found in the pages of the New Testament how much censure would it have elicited! But yet many will allow Josephus to have his owl who deny St. Luke his angel. See also above on v. 15. On the citation of this passage of Josephus by Eusebius (ii. 10), compare Whiston's note on Josephus with Heinichen's Excursus ii. p. 893, ed. Oxon, 1842.

The comparison of St. Luke's narrative in this chapter with that of the historian Josephus, presents for thankful consideration the benefits derived from the study of Sacred History. It removes the veil which hangs between us and the past, and discloses to us the secret springs and invisible agency by which its great events were produced. This is a work which no uninspired writer could perform. It could only be done by the Spirit of God. And a writer who (as St. Luke does in this chapter) professes to reveal the unseen ministry of Angels in the working out of the facts which he describes, lays claim to Inspiration. He asserts his own superiority to all ordinary Historians, and he gives cheering assurance of the operation of God's superintending Providence and retributive Justice in the Government of the World.

Yet some would reject these claims as presumptuous, and would refuse all the benefits thus proffered to their use by God;

For example, one recent Expositor of note thus comments on v. 23—

"ἐπάταξεν αὐτὸν ἄγγελος κυρίου] Schlug ihn ein Engel des Herrn ist nichts als subjective an alttest. Sagen (2 König. xix. 35) erinnernde Bezeichnung der höhern Ursache der den König schnell befallenden Krankheit, und ändert an Factum nichts." De Wette, Apostelgeschichte, p. 106, 3rd ed. 1848, and again, p. 107, "Die Krankheit (of Herod) bei Luk nach christlicher Ansicht modificirt ist."

It is consolatory to pass from this to Bengel's excellent note on ἄγγελος Κυρίου. "De gravi hâc circumstantiâ nil habet Josephus, qui multa minora persequitur. Adeò differt Historia divina et humana. Angelus Domini eduxit Petrum. Angelus Domini percussit Herodem. Utrumque ab Angelis factum esse non viderunt mortales; sanctis duntaxat innotuit."

It has been sometimes said that persons conversant with material causes, and physical phenomena, and animal organization, are slow to recognize the workings of supernatural agents. St. Luke, the beloved Physician (Col. iv. 14), whose praise is in the Gospel (2 Cor. viii. 18), furnishes a happy exception to this assertion. By the discipline of his medical training, he was specially required and qualified to scrutinize natural causes, and he was put on his guard against the impostures of fanaticism. He was not at all likely to have been credulous. And perhaps we may see a divine dispensation in the fact, that he among the Evangelists who was least likely to be carried away by a superstitious belief in supernatural agency, has been employed more than any other Sacred Writer to reveal to us the operations of Invisible Beings in the History of the Church.

23. οὐκ ἔδωκε τὴν δόξαν τ. Θ.] As Peter did, x. 26, and Paul, xiv. 14, 15.

— σκωληκόβρωτος ἐξέψυξεν] On the acts and miserable deaths of Persecutors, see 2 Macc. ix. 12 (Antiochus), Joseph. Antiq. xvii. 8. Bell. Jud. i. 33 (Herod the Great, Maximinian), Euseb. vii. 16; ix. 10, 11, Lactant. de mortibus Persecutorum, c. 16, and Wetstein here. And on the signal interferences of God's providence in behalf of His Church in times of peril, see above, ix. 3.

Herod Agrippa died August 6, A.D. 44, in the fifty-third year of his age, and in the seventh of his reign; having reigned four years under Caligula, and nearly three under Claudius Cæsar, who added Judæa and Samaria to his dominions (Joseph. xix. 8. 2). See above on v. 1.

The following historical recapitulation from Kuin. may be added here: "Herodes, qui apud auctores Agrippa et quidem major dicitur, fuit nepos Herodis magni, filius Aristobuli, cujus gulam pater laqueo fregerat, v. Joseph. Ant. xviii. 5.

"Herodes Magnus tres reliquerat filios, Archelaum, Philippum et Antipam, in quos regnum paternum divisit Augustus, ita, ut Philippo et Antipæ, unicuique quartam, Archelao autem dimidiam regni partem assignaret. Philippus accepit Batanæam, Auranitidem, quam utramque regionem Luc. iii. 1. Itureæ nomine complexus est, et Trachonitidem; Archelaus Judæam, Idumæam et Samariam ethnarchæ nomine obtinuit; Antipas Galilæam et Peræam, ita, ut non minùs quàm Philippus diceretur τετράρχης.

"Archelaus, crudelitatis nomine apud Augustum accusatus, postquàm novem annos regnarat, de suâ dignitate dejectus, et Viennam, Galliæ urbem, in exilium ab imperatore ejectus, atque Judæa in provinciæ formam redacta, Syriæque adjuncta est, ita, ut sub Syriæ præsidibus, à procuratoribus Romanis administraretur. Philippo mortuo, tetrarchia ejus Syriæ ab imperatore Tiberio adjudicata est; sed C. Caligula hanc tetrarchiam, adjectâ quoque Lysaniæ tetrarchiâ, (vid. Joseph. Antiq. xviii. 6. 10.) concessit Herodi Agrippæ, de quo nobis hic sermo est; et Antipa in 24 g Ὁ δὲ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ ηὔξανε καὶ ἐπληθύνετο.

25 h Βαρνάβας δὲ καὶ Σαῦλος ὑπέστρεψαν ἐξ Ἰερουσαλὴμ, πληρώσαντες τὴν διακονίαν, συμπαραλαβόντες καὶ Ἰωάννην τὸν ἐπικληθέντα Μάρκον.

XIII. 1 a Ἦσαν δέ τινες ἐν Ἀντιοχείᾳ κατὰ τὴν οὖσαν ἐκκλησίαν προφῆται καὶ διδάσκαλοι, ὅ τε Βαρνάβας καὶ Συμεὼν ὁ καλούμενος Νίγερ, καὶ Λούκιος ὁ Κυρηναῖος, Μαναήν τε Ἡρώδου τοῦ τετράρχου σύντροφος, καὶ Σαῦλος. 2 b Λειτουργούντων δὲ αὐτῶν τῷ Κυρίῳ καὶ νηστευόντων, εἶπε τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, Ἀφορίσατε δή μοι τὸν Βαρνάβαν καὶ Σαῦλον εἰς τὸ ἔργον ὃ προσg Isa. 55. 11. ch. 6. 7. & 19. 20. Col. 1. 6.

h ch. 11. 29.
a ch. 14. 26. Rom. 16. 21.
b ch. 9. 15. & 22. 21. Rom. 1. 1. Gal. 1. 15. & 2. 9. Eph. 3. 8. 1 Tim. 2. 7. 2 Tim. 1. 11. Matt. 9. 38. Rom. 10. 15.

Galliam primò, deinde in Hispaniam exule acto, hujus quoque tetrarchiâ eum donavit (vid. Joseph. Ant. xviii. 7).

"Neque minùs Agrippam auxit Claudius, Caligulæ successor. Romæ degebat Agrippa, cùm Caligula trucidaretur, et Claudii gratiam atque favorem sibi ita conciliabat, ut eum Judææ quoque et Samariæ præesse juberet.

"Sic totum regnum quod avus habuerat restitutum, ipseque ab imperatore Rex Judææ salutatus est, v. Joseph. Ant. xix. 5. 1. Agrippa cùm vix triennio Judæorum rex fuisset, mortuus est a. c. 44, et Judæa iterum in provinciæ formam redacta, Syriæque annexa est, misso, qui eam administraret, Cuspio Fadio, procuratore (Joseph. Ant. xix. 8. 2.) in cujus postea locum Tiberius Alexander (Joseph. xx. 5. 2.) Ventidius Cumanus (ib.) Claudius Felix (Tacit. Ann. xii. 54. Joseph. Ant. xx. 7. B. I. ii. 12.) Porcius Festus (Joseph. xx. 8.), Albinus (Id. xx. 9.) et Gessius Florus (Id. xx. 9. 5) successerunt."

24. ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ ηὔξανε] The Church's Epinicium. See above, viii. 1; xi. 19, on the good educed by God from Persecution.

25. Σαῦλος—ἐξ Ἰερουσαλήμ] It is probable that St. Paul then saw the trance in the Temple (Acts xxii. 17–21) at Jerusalem, when he had a mission from God to the Gentiles, to which he is now about to be ordained (see xiii. 2).

His rapture into the third heaven—qualifying him for the sufferings he was to endure in his missionary career by a view of the future glory—was perhaps about the same time. See 2 Cor. xii. 2. Cp. Lightfoot, i. 878, and so Bp. Pearson, p. 376.

— τὴν διακονίαν] i.e. to the Saints at Jerusalem, xi. 28, 29.

CH. XIII. 1. προφῆται] Saul, the Persecutor of the Church, is now a Preacher of the Gospel. Was there some prophetic and divinely-inspired anticipation of this marvellous change, in the saying of the Ancient Church, applied to another Persecutor, bearing the same name, "Is Saul among the Prophets?" (1 Sam x. 12; xix. 24.) See on ix. 21.

These words, Prophets and Teachers, have here a special signification and propriety as applied to Barnabas and Saul. They were already Preachers, but they were not yet Apostles. They had not as yet received the power of dispensing those peculiar gifts which were bestowed by God through the agency of the Apostles. See further on v. 3.

— Μαναήν] "aulæ tentatione liberatus." (Bengel.)

Manaën was σύντροφος, collactaneus, i. e. nourished by the same milk as Herod Antipas. The one is a prophet; the other killed one of the greatest of prophets. It is not on our circumstances, but on our heart that our eternal happiness depends. In all states of life, "one is taken, the other left." Matt. xxiv. 40. (Cp. Chrys. and Theophyl. here.)

Antipas and Archelaus were now in banishment in Gaul; Antipas at Lugdunum or Lyons, Archelaus at Vienne, in Gaul.

Ἡρώδου] Antipas, brought up privately at Rome, with his brother Archelaus. Joseph. B. J. i. 28. 4.

— Σαῦλος] here placed last of the prophets, but at and after v. 46 he generally stands before Barnabas, though not always (see xiv. 14), and "not a whit behind the chiefest Apostles" (2 Cor. xi. 5).

2. λειτουργούντων] λειτουργία (from λήϊτον and ἔργον) a public service (cp. the Athenian λειτουργίαι), applied in N. T. to the public ministry—

(1) Of the Temple (Luke i. 23. Heb. viii. 6; ix. 21), as in LXX, passim.

(2) Of the Christian Church.

Thus St. Paul calls himself λειτουργὸν Ἰησοῦ χριστοῦ εἰς τὰ ἔθνη (Rom. xv. 16), ἱερουργοῦντα τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἵνα γένηται ἡ προσφορὰ τῶν ἐθνῶν εὐπρόσδεκτος, ἡγιασμένη ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ.

Cp. Clemens Roman. § 43, as to the Jewish ministry, and as to the Christian, see cap. 44, where he uses both the words λειτουργέω and λειτουργία, and speaks of the λειτουργία of the Apostles, and of the πρεσβύτεροι, to the ποιμνίον τοῦ Χριστοῦ.

Hence it appears that in the records of primitive Christian Antiquity, the Apostles and Presbyters are said λειτουργεῖν Θεῷ, to minister to God; and also λειτουργεῖν τῷ ποιμνίῳ, i. e. to minister to the people.

In opposition to the assertions of some Romish Divines who would limit the word λειτουργία to the sacrifice of the Mass, it may be observed that Chrys. here interprets the word by κηρυττόντων, preaching; and it has been shown by Isaac Casaubon (Exercit. Baron. xvi. n. 41) that it extends to Divine Worship generally, i. e. to Prayers, Reading of Scripture, Preaching, and Administration of the Sacraments. Sometimes the word μυστικὴ was added to it, and then it generally signified the Holy Eucharist. See Bingham, xiii. 1.

— ἀφορίσατε δή μοι] i. e. separate ye them δή, i. e. now. The conjunction δὴ is thus used with an imperative and conjunctive to indicate a command to be executed without delay. See Valck., and comp. Luke ii. 15. Acts xv. 36. 1 Cor. vi. 20. Separate them from yourselves, and from the order of Prophets and Teachers (to which they have hitherto belonged), and ordain ye them now to that work to which I have called them, viz., as the sequel shows, to the Apostleship of the Gentiles.

On ἔργον, used in this sense, see 1 Tim. iii. 1, εἴ τις ἐπισκοπῆς ὀρέγεται, καλοῦ ἔργου ἐπιθυμεῖ.

So Chrys., and comp. S. Leo, Ep. ad Dioscor. 79, and below, v. 9.

Up to this time they are called Prophets, or preachers. See xiii. 1. But now, after their ordination, they appear in the next Chapter with the Apostolic title (v. 4), σὺν τοῖς ἀποστόλοις, i. e. Barnabas and Paul; and again, v. 14, οἱ ἀπόστολοι, Βαρνάβας καὶ Παῦλος. After St. Paul had received Visions and Revelations of the Lord, yet Ordination and Mission by the public authority of the Church, to qualify him for the Apostolic Office, was not dispensed with in his case; but was enjoined by the Holy Spirit Himself, who did not say, "I have separated them," but "Do ye separate them for Me."

Here (says Chrys.) we may see a proof of the Divinity of the Holy Ghost. The Prophets were ministering to the Lord. He does not say, Separate Paul and Barnabas to the Lord, but to Me, for the Ministry to which I have called them: showing that He is coequal with God.

"When did St. Paul become an Apostle?"

This is an important question, and much has been written upon it. (See Lardner, iii. p. 259.)

But it does not seem that sufficient attention has been paid to the important difference between his call, and mission to the Apostleship.

He had an immediate call from Christ at his Conversion, and was even then sent to the Gentiles (see Acts xxvi. 16—18), πρὸς οὓς σὲ ἀποστέλλω, i. e. send thee as an Apostle.

It is therefore true that he was then divinely called to the office of an Apostle to the Gentiles.

He had also supernatural Revelations in Arabia from Christ (Gal. i. 11—17).

These supernatural Visions and Revelations were arguments and motives to himself, for entering on the Apostolic office; but they would not carry conviction to others, and persuade them to receive him as an Apostle.

And he does not appear, as yet, to have exercised Apostolic functions. Nor is he, as yet, called an Apostle by the Holy Spirit writing by St. Luke; but he is only a Prophet, or Teacher (xiii. 1).

In order to execute the office of an Apostle, it was provided that he should not only have an inward call from God, but also have an external mission from Him, by the instrumentality of persons in the Church who were qualified to ordain him.

This is what he received when the Holy Ghost said, Separate to Me now (δὴ) Barnabas and Paul for the work to which I have called them (Acts xiii. 2).

A distinction must therefore be made between the call, and the separation, or mission, to the work of the Ministry. And nothing more clearly shows the necessity of a regular external mission (see Article XXIII.), as well as an inward spiritual call, than the example of St. Paul, who was converted in an extraor-

c ch. 6. 6. & 8. 15. & 14. 23.

κέκλημαι αὐτούς. 3 [c] Τότε νηστεύσαντες καὶ προσευξάμενοι καὶ ἐπιθέντες τὰς χεῖρας αὐτοῖς ἀπέλυσαν.

4 Οὗτοι μὲν οὖν ἐκπεμφθέντες ὑπὸ τοῦ Πνεύματος τοῦ ἁγίου κατῆλθον εἰς dinary manner, and eminently privileged by an "abundance of Revelations and Visions of the Lord" (2 Cor. xii. 7).

It would seem also from his case, that while it is the special function of God the Son to call persons to the Sacred Office, it is the province of God the Holy Ghost to qualify them by the divine unction at Ordination to discharge the duties to which they are called. See Acts xx. 28, and Bp. Pearson, Art. viii. p. 616.

Another question arises here;

It has been said by some that the Ordination of St. Paul and Barnabas was performed by Presbyters only.

St. Luke does not expressly mention that any Apostle was then at Antioch, yet there is reason to believe that St. Peter may have been at Antioch, and that Euodius was Bishop of Antioch at that time. See on xi. 26, and Euseb. iii. 2, and S. Jerome de Viris Ill. i. and xvi., and ad Galat. ii. 11, and Burton, Lectures, p. 196.

Nothing can be concluded from St. Luke's silence in this respect. Cp. above, on ix. 23.

Further; the Holy Ghost made a special revelation to the Church concerning them (v. 2), and they are said to be sent forth by the Holy Ghost (v. 4). And God authorized their mission by miracles, v. 11; xiv. 3. The Holy Ghost Himself ordained them by the hands which were laid upon them; and perhaps St. Luke has not mentioned whose those hands were, in order that it may be remembered, that in Ordination the persons who ordain are merely instruments for conferring grace, and that all the grace conferred is from the Holy Ghost. The suppression here of the names of the human instruments brings out more clearly the supreme authority of the Divine Agent in this holy work.

This is the second instance (recorded in the Acts) of Ordination to the Apostolic Office. It leads us to consider the agency by which, and the purposes for which, the Ordination of Apostles was effected; and its bearing on the Regimen and Polity of the Church, as regards the Christian Ministry.

Christ, the Son of God, manifest in the Flesh, was sent by God. He was God's Apostle (Heb. iii. 1) to Men: He was the Bishop of their souls (1 Pet. ii. 25).

He, when personally present upon Earth, chose the Twelve Apostles.

While He was upon Earth, one of the Twelve (Judas) died.

Yet, although Christ was forty days upon earth "speaking of the things concerning the kingdom of God" (Acts i. 3), after this vacancy had occurred, He did not fill it up then.

But the first Act which the Apostles performed after Christ's Ascension into heaven, was to pray to Him to show, "which of the two, whom they had nominated, He had chosen, to take part in the ministry and Apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell" (Acts i. 24).

The words of the Original are remarkable there,—Κύριε, ἀνάδειξον ὃν ἐξελέξω ἐκ τούτων τῶν δύο ἕνα. The word ἐξελέξω connects the choice of the one with the choice of the original Twelve (see note, and cp. Acts i. 2). And the word ἕνα, one, reserved for the end of the sentence, is emphatic, and is contrasted with δύο, two. If more than one had been chosen to succeed to the vacancy, it might have been supposed, that the persons so chosen were not severally and singly equal in dignity to the one, whose place they together occupied. But by the choice of one out of two to succeed one, it was shown that the one so chosen was equal to him whom he was chosen to succeed. Hence the Holy Spirit adds, "The lot fell on Matthias, and he was numbered with the eleven Apostles."

Hence we derive certain important inferences,—

(1) That Christ, though no longer seen on earth, is as much present with His Church as when He was personally visible; and that He can as well choose an Apostle, when He is sitting on His throne in heaven, as when He is walking by the Sea of Galilee.

(2) That the Apostolic office was to be continued in the Church. The first act done by Him after His Ascension was to provide for its continuance.

(3) That the Episcopal form of Church Government, which alone exhibits that continuance, is the regimen of the Church that is most in accordance with the will of Christ.

(4) That all the Apostles were equal in dignity. They are called "the Eleven" (Acts i. 26). If one of the Apostles, e.g. St. Peter, had been superior in degree to the other Ten, he would not have been classed with them.

(5) That their successors are equal to them in all ordinary Apostolic functions. Matthias is equal to Judas, into whose place he succeeds, and he is "numbered with the Eleven Apostles."

(6) Even therefore if the Bishop of Rome is the successor of St. Peter, he has no claim on that ground to domineer over his brethren, the other Bishops of the Church.

The Descent of the Holy Ghost made no change in these principles of Church Polity; it confirmed them; at the same time, it extended their application. Before that descent, the Apostles prayed to Christ to show His Will by the medium of Lots, in the election of a successor to the vacant place among the Apostles. The HOLY GHOST had not then been given. But after the Day of Pentecost, all reference to Lots ceased. The Father sent the Holy Ghost, in the Name of the Son (John xiv. 26), to be the Interpreter of the Will of the Ever-Blessed Trinity in the Regimen of the Church.

Hence, therefore, in the passage now before us (Acts xiii. 2), which describes the first Ordination to the Apostolic office after the Day of Pentecost, we hear the Voice of the Holy Spirit Himself. "The HOLY GHOST said, separate Me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them." Barnabas and Saul are ordained to the Apostleship. Henceforth they are called "Apostles," and perform Apostolic Acts. They are equal in dignity to the original Twelve, who had been chosen by Christ upon earth. Paul says of himself, that he is not "a whit behind the very chiefest Apostles" (2 Cor. xi. 5).

Judas had fallen away from his place: two persons were named; but only one was chosen to succeed him. Thus the equality of the successor to him whom he succeeded had been declared.

This point being established, we now find a provision made not only for the permanent continuance, but also for the ampler extension of the Apostolic office.

The next Apostle who died after Judas was St. James (Acts xii. 2). Here also two persons are named (Barnabas and Saul), and both are ordained to the Apostleship. They are ordained by the instrumentality of men, acting by command of the Holy Ghost;

Here, then, we recognize a divine dispensation for the multiplication of the Apostolate.

After this time, special utterances of the Holy Ghost, singling out particular persons for this office, are no longer distinctly heard. They cease, as Lots ceased. But the Holy Spirit is ever speaking and acting in and by the Apostles and the Church, which is His Temple; He ordains a Timothy at Ephesus, and a Titus in Crete, and Angels in the Churches of Asia, and others after them in succession to this day, to perform the ordinary functions of Apostles, and to be their successors, not indeed in the working of miracles,—which were but for a season,—but in all that is requisite for edifying the Body of Christ in every age and country, and for communicating to the immortal soul those ordinary gifts and graces which are necessary for its spiritual health here, and for its everlasting glory hereafter.

These conclusions are confirmed by the consentient voice and concurrent practice of the Church Universal, which is the Body of Christ, and is guided by the Holy Spirit, and which has authorized one form of Ecclesiastical Regimen, that by Bishops, whom she regards as successors of the Apostles in all ordinary Apostolic Offices and Acts (see on Acts xx. 28).

Here is a strong testimony for Episcopacy, as distinguished from the theory of the Papal Supremacy on the one side, and from Presbyterian parity and Lay Ordinations on the other.

In fine, this subject derives a solemn importance from the considerations,—

(1) That the SON of GOD was sent by the FATHER to be the Apostle and Bishop of our souls. 1 Pet. ii. 25.

(2) That when on Earth He chose the Twelve. Matt. x. 1.

(3) That when He had ascended into heaven, He appointed Matthias to succeed to the place in the Apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell. Acts i. 24—26.

(4) That after the Day of Pentecost the HOLY GHOST chose Paul and Barnabas to the same office. Acts xiii. 1 - 3.

(5) That the Bishops of the Church are the successors of the Holy Apostles; and that their office includes within itself the two inferior orders of Priests and Deacons.

(6) Thus then we see the Three Persons of the Ever Blessed Trinity, God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, all co-operating in the Institution and Continuance of that Office which is the Consummation of the Threefold Ministry; and thus Episcopacy is grounded on the same sanction as that of Christianity itself, which is instituted in and propagated by Baptism in the NAME of the TRIUNE GOD.

τὴν Σελεύκειαν, ἐκεῖθέν τε ἀπέπλευσαν εἰς τὴν Κύπρον. 5 [d] Καὶ γενόμενοι ἐν [d] ch. 11. 25.
Σαλαμῖνι κατήγγελλον τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς τῶν Ἰουδαίων· εἶχον δὲ καὶ Ἰωάννην ὑπηρέτην. 6 [e] Διελθόντες δὲ ὅλην τὴν νῆσον ἄχρι Πάφου [e] ch. 8. 9.
εὗρον ἄνδρα τινὰ μάγον, ψευδοπροφήτην, Ἰουδαῖον, ᾧ ὄνομα Βαριησοῦς, 7 ὃς ἦν σὺν τῷ ἀνθυπάτῳ Σεργίῳ Παύλῳ, ἀνδρὶ συνετῷ. Οὗτος προσκαλεσάμενος Βαρνάβαν καὶ Σαῦλον, ἐπεζήτησεν ἀκοῦσαι τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ. 8 [f] Ἀνθ- [f] Exod. 7. 11. 2 Tim. 3. 8.
ίστατο δὲ αὐτοῖς Ἐλύμας ὁ μάγος, οὕτως γὰρ μεθερμηνεύεται τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ, ζητῶν διαστρέψαι τὸν ἀνθύπατον ἀπὸ τῆς πίστεως. 9 Σαῦλος δέ, ὁ καὶ Παῦλος, πλησθεὶς Πνεύματος ἁγίου, ἀτενίσας εἰς αὐτὸν, 10 [g] εἶπεν, Ὦ πλήρης παντὸς [g] Matt. 13. 38. John 8. 44. 1 John 3. 8.

4. Σελεύκειαν] the harbour of Antioch, on the Orontes; and about sixteen miles from that city. (Howson, i. 166.)

— Κύπρον] the country of Barnabas, iv. 36. He now showed his love for his native land by traversing the whole, v. 6, ὅλην τὴν νῆσον—as the true reading is,—restored from A, B, C, D, E.

5. ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς] St. Paul, though sent to the Gentiles, begins, as always, by offering the Gospel to the Jews. Cp. v. 42. Such was his patience, wisdom, and charity toward God's ancient people, although they, for the most part, treated him with cruelty. He did not go at first to Sergius Paulus,—a Gentile,—but the Proconsul sent for him, v. 7.

"In the Synagogues." We may observe here the prospective adaptations of the World for the reception of the Gospel, by God's providential dispensation, in the dispersion of the Jews, and in the erection of Synagogues throughout the world, which served as temporary Churches to the Apostles for preaching the Gospel, from the words of the Law and the Prophets, which were "read there every Sabbath Day" (see v. 27, and xv. 21), and which furnished texts for their Sermons.

Thus the World was already ploughed into furrows to receive the seed of the Gospel; or, to use another figure, the Synagogue was the vestibule of the Church. See the references made to Synagogues in this history, Acts ix. 20; xiii. 5. 14. 42, 43; xiv. 1; xv. 21; xvii. 1, 2, where it is said κατὰ τὸ εἰωθὸς τῷ Παύλῳ εἰσῆλθε κ.τ.λ.

— Ἰωάννην] St. Mark. See xii. 12. 25; xiii. 5.

6. ὅλην] See on v. 4.

— Πάφου] On the western coast of Cyprus.

— μάγον] On the influence of μάγοι and γόητες at that time, and the obstacles thence presented to the Gospel, see Howson's remarks, i. p. 178, and above, viii. 9—12.

7. ἀνθυπάτῳ] Another instance of St. Luke's accuracy. Cyprus had been subject to a "Proprætor," being an Imperial Province for some time under Augustus; but that Emperor, in B.C. 27, converted it into a Senatorian Province, under a Proconsul (Dio Cass. liii. 12, p. 504, and liv. 4, p. 532); and such it was under Claudius, as is proved by a coin of that reign bearing the inscription Claudius Cæsar, and on the reverse ΕΠΙ ΚΟΜΙΝΙΟΥ ΠΡΟΚΛΟΥ ΑΝΘΥΠΑΤΟΥ ΚΥΠΡΙΩΝ. See Akerman, Numismatic Illustrations of N. T., pp. 39—42, who gives the names of four Ἀνθύπατοι of Cyprus.

This text thus explained suggests a salutary caution of general application in the study of the N. T.

It was thought by many, that Cyprus must have been under a Proprætor (and not a Proconsul), because Strabo (xiv. ad fin.) calls it an ἐπαρχία στρατηγικὴ μέχρι νῦν. Hence even Beza would have altered the text here from Proconsul into Proprætor, and did so change it in his Translation.

But it appears from Dio Cassius, p. 504, c, that all the Governors of the Senatorian Provinces were called Proconsuls, though they had been only Prætors; and the coins of Cyprus, and ancient Inscriptions of the age of Caligula and Claudius, give the title of Proconsul to the Governor of Cyprus. This has been pointed out by Cardinal Noris (Cenotaph. Pisan. p. 219), Engel (Kypros, 1843); and in England by Lardner (i. p. 19), Conybeare and Howson (chap. 5), and others; and thus St. Luke's accuracy has been vindicated.

There is little doubt that in other cases, where some difficulties may still exist in the records of Holy Writ, a similar result would be attained, if all their circumstances were known.

— ἀνδρὶ συνετῷ—τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ] A remarkable description. Two Proconsuls are placed in striking contrast with each other in this history; Sergius Paulus, Proconsul of Cyprus, and Gallio, Proconsul of Achaia (xviii. 12—17). The one is eager to hear, and sends for the Apostles; the other cares for none of these things; the one is unknown to the world, but is called here by the Holy Spirit ἀνὴρ συνετός: the other, Gallio, was caressed by the World, but has no such praise from God.

8. Ἐλύμας] the professional name of Bar Jesus, the Jew, and equivalent to μάγος, from אלם, "in linguâ Arabicâ et Persicâ magus." (Rosenm.)

9. Σαῦλος, ὁ καὶ Παῦλος] His name was changed at his Ordination to the Apostleship, as Simon was named Peter when called by Christ (Chrys.), and the sons of Zebedee were surnamed Boanerges, Mark iii. 17. But in Paul's case there was not an addition to the former name, but a change in it; and yet so as to leave much of the original name;

Some Expositors have said that this change was merely allusive and alliterative,—as Jason from Jesus, Pollio from Hillel, &c., for readier acceptance among the Romans;

But surely there was something more than this in the case of the Apostle to the Gentiles;

The change seems to have been made,

(1) Because Σαῦλος was a purely Jewish name, שָׁאוּל, and

(2) Because among the Greeks it might expose him to contempt, as having the same sound as σαῦλος (not σαυλὸς, see Passow in v.), wanton. See Homer, Hymn. Mercur. 28, and Ruhnken there.

(3) To indicate his change, and call to a new life; from a Jew to a Christian; from a Persecutor to a Preacher of the Gospel. "Patitur Paulus," says an ancient author in Aug. Append. Serm. 204, "quod fecerat Saulus. Saulus lapidavit, Paulus lapidatus est; Saulus Christianos virgis affecit, Paulus quinquies quadragies unâ minus accepit. Saulus persecutus est Ecclesiam Dei, Paulus submissus est in sportâ; Saulus vinxit, Paulus vinctus est."

(4) But in the change of Σαῦλος to Παῦλος much of the original word was left, and so commemorated what he had been, and bespoke God's mercies to him in his new condition. Compare the slight verbal changes in Abram, Sara, Hoshea the son of Nun, and others. (Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. ii. p. 132.) The fire of zeal of Σαῦλος still glowed in the heart of Παῦλος, but its flame was purified by the Holy Ghost.

(5) His "new name" denoted also his mission to the Gentiles, of whom the Romans were the principal nation, to whom the name Paulus was familiar.

(6) Some add that it was a token of humility, "Paulus, parvulus, quia se judice ἐλάχιστος τῶν ἀποστόλων" (1 Cor. xv. 9); as S. Augustine says in Ps. lxxii. (in an observation undeservedly ridiculed by some in recent times), "ex Saulo factus est Paulus, ex superbo modicus; Paulum enim modicum est," and De Spir. et Litera, c. 7.

(7) The first convert whom he is recorded to have made was a noble Roman, the Proconsul of Cyprus, then a Senatorian Province (Dio Cass. iv. p. 523), whose cognomen (not prænomen) was Paulus; and thus his name Paulus was a name of good augury, as presaging St. Paul's future success in the Roman and Gentile world. As S. Jerome says (in Epist. ad Philem.), "As Scipio, after the conquest of Africa, took the name of Africanus; and Metellus, having subdued Crete, gained the title of Creticus for his family; and Roman Generals are called from the nations over which they have triumphed, by the names Adiabenici, Parthici, Sarmatici, so Saul, being sent to preach to the Gentiles, brought back a trophy of his victory from the first spoil won by the Church, the Proconsul Sergius Paulus; and erected his banner therewith, and instead of Saul was called Paul." It is not said by Jerome that he gave himself this name on this account, which might indeed have been scarcely consistent with humility.

(8) Names imposed upon holy men, at the beginning of their career, were prophetic and significant of their office. And if the Western World is to have a Head, certainly Paul, with his Roman name and mission to the West (Clem. Rom. i. 5), might seem to challenge that title for himself, rather than he who bore the Aramaic name Cephas and the Greek one Peter.

— ἀτενίσας] intently fixing his eyes. It has been argued δόλου καὶ πάσης ῥᾳδιουργίας, υἱὲ Διαβόλου, ἐχθρὲ πάσης δικαιοσύνης, οὐ h Exod. 9. 3. παύσῃ διαστρέφων τὰς ὁδοὺς Κυρίου τὰς εὐθείας; 11 h καὶ νῦν ἰδοὺ, χεὶρ Κυρίου ἐπί σε, καὶ ἔσῃ τυφλὸς, μὴ βλέπων τὸν ἥλιον ἄχρι καιροῦ. Παρα-χρῆμα δὲ ἐπέπεσεν ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἀχλὺς καὶ σκότος· καὶ περιάγων ἐζήτει χειραγωγούς. 12 Τότε ἰδὼν ὁ ἀνθύπατος τὸ γεγονὸς ἐπίστευσεν, ἐκπλησσόμενος ἐπὶ τῇ διδαχῇ τοῦ Κυρίου.

i ch. 15. 38. 13 i Ἀναχθέντες δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς Πάφου οἱ περὶ Παῦλον, ἦλθον εἰς Πέργην τῆς Παμφυλίας. Ἰωάννης δὲ ἀποχωρήσας ἀπ' αὐτῶν ὑπέστρεψεν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα.
14 Αὐτοὶ δὲ διελθόντες ἀπὸ τῆς Πέργης παρεγένοντο εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν τῆς Πισιδίας, καὶ εἰσελθόντες εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῶν σαββάτων ἐκάθισαν.
k Luke 4. 16. ver. 27. 15 k Μετὰ δὲ τὴν ἀνάγνωσιν τοῦ νόμου καὶ τῶν προφητῶν, ἀπέστειλαν οἱ ἀρχι-συνάγωγοι πρὸς αὐτοὺς λέγοντες, Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοὶ, εἴ τίς ἐστιν ἐν ὑμῖν λόγος l ch. 12. 17. & 19. 33. & 21. 40. παρακλήσεως πρὸς τὸν λαὸν, λέγετε. 16 l Ἀναστὰς δὲ Παῦλος, καὶ κατασείσας τῇ χειρὶ, εἶπεν, Ἄνδρες Ἰσραηλῖται, καὶ οἱ φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεὸν, ἀκούσατε.
m Exod. 1. 1. & 6. 6. & 12. 31. & 13. 14. 17 m Ὁ Θεὸς τοῦ λαοῦ τούτου Ἰσραὴλ ἐξελέξατο τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν· καὶ τὸν n Exod. 16. 2, 35. Num. 14. 34. Deut. 1. 31 (Sept.). Ps. 95. 8—11. o Jos. 14. 1, 2. p Judg. 2. 16. & 3. 9. λαὸν ὕψωσεν ἐν τῇ παροικίᾳ ἐν γῇ Αἰγύπτῳ, καὶ μετὰ βραχίονος ὑψηλοῦ ἐξήγαγεν αὐτοὺς ἐξ αὐτῆς· 18 n καὶ ὡς τεσσαρακονταετῆ χρόνον ἐτροφοφόρησεν αὐτοὺς ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ· 19 o καὶ καθελὼν ἔθνη ἑπτὰ ἐν γῇ Χαναὰν, κατεκληρονόμησεν αὐτοῖς τὴν γῆν αὐτῶν, 20 ὡς ἔτεσι τετρακοσίοις καὶ πεντήκοντα· p καὶ

---

by some from this expression here and in ch. xxiii. 1, that Paul never recovered his sight as before his Conversion, when he was blinded for a time by the "glory of that light." But it would seem rather that the reverse might be inferred from the use of the word ἀτενίζω, which indicates a vigorous exercise and tension of the optic nerves, by which the spectator penetrates with a keen and piercing glance to the extreme point of his field of view. See the passages in i. 10, where it is used of the Apostles, and iii. 4, of St. Peter, vii. 55, of St. Stephen,—when their visual faculties were most strongly stimulated, and most powerfully exercised. It appears to be employed also here and elsewhere to indicate that faculty which the Apostles possessed of discerning the spirits and scrutinizing the inward affections.

10. υἱὲ Διαβόλου] By his name he was 'Son of Jesus,' but by opposing Jesus he became 'Son of the Devil.'

11. ἔσῃ τυφλὸς—χειραγωγούς] Saul himself, in his blind rage against the Church, had been stricken with blindness by God. Elymas, in his blind perversion of the truth, is now stricken with blindness by God at Paul's word. Paul was stricken in mercy, till he prayed, and was restored by God through the agency of Ananias (ix. 11. 17, 18), in order that he might see the light of the Gospel. So Elymas was threatened with blindness ἄχρι καιροῦ (cp. Luke iv. 13), that he might repent and see the light in body and soul. Saul had χειραγωγοῦντας, who led him to Damascus, where he received his sight (ix. 8), and Elymas had his χειραγωγούς. The scales had fallen from the eyes of Saul (ix. 18). A mist falls on the eyes of Elymas, and that mist was "for a season,"—a season of repentance, and might be dispelled, if he would resort to the same restoratives as St. Paul.

Thus the temporary blindness of the eye might be ministerial to the eternal light of the soul. Let these circumstances be considered by those who would charge St. Paul with cruelty. See above on chap. v. 5.

12. διδαχῇ] See Mark i. 27.

13. οἱ περὶ Παῦλον] Paul and his company. Cp. John xi. 19.

— Πέργην] on the river Cestrus,—seven miles from its mouth. Strabo, xiv. 4. Howson, p. 194.

— Ἰωάννης] See xii. 12. 25; xiii. 5; xv. 37.

15. ἀνάγνωσιν τοῦ νόμου καὶ τῶν προφητῶν] Cp. xv. 21. After the reading of the proper lesson for the day (Paraschah), of which there were fifty-three or fifty-four from the Pentateuch, and of the Haphtarah, or proper lesson from the Prophets, corresponding in number, and in some degree in purport, to their respective Paraschas. The weekly Calendar of the Lessons read in the Synagogues may be seen in Bartoloc, Bibl. Rabb. ii. p. 593—8; 655—664. Allen's Modern Judaism, p. 9—12. Cp. Hottinger, Thesaur. Philol. pp. 215—220. Buxtorf. Synag. cap. xvi.

The XLIVth of the Parashioth and Haphtoroth is now Deut. i.—iii. 22. Isa. i. 1—27. And from their internal connexion with St. Paul's speech, vv. 18, 19, it has been conjectured by some (e. g. Bengel) that those were the lessons of the day.

In what language did St. Paul preach in Pisidia? Strabo (xiii. ad fin.) distinguishes the Pisidian tongue from the Greek and the Lydian; and if St. Paul spoke to the people in their vernacular tongue, his address was in some other language than Greek. We do not find that he had any difficulty in making himself understood by any of the various populations of Asia Minor, who spoke many different languages (see Strabo xii. in Lightfoot, ii. 693); and this is a confirmation of what was stated above concerning the gift of tongues (ii. 4). See below, on xiv. 11.

16. οἱ φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεόν] Sometimes called οἱ σεβόμενοι, Proselytes of the Gate, not circumcised, and thus distinguished from ἄνδρες Ἰσραηλῖται. Cp. v. 43. 50; xvi. 14; xvii. 4. 17; xviii. 7. See Mede's Essay, Book i. Disc. 3, p. 21.

18. ἐτροφοφόρησεν] So A, C, E, and seven cursive MSS., and many versions, e. g. Syr., Copt., Æthiop., Sahid., and some early writers. So Bornemann, Bloomf., and Alford. The word is from Deut. i. 31, LXX, τροφοφορήσει, where Codex Vat. has τροποφορήσει σε Κύριος ὁ Θεός σου ὡς εἴτις τροφοφορήσαι ἄνθρωπος τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ.

The word also occurs in 2 Macc. vii. 27, ἐλέησόν με τὴν ἐν γαστρὶ περιενέγκασάν σε μῆνας ἐννέα, καὶ θηλάσασάν σε ἔτη τρία, καὶ ἐκθρέψασάν σε, καὶ ἀγαγοῦσαν εἰς τὴν ἡλικίαν ταύτην, καὶ τροποφορήσασαν, and in Macarius, Homil. 46, ἀναλαμβάνει, καὶ περιθάλπει καὶ τροφοφορεῖ ἐν πολλῇ στοργῇ (Eustath. Odyss. β. 131).

And it is explained by Cyril, Gloss., ὡς τροφὸς ἐβάστασε, bare them as it were on his back, as a nursing father does his child. Cp. Exod. xix. 4. Numb. xi. 12. Isa. xlvi. 3; and cp. Deut. v. 15; viii. 2. Isa. lxiii. 9. Hos. xi. 3. Amos ii. 10. A better reading than that of Elz., ἐτροποφόρησεν ("bare their manners"), which was indeed true, but not so likely to be said, especially by St. Paul, who sought, as far as was consistent with truth, to offend none, and conciliate all (1 Cor. ix. 20);

St. Paul might well begin his address by reminding the Jews of their privileges in being nursed by the tender care of God; but it is not likely that so consummate an orator would have commenced his address with what would exasperate and repel them, viz. with a commemoration of their ingratitude to Him.

19. ἔθνη ἑπτά] Deut. vii. 1.

— κατεκληρονόμησεν] So A, B, C, D, E, G, and many Cursives, and is received by Lachm., Tisch., Born., Alf.—Elz. has κατεκληροδότησε, which is probably a gloss on the other word, used in an uncommon sense. Cp. Numb. xxvi. 54. 56. Josh. xiv. 2. Ps. lxxviii. 55.

20. ὡς ἔτεσι τετρακοσίοις καὶ πεντήκοντα· καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα] Elz. has καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα ὡς ἔτεσι τετρακοσίοις καὶ πεντήκοντα.

The true reading has been happily restored by Lachmann from the oldest MSS., A, B, C, supported by the Latin, Coptic, μετὰ ταῦτα ἔδωκε κριτὰς ἕως Σαμουὴλ τοῦ προφήτου· 21 q κἀκεῖθεν ἠτήσαντο βασιλέα· καὶ ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Θεὸς τὸν Σαοὺλ υἱὸν Κὶς, ἄνδρα ἐκ φυλῆς Βενιαμὶν, ἔτη τεσσαράκοντα· 22 r καὶ μεταστήσας αὐτὸν, ἤγειρεν αὐτοῖς τὸν Δαυὶδ εἰς βασιλέα, ᾧ καὶ εἶπε μαρτυρήσας, Εὗρον Δαυὶδ τὸν τοῦ Ἰεσσαὶ, ἄνδρα κατὰ τὴν καρδίαν μου, ὃς ποιήσει πάντα τὰ θελήματά μου. 23 s Τούτου ὁ Θεὸς ἀπὸ τοῦ σπέρματος κατ' ἐπαγγελίαν ἤγαγε τῷ Ἰσραὴλ σωτῆρα Ἰησοῦν, 24 t προκηρύξαντος Ἰωάννου πρὸ προσώπου τῆς εἰσόδου αὐτοῦ βάπτισμα μετανοίας παντὶ τῷ λαῷ Ἰσραήλ. 25 u Ὡς δὲ ἐπλήρου ὁ Ἰωάννης τὸν δρόμον ἔλεγε, Τίνα με ὑπονοεῖτε εἶναι; οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐγώ· ἀλλ' ἰδοὺ, ἔρχεται μετ' ἐμὲ, οὗ οὐκ εἰμὶ ἄξιος τὸ ὑπόδημα τῶν ποδῶν λῦσαι. 26 x Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοὶ, υἱοὶ γένους Ἀβραὰμ, καὶ οἱ ἐν ὑμῖν φοβούμενοι τὸν Θεὸν, ὑμῖν ὁ λόγος τῆς σωτηρίας ταύτης ἐξαπεστάλη. 27 y Οἱ γὰρ κατοικοῦντες ἐν Ἰερουσαλὴμ, καὶ οἱ ἄρχοντες αὐτῶν, τοῦτον ἀγνοήσαντες καὶ τὰς φωνὰς τῶν προφητῶν τὰς κατὰ πᾶν σάββατον ἀναγινωσκομένας, κρίναντες ἐπλήρωσαν. 28 z Καὶ μηδεμίαν αἰτίαν θανάτου εὑρόντες ἠτήσαντο Πιλάτον ἀναιρεθῆναι αὐτόν. 29 a Ὡς δὲ ἐτέλεσαν πάντα τὰ περὶ αὐτοῦ γεγραμμένα, καθελόντες ἀπὸ τοῦ ξύλου ἔθηκαν εἰς μνημεῖον. 30 b Ὁ δὲ Θεὸς ἤγειρεν αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν· 31 c ὃς ὤφθη ἐπὶ ἡμέρας πλείους τοῖς συναναβᾶσιν αὐτῷ ἀπὸ τῆς Γαλιλαίας εἰς Ἰερουσαλὴμ· οἵτινες νῦν εἰσι μάρτυρες αὐτοῦ πρὸς τὸν λαόν. 32 d Καὶ ἡμεῖς νῦν ὑμᾶς εὐαγγελιζόμεθα τὴν πρὸς τοὺς q 1 Sam. 8. 5. & 9. 15. & 10. 1. Hos 13. 11. r 1 Sam. 13. 14. & 15. 28. & 16. 13. Ps. 89. 20. ch. 7. 45. s 2 Sam. 7. 12. Isa. 11. 1. Zech. 3. 9.

t Mal. 3. 1. Matt. 3. 1. Mark 1. 2. Luke 3. 3. John 3. 23.
u John 1. 20, 26, 27. Matt. 3. 11. Mark 1. 7. Luke 3. 16.
x Matt. 10. 6. ch. 3. 26, 46.
y John 16. 3. ch. 3. 17. & 15. 21. 1 Cor. 2. 8. 1 Tim 1. 13. z Matt. 27. 20—22. Mark 15. 11—13. Luke 23. 18, 21—23. John 19. 6. a Matt. 27. 59. Mark 15. 46. Luke 23. 53. John 19. 38.
b ch. 2. 24.
c Matt. 28. 2, 16. ch. 1. 3. 1 Cor 15. 5, 6. d Gen. 3. 15. & 22. 18. & 49. 10. Deut. 18. 15. Jer. 23. 5. Dan. 9. 24, 25. Gal. 3. 16.

Armenian, and Sahidic Versions, and by Chrys., and by D, which has not μετὰ ταῦτα.

This solves the question which has been the subject of much discussion in the comments upon this verse. The Latin Version explains it well thus, "quasi post quadringentos et quinquaginta annos," i. e. from the great epoch to which St. Paul had referred at the commencement of his speech, their reception into covenant with God, in Isaac, which was about (ὡς) 450 years before their entering into their inheritance in the promised land, i. e. from A.M. 2046, the birth of Isaac, to A.M. 2493, when the land began to be cultivated by the Israelites.

As Bengel well says, "Distributio terræ (Canaan) non est initium periodi quasi annorum ccccl, sed meta;" and he refers to John ii. 20 for the use of the dative, "quo innuitur, quantum annorum ab initio rei intercesserit, dum res ipsa eveniret."

It is therefore unreasonable to allege that this calculation is irreconcileable with that in 1 Kings vi. 1. That chronological period begins with the Exodus, this ends with the entrance into Canaan.

But it is worthy of remark that the interval between the birth of Isaac and the entrance into Canaan was equal in duration to the interval between the deliverance of Exodus and the building of the Temple; and nearly corresponded to the time from the rebuilding of Jerusalem, after the Captivity, to the Death of Christ.

The entrance into the Promised Land, and the building of the Temple, were earnests and figures of the entrance opened into Heaven, and of the building up of the Christian Church, by the Sacrifice of Christ on the Cross; and each of these three Events was preceded by some great national Mercy at a distance of about 450 years.

A few more words on the reading of this passage;

One of the characteristics of a modern school of Biblical Criticism, is its inordinate love of discovering discrepancies in Holy Scripture;

This is remarkably exemplified in some recent expositions of this passage;

The reading of the three principal Uncial MSS. removes the discrepancy (between this verse and 1 Kings vi. 1) which is found in the received text;

Yet, it must be observed with regret, that some Critics, who, on other occasions, disparage the received Text, and profess great respect for the authority of the Uncial MSS., here treat them with contempt, and affirm that the Uncial MSS. have been "corrupted, in order to solve the chronological difficulty."

Such an example as this, is, however, instructive. It serves to neutralize the evils arising from the supposed "discovery of discrepancies" in Scripture. It suggests the reflection, that those allegations are not made on solid grounds, but proceed from the impulses of an arbitrary caprice, which disparages History and Criticism, and loves to gratify a sceptical appetite by imaginary contradictions in Holy Writ.

21. Σαοὺλ—ἔτη τεσσαράκοντα] The Old Testament does not record the duration of Saul's reign. St. Paul's statement agrees with Josephus (Ant. vi. 14. 9), who says that Saul reigned eighteen years before Samuel's death, and twenty after it. As Biscoe observes (p. 616) "Saul's youngest son Ishbosheth was forty years old at the time of his father's death, and yet his father is said to be but a young man when he was first inaugurated by Samuel."

22. ᾧ καὶ εἶπε μ., Εὗρον—μου] a passage not found totidem verbis in any one place of the Old Testament; but composed in substance and mainly in letter of two or three texts (Chrys.), Ps. lxxxix. 21. 1 Sam. xiii. 14; xv. 28; xvi. 13.

"Solent Scriptores et Oratores Judaici, quos Paulus hic imitatur, haud raro recitare locum, qui totidem syllabis in V. T. non extat, sed ex pluribus locis compositus est;" (Rosenm.)

An excellent observation, which, if duly attended to, might have preserved the Sacred Text from many unjust aspersions of some later critics, and have saved them and others from the unhappy consequences of such allegations.

See above on Matt. ii. 23. Acts vii. 43.

23. ἤγαγε] So A, B, E, G, H, and many Cursives, for ἤγειρε. Cp. Zech. iii. 8, ἄγω τὸν δοῦλόν μου Ἀνατολήν. So Isa. xlviii. 15, ἐγὼ ἐκάλεσα, ἐγὼ ἤγαγον αὐτόν. Heb. i. 6, ὅταν εἰσαγάγῃ τὸν πρωτότοκον.

25. ἐπλήρου] was fulfilling; in the execution of his mission, as the πρόδρομος or forerunner of Christ.

29. ἔθηκαν εἰς μνημεῖον] Because the Jews delivered Christ to Pilate they are represented as the Authors of His Death and Burial, although they did not transact either the one or the other with their own hands.

As far as His Death and Burial were acts of enmity towards Him, they are accounted the agents, as Judas, who only gave occasion to the purchase of the Field of Blood, is called the purchaser of it. Acts i. 18. See note there.

The reason of this seems to be that Almighty God, Whose Word Holy Scripture is, traces human actions back through the indirect processes of intermediate agency, and lays the responsibility of them at the door of the original promoters.

On the other hand, as far as Christ's Death was a work of Love, it is ascribed to God and Christ (Matt. xx. 28. Rom. viii. 32. Gal. i. 4. 1 Tim. ii. 6); and God and Christ are blessed, for that work which caused the rejection of the Jews; just as Joseph of Arimathæa and Nicodemus are mentioned honorably in Scripture (John xix. 38) for performing the work of His Burial, which is here ascribed, not without censure, to the Jews.

Thus even the worst actions of man are overruled for good, and the enmity of Satan is made an occasion for the triumph of the love of God.

πατέρας ἐπαγγελίαν γενομένην, ὅτι ταύτην ὁ Θεὸς ἐκπεπλήρωκε τοῖς τέκνοις
e Ps. 2. 7. Heb. 1. 5. & 5. 5. αὐτῶν ἡμῶν ἀναστήσας Ἰησοῦν· 33 e ὡς καὶ ἐν τῷ ψαλμῷ γέγραπται τῷ δευτέρῳ, f Isa. 55. 3. Υἱός μου εἶ σύ, ἐγὼ σήμερον γεγέννηκά σε. 34 f Ὅτι δὲ ἀνέστησεν αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν, μηκέτι μέλλοντα ὑποστρέφειν εἰς διαφθοράν, οὕτως εἴρηκεν, g Ps. 16. 10. ch. 2. 27, &c. Ὅτι δώσω ὑμῖν τὰ ὅσια Δαυὶδ τὰ πιστά. 35 g Διὸ καὶ ἐν ἑτέρῳ λέγει, h 1 Kings 2. 10. ch. 2. 29. Οὐ δώσεις τὸν Ὅσιόν σου ἰδεῖν διαφθοράν. 36 h Δαυὶδ μὲν γὰρ ἰδίᾳ γενεᾷ ὑπηρετήσας, τῇ τοῦ Θεοῦ βουλῇ ἐκοιμήθη, καὶ προσετέθη πρὸς τοὺς πατέρας αὐτοῦ, καὶ εἶδε διαφθοράν· 37 ὃν δὲ ὁ Θεὸς ἤγειρεν, οὐκ εἶδε διαφθοράν.
i Jer. 31. 34. Luke 24. 47. 1 John 2. 12. Rom. 3. 24, 28. & 8. 3. Gal. 2. 16. Heb. 7. 19. & 9. 15. 38 i Γνωστὸν οὖν ἔστω ὑμῖν, ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί, ὅτι διὰ τούτου ὑμῖν ἄφεσις ἁμαρτιῶν καταγγέλλεται· 39 k καὶ ἀπὸ πάντων, ὧν οὐκ ἠδυνήθητε ἐν τῷ νόμῳ k Rom. 8. 3. & 10. 4. Μωϋσέως δικαιωθῆναι, ἐν τούτῳ πᾶς ὁ πιστεύων δικαιοῦται. 40 Βλέπετε οὖν, l Hab. 1. 5. Isa. 28. 14. μὴ ἐπέλθῃ ἐφ' ὑμᾶς τὸ εἰρημένον ἐν τοῖς προφήταις, 41 l Ἴδετε, οἱ κατα-φρονηταί, καὶ θαυμάσατε, καὶ ἀφανίσθητε· ὅτι ἔργον ἐργάζομαι ἐγὼ ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ὑμῶν, ἔργον ὃ οὐ μὴ πιστεύσητε, ἐάν τις ἐκδιηγῆται ὑμῖν.

42 Ἐξιόντων δὲ αὐτῶν παρεκάλουν εἰς τὸ μεταξὺ σάββατον λαληθῆναι αὐτοῖς m Matt. 23. 15. ch. 11. 23. & 14. 22. τὰ ῥήματα ταῦτα. 43 m Λυθείσης δὲ τῆς συναγωγῆς, ἠκολούθησαν πολλοὶ τῶν Ἰουδαίων καὶ τῶν σεβομένων προσηλύτων τῷ Παύλῳ καὶ τῷ Βαρνάβᾳ· οἵτινες προσλαλοῦντες αὐτοῖς, ἔπειθον αὐτοὺς προσμένειν τῇ χάριτι τοῦ Θεοῦ. 44 Τῷ δὲ ἐχομένῳ σαββάτῳ σχεδὸν πᾶσα ἡ πόλις συνήχθη ἀκοῦσαι τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ. 45 Ἰδόντες δὲ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι τοὺς ὄχλους ἐπλήσθησαν ζήλου, καὶ ἀντέλεγον τοῖς ὑπὸ τοῦ Παύλου λεγομένοις, ἀντιλέγοντες καὶ βλασφημοῦντες.

---

32. ἡμῶν] Elz. ἡμῖν, which appears to have little MS. authority: ἡμῶν is in A, B, C*, D, and is supported by Vulg. and other Versions. The sense is—He has fulfilled them to the children of ourselves; and much more to us; to us and our posterity. Cp. ii. 39.

33. ψαλμῷ τῷ δευτέρῳ] Psalm ii. 7. Some, with Cod. D., Origen, and Hilary, read τῷ πρώτῳ. What is now the Second Psalm, originally formed one with the First, or rather the First Psalm was the Procemium to the Psalter. See Michaelis and Rosenmüller here.

— υἱός μου εἶ—σήμερον γεγέννηκά σε] This contains two distinct sayings—

(1) Thou art my Son from Eternity (Chrys., Cyril). And

(2) To-day, i. e. now (in time) I have begotten Thee. "Eternitas nunquam vocabulo hodie significatur" (Bengel.). I have begotten Thee to-day, in a double respect,

(1) At thy Incarnation; (See an excellent Scholium of S. Cyril in Caten. p. 224.)

(2) At thy Resurrection from the dead; on which St. Paul here specially dwells; and to which the Psalmist specially refers, as appears from the fact that the Mediatorial Kingdom of Christ, which he is there describing, is consequent on, and due to, Christ's obedience and sufferings, and Resurrection from the dead (see above on Matt. xxviii. 18). And it was true in an emphatic sense that, at the Resurrection, God said σήμερον γεγέννηκά σε, for Christ is πρωτότοκος τῶν νεκρῶν (Col. i. 18. Rev. i. 5). See above, Acts ii. 24. "The Resurrection of Jesus was the Dawn of the new world, the Morning of the New Creation." (Lightfoot.)

34. τὰ ὅσια Δαυὶδ] חַסְדֵי דָוִיד, i. e. the mercies conferred on David, which were πιστὰ, surely pledged to him by God.

35. οὐ δώσεις—διαφθοράν] It would seem that St. Paul had heard or received an account of St. Peter's Speech on the Day of Pentecost. (See above on ii. 25—31.)

36. ἰδίᾳ γενεᾷ ὑπηρετήσας] David ministered on earth to his own Generation, and died; but Christ ministers to all generations. He died and rose again, and liveth for evermore, in order that all generations may live for ever; and He ministers in heaven, being "a Priest for ever" (Psalm cx. 4), seeing "He ever liveth to make intercession for us" (Heb. vii. 25).

δικαιοῦν is the word used by the LXX for the Hebrew הִצְדִּיק, 'justificavit, crimine absolvit; pœnis immunem pronuntiavit; adeòque צֶדֶק justum in foro divinæ æquitatis et judicio declaravit.' See on Luke vii. 29; xviii. 14. Rom. i. 17. Cp. Gen. xxxviii. 26; xliv. 16. Exod. xxiii. 7. Deut. xxv. 1. Ps. lxxxii. 3; cxliii. 2. Isa. v. 23. Jer. iii. 11. Ezek. xvi. 51. 52.

Here in this first Sermon which St. Paul is recorded to have preached in a Jewish Synagogue, we have the germ of his two Epistles to the Galatians and Romans—an internal evidence of genuineness and veracity.

It is observable also that St. Paul's address appears to be formed on the same model as St. Stephen's—another proof of its influence on him, and of the truth of the history.

See above, chap. vii. 58.

40. προφήταις] Habak. i. 5. On this use of the plural, see vii. 42, and Glass. Phil. pp. 286. 886.

41. ἴδετε, οἱ καταφρονηταί] Hab. i. 5, where the Hebrew original is רְאוּ בַגּוֹיִם, which is usually rendered look and see in or among the nations.

But it is probable that בֹּגְדִים is a radical word (see Pococke, in Not. Miscell. in Porta Mosis, p. 29), signifying unjust or insolent. Hence the Version of the LXX, καταφρονηταί, which is confirmed by the Syriac (see Rosenmüller). It is not very likely, and ought not to be taken for granted, that so common a word as בֹּגְדִים has been mistaken by the transcriber.

— ὃ οὐ μὴ π.] So A, B, C, D, E, G. Elz. has ᾧ. The sense is not that they would not believe in the work (τῷ ἔργῳ), but they would not believe in Him who wrought it.

42. αὐτῶν] Elz. adds ἐκ τῆς συναγωγῆς τῶν Ἰουδαίων, which is not found in the best MSS,—A, B, C, D, E,—and is a gloss.

— παρεκάλουν] Elz. adds τὰ ἔθνη, which is also a gloss; and is not found in A, B, C, D, E.

This is important. The ἔθνη were not attendants at the synagogue, and it is not till v. 46, after two offers of the Gospel to the Jews, that the Apostle turns to the Gentiles.

— τὸ μεταξὺ σ.] The following Sabbath—τὸ ἐσόμενον—(Theophyl.), not (as some) the intervening week. Paul showed his wisdom and charity toward the Jews by preaching on their Sabbath. Ammonius also here interprets τὸ μεταξὺ by τὸ ἐσόμενον. Cp. v. 44, and μεταξὺ is thus used for the "following" by Josephus, B. J. v. 4. 2; c. Apion. i. 21.

43. ἔπειθον προσμένειν] See xi. 23; xiv. 22. Elz. has ἐπιμένειν, but A, B, C, D, E have προσμένειν.

44. ἐχομένῳ] So A, C*, E*. Cp. Mark i. 38, τὰς ἐχομένας κωμοπόλεις. Luke xiii. 33, τῇ ἐχομένῃ. Elz. has ἐρχομένῳ, but Ἐρχόμενος seems to be more applicable to what is still future, or is expected to come, and not past. See xviii. 21, τὴν ἑορτὴν τὴν ἐρχομένην. Yet Josephus has, Ant. vi. 11. 9, τῇ ἐρχομένῃ, for the next day. (Grinfield.)

46 n Παῤῥησιασάμενοι δὲ ὁ Παῦλος καὶ ὁ Βαρνάβας εἶπον, Ὑμῖν ἦν ἀναγκαῖον πρῶτον λαληθῆναι τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ· ἐπειδὴ δὲ ἀπωθεῖσθε αὐτὸν, καὶ οὐκ ἀξίους κρίνετε ἑαυτοὺς τῆς αἰωνίου ζωῆς, ἰδοὺ στρεφόμεθα εἰς τὰ ἔθνη· 47 o οὕτως γὰρ ἐντέταλται ἡμῖν ὁ Κύριος, Τέθεικά σε εἰς φῶς ἐθνῶν, τοῦ εἶναί σε εἰς σωτηρίαν ἕως ἐσχάτου τῆς γῆς· 48 ἀκούοντα δὲ τὰ ἔθνη ἔχαιρον, καὶ ἐδόξαζον τὸν λόγον τοῦ Κυρίου· καὶ ἐπίστευσαν ὅσοι ἦσαν τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον· 49 διεφέρετο δὲ ὁ λόγος τοῦ Κυρίου δι' ὅλης τῆς χώρας· 50 p οἱ δὲ Ἰουδαῖοι παρώτρυναν τὰς σεβομένας γυναῖκας τὰς εὐσχήμονας, καὶ τοὺς πρώτους τῆς πόλεως, καὶ ἐπήγειραν διωγμὸν ἐπὶ τὸν Παῦλον καὶ τὸν Βαρνάβαν, καὶ ἐξέβαλον αὐτοὺς ἀπὸ τῶν ὁρίων αὐτῶν. 51 q Οἱ δὲ ἐκτιναξάμενοι τὸν κονιορτὸν τῶν ποδῶν αὐτῶν ἐπ' αὐτοὺς, ἦλθον εἰς Ἰκόνιον. 52 Οἱ δὲ μαθηταὶ ἐπληροῦντο χαρᾶς καὶ Πνεύματος ἁγίου.

n Matt. 10. 6. ch. 1. 8. & 3. 26. & 13. 26. & 18. 6. & 28. 28.
o Isa. 49. 6. & 42. 6. Luke 2. 32.
p 2 Tim. 3. 11.
q Matt. 10. 14. Mark 6. 11. Luke 9. 5. ch. 14. 6, 11. & 18. 6.

XIV. 1 Ἐγένετο δὲ ἐν Ἰκονίῳ, κατὰ τὸ αὐτὸ εἰσελθεῖν αὐτοὺς εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν τῶν Ἰουδαίων, καὶ λαλῆσαι οὕτως ὥστε πιστεῦσαι Ἰουδαίων τε καὶ Ἑλλήνων πολὺ πλῆθος. 2 Οἱ δὲ ἀπειθοῦντες Ἰουδαῖοι ἐπήγειραν καὶ ἐκάκωσαν τὰς ψυχὰς τῶν ἐθνῶν κατὰ τῶν ἀδελφῶν· 3 a ἱκανὸν μὲν οὖν χρόνον διέτριψαν παῤῥησιαζόμενοι ἐπὶ τῷ Κυρίῳ τῷ μαρτυροῦντι τῷ λόγῳ τῆς χάριτος αὐτοῦ, διδόντι σημεῖα καὶ τέρατα γίνεσθαι διὰ τῶν χειρῶν αὐτῶν. 4 Ἐσχίσθη δὲ τὸ πλῆθος τῆς πόλεως· καὶ οἱ μὲν ἦσαν σὺν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, οἱ δὲ σὺν τοῖς ἀποστόλοις. 5 b Ὡς δὲ ἐγένετο ὁρμὴ τῶν ἐθνῶν τε καὶ Ἰουδαίων, σὺν τοῖς ἄρχουσιν αὐτῶν, ὑβρίσαι καὶ λιθοβολῆσαι αὐτοὺς, 6 c συνιδόντες κατέφυγον εἰς τὰς πόλεις τῆς Λυκαονίας, Λύστραν καὶ Δέρβην, καὶ τὴν περίχωρον, 7 κἀκεῖ ἦσαν εὐαγγελιζόμενοι.

a Mark 16. 20. ch. 19. 11. Heb. 2. 4. b 2 Tim. 3. 11.
c Matt. 10. 23. ch. 8. 1.

8 d Καί τις ἀνὴρ ἐν Λύστροις ἀδύνατος τοῖς ποσὶν ἐκάθητο, χωλὸς ἐκ κοιλίας μητρὸς αὐτοῦ, ὃς οὐδέποτε περιπεπατήκει. 9 Οὗτος ἤκουε τοῦ Παύλου λα-d ch. 3. 2.

---

48. ἐπίστευσαν ὅσοι ἦσαν τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον] Rendered in the Authorized Version, "as many as were ordained to eternal life believed;"

The emphatic word here is ἐπίστευσαν, which in this as in numerous other places of the Acts, and the other books of the N. T. means, "they made a public profession of faith;" they joined the number of the πιστοὶ or πιστεύοντες, that is, "nomina dederunt Christo, et aggregati sunt Ecclesiæ." See what follows immediately here, ch. xiv. 1, ἐγένετο αὐτοὺς λαλῆσαι ὥστε πιστεῦσαι πολὺ πλῆθος, who are there distinguished from οἱ ἀπειθοῦντες Ἰουδαῖοι. Cp. ii. 44; iv. 4, and specially viii. 13; xi. 21, πολὺς ἀριθμὸς πιστεύσας: xv. 7, πιστεῦσαι: xvii. 12; xviii. 8; xxi. 20. 25, τῶν πεπιστευκότων ἐνθῶν, and Rom. xiii. 11, ὅτε ἐπιστεύσαμεν, when we made a public profession of our faith, and were engrafted into the Church. See also Titus iii. 8, where οἱ πεπιστευκότες τῷ Θεῷ means those who have made public profession of Christianity;

The Jews had rejected the offers of the Gospel made by St. Paul, see vv. 45, 46; they thrust the word away from themselves, ἀπωθοῦντο τὸν λόγον. They, on their side, were unruly and obstinate; they were ἀποτεταγμένοι τῇ ζωῇ. Cp. Luke xiv. 18;

But, on the other hand, "the Gentiles rejoiced, and glorified the word of the Lord;" they obeyed St. Paul's preaching, and, like good soldiers of God, set and marshalled themselves in order to march onward, in the way that leadeth to eternal life, ἦσαν τεταγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον (see Mede's Works, p. 21, Book i. Disc. 3). Cp. 1 Cor. xvi. 15, εἰς διακονίαν τοῖς ἁγίοις ἔταξεν ἑαυτούς. The perfect passive is used in this sense by St. Luke, Acts xx. 13, οὕτω γὰρ ἦν διατεταγμένος, he had so ordered himself. Cp. the use of τεταγμένος in many passages of Philo, as quoted by Whitby here, p. 169.

So προσκέκλημαι, Acts xiii. 2. ἐντέταλται xiii. 47, ἐπικέκλησαι xxv. 12, συντέθειντο John ix. 22, ἐπήγγελται Rom. iv. 21, and δεδωρημένης 2 Pet. i. 3. Cp. Winer, Gr. Gr. § 39, p. 234.

As many as had done this, ἐπίστευσαν; that is, they boldly and nobly, and in spite of the rage and blasphemy of the Jews (v. 45), and the persecution which they stirred up against Paul and Barnabas, whom they expelled out of their coasts (v. 50), made public profession of their faith, and were received by baptism into the Church. This Exposition is confirmed by the authority of ancient Greek Writers. See Caten. p. 230, where τεταγμένοι is explained by εἰς τοῦτο τὸ τάγμα ἐλθόντες.

The word ἐπίστευσαν brings out clearly the doctrine that it is requisite for all—who would set themselves in the way to eternal life—not only to believe, but also to profess openly, the true faith, in the public communion of the Visible Church; and that this is the only way to life eternal. See Matt. x. 32. Rom. x. 10.

The Vulgate has "quotquot erant præordinati" here, whence the English Version "as many as were ordained." In like manner in the cognate text, ii. 47, τοὺς σωζομένους, the Vulgate has "qui salvi fierent," whence the English Version, "such as should be saved;"

It would be interesting to enquire, What influence these renderings in the Vulgate Version had on the minds of some, like St. Augustine and his followers in the Western Church, in treating the great question of Free-Will, Election, Reprobation, and Final Perseverance?

What was the result of that influence on the minds of some writers of the Reformed Churches, who rejected the authority which received and almost canonized that Version, and yet in these two important texts (Acts ii. 47; xiii. 48) were swayed away by it from the sense of the Original?

The tendency of the Eastern Fathers, who read the original Greek, was in a different direction from that of the Western School; and Calvinism can receive no support from these two texts as they stand in the original words of Inspiration, and as they were expounded by the primitive Church.

50. τὰς σεβομένας] the Proselytes; see above, on v. 16.

— γ. τὰς εὐσχήμονας] those of rank. The Proselytes (αἱ σεβόμεναι), as recent converts, might be expected to be more zealous for their religion, and those of rank (αἱ εὐσχήμονες), would exercise their influence, perhaps with heathen husbands, and others who were οἱ πρῶτοι τῆς πόλεως, against the Apostles. Cp. Meyer.

51. Ἰκόνιον] about ninety miles S.E. of Antioch, in Pisidia; and forty N.W. of Derbe. Cp. Howson, i. 220.

52. οἱ δὲ μαθηταί] Another joyful peroration; like a calm after a storm. See viii. 4; ix. 31; xii. 24.

CH. XIV. 1. Ἑλλήνων] Proselytes of the gate. (Meyer.) See above, on xi. 20.

4. τοῖς ἀποστόλοις] See above, on xiii. 2.

5. λιθοβολῆσαι] As blasphemers of the Law. See v. 19.

8. αὐτοῦ] Elz. adds ὑπάρχων, which is not in the best MSS.

— περιπεπατήκει] On this form, for περιεπατήκει, see Valck

e Isa. 35. 6. λοῦντος· 10 ὃς ἀτενίσας αὐτῷ, καὶ ἰδὼν ὅτι πίστιν ἔχει τοῦ σωθῆναι, e εἶπε μεγάλῃ τῇ φωνῇ, Ἀνάστηθι ἐπὶ τοὺς πόδας σου ὀρθός· καὶ ἥλατο καὶ περιf ch. 28. 6. επάτει. 11 f Οἱ δὲ ὄχλοι ἰδόντες ὃ ἐποίησε Παῦλος ἐπῆραν τὴν φωνὴν αὐτῶν Λυκαονιστὶ λέγοντες, Οἱ θεοὶ ὁμοιωθέντες ἀνθρώποις κατέβησαν πρὸς ἡμᾶς· 12 ἐκάλουν τε τὸν μὲν Βαρνάβαν Δία, τὸν δὲ Παῦλον Ἑρμῆν, ἐπειδὴ αὐτὸς ἦν ὁ ἡγούμενος τοῦ λόγου. 13 Ὁ δὲ ἱερεὺς τοῦ Διὸς, τοῦ ὄντος πρὸ τῆς πόλεως, here, who cites v. 23, πεπιστεύκεισαν, and Mark xv. 7. 10. See also Winer, § 12, p. 67, who refers to Luke vi. 48, τεθεμελίωτο.

9. ἤκουε] was listening. St. Paul, on his part, discerns his spirit, and rewards his faith.

10. ἥλατο] So A, B, C (for Elz. ἤλλετο), he sprang up, and περιεπάτει, i. e. began to walk. Mark the difference between the aorist and imperfect. (Meyer.)

11. Λυκαονιστί] An Assyrian dialect. (Jablonsky, "de linguâ Lycaoniâ.")

It has been argued by some, that St. Paul could not have understood this language, or he would have made his remonstrance to the people on hearing these words, and before the priest brought out the victims to sacrifice. And thence it has been inferred, that St. Paul did not possess the power of speaking in the tongues of foreign nations, to whom he was sent. The words of Chrysostom on this passage have been cited in support of this assertion. S. Chrys. is answering the question why the Apostles did not interfere before, to check the adoration of the Lycaonians; and he says, οὐκ ἦν οὐδέπω δῆλον· τῇ γὰρ οἰκείᾳ φωνῇ ἐφθέγγοντο· διὰ τοῦτο οὐδὲν αὐτοῖς ἔλεγον, ἐπειδὴ δὲ εἶδον τὰ στέμματα τότε ἐξελθόντες κ.τ.λ., i. e. the design of the populace was not yet manifest, for they were speaking in their own tongue, and therefore the Apostles said nothing to them; but when they saw the garlands, then they went forth and expostulated with them. It may be that the gift of understanding and speaking foreign languages was not always present with the Apostles; it may have been, and probably was, modified according to various circumstances of time and place. But it is certain, that in Chrysostom's opinion St. Paul was able to understand and speak in various foreign languages, which he had never learnt; as may be seen in that Father's Thirty-fifth Homily on the First Epistle to the Corinthians, ch. xiv. (Chrys., Opera, tom. x. pp. 320—327,) where he speaks of the gift as bestowed for the preaching of the Gospel to foreign nations, τίνος ἕνεκεν ἔλαβον αὐτὸ (τὸ τῶν γλωσσῶν χάρισμα) οἱ ἀπόστολοι; ἐπειδὴ πανταχοῦ διέρχεσθαι ἔμελλον. See also his words above, Acts ii. 4. And it is observable, that in that Homily (p. 327) Chrysostom refers to St. Paul's conduct here at Lystra, without any intimation that it suggested any qualification of his statement, and of that of the Apostle himself in that chapter, v. 18, "I speak with tongues (i. e. as Chrys. interprets it, in foreign languages) more than you all."

It seems most probable that St. Paul understood what the Lycaonians said;

St. Luke understood the speech of these Lycaonians; for he tells us what the words were, and their meaning. And if St. Luke understood it, why not also St. Paul? Beside, in v. 14 it is not said ἰδόντες, but ἀκούσαντες. The ὄχλοι spoke in their own Lycaonian tongue, and it is not probable that they, the ὄχλοι, knew any other. And St. Paul addressed the ὄχλος (see v. 14); he therefore understood the Lycaonian tongue. The same Divine Power which gave effect to his words, "Stand upright on thy feet" (v. 10), enabled him to speak them in the tongue understood by him to whom he spoke, and who "listened to his words" (v. 9); and if understood by him, they were understood by the crowd also, who therefore were ready to deify the speaker.

St. Paul had good reason to wait till the Priest brought forth his victims, and would have done sacrifice; because he had thus a more visible and palpable argument for his subsequent appeal in v. 15, where he says, "We preach to you to turn from these vanities to the living God." Every one must feel how much the presence of the oxen and the garlands, and the priest and his apparatus for sacrifice on the altar in front of the Temple, add to the beauty of Raffaelle's Cartoon, and to the force of the Apostle's eloquence.

It has indeed been said by many in recent times, that the power of speaking in various foreign languages was not possessed by the Apostles, and therefore could not have been exercised by them in preaching the Gospel; and that there is no trace of such exercise of it in the Acts of the Apostles.

Surely there is such a trace in the narrative before us, and another similar trace in ch. xxviii. 4. But perhaps the most striking evidence of their power of speaking foreign languages is to be found in the silence of St. Luke as to any thing like previous study or preparation on the part of St. Paul or any of the Apostles before they set out on their missionary journeys.

In the history of modern Missions, we see learned and accomplished men sent forth to preach the Gospel in foreign parts, and spending years in acquiring the languages of the countries to which they are sent. For example, a Bishop of New Zealand employs his six months' voyage to his diocese, in learning the dialects of the Pacific, or in teaching them to others.

But what do we hear like this in the Acts of the Apostles? We never see the Apostles sitting down to learn a foreign language; and yet they have a Divine commission to go and preach the Gospel to all nations. We see unlearned and ignorant Galilæans standing up at once and addressing vast crowds and large cities with Divine eloquence, and vast multitudes are converted by them.

We see St. Paul sent forth from Antioch as an Apostle to the Gentiles, and soon we hear him speak to the native tribes of Pisidia, Lycaonia, and Malta, and find him travelling to Illyricum and meditating a journey to Spain. We hear him say that he is a "debtor to Greeks and Barbarians,"—that is, to all (Rom. i. 14),—to preach to all; but we never see him pause to learn any foreign language, or impeded in his course by the want of it.

On this subject see further above, ii. 4, and xiii. 15, and below, xxviii. 2—4.

St. Luke did not state that they possessed and exercised the gift, because the fact is clear from his narrative. St. Jerome well says (ad Hedib. vol. iv. p. 178), "Acceperunt Apostoli donationum genera, et quod magis necessarium erat, diversitatem linguarum omnium gentium, ut annuntiaturi Christum nullo indigerent interprete." He then refers to the speaking of St. Paul in the Lycaonian tongue, as described in this chapter.

The teaching of the Church of England on this subject is clear from her Proper Preface for Whit-Sunday. See above on ii. 4.

— οἱ θεοὶ ὁμοιωθέντες] See Homer, Odyss. xvii. 484. Hesiod, Opp. and D. 247. Catull. lxv. 384.

Jupiter is often associated with Mercurius in mythological accounts of divine apparitions. See Plautus, Amphitr. i. 1. 1:

> "In faciem versus Amphitryonis Jupiter, > Dum bellum gereret cum Telebois hostibus,
> Alcmenam uxorem cepit usurariam;
> Mercurius formam Sosiæ servi gerit > Absentis."

Ovid, Met. viii. 626:

> "Jupiter huc, specie mortali, cumque Parente > Venit Atlantiades positis caducifer alis."

Fastt. v. 495:

> "Jupiter et lato qui regnat in æquore frater > Carpebant socias Mercuriusque vias."

The scene of the tale in which Jupiter is represented as coming down with Mercurius to visit the abodes of men, and as entertained by Baucis and Philemon, and which is so well told by Ovid, Metamorphoses viii. 625—724, and so happily versified by Dryden, Works, iii. pp. 396—399, is laid in a country of which Lycaonia was a district:

> "Here Jove with Hermes came, but in disguise
> Of mortal men concealed their deities."

12. Βαρνάβαν Δία, τὸν δὲ Παῦλον Ἑρμῆν] Barnabas was compared to Jupiter from the grave dignity of his appearance (Chrys.), particularly as compared with St. Paul, who, perhaps, was younger than Barnabas, and his stature and bodily presence less majestic (see 2 Cor. x. 1; xii. 3—9. 1 Cor. ii. 3. Nicephor. H. E. ii. 37); though, as Meyer well observes, the comparison of St. Paul to Mercury, who is always represented as "florens agilisque juventâ," would seem to contradict the apocryphal portraiture of the Apostle derived from the Acts of Paul and Thecla, according to which he was μικρὸς τῷ μεγέθει, ψιλὸς τὴν κεφαλὴν, ἀγκύλος ταῖς κνήμαις.

— ἐπειδὴ—λόγου] See Misterlitch and others on Horat. Od. i. 10. 1, "Mercuri facunde," &c.—"te Deorum Nuntium." On ταύρους καὶ στέμματα ἐπὶ τοὺς πυλῶνας ἐνέγκας, σὺν τοῖς ὄχλοις ἤθελε θύειν. 14 g Ἀκούσαντες δὲ οἱ ἀπόστολοι Βαρνάβας καὶ Παῦλος, διαῤῥήξαντες τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτῶν ἐξεπήδησαν εἰς τὸν ὄχλον, κράζοντες 15 h καὶ λέγοντες, Ἄνδρες, τί ταῦτα ποιεῖτε; καὶ ἡμεῖς ὁμοιοπαθεῖς ἐσμεν ὑμῖν ἄνθρωποι, εὐαγγελιζόμενοι ὑμᾶς ἀπὸ τούτων τῶν ματαίων ἐπιστρέφειν ἐπὶ Θεὸν ζῶντα, ὃς ἐποίησε τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ τὴν γῆν καὶ τὴν θάλασσαν, καὶ πάντα τὰ ἐν αὐτοῖς· 16 i ὃς ἐν ταῖς παῤῥωχημέναις γενεαῖς εἴασε πάντα τὰ ἔθνη πορεύεσθαι ταῖς ὁδοῖς αὐτῶν· 17 k καίτοι γε οὐκ ἀμάρτυρον ἑαυτὸν ἀφῆκεν ἀγαθουργῶν, οὐρανόθεν ὑμῖν ὑετοὺς διδοὺς καὶ καιροὺς καρποφόρους, ἐμπιπλῶν τροφῆς καὶ εὐφροσύνης τὰς καρδίας ὑμῶν. 18 Καὶ ταῦτα λέγοντες μόλις κατέπαυσαν τοὺς ὄχλους τοῦ μὴ θύειν αὐτοῖς.

19 l Ἐπῆλθον δὲ ἀπὸ Ἀντιοχείας καὶ Ἰκονίου Ἰουδαῖοι, καὶ πείσαντες τοὺς ὄχλους, καὶ λιθάσαντες τὸν Παῦλον, ἔσυρον ἔξω τῆς πόλεως, νομίσαντες αὐτὸν τεθνάναι. 20 Κυκλωσάντων δὲ αὐτὸν τῶν μαθητῶν, ἀναστὰς εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὴν πόλιν· καὶ τῇ ἐπαύριον ἐξῆλθε σὺν τῷ Βαρνάβᾳ εἰς Δέρβην. 21 Εὐαγγελισάμενοί τε τὴν πόλιν ἐκείνην, καὶ μαθητεύσαντες ἱκανοὺς, ὑπέστρεψαν εἰς τὴν Λύστραν καὶ Ἰκόνιον καὶ Ἀντιόχειαν, 22 m ἐπιστηρίζοντες τὰς ψυχὰς τῶν μαθητῶν, παρακαλοῦντες ἐμμένειν τῇ πίστει, καὶ ὅτι διὰ πολλῶν θλίψεων δεῖ ἡμᾶς εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ. 23 n Χειροτονήσαντες δὲ αὐτοῖς

g Matt. 26. 65.
h ch. 10. 26. Gen. 1. 1. Ps. 33. 6. & 124. 8. & 146. 6. Rev. 14. 7.
i Ps. 81. 12. ch. 17. 30.
k Rom. 1. 20.
l 2 Cor. 11. 25. 2 Tim. 3. 11. m ch. 11. 23. & 13. 43. Matt. 10. 38. & 16. 24. Luke 22. 28, 29. & 24. 26. 2 Tim. 3. 12. Rom. 8. 17. n ch. 1. 26. & 11. 30. Tit. 1. 5.

Ἑρμῆς connected with sermo and ἑρμηνεύω, see Aug. Civ. D. vii. 14, "De Mercurii officio."

13. στέμματα] For the horns of the ταῦροι to be sacrificed, and for the Altars and Ministers. Virg. Georg. iii. 487,—

"Sæpe in honore deûm medio stans hostia ad aram, Lanea dum niveâ circumdatur infula vittâ," &c.

See also Statius, Thebaid. iv. 114—7,—

"Tum fera cæruleis intexit cornua sertis."

Ovid, Met. xv. 130,—

"Victima labe carens, vittis præsignis et auro Sistitur ante aras."

Tertullian, de Coronâ Mil. 10, "Ipsæ hostiæ, et aræ, ipsi ministri et sacerdotes coronantur."

— τοὺς πυλῶνας] The large gates,—probably valvæ, folding-doors,—of the court-yard (atrium) of the house in which Paul and Barnabas were.

It seems that after Paul had wrought the miracle on the lame man, he retired from the public admiration of the crowd into a house, as our Lord often did when He had wrought miracles. Hence the words ἀκούσαντες (not ἰδόντες) and ἐξεπήδησαν in v. 14.

14. ἀκούσαντες] See Athanas. ad Gentes 35, p. 27. This is the first point of contact of Christianity with Idolatry, in Holy Scripture. And St. Paul's speech is the first Christian "Apologia ad Gentes," and is the groundwork and model of all succeeding ones in the writings of Justin, Theophilus, Tertullian, Minucius, Arnobius, Clemens Alexandrinus, and other Christian Apologists.

16. παῤῥωχημέναις] this form as well as παῤῥωχηκότα, is used by S. Hippolytus, Philosophumen. p. 337, and de Antichristo, § 2.

17. ἀγαθουργῶν] conferring benefits. So A, B, C.—Eliz. has ἀγαθοποιῶν. The former reading seems preferable, as bringing out more clearly the truth, that God was not only Maker of what is good, but was also their εὐεργέτης or Benefactor.

— ἡμῖν—ἡμῶν] Some Editors read ὑμῖν and ὑμῶν, from D, E, G, and a few cursives. But it seems to be more in St. Paul's manner to conciliate his hearers by identifying himself with them. The blessings of Providence extend to all mankind; and the Apostle, as one of the universal family, was a partaker in them, and is thankful for them. In his comprehensive largeness of heart he owns every one as a brother. His feeling is,

"Homo sum, humani nihil a me alienum puto."

— ὑετοὺς—καιροὺς] Therefore the Elements and Seasons are like God's Apostles and Evangelists in the natural world, always preaching His love, wisdom, and power. And so οὐκ ἀμάρτυρον ἑαυτὸν ἀφῆκεν. Cp. Acts xxvii. 27, and they who fell away to Idolatry, or to Atheism, are without excuse. Rom. i. 20.

19. λιθάσαντες τὸν Παῦλον] a punishment for the part he took in the stoning of Stephen, vii. 58; viii. 1. (Woltzog.)

20. ἀναστάς] after being stoned. 2 Cor. xi. 25, ἅπαξ ἐλιθάσθην, and cp. 2 Tim. iii. 11, one of the most marvellous of all his deliverances; after being stoned by his enemies, and dragged by them out of the city, and left for dead, he arises, and on the morrow goes forth to Derbe—perhaps on foot—a journey of some hours.

There must have been something strange and perplexing to his converts, that a person endued with such marvellous powers in action, as St. Paul had just shown at Lystra, should be subject to such severe suffering. His afflictions, combined with his miracles, might disappoint and stagger them. How natural and needful therefore was it, that soon after these wonderful events he should preach on the topic mentioned in v. 22, that "through much tribulation we must enter into the kingdom of God!"

23. χειροτονήσαντες—πρεσβυτέρους] Cp. 2 Tim. i. 6. "Paul and Barnabas had the episcopal dignity, and therefore ordained not only deacons, but priests." (Ammonius, in Caten. p. 240.)

But it has been questioned whether the word χειροτονία (as well as χειροθεσία) signified Ordination in the Apostolic age.

Its primary signification is election (properly by show of hands), and in this sense the verb χειροτονέω seems to be used in 2 Cor. viii. 19; and it is not used in any other passages except that and the present, in the N. T.

But the word προχειροτονεῖν is used in Acts x. 41, and is applied to God Himself, and (as Valck. observes, p. 474) means to pre-ordain, or appoint by choice.

The substantive χειροτονία never occurs in the New Test. The passages where χειροτονεῖν occurs in the Apostolic Fathers, do not throw much light on the question. See Ignat. Phil. 10, χειροτονῆσαι θεοπρεσβύτην, Polyc. 7. They appear to suppose election on the part of the people; whether they do not also suppose ordination by laying on of hands is not certain. To quote the words of Bingham, IV. vi. § 11, "The Greeks call the imposition of hands both χειροτονία and χειροθεσία, as may be seen in Canons of the Council of Nice (c. 19) and Chalcedon (c. 15).

"Yet sometimes these words are distinguished, as by the author of the Constitutions, where he says, πρεσβύτερος χειροθετεῖ, οὐ χειροτονεῖ, a presbyter gives imposition of hands, but does not ordain. . . . . Neither does χειροτονία always signify Ordination in ancient writers, though it does most commonly so, as Fronto Ducæus (in Chrysost. hom. 1, ad pop. Antioch. p. 1), and other learned persons have showed."

The following are the arguments in favour of assigning the sense of Ordination to χειροτονήσαντες—not however as necessarily here implying the laying on of hands.

(1) That the nominative case agreeing with that participle is Paul and Barnabas.

(2) That Ordination was performed by Paul (see 2 Tim. i. 6), and was to be performed by Timothy, the Bishop of Ephesus (see 1 Tim. v. 22).

(3) That χειροτονήσαντες was generally understood in this sense by Ancient Authors, cp. S. Jerome in Isa. lviii. Theodoret H. E. i. 9. S. Jerome, l. c. says, "Plerique nostrorum χειρο- κατ' ἐκκλησίαν πρεσβυτέρους, προσευξάμενοι μετὰ νηστειῶν, παρέθεντο αὐτοὺς τῷ Κυρίῳ εἰς ὃν πεπιστεύκεισαν. 24 Καὶ διελθόντες τὴν Πισιδίαν ἦλθον εἰς Παμφυλίαν· 25 καὶ λαλήσαντες ἐν Πέργῃ τὸν λόγον κατέβησαν εἰς Ἀττάλειαν·

o ch. 13. 1, 3. 26 ° κἀκεῖθεν ἀπέπλευσαν εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν, ὅθεν ἦσαν παραδεδομένοι τῇ χάριτι p ch. 15. 4. 1 Cor. 16. 9. 2 Cor. 2. 12. Rev. 3. 8. τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰς τὸ ἔργον ὃ ἐπλήρωσαν. 27 p Παραγενόμενοι δὲ καὶ συναγαγόντες τὴν ἐκκλησίαν ἀνήγγειλαν ὅσα ἐποίησεν ὁ Θεὸς μετ' αὐτῶν, καὶ ὅτι ἤνοιξε τοῖς ἔθνεσι θύραν πίστεως· 28 διέτριβον δὲ χρόνον οὐκ ὀλίγον σὺν τοῖς μαθηταῖς.

a Gen. 17. 10. Lev. 12. 3. Gal. 5. 1, 2. Phil. 3. 2. Col. 2. 8, 11, 16. b Gal. 2. 1. ch. 11. 30. & 13. 1. & 16. 4. XV. 1 a Καί τινες κατελθόντες ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰουδαίας ἐδίδασκον τοὺς ἀδελφούς, Ὅτι ἐὰν μὴ περιτέμνησθε τῷ ἔθει Μωϋσέως, οὐ δύνασθε σωθῆναι. 2 b Γενομένης οὖν στάσεως καὶ ζητήσεως οὐκ ὀλίγης τῷ Παύλῳ καὶ τῷ Βαρνάβᾳ πρὸς αὐτοὺς, ἔταξαν ἀναβαίνειν Παῦλον καὶ Βαρνάβαν καί τινας ἄλλους ἐξ αὐτῶν πρὸς τοὺς ἀποστόλους καὶ πρεσβυτέρους εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ, περὶ τοῦ ζητήματος τούτου. 3 Οἱ μὲν οὖν, προπεμφθέντες ὑπὸ τῆς ἐκκλησίας, διήρχοντο τὴν Φοιc Luke 15. 7, 10. νίκην καὶ Σαμάρειαν ἐκδιηγούμενοι τὴν ἐπιστροφὴν τῶν ἐθνῶν· c καὶ ἐποίουν d ch. 14. 27. χαρὰν μεγάλην πᾶσι τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς. 4 d Παραγενόμενοι δὲ εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ παρεδέχθησαν ὑπὸ τῆς ἐκκλησίας καὶ τῶν ἀποστόλων καὶ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων, ἀνήγγειλάν τε ὅσα ὁ Θεὸς ἐποίησε μετ' αὐτῶν. 5 Ἐξανέστησαν δέ τινες τῶν e ver. 1. ἀπὸ τῆς αἱρέσεως τῶν Φαρισαίων πεπιστευκότες, e λέγοντες ὅτι δεῖ περιτέμνειν αὐτοὺς, παραγγέλλειν τε τηρεῖν τὸν νόμον Μωϋσέως.

6 Συνήχθησαν δὲ οἱ ἀπόστολοι καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι ἰδεῖν περὶ τοῦ λόγου τονίαν, id est ordinationem clericorum, quæ non solùm ad imprecationem vocis, sed ad impositionem impletur manûs,—sic intelligunt, ut assumant testimonium Pauli Manus citò nemini imposueris." 1 Tim. v. 22. And Chrys. says (in Act. vi. 7), "This is χειροτονία—viz. the hand is laid on the head; and thus God works. His hand touches the head τοῦ χειροτονουμένου, if χειροτονία is rightly administered."

(4) The Ancient Versions of this passage authorize this sense. Thus Vulg. has "cùm constituissent presbyteros." And Valck., p. 474, "Seniores in Ecclesiâ constituere est χειροτονεῖν πρεσβυτέρους." Cf. 2 Cor. viii. 19.

— κατ' ἐκκλησίαν] They ordained several Presbyters to each Church (Meyer), but we hear of only one chief Spiritual Pastor of Crete or of Ephesus; and only of one Angel of the several Apocalyptic Churches (Rev. ii. 1—18; iii. 1—14).

— πρεσβυτέρους] The first mention in the Acts of the Ordination of Presbyters; but there were Presbyters before this. See xi. 30; and cp. xv. 2. 4. 6. 22. Here they are ordained by Apostles.

25. Πέργῃ] See xiii. 13.

— Ἀττάλειαν] on the coast of Pamphylia, at the mouth of the river Catarrhactes; built by Attalus Philadelphus, King of Pergamus, in a convenient position for commanding the trade of Syria or Egypt. Howson, i. p. 242.

26. Ἀντιόχειαν, ὅθεν] See xiii. 2, 3; xv. 2. Antioch—next after Jerusalem, the centre of Christianity—especially of Gentile Christianity.

27. ἤνοιξε θύραν] opened the door by the Keys of the Christian Ministry—a reference to Our Lord's promise of the Keys, particularly to St. Peter (Matt. xvi. 18), by whom first Our Lord opened the door of the Church to Jews and Gentiles.

But we see here that this "power of the Keys," and of opening the door of the Church is ascribed to others also. Cp. Col. iv. 2.

CH. XV. 1. καί τινες—σωθῆναι] See Gal. ii. 4. According to Epiphanius and others, the leader of these was Cerinthus, who excited the faithful against Peter (Acts xii. 17) for baptizing Cornelius and the Gentiles, and against Paul for not circumcising Titus (Gal. ii. 3). See Epiphan. hær. 28 and 30, p. 111—114. Philastrius, de hær. 36. S. Aug. de hær. in v.; and S. Jerome, Epist. 89. Theodoret, hær. ii. 3. With Cerinthus was associated Ebion, who held the same tenets with regard to the ceremonial law. See Epiphan. hær. 30, and A Lapide here, and Tillemont, Mémoires ii. p. 25.

For a Summary of the purport and acts of this Council, see Hooker, IV. xi.

A great part of this Chapter is quoted by S. Irenæus, iii. 14.

2. Παύλῳ καὶ τῷ Βαρνάβᾳ] and Titus also was with them, for there is little doubt that this is the visit of which St. Paul speaks, Gal. ii. 1—10. See Irenæus, iii. 13, and Bede, and Bp. Pearson here, p. 379, "fourteen years after St. Paul's conversion." Cp. Kitto, p. 299—305, and Meyer.

— πρὸς τοὺς ἀποστόλους καὶ πρεσβυτέρους] This expression is repeated four times in this chapter (vv. 4. 6. 22, 23. See also xvi. 1). It marks a distinction between the Apostles and Elders, and a superiority of Order in the former. (Ammonius.)

We may also observe the frequent occurrence of ἀδελφοί in this chapter—denoting the general body or πλῆθος (v. 12) of the Christian Laity. See vv. 1. 3. 7. 13. 22, 23. 32, 33. 36. 40. And thus we have presented to us a view of the primitive organization of the Church for settling controversies,

1. οἱ Ἀπόστολοι } with a "vox deliberativa."
2. οἱ Πρεσβύτεροι }
3. οἱ Ἀδελφοί, or the Laity, assisting at the deliberations (see v. 7. 11), and giving force to the decree of the Council by reception of it.

On this latter point, see further on v. 23.

This Council of Jerusalem is the model of all succeeding ones, except so far as their circumstances may have been modified by the renunciation of heathenism on the part of the Governing Power of a Country, and by its reception into the Christian Church. See Bp. Andrewes, On the Authority of Christian Princes in summoning Councils, Serm. vii. Vol. v. p. 156—168; also Hooker, viii. 5; and the Expositors of the XXIst Article.

6. συνήχθησαν οἱ ἀπόστολοι καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι] The first COUNCIL of the CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The Convention of the Disciples (Acts i. 15) for the election of an Apostle, and the Assembly for the apppointment of Deacons (Acts vi. 11) are reckoned by some as Councils (e. g. by Cabassutius, de Conciliis, cap. i. ed. Lovan. 1776); and some add the Assembly at Miletus, Acts xx.: but these differ much from this Synod at Jerusalem.

It was a maxim of the Ancient Church "to do nothing without the Bishop"—μηδὲν ἄνευ τοῦ ἐπισκόπου πράσσειν (Ignat. ad Trall. 2). And (as Grotius observes) at this Council, the Apostles, although they had a sufficiency of right and of divine gifts in themselves, yet have left a lesson to Bishops, to do nothing without their Presbyters.

— ἰδεῖν] "ut cognoscerent;" the Hebr. יָדַע (yada) is often rendered by ἰδεῖν in LXX (see Lev. xxiii. 43. Deut. iii. 19; xxxiv. 6), and from that Hebrew root, εἶδω, εἴδημι, and video, seem to be derived.

τούτου. 7 [f] Πολλῆς δὲ συζητήσεως γενομένης, ἀναστὰς Πέτρος εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί, ὑμεῖς ἐπίστασθε, ὅτι ἀφ' ἡμερῶν ἀρχαίων ἐν ἡμῖν ἐξελέξατο ὁ Θεὸς, διὰ τοῦ στόματός μου ἀκοῦσαι τὰ ἔθνη τὸν λόγον τοῦ εὐαγγελίου, καὶ πιστεῦσαι. 8 [g] Καὶ ὁ καρδιογνώστης Θεὸς ἐμαρτύρησεν αὐτοῖς, δοὺς αὐτοῖς τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, καθὼς καὶ ἡμῖν· 9 [h] καὶ οὐδὲν διέκρινε μεταξὺ ἡμῶν καὶ αὐτῶν, τῇ πίστει καθαρίσας τὰς καρδίας αὐτῶν. 10 Νῦν οὖν τί πειράζετε τὸν Θεὸν, ἐπιθεῖναι ζυγὸν ἐπὶ τὸν τράχηλον τῶν μαθητῶν, ὃν οὔτε οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν οὔτε ἡμεῖς ἰσχύσαμεν βαστάσαι; 11 [i] Ἀλλὰ διὰ τῆς χάριτος τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ πιστεύομεν σωθῆναι, καθ' ὃν τρόπον κἀκεῖνοι. 12 Ἐσίγησε δὲ πᾶν τὸ πλῆθος, καὶ ἤκουον Βαρνάβα καὶ Παύλου ἐξηγουμένων ὅσα ἐποίησεν ὁ Θεὸς σημεῖα καὶ τέρατα ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσι δι' αὐτῶν. 13 [j] Μετὰ δὲ τὸ σιγῆσαι αὐτοὺς, ἀπεκρίθη Ἰάκωβος λέγων, Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί, ἀκούσατέ μου. 14 [k] Συμεὼν ἐξηγήσατο, καθὼς πρῶτον ὁ Θεὸς ἐπεσκέψατο λαβεῖν ἐξ ἐθνῶν λαὸν τῷ ὀνόματι αὐτοῦ. 15 Καὶ τούτῳ συμφωνοῦσιν οἱ λόγοι τῶν προφητῶν, καθὼς γέγραπται,

f ch. 10. 20. & 11. 1, 2.
g 1 Chron. 28. 9. ch. 1. 24. & 10. 44.
h ch 10. 43.
1 Cor. 1. 2.
1 Pet. 1. 22.
i Eph. 2. 8. Tit. 3. 7.
j ch. 12. 17.
k 2 Pet. 1. 1.

---

7. Πέτρος] he rises first to make his defence, having been the first object of attack. See on v. 1. The summoning of this Council, and the part taken in it by St. Peter, seem to present a strong argument against the doctrine of his supremacy; and much more against that of the supremacy of the Bishops of Rome, who profess to be his successors.

If St. Peter had been Supreme Head of the Church, and if his decrees were absolute and infallible, there was no need of this appeal from Antioch (which Romish Divines affirm to have been St. Peter's see) to Jerusalem. There was no occasion for the assembling of a Council of Apostles and Presbyters there. The appeal would have been to St. Peter himself; and he would not have attended the Council, to make his defence before it. And the decree of the Council would not have been framed as it is. We should have had a Papal rescript, and not a Synodical decree.

The Holy Spirit appears to have taught the Church by this history, that in doubtful and controverted matters the appeal is not to any single Bishop, even though he be an Apostle, but to a Council of the Church; that is to say, to the Holy Ghost Himself, Whose presence and guidance have been promised by Christ to the Church, and may be rightly expected by her, when, in imitation of ancient Councils, who placed the Volume of the Gospels on a royal throne in the midst of the Conclave, she prays for His direction, and regulates her deliberations (as St. James here teaches her to do) by His Holy Word.

And whatever has been decreed by Councils of the Church, duly constituted, and conducting their deliberations on this principle,—and whatever, having been so decreed by Councils, has been received by the consentient voice of the faithful in Christendom, which is the Body of Christ, and has taken root in her usage, that may be safely accepted as a true exposition of Christian Doctrine.

It has been indeed alleged, that such principles as these impute Infallibility to a given body of men, e. g. to a Council; and that these principles are therefore liable, though not in the same degree, to the objections urged against the doctrine of Papal Supremacy. But this allegation is erroneous; it confounds two things which ought to be kept distinct, viz. à posteriori Inerrancy, and à priori Infallibility. The Romish theory asserts that the Pope is infallible,—i. e. that he cannot err in any thing that he may decree ex cathedrâ, as Pope; whether or no, what he decrees, may be subsequently received by the consent of Christendom. But no such authority is rightly claimed for a Council. It cannot be said à priori that any given body of men, however wise or holy, who meet together, may not err. But what may be asserted is, that if Councils are duly constituted and convened, and ground their deliberations on Holy Scripture; and if what they decree, is à posteriori received by the faithful, and becomes part of the Code of the Church; then what is so determined and received is not erroneous, but true.

— ἀφ' ἡμερῶν ἀρχαίων] From the beginning of the Gospel. See xi. 15, ἐν ἀρχῇ, the Day of Pentecost. xxi. 16, ἀρχαίῳ μαθητῇ. Phil. iv. 15, ἐν ἀρχῇ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου, and for the fact of St. Peter's selection see Acts x. 20; xi. 12—15.

St. Peter refers to Christ's promise to him, that he should open the kingdom of heaven with the keys of the Word and Sacraments. Matt. xvi. 19.

— πιστεῦσαι] To be engrafted in His Church on their public profession of faith in Christ. See on xiii. 48.

8. ἐμαρτύρησεν αὐτοῖς] By the visible descent of the Holy Spirit upon them, "as upon us at the beginning," Acts x. 44, 45; xi. 15.

10. τί πειράζετε τὸν Θεόν] Why do you tempt Him, Who has already declared His pleasure in this matter, by His vision to me and to Cornelius, and by the descent of the Holy Ghost on him, and on other Gentiles evangelized by my ministry? Acts x. 44; xi. 15. Why do you tempt Him, by controverting what He has decided, and by resisting His will?

— ζυγόν] The yoke of the Ceremonial Law; instead of the χρηστὸς ζυγὸς, 'of Christ.' Matt. xi. 29, 30.

— ἰσχύσαμεν] Had not strength to bear—not a complaint of divine severity, but a confession of human infirmity. Cp. Phil. iv. 13.

11. Ἰησοῦ] Elz. adds Χριστοῦ, which is not in A, B, E, G, H. The hope of salvation (τοῦ σωθῆναι) is expressed emphatically by the word Ἰησοῦς, or Saviour, standing alone.

13. Ἰάκωβος] The Bishop of Jerusalem. (Chrys.) It is probable that as such he was President of the Council; and see St. Paul's words, Gal. ii. 9, concerning this assemblage, where he places James first.

(1) The first argument (for the reception of the Gentiles on equal terms with Jews, and without the imposition of the ceremonial law, now fulfilled in Christ) was the Nature of the Law itself, which even they to whom it was given were too weak to bear (v. 10.)

(2) The second was from God's choice, that the Gentiles should be evangelized by Peter (vv. 7, 8).

(3) The third is from the visible signs of God's approval, manifested in the miracles wrought by Him, through the instrumentality of Barnabas and Paul, in preaching to the Gentiles.

(4) The fourth argument, stated by James, vv. 16—19, is from ancient prophecy, foretelling the restoration of the house of David in the evangelization of the world; and to this St. James adds,—

(5) A fifth, the crowning argument of all, derived from God's own attributes, His universal Knowledge, and Care, and everlasting Love, for what He has made (τὸ ἔργον αὐτοῦ, v. 18). And since He is the Maker and Father of the Gentiles as well as the Jews, therefore they are objects of His Love even from the beginning.

14. Συμεών] שִׁמְעוֹן. (See 2 Pet. i. 1.) James does not say Πέτρος, but uses his original Hebrew name, as supplying an argument à fortiori. Simon, the Apostle of the Circumcision, he who has not changed his name like Saul (the Apostle of the Gentiles), but he who retains his original Hebrew appellation, although Petros is added to it, he, with all his Jewish habits and prepossessions, has shown what God has done by him among the Gentiles. And now hear what your own Hebrew Prophets say to the same effect, He has been a true Simeon, hearing and obeying God; imitate him.

This is the last mention of St. Peter in the Acts of the Apostles.

— λαόν] Elz. adds ἐπὶ, which is not in A, C, D, E. The sense is, to take a people for His own Name, from the Gentiles; a saying best illustrated by our Lord's commands to His Apostles, to go and baptize all Nations in the One Name of the Triune God.

1 Amos. 9. 11, 12.

16 [1] Μετὰ ταῦτα ἀναστρέψω καὶ ἀνοικοδομήσω τὴν σκηνὴν Δαυὶδ τὴν πεπτωκυῖαν· καὶ τὰ κατεσκαμμένα αὐτῆς ἀνοικοδομήσω, καὶ ἀνορθώσω αὐτήν· 17 ὅπως ἂν ἐκζητήσωσιν οἱ κατάλοιποι τῶν ἀνθρώπων τὸν Κύριον, καὶ πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, ἐφ' οὓς ἐπικέκληται τὸ ὄνομά μου ἐπ' αὐτούς, λέγει Κύριος ὁ ποιῶν ταῦτα. 18 Γνωστὸν ἀπ' αἰῶνός ἐστι τῷ Θεῷ τὸ ἔργον αὐτοῦ. 19 Διὸ ἐγὼ κρίνω μὴ παρενοχλεῖν τοῖς ἀπὸ τῶν ἐθνῶν ἐπιστρέφουσιν ἐπὶ τὸν Θεόν· 20 [m] ἀλλὰ ἐπιστεῖλαι αὐτοῖς τοῦ ἀπέχεσθαι ἀπὸ τῶν ἀλισγημάτων τῶν εἰδώλων, καὶ τῆς πορνείας, καὶ τοῦ πνικτοῦ, m ver. 29. Gen. 9. 4. Lev. 3. 17. 1 Cor. 8. 1, 9, 10. & 10. 14, 20, 21. 1 Thess. 4. 3.

---

16. σκηνήν] = סֻכָּה, tugurium, tabernaculum, domum. The word is not palace, but tent, to show the low estate to which the house of David had been reduced, when raised up into the Universal Church by Christ: cf. Isa. liv. 2. The Tabernacle of David is the Church of God to be raised up in the Seed of David, which is Christ, the Eternal Word, Who pitched His tent in our Nature (John i. 14) in the house of David, and so raised up for ever the tabernacle of our fallen humanity (Œcumen. p. 123, and compare Hengstenberg, Christol. iii. 227), and in Whom all Nations are blessed.

This is a remarkable interpretation of Hebrew Prophecies; an interpretation delivered at Jerusalem itself, by the Apostle St. James, the first Bishop of Jerusalem. And it declares that the true Restoration of the Tabernacle of David is to be found in the reception of the residue of the human family, and in the flowing-in of all Nations, whether Jew or Gentile, into the Church of Christ. Is this a divine declaration on the true "Restoration of the Jews?"

Amos ix. 12 says, לְמַעַן יִירְשׁוּ אֶת־שְׁאֵרִית אֱדוֹם, ut possideant residuum Edom, et omnes gentes super quas invocatum est nomen meum in eas Dominus dixit, which the LXX renders ὅπως ἐκζητήσωσιν οἱ κατάλοιποι τῶν ἀνθρώπων καὶ πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, ἐφ' οὓς ἐπικέκληται τὸ ὄνομά μου ἐπ' αὐτούς, λέγει Κύριος ὁ ποιῶν ταῦτα.

It has been supposed by some that the LXX read אָדָם for אֱדוֹם, and יִדְרְשׁוּ for יִירְשׁוּ, but this supposition is not necessary (see Pococke, Port. Mos. iv. p. 46), אֵת is often the note of the nominative case; and the LXX Version, which is sometimes a Targum or Paraphrase, regards Edom as a general repesentative of those who were alien from God.

St. James and St. Luke adopt that Version, as not contrary to the mind of the Spirit, and indeed as expressing that mind, declared in numerous other places of Holy Scripture (quoted by Mr. Grinfield), which are almost identical in sense with the words of the LXX. See, for instance, Ps. lxxxvi. 9, πάντα τὰ ἔθνη ὅσα ἐποίησας, ἥξουσι καὶ προσκυνήσουσι, καὶ δοξάσουσι τὸ ὄνομά σου. Ps. xxii. 31; cii. 18. Isa. xliii. 7.

17. ἐφ' οὓς—ἐπ' αὐτούς] a Hebraism retained by the LXX, from the original of Amos. Cf. οὗ—αὐτοῦ 1 Pet. ii. 24. Rev. vii. 2; xiii. 12. Vorst de Hebr. p. 546. The αὐτοὺς gives an emphasis to the relative,—even upon them.

— ταῦτα] Elz. adds πάντα, which is not in A, B, C, D, nor in Irenæus, l. c. The quotation from Amos ends at ταῦτα. And the comment of St. James begins at γνωστόν.

18. γνωστὸν ἀπ' αἰῶνός ἐστι τῷ Θεῷ τὸ ἔργον αὐτοῦ] This reading, which is adopted by Lachmann (with the omission of ἐστιν) and by Bornemann, is authorized by A (omitting ἐστιν) and by D, and by Irenæus, iii. 14, who has "Cognitum à sæculo Deo est opus Ejus," and by Vulg., Arm., Syr., omitting τῷ Κυρίῳ.

γνωστὰ is the reading of B, C, which omit the rest of the clause. E has γνωστὰ ἀπ' αἰῶνός ἐστι τῷ Θεῷ πάντα τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ, which is the reading of Elz.

The emphatic words are γνωστὸν and ἔργον. God the common Father of all knows (i. e. not only foresees, but cares for and loves, יָדַע, novit, dilexit, Gen. xviii. 19. Exod. i. 8; ii. 25; xxxiii. 12. 17. Hos. v. 4, and passim) from the beginning, not only the Jews but all men; and not only men, but His works generally, i. e. every thing that He has made. His mercy is over all His works from everlasting. He hateth nothing that He hath made. See above, on v. 13.

The argument is—The decree that I propose is nothing new, but is based on the foundation of God's eternal Foreknowledge of, and Universal Love to, all His Creatures.

19. ἐγὼ κρίνω] 'censeo.' Cp. xvi. 4, δόγματα τὰ κεκριμένα ὑπὸ τῶν ἀποστόλων καὶ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων, and xxi. 25, κρίναντες μηδὲν τοιοῦτον τηρεῖν, words which show that no single voice of any one Apostle (James, or Peter, or Paul) was predominant over the rest.

20. ἀλισγημάτων] A word peculiar to the N. T. and the LXX Version of the Old. See Dan. i. 8. Mal. i. 7. 12, explained by εἰδωλόθυτον Acts xxi. 25. It is derived from ἀλισγέω, which the LXX use for גָּאַל, "redimo sanguine (a remarkable intimation of redemption by the effusion of blood), sanguinem effundo, et sanguine effuso maculare, ideòque contaminare" (Zeph. iii. 1. Isa. lxiii. 3).

The Greek ἀλισγέω appears to be derived from an unused root, ἀλίω, i. q. κυλίω, volvo, to wallow in the βόρβορος of uncleanness, especially in blood. See Valck. here, and cp. κύλισμα βορβόρου, 2 Pet. ii. 22.

On the reason and obligation of the Decree with regard to things offered to idols, see note on πνικτοῦ καὶ αἵματος, v. 20.

20. τῆς πορνείας] This injunction was rendered necessary by the then condition of the Gentile World. Cp. 1 Thess. iv. 5. Eph. iv. 18. 19. A striking proof of moral depravity in an enlightened age.

See Bp. Sanderson's excellent remarks (Serm. vi. ad Populum, § 9, Vol. iii. p. 220), where, after showing by examples into what a state of moral blindness and degradation the Heathen Nations had sunk in that age of intellectual light (a solemn warning to other Nations), in their connivance at this deadly sin, and it may be added, even in their consecration of it by religious rites, by temple, priest, and sacrifice (e. g. at Corinth, Paphos, Cyprus), he proceeds to say, "out of this consideration the Apostles in that first Council holden at Jerusalem, thought it needful by Ecclesiastical Canon, among some other indifferent things for the Church's peace, to lay this restraint upon the converted Gentiles, that they should abstain from fornication."

"Not as if fornication were in itself an indifferent thing, as those other things were, or as if those other things were, in themselves, and simply, unlawful, as fornication was. But the Apostles did therefore join fornication and those other indifferent things in the same Canon, because the Gentiles accounted fornication a thing as indifferent as what was most indifferent."

— τοῦ πνικτοῦ, καὶ τοῦ αἵματος] i. e. from blood, whether in the animal strangled (i. e. so that the blood is not allowed to issue from it when killed), or blood poured out from it. τὸ πνικτὸν was regarded as a delicacy by the Gentiles. Cp. Casaubon ad Athen. ii. c. 24.

The foundation of this prohibition is in the command given to Noah (Gen. ix. 4), and renewed in the Law. Lev. iii. 17; vii. 26; xvii. 10; xix. 26. Deut. xii. 16. 23. 1 Sam. xiv. 33; and see the passages from the Rabbis in Lightfoot, ii. 697.

Things which are not unlawful in themselves, but indifferent, may become inexpedient and evil, "per accidens, ratione scandali." "Every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused" (1 Tim. iv. 4), and "all things are lawful to me," says St. Paul, "but all things are not expedient" (1 Cor. vi. 12; x. 23); and if they are prohibited by lawful authority they are unlawful to me who am subject to that authority.

This was the case, in primitive times, with meats offered to Idols, and with blood; an abstinence from which had been commanded before the Law, by three of the seven precepts given to Noah, as the Jews affirm. See Seder Olam in Selden de Jure Heb. vii. 3, p. 809. Gieseler, Eccles. Hist. § 17, note 7, and § 26, note 6.

"It was the custom of the Church, almost till the time of St. Augustine, to abstain from eating of blood, in compliance with the rule given by the Apostles to the Gentile Converts. Therefore by the most ancient laws of the Church all clergymen were obliged to abstain from it, under pain of degradation. This is evident from the Apostolical Canons (Can. 69), and those of the Council of Gangra (Can. 19), and of Trullo (Can. 67). But this was looked upon by some only as a temporary injunction; so it appears from St. Augustine (c. Faust. xxxii. 13) that in his time it was of no force in the African Church. For he says that in his time few men thought themselves under any obligation to observe it. . . . He that would see more about it may consult Curcellæus, de esu sanguinis, cap. 13." Bingham, xvii. 5. 15. And cp. the authorities in Howson, 262, 3, whence it appears καὶ τοῦ αἵματος. 21 [n] Μωϋσῆς γὰρ ἐκ γενεῶν ἀρχαίων κατὰ πόλιν τοὺς κηρύσσοντας αὐτὸν ἔχει, ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς κατὰ πᾶν σάββατον ἀναγινωσκόμενος.

[n] Neh. 8. 1. ch. 13. 27.

22 Τότε ἔδοξε τοῖς ἀποστόλοις καὶ τοῖς πρεσβυτέροις, σὺν ὅλῃ τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, ἐκλεξαμένους ἄνδρας ἐξ αὐτῶν πέμψαι εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν σὺν τῷ Παύλῳ καὶ Βαρνάβᾳ, Ἰούδαν τὸν καλούμενον Βαρσαβᾶν, καὶ Σίλαν, ἄνδρας ἡγουμένους ἐν τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς, 23 γράψαντες διὰ χειρὸς αὐτῶν τάδε, Οἱ ἀπόστολοι καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ τοῖς κατὰ τὴν Ἀντιόχειαν καὶ Συρίαν καὶ Κιλικίαν that the Greek Church still maintains the obligation of the Apostolic decree concerning abstinence from blood.

---

The Apostles thought it expedient to require from the Gentile Christians an abstinence from these things; for divers reasons—

(1) Because the feasting on things offered to idols (known to be such) was almost unavoidably connected with the worship of idols. See 1 Cor. viii. 10.

(2) Because the eating of things strangled, and blood, would have revolted the Jewish Christians from intercourse with them, and so have been a hindrance to Church-Unity.

(3) Because the Apostles desired to show the Jewish Converts that they had a tender regard for their scruples, especially when grounded on Ante-Levitical Law and Usage; and therefore the Jewish Christians would be more disposed in return to comply with the Apostles in not enforcing on the Gentile Christians the Rite of circumcision and the other ceremonies of the Levitical Law.

On these points, see Augustin. (c. Faust. xxxii. 13), and Hooker (IV. xi. 5), who says, "The Apostles did not impose upon the Churches of the Gentiles any part of the Jews' ordinances with bond of necessary and perpetual observation (as we all both by doctrine and practice acknowledge), but only in respect of the conveniency and fitness of the present state of the Church, as it then stood."

Again Hooker (Serm. iii. p. 619) says, "A positive law is that which bindeth them that receive it, in such things as might before have been either done or not done without offence, but not after, during the time it standeth in force. Such were those Church Constitutions concerning strangled and blood. But there is no person whom, nor time wherein, a law natural doth not bind."

On this important question, involving a discussion of the fundamental principles of Law, and of the duty and right of Conscience, see also Bp. Sanderson, Serm. v. ad Pop. iii. p. 160, § 16, and p. 169, "The Apostles in the first Council holden at Jerusalem, laid upon the Churches for a time a restraint from the eating of blood, and things sacrificed to idols and strangled."

It may be noticed here, that the Apostles would not have prohibited the Gentile Churches the eating of blood, in this unqualified manner, if they had believed in a carnal presence of flesh and blood in the Holy Eucharist. Therefore this Decree of the First Council of the Christian Church may be rightly appealed to, as containing a primitive protest against the Romish dogma of Transubstantiation.

21. Μωϋσῆς γάρ] We will send by letter these decrees to the Gentile Christians, but it is not necessary to transmit them to the Jewish Christians, because they have them already in substance in the Pentateuch, which they hear every Sabbath-day (Chrys.); or, as Cassiodor. expresses it, "sufficere Mosi, quod ejus nomen in Synagogâ omni Sabbato cum veneratione nominatur." This interpretation is confirmed by the words in v. 23, τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς τοῖς ἐξ ἐθνῶν. The Decrees do not appear to have been sent to the Jewish Christians.

This clause may also intimate—that it was necessary to frame and transmit these Decrees to the Gentile Christians, because the Law of Moses is always sounding every where, from ancient times, in the Synagogues; and because the Mosaic Law has therefore, from its venerable antiquity and wide-spread diffusion, great influence, even in heathen countries; and because it could not be expected that the Jewish Christians would communicate, as brethren, with those who set that Law at defiance even in those things which were anterior to that Law, and belonged either to the Patriarchal dispensation, or even to the Natural Law.

Further, by this honourable reference to Moses and the Law, on the part of the Church at Jerusalem, the Jews and Jewish Christians would be conciliated, and might reasonably infer that there was good reason for the non-exaction of Circumcision from the Gentiles on their reception into the Church. See Chrys.

— κηρύσσοντας—ἀναγινωσκόμενος] He is preached by being read. An apostolic statement of the important truth vindicated by Hooker (E. P. V. xix.), that public Reading of Holy Scripture is Preaching.

22. Σίλαν] or Silvanus, a προφήτης (see v. 32), and afterwards the companion of St. Paul (xv. 40; xvi. 19. 25; xvii. 4), and associated with him in the preambles of his Epistles. 1 Thess. i. 1. 2 Thess. i. 1. See also 1 Pet. v. 12.

The name is always written Σίλας in the History of the Acts, where the word occurs thirteen times; and Σιλουανὸς by St. Paul and St. Peter. On the contractions of proper names, see Winer, Gr. Gr. § 16, p. 93. Examples in the New Test. are Ἀπολλῶς for -ώνιος, Ἀρτεμᾶς for -ίδωρος, Νυμφᾶς for -όδωρος, Ζηνᾶς for -όδωρος, Ἐπαφρᾶς for -όδιτος, Λουκᾶς for Lucanus.

— ἄνδρας ἡγουμένους] A strong proof (as Alford well observes) that Silas was not (as some have imagined) the Author of the Acts of the Apostles.

23. καὶ οἱ—ἀδελφοί] This is the reading of Elz., supported by E, G, H, and the great body of Cursive MSS., and the Syriac, Coptic, and Ethiopic Versions; and is retained by Tisch. and Bloomf.

This being the case, and this passage being one which has been made the subject of controversial disputation, I have deemed it best to leave the Text as it stands in the commonly received edition; and to accompany it with a statement of the evidence concerning the retention of the καὶ οἱ, so that the reader may form his own judgment on the matter.

The καὶ is not in D, and the words καὶ οἱ are not found in A, B, C, nor in the Vulgate and Armenian Versions; nor in Irenæus, iii. 14, nor Origen, c. Cels. p. 396 (see Wetstein and Mill, proleg. 1350). They have therefore not been admitted by Lachmann, Bornemann, and Alford. And this reading, which omits καὶ οἱ, seems to be confirmed by internal evidence,—

(1) à priori, Paul and Barnabas are said to go up "to the Apostles and Elders at Jerusalem (xv. 2) concerning this question."

(2) The "Apostles and Elders" are said "to have met together to consider this matter" (xv. 6).

(3) à posteriori, Paul is said to have gone through the Cities, delivering to them to keep the Decrees determined by "the Apostles and Elders at Jerusalem" (xvi. 4).

This triple mention of Apostles and Elders, without the addition of any other party, is significant;

It seems to indicate that "the Apostles and Elders" constituted the Council, as far as deliberative voice and definitive sentence were concerned; and therefore the Decree was promulgated in their names.

And this interpretation is confirmed by the subsequent usage of the Christian Church in Synods. See Bingham (ii. 19. 11—13), "It is agreed on all hands by unprejudiced persons, that Presbyters had liberty to sit and deliberate with Bishops in Provincial Councils." See above on v. 6.

And, as Abp. Cranmer says (in Bp. Burnet's History of the Reformation, c. i. 353), "In all the Antient Councils of the Church, in matters of Faith and Interpretation of Scripture, no man made definitive subscription but Bishops and Priests, forsomuch as the declaration of the Word of God appertains unto them." See also Hooker, VIII. vi. 8, and VIII. vi. 12, "It cannot in any reason seem otherwise than most fit, that unto Ecclesiastical Persons the care of devising Ecclesiastical Laws be committed."

So Dr. Field writes; "our adversaries (the Romanists) say that the Protestants affirm that Laymen ought not only to be present in General Councils, but also to have decisive voices as well as they of the Clergy; and thereupon they charge us with great absurdity."

"It is agreed that Ministers only have decisive voices in Councils, in sort before expressed." So also Bp. Beveridge (Codex Canonum vindicatus 1678, p. xx.), "Laici ad judicium de doctrinâ aut disciplinâ Ecclesiasticâ ferendum nunquam admissi sunt." And so Dr. Field adds (On the Church, v. c. 49, p. 646, ed. 1635), "The persons that may be present are of divers ἀδελφοῖς τοῖς ἐξ ἐθνῶν, χαίρειν. [24] ° Ἐπειδὴ ἠκούσαμεν ὅτι τινὲς ἐξ ἡμῶν ° Gal. 2. 4. ver. 1. Tit. 1. 10, 11.

ἐξελθόντες ἐτάραξαν ὑμᾶς λόγοις, ἀνασκευάζοντες τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν, λέγοντες περιτέμνεσθαι καὶ τηρεῖν τὸν νόμον, οἷς οὐ διεστειλάμεθα, [25] ἔδοξεν ἡμῖν γενομένοις ὁμοθυμαδὸν, ἐκλεξαμένοις ἄνδρας πέμψαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς, σὺν τοῖς ἀγα-
p ch. 13. 50. & 14. 19.
πητοῖς ἡμῶν Βαρνάβᾳ καὶ Παύλῳ, [26] p ἀνθρώποις παραδεδωκόσι τὰς ψυχὰς αὐτῶν ὑπὲρ τοῦ ὀνόματος τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ· [27] ἀπεστάλκαμεν οὖν Ἰούδαν καὶ Σίλαν, καὶ αὐτοὺς διὰ λόγου ἀπαγγέλλοντας τὰ αὐτά. [28] * Ἔδοξε γὰρ τῷ Πνεύματι τῷ ἁγίῳ καὶ ἡμῖν μηδὲν πλέον ἐπιτίθεσθαι ὑμῖν βάρος, q ver. 20. ch. 16. 4. & 21. 25.
πλὴν τῶν ἐπάναγκες τούτων, [29] q ἀπέχεσθαι εἰδωλοθύτων, καὶ αἵματος, καὶ πνικτοῦ, καὶ πορνείας· ἐξ ὧν διατηροῦντες ἑαυτοὺς, εὖ πράξετε. ἔρρωσθε.

[30] Οἱ μὲν οὖν ἀπολυθέντες ἦλθον εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν· καὶ συναγαγόντες τὸ πλῆθος ἐπέδωκαν τὴν ἐπιστολήν. [31] Ἀναγνόντες δὲ, ἐχάρησαν ἐπὶ τῇ παρακλήσει.
[32] Ἰούδας τε καὶ Σίλας, καὶ αὐτοὶ προφῆται ὄντες, διὰ λόγου πολλοῦ παρεκά-r ch. 14. 22. s 1 Cor. 16. 11. 2 John 10. λεσαν τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς καὶ r ἐπεστήριξαν. [33] Ποιήσαντες δὲ χρόνον, s ἀπελύθησαν μετ' εἰρήνης ἀπὸ τῶν ἀδελφῶν πρὸς τοὺς ἀποστείλαντας αὐτούς· [35] Παῦλος δὲ καὶ Βαρνάβας διέτριβον ἐν Ἀντιοχείᾳ, διδάσκοντες καὶ εὐαγγελιζόμενοι, μετὰ καὶ ἑτέρων πολλῶν, τὸν λόγον τοῦ Κυρίου.

[36] Μετὰ δέ τινας ἡμέρας εἶπε Παῦλος πρὸς Βαρνάβαν, Ἐπιστρέψαντες δὴ ἐπισκεψώμεθα τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς t κατὰ πᾶσαν πόλιν, ἐν αἷς κατηγγείλαμεν τὸν t ch. 13. 4, &c. u Col. 4. 10. ch. 12. 12, 25. & 13. 5. 2 Tim. 4. 11. Philem. 24. v ch. 13. 13.
λόγον τοῦ Κυρίου, πῶς ἔχουσι. [37] u Βαρνάβας δὲ ἐβούλετο συμπαραλαβεῖν τὸν Ἰωάννην τὸν καλούμενον Μάρκον· [38] v Παῦλος δὲ ἠξίου τὸν ἀποστάντα ἀπ' αὐτῶν ἀπὸ Παμφυλίας καὶ μὴ συνελθόντα αὐτοῖς εἰς τὸ ἔργον μὴ συμπαραsorts; for some there are with authority to teach, define, prescribe, and to direct. Others are there to hear, set forward, and consent unto that which is there done. In the former sort, none but only Ministers of the Word and Sacraments are present in Councils, and they only have deciding and defining voices; but in the latter sort, Laymen also may be present; whereupon we shall find that Bishops and Presbyters subscribe in this sort; 'Ego, N. definiens subscripsi;' but the Emperor, or any other Lay person, 'Ego, N. consentiens subscripsi.'"

---

And this has been the practice from time immemorial in England. See Bp. Kennett's Eccles. Synods, ed. London, 1701, Part i. p. 249, where he says, "By collating the history of all our Saxon Councils, it is easy to discover that if the subject of any laws was for the outward peace and temporal government of the Church, such laws were properly ordained by the King and his great Council of Clergy and Laity intermixed, as our Acts of Parliament are still made. But if there was any doctrine to be tried, or any exercise of pure discipline to be reformed, then the Clergy of the great Council departed into a separate Synod; and there being the same men in a different and sole capacity, they acted as proper Judges within the power of the keys. Only when they had thus provided for the state of Religion, they brought their Canons from the Synod back again to the Council, to be ratified by the King with advice of his great men; and so wisely made the Constitutions of the Church to be Laws of the Realm. I cannot imagine that the Saxon National Assemblies were any more mixed Councils than our English Parliaments are. Theirs had authority not only in Civil matters, but in all external Church affairs; so have ours. Yet theirs did not meddle with Doctrines or Spiritual Discipline, nor will ours; for all the wise suggestions that are made to them.

"The Norman's Revolution made indeed no change in this respect. The Conqueror in his great Councils had his spiritual and his temporal Barons; and they jointly advised him upon all the exigencies of preserving the peace, and advancing the interest of Church and State. But when matters arose that were purely spiritual, then the King allowed a Legate or an Arch Bishop to meet the other Prelates in a distinct Synod, and there to act as the Church Representative."

These are the principles which regulate the proceedings of the Church of England in her Convocations, where Bishops and Presbyters sit and deliberate as Brethren; but no Canon framed by them has force of law in the Courts of the Realm, unless it is received and ratified by the Crown.

— ἀδελφοῖς τοῖς] The inculcation of the word ἀδελφοί in the Preamble of this Decree, of the first Council of the Church, and in this Chapter generally (where it occurs no less than eleven times), was probably designed to show, that, in order to settle Church Controversies, Bishops, and Presbyters, and People, should ever remember that, although there are divers degrees and orders in the Church,—yet all its members are Brethren. Cp. Matt. xxiii. 8. John xx. 17. Acts vii. 26.

— χαίρειν] Used in the N. T. only by St. James, i. 1; perhaps a sign that he had the principal part in framing the decree.

25, 26. σὺν τοῖς ἀγαπητοῖς ἡμῶν Βαρνάβᾳ καὶ Παύλῳ—ἀνθρώποις—Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ] A remarkable testimony. The first Christians were not wont to praise one another in public. But here such an attestation, especially to St. Paul, was seasonable and appropriate. It was a reply to the charges of the Judaizers against him. It was a public declaration on the part of the other Apostles, that St. Paul's claims to divine revelations, and to an apostolic mission, were true; and that there was no difference of opinion, or disparity in dignity, between him and the Twelve who had "seen the Lord" on earth. Such a declaration was called for. See ix. 26.

28. ἔδοξε τῷ Πνεύματι τῷ ἁγίῳ καὶ ἡμῖν] i. e. to us inspired by the Holy Ghost, to us His ministers and organs for declaring the truth,—a mode of expression not uncommon in the Old Testament, where we read, "The people believed the Lord and His servant Moses," Exod. xiv. 31. "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon," Judges vii. 18. 20. "The people feared the Lord and Samuel," 1 Sam. xii. 18. (Severus.)

There is also another reason for the addition of the word us. We,—though Jews by birth and education, and of the Circumcision,—we declare that the Gentiles are not to be circumcised. (Chrys.)

The prayer used by the English Convocation may be cited here: "Concede ut Spiritus Tuus, Qui Concilio olim Apostolico, huic nostro etiam nunc insideat." But it cannot be held with Bellarmine (de Concil. ii. c. 2) that Councils of the Church now are entitled to adopt the words of the text in the framing of Canons. See Hooker, VIII. vi. 7. Abp. Laud against Fisher, § 33. Hammond, i. p. 558.

33. ἀποστείλαντας αὐτούς] So A, B, C, D.—Elz. ἀποστόλους. After these words Elz. adds ἔδοξε δὲ τῷ Σίλᾳ ἐπιμεῖναι αὐτοῦ, which are not in A, B, E, G, H.

37. ἐβούλετο] So A, B, C, E.—Elz. ἐβουλεύετο.

38. ἠξίου μή] Stronger than οὐκ ἠξίου. He thought it right not to take him.

— τοῦτον] Emphatic, and therefore reserved for the end of the sentence.

λαβεῖν τοῦτον. 39 Ἐγένετο οὖν παροξυσμὸς, ὥστε ἀποχωρισθῆναι αὐτοὺς ἀπ' ἀλλήλων, τόν τε Βαρνάβαν παραλαβόντα τὸν Μάρκον ἐκπλεῦσαι εἰς Κύπρον· 40 Παῦλος δὲ ἐπιλεξάμενος Σίλαν ἐξῆλθε, παραδοθεὶς τῇ χάριτι τοῦ Κυρίου ὑπὸ τῶν ἀδελφῶν. 41 διήρχετο δὲ τὴν Συρίαν καὶ Κιλικίαν, ἐπιστηρίζων τὰς ἐκκλησίας.

XVI. 1 [a] Κατήντησε δὲ εἰς Δέρβην καὶ Λύστραν· καὶ ἰδοὺ μαθητής τις ἦν ἐκεῖ, ὀνόματι Τιμόθεος, υἱὸς γυναικὸς Ἰουδαίας πιστῆς, πατρὸς δὲ Ἕλληνος· 2 ὃς ἐμαρτυρεῖτο ὑπὸ τῶν ἐν Λύστροις καὶ Ἰκονίῳ ἀδελφῶν. 3 Τοῦτον ἠθέλησεν ὁ Παῦλος σὺν αὐτῷ ἐξελθεῖν, καὶ λαβὼν περιέτεμεν αὐτὸν, διὰ τοὺς Ἰουδαίους τοὺς ὄντας ἐν τοῖς τόποις ἐκείνοις· ἤδεισαν γὰρ ἅπαντες τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῦ

[a] ch. 14. 6. Rom. 16. 21. Phil. 2. 19. 1 Tim. 1. 2.

---

39. παροξυσμός] παροξυσμός, οὐκ ἐχθρά (Œcum.),—i. e. it was only a transitory ebullition of a natural infirmity of temper; "exacerbatio, non odium."

On some circumstances which had probably led to this difference, see above on xiii. 12, and compare Gal. ii. 1—11, for the preparatory history.

It appears that (as is often the case) one difference led to another;

(1) St. Paul had recently resisted St. Peter at Antioch, and had "rebuked him to the face, because he was to be blamed." As Bede says (on Acts xv.): "His diebus impletum est quod Apostolus Paulus ait, 'Cum venisset Cephas Antiochiam in faciem ei restiti.'" (Gal. ii. 11.)

(2) St. Paul had opposed St. Barnabas, who had then been led away by St. Peter's example. (Gal. ii. 13.)

(3) That difference was soon followed by another (viz.) with reference to St. Mark, who was ἀνεψιὸς to Barnabas.

On the narrative of this παροξυσμὸς it may be observed,

(1) That in St. Luke we have a faithful annalist, who when writing the history of the Apostles does not disguise their frailties, nor those of a brother Evangelist.

(2) That a religion is true, which is not damaged by a strife of its chief teachers, but, under God's Providence, is more widely disseminated in consequence of a difference, which, if that religion had been of human origin, would have been very baneful to it.

(3) That the Apostles, and other first Preachers of Christianity, were not exempt from human infirmities; and thus the excellency of the power of the Gospel, in the wonderful moral, social, and religious change which it has wrought on the world, is seen more clearly to be of God. (2 Cor. iv. 7.)

(4) That the Inspiration of the Apostles and Evangelists, in what they wrote for the instruction of the Church, and in what was received by the Spirit of Christ in the Church, as Canonical Scripture, is displayed more clearly by the fact, that in what they did, they were not always exempt from human frailty, nor were supposed to be so by the Church, which received their writings as divine. See above, Preface to the Gospels, p. xix.

They had their treasure in earthen vessels. (2 Cor. iv. 7.) "The strength of God was made perfect in their weakness." (2 Cor. xii. 9.) "Paulus severior," says Jerome, "Barnabas clementior; uterque in suo sensu abundat; et tamen dissentio habet aliquid humanæ fragilitatis." Adv. Pelag. lib. ii. p. 522.

Paul may have erred in his strife with Barnabas, as he did err in his pleading before Ananias (Acts xxiii. 3); and both these incidents are recorded by the Holy Spirit writing by St. Luke. But there is no error in what was delivered by the Holy Ghost, through the agency of St. Paul, to the Church, as Canonical Scripture, and has been received by the Body of Christ, the Church Universal, as such.

(5) That we are not to be scandalized or falter in the faith, if Christian Teachers differ among themselves. There is but One Teacher Whose Charity never failed or was disturbed—Christ. "Soli Dei Filio servabatur sine delicto permanere." (Tertullian, de Præscr. 3.) Peter was rebuked by Paul (Gal. ii. 11); Paul and Barnabas strove. And if even Apostles sometimes differed, why need we be perplexed by occasional dissensions between other holy men, such as S. Cyprian and S. Cornelius, S. Cyril and Theodoret, S. Jerome and S. Augustine, S. Chrysostom and Epiphanius? Rather let the sight of such differences stimulate the faith and hope of Christians. Let it induce them to raise their eyes from the Church militant on earth to the Church glorified in heaven, and from the transitory strifes of Time to the never-ending peace of Eternity.

(6) That the strife of Paul and Barnabas was afterwards healed, and that St. Mark was recovered to the love and esteem of St. Paul. We find Mark with St. Paul, when he addressed the Colossians (iv. 10; cp. Philemon 24), to whom he had written concerning him, and to whom he commends him. And perhaps there is something significant in the terms by which he there describes him, "Mark, kinsman to Barnabas;" as if to intimate that Barnabas had acted a kinsman's part in his tenderness to his relative; and to show his love for Barnabas as well as Mark. And at last St. Paul, who once would not take Mark with him because "he had departed from them, and did not go with them to the work," afterwards sent for him to Rome, and desired Timothy to take, and bring him, "for he is profitable to me for the ministry." (2 Tim. iv. 11.)

(7) As to the parts taken respectively in this παροξυσμὸς by St. Paul and St. Barnabas, we may adopt the words of Tertullian: "Viderint ii, qui de Apostolis judicant; mihi non tam benè est, imò non tam malè est, ut Apostolos committam." (De Præscr. 24.) Or, as Chrys. says, τοὺς ἁγίους ὑβρίζω; μὴ γένοιτο. Ὁ Παῦλος ἐζήτει τὸ δίκαιον, ὁ Βαρνάβας τὸ φιλάνθρωπον: and he well adds, πάνυ ὠφέλει τὸν Μάρκον ἡ μάχη αὕτη, τὸ μὲν Παύλου φοβερὸν ἐπέστρεφεν αὐτὸν, τοῦ δὲ Βαρνάβα χρηστὸν ἐποίει μηκέτι ἀπολειφθῆναι· μάχονται μὲν, πρὸς ἓν δὲ τέλος ἅπαντᾷ τὸ κέρδος. It pleased the God of Justice and Mercy to bless the efforts of both Paul and Barnabas. And now that all the παροξυσμὸς of human passion has passed away for ever, all the fruits of justice and of love, of repentance and of zeal, of honesty and of truth, remain, and will never fail. The two brother Apostles, Paul and Barnabas, and the two Evangelists, St. Mark and St. Luke, are united in the joys of Paradise—never to be severed more.

So may all differences in the Church cease!

— Βαρνάβαν] The last notice of Barnabas in the Acts. The historian takes leave of him, as he first mentions him (iv. 36), in connexion with his native country, Cyprus.

40. Σίλαν] "Pro Barnabâ; et mox Timotheum pro Marco." (Bengel.)

Thus the Great Head of the Church overrules even the strifes of Christians, and makes them conducive to the spread of Christianity, and to the good of His faithful people.

Another source of comfort and of hope in times of division.

CH. XVI. 1. καὶ ἰδοὺ] "And lo!" introducing the mention of a gift from heaven to Paul, in the place of what he had lost. See on xv. 40.

— ἐκεῖ] at Lystra. Some have inferred from Acts xx. 4, that Timothy was of Derbe: but the present text appears to state that his domicile was at Lystra. And St. Paul connects Timothy with Lystra and Iconium (not mentioning Derbe) in 2 Tim. iii. 11. And here Timothy's father is said to have had a good testimony from those of Lystra and Iconium: Lystra in both passages being placed first.

— γυναικὸς Ἰουδαίας] Eunice. 2 Tim. i. 5.

3. περιέτεμεν αὐτόν] not from any supposition of the necessity of Circumcision, at this time, but because nothing profits without Charity; and because all things are to be done for edification, and no offence to be given to any. Therefore he circumcised Timothy. But Titus, being a Greek, was not compelled to be circumcised (Gal. ii. 3).

By circumcising Timothy St. Paul showed that he did not condemn those who still continued to observe the Levitical Law. (Cp. 1 Cor. ix. 20.) By not circumcising Titus he showed that he would not enforce that Law, and would communicate with those who judged it to be abrogated, and did not observe it. In the former case he proved his charity; in the latter, his courage; by both together he evinced his clear-sighted appreciation of the partial and preparatory character of the Law, which was now dead, but not yet deadly; and of the ever-living permanence and life-giving universality of the Gospel. See on Gal. ii. 3—15, 1 Cor. ix. 20.

b ch. 15. 28, 29. ὅτι Ἕλλην ὑπῆρχεν. 4 [b] Ὡς δὲ διεπορεύοντο τὰς πόλεις, παρεδίδοσαν αὐτοῖς φυλάσσειν τὰ δόγματα τὰ κεκριμένα ὑπὸ τῶν ἀποστόλων καὶ πρεσβυτέρων τῶν ἐν Ἰεροσολύμοις. 5 Αἱ μὲν οὖν ἐκκλησίαι ἐστερεοῦντο τῇ πίστει, καὶ ἐπερίσσευον τῷ ἀριθμῷ καθ' ἡμέραν.

6 Διῆλθον δὲ τὴν Φρυγίαν καὶ τὴν Γαλατικὴν χώραν, κωλυθέντες ὑπὸ τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος λαλῆσαι τὸν λόγον ἐν τῇ Ἀσίᾳ, 7 ἐλθόντες δὲ κατὰ τὴν Μυσίαν ἐπείραζον εἰς Βιθυνίαν πορεύεσθαι· καὶ οὐκ εἴασεν αὐτοὺς τὸ Πνεῦμα Ἰησοῦ.

c ch. 20. 6. 2 Cor. 2. 12. 2 Tim. 4. 13. 8 [c] Παρελθόντες δὲ τὴν Μυσίαν κατέβησαν εἰς Τρωάδα· 9 καὶ ὅραμα διὰ

---

6. διῆλθον—Γαλατικὴν χώραν] The sense is—They traversed Phrygia and the region of Galatia, having been forbidden by the Holy Spirit to preach the word in Asia (i. e. Lydia, Caria, and especially the region near Ephesus), and having come toward Mysia, they were attempting to go into Bithynia, but the Spirit of Jesus permitted them not: and having passed along Mysia, they arrived at Troas. Cp. Baumgarten, ii. 103, 4.

On the Gaulish origin of the population of Galatia, and on other local circumstances of that region, see Introduction to the Epistle to the Galatians, and Howson, i. p. 284.

St. Paul's purpose, it appears, was to travel westward from Lystra to Ephesus—the great maritime capital of Ionia—but he was not permitted by the Holy Spirit to do so; and he traversed Phrygia and Galatia.

At this time it would seem he planted the Churches of Galatia which are mentioned as in existence, and as confirmed afterwards by him, in ch. xviii. 23.

But St. Luke says nothing of their foundation. And why? Perhaps because the reader of Scripture could receive ample information concerning them from the Epistle of St. Paul to the Galatians.

And here it may be remarked generally, that, as with regard to the Evangelical History, the Holy Spirit says nothing in one Gospel concerning the existence of any of the other three, and yet each Gospel is adjusted to the others and to the whole Evangelical Canon; so in the Acts of the Apostles there is no mention of any of St. Paul's Epistles, or even of the fact that he wrote a single epistle; and yet in dictating the Acts by the agency of St. Luke, the Holy Spirit appears to have His Divine Eye on what had been already given, or would be hereafter given, by Himself to the World, in those Epistles, by the hand of St. Paul.

Here is the ground of the argument handled by Dr. Paley in his "Horæ Paulinæ." The Acts and the Epistles are from One Spirit. No wonder that there is a beautiful harmony among them, more deeply felt because not the result of effort and art, but of oneness of origin from the Spirit of Truth.

Besides, this silence of the Historian of the Acts concerning a very important part of St. Paul's missionary labours, may serve to remind the Christian reader, especially the Pastor, Teacher, and Missionary, that a record of their works on earth, even though it were in Scripture itself, is not to be too much desired, and never to be made the end of their efforts; but in this they are to rejoice, that "their names, though unknown on earth, are written in heaven." (Luke x. 20.)

This leads to the inquiry—

Why did the Holy Spirit forbid St. Paul to preach the word in Asia, and to go into Bithynia?

Perhaps He would thus show that what men consider most illustrious and attractive is of less account in His sight. He drew Paul away from Ionia and Ephesus, the wealthiest and most brilliant region of Asia Minor, in order that he might preach to the servile and semibarbarous tribes of Phrygia and Galatia.

Our Lord chose Galilee of the Gentiles for the scene of His earlier ministry. St. Philip was sent from the populous Samaria to the desert road "that leadeth to Gaza" (Acts viii. 26). And St. Paul is prevented by the Spirit from preaching in Asia, and under the guidance of the same Spirit, he goes and evangelizes Galatia.

The Missionaries of the Gospel in all ages need to be reminded, that poor Pagan villages (see Mark i. 38) and savage tribes are to be converted and sanctified by Christianity, as well as polite cities and cultivated regions; and they whose solitary lot is cast in wild and uncivilized countries will find comfort in the reflection, that Galilee was preferred by Christ to Judæa, and that St. Paul was sent by the Holy Spirit from Ionia to Phrygia and Galatia.

6, 7. κωλυθέντες—οὐκ εἴασεν] These two instances of the restraining power of the Holy Ghost, exerted to deter men from what seems abstractedly most desirable, are also proofs that if men labour aright for God, like St. Paul, they may thank Him for what they are not allowed to do, as well as for what they are enabled to do. They need His preventive as well as His assisting grace; they require a χαλινὸς for their unruly passions, as well as a κέντρον for their sluggish will.

This passage may also suggest a reason, why the Gospel was not published sooner, and why it has not been universally diffused. God sees what use men will make of His gifts, and He acts accordingly. See on x. 5.

The Holy Spirit did not now permit them to speak the Word in Asia; but soon afterwards enabled them to do so with great success, so that "all in Asia heard the Word, both Jews and Greeks" (xix. 10).

Here also is evidence of the Inspiration of the Apostles and Evangelists. They proved that they had the Spirit, by what they did. St. Luke here affirms that they were guided by the Spirit also in what they did not do. What good man could venture to say this, except he were authorized by the Spirit to do so?

May we not also say that here is an illustration of what may at first perhaps be perplexing in Holy Scripture? Many things are not mentioned there, which, if Scripture had been a human work, would not have been omitted. For example, in the Acts, many leading incidents in the history of St. Paul and the other Apostles are passed over. Doubtless the Holy Spirit had good reasons for withholding these things. Doubtless the Evangelists were sometimes restrained by the Holy Spirit from writing, as the Apostles were from preaching. There is Inspiration in His Silence.

See the Preface to this volume for further remarks on this subject.

7. κατὰ τὴν Μυσίαν] 'toward Mysia.' This use of κατὰ = versus, is seen in Acts ii. 10, τῆς Λιβύης τῆς κατὰ Κυρήνην: and see on xxvii. 12, λιμένα βλέποντα κατὰ Λίβα. Cp. Winer, § 49, p. 357.

— ἐπείραζον] they were essaying.

— τὸ Πνεῦμα Ἰησοῦ] Elz. has not Ἰησοῦ, but it is found in the best MSS., A, B, C, D, E, and in numerous Versions, and is received by Griesb., Scholz, Lachmann, Tischendorf, Bornemann, and Alford.

This reading deserves to be noted, as confirmatory of the doctrine of the procession of the Holy Spirit from the Son, as well as from the Father.

8. Τρωάδα] Alexandria Troas, now a "Colonia Juris Italici," and an "urbs libera." (See Howson, ch. viii. and xx.)

The Troad and Philippi (v. 12); two names associated with battle, and connecting the wars of the heroic age, and of the Homeric Deities, with those of the close of Greek History, and the conflicts of the Roman Empire.

But now they become the scenes of the victories of the Gospel of Peace,—a prelude to the moral change to be wrought by it in the World.

Observe St. Luke's modesty. He does not say that he joined St. Paul at Troas. He glides as it were imperceptibly into the Apostolic company; and we only know that he was a sharer in its perils and labours, by the adoption henceforth of the pronoun we. See below, xx. 5.

As Irenæus remarked (iii. 14) in the second century, "That Luke was an attendant on Paul, and his fellow-labourer in the Gospel, he himself makes manifest, not in a spirit of boasting, but constrained by the truth itself;" and then Irenæus quotes this verse of the Acts. St. Luke thus intimates that he was an αὐτόπτης of what he relates. And his testimony is stronger because he relates nothing specially of himself. He also notices when he is not present. See v. 40.

9. ὅραμα—ἀνὴρ Μακεδών] See below, v. 12. It would seem (as Chrys. observes, p. 804) that God proportions His revelations νυκτὸς ὤφθη τῷ Παύλῳ· [d] ἀνὴρ Μακεδών τις ἦν ἑστὼς, παρακαλῶν αὐτὸν καὶ λέγων, Διαβὰς εἰς Μακεδονίαν βοήθησον ἡμῖν. [10] Ὡς δὲ τὸ ὅραμα εἶδεν, εὐθέως ἐζητήσαμεν ἐξελθεῖν εἰς τὴν Μακεδονίαν, συμβιβάζοντες ὅτι προσκέκληται ἡμᾶς ὁ Κύριος εὐαγγελίσασθαι αὐτούς.

[11] Ἀναχθέντες οὖν ἀπὸ τῆς Τρωάδος εὐθυδρομήσαμεν εἰς Σαμοθρᾴκην, τῇ τε ἐπιούσῃ εἰς Νεάπολιν, [12] κἀκεῖθεν εἰς Φιλίππους, [e] ἥτις ἐστὶ πρώτη τῆς μερίδος τῆς Μακεδονίας πόλις, κολωνία. Ἦμεν δὲ ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ πόλει διατρίβοντες ἡμέρας τινάς· [13] τῇ τε ἡμέρᾳ τῶν σαββάτων ἐξήλθομεν τῆς πύλης παρὰ ποταμὸν, [f] οὗ ἐνομίζετο προσευχὴ εἶναι, καὶ καθίσαντες ἐλαλοῦμεν ταῖς

[d] ch. 10. 29.

[e] Phil. 1. 1.

[f] ch. 21. 5.

---

to the necessities of the case. When strong persuasion is requisite He sends an Angel; where less will serve, a man.

10. Μακεδονίαν] The Roman name for Northern Greece. "Romani postquàm Græcos in suam potestatem redegerant, universam Græciam in duas provincias, Macedoniam et Achaiam diviserunt, singulas præside regendas.

"Ista Macedoniam, quæ propriè dicitur, cum Illyrico, Epiro, Thessalia; Hæc, universam Græciam liberam, vel propriè Græciam dictam, ad quam adeò etiam Achaia strictè sic dicta pertinebat, complectebatur, Pausan. 7. 16, p. 563, καλοῦσι δὲ οὐχ Ἑλλάδος, ἀλλ' Ἀχαΐας ἡγεμόνα οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι, διότι ἐχειρώσαντο Ἕλληνας δι' Ἀχαιῶν τότε τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ προεστηκότων." (Kuin.)

The Roman Province of Achaia corresponded very nearly to that territory which is now called the Kingdom of Greece.

— συμβιβάζοντες—ἡμᾶς εὐαγγελίσασθαι] A remarkable expression, stating a fact of great importance, which almost escapes notice from the writer's modesty—that St. Luke himself took part with St. Paul in evangelizing the heathen; and that not only by writing, but by preaching, he did the work of an Evangelist.

12. Φιλίππους, ἥτις ἐστὶ πρώτη τῆς μερίδος τῆς Μακεδονίας π., κολωνία] What do the words πρώτη τῆς μερίδος mean?

(1) Some suppose them to signify the first city on St. Paul's route. See Wieseler, p. 38, and Howson, i. 341.

But this is not probable. The first would be Neapolis; and St. Luke says ἐστι, not ἦν.

(2) Nor can πρώτη πόλις τῆς μερίδος mean "the chief city of that region of Macedonia." See Liv. xlv. 29, who says that Æmilius Paulus, B.C. 167, after the subjugation of Perseus and his kingdom, reduced Macedonia into four parts, and made Amphipolis, Thessalonica, Pella, and Pelagonia, the capitals of their respective districts. Cp. Leake, Northern Greece, iii. 480.

(3) Hence πρώτη is interpreted by some (e.g. Rosenm., Kuin.) to mean a principal city of that region of Macedonia. The term πρώτη (primaria) was assigned as a title to cities of Asia; as may be seen on coins.

(4) It is said by others (e.g. Meyer) that κολωνία is to be joined with πόλις, and that St. Luke intends to say that Philippi was the principal colonial-city of that part or district of Macedonia. It was planted with Roman Colonists by Octavian, after the victory of Actium, and admitted to the Jus Italicum. See Dio Cass. li. p. 445. Plin. Nat. Hist. iv. 11. A somewhat similar explanation had been proposed by Casaubon. See Valck.

None of these explanations appear satisfactory. They all rest on the supposition, which is at least doubtful (see Baumg. ii. 115), that τῆς μερίδος is equivalent to ἐκείνης τῆς μ., i.e. "of that part of Macedonia."

(5) The true solution is probably to be found in the Hellenistic sense of the word μερὶς, viz. a frontier or strip of border-land, that by which it is divided (μερίζεται) from some other adjacent territory. See Ezek. xlv. 7. Here then μερὶς, so explained, would be the border-land, by which Macedonia is divided or parted off from Thrace. And of this μερὶς or confinium, Philippi was the chief City. It was colonized by the Romans as a border-city, to defend the frontier against Thrace. As Col. Leake says (Northern Greece, iii. 487), "From B.C. 146, to the reign of Augustus, the Romans had the troublesome duty of defending Macedonia against the people of Illyria and Thrace, and during that time they established the colonies at Philippi, Pella, Stobi, and Dium."

In the New Testament the words τὰ μέρη often occur in this sense, as equivalent to μεθόρια or confines. Matt. xv. 21; xvi. 13. Mark viii. 10. And in the Acts (ii. 10) we have τὰ μέρη τῆς Λιβύης, the confines of Libya, towards Cyrene.

So, in the LXX the word μερὶς is used for קָצֶה, an extremity. Ruth iii. 7.

The Vulg. here has "prima partis (not partis istius) Macedoniæ;" which seems to lead to the right sense.

St. Paul had been called to Greece by the man of Macedonia, and that call had been recognized and obeyed as the command of the Lord (xvi. 9, 10). He is now in Macedonia; and as soon as he has crossed the frontier, he begins his career as a soldier of Christ, warring against Satan, at Philippi the principal city, on the border land of Macedonia, and a military colony of Rome.

These particulars concerning Philippi seem to be specified by St. Luke for various reasons;

He has now brought us to the first city on Greek ground, in which the Gospel was preached by St. Paul.

The name Philippi, derived from Philip (Strabo, vii. p. 5), the ἀνὴρ Μακεδών (Demosth. i. p. 43), who subdued Greece, and the father of Alexander, who overran and conquered a great part of the known world, and founded the Third Great Monarchy (Daniel viii. 21), suggests to the reader the contrast between the subjugation of Nations of this world, of which Philip and Alexander were the Conquerors, and the triumphs now to be achieved by Christ in the peaceful march of St. Paul.

The words Μακεδονίας and κολωνία call attention to the triumphs of the Gospel at Philippi, a principal city of Northern Greece (called by the Romans 'Macedonia'), and also as representing in those parts the main element of the Gentile world, by its connexion as a military Colony with Rome, the Fourth Monarchy (Dan. vii. 7. 19), the Mistress of the world at that time.

Hence St. Paul's acts at Philippi are dwelt on by St. Luke as a specimen and rehearsal of his preaching in Greece and Italy, and of the future achievements of the Gospel in the Roman Empire and in the World.

— κολωνία] a Roman Colony—a miniature of Rome. "Coloniæ Populi Romani quasi effigies parvæ simulacraque" (Aul. Gell. xvi. 13). See preceding note.

Coins of Philippi of the date of St. Paul's visit have the inscription "COL: (i.e. Colonia) AUG(usta) JUL(ia) PHILIP(pensis)." See Akermann, p. 45. Kitto, p. 337. Compare Howson, i. 345, on the rights of Roman Colonies.

13. πύλης] So A, B, C, D. Elz. πόλεως.

— ποταμὸν] Not the Strymon (as has been supposed by some) which was some miles distant, but a smaller stream, the Gangites, or, as Herodotus calls it, Angitas; which flows into the Zygactes, and gives its name to the united streams. See Leake, iii. p. 225. Howson, i. p. 346.

The name Krenides, or fountains,—formerly borne by Philippi,—was derived from this stream.

— οὗ ἐνομίζετο προσευχὴ εἶναι] where a meeting for prayer was wont to be held. See v. 16.

Perhaps there was a Proseucha, or enclosed place for prayer there. See Epiphanius (Hær. lxxx.), who describes the Proseuchæ as places of a semicircular form (θεατροειδεῖς), without roofs, and outside the cities. Cp. Mede's Essay, Book i. Discourse 18, p. 67.

Such προσευχαὶ were commonly near the sea or rivers, as here, for the sake of the lustrations and ablutions of the Levitical Law (see Joseph. Ant. xiv. 10. 23. Cp. Juvenal, iii. 11—13).

The difficult words "jura, verpe, per Anchialum," in Martial, xi. 94, have been explained from this practice. See Valck.

Hence also they afforded a convenient preparation for the Gospel, as supplying water for baptizing the converts made by the preaching of the Gospel there.

It seems that at Philippi, a Roman Colony, where the Jews were hated and despised (see v. 13), they had no Synagogue within the walls of the City, and were only authorized to have a Proseucha, and that outside the city gate. Cp. Ammonius, in Caten., who says, μὴ οὔσης ἐκεῖ συναγωγῆς διὰ τὸ σπάνιον, παρὰ τὸν ποταμὸν ἔξω τῆς πόλεως λάθρα συνήγοντο.

It was in accordance with St. Paul's uniformly charitable spirit toward the Jews, his bitter enemies, that he even went out of the city to their proseucha on the Sabbath Day, and preached there, though he had only a few women to hear him.

Cp. on xvii. 1.

συνελθούσαις γυναιξί. 14 Καί τις γυνὴ ὀνόματι Λυδία, πορφυρόπωλις πόλεως Θυατείρων, σεβομένη τὸν Θεὸν, ἤκουεν· ἧς ὁ Κύριος διήνοιξε τὴν καρδίαν, g Gen. 19. 3. & 33. 11. Judg. 19. 21. Luke 24. 29. Heb. 13. 2. προσέχειν τοῖς λαλουμένοις ὑπὸ τοῦ Παύλου. 15 g Ὡς δὲ ἐβαπτίσθη, καὶ ὁ οἶκος αὐτῆς, παρεκάλεσε λέγουσα, Εἰ κεκρίκατέ με πιστὴν τῷ Κυρίῳ εἶναι, εἰσελθόντες εἰς τὸν οἶκόν μου μένετε. καὶ παρεβιάσατο ἡμᾶς.
h 1 Sam. 28. 7. ch. 19. 24. 16 h Ἐγένετο δὲ, πορευομένων ἡμῶν εἰς τὴν προσευχὴν, παιδίσκην τινὰ ἔχουσαν πνεῦμα Πύθωνος ἀπαντῆσαι ἡμῖν, ἥτις ἐργασίαν πολλὴν παρεῖχε

---

14. Θυατείρων] in Lydia. As Alford observes, "Though they had been forbidden to preach the word in Asia (xvi. 6), and sent by the Spirit to Greece, their first convert in Greece is an Asiatic."

— σεβομένη τὸν Θεόν] a Proselyte. See xiii. 50.

— ἤκουεν] was listening.

15. καὶ ὁ οἶκος αὐτῆς] An argument for Baptism of Infants. See xvi. 33; xviii. 8. 1 Cor. i. 16.

"Quis credat (says Bengel) in tot familiis nullum fuisse infantem, et Judæos circumcidendis, Gentiles lustrandis illis, assuetos, non etiam obtulisse illos baptismo?"

The Church of England (Art. XXVII.) affirms that "the Baptism of Infants is most agreeable with the Institution of Christ." And in her Baptismal office she grounds this assertion on our Lord's declarations (see on John iii. 3. 5) and on His gracious invitation (Mark x. 14) to Infants, βρέφη. See on Luke xviii. 15.

In this she follows the exposition of the Primitive Church, who, as Origen says (in Epist. ad Rom. lib. v.), "received the Baptism of Infants from the Apostles." See also the Synodical Epistle of the Third Council of Carthage under Cyprian, A.D. 253. Routh, R. S. iii. p. 74, or in Cyprian's Epistles lix. or lxiv., where the Sixty-six Bishops there assembled say in answer to Fidus, "As to the case of Infants, who, you allege, ought not to be baptized within the second or third day after their birth, and that the law of circumcision should be regarded, which led you to imagine that none should be baptized before the eighth day after his birth—this Synod was of a very different opinion. Not one of us agreed with you, but we resolved unanimously that the grace of God should be denied to none. For since the Lord says (Luke ix. 56), 'The Son of Man came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them,' we must take care, as far as in us lies, that no soul be lost. All persons, whether adults or infants, are equally objects of divine grace, as Scripture declares."

More has been said by the Editor, on this point, in Letter viii. on the Church of Rome, and in Occasional Sermons (Serm. iii. p. 51—66), where objections to the above statements are considered.

On the allegation of some Expositors here, that the Children of Heathens could not have been baptized by the Apostles, because their parents were not holy (cp. 1 Cor. vii. 14), see the answer of S. Augustine to Boniface, Epist. 98, Vol. ii. p. 394, and Hooker, III. i. 12; V. lxiv. 5.

— παρεβιάσατο] She gently constrained us. (See Valck.) They did not comply at once, lest they should appear to have come to preach the Gospel for personal convenience or advantage.

16. πνεῦμα Πύθωνος] A, B, C*, D have Πύθωνα—which may perhaps be the true reading: α and ος (OC) are often confused in MSS. See Porson, ad Hecub. 788.

A remarkable expression. This damsel was possessed with an evil Spirit (see v. 18, 19). Why then does not the Evangelist St. Luke call it by the names used in the Gospel, viz. δαιμόνιον, or πνεῦμα ἀκάθαρτον, but πνεῦμα Πύθωνος, or πνεῦμα Πύθωνα, a word never occurring in the Gospels?

Probably for the following reasons—

St. Paul was now on new ground—in Greece (see above v. 13). He was in a Greek city, a Roman colony. A new scene now opens before him; a new era in the History of the Church. He has not only to war with Jewish prejudice. He has to encounter Satan in some of his most fiendish forms. He has now to confront the idolatries and superstitions of the West.

One of the greatest difficulties which the Gospel had to contend with there, was in the power exercised over the Greek and Roman mind by Oracles, Enchantments, Divination, Soothsaying, and Sorcery. That Power showed itself in the νυμφόληπτοι, εὐρύκλεις, ἐγγαστρίμυθοι, θεοφόρητοι, φοιβόληπτοι, cerriti, larvati, lymphatici, &c. of Heathenism. See Aug. de Civ. Dei, vii. 6. Euseb. Præp. Ev. iv. 5, and other numerous authorities cited in Biscoe, p. 283—5.

Here St. Paul meets that Power face to face in the streets of Philippi. How was it to be described? By the word Python. This word would sound a note clear and strong on the Greek and Roman ear. Πυθὼν, Πύθιος, Πυθία, Πυθόνισσα, Pytho, Pythius, Pythia, Pythonissa. How much was contained in those words!

ΠΥΘΩΝ was the prophetic Serpent at Delphi—the ὀμφαλὸς τῆς γῆς, the centre and focus of Gentile Divination. (See Callim. H. ad Apoll. 100. Ovid, Met. i. 438. Apollodor. i. p. 44, Heyne. Hygin. fab. 140. Plutarch, de Orac. Defect. ii. p. 417, and others, cited by Kuin., and concerning the Pythia herself, see Virgil, Æn. vi. 46.)

The Python or Serpent gave his name and place to the prophetic Deity of the Gentile world; the successor of the Serpent at Delphi was the Pythian Phœbus or Apollo.

And from him all who claimed the powers of divination received their title, and were called Pythons. Hence Hesychius, Πύθων· δαιμόνιον μαντικόν. Alberti Glossar. Gr. p. 75, Πύθωνος· δαιμονίου μαντικοῦ, οὕτω λεγομένου. "Translatum est hoc nomen ad homines ipsos, qui dei cujusdam afflatu futura prædicere posse credebantur, nominatim ita dicti sunt ἐγγαστρίμυθοι, Plutarch. de oraculorum defectu p. 414, τοὺς ἐγγαστριμύθους Εὐρυκλέας πάλαι, νυνὶ Πύθωνας προσαγορευόμενοι, ventriloquos Eurycleas (ab Eurycle inventore hujus divinationis) olim, nunc Pythonas vocant. Hesychius: Πύθων, ὁ ἐγγαστρίμυθος ἢ ἐγγαστρίμαντις. Id. Εὐρυκλῆς, ὁ ἐγγαστρίμυθος, ἦν δὲ γένος μαντέων, οὓς ὁμωνύμως Εὐρυκλεῖς ἔλεγον. Suidas: ἐγγαστρίμυθος, ἐγγαστρίμαντις, ὃν νῦν τινες Πύθωνα, Σοφοκλῆς δὲ στερνόμαντιν, Πλάτων ὁ φιλόσοφος, Εὐρυκλέα ἀπὸ Εὐρυκλέους, τοιούτου μάντεως." (Kuin.)

Therefore this damsel at Philippi, with her Pythonistic possession, was, according to her degree, a representative of the Pythia who sat on the tripod at Delphi, and who delivered the responses in the name of the Pythian Apollo, the successor of the Serpent, and brought much gain and renown to her κύριοι, or masters, at that place, and deceived the world by her sorceries. Hence St. Luke calls this Spirit at Philippi, Python. And thus the Holy Spirit by St. Luke's mouth taught certain solemn truths to the Gentile world. He warned them that the Spirit with which they dealt so fondly and familiarly in their Oracles and Witchcrafts was an unclean Spirit. It is denounced and ejected as such by St. Paul. The Python, which they themselves said was a serpent, was indeed a minister of "the old Serpent" (2 Cor. xi. 3. Rev. xii. 9; xx. 2), an agent of Satan; and in dealing with him, in these Oracles, they "worshipped Devils instead of God" (1 Cor. x. 20). As Chrys. says here, ὁρᾷς ὅ τι Ἀπόλλων δαίμων ἐστίν. Indeed it may be added that Apollo, and all his diviners, were ministers of Apollyon himself (Rev. ix. 11).

In these Oracles and Divinations of the Gentile world there were many frauds and cheats. But counterfeits prove the reality; and the phenomena of Witchcraft in the heathen world are too numerous to be explained away. As Dr. Barrow says (Serm. ix. vol. iv. p. 213), "Concerning power of Enchantments implying the co-operation of Invisible Powers, all sorts of intercourse and confederacy, formal or virtual, with bad Spirits, he that shall affirm them to be mere fiction and delusion, must with exceeding immodesty and rudeness charge the world with vanity," &c. See also Cicero, de Div. i. 5, and 82—88. Van Dale, de Orac., and others, cited by Biscoe, p. 299.

(1) It is worthy of remark, that the Hebrew word which describes a "familiar spirit" is אוֹב (Obh). This is used in the Old Testament, in Lev. xx. 6, 27. Deut xviii. 11. Isa. xxix. 3. And it is also employed 1 Sam. xxviii. 7, 8, to describe the Spirit with whom the Witch of Endor had commerce, who is called by the LXX an ἐγγαστρίμυθος. May it not be, that this word Obh has some connexion with the Greek ὄφις, or serpent,—the word used by St. Paul and St. John to describe the Old Serpent, the Devil? (2 Cor. xi. 3. Rev. xii. 9; xx. 2.) This conjecture may be confirmed by the following consideration;

(2) It is allowed that the Greek and Latin words πύθιος, πυθόνισσα, πυνθάνομαι, πευστήριος, are traceable to πύθων or Python, the Prophetic Serpent of the Great Gentile Oracle. (Strabo, ix. p. 422. Macrob. Sat. i. 17.)

May not that word Python be carried up higher to the τοῖς κυρίοις αὐτῆς μαντευομένη. 17 Αὕτη κατακολουθήσασα τῷ Παύλῳ καὶ ἡμῖν ἔκραζε λέγουσα, [i] Οὗτοι οἱ ἄνθρωποι δοῦλοι τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ ὑψίστου εἰσὶν, i Gen. 14. 18—22. ch. 18. 26. Heb. 10. 20.

οἵτινες καταγγέλλουσιν ἡμῖν ὁδὸν σωτηρίας. 18 [k] Τοῦτο δὲ ἐποίει ἐπὶ πολλὰς k Mark 16. 17.
ἡμέρας. Διαπονηθεὶς δὲ ὁ Παῦλος, καὶ ἐπιστρέψας τῷ πνεύματι εἶπε, Παραγγέλλω σοι ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐξελθεῖν ἀπ' αὐτῆς· καὶ ἐξῆλθεν αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ. 19 [l] Ἰδόντες δὲ οἱ κύριοι αὐτῆς ὅτι ἐξῆλθεν ἡ ἐλπὶς τῆς ἐργασίας l 2 Cor. 6. 5.
αὐτῶν, ἐπιλαβόμενοι τὸν Παῦλον καὶ τὸν Σίλαν εἵλκυσαν εἰς τὴν ἀγορὰν ἐπὶ τοὺς ἄρχοντας· 20 [m] καὶ προσαγαγόντες αὐτοὺς τοῖς στρατηγοῖς, εἶπον, Οὗτοι m 1 Kings 18. 17. ch. 17. 6.
οἱ ἄνθρωποι ἐκταράσσουσιν ἡμῶν τὴν πόλιν, Ἰουδαῖοι ὑπάρχοντες· 21 καὶ καταγγέλλουσιν ἔθη, ἃ οὐκ ἔξεστιν ἡμῖν παραδέχεσθαι οὐδὲ ποιεῖν, Ῥωμαίοις οὖσι. 22 [n] Καὶ συνεπέστη ὁ ὄχλος κατ' αὐτῶν, καὶ οἱ στρατηγοὶ περιρρήξαντες n 2 Cor. 11. 25. 1 Thess. 2. 2.
αὐτῶν τὰ ἱμάτια ἐκέλευον ῥαβδίζειν· 23 πολλάς τε ἐπιθέντες αὐτοῖς πληγὰς Phil. 1. 13.

Hebrew פִּתֹן (phethen), or Serpent? Ps. lviii. 4, and Isa. xi. 8. Ps. xci. 13?

It is remarkable, that this last-named passage contains a prophecy concerning the Victory to be achieved by Christ over the Great Python, or old ὄφις or Serpent, the Devil. The casting out of the Python-spirit by the Apostle St. Paul at Philippi, acting by the power of Christ, may be regarded as a visible exhibition of the operation of Christ in the Gospel, bruising the serpent's head (Gen. iii. 15), and treading the Dragon, Satan, the Old Serpent, beneath His feet; healing, by His death, the wounds inflicted on them by the fiery serpent, and delivering the World from the grasp in which he then held it by means of Oracles and Incantations, and all the sorceries of Divination. It may be considered as a specimen of the fulfilment of the prophecies, which attribute such powers to Christ; and of Christ's promise to His disciples that He would enable them to overcome "all the power of the enemy" (Luke x. 19; cp. Rom. xvi. 20); and as a presage of His full and final triumph over Satan, that Old Serpent, which deceiveth the world. (Rev. xii. 9; xx. 10.)

17, 18. οὗτοι οἱ ἄ. δοῦλοι τοῦ Θεοῦ—παραγγέλλω σοι] This utterance of the Python-spirit at Philippi gives much probability to the assertion of ancient Christian writers, that the Evil Spirit who deceived the Gentile world by Oracles, gave testimony in them to Christ. (See Euseb., Dem. Evang. iii. 6, and ix. 10. August., de Civ. Dei, xix. 23. De Consensu Evang. i. 18, and others quoted by Dr. Jenkin, on Christianity, i. p. 354, and Mede's interesting Essay, Works, p. 194, bk. i. Disc. xxxvi.)

Satan sometimes speaks the truth in order that he may lie with greater success. See above on Mark i. 25, where it will be seen, that in repudiating the homage of the Father of Lies, even when he spoke the truth, St. Paul imitated the example of Christ.

Praise is not seemly in the mouth of a sinner, for it was not sent him of the Lord; (Ecclus. xv. 9. Prov. xxvi. 7.) Much less is it seemly in the mouth of the Evil One, says Chrys. and Didymus here (in Caten.), The Apostle shows that testimony from Satan to the preachers of the truth is not to be received; for it is to be feared, that evil spirits, having gained men's confidence by what they speak truly, may overreach the simple by an admixture of falsehood, and so cause their ruin. It is well said by Arator here (ii. 386),

> " ——— ——— Professio vera
> Mendaci de teste sonat, vocemque fidelem
> Perfidus auctor habet; sed non debetur honori
> Quod cogit formido loqui, nec mente cohæret > Nudus amore timor."

17. ἡμῖν] So A, C, G, H. The Evil Spirit "transforms himself into an Angel of Light" (2 Cor. xi. 14), and pretends that the Gospel is for himself as well as for the world.—Elz. ὑμῖν.

19. ἐξῆλθεν] Observe the repetition of this word. Paul commanded the Spirit to come out, ἐξελθεῖν (v. 18). And the Spirit ἐξῆλθεν immediately (v. 18). And the masters of the damsel saw that (v. 19) the hope of their gains ἐξῆλθεν.

The hope of their profits went out with the going out of the Evil Spirit,—a proof of the reality of the possession. Indeed, it seems that the Holy Spirit has taken special care that no reasonable person should call in question the fact, that the damsel was possessed by the Evil Spirit, and that the Evil Spirit was permitted by God to exercise certain powers by her instrumentality.

— ἡ ἐλπὶς τῆς ἐργασίας] The hope of gain from their craft; a clue to a powerful motive of Persecutions against Christianity. Both the Persecutions from Heathenism mentioned in the Acts are from this source. In the account of both, the word ἐργασία occurs. See here, and xix. 24, 25. Cp. Pliny's letter to Trajan, x. 97, 98; and Lardner's Remarks, iv. 11—30, and the excellent observations in Blunt's Lectures, pp. 149—153: "The Priesthood in all its branches, Flamens, Augurs, Haruspices, contemplated the advance of Christianity with dismay. It emptied their Temples, curtailed their sacrifices, reduced their profits, exposed their frauds."

How great were the difficulties it had to encounter in these respects, and how noble the triumphs it achieved! And how much yet remains for it to perform even in Christendom itself, where the Corruptions of Christianity are deeply rooted in Covetousness, and Superstition is propagated by Love of Lucre! Cp. on 2 Cor. ii. 17.

20. στρατηγοῖς] The Prætors, or Duumviri, of the Roman colony (Cicero, de Leg. Agrar. 34),—a title still surviving (A.D. 1750) in the Italian word Stradigo. (Wetstein.) Hence the appeal in v. 21 to the rights and privileges of the Citizens of Philippi as a colonial city of Rome.

See further on xvii. 6, and Howson, i. 345.

The Roman character of Philippi is brought forward in this narrative, which is a prelude to the History of the struggle of the Gospel with the military and imperial power of the Heathen Mistress of the World.

— Ἰουδαῖοι] A specimen of the difficulties and dangers which the Gospel had often to encounter from the heathen, by being confounded with Judaism, and by being exposed to all the obloquy with which the Jews were regarded by the Romans.

Christianity was hated as Judaism by the heathens, and as worse than heathenism by the Jews. It had to contend against Judaism and Heathenism, and it triumphed over both.

This charge against Paul and Silas as Jews, would be more effective at this time at Philippi, a Roman colony, because the Jews had lately caused disturbances at Rome, and had therefore been expelled from it by an imperial edict of Claudius (xviii. 2).

21. ἔθη, ἃ οὐκ ἔξεστιν κ.τ.λ.] By the Roman Laws Judaism was a "religio licita" for Jews; but they were not allowed to make proselytes among the Romans, who were forbidden by the laws, under penalties, to receive circumcision; though in this and other religious matters the Laws often lay in abeyance. See Neander, Church Hist. i. 89.

22. ῥαβδίζειν] to beat with the lictors' rods.

St. Paul, by asserting his citizenship at Jerusalem, and by obtaining exemption thereby (xxii. 25), showed that his sufferings at Philippi were voluntary, and that he had divine direction advising him how to suffer as well as to do, in full faith that his sufferings would, under God's providence, conduce to the furtherance of the Gospel.

If St. Paul had pleaded at Philippi his Roman citizenship, he would not have been beaten, and cast into prison. And we should not have had the beautiful and instructive history of his Christian faith and joy, uttering itself in psalmody at midnight; the jailor and prisoners and other inhabitants of Philippi, would not have had the evidence to the truth of the Gospel in the earthquake which shook the prison, and opened its doors, and made the chains to fall from the hands of the prisoners. The jailor and his household would not have become citizens of the kingdom of heaven.

May we not therefore say, that the same Divine Spirit Who had recently restrained St. Paul from preaching the word in Asia and Bithynia, withheld him from asserting his Roman citizenship at Philippi? And may not the good effects which we see ensuing from the restraint in the latter case, be designed to remind and assure us that no less beneficial results arose, though not known by us, from the preventive operations of the Holy Ghost in the latter?

Yet, such is the treatment which this divine history has ἔβαλον εἰς φυλακὴν, παραγγείλαντες τῷ δεσμοφύλακι ἀσφαλῶς τηρεῖν αὐτούς· 24 ὃς παραγγελίαν τοιαύτην λαβὼν, ἔβαλεν αὐτοὺς εἰς τὴν ἐσωτέραν φυλακὴν, o ch. 4. 31. καὶ τοὺς πόδας αὐτῶν ἠσφαλίσατο εἰς τὸ ξύλον. 25 ° Κατὰ δὲ τὸ μεσονύκτιον Παῦλος καὶ Σίλας προσευχόμενοι ὕμνουν τὸν Θεόν· ἐπηκροῶντο δὲ αὐτῶν p ch. 5. 19. & 12. 7. οἱ δέσμιοι. 26 p Ἄφνω δὲ σεισμὸς ἐγένετο μέγας, ὥστε σαλευθῆναι τὰ θεμέλια τοῦ δεσμωτηρίου· ἀνεῴχθησάν τε παραχρῆμα αἱ θύραι πᾶσαι, καὶ πάντων τὰ δεσμὰ ἀνέθη. 27 q Ἔξυπνος δὲ γενόμενος ὁ δεσμοφύλαξ, καὶ ἰδὼν ἀνεῳγμένας τὰς θύρας τῆς φυλακῆς, σπασάμενος μάχαιραν ἔμελλεν ἑαυτὸν ἀναιρεῖν, νομίζων ἐκπεφευγέναι τοὺς δεσμίους. 28 r Ἐφώνησε δὲ φωνῇ μεγάλῃ ὁ Παῦλος λέγων, Μηδὲν πράξῃς σεαυτῷ κακόν· ἅπαντες γάρ ἐσμεν ἐνθάδε. 29 Αἰτήσας δὲ φῶτα εἰσεπήδησε, καὶ ἔντρομος γενόμενος προσέπεσε τῷ Παύλῳ καὶ τῷ Σίλᾳ· q Luke 3. 10. ch. 2. 37. & 9. 6. 30 s καὶ προαγαγὼν αὐτοὺς ἔξω ἔφη, Κύριοι, τί με δεῖ ποιεῖν, ἵνα σωθῶ;

r John 3. 16, 36. & 6. 47. 1 John 5. 10. 31 t Οἱ δὲ εἶπον, Πίστευσον ἐπὶ τὸν Κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, καὶ σωθήσῃ σὺ, καὶ ὁ οἶκός σου. 32 Καὶ ἐλάλησαν αὐτῷ τὸν λόγον τοῦ Κυρίου, σὺν πᾶσι τοῖς ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ αὐτοῦ. 33 Καὶ παραλαβὼν αὐτοὺς ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ὥρᾳ τῆς νυκτὸς ἔλουσεν ἀπὸ τῶν πληγῶν, καὶ ἐβαπτίσθη αὐτὸς καὶ οἱ αὐτοῦ πάντες παραs Luke 5. 29. & 19. 6. χρῆμα· 34 s ἀναγαγών τε αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ παρέθηκε τράπεζαν, καὶ ἠγαλλιάσατο πανοικὶ πεπιστευκὼς τῷ Θεῷ.

35 Ἡμέρας δὲ γενομένης, ἀπέστειλαν οἱ στρατηγοὶ τοὺς ῥαβδούχους λέγοντες, Ἀπόλυσον τοὺς ἀνθρώπους ἐκείνους. 36 Ἀπήγγειλε δὲ ὁ δεσμοφύλαξ τοὺς λόγους τούτους πρὸς τὸν Παῦλον, Ὅτι ἀπεστάλκασιν οἱ στρατηγοὶ ἵνα ἀπολυt ch. 22. 25. θῆτε· νῦν οὖν ἐξελθόντες πορεύεσθε ἐν εἰρήνῃ. 37 t Ὁ δὲ Παῦλος ἔφη πρὸς αὐτούς, Δείραντες ἡμᾶς δημοσίᾳ ἀκατακρίτους, ἀνθρώπους Ῥωμαίους ὑπάρχοντας, ἔβαλον εἰς φυλακὴν, καὶ νῦν λάθρα ἡμᾶς ἐκβάλλουσιν; Οὐ γάρ· ἀλλὰ ἐλθόντες αὐτοὶ ἡμᾶς ἐξαγαγέτωσαν. 38 Ἀπήγγειλαν δὲ τοῖς στρατηγοῖς οἱ ῥαβδοῦχοι τὰ ῥήματα ταῦτα· καὶ ἐφοβήθησαν ἀκούσαντες ὅτι Ῥωμαῖοί εἰσι, u Matt. 8. 34. 39 u καὶ ἐλθόντες παρεκάλεσαν αὐτοὺς, καὶ ἐξαγαγόντες ἠρώτων ἐξελθεῖν τῆς v ver. 14, &c. πόλεως. 40 v Ἐξελθόντες δὲ ἐκ τῆς φυλακῆς εἰσῆλθον πρὸς τὴν Λυδίαν· καὶ ἰδόντες τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς, παρεκάλεσαν αὐτοὺς, καὶ ἐξῆλθον.

---

received in modern times, it has been alleged by many (e.g. De Wette) that St. Paul was hindered by the tumult from pleading his citizenship; and others (Baur and Zeller), have advanced a step further, and perverted his forbearance into an argument that he did not really possess the right which he afterwards claimed!

24. τὸ ξύλον] "quod κᾶλον, et ξυλοπέδη, etiam ποδοκάκη et ποδοστράβη, ab Hebræis טד (Job. xiii. 27. xxxiii. 11) vocatur: cui et cervix, et manus et pedes per quinque foramina inserebantur, πεντεσύριγγον propterea quoque vocatum Aristoph. Equitt. 1046. Latini nervum vocant Plaut. Captiv. iii. 5. 71, Nam noctu nervo vinctus custodiebatur." (Kuin.)

With this statement of St. Paul's sufferings at Philippi, compare his own words to the Philippians in his Epistle, i. 29, 30, and see Paley, H. P. p. 120.

25. ὕμνουν] St. Peter sleeps in prison between the two soldiers (Acts xii. 6); St. Paul and Silas sing in the stocks. "Nihil crus sentit in nervo quum animus in cœlo est. Etsi corpus detinetur omnia spiritui patent." (Tertullian, ad Mart. 2, cited by Neander.) Such is the joy shed by the Holy Ghost into the heart of the Christian.

— ἐπηκροῶντο] more than "heard;" they were listening to their music as an ἥδιστον ἀκρόαμα. The Prison became an Odëum.

27. ἑαυτὸν ἀναιρεῖν] as Brutus and others had done here (Plutarch, Brut. 52), and a great number of the proscribed Romans after the battle of Philippi, followed his example. Self-murder was approved by the Stoics (Senec. Epist. 12. 17. 24. 58, 59. Plin. Ep. i. 12. Biscoe, p. 349), and was then a common resort in perplexity and trouble; an incident suggestive of what the Gospel has done to prevent it. The jailor was about to put himself to death, St. Paul tells him to "do himself no harm," and opens to him the way of everlasting life.

On the sin of suicide, see Jerome on Amos v. Augustin, ii. p. 918, and de Civ. Dei i. 20, and contra Gaudentium, vol. ix. p. 1006, and Bp. Andrewes on the Decalogue, p. 404.

29. φῶτα] neuter plural; cp. James. i. 17. So that all were witnesses of the miracle.

33. ἔλουσεν—ἐβαπτίσθη] ἔλουσεν, καὶ ἐλούθη (Chrys.), a remarkable instance of divine reward for human love. The Jailor washed the blood from their wounds, and was by their ministry liberated from a spiritual prison, and washed from his sins by Baptism, rendered efficacious by the blood of Christ and by faith in Him.

35. ῥαβδούχους] the lictors, who attended the Magistrates of the Colony.

— λέγοντες] This sudden change was perhaps occasioned by what they had heard of the earthquake in the preceding night.

37. Ῥωμαίους] by birth; cp. Acts xxii. 25–29. Some of his ancestors had obtained the "jus civitatis," by purchase, as Maximin. says on Acts xxiii. 29, παρέχοντες δόσεις ἀπεγράφοντο Ῥωμαῖοι, καὶ ἔτρεχεν εἰς τὸ γένος τὸ ὄνομα. "Unde colligas ex opulentâ familiâ fuisse Paulum." (Rosenm.)

"Lex Porcia (passed A.U.C. 506) virgas ab omnium civium Romanorum corpore amovet." Cicero pro Rabirio, c. 3, and In Verrem, v. 66, "Facinus est vinciri civem Romanum, scelus verberari."

On St. Paul's waiving his right of citizenship, and submitting to be beaten, see above, v. 22.

— οὐ γάρ] "Non, utique." On γὰρ (= γε ἄρα) thus used, see Winer, § 53, p. 396, note. Klotz ad Devar. de particulis, ii. p. 242. (Hackett.) The ἄρα serves to sum up the premises on which the assertion is made; the γε strengthens the assertion. Cp. on Luke xviii. 14, ἢ γὰρ ἐκεῖνος.

40. πρὸς τὴν Λυδίαν] Cp. xxviii. 8, πρὸς ὃν εἰσελθών. So xxi. 18, εἰσῆει πρὸς Ἰάκωβον. See also x. 3; xvii. 2.

— ἐξῆλθον] It seems that St. Luke himself remained at Philippi. Cp. xvii. 1.

It was St. Paul's habit, when he had preached the Gospel in XVII. [1] Διοδεύσαντες δὲ τὴν Ἀμφίπολιν καὶ Ἀπολλωνίαν, ἦλθον εἰς Θεσσαλονίκην, ὅπου ἦν ἡ συναγωγὴ τῶν Ἰουδαίων. [2] [a] Κατὰ δὲ τὸ εἰωθὸς τῷ Παύλῳ εἰσῆλθε πρὸς αὐτοὺς, καὶ ἐπὶ σάββατα τρία διελέγετο αὐτοῖς ἀπὸ τῶν γραφῶν, [3] [b] διανοίγων καὶ παρατιθέμενος, ὅτι τὸν Χριστὸν ἔδει παθεῖν καὶ ἀναστῆναι ἐκ νεκρῶν, καὶ ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Χριστὸς Ἰησοῦς, ὃν ἐγὼ καταγγέλλω ὑμῖν. [4] [c] Καί τινες ἐξ αὐτῶν ἐπείσθησαν, καὶ προσεκληρώθησαν τῷ Παύλῳ καὶ τῷ Σίλᾳ, τῶν τε σεβομένων Ἑλλήνων πλῆθος πολὺ, γυναικῶν τε τῶν πρώτων οὐκ ὀλίγαι. [5] Ζηλώσαντες δὲ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι καὶ προσλαβόμενοι τῶν ἀγοραίων ἄνδρας τινὰς πονηροὺς, καὶ ὀχλοποιήσαντες ἐθορύβουν τὴν πόλιν· ἐπιστάντες τε τῇ οἰκίᾳ Ἰάσονος, ἐζήτουν αὐτοὺς ἀγαγεῖν εἰς τὸν δῆμον· [6] [d] μὴ εὑρόντες δὲ αὐτοὺς ἔσυρον τὸν Ἰάσονα καί τινας ἀδελφοὺς ἐπὶ τοὺς πολιτάρχας βοῶντες, Ὅτι οἱ τὴν οἰκουμένην ἀναστατώσαντες οὗτοι καὶ ἐνθάδε πάρεισιν· [7] [e] οὓς ὑποδέδεκται Ἰάσων. Καὶ οὗτοι πάντες ἀπέναντι τῶν δογμάτων Καίσαρος πράσσουσι, βασιλέα λέγοντες ἕτερον εἶναι, Ἰησοῦν. [8] Ἐτάραξαν δὲ τὸν ὄχλον, καὶ τοὺς πολιτάρχας ἀκούοντας ταῦτα. [9] Καὶ λαβόντες τὸ ἱκανὸν παρὰ τοῦ Ἰάσονος καὶ τῶν λοιπῶν ἀπέλυσαν αὐτούς.

[10] [f] Οἱ δὲ ἀδελφοὶ εὐθέως διὰ τῆς νυκτὸς ἐξέπεμψαν τόν τε Παῦλον καὶ τὸν Σίλαν εἰς Βέροιαν· οἵτινες παραγενόμενοι, εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν τῶν Ἰουδαίων ἀπῆεσαν. [11] [g] Οὗτοι δὲ ἦσαν εὐγενέστεροι τῶν ἐν Θεσσαλονίκῃ· οἵτινες ἐδέξ-

a Luke 4. 16.
b Ps. 22. 7. Isa. 53. 3—10. Matt. 16. 21. Luke 24. 26, 46. John 1. 42. c ver. 17. & 28. 24.
d ch. 16. 20.
e Luke 23. 2. John 19. 12.
f ch. 9. 25.
g Isa. 34. 16. Luke 16 29. John 5 39.

---

a City, to leave some behind him there to continue the work he had begun. See below, on xx. 5.

CH. XVII. 1. διοδεύσαντες] The ὁδὸς on which they travelled from Philippi to Thessalonica, was the Via Egnatia, the Greek continuation of the Via Appia, on which St. Paul afterwards travelled in his way from Puteoli to Rome. It is said by some to have been called Egnatia, from the town "Gratia lymphis iratis extructa," mentioned in Horace's journey from Rome to Brundisium (Sat. i. 5. 97), and his last stage between Barium, "Barî mœnia piscosi" (v. 97), and Brundisium, the "finis chartæque viæque" (v. 104). Cp. Howson, i. 372.

It is more likely that both the town and the road derived their names from some person or persons of the Gens Egnatia, who were mainly instrumental in their construction. So the Via Appia—named from Appius Cæcus.

On the providential provision, in the great military Roman Roads, for the Propagation of Christianity, see below, xxviii. 15.

— Ἀμφίπολις κ.τ.λ.] For a description of the position and remains of these places, see Col. Leake's Northern Greece, viz. on Amphipolis (olim ἐννέα ὁδοὶ, where Brasidas was killed), see Leake, iii. 181.

Apollonia, iii. 457.

Berœa, iii. 290.

Philippi, iii. 189.

Thessalonica, iii. 235.

The distances on the Via Egnatia, as laid down in the Itineraries, are,— Philippi to Amphipolis thirty-three miles.

Amphipolis to Apollonia thirty miles.

Apollonia to Thessalonica thirty-seven miles (cp. Howson, i. 373).

— Θεσσαλονίκην] called the mother-city of all Macedonia in an Ancient Inscription in Valck., p. 541; now Saloniki.

— ἡ συναγωγή] The Article ἡ is not in A, B, D, and has been omitted by Lachmann, Tischendorf, Bornemann. Bloomfield and Alford retain the article; and, it seems, rightly.

There appears to have been only a proseucha, and this outside the gate (xvi. 13), at Philippi, a Roman Colony, where the Jews were an object of scorn and detestation. See on xvi. 20.

But here at Thessalonica was a Synagogue; and it appears to have been the Synagogue of the district.

Perhaps St. Paul passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, because there was no Synagogue there. In all cases he took care to offer the Gospel in the first instance to the Jews. See v. 2.

3. παρατιθέμενος] 'allegans,' alleging—in the sense of adducing or citing passages and authorities (here, from Holy Scripture) in proof of an argument. See Valck.

4. σεβομένων Ἑλλήνων] Proselytes. A, D insert καὶ before Ἑλλήνων, and so Vulg. 'gentilibusque.'

5. ζηλώσαντες—προσλαβόμενοι] So A, B, ℵ, and many Cursive MSS and Versions.—D, G, H have not ζηλώσαντες. Elz. inserts ἀπειθοῦντες before Ἰουδαῖοι, with D, and ἀπειθοῦντες is in G, H.

— οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι] Cp. 1 Thess. ii. 14—16, for St. Paul's account of the conduct of the Jews at Thessalonica.

— ἀγοραίων] "sub-rostranorum;" loiterers in the agora.

6. πολιτάρχας] See also v. 8, τὸν ὄχλον, καὶ τοὺς πολιτάρχας. Another instance of St. Luke's accuracy. The political condition of the two neighbouring cities, Thessalonica and Philippi, was very different. Philippi was a Roman Colonia; Thessalonica a Greek 'urbs libera.' There the Roman element was dominant; here the Greek prevails.

Philippi was like a miniature of Rome in Greece. Its magistrates and laws were Roman; and it was proud of its Roman dignity.

At Philippi, therefore, we hear of στρατηγοὶ, Prætors (xvi. 20. 22. 35, 36. 38), and ῥαβδοῦχοι, lictors (xvi. 35. 38). There Roman privileges are invoked (xvi. 21), and an attempt is made to excite the Roman hatred against Paul and Silas as Jews. (See on xvi. 20.)

But at Thessalonica the scene is changed. Here we have a specimen of Greek liberty allowed to survive amid the conquered cities of Macedonia, now under the Roman yoke: an image of ancient Greek Independence. Every thing here is Greek.

St. Luke marks the change by his language; αὐτοὺς ἀγαγεῖν εἰς τὸν δῆμον, (v. 5) αὐτοὺς ἔσυρον εἰς τοὺς πολιτάρχας, an uncommon word, but happily we may still read it (in substance) on an ancient inscription at Philippi; a proof of the writer's exactness. See Leake, p. 236, who observes, "The Magistrates are styled Politarchæ, as when St. Paul visited Thessalonica ninety-three years after the battle of Philippi."

The Inscription, which seems to be of the age of Vespasian, may be also seen in Boeckh (Sylloge Pars x. p. 53, No. 1967), who cites another from Philippi, ΠΟΛΙΤΑΡΧΟΥ ΜΑΡΚΟΥ, and adds, "Manifestò fuerunt πολιτάρχαι septem, ex quibus hoc loco princeps quasi separatim scriptus est." Cp. Howson, i. 394—6.

7. Καίσαρος] an intimation of what the Church would have to suffer from enemies charging her with disaffection and disloyalty to the ruling powers. See the replies to this accusation in the Christian Apologies; especially Tertullian's eloquent vindication, Apol. § 29—35, and de Idol. § 13—15, and Theophil. ad Autol. i. 11.

9. τὸ ἱκανόν] 'Satisdatio' (Gloss.). Cp. LXX, Lev. xxv. 26, ἐὰν εὑρέθη τὸ ἱκανὸν, λύτρα αὐτοῦ (Grinfield).

10. Σίλαν] This mention of the connexion of Silas with the Church of Thessalonica is confirmed by his association with St. Paul in the beginning of both the Epistles to the Thessalonians.

From the similar association of Timotheus in those two Epistles it is probable that he also was now with St. Paul at Thessalonica as he was at Berœa (vv. 14, 15, and xviii. 5).

11. εὐγενέστεροι] The obscure Berœans are declared by the Holy Spirit here to be more noble than the wealthy Thessa-αντο τὸν λόγον μετὰ πάσης προθυμίας, τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν ἀνακρίνοντες τὰς γραφὰς, εἰ ἔχοι ταῦτα οὕτως. 12 Πολλοὶ μὲν οὖν ἐξ αὐτῶν ἐπίστευσαν, καὶ h 1 The. s. 2. 4. τῶν Ἑλληνίδων γυναικῶν τῶν εὐσχημόνων, καὶ ἀνδρῶν οὐκ ὀλίγοι. 13 h Ὡς δὲ ἔγνωσαν οἱ ἀπὸ τῆς Θεσσαλονίκης Ἰουδαῖοι, ὅτι καὶ ἐν τῇ Βεροίᾳ κατηγγέλη ὑπὸ τοῦ Παύλου ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἦλθον κἀκεῖ σαλεύοντες τοὺς ὄχλους. 14 Εὐθέως δὲ τότε τὸν Παῦλον ἐξαπέστειλαν οἱ ἀδελφοὶ πορεύεσθαι ὡς ἐπὶ τὴν θάλασσαν· ὑπέμενον δὲ ὅ τε Σίλας καὶ ὁ Τιμόθεος ἐκεῖ.

i ch. 18. 5. 15 i Οἱ δὲ καθιστῶντες τὸν Παῦλον ἤγαγον αὐτὸν ἕως Ἀθηνῶν· καὶ λαβόντες ἐντολὴν πρὸς τὸν Σίλαν καὶ Τιμόθεον ἵνα ὡς τάχιστα ἔλθωσι πρὸς αὐτὸν, ἐξῆεσαν.

16 Ἐν δὲ ταῖς Ἀθήναις ἐκδεχομένου αὐτοὺς τοῦ Παύλου, παρωξύνετο τὸ j ver. 4. πνεῦμα αὐτοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ θεωροῦντος κατείδωλον οὖσαν τὴν πόλιν. 17 j Διελέγετο μὲν οὖν ἐν τῇ συναγωγῇ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις καὶ τοῖς σεβομένοις, καὶ ἐν τῇ ἀγορᾷ k Col. 2. 8. κατὰ πᾶσαν ἡμέραν πρὸς τοὺς παρατυγχάνοντας. 18 Τινὲς δὲ καὶ τῶν k Ἐπιlonians. True nobility consists in being born of God, and in imitating His example and doing His Will. The Heathen had some sense of this. Juneval (Sat. viii. 20), "Nobilitas sola est atque unica Virtus." The same Author asks (viii. 1), "Stemmata quid faciunt?" And St. Luke here intimates that genuine Nobility is seen in studying the pedigree of our heavenly lineage, and the records of our spiritual inheritance, in the Word of God.

---

It appears that these Bercean Christians were mainly of Jewish origin (see v. 10). Hence the contrast with those of Thessalonica is more striking; and this is one of the few instances where St. Paul was well received by his own people.

— τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν] See Luke xix. 47.

14. ὡς ἐπὶ] ἕως A, B, E, and several Cursives; and so Lachmann;

There does not seem much reason in the interpretations adopted by some here, either that the Bercean brethren sent St. Paul forth—

(1) with a feint only, or pretence, of going to the sea: for he did go by sea to Athens, in all probability; as no place is mentioned by St. Luke between Berœa and Athens. Or,

(2) with a design to go to the sea; or in the direction of the sea. (Winer, § 66, p. 544.)

It is not probable that the Bercean Christians sent Paul forth alone, and exposed him to the malice of the Jews from Thessalonica (v. 13). What St. Luke intends to say seems to be this: that, in their care for the Apostle, the Bercean brethren sent him forth on his journey even as far as to the sea; and so Valck. interprets it; that is, they conveyed him in safety, with an escort, to the coast. Thus they protected him, with some trouble and risk to themselves. And afterwards, some who conducted him from Berœa, brought him in safety even as far as (ἕως) Athens.

All this is mentioned as a fruit of the Christian spirit of the Church at Berœa; a happy result of their study of the Scriptures.

Either then, the true reading is that adopted by Lachmann, ἕως, or, what comes to the same thing, ὡς ἐπὶ is to be rendered usque ad, 'even to;' and so it has been understood by the Syriac, Arabic, Ethiopic, and Latin Versions. So Pausan. ii. 25, καταβάντων δὲ ὡς ἐπὶ θάλασσαν. Xen. Cyr. viii. 3, 11, ἔδειξε τέρμα ὡς ἐπὶ πέντε σταδίων. Zosim. i. 67, ὡς ἐπὶ τὸν Ῥῆνον. Lacrt. viii. 69, ὠδευκέναι ὡς ἐπὶ τὴν Αἴτνην. Diod. Sic. p. 423, A, τὸν ναύαρχον μετὰ δέκα τριήρων ἀπέστειλε, κελεύσας κατὰ τάχος λάθρα πλεῖν ὡς ἐπὶ Συρακουσίους. See Wetstein, Valck., and Kuin.

If this is the true interpretation, then ἐξαπέστειλαν is to be joined with ὡς ἐπὶ τὴν θάλασσαν, "they sent him forth, or escorted him, even down to the sea."

16. κατείδωλον—τὴν πόλιν] κατείδωλος, 'full of idols' (Syriac), as a place full of trees is called κατάδενδρος, so as to be overgrown by them. Athens was πόλις θεῶν, as appears from the description of its temples, altars, &c., in the Attica of Pausanias, who visited it in the age of the Antonines. See Leake's Athens, p. 1—35. Wordsworth's Athens and Attica, ch. xi.

Athens, the most intelligent and literary city of Greece, was "given to idolatry." Idolatry, therefore, may flourish side by side with Literature and Science. They have not delivered the world from creature-worship; that could only be done by Christianity.

17. ἐν τῇ συναγωγῇ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις] St. Paul still continues to offer the Gospel in the first instance to the Jews, although they had endeavoured to kill him at Thessalonica, and had persecuted him to Berœa. No evil treatment from them was able to exhaust his patience, or abate his love to them, or to weary him in his efforts for their salvation. See above, xvii. 1.

A salutary lesson of charity and forbearance to those who dissent from the truth.

— ἐν τῇ ἀγορᾷ] On the South of the Acropolis, and to the South-east of the Areopagus. As he was disputing in the Agora, he was led up to the Areopagus (v. 19), a low limestone hill, a little above it.

18. τινὲς δὲ καὶ τῶν Ἐπικουρείων καὶ τῶν Στωϊκῶν] For a summary of the points physical, ethical, and theological, in which St. Paul's teaching would come in contact with the tenets of these sects, see S. Aug., Serm. 150, and c. Academ. iii. 10, and two Treatises c. Epicureos et Stoicos; and Athanas., de Incarn. 2, p. 39; and Bentley's Second Boyle Lecture, Works, iii. pp. 27—34, where St. Paul's speech before the Areopagus (vv. 22—32) is illustrated and explained by reference to their opinions. See also, particularly, Bp. Pearson's recently-discovered Concio on this subject (ed. Churton, ii. pp. 56—63) who observes:

"As to the Epicureans, they allowed that the world was made (i. e. had not existed from eternity); but maintained that it came together by chance, and that the Deity took no part in its administration;" and so, as Tertullian says (Apol. 47), "Deum nobis exhibent otiosum et inexercitum, et, ut ita dixerim, neminem humanis rebus."

Besides, they subverted the foundations on which Christianity rest, by denying the Immortality of the Soul. Thus Epicurus says, "death is nothing to us" (Cicero, de Finibus, ii. 31); and "nihil esse post mortem Epicuri schola est" (Tertullian, de Resurr. Carnis, in initio.).

They undermined the groundwork of the Gospel also, by affirming that man is capable of no felicity but of health of body and tranquillity of mind.

As to the Stoics; their name was from the Στοὰ ποικίλη, the "braccatis illita Medis Porticus" (Persius, iii. 53), the arcade or corridor painted (ποικίλη) with frescos of the battle of Marathon, in which Zeno taught. They were Pantheists. As Tertullian expresses it (adv. Hermog. 44, ad Nationes, ii. 4), they taught that the Deity pervades the matter of the world, as honey fills the comb of a hive. To them the world was God. Thus they undermined the doctrine of Providence, of personal Responsibility, and of a Judgment to come. In their system of Ethics all sins were equal; or rather, in their doctrine of fatalism, no sins at all. Their "wise man," who was all-sufficient in himself (αὐτάρκης), and equal to the Jove of the people, had no passions; which, as S. Jerome observes (Ep. ad Ctesiph. 133), is "hominem ex homine tollere." Cp. Bp. Pearson, l. c.

Tertullian (de Anima 3) sums up the Ethical system of both in two words, "Zenonis vigor (ought not we to read rigor?) et Epicuri stupor."

S. Aug. says (Serm. 150), "Dic, Epicuree, quæ res faciat beatum? Responde. Voluptas corporis. Dic, Stoice. Virtus Animi. Dic, Christiane. Donum Dei."

"Hæc est doctrina Christianorum, incomparabiliter præferenda immunditiæ Epicureorum superbiæ Stoicorum." (Bengel.)

It is observable, that no mention is here made of the Peripatetics, Academics, or Platonists, whose doctrines were not so much opposed to Christianity as those of the Stoics and Epicureans. Indeed, they may be said to have in some degree κουρείων καὶ τῶν Στωϊκῶν φιλοσόφων συνέβαλλον αὐτῷ· καί τινες ἔλεγον, Τί ἂν θέλοι ὁ σπερμολόγος οὗτος λέγειν; οἱ δέ, Ξένων δαιμονίων δοκεῖ καταγγελεὺς εἶναι· ὅτι τὸν Ἰησοῦν καὶ τὴν ἀνάστασιν αὐτοῖς εὐηγγελίζετο. 19 ἐπιλαβόμενοί τε αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τὸν Ἄρειον πάγον ἤγαγον λέγοντες, Δυνάμεθα γνῶναι, τίς ἡ καινὴ αὕτη ἡ ὑπὸ σοῦ λαλουμένη διδαχή; 20 ξενίζοντα γάρ τινα εἰσφέρεις εἰς τὰς ἀκοὰς ἡμῶν· βουλόμεθα οὖν γνῶναι τί ἂν θέλοι ταῦτα εἶναι. 21 Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ πάντες καὶ οἱ ἐπιδημοῦντες ξένοι εἰς οὐδὲν ἕτερον εὐκαίρουν, ἢ λέγειν τι καὶ ἀκούειν καινότερον.

22 Σταθεὶς δὲ ὁ Παῦλος ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ Ἀρείου πάγου ἔφη, Ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι, prepared the better part of the world for the reception of the Gospel.

---

— τί ἂν θέλοι] "if he has any meaning at all, what can it be?"

— ὁ σπερμολόγος] σπερμολόγος, properly a small bird with a shrill note, that flutters and hops hither and thither, picking up seeds (σπέρματα λέγων), particularly after the plough. (Cyril.) Vid. Aristoph. Avv. 232, ubi scholiast. σπερμολόγων ὄνομα ὀρνέων ἃ ἐκ τοῦ ὀρύττειν τὰ σπέρματα, καὶ ἐσθίειν οὕτως ὠνομάσθησαν.

"Ab iisdem avibus desumpta metaphora, σπερμολόγους nominabant Græci, pauperes, qui forum oberrantes, si quid ex mercibus et mercatorum sarcinis in terram decideret, legebant, vitamque hoc quæstu sustentabant. Eustath. ad Hom. Odys. ε'. v. 241, σπερμολόγος εἶδος ἐστὶν ὀρνέου λωβώμενον τὰ σπέρματα, ἐξ οὗ οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι σπερμολόγους ἐκάλουν τοὺς περὶ ἐμπόρια καὶ ἀγορὰς διατρίβοντας διὰ τὸ ἀναλέγεσθαι τὰ ἐκ τῶν φορτίων ἀποῤῥέοντα, καὶ διαζῆν ἐκ τούτων. Hinc ita dicti sunt abjectæ sortis homines, viles, contempti, nullius pretii. Harpocrat. ὁ εὐτελὴς καὶ εὐκαταφρόνητος ἄνθρωπος. Philo. de Leg. ad Csi. p. 1021, C, χρησάμενος—Ἑλίκωνι—δούλῳ σπερμολόγῳ περιτρίμματι.

"Tum ita quoque nuncupati sunt parasiti, homines scurrilitate et adulationibus victum sibi quærentes, et de alieno viventes; Harpocrat. καὶ ἴσως ἀπὸ τῶν ἀλλοτρίων διαζῶν. Ab avibus istis, quæ neque cantu suo delectant, sed garritu perpetuo molestæ sunt, σπερμολόγοι denique etiam dicti sunt, nugatores, garruli, blateratores, vaniloqui. Suidas, σπερμολόγον, εὐρυλόγον, ἀκριτόμυθον. Hesych., σπερμολόγος φλύαρος." (Kuin.)

S. Augustine, Sermon. 150, gives another interpretation of σπερμολόγος (quasi σπείρων λόγους), 'seminator verborum.' And so Vulg. 'seminiverbius.' "Ille (sc. Paulus) reverâ," says Aug., "seminator verborum sed messor morum; et nos tantuli in agro Dei seminamus, et uberem messem de vestris moribus expectamus."

The inquisitive Athenians (v. 21) restlessly roving about, and picking up news in the ἀγορά, and described as such even by their own orator in a better age (Demosth. Phil. i. p. 43) might well be called σπερμολόγοι; and yet they call the Apostle St. Paul a σπερμολόγος. Such in their eyes was the Apostle who was sowing the Divine Seed of the Word in the furrows of the Field of the World, and who will stand foremost at the Great Day of Harvest, and "bring his sheaves with him." So different are the opinions of men and the judgment of God.

— ξένων δαιμονίων—Ἰησοῦν] The plural for the singular, as in v. 28. Cp. Bentley here. See on Matt. ii. 20.

19. ἐπὶ τὸν Ἄρειον πάγον ἤγαγον] Was this a fulfilment of Christ's prophecy, "They will deliver you up to Councils?" Matt. x. 17. Mark xiii. 9. Luke xxi. 12. S. Chrysostom and others say that they brought St. Paul up to the Areopagus, in order that he might be daunted, because there was the Judicial Tribunal of φονικαὶ δίκαι, especially, it may be added, in suits of ξένων δαιμονίων εἰσαγωγή, and other causes of Religion.

This opinion, however, has been controverted; and it has been said, that St. Paul was not brought before the Areopagus for any such forensic purpose. There seems, however, to be some ground for S. Chrysostom's remark, which is adopted, among others, by Bengel, "Paulum eò tanquam reum duxere."

It is true that the Areopagus—a low hill raised above the bustle of the Agora—was a favourable spot for hearing a reply to the questions put to him by the Athenians. But there seems to be something more implied by St. Luke in the words (v. 19) ἐπιλαβόμενοι αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τὸν Ἄρειον πάγον ἤγαγον.

It has, indeed, been said (by Grotius and Meyer), that ἐπιλαβόμενοι means only a gentle act of leading aside; and so it sometimes does, as in ix. 27. But in other places it intimates something more; see xvi. 19; xviii. 17; xxi. 30. However, it may be allowed, that in the treatment St. Paul received at Athens, there is a tone of sceptical indifference and *perc*ilious irony, rather than of violence. The people of Athens were not intolerant persecutors. Their Philosophers were not earnest in the search of truth. With them Religion was a matter for disputation in the Schools, rather than for practice in Life.

The Athenians are called δεισιδαιμονέστεροι (v. 22); their City was κατείδωλος (v. 16). It is therefore probable that St. Paul was brought to the Areopagus, as a setter forth of strange gods, by some of that large number of persons in that city whose livelihood depended on the maintenance of Idolatry. See the operation of this cause at Ephesus, xix. 24—28, and at Philippi, xvi. 19, ἐπιλαβόμενοι εἵλκυσαν ἐπὶ τοὺς ἄρχοντας. Cp. note there.

It is true that St. Luke does not expressly say that he was put on his trial there. The process may have been only a preparatory inquiry, an ἀνάκρισις. They who laid hands on him, may have intended to frighten the Apostle by the judicial associations of the place, and to drive him out of the city. Something of this kind seems to have been designed by his delation to the Areopagus, whose name was expressive of judicial inquisition in religious matters, as was exemplified in the history of Socrates (Xenophon, Memorab. i. 1). And the words σταθεὶς ὁ Παῦλος ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ Ἀρείου πάγου ἔφη, Ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι denote a public Apology rather than a private discussion. The mention also of St. Paul's convert Dionysius, in v. 34, by his official title, the Areopagite, seems to corroborate this opinion. And, lastly, the noble peroration concerning a future Universal Judgment (v. 31) comes with special force, if uttered before the highest Judicial Tribunal, in the most philosophical City of the Ancient World. See also v. 32.

21. εὐκαίρουν] 'vacabant;' an Hellenistic word, not Attic. "Moeris p. 145, εὐκαιρεῖν οὐδεὶς εἴρηκε τῶν παλαιῶν Ἕλληνες δέ. Phrynichus p. 50, εὐκαιρεῖν οὐ λεκτέον, ἀλλ' εὖ σχολῆς ἔχειν. Thom. Mag. σχολὴν ἄγω, καὶ εὖ σχολῆς ἔχω, οὐ σχολάζω· τὸ δὲ εὐκαιρεῖν πάντη ἀδόκιμον. Cp. Etym. M. p. 740. 50. Sylb." (Kuin.)

— καινότερον] more new than the last news. "Nova statim sordebant, noviora quærebantur." (Bengel.) The comparative expresses an appetite never satisfied, but ever craving something more, even when it has just been fed. Cp. Theophrast. Char. viii. μὴ λέγεταί τι καινότερον; The news-loving temper of the Athenians is noted by Demosth. Phil. i. 43, βούλεσθε, εἰπέ μοι περιϊόντες αὐτῶν πυνθάνεσθαι κατὰ τὴν ἀγορὰν, λέγεταί τι καινόν;

22. Σταθεὶς δὲ ὁ Παῦλος] The Court sat in the open air; St. Paul stood on that hill in the centre of the Athenian City, and with a full view of it. The Temple of the Eumenides was immediately below him; and if he looked to the East, he beheld the Propylæa of the Acropolis fronting him, and the Parthenon rising above him; and on his left the bronze colossus of Minerva, the champion of Athens, and the Temple of Victory to the right; behind him was the Temple of Theseus; and a countless multitude of smaller Temples and Altars in the Agora and Ceramicus below him. Cp. "Athens and Attica," ch. xi.

The Speech contains a statement of the Unity of the Godhead (v. 23), against Polytheism; of the creation of all things by Him, against the Epicurean theory of a fortuitous concourse of atoms; of its Government by Him, against the Stoical doctrine of Fate and the Epicurean notion of Indifference (vv. 23, 24); of the divine Omnipresence, and of the αὐτάρκεια of the One Great First Cause (v. 25), in opposition to the popular theology; of the origin of all Nations from one blood, against the Athenian conceit of their own dignity as αὐτόχθονες; of the spirituality of the Godhead, in opposition to Idolatry (v. 29); of the witness to God's existence, and other attributes, in Man's Conscience and in Human Nature, and in the Visible World (v. 29). It concludes with a reply to the objection that these are new doctrines (v. 30), and with a statement of the doctrine of human accountability and Universal Judgment to come, by One whom God has appointed; of which He has given a pledge by His Resurrection from the Dead.

He does not once mention Jesus Christ by name; compare St. Stephen's conduct in this respect before the Jewish Sanhe-κατὰ πάντα ὡς δεισιδαιμονεστέρους ὑμᾶς θεωρῶ· [23] διερχόμενος γὰρ καὶ ἀναθεωρῶν τὰ σεβάσματα ὑμῶν εὗρον καὶ βωμὸν ἐν ᾧ ἐπεγέγραπτο, ΑΓΝΩ-ΣΤΩι ΘΕΩι. [l] Ὃ οὖν ἀγνοοῦντες εὐσεβεῖτε τοῦτο ἐγὼ καταγγέλλω ὑμῖν.

[24] [l] Ὁ Θεὸς ὁ ποιήσας τὸν κόσμον καὶ πάντα τὰ ἐν αὐτῷ, οὗτος οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς Κύριος ὑπάρχων, [m] οὐκ ἐν χειροποιήτοις ναοῖς κατοικεῖ, [25] [n] οὐδὲ ὑπὸ l ch. 14. 15. Matt. 11. 25. & 7. 48. Gen. 1. 1.

m ch. 7. 48.
n Ps. 50. 8. Gen. 2. 7.

drim (see commencement of note on ch. vii. and on vii. 45). In both cases there is the reverence of silence; they would not provoke blasphemy against that Holy Name.

St. Paul's Speech at Athens—both in what he does say, and in what he does not say—is the Model and Pattern to all Christian Missionaries for their Addresses to the Heathen World. Cp. on v. 23.

— ὡς δεισιδαιμονεστέρους] not said in censure: οὐδὲν βαρὺ λέγων (Chrys.); "ponitur in laude." (Valck.) Cp. the words of Œdipus in Sophocles (Œd. C. 260), τὰς Ἀθήνας φασὶ θεοσεβεστάτας εἶναι.

The sense is,—I for my part regard you as more reverential and fearful of the gods than the rest of the world. Cp. Winer, § 35, p. 218, and Baumg. ii. p. 157.

The word θεωρῶ appears to be studiously repeated (see vv. 16. 22). This is the light in which I regard you. This is my theory concerning you. You charge me with introducing new Deities (v. 18). I will show that you yourselves are not satisfied with what you have, and that you are affected with a mysterious craving for something more.

He represents their feeling toward their deities as one of servile dread, and he will deliver them from its vague alarms, and teach them a religion of filial love.

The sense in which the Athenians, to whom he spoke, and the word δεισιδαίμων, "timidus Deorum," is evident from the Chapter of Theophrastus (Charact. Eth. xvi.) on that subject. The character of Nicias, as drawn by Thucydides (vii. 50. 77. 86), presents a striking specimen of Athenian δεισιδαιμονία. And the verses of the great Poet of one of the Sects (the Epicurean) with which St. Paul had to contend at Athens, display a graphic view of his position at Athens in taking up arms against the Heathen Theology, and an appropriate comment on his words:

> "Humana ante oculos fœdè cùm vita jaceret
> In terris, oppressa gravi sub Religione, > Quæ caput à cœli regionibus ostendebat,
> Horribili super aspectu mortalibus instans."

And again,

> ——"Sæpius illa > Religio peperit scelerosa atque impia facta."
> Lucret. i. 64—102.

The victory over this awful Religio—a victory Lucretius claims for his "Graius homo" (Epicurus), is indeed specially due to St. Paul. Cp. Aug. de Civ. Dei iv. 30, "Agamus Deo gratias, qui has superstitiones per altissimam Christi humilitatem, per Apostolorum prædicationem, liberâ suorum servitate subvertit."

23. τὰ σεβάσματα] your temples, altars, &c., used in this sense in the Greek Version in Wisd. xiv. 20; xv. 17. Bel and the Dragon 27. (Kuin.) Cp. 2 Thess. ii. 4.

— εὗρον καί] "I met with even an altar inscribed to the Unknown God."

— βωμόν] An example to Christian Preachers and Missionaries, that they should adapt their addresses to the circumstances of their audience, and commence with things in which they agree with them, and endeavour to persuade their hearers by means of things which they acknowledge; and so lead them on to accept the truth as it is in Christ.

In the Jewish Synagogue the Apostle always preached from the Law and the Prophets there read. But in the heathen city he takes his text from their Altar, and confirms it from their Poets. To those who were under the Levitical Law, "he was as under the Law that he might gain them that were under the Law; and to them that were without the Law he became as without the Law, that he might gain them that were without the Law;" and, so far as was consistent with his obedience to Christ, he became "all things to all men that he might by all means save some." (1 Cor. ix. 20, 22.)

He thus brought every thing into subjection to Christ; and often, as here, he overcame Satan by his own weapons; ἀπὸ τῶν ὅπλων τῶν πολεμίων αὐτοὺς ἐχειρώσατο. See Ammonius in Caten. p. 352.

Cp. Chrys. here, and Jerome, Epist. ad Magnum, "Ductor Christiani exercitûs et orator invictus, pro Christo causam agens, ipsam inscriptionem fortuitam arte (arræ?) torquet in argumentum fidei."

— ΑΓΝΩΣΤΩι ΘΕΩι] It would seem that the same Divine Power which had guided Pilate's hand when he wrote the inscription on the Cross, "Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews," directed those, unconscious though they were, who traced this title on the Altar. It is not to be supposed that St. Paul alludes to the more general inscription ἀγνώστοις θεοῖς, engraven on some altars in the harbour and city of Athens (Pausan. Attic. i. 1. Philost. Vit. Apollon. vi. 3. Col. Leake's Athens, p. 306).

The title Ἀγνώστοις Θεοῖς (in the plural) was indeed of some use to his argument, as it implied a confession from Athenians themselves that there were Beings—and therefore a Being—unknown to them, and yet entitled to divine worship.

But to suppose that he argued from such an inscription as that, and from nothing more, would be tantamount to a supposition that in preaching the One God, he argued from a profession of Polytheism.

There was doubtless an altar at Athens declaratory of the Unity of the Godhead. There was an altar inscribed ἀγνώστῳ Θεῷ. Such an inscription would have been suggested by the natural cravings of the heart for something more pure and rational than the unholy and unsatisfying vanities of Gentile Polytheism.

This craving had been expressed by heathen Poets, e. g. by Aratus, whom St. Paul quotes (v. 28).

And (as Chrys. and Œcumenius, and others state) the occurrence of public calamities, such as the great Plague at Athens in the 40th Olympiad suggested to the Athenians that there might be some other god whom they had offended, and who could and would give them that aid which they had sought in vain from their many gods of wood and stone. As Col. Leake has observed (p. 306); "Diogenes Laertius (in Epimenid. lib. i. sect. 10) informs us that Epimenides himself came to Athens to establish this worship, and that he sacrificed upon the Areopagus."

Laertius does not indeed speak of the ἄγνωστος Θεός, but he says τῷ προσήκοντι Θεῷ, in the singular number; and his name would have been specified if it had been known. "It is probable, therefore (says Leake), that an altar Ἀγνώστῳ Θεῷ continued to stand upon the Areopagus from that time until it became the occasion of St. Paul's address to the Athenians." If the altar was visible (as perhaps it was) the appeal would have been much more cogent and striking.

The words of the interlocutor in the dialogue of Philopatris, ascribed by some to Lucian (iii. 708, but see Gieseler, § 40), νὴ τὸν ἄγνωστον ἐν Ἀθήναις, and τὸν ἐν Ἀθήναις ἄγνωστον ἐφευρόντες . . . τούτῳ εὐχαριστήσωμεν, though designed perhaps as a sneer on St. Paul's speech at Athens (and so proving its dissemination in the Gentile world), are far from casting any doubt on the Apostle's assertion; they rather confirm his statement of the fact: though they do not concede his inference from it. No one—much less St. Paul—would have hazarded an illgrounded assertion before an assembly of critical Athenians. And the conversion of Dionysius, a Judge of the Court of the Areopagus, by St. Paul's pleading, is a sufficient proof that the allegations, on which it was grounded, were true.

Hence Clem. Alex. (Strom. i. 9) and S. Aug. (c. Crescon. i. 29) affirm that the Athenians worshipped one God, although unknown.

— ὃ ἀγνοοῦντες εὐσεβεῖτε] "nomen quod ignorantes benè colitis, ego declaro vobis; Deus Qui" &c. The reading ὃ and τοῦτο restored from the oldest MSS. by recent Editors, is more consistent with the argument than ὃν and τοῦτον. Cp. John iv. 22, ὑμεῖς προσκυνεῖτε ὃ οὐκ οἴδατε.

There seems a contrast between εὐσεβεῖτε here and δεισιδαιμονία v. 22.

24. οὐ—κατοικεῖ] is not locally confined to them as to a dwelling place (Acts vii. 48), even though it be as magnificent as the Parthenon and the Temple of Theseus.

This assertion, and others like it, of God's Omnipresence, were abused by the adversaries of Christianity into a charge against the Christians that they had no Temples. Celsus, ap. Origen. c. Cels. viii. p. 389. Minuc. Felix, 10, "nullas aras habent, templa nulla." But this was an erroneous allegation. See Tertullian, de Idol. 7, and Mede's Essay on Churches, i. e. "appropriate places for Christian Worship both in, and ever since the Apostles' times," Works, p. 319—385.

χειρῶν ἀνθρώπων θεραπεύεται, προσδεόμενος τινὸς, ° αὐτὸς διδοὺς πᾶσι ζωὴν καὶ πνοὴν καὶ τὰ πάντα· 26 ᵖ ἐποίησέ τε ἐξ ἑνὸς αἵματος πᾶν ἔθνος ἀνθρώπων κατοικεῖν ἐπὶ πᾶν τὸ πρόσωπον τῆς γῆς, ὁρίσας προστεταγμένους καιροὺς, καὶ τὰς ὁροθεσίας τῆς κατοικίας αὐτῶν, 27 ᵠ ζητεῖν τὸν Κύριον, εἰ ἄρα γε ψηλαφήσειαν αὐτὸν καὶ εὕροιεν· καίτοιγε οὐ μακρὰν ἀπὸ ἑνὸς ἑκάστου ἡμῶν ὑπάρχοντα· 28 ἐν αὐτῷ γὰρ ζῶμεν καὶ κινούμεθα καί ἐσμεν· ὡς καί τινες τῶν καθ' ὑμᾶς ποιητῶν εἰρήκασι, Τοῦ γὰρ καὶ γένος ἐσμέν. 29 ʳ Γένος οὖν ὑπάρχοντες τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐκ ὀφείλομεν νομίζειν χρυσῷ ἢ ἀργύρῳ ἢ λίθῳ, χαράγματι τέχνης καὶ ἐνθυμήσεως ἀνθρώπου, τὸ Θεῖον εἶναι ὅμοιον. 30 ˢ Τοὺς μὲν οὖν χρόνους τῆς ἀγνοίας ὑπεριδὼν ὁ Θεὸς τανῦν παραγγέλλει τοῖς ἀνθρώποις πᾶσι πανταχοῦ μετανοεῖν· 31 ᵗ καθότι ἔστησεν ἡμέραν, ἐν ᾗ μέλλει κρίνειν τὴν οἰκουμένην, ἐν δικαιοσύνῃ, ἐν ἀνδρὶ ᾧ ὥρισε, πίστιν παρασχὼν πᾶσιν, ἀναστήσας αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν.

32 Ἀκούσαντες δὲ ἀνάστασιν νεκρῶν οἱ μὲν ἐχλεύαζον, οἱ δὲ εἶπον, Ἀκουσόμεθά σου πάλιν περὶ τούτου. 33 Καὶ οὕτως ὁ Παῦλος ἐξῆλθεν ἐκ μέσου αὐτῶν. 34 Τινὲς δὲ ἄνδρες κολληθέντες αὐτῷ ἐπίστευσαν· ἐν οἷς καὶ Διονύσιος ὁ Ἀρεοπαγίτης, καὶ γυνὴ ὀνόματι Δάμαρις, καὶ ἕτεροι σὺν αὐτοῖς.

XVIII. 1 Μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα χωρισθεὶς ὁ Παῦλος ἐκ τῶν Ἀθηνῶν ἦλθεν εἰς Κόρινθον· 2 ª καὶ εὑρών τινα Ἰουδαῖον, ὀνόματι Ἀκύλαν, Ποντικὸν τῷ γένει, προσφάτως ἐληλυθότα ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰταλίας, καὶ Πρίσκιλλαν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ, διὰ τὸ διατεταχέναι Κλαύδιον χωρίζεσθαι πάντας τοὺς Ἰουδαίους ἀπὸ τῆς Ῥώμης, προσῆλθεν αὐτοῖς· 3 ᵇ καὶ διὰ τὸ ὁμότεχνον εἶναι, ἔμενε παρ' αὐτοῖς καὶ εἰργά-o Job 12. 10. Zech. 12. 1. p Deut. 32. 8.

q Rom. 1. 20. ch. 14. 17.
r Isa. 40. 18.
s ch. 14. 16. Luke 24. 47.
t ch. 2. 24. & 10. 42. Rom. 2. 16.
a Rom. 16. 3. 1 Cor. 16. 19. 2 Tim. 4. 19.
b ch. 20. 34. 1 Cor. 4. 12. 2 Cor. 11. 9. & 12. 13. 1 Thess. 2. 9. 2 Thess. 3. 8.

---

25. αὐτός] "Ipse—nemo alius." Since He is the sole source of all life to all He cannot be in need of any thing from any. His essence is like that described by the Poet,— "Ipsa suis pollens opibus, nihil indiga nostri."

27. τὸν Κύριον] their Lord. See v. 24.

28. τινὲς—ποιητῶν] Aratus, of Cilicia, St. Paul's own country (Grotius), and perhaps of Tarsus, St. Paul's own city. (Fabric. Bibl. Gr. iv. p. 87.)

The same words are also in Cleanthes, of Lycia. Hymn. Jov. 5.

St. Paul connects all Greek poetry with Athens, "the eye of Greece," and by quoting Aratus he connects his audience with himself. Cp. Jerome in Ep. ad Titum (vol. iv. p. 419).

29. λίθῳ] even though it be of marble from your celebrated quarries of Mount Pentelicus.

— χαράγματι] even though, like your chryselephantine Minerva of the Acropolis, it be from the hands of a Phidias.

30. ὑπεριδών] without inflicting punishment. Cp. xiv. 16. Rom. iii. 25. And in this sense it is used by LXX in Deut. xxii. 1. 3, 4.

32. ἀνάστασιν] i. e. of the body. See Bentley, Serm. ii. p. 32.

Here St. Paul opposes all schools of Gentile Ethics. "Ut carnis restitutio negetur, de unâ omnium philosophorum scholâ sumitur." (Tertullian, Præscr. 7.)

33. καὶ οὕτως ὁ Παῦλος ἐξῆλθεν] They deferred the rehearing of the cause to a more convenient season, and so he departed.

He departed from Athens, never, as far as we know, to revisit it. "Nusquam Paulus minore cum fructu quàm Athenis docuit." (Bullinger.)

A solemn warning to all, who, gifted with intellectual advantages, spend their time in speculation, and prefer novelty to truth. Specially a warning to all such persons as seek for novelties in Religion, and in the Exposition of Scripture. The Spirit who dwelt in St. Paul may visit them for a time; but, if he be not reverently entertained, He will depart from them—perhaps for ever.

34. Διονύσιος] afterwards the first Bishop of Athens, according to Dionysius, the Bp. of Corinth, of the same name. Euseb. iii. 4; iv. 23.

There is now a Church dedicated to him on the Areopagus. S. Chrys. de Sacerdot. (ii. 189, Hughes) says that the Damaris here mentioned was his wife.

The works attributed to him by some belong probably to another Dionysius of the fourth century. See Bp. Pearson, Vindic. Ign. cap. x. p. 249—264, ed. Churton.

CH. I. 1. Κόρινθον] "Achaiæ caput" (Florus, ii. 69); "totius Græciæ lumen" (Cicero, pro lege Manil. 6); "excisam quidem à Mummio, sed cum tempore reflorescentem" (Grot.).

On its present condition, see Col. Leake's Morea, iii. 228—237, and 322. Howson, chap. xii.

The following summary is from Kuin.:—

"Portus habebat duo, ad navium stationes aptissimos, alterum occidentalem, Lechæum, versus Italiam, alterum orientalem, Cenchreensem (v. 18), versus regiones Asiaticas, v. Strabo lib. viii. p. 261, Pausan. Achaic. c. 16. Celebrabantur ibi, conventu totius Græciæ (Curt. iv. 5) ludi Isthmici, ultrà Hadriani tempora, v. Pausan. Corinth. c. 1. 2. Bello Achaico à Lucio Mummio dirutam Flor. ii. 16. Plin. H. N. xxxiv. 2; xxxv. 5, centum annos post Julius Cæsar, deductis illuc libertinis quàm plurimis, restituit, et brevi tempore pristinum splendorem recuperavit, ita, ut propter civium opulentissimorum copiam, et artium studium, inter reliquas Græciæ civitates principatum teneret. Quam in rem luculentissima extant scriptorum veterum testimonia, nominatim Strabonis, qui lib. viii. p. 263 scribit: ἡ μὲν οὖν πόλις τῶν Κορινθίων μεγάλη τε καὶ πλουσία διαπαντὸς ὑπῆρξεν, ἀνδρῶν τε ηὐπόρηκεν ἀγαθῶν εἴς τε τὰ πολιτικὰ καὶ εἰς τὰς τέχνας τὰς δημιουργικάς."

2. Ἀκύλαν] Aquilam: probably a name adopted for commercial intercourse with the Romans; and the same as Onkelos. (Valck.) — Ποντικόν] See ii. 9. 1 Pet. i. 1.

— Κλαύδιον—Ἰουδαίους—Ῥώμης] "Judæos impulsore Chresto assiduè tumultuantes, Româ expulit" (Sueton. Claud. 25). Cp. Bede, who says that it is uncertain whether the Christians were not confounded with Jews in that edict. Lardner, Credib. i. 11. 3. Burton, 184. Howson, i. 454. Gieseler, § 28. It is probable that the Jews of Rome, as at Thessalonica and other great cities, had been stirred up against the Christians.

A happy exile for Aquila. Banishment by Cæsar from Rome brought him to Christ and the Church. He is afterwards at Ephesus (v. 19. 1 Cor. xvi. 19), and returns to Rome (Rom. xvi. 3), and at Ephesus again (2 Tim. iv. 19). His wife Prisca, or Priscilla, is always mentioned with him; and probably they carried with them, wherever they went, the spiritual benefits they derived from their fellowship with St. Paul. Thus evil is overruled for good; and exile from an earthly city may be the means of bringing many to heaven.

ζετο· ἦσαν γὰρ σκηνοποιοὶ τῇ τέχνῃ. 4 Διελέγετο δὲ ἐν τῇ συναγωγῇ κατὰ πᾶν σάββατον, ἔπειθέ τε Ἰουδαίους καὶ Ἕλληνας.

c ch. 17. 14, 15. 5 c Ὡς δὲ κατῆλθον ἀπὸ τῆς Μακεδονίας ὅ τε Σίλας καὶ ὁ Τιμόθεος, συν-εἴχετο τῷ λόγῳ ὁ Παῦλος, διαμαρτυρόμενος τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις τὸν Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν.

d Lev. 20. 9, 12. 2 Sam. 1. 16. Ezek. 3. 18, 19. Matt. 10. 14. & 27. 25. ch. 13. 45, 51. 6 d Ἀντιτασσομένων δὲ αὐτῶν καὶ βλασφημούντων, ἐκτιναξάμενος τὰ ἱμάτια εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, Τὸ αἷμα ὑμῶν ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν ὑμῶν· καθαρὸς ἐγώ· ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν εἰς τὰ ἔθνη πορεύσομαι. 7 Καὶ μεταβὰς ἐκεῖθεν ἦλθεν εἰς οἰκίαν τινὸς ὀνόματι Ἰούστου, σεβομένου τὸν Θεὸν, οὗ ἡ οἰκία ἦν συνομοροῦσα τῇ συν-e 1 Cor. 1. 14. αγωγῇ. 8 e Κρίσπος δὲ ὁ ἀρχισυνάγωγος ἐπίστευσε τῷ Κυρίῳ σὺν ὅλῳ τῷ οἴκῳ αὐτοῦ· καὶ πολλοὶ τῶν Κορινθίων ἀκούοντες ἐπίστευον, καὶ ἐβαπτίζοντο.

f Jer. 1. 19. ch. 23. 14. 9 f Εἶπε δὲ ὁ Κύριος δι' ὁράματος ἐν νυκτὶ τῷ Παύλῳ, Μὴ φοβοῦ, ἀλλὰ λάλει καὶ μὴ σιωπήσῃς· 10 g διότι ἐγώ εἰμι μετὰ σοῦ, καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐπιθήσεταί σοι τοῦ g John 10. 16. Matt. 28. 20. κακῶσαί σε· διότι λαός ἐστί μοι πολὺς ἐν τῇ πόλει ταύτῃ. 11 Ἐκάθισέ τε ἐνιαυτὸν καὶ μῆνας ἓξ, διδάσκων ἐν αὐτοῖς τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ.

12 Γαλλίωνος δὲ ἀνθυπατεύοντος τῆς Ἀχαΐας, κατεπέστησαν ὁμοθυμαδὸν

---

3. σκηνοποιοί] To which St. Paul himself refers, Acts xx. 34. 1 Cor. iv. 12. 2 Cor. xi. 9; xii. 13. 1 Thess. ii. 9. 2 Thess. iii. 8. The word σκηνοποιοὶ is best rendered "opifices tentoriorum ex corio, in usum viatorum." As Chrys. explains it, ἐπὶ σκηνορ-ραφείου ἐστὼς δέρματα ἔρραπτε, and as Arator says (p. 206), ——"tentoria quippe

Fortia mobilibus fabricabat in aggere tectis;
Longiùs hæc abiens peregrinus ubique viator
Erigit, atque hiemes solesque his pellibus arcet."

The supposition that these σκηναὶ were made from the cilicium, or goats'-hair, of St. Paul's native country Cilicia, does not seem to rest on any good foundation (cp. Meyer).

There was nothing discreditable, in the eyes of a Jew, in manual labour. "Mos erat etiam doctissimis Judæorum opificium aliquod discere." See Schoettgen, p. 472, and Rosenm. here, and Biscoe, p. 273.

Hence St. Paul is called "pellium sutor" by Origen (hom. 17 in Num.).

May we not add, in reference to Christ Himself, that Ipse Orbis terrarum Opifex, sacrosanctis Suis manibus fabri artem exercebat (Matt. xiii. 55. Mark vi. 3). Sic et Apostolorum primarius, qui in Ecclesiæ tabernaculo pangendo plus omnibus laborabat (1 Cor. xv. 10), tentoriis factitandis victum quæritabat: et a terrenorum tentoriorum suturâ (cp. Origen, hom. 17 in Num.) ad æterna habitanda vocatus est? Hence Arator says (p. 207),

——"habitacula Paulus
Dum terrena levat, docet ut cœlestia condat, Factaque sæpe manu nunc construit atria verbo."

This was indeed a consecration of human labour. As Chrys. observes here, "St. Paul, after working miracles, stood in his workshop at Corinth, and stitched hides of leather together with his hands; and the Angels regarded him with love, and the Devils with fear."

St. Paul, it would seem, from his free-birth at Tarsus (cp. xvi. 37), and from his education under Gamaliel at Jerusalem (see xxii. 3), was of an opulent family; and it is probable that at his conversion he incurred a loss of estate, as well as of friends, so that he was obliged to provide for his necessities by the work of his own hands. Acts xx. 34.

But he thought all things σκύβαλα that he might win Christ, for whom he suffered the loss of all things (Phil. iii. 8).

It was not honourable to the Corinthians, that the Apostle was obliged to provide a maintenance for himself by manual labour. And their "lack of service" to him is contrasted in Scripture (see v. 5) with the thoughtful liberality of the Macedonian Churches.

But that lack of service on their part gave him an occasion for showing that he did not preach for an earthly reward; and also for stating the claim of Christ's Ministers to a competent maintenance (see 1 Cor. ix. 7. 11, 12. 18. 2 Cor. xi. 7) with greater force, because no one could allege that in so doing he was pleading for himself.

4. Ἕλληνας] A remarkable passage, as showing that the word Ἕλληνες is sometimes used in the Acts for Greek-speaking Jews and proselytes. Here Hellenes are attendants on the synagogue-worship (as in xiv. 1; xvii. 4); and it is not till after that the Jews, whom St. Paul addresses (see v. 5), had rejected the Gospel, that he says he will go to the Gentiles (v. 6), εἰς τὰ ἔθνη. See above, xi. 20.

5. κατῆλθον ἀπὸ τῆς Μακεδονίας ὅ τε Σίλας καὶ ὁ Τιμόθεος] As Dr. Paley observes, St. Paul had sent for them to come to him from Macedonia to Athens (xvii. 15, 16). And St. Paul says (1 Thess. iii. 1), "We thought good to be left at Athens alone, and sent Timotheus our brother to establish you." Thus the Epistle implies what is said in the History, and supplies what is not said; and vice versâ.

— τῷ λόγῳ] So A, B, D, E, G, and some Cursives and Versions; and this reading is adopted by Griesb., Scholz, Lach., Tisch., Born., Alf.—Elz. συνείχετο τῷ πνεύματι. The sense is —after the arrival of Silas and Timotheus, he was constrained by the Word within him urging him to speak, and striving vehemently for utterance. So the Syriac Version. Cp. Luke xii. 50, πῶς συνέχομαι, ἕως οὗ τελεσθῇ; and 2 Cor. v. 14, ἡ ἀγάπη συνέχει ἡμᾶς. And see LXX in Jerem. xx. 9; xxiii. 9. Ps. xxxix. 3. Job xxxii. 18, 19.

But why was he thus constrained, after their arrival?

Probably, because they brought to him pecuniary supplies from Thessalonica. See 2 Cor. xi. 9, "When I was present with you and wanted, I was chargeable to no man; for that which was lacking to me (at Corinth), the brethren which came from Macedonia (i.e. Silas and Timotheus) supplied." See also what he says to the Philippians of Macedonia (Phil. iv. 14—18).

Therefore, after the arrival of his friends from Macedonia he gave himself up to preaching; he left off making earthly tents, to build up the heavenly Tabernacle of the Church of God.

"It is more blessed to give than to receive" (Acts xx. 35). A double blessing was, therefore, on the Macedonian Churches. The Corinthians lacked in service to the Apostle in their own city; the Thessalonians sent supplies to St. Paul at Corinth, and so the Christians of Macedonia edified the Church in Achaia.

7. ἐκεῖθεν] i.e. from the Synagogue. Cp. xix. 9, where St. Paul separates himself from the Synagogue at Ephesus, and transfers his disciples to the "school of Tyrannus."

— Ἰούστου] Some Versions and a few MSS., E, B, D, insert Τίτου before Ἰούστου; which is defended by Bornemann.

It may be observed here that Titus is never mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles. Cp. Bp. Pearson, O. P. ii. 328.

8. Κρίσπος] who was baptized by St. Paul himself, 1 Cor. i. 14. Cp. Paley, H. P. p. 39.

— ὁ ἀρχισυνάγωγος] Mark v. 22.

There were several ἀρχισυνάγωγοι to one Synagogue, see Acts xiii. 15. And therefore the article is used here to distinguish Crispus from others who had not the same function, as the words in xvii. 34, Διονύσιος ὁ Ἀρεοπαγίτης, distinguish him from others who were not Areopagites. See on John xviii. 10.

Hence, it cannot be concluded with some, that Sosthenes, (v. 17) succeeded Crispus.

10. λαός μοι πολὺς ἐν τῇ πόλει ταύτῃ] Not so at Athens, xvii. 33, 34. The commercial Corinth was more favourable to the Gospel than Athens, with its love of novelty and empirical Intelligence.

12.] The words Γαλλίωνος ἀνθυπατεύοντος τῆς Ἀχαΐας, introduced at the beginning of the sentence, and with something of the style of an official document, are designed to call the reader's atοἱ Ἰουδαῖοι τῷ Παύλῳ, καὶ ἤγαγον αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τὸ βῆμα 13 λέγοντες, Ὅτι παρὰ τὸν νόμον ἀναπείθει οὗτος τοὺς ἀνθρώπους σέβεσθαι τὸν Θεόν. 14 [h] Μέλ- h ch. 25. 11.

λοντος δὲ τοῦ Παύλου ἀνοίγειν τὸ στόμα, εἶπεν ὁ Γαλλίων πρὸς τοὺς Ἰουδαίους, Εἰ μὲν ἦν ἀδίκημά τι ἢ ῥᾳδιούργημα πονηρόν, ὦ Ἰουδαῖοι, [i] κατὰ λόγον ἂν i Rom. 13. 3.
ἠνεσχόμην ὑμῶν· 15 εἰ δὲ ζήτημά ἐστι περὶ λόγου καὶ ὀνομάτων, καὶ νόμου τοῦ καθ' ὑμᾶς, [j] ὄψεσθε αὐτοί· κριτὴς ἐγὼ τούτων οὐ βούλομαι εἶναι. 16 καὶ j ch. 23. 29. & 25. 11, 19.
ἀπήλασεν αὐτοὺς ἀπὸ τοῦ βήματος. 17 [k] Ἐπιλαβόμενοι δὲ πάντες Σωσθένην John 18. 31. k 1 Cor. 1. 1.
τὸν ἀρχισυνάγωγον ἔτυπτον ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ βήματος· καὶ οὐδὲν τούτων τῷ Γαλλίωνι ἔμελεν.

18 [l] Ὁ δὲ Παῦλος ἔτι προσμείνας ἡμέρας ἱκανὰς, τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς ἀποταξάμενος, l Num. 6. 18. ch. 21. 24.
ἐξέπλει εἰς τὴν Συρίαν, καὶ σὺν αὐτῷ Πρίσκιλλα καὶ Ἀκύλας, κειράμενος τὴν κεφαλὴν ἐν Κεγχρεαῖς, [m] εἶχε γὰρ εὐχήν. m Rom. 16. 1.

---

tention to the influence of the imperial Authority of Rome in relation to Christianity. The incident now to be recorded is significant; it is φωνᾶν συνετοῖσι; an epitome of history. Almighty God interferes here to protect St. Paul against the malice of the Jews; and the instrument which He uses for this purpose on this and other occasions is the imperial power of Rome (cp. Baumg. ii. 218),—an adumbration of what He will do hereafter, in a more signal manner, by making all the Powers of this world, indifferent or hostile though they be, subservient to the Triumph of Christ.

— Γαλλίωνος] M. Annæus Novatus, the younger brother of the celebrated Stoic L. Annæus Seneca, uncle of the Poet Lucan; called "dulcis Gallio" by Statius (Sylv. ii. 7. 32), and "dulcis omnibus" by his brother Seneca (Præf. lib. iv. Nat. Quæst.), who dedicates to him his books "De Irâ" and "De Vitâ Beatâ." He had been adopted by Gallio the Rhetorician, from whom he derived his name. He is called dominus by Seneca—his elder brother—on account of his official dignity.

— ἀνθυπατεύοντος] Another proof of St. Luke's accuracy. Achaia had been an Imperial Province under Tiberius (Tacit. i. 76), but was restored to the Senate by Claudius. (Suetan. Claud. 25.) How much more St. Luke knew of the history of Rome than the Roman Historians did of Christ! Cp. Lardner, Cred. i. 1. 12.

— Ἀχαΐας] See xvi. 9.

17. πάντες] i. e. the Jews. The words οἱ Ἕλληνες are added by Elz. with D, E, and probably G, H, and the great majority of cursives. But A, B omit these words, and they are not in Vulg. and some other Versions, nor in Chrys., who says οὕτως ἰταμοὶ ἦσαν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι: and they have been rejected by Lachm., Tisch., and Alford.

Why did St. Luke mention the circumstance, whatever it was?

The answer seems to be supplied by the close of the verse, οὐδὲν τούτων τῷ Γαλλίωνι ἔμελεν. He intends to mark the indifference of the Roman Power, as represented by the Proconsul of Achaia. It was not so bitter in its hostility to Christianity as the Jews were, who called themselves the people of God. It did not persecute, but it would not befriend the Gospel.

It would not interfere to protect the cause of truth; and in its philosophic professions of toleration and non-interference, it allowed the laws of morality to be infringed and outraged in its presence. It seems therefore probable, that πάντες refers to the Jews. Gallio professed to be unwilling to adjudicate between the Jews and St. Paul, on the plea that the matter was not within his cognizance, and he drove the Jews from the judgment-seat; and it seems that they, disappointed of their expectation, were so reckless as to seize on Sosthenes, the chief of the Synagogue, and to beat him in the presence of Gallio. Cp. Paley, Horæ Paul. p. 40, who takes this view.

But why did the Jews beat the chief of their own Synagogue?

The answer seems to be supplied by the passage where Sosthenes is associated with St. Paul, as "Sosthenes our brother," in the beginning of the First Epistle to the Corinthians.

It may be, that the Sosthenes here is not the same as there. But Holy Scripture loves clearness, and not confusion, and seems to suggest their identity. See also next note.

— Σωσθένην] The Jews, being disappointed in their expectations against Paul, turned their rage against Sosthenes. Probably Sosthenes was favourable to St. Paul, and restrained them from destroying him, and was therefore obnoxious to the Jews. (Chrys., Ammon., Œcum.) Perhaps the injury inflicted on him by them attached him more closely to St. Paul, and hastened his conversion to Christianity, after the example of his brother ἀρχισυνάγωγος, Crispus (v. 8).

— οὐδὲν—ἔμελεν] Although this outrage in his presence was an insult to himself and to his office (Chrys.), and as if this was no ἀδίκημα! And yet Gallio was called "dulcis" (see above on v. 12),—and had professed, that if there had been any act of personal wrong (v. 14), he would do justice to the injured party. But the favourite of this world does not always make a good Judge. See further above, xiii. 7. And professions of toleration and non-interference are often only specious disguises for love of ease, or thin veils for cowardice and desire of popular applause. It is not surprising that Gallio is afterwards heard of as ministering to Nero at Rome in his frivolity and sensuality, and as stage-manager in the scenes described by Dio, lxi. 20, which caused so much grief to the honest Burrhus (Tac. Ann. xiv. 15), and to Gallio's brother Seneca. At length Gallio, the favourite, as well as his brother Seneca, the instructor of Nero, were killed by him.

18. Πρίσκιλλα] Why is Priscilla named before her husband Aquila?

"The head of the woman is the man (1 Cor. xi. 3); and she is commanded to be in subjection to her husband as the Church to Christ (Eph. v. 22—24)."

Yet here the wife is placed before her husband. And this order is adopted in some places by St. Paul also, Rom. xvi. 3. 2 Tim. iv. 19. There must be some reason for this. It is observable also, that both St. Luke and St. Paul in other places put Aquila the husband before Priscilla the wife. See Acts xviii. 2. 1 Cor. xvi. 19.

But why is Priscilla ever put first?

Bengel says, "Viro præponitur uxor spectatior;" but he does not say in what she was 'spectatior' or more honourable.

Aquila was a Jew when he came to Corinth; and he was known as such in the first instance to the Church. (See xviii. 2.) But perhaps his wife Priscilla was a Christian, and was instrumental in his Conversion (for he was converted) to Christianity.

She is associated with him in xviii. 26, where some MSS. and Editors place her name first, in bringing the celebrated Jew Apollos to a more perfect knowledge of the Gospel.

It seems not improbable, that Priscilla was distinguished by her zeal and ability in disseminating the truth, and that she had an authorized position and official function in the Church.

This conjecture is confirmed by what we read in 1 Cor. xvi. 19, where St. Paul, writing from Ephesus, says, "Aquila and Priscilla salute you; with the Church that is in their house."

And, what is more remarkable, St. Paul, in writing from Corinth to Rome, after his mention of Phœbe, the deaconess of Cenchreæ (the port of Corinth), proceeds immediately to send his salutation to the Roman Christians; and after the name of Phœbe, and at the head of that long list of names, he places first in order the name of Priscilla.

The position she here occupies, and the terms in which she is mentioned there (Rom. xvi. 3, where her name stands before her husband's), show that she had been of signal use to St. Paul and to the Church.

"Salute Priscilla and Aquila, my helpers in Christ Jesus, who for my life laid down their own necks (probably at Ephesus), unto whom not only I give thanks, but all the Churches of the Gentiles; and salute the Church that is in their house."

From the position of her name immediately after Phœbe the Deaconess, and before her husband and all the other Roman Christians, it may perhaps be inferred that Priscilla also was appointed by St. Paul to do the work of a Deaconess in the Church.

It is indeed sometimes supposed that either unmarried

19 Κατήντησε δὲ εἰς Ἔφεσον, κἀκείνους κατέλιπεν αὐτοῦ· αὐτὸς δὲ εἰσελθὼν n ch. 17. 2. εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν διελέχθη [n] τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις. 20 Ἐρωτώντων δὲ αὐτῶν ἐπὶ women of mature age, or widows, were alone admitted to that office. (See Bingham ii. 22.) But not enough is known of its constitution to authorize a confident assertion on this point.

Priscilla, by her marriage with Aquila, who was connected with the Jews by origin, and appears to have been led by his mercantile pursuits to travel from one populous city to another (for we hear of him at Rome, at Corinth, at Ephesus, and again at Rome), would have had many favourable opportunities for serving the cause of Christianity; and from the terms which she is mentioned in Scripture, she appears to have availed herself of them.

It is therefore submitted for the reader's consideration, whether she was not appointed by St. Paul to such an office in the Church as a holy and pious matron could hold in primitive times; and whether it is not an account of the official dignity annexed to that office, that her name, which, if she were regarded solely as a woman and a wife, would follow after that of her husband, is sometimes placed before it both by St. Luke and St. Paul.

This incident—trivial as at first it may seem—is also of value as showing the truth of the history, and the connexion of St. Luke with St. Paul.

The coincidence between the narrative of St. Luke, in the Acts of the Apostles, and the Epistles of St. Paul, does not consist merely in this, that they both mention the names of Aquila and Priscilla, or that they both mention that of Aquila first or that of Priscilla first, but that each sometimes places Priscilla first, and sometimes Aquila; i. e. they both seem to have regarded Priscilla as holding a peculiar position in the Church, a position no where fully explained, but only implied, and as having precedence before Aquila in that official respect, though bound to submit to him, and therefore sometimes named after him, as her husband.

— κειράμενος τὴν κεφαλὴν ἐν Κεγχρεαῖς, εἶχε γὰρ εὐχήν] The context shows that this is not said of Aquila, but of St. Paul.

So it was understood by Didymus, the Master of S. Jerome. See Caten. p. 307, where he says, "Paul the Apostle of the Gentiles became a Jew to the Jews, in order that they might not be estranged from him as one who revolted from the Lord; and therefore, according to the custom of his country, he polled his head at Cenchreæ, being under a Vow; and further, when he arrived at Jerusalem, he joined himself to the four men who had such a vow as this upon them." See xxi. 23.

As Bede observes here (p. 73), and in Retract. (p. 148), both Jerome and Augustine apply the words to St. Paul. Jerome says (Ep. ii.), "Fratribus valedicens navigabat Syriam, et cum eo Priscilla et Aquila; et totondit sibi in Cenchreis caput;" and Augustine (Ep. 80), "Timotheum circumcidit, et Cenchreis votum absolvit."

This would seem to intimate that the present reading of the Vulgate, "qui sibi totonderat caput," is not so ancient as the fifth century.

Some have asserted that Chrysostom applies it to Aquila; but this is an error.

It is also said by some (e. g. Meyer, p. 333) that Theophylact understands it of Aquila, and not of St. Paul. But Theophylact says (iii. p. 140), "Because he seemed to some to teach men to abandon the Law (of Moses), and they were offended with him on that account, and would not receive his preaching, therefore he does this here, and in the Temple at Jerusalem (xxi. 24. 26) in compliance with their scruples. And this is what he says of himself, 'I became as under the Law to them who were under the Law' (1 Cor. ix. 20)." Therefore Theophyl. applies it to St. Paul, and Bede observes, "hæc fecit Paulus ut Judæos lucrifaceret."

It is true that in the Editions of this author (Theophylact), there is also a scholium connecting it with Aquila; but this seems to be a more recent interpolation.

Modern Expositors are divided. Erasm., Luther, Beza, Calvin, Bengel, Whitby, Rosenm., Olsh., Neander, De Wette, Baumg. (ii. p. 224), Hackett (p. 261), Alford, and others refer it to St. Paul.

Hammond, Grotius, Valck., Kuin., Wieseler, Meyer, to Aquila.

The argument used by some, that if St. Luke had not intended that Ἀκύλας should be construed with κειράμενος, he would not have put Priscilla first, is refuted by the passages cited in the preceding note. The verbs and participles of this verse and the next refer to St. Paul; and Aquila, is only introduced parenthetically.

The words εἶχεν εὐχήν are best illustrated by Acts xxi. 23, εἰσὶν ἡμῖν ἄνδρες τέσσαρες εὐχὴν ἔχοντες ἐφ' ἑαυτῶν. The εὐχή is the Hebrew נֶדֶר (nedher), a vow, and when thus placed by itself, can hardly be understood to mean any thing else but what was called εὐχή by the Jewish Hellenists (e. g. Philo, i. p. 357, εὐχὴ μεγάλη), i. e. the vow of a Nazarite, concerning which see Numb. vi., and the Talmudistic traditions in the Mishna Tract. Nazir, Tom. iii. pp. 146—178, ed. Surenhus.

This then appears certain, that when St. Paul ἐκείρατο at Cenchreæ, the eastern port of Corinth, he had the vow of a Nazarite upon him. As Bede says, "Navim ascensurus caput ex voto totondit," and he explains the 'votum' as that of a Nazarite.

But what is the meaning of the word κειράμενος?

The action here is supposed by some Expositors to be similar to that in Acts xxi. 24, where we read of the "four men having a vow," and "shaving their heads."

But it ought to be noticed, that St. Luke does not use the same word in the two places. Here he says κειράμενος, there (xxi. 24) ξυρήσονται.

The word used by St. Luke in the present passage (κειράμενος), is never applied by the LXX to describe the final Nazaritic shaving of the head on the expiration of the vow.

The word κείρεσθαι is used to describe the more ordinary act, that of cutting the hair short—as for instance, the polling of his head by Absalom, who, as the Rabbis say, was a perpetual Nazarite. Lightfoot, i. p. 1092; ii. p. 774. See 2 Sam. xiv. 26, ἐν τῷ κείρεσθαι αὐτὸν τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐγένετο ἀπ' ἀρχῆς ἡμερῶν εἰς ἡμέρας ὡς ἂν ἐκείρετο, ὅτι κατεβαρύνετο ἐπ' αὐτὸν, καὶ κειρόμενος ἔστησε τὴν τρίχα τῆς κεφαλῆς αὐτοῦ κ.τ.λ.

Absalom let his hair grow by reason of a vow of Nazaritism, perhaps taken in a spirit of personal vanity. We do not hear that he ever ἐξυρήσατο κεφαλήν. But he periodically ἐκείρατο κεφαλήν, on account of the weight of his hair. A temporary Nazarite might poll his head (κείρασθαι) in foreign lands. See Mishna, l. c. vol. v. p. 167, "Si raserit capillum capitis Nasiræatûs sui, tum subjiciat ollæ (i. e. in the Temple), si tonsus fuerit in provinciâ, tum non subjiciat ollæ." And some of the Rabbis say, that in this case his hair was to be taken to Jerusalem and burnt at the door of the Sanctuary (Lightfoot, i. p. 1092), who says, "If he polled his head in the country (i. e. out of Palestine), as Paul did at Cenchreæ, he was to bring his hair and burn it," in the room for the Nazarites at the Temple.

The word used by the LXX to describe the shaving of the head by the temporary Nazarite is ξυρήσασθαι. This word is used to signify both the process of shaving the head after a Levitical pollution (when the days already past were counted as nothing, see Numb. vi. 12, and the term of the vow began again), and also to describe the final process of shaving the head when the term of the vow had expired. See Numb. vi. 9, ἐάν τις ἀποθάνῃ ἐπ' αὐτῷ (and so he incur a pollution by nearness to a dead body) παραχρῆμα μιανθήσεται ἡ κεφαλὴ εὐχῆς αὐτοῦ, καὶ ξυρήσεται.

And again, as to the final shaving, on the expiration of the term of the εὐχή, or vow, it is said, Numb. vi. 18, ξυρήσεται ὁ ἡγιγμένος παρὰ τὰς θύρας τῆς σκηνῆς τοῦ μαρτυρίου τὴν κεφαλὴν τῆς εὐχῆς αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐπιθήσει τὰς τρίχας ἐπὶ τὸ πῦρ, ὃ ἐστιν ὑπὸ τὴν θυσίαν τοῦ σωτηρίου.

The head of the Nazarite could not be shaved finally except at a particular place, i. e. at the door of the Sanctuary, which, in St. Paul's time, was at Jerusalem (Numb. vi. 18). Cp. Joseph. B. J. ii. 15. 1, ἐπεδήμει δὲ Βερνίκη ἐν τοῖς Ἱεροσολύμοις, εὐχὴν ἐκτελοῦσα τῷ Θεῷ. Josephus adds, that it was a custom for persons in sickness or other distress, to make a vow for thirty days before that on which they were about to offer sacrifices, and to vow to abstain from wine and to shave their heads. And in doing this at Jerusalem they went barefoot.

Therefore St. Paul's act at Cenchreæ was not such a shaving of the head.

St. Paul himself marks a distinction between κείρεσθαι and ξυρήσασθαι. 1 Cor. xi. 6, αἰσχρὸν γυναικὶ τὸ κείρασθαι ἢ ξυρᾶσθαι. The Vulgate well distinguishes between the two words here and in xxi. 21 and 1 Cor. xi. 6, rendering κείρεσθαι by tondere, and ξυρᾶσθαι by radi and decalvari. Cp. the Mishna as cited above.

The word κείρεσθαι signifies to poll the hair, or cut it short by scissors or shears. But ξυρήσασθαι is to shave the hair off, at least in part, with a ξυρὸν or razor, so that the scull appears.

Hence it may be inferred,

That the word κειράμενος does not describe the shaving of the head on the expiration of the term of a Nazarite's vow;

πλείονα χρόνον μεῖναι παρ' αὐτοῖς οὐκ ἐπένευσεν, 21 ° ἀλλ' ἀπετάξατο αὐτοῖς εἰπών, Δεῖ με πάντως τὴν ἑορτὴν τὴν ἐρχομένην ποιῆσαι εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα· p πάλιν δὲ ἀνακάμψω πρὸς ὑμᾶς, τοῦ Θεοῦ θέλοντος. 22 Καὶ ἀνήχθη ἀπὸ τῆς Ἐφέσου· καὶ κατελθὼν εἰς Καισάρειαν ἀναβὰς καὶ ἀσπασάμενος τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, κατέβη εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν. 23 Καὶ ποιήσας χρόνον τινὰ ἐξῆλθε, διερχόμενος καθεξῆς τὴν Γαλατικὴν χώραν καὶ Φρυγίαν, ἐπιστηρίζων πάντας τοὺς μαθητάς.

24 q Ἰουδαῖος δέ τις, Ἀπολλὼς ὀνόματι, Ἀλεξανδρεὺς τῷ γένει, ἀνὴρ λόγιος, κατήντησεν εἰς Ἔφεσον, δυνατὸς ὢν ἐν ταῖς γραφαῖς. 25 r Οὗτος ἦν κατηχημένος τὴν ὁδὸν τοῦ Κυρίου· καὶ ζέων τῷ πνεύματι, ἐλάλει καὶ ἐδίδασκεν ἀκριβῶς τὰ περὶ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, ἐπιστάμενος μόνον τὸ βάπτισμα Ἰωάννου· 26 οὗτός τε ἤρξατο παρρησιάζεσθαι ἐν τῇ συναγωγῇ. Ἀκούσαντες δὲ αὐτοῦ Ἀκύλας καὶ Πρίσκιλλα, προσελάβοντο αὐτὸν, καὶ ἀκριβέστερον αὐτῷ ἐξέθεντο τὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ ὁδόν. 27 s Βουλομένου δὲ αὐτοῦ διελθεῖν εἰς τὴν Ἀχαΐαν, προτρεψάμενοι o 1 Cor. 4. 19. James 4. 15. Heb. 6. 3.

p ch. 19. 21. & 20. 16.
q 1 Cor. 1. 12. & 3. 5, 6. Tit. 3. 13.
r ch. 19. 3.
s 1 Cor. 3. 6.

That it is here used to describe the act of cutting the hair short by a temporary Nazarite;

That the addition of the words εἶχε γὰρ εὐχήν intimate that St. Paul would not have cut his hair short, if he had not made a vow of Nazaritism.

Having taken such a vow, he would be allowed κείρεσθαι, because according to the Law he could not shave his head before he came to Jerusalem (Jahn, Archæol. §. 394. Winer, R. W. B. p. 141, Art. 'Nasiräer'), and his hair might therefore otherwise become too long for comfort or for decency.

It seems that St. Paul did not choose to cut his hair short (κείρεσθαι) at Corinth, where he remained more than a year and a half (vv. 11. 18), but deferred it till he came to Cenchreæ, the sea-port of Corinth, when he was just about to set sail for the East; where he would come into contact with many Jews and Jewish Christians. Indeed, in the next verse it is said that he entered into the Synagogue at Ephesus and disputed with the Jews (v. 19). And soon after he came to Jerusalem for the Feast.

And perhaps the reason why he said (xviii. 21) that he must by all means (πάντως) be at Jerusalem at the next approaching feast (for he did not attend all the feasts, nor nearly so), was that he had this vow upon him; and that he must take the hair he had cut short at Cenchreæ, to be burnt at the temple at Jerusalem, and accomplish his vow by a final shaving, and by votive offerings at the Temple. As is said in the Mishna (Eduioth iv. 11), "Si quis vovisset Nazireatum extra Terram (i. e. out of the Holy Land), proficisci debuit in Terram, et illic votum implere." Cp. Lardner, i. p. 115.

The knowledge that he was under such a vow would have been of much use to him in his dealings with the Jewish Christians at Ephesus and elsewhere. It would be a visible and practical refutation of the charge that he despised the Levitical Law, and condemned those who continued to observe it.

Another reason, probably, why he did not choose to shear off his hair or cut it short at Corinth, but waited till he came to Cenchreæ (where he left Greece for a time), was because with the Greeks it was usual only for slaves to wear the hair cropped short, ἔπειτα δῆτα δοῦλος ὢν κόμην ἔχεις; (Aristoph.)

To have appeared with his hair cut short in the Churches at Corinth among the Greek Christians, might have exposed him to ridicule and his preaching to contempt. He acted with prudence in reference to the Gentile Christians in not cutting his hair off at Corinth, nor till he was on the point of quitting Greece. And if the Greek Christians heard, as they probably would from some one at Cenchreæ, that the Apostle had cut his hair short there, they would learn also that he did it "because he had a vow," and would thus be taught a lesson of forbearance towards the Jewish Christians from the example of the Apostle, who they knew did not enforce the Levitical Law, and yet, as they heard, did not despise it, but in his charity to the Jewish Christians, and to the Jews, sometimes complied with it in his own person.

The grounds of St. Paul's compliance, in this and other respects, with the Levitical Law, are stated by St. Augustine in one of his Letters to St. Jerome (Epist. 82).

After a considerable interval, St. Paul arrived a second time at Jerusalem (xxi. 17). He had been charged with contempt of the Levitical Law, as St. James tells him (xxi. 21); and he is advised by the Bishop of Jerusalem to associate with himself four other persons under a vow of temporary Nazaritism, and to be at charges with them (that is, to pay the expenses of the sacrifices to be offered in the Temple at the expiration of their vow), that they might shave their heads. And so St. Paul on the next day entered the Temple with them, announcing the fulfilment of the days of their purification, until the sacrifice was offered for each of them. (Acts xxi. 26.) The suggestion of St. James, and St. Paul's ready compliance, are explained by what he had done before at Cenchreæ.

On the whole, by not polling his hair till he came to Cenchreæ, and by polling it there "because he had a vow," he exemplified the great principle of his Apostolic life—Charity.

19. κατήντησε] A, B, E, have κατήντησαν, which has been received by Lachm., Tisch., and Alford.

21. δεῖ με πάντως—Ἱεροσόλυμα] For the reason see on v. 18.

— ἑορτὴν τὴν ἐρχομένην] The feast of Pentecost. See Anger. p. 61; Wieseler, p. 48; Alford, p. 190; and the Chronological Synopsis prefixed to this Volume.

22. ἀναβάς] to Jerusalem.

23. τὴν Γαλατικὴν] See xvi. 6.

24. Ἀπολλώς] A name contracted from Ἀπολλώνιος. (See above on xv. 22.) He is spoken of in connexion with the Church of Corinth, Acts xix. 1. 1 Cor. i. 12; iii. 4—6. 22; iv. 6; and Ephesus, xvi. 12; and Crete, Tit. iii. 13.

— λόγιος] Distinguished for erudition in history and law, especially of his own country, and eloquence. Hesychius: λόγιος, ὁ τῆς ἱστορίας ἔμπειρος, πεπαιδευμένος. Maris: λογίους τοὺς πολυΐστορας, Ἀττικῶς καὶ Ἡρόδοτος· λογίους τοὺς διαλεκτικούς, Ἕλληνες. Phrynichus, p. 84: λόγιος, ὡς οἱ πολλοὶ λέγουσιν ἐπὶ τοῦ δεινοῦ εἰπεῖν καὶ ὑψηλοῦ, οὐ τιθέασιν οἱ ἀρχαῖοι, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ τοῦ τὰ ἑκάστῳ ἔθνει ἐπιχώρια ἐξηγουμένου ἐμπείρως. So Josephus, Ant. xix. 5. 2, Ἰουδαίων λογιώτατοι, καὶ τῶν πατρίων ἐξηγηταὶ νόμων. Thom. Mag.: λογίους τοὺς πολυΐστορας οἱ ἀρχαῖοι Ἀττικίζοντες, ὡς καὶ Ἡρόδοτος· λογίους δὲ τοὺς διαλεκτικοὺς οἱ ὕστερον.

25. κατηχημένος] See Luke i. 4. Rom. ii. 18.

— Ἰησοῦ] Elz. Κυρίου, but A, B, D, E, have Ἰησοῦ, which has been received by Lachm., Tisch., Alf.

To a certain extent he taught rightly; i. e. that Christ was come, and that Jesus is the Christ, the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world (John i. 29. 36). It is probable also that he was acquainted with the facts of the Crucifixion, Resurrection, and Ascension; but the only Baptism that he knew was that of John; i. e. he had not been baptized into Christ. Not (as some suppose) that he knew only the baptism of John; for he was a Christian Catechumen, κατηχημένος τὴν ὁδὸν τοῦ Κυρίου, v. 25, and Aquila and Priscilla took him and expounded to him more exactly than he had known it hitherto, the way of God; i. e. the divine plan of salvation by Baptism into Christ; and he was baptized with the Baptism of Christ, as may be concluded from the case of the twelve men in the next chapter, xix. 3—5.

26. παρρησιάζεσθαι] This example affords no sanction (as has been supposed) for preaching the Gospel without a due call or mission. Any one might expound in the Synagogue if invited to do so; and no one could do so without invitation. And as to his teaching in the first instance out of the synagogue, there is no evidence to show that it was approved, but rather the contrary; nor is it said that afterwards he had no call or mission. The contrary is implied in 1 Cor. iii. 5. 22.

— Ἀκύλας καὶ Πρίσκιλλα] So Elz.; but A, B, E put Priscilla first. So Lachm., Tisch., Alf. Cp. v. 18.

οἱ ἀδελφοὶ ἔγραψαν τοῖς μαθηταῖς ἀποδέξασθαι αὐτόν· ὃς παραγενόμενος συνεβάλετο πολὺ τοῖς πεπιστευκόσι διὰ τῆς χάριτος· 28 εὐτόνως γὰρ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις διακατηλέγχετο δημοσίᾳ, ἐπιδεικνὺς διὰ τῶν γραφῶν εἶναι τὸν Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν.

a ch. 18. 24. 1 Cor. 1. 12.

XIX. 1 a Ἐγένετο δὲ ἐν τῷ τὸν Ἀπολλὼ εἶναι ἐν Κορίνθῳ, Παῦλον διελθόντα τὰ ἀνωτερικὰ μέρη, ἐλθεῖν εἰς Ἔφεσον· καὶ εὑρών τινας μαθητὰς 2 b εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, Εἰ Πνεῦμα ἅγιον ἐλάβετε πιστεύσαντες; οἱ δὲ πρὸς αὐτόν, Ἀλλ' οὐδὲ εἰ Πνεῦμα ἅγιον ἔστιν ἠκούσαμεν. 3 Εἶπέ τε, Εἰς τί οὖν ἐβαπτίσθητε; οἱ δὲ εἶπον, Εἰς τὸ Ἰωάννου βάπτισμα. 4 c Εἶπε δὲ Παῦλος, Ἰωάννης μὲν ἐβάπτισε βάπτισμα μετανοίας, τῷ λαῷ λέγων εἰς τὸν ἐρχόμενον μετ' αὐτὸν ἵνα πιστεύσωσι, τουτέστιν εἰς τὸν Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν. 5 Ἀκούσαντες δὲ ἐβαπτίσθησαν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ· 6 d καὶ ἐπιθέντος αὐτοῖς τοῦ Παύλου τὰς χεῖρας, ἦλθε τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἐπ' αὐτούς, ἐλάλουν τε γλώσσαις καὶ προεφήτευον. 7 Ἦσαν δὲ οἱ πάντες ἄνδρες ὡσεὶ δώδεκα.

b John 7. 39. ch. 8. 16. & 10. 44.

c Matt. 3. 11. Mark 1. 4, 8. Luke 3. 16. John 1. 26. ch. 1. 5. & 11. 16.

d ch. 2. 4. & 6. 6. & 8. 17. & 10. 46. & 11. 15.

8 Εἰσελθὼν δὲ εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν ἐπαῤῥησιάζετο, ἐπὶ μῆνας τρεῖς e διαλεγόμενος καὶ f πείθων τὰ περὶ τῆς βασιλείας τοῦ Θεοῦ. 9 g Ὡς δέ τινες ἐσκληρύνοντο καὶ ἠπείθουν, κακολογοῦντες τὴν ὁδὸν ἐνώπιον τοῦ πλήθους, ἀποστὰς ἀπ' αὐτῶν ἀφώρισε τοὺς μαθητὰς, καθ' ἡμέραν διαλεγόμενος ἐν τῇ σχολῇ Τυράννου τινός. 10 h Τοῦτο δὲ ἐγένετο ἐπὶ ἔτη δύο· ὥστε πάντας τοὺς κατοικοῦντας τὴν Ἀσίαν ἀκοῦσαι τὸν λόγον τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰουδαίους τε καὶ Ἕλληνας.

e ch. 18. 19.

f ch. 28. 23.

g 2 Tim. 1. 15. ver. 23. & 24. 14.

h ch. 20. 31.

11 i Δυνάμεις τε οὐ τὰς τυχούσας ὁ Θεὸς ἐποίει διὰ τῶν χειρῶν Παύλου· 12 j ὥστε καὶ ἐπὶ τοὺς ἀσθενοῦντας ἐπιφέρεσθαι ἀπὸ τοῦ χρωτὸς αὐτοῦ σουδάρια ἢ σιμικίνθια, καὶ ἀπαλλάσσεσθαι ἀπ' αὐτῶν τὰς νόσους, τά τε πνεύματα τὰ i Mark 16. 20. ch. 14. 3.

j ch. 5. 15.

---

27. συνεβάλετο διὰ τῆς χάριτος] He contributed much to the spiritual edification of the faithful by the grace which he received in the Church through faith, by baptism and laying on of hands. (Grotius.)

CH. XIX. 1. Ἀπολλὼ ἐν Κορίνθῳ] Compare St. Paul's references to Apollos in his first Epistle to the Corinthians (i. 12; iii. 6); and see Paley, H. P. p. 36.

— τὰ ἀνωτερικὰ μέρη] the inland parts. See xviii. 22, 23.

2. πιστεύσαντες] on your reception into the Church by a public profession of faith. See on xiii. 48.

— εἰ Πνεῦμα ἅγιον ἔστι] St. Paul had asked them, Whether they received the Holy Ghost, when they made a profession of Faith? They reply, that when they made their profession they did not even hear whether the Holy Ghost is—i. e. is to be had.

The phrase is similar to John vii. 39, οὔπω γὰρ ἦν Πνεῦμα ἅγιον, i. e. the Holy Ghost was not as yet manifested in the Church, for Jesus was not yet glorified.

The verb ἔστιν is emphatic here, and therefore so accented; it signifies in-dwelling and energetic operation as the vital principle of the Church.

When these persons were received into the Church, they did not hear whether the prophecy which John the Baptist himself had delivered, that Jesus would baptize with the Holy Ghost and fire (Mat. iii. 11. Luke iii. 16), had yet been fulfilled by the outpouring of the Holy Ghost on those who had been baptized.

4. Ἰωάννης μέν] On the difference between John's baptism and Christ's—in that the latter was in the Name of the Blessed Trinity, and conferred grace—the former not—see on Matt. iii. 1—11, and John iv. 1.—χριστὸν is omitted here by A, B, E.

6. καὶ ἐπιθέντος κ.τ.λ.] See above on viii. 14—18, and on x. 47.

St. Paul is seen here, at Ephesus, exercising the same Apostolic functions which the "very chiefest Apostles," Peter and John, are described in the Acts to have exercised at Samaria (viii. 17).

Thus, he who was not one of the original Twelve, and who had not seen Christ upon earth, and had been a persecutor of the Church—and was therefore disparaged by some in comparison with them—is placed by divine authority on a par with them in the eye of the Church. Thus also it is proved that the collation of the gift of the Holy Ghost, by the laying on of hands on baptized persons, was not restricted to those who were appointed to the Apostolic office by Christ Himself when upon earth. And the gift of the Holy Ghost by the hands of St. Paul, is, as it were, a link of connexion between the first administration of Confirmation by the original members of the Apostolic College, Peter and John, at Samaria, and the subsequent exercise of the same authority by persons afterward appointed, such as Timothy and Titus, to be successors of the Apostles, and to discharge the ordinary functions of the Apostolic office, for the perpetual edification of the Christian Church.

— ἐλάλουν γλώσσαις] in the different languages, which the Spirit spake by their mouths. (Theophyl.)

9. τὴν ὁδόν] See ix. 2; xix. 23. See here also a fulfilment of Christ's saying (Matt. xi. 10).

— καθ' ἡμέραν—τινός] he could not dispute daily in the Synagogues, for they were open only thrice a week, and the Jews blasphemed "that Way." Therefore, as he had done at Corinth (xviii. 7), he collected the disciples in another place; either a private rabbinical seminary (Hammond) or a school of grammar and rhetoric—where they could meet daily.

So the Church grew by persecution, and the word was preached to both Jews and Greeks.

10. τὴν Ἀσίαν] See ii. 9. 1 Cor. xvi. 8, 9. 11, 12.

11. δυνάμεις—οὐ τὰς τυχούσας] extraordinary. See Acts xxviii. 2.

On the phrase οὐχ ὁ τυχὼν = not obvious, but singular, see Kuin. and others, who quote Philo de Opif. m. p. 31, C, οὐκ ἐκ τοῦ τυχόντος μέρους γῆς, non ex quâvis terræ glebâ. Athen. lib. 9, p. 402, C, οὐ τὴν τυχοῦσαν ἡδονὴν, voluptatem exquisitam. Longin. Sect. 9, § 9, Moses, Judæorum legislator dicitur οὐχ ὁ τυχὼν ἀνὴρ, non vulgaris intelligentiæ homo.

Here is another proof of the divine sanction given to St. Paul's office and mission, and putting him on a level with St. Peter and the other Apostles (Acts v. 15).

12. ἐπιφέρεσθαι] A, B, E, and some cursives have ἀποφέρεσθαι, which has been received by some Editors.

— σουδάρια] See Luke xix. 20.

— σιμικίνθια] 'semi-cinctia.' Aprons used by workmen, perhaps by St. Paul in his σκηνοπηγία. See Martial xiv. 153, who distinguishes them from tunics thus: "Det tunicam dives: ego te præcingere possum."

Some have censured the acts of these persons resorting to St. Paul, as well as to St. Peter (Acts v. 15), as superstitious. But it is to be remembered that in both cases the application was in behalf of sick people, who could not come in person to the Apostles. The fact is related without censure by the Holy πονηρὰ ἐκπορεύεσθαι. 13 k Ἐπεχείρησαν δέ τινες ἀπὸ τῶν περιερχομένων Ἰουδαίων ἐξορκιστῶν ὀνομάζειν ἐπὶ τοὺς ἔχοντας τὰ πνεύματα τὰ πονηρὰ τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ, λέγοντες, Ὁρκίζω ὑμᾶς τὸν Ἰησοῦν ὃν ὁ Παῦλος κηρύσσει. 14 Ἦσαν δέ τινες υἱοὶ Σκευᾶ Ἰουδαίου ἀρχιερέως ἑπτὰ οἱ τοῦτο ποιοῦντες. 15 Ἀποκριθὲν δὲ τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ πονηρὸν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Τὸν Ἰησοῦν γινώσκω καὶ τὸν Παῦλον ἐπίσταμαι· ὑμεῖς δὲ τίνες ἐστέ; 16 Καὶ l ἐφαλλόμενος ἐπ' αὐτοὺς ὁ ἄνθρωπος, ἐν ᾧ ἦν τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ πονηρὸν, κατακυριεύσας αὐτῶν ἴσχυσε κατ' αὐτῶν, ὥστε γυμνοὺς καὶ τετραυματισμένους ἐκφυγεῖν ἐκ τοῦ οἴκου ἐκείνου. 17 m Τοῦτο δὲ ἐγένετο γνωστὸν πᾶσιν, Ἰουδαίοις τε καὶ Ἕλλησι, τοῖς κατοικοῦσι τὴν Ἔφεσον· καὶ n ἐπέπεσε φόβος ἐπὶ πάντας αὐτοὺς, καὶ ἐμεγαλύνετο τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ. 18 o Πολλοί τε τῶν πεπιστευκότων ἤρχοντο ἐξομολογούμενοι καὶ ἀναγγέλλοντες τὰς πράξεις αὐτῶν. 19 Ἱκανοὶ δὲ τῶν τὰ περίεργα πραξάντων, συνενέγκαντες τὰς βίβλους, κατέκαιον ἐνώπιον k Mark 9. 38. Luke 9. 49.

l Luke 8. 29.
m Luke 1. 65. ch. 7. 16. & 2. 43.
n ch. 2. 43. & 5. 5, 11. Luke 1. 65.
o Matt. 3. 6. Rom. 10. 10.

Ghost; and the Apostles do not seem to have blamed them. It is also here added that "they were healed," and that "evil spirits were thus ejected." This testimony for these miraculous cures is more remarkable as coming from Luke the physician.

The healing power was not in the shadow of St. Peter or in the handkerchiefs of St. Paul; but in Christ responding to the touch of faith, and operating by the shadow or vestments of His Apostles on earth, as He had done when present in his human person by the fringes of His garment, touched by the hand of faith. See Matt. ix. 20, 21; xiv. 36. Mark v. 27. Luke viii. 44.

Was there any superstition in this? Was there any credulity in supposing that at a time when for wise reasons Christ wrought extraordinary miracles by His Apostles (and these miracles are called here expressly extraordinary (οὐχ αἱ τυχοῦσαι) that we may not look for them now) He could and would work by their shadow or their handkerchiefs on those poor helpless folk who could not come to their hands, and who had faith in His Divine Power acting by them?

If so, then there would also be credulity in supposing that the Divine Physician of body and soul can give health by medicines to the one, and grace by Sacraments to the other.

Perhaps the working of Christ by means of the shadow of Peter and of the handkerchiefs of St. Paul, was designed to rebuke the scepticism of those who will not believe that Grace is given by means of Water, and of Bread and Wine, dispensed by Christ's Ministers; and in order to comfort and strengthen the hearts of those who believe that it is there to be found by the touch of Faith.

Thus Christ's power is magnified in the working of His grace; and the devout soul is assured of the reality of His operation on itself, by means of such instruments, as, in human calculations, seem inadequate for the purposes they are designed by Him to perform.

Besides, our Lord had declared, that after His Ascension greater works would be done by those who believed in Him than He Himself had wrought upon earth (John xiv. 12). That is, when He was glorified in heaven, and had received the gift of the Holy Ghost to bestow upon men, He would operate by their instrumentality greater miracles than He had wrought in person on earth; and thus prove that He was glorified, and that by virtue of the Holy Ghost, given after His Ascension to the Church, He, though not corporeally present, works greater things in His Church than He had wrought when visible on earth. See note on John xiv. 12.

Here, then, we see a fulfilment of Christ's prophecy and promise, a proof of His Ascension, and an assurance of His perpetual presence and operation in the Church.

It may also be remarked that it is the shadow of Peter passing-by, by which Christ works, and by handkerchiefs taken from the body of Paul. Is it not, therefore, suggested that the bodies of the saints of God, which are Temples of the Holy Ghost (1 Cor. vi. 19. 1 Cor. iii. 16), are regarded by Christ as chosen vessels for the indwelling of His Grace; and that thus a lesson of reverence for the body is inculcated (1 Thess. iv. 4), and motives to holiness and purity are supplied, and a hope of greater glory and blessedness reserved for it, when it shall be made "like unto Christ's glorious body, according to the mighty working whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself?" (Phil. iii. 21.)

We may remark, also, that there was a special reason for the operation of these miracles at Ephesus;

The population of that city was then subject to the influence of Satan exercised upon them by means of magical arts (Ἐφέσια γράμματα), witchcraft and sorcery, practised both by Gentiles and Jews. Almighty God showed in Egypt, by the rod of Moses, that His power is greater than that of Satan working by Magicians; He proved by the words of Daniel at Babylon, that He is more excellent in might and wisdom than the Evil Spirit who operated by the Chaldæan Astrologers; so now at Ephesus He shows by the handkerchiefs of Paul that the Gospel is opposed to all the practices of magic and sorcery by which Satan deceived the Gentile World; and is able, even by the feeblest instruments and beggarly elements, to destroy the works of the Devil.

Hence in v. 15 we read the confession of the Evil Spirit, that he owned the power of Jesus; and in vv. 18, 19 we see the surrender and conflagration of the Books of Magic as a consequence of the manifestation of the power "of the Lord Jesus" (v. 17) by these miracles of Paul.

Since also Christ, glorified in heaven, could and did work these miracles of healing, and of casting out Evil Spirits, by means of the shadow of the body of St. Peter, and of handkerchiefs and aprons from the body of St. Paul, the faithful Christian may defy the power of the Evil One acting upon his body by physical disease, or on his mind by spiritual agency.

13. ὁρκίζω] So A, B, D, E.—Elz. ὁρκίζομεν.

14. ἀρχιερέως] head of one of the twenty-four courses of Priests. See Matt. ii. 4; xvi. 21; xx. 18.

15. τὸν Ἰησοῦν γινώσκω] See Mark i. 24, 25. Acts xvi. 17.

— γινώσκω—ἐπίσταμαι] The Vulg. has here "Jesum novi et Paulum scio." A distinction is made between γινώσκω and ἐπίσταμαι. The former signifies knowledge producing some affection and emotion of mind. I recognize and own His power. Cp. James ii. 19.

But ἐπίσταμαι—which is of rarer occurrence, being only once used in the Gospels (Mark xiv. 68)—expresses a knowledge of a lower degree, such as acquaintance with a fact, without reflection upon it; and sometimes only an instinct. Cp. Jude 10, ὅσα οὐκ οἴδασι βλασφημοῦσι, ὅσα δὲ φυσικῶς ὡς τὰ ἄλογα ζῶα ἐπίστανται, ἐν τούτοις φθείρονται.

— ὑμεῖς δὲ τίνες;] A remarkable instance of the power of Christ's Name. Even when uttered by an unbelieving Jew, it extorted a confession of the truth from the Evil Spirit; and it recoiled with terrible force against those who dared to use it without faith in Christ, and without a due mission from Him,—Who are ye? A solemn warning to those who venture to minister the Word and Sacraments of Christ without either such inward faith or external mission from Christ.

16. κατακυριεύσας αὐτῶν] A, B, D, and several cursive MSS., have ἀμφοτέρων here for αὐτῶν, and so Vulg.

18. ἐξομολογούμενοι] As in Matt. iii. 6. Mark i. 5, they were baptized in the river Jordan confessing their sins; οἱ πεπιστευκότες are they who had been convinced by Paul's preaching, especially of the doctrine of the remission of sins through faith in Christ.

19. τῶν τὰ περίεργα πραξάντων] Ephesus was famous for its curious arts, such as Magic, Astrology, and was (like other Heathen cities, especially Rome), at that time the resort of diviners, genethliaci, Mathematici, Chaldæi (S. Jerome, præf. Epist. ad Ephes.), whence magical figures, letters, symbols, and charms, were called Ἐφέσια γράμματα.

See the authorities in Wetstein and Grotius here.

The famous γόης, Apollonius of Tyana, had a school at Ephesus in the reign of Nero, and was there honoured with a πάντων· καὶ συνεψήφισαν τὰς τιμὰς αὐτῶν, καὶ εὗρον ἀργυρίου μυριάδας πέντε. [20] [p] Οὕτω κατὰ κράτος ὁ λόγος τοῦ Κυρίου ηὔξανε καὶ ἴσχυεν.

[21] [q] Ὡς δὲ ἐπληρώθη ταῦτα, ἔθετο ὁ Παῦλος ἐν τῷ πνεύματι, διελθὼν τὴν Μακεδονίαν καὶ Ἀχαΐαν, πορεύεσθαι εἰς Ἰεροσόλυμα, εἰπών, Ὅτι μετὰ τὸ γενέσθαι με ἐκεῖ, δεῖ με καὶ Ῥώμην ἰδεῖν. [22] [r] Ἀποστείλας δὲ εἰς τὴν Μακεδονίαν δύο τῶν διακονούντων αὐτῷ, Τιμόθεον καὶ Ἔραστον, αὐτὸς ἐπέσχε χρόνον εἰς τὴν Ἀσίαν.

[23] [s] Ἐγένετο δὲ κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν ἐκεῖνον τάραχος οὐκ ὀλίγος περὶ τῆς ὁδοῦ. [24] [t] Δημήτριος γάρ τις ὀνόματι, ἀργυροκόπος, ποιῶν ναοὺς ἀργυροῦς Ἀρτέμιδος, παρείχετο τοῖς τεχνίταις ἐργασίαν οὐκ ὀλίγην· [25] οὓς συναθροίσας, καὶ τοὺς περὶ τὰ τοιαῦτα ἐργάτας, εἶπεν, Ἄνδρες, ἐπίστασθε ὅτι ἐκ ταύτης τῆς ἐργασίας ἡ εὐπορία ἡμῶν ἐστι· [26] [u] καὶ θεωρεῖτε καὶ ἀκούετε ὅτι οὐ μόνον Ἐφέσου, ἀλλὰ σχεδὸν πάσης τῆς Ἀσίας ὁ Παῦλος οὗτος πείσας μετέστησεν ἱκανὸν ὄχλον, λέγων ὅτι οὐκ εἰσὶ θεοὶ οἱ διὰ χειρῶν γινόμενοι. [27] Οὐ μόνον δὲ τοῦτο κινδυνεύει ἡμῖν τὸ μέρος εἰς ἀπελεγμὸν ἐλθεῖν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ τῆς μεγάλης θεᾶς Ἀρτέμιδος ἱερὸν εἰς οὐδὲν λογισθῆναι, μέλλειν δὲ καὶ καθαιρεῖσθαι τὴν μεγαλειότητα αὐτῆς, ἣν ὅλη ἡ Ἀσία καὶ ἡ οἰκουμένη σέβεται. [28] Ἀκούσαντες δὲ, καὶ γενόμενοι πλήρεις θυμοῦ, ἔκραζον λέγοντες, Μεγάλη ἡ Ἄρτεμις Ἐφεσίων. [29] [v] καὶ ἐπλήσθη ἡ πόλις ὅλη τῆς συγχύσεως· ὥρμησάν τε ὁμοθυμαδὸν εἰς τὸ θέατρον, συναρπάσαντες Γάϊον καὶ Ἀρίσταρχον Μακεδόνας, συνεκδήμους Παύλου. [30] Παύλου δὲ βουλομένου εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὸν δῆμον, οὐκ εἴων αὐτὸν οἱ μαθηταί. [31] Τινὲς δὲ καὶ τῶν Ἀσιαρχῶν, ὄντες αὐτῷ φίλοι, p Isa. 55. 11. ch. 6. 7. & 12. 24.

q ch 18. 21. Rom. 15. 23—28. Gal. 2. 1.
r ch. 13. 5. Rom. 16. 23. 2 Tim. 4. 20. s 2 Cor. 1. 8. ch. 9. 2.
t ch. 16. 16.
u Ps. 115. 4. Jer. 10. 3.
v ch. 20. 4. & 27. 2. Col. 4. 10.

---

statue (Philostr. v. Apollon. libb. iv. & v. See A Lapide and Biscoe, pp. 290—293. Cp. Howson, ii. p. 16). Probably St. Paul refers to the γόητες of Ephesus in 2 Tim. iii. 13.

This incident is more important, because there have not been wanting some who have ascribed the Miracles of the Apostles, and even of Christ Himself, to "curious arts," such as Animal Magnetism, Natural Magic, &c. But Satan does not cast out Satan; and (as Didymus observes) wherever the Gospel grew, πᾶσα γοητεία κατελύετο.

— τὰς βίβλους] "Vana religio tollit malos libros" (Bengel), who observes, that as if in recompense for this sacrifice of bad Books, Ephesus became afterwards rich in good Books. It received an Epistle from St. Paul, and the Gospel and Apocalypse from St. John. They had τὰ ἱερὰ γράμματα, instead of τὰ Ἐφέσια γράμματα. It received also an Epistle from S. Ignatius. Ample amends for its lost books on 'Curious Arts.'

— ἀργυρίου] δραχμῶν.

21. διελθὼν τ. Μακεδονίαν] See xx. 1, 2.

— δεῖ με καὶ Ῥώμην ἰδεῖν] See Paul's declarations in the Epistle to the Romans (i. 13; xv. 23), of his desire and intention to visit them. Cp. Paley, Hor. Paul. p. 19. See also on Acts xxiii. 11; xxv. 21.

22. Ἔραστον] Erastus being a financier (οἰκονόμος τ. πόλεως, of Corinth, Rom. xvi. 23; xv. 25, and notes), was a fit person to be employed by St. Paul in the collection of alms to be gathered in Achaia and Macedonia, for the poor saints of Jerusalem.

— ἐπέσχε εἰς] implying an adhesion to his work there.

24. Δημήτριος—ἀργυροκόπος · ναοὺς ἀργυροῦς] The Gospel of Christ, in its various conflicts with the Evil Spirit in the various forms he had assumed in the heathen world, had often to contend with the love of Gain. See the case of the Pythoness at Philippi (Acts xvi. 16—19), that of the Magicians, &c. here (vv. 19, 20), and now Demetrius and the members of his guild or fellow-craftsmen (vv. 24, 25).

The feelings expressed by Demetrius in his speech (vv. 25—28), still obstruct the progress of the Gospel in the World. Cp. Bentley's Sermon on the power of the Spirit of κακηλεία (on 2 Cor. ii. 17) in the corruption of truth. Works, iii. pp. 241—262, and above on xvi. 16—19.

The ναοὶ of silver were small portable models of the statue and ναὸς, (ædiculæ portabiles, argenteæ) of the Ephesian Diana, like Παλλάδια περιαυτόφορα (Athens and Attica, ch. xvi., note), and were carried on journeys and voyages, and placed in private houses for protection. See Mede's Works, i. p. 299. Howson, ii. 89.

Medallions of Ephesus still survive, representing the πρόναος and statue of the Ephesian Artemis. One of the former may be seen in Kitto, p. 398, and of the latter in Akermann, p. 49.

A learned commentator of the Church of Rome (Corn. A Lapide) says here,—and the traveller who visits Loretto at this day can testify to the truth of what he says,—"eas imagines gestabant, sicut nostri peregrini gestant imagines B. Virginis Lauretanæ (our lady of Loretto), aut domi in lararii et oratoriis eas reponebant."

— Ἀρτέμιδος] The Artemis of Ephesus was not like the Diana of Greece and Rome, figured as a fair archer and huntress, but resembled rather an Indian Deity. See Jerome, præf. Epist. ad Ephes., "Scribebat Paulus ad Ephesios Dianam colentes non hanc venatricem, quæ arcum tenet atque succincta est, sed illam multimammiam, quam Græci πολύμαστον vocant."

— ἐργασίαν] gain. See xvi. 16.

27. τοῦτο τὸ μέρος] A polite euphemism for 'idol-manufactory.' Cp. Isa. v. 20.

— ἀπελεγμόν] contempt; from ἀπελέγχεσθαι, explodi. Cp. Symmach. Ps. cxviii. 118, ἀπήλεγξας πάντας, where LXX have ἐξουδένωσας.

— οἰκουμένη] Apuleius says (lib. ii.), "Diana Ephesiæ, cujus nomen unicum multiformi specie ritu vario nomine multijugo totus veneratur orbis." Its history is given by Howson, ii. 85, "Templum Dianæ Ephesiæ," is called "Orbis terrarum miraculum" by Plin. N. H. xxxvi. 14, and it is described as "factum à totâ Asiâ;" and therefore in contending against idolatry at Ephesus, the Apostle was contending against the religious superstitions of the Gentile World.

29. Γάϊον] Caius. It would appear that four different persons, bearing this common name, are mentioned in the New Testament.

Caius of Macedonia, here; Caius of Derbe (xx. 4); Caius of Corinth, whom Paul baptized, and who is called his ξένος (1 Cor. i. 14. Rom. xvi. 23); Caius, the beloved, to whom St. John addresses his third Epistle.

— Ἀρίσταρχον] See Acts xx. 4; xxvii. 2, afterwards imprisoned with St. Paul, Col. iv. 10. Cp. Philem. 24.

— συνεκδήμους] συνοδοιπόρους, Hesych.

31. Ἀσιαρχῶν] the Presidents of the heathen games chosen from the principal citizens of Asia, the "Commune Asiæ," i. e. of the region of which Ephesus was the head. The following is from Kuin., "Horum munus erat, in honorem deorum et imperatoris Romani, quotannis ludos theatrales, suis sumptibus (ut Romæ sedilium) edere, unde nonnisi opulentiores hanc provinciam πέμψαντες πρὸς αὐτὸν παρεκάλουν μὴ δοῦναι ἑαυτὸν εἰς τὸ θέατρον. 32 Ἄλλοι μὲν οὖν ἄλλο τι ἔκραζον, ἦν γὰρ ἡ ἐκκλησία συγκεχυμένη, καὶ οἱ πλείους οὐκ ᾔδεισαν τίνος ἕνεκεν συνεληλύθεισαν. 33 [w] Ἐκ δὲ τοῦ ὄχλου προεβίβασαν Ἀλέξανδρον, προβαλόντων αὐτὸν τῶν Ἰουδαίων· ὁ δὲ Ἀλέξανδρος κατασείσας τὴν χεῖρα ἤθελεν ἀπολογεῖσθαι τῷ δήμῳ. 34 Ἐπιγνόντες δὲ ὅτι Ἰουδαῖός ἐστι, φωνὴ ἐγένετο μία ἐκ πάντων ὡς ἐπὶ ὥρας δύο κραζόντων, Μεγάλη ἡ Ἄρτεμις Ἐφεσίων. 35 Καταστείλας δὲ ὁ γραμματεὺς τὸν ὄχλον φησίν, Ἄνδρες Ἐφέσιοι, τίς γάρ ἐστιν ἄνθρωπος ὃς οὐ γινώσκει τὴν Ἐφεσίων πόλιν νεωκόρον οὖσαν τῆς μεγάλης Ἀρτέμιδος καὶ τοῦ Διοπετοῦς; 36 Ἀναντιρρήτων οὖν ὄντων τούτων, δέον ἐστὶν ὑμᾶς κατεσταλμένους ὑπάρχειν, καὶ [x] μηδὲν προπετὲς πράττειν. 37 Ἠγάγετε γὰρ τοὺς ἄνδρας τούτους, οὔτε [y] ἱεροσύλους οὔτε βλα-

[w] ch. 12. 17. & 13. 16. & 21. 40.

[x] Prov. 14. 29.

[y] ch. 25. 8.

---

subire poterant. Munus Asiarchæ annuum erat. Eligebantur hoc modo; initio cujusque anni, i. e. sub æquinoctium autumnale, singulæ urbes Asiæ concionem habebant, in quâ uni ex suis civibus Ἀσιαρχίας honorem deferebant. Tum unaquæque civitas legatum in certam urbem mittebat Asiæ proconsularis primariam, quales erant Ephesus, Smyrna, Sardes, ad τὸ κοινὸν, commune gentis concilium, qui nomen ejus, qui domi electus erat, publicè renuntiaret. Ex his quos singulæ urbes Asiæ Asiarchas nominaverant, synedri nonnisi decem Asiarchas designabant, et ex horum numero Proconsul Romanus summum sacrorum præfectum eligebat. Asiarchæ porro, ut ex monumentis liquet, non semper Ephesi, ut existimarunt nonnulli, sed in aliis etiam civitatibus, sedem suam habebant, ubi communia Asiæ sacra habebantur, veluti Smyrnæ, Cyzici. Eo autem tempore, quo Paulus Ephesi commorabatur, Asiarcha cum collegis ibi sedem habebat, ab eoque ludi editi sunt."

Compare the account of S. Polycarp's martyrdom at Smyrna, c. 12 (in Patres Apostol. ed. Jacobson, and the notes, vol. ii. pp. 614, 615, ed. 2). There the Asiarch Philip, as President of the games, is requested to let loose the lion against Polycarp, but declines to do so. And now the Asiarchs are desirous to save Paul from the violence of the people. Perhaps he alludes to this circumstance, when he says κατ' ἄνθρωπον ἐν Ἐφέσῳ ἐθηριομάχησα (1 Cor. xv. 32), i.e. as far as I myself was concerned I fought with beasts at Ephesus, but God delivered me. See Chrys. in Caten. here, p. 323.

The mention of the Asiarchs as present here, may perhaps intimate that this uproar took place at the time of the public religious games; when Demetrius could reckon on a more than ordinary manifestation of religious zeal in behalf of the patron goddess of Ephesus.

— ὄντες αὐτῷ φίλοι] A remarkable circumstance. The Apostle of the Gentiles has friends among the Presidents of the religious games in honour of Artemis. He converts an Areopagite at Athens (xvii. 34), baptizes an Ἀρχισυνάγωγος at Corinth (xviii. 8. Cp. xviii. 17), and has made a favourable impression on some of the Asiarchs at Ephesus; and has friends in Cæsar's household at Rome (Phil. iv. 22), — a proof of his courage and charity, and of the truth of his cause; and of the power with which it penetrated into, and leavened, all classes of society.

An evidence this (as Paley has remarked) of St. Luke's veracity. He says that some of the Asiarchs were friendly to St. Paul. He does not spend any time in accounting for this singular fact. He is at no pains to make it seem probable, but he states it simply and boldly, because it is true.

This incident is also to be noticed as a proof of Providential dispensation, and pre-arrangement for the diffusion of the Gospel by the spread of the Roman arms. Ephesus was under Roman sway. The ancient gods of the nations were now vassals of Rome. Diana had been conquered by Cæsar. Thus the influence of the Pagan Mythology on the minds of the upper classes was impaired, and they were more ready to receive a purer faith. See Bp. Pearson, O. P. ii. 35.

— θέατρον] The theatre was a common place for ἐκκλησίας in Greek cities. Even at Athens the Pnyx was deserted for it; probably because the theatre could be protected from rain and sun, which the Pnyx could not.

Cp. above, xii. 21, Herod's Oration, which was delivered in a theatre. "Joseph. B. I. vii. 3. 3, τοῦ δήμου τῶν Ἀντιοχέων ἐκκλησιάζοντος εἰς τὸ θέατρον, τόν τε πατέρα τὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ἐνεδείκνυτο κατηγορῶν. Corn. Nepos. Vit. Timol. 4, 'veniebat autem in theatrum (Syracus.) cùm ibi concilium populi haberetur.' Val. Max. ii. 2, 6, 'legati à senatu Tarentum—missi —in theatrum, ut est consuetudo Græciæ, introducti, legationem, quibus acceperunt verbis, peregerunt.' Tacit. Hist. ii. 80. 6, de Vespasiano: 'tum Antiochensium theatrum ingressus, ubi illis consultare mos est.'" (Kuin.)

The Theatre at Ephesus, of which the outline only now remains on the soil, was one of the largest in the world. Fellowes, Asia Minor, p. 274, quoted by Howson, ii. p. 83.

33. Ἀλέξανδρον] of whom as yet nothing had been said; but perhaps he is the same as the Alexander mentioned by St. Paul in his Epistle to the Bishop of Ephesus (1 Tim. i. 19, 20. 2 Tim. iv. 14).

If so, he had apostatized from Christianity. Perhaps from the mention of his trade, χαλκεὺς, it may be inferred that he was connected by ἐργασία with the ἀργυροκόποι of v. 24; and thus we have a view suggested to us of the combination of the artificers and workers in metal, and all the large family of Tubal Cain (Gen. iv. 22), who supplied idols to Heathenism, against the pure faith of the Gospel.

35. ὁ γραμματεύς] the Custos Rotulorum, keeper of the archives of the city, the Recorder.

See the Ephesian Coin in Akermann, p. 53, and below on v. 38.

— νεωκόρον] cultricem Νεωκόρος. (1) ὁ τὸν νεὼν κορῶν, ἢ σαρῶν. (2) ὁ τὸν νεὼν κοσμῶν, ἢ καλλωπίζων. (3) a marguillier, or warden of a temple. (4) a votary of a particular deity, as the patron of the city, &c.

Hence in the coins of Ephesus we see representations of Artemis circumscribed with the words Ἐφεσίων Νεωκόρων. See Akermann, p. 54, and note v. 38.

This practice of Gentile superstition has also found its imitators in Christian times, where particular countries, cities, and individuals, derive a title from a local or personal object of Devotion;

Thus Hungary is described as follows by a Roman-catholic divine: "Regnum hoc Hungariæ, propter vetustissimam constantemque Deiparæ venerationem, Mariani regni epitheton promeritum" (Abbé Jordanszky de Hæresi abjurandâ, 1822, p. 122). Cp. Bishop Bull, Serm. iv., "Such is the worship given to the Blessed Virgin by many, that they deserve to be called Marians rather than Christians."

It is remarkable that one of the spring months, corresponding to our May, was sacred to Artemis, at Ephesus, and called Artemision. See the ancient Ephesian inscription (in Boeck, Corpus 2954. Howson, ii. p. 95), ὅλον τὸν μῆνα ἀνακεῖσθαι τῇ θεῷ, ἄγεσθαι δὲ τὰς ἑορτὰς, καὶ τὴν τῶν Ἀρτεμισίων πανήγυριν. And the month of May is now called, in a large part of Christendom, the "Mois de Marie."

— τῆς μεγάλης] Elz. adds θεᾶς, which is not in A, B, D, E. This popular ellipsis is found in the romance of an Ephesian writer of the fifth century, Xenophon Ephesius, I (not Xenophon's Ephesiaca, as cited by some), ὀμνύω τὴν πάτριον ἡμῖν θεὸν (see v. 37) τὴν μεγάλην Ἐφεσίων Ἄρτεμιν.

This passage (quoted by Rosenm. p. 263) is also of interest as showing the continuance of the worship of Artemis for some centuries after St. Paul's visit.

— τοῦ Διοπετοῦς] ἀγάλματος, ὅπερ ἄνωθεν ἐκ τοῦ Διὸς διαθήλασθαι (read καθήλασθαι, desiluisse) φάντο. (Ammon.) So the παλαιὸν βρέτας of Minerva Polias at Athens, called ἀρχαῖον καὶ διοπετές. See Pausan. i. 26, φήμη ἐστὶ πεσεῖν ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ. Cp. Iph. Taur. 977, οὐρανοῦ πέσημα. Schol. Aristid. p. 320. (Dindorf.)

37. ἱεροσύλους] (1) Spoilers or profaners of temples. (2) Sacrilegious persons, as here.

σφημοῦντας τὴν θεὸν ὑμῶν. 38 Εἰ μὲν οὖν Δημήτριος καὶ οἱ σὺν αὐτῷ τεχνῖται ἔχουσι πρός τινα λόγον, ἀγόραιοι ἄγονται, καὶ ἀνθύπατοι εἰσίν· ἐγκαλείτωσαν ἀλλήλοις. 39 Εἰ δέ τι περὶ ἑτέρων ἐπιζητεῖτε, ἐν τῇ ἐννόμῳ ἐκκλησίᾳ ἐπιλυθήσεται. 40 Καὶ γὰρ κινδυνεύομεν ἐγκαλεῖσθαι στάσεως περὶ τῆς σήμερον, μηδενὸς αἰτίου ὑπάρχοντος περὶ οὗ δυνησόμεθα ἀποδοῦναι λόγον τῆς συστροφῆς ταύτης. 41 Καὶ ταῦτα εἰπὼν ἀπέλυσε τὴν ἐκκλησίαν.

a ch. 19. 29—40. 1 Tim. 1. 3.

XX. 1 [a] Μετὰ δὲ τὸ παύσασθαι τὸν θόρυβον, προσκαλεσάμενος ὁ Παῦλος τοὺς μαθητὰς, καὶ ἀσπασάμενος, ἐξῆλθε [b] πορευθῆναι εἰς τὴν Μακεδονίαν.

b 1 Cor. 16. 5.

2 Διελθὼν δὲ τὰ μέρη ἐκεῖνα, καὶ [c] παρακαλέσας αὐτοὺς λόγῳ πολλῷ, ἦλθεν εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα· 3 [d] ποιήσας τε μῆνας τρεῖς, γενομένης αὐτῷ ἐπιβουλῆς ὑπὸ τῶν Ἰουδαίων μέλλοντι ἀνάγεσθαι εἰς τὴν Συρίαν, ἐγένετο γνώμη τοῦ ὑποστρέφειν διὰ Μακεδονίας.

c 1 Thess. 2. 3, 11.

d ch. 9. 23. & 23. 12.

4 [e] Συνείπετο δὲ αὐτῷ ἄχρι τῆς Ἀσίας Σώπατρος Πύρρου Βεροιαῖος· Θεσσαλονικέων δὲ Ἀρίσταρχος καὶ Σεκοῦνδος, καὶ Γάϊος Δερβαῖος, καὶ Τιμόθεος, Ἀσιανοὶ δὲ Τύχικος καὶ Τρόφιμος· 5 οὗτοι προελθόντες ἔμενον ἡμᾶς ἐν Τρωάδι. 6 [f] ἡμεῖς δὲ ἐξεπλεύσαμεν μετὰ τὰς ἡμέρας τῶν ἀζύμων ἀπὸ Φιλίππων, καὶ e ch. 16. 1. & 19. 29. & 21. 29. & 27. 2. Col. 4. 7, 10. 1 Cor. 1. 14. Eph. 6. 21. 2 Tim. 4. 12, 20. Tit. 3. 12.

f ch. 16. 8. 2 Cor. 2. 12.

— θεόν] So A, B, D, E*, and others; and this is confirmed by Xenophon, Ephes. i. See v. 35.—Elz. θεάν.

38. ἀγόραιοι ἄγονται] sc. ἡμέραι. Bos Ellips. v. ἡμέρα: ἀγόραιος μέν ἐστιν ἡ ἡμέρα, ἀγοραῖος δὲ ὁ Ἑρμῆς ὁ ἐπὶ τῆς ἀγορᾶς, (Ammon. p. 4. Winer, § 6, p. 51.)

Cp. Luke xxiv. 21, τρίτην ταύτην ἡμέραν ἄγει σήμερον. Assize-days, or court-days, come round, and Proconsuls attend, before whom the cause may be tried. It does not follow from these words that it was then the time of the sessions or assizes.

The expression is a general one, and therefore the plural ἀνθύπατοι (Proconsuls) is used: "Uno tempore, unus erat Proconsul, sed Scriba dicit in plurali, de eo quod nunquam non esse soleat." (Bengel.) — ἀνθύπατοι] The following ancient Inscription, of the age of Trajan, from an aqueduct at Ephesus (in Boeck's Corpus, No. 2966, vol. ii. p. 606, and quoted by Howson, ii. 91), happily illustrates the accuracy of St. Luke's language in speaking of Ephesus, ἡ φιλοσέβαστος Ἐφεσίων βουλὴ, καὶ ὁ ΝΕΩΚΟΡΟΣ ΔΗΜΟΣ (see here, vv. 30. 33. 35), καθιέρωσαν, ἐπὶ ΑΝΘΥΠΑΤΟΥ (v. 38) Πεδουκαίου Πρεισκείνου, ψηφισαμένου Τιβ. κλ. Ἰταλικοῦ, τοῦ ΓΡΑΜΜΑΤΕΩΣ (v. 35) τοῦ ΔΗΜΟΥ.

There is an Ephesian coin extant of the age of Nero with the inscription, Ἐφ(εσίων) Αἰμόκλῃ Ἀονιόλῃ ΑΝΘΥΠΑΤΩι ΝΕΟΚΟΡΩΝ. (Akermann, p. 55)

CH. XX. 2. διελθὼν τὰ μέρη ἐκεῖνα] Probably as far as Illyricum. See the Epistle to the Romans, xv. 19, written from Hellas after the journey to Macedonia. Cp. Paley, Hor. Paul. Ep. Rom. iv. p. 21. Howson, ii. 154.

— Ἑλλάδα] Southern Greece distinguished from the Northern, or Macedonia, which contained Macedonia Proper, Illyricum, Epirus, and Thessaly. See xvi. 9, 10. 12.

This is the only place where the word Ἑλλὰς occurs in the N. T.,—a memorial of its former grandeur, before it was merged in the Roman Province of Achaia. Perhaps in this wider circuit St. Paul visited the countries on the west of the mountain-chain of Pindus in his descent southward from Illyricum.

4. Πύρρου] Not in Elz., but in A, B, D, E, and in many Cursives, and received by Lachm., Tisch., Born., Alford.

— Τιμόθεος] of Lystra, xvi. 1.

— Τύχικος] mentioned therefore by St. Paul in writing to the Ἀσιανοί. See Eph. vi. 21. Col. iv. 7. Tit. iii. 12. 2 Tim. iv. 12.

Elz. and most editions have Τυχικός. But in proper names the accent, which would have been otherwise on the last syllable, is thrown back. Thus in N. T. we have Ἐπαίνετος, not -τὸς, Φίλητος, not -τὸς, Ἔραστος, not -τός. Cf. Winer, § 6, p. 49.

The word ΧΡΙΣΤΟΣ forms a signal and almost unique exception to this rule; as if it was the desire of those who used it to remind themselves and others of its etymology.

— Τρόφιμος] of Ephesus,—with St. Paul at Jerusalem, xxi. 29; and left by him at Miletus on his last visit to Rome. 2 Tim. iv. 20.

5. οὗτοι] Therefore none of these persons, here specified, can have been the author of the Acts.

— ἡμᾶς] Thus almost imperceptibly does the blessed Evangelist join himself to St. Paul's company, and intimate his own fellowship with him. See above, xvi. 10.

Contrast with this modest silence the eulogistic declaration of St. Paul concerning his faithful companion St. Luke, Λουκᾶς ὁ ἰατρὸς, ὁ ἀγαπητός (Col. iv. 14); and Λουκᾶς ἐστι μόνος μετ' ἐμοῦ (2 Tim. iv. 11), "Let another praise thee, and not thine own lips" (Prov. xxvii. 2).

If there be a code of gentle demeanour, good breeding, courteous manners, and refined delicacy in the world, surely it is the New Testament.

— ἐν Τρωάδι] It is observable that they waited for St. Paul and St. Luke at Troas, the place where he seems to have joined St. Paul in the first instance. See xvi. 8. 11.

Henceforth St. Luke appears to have remained with St. Paul till the end of the time comprehended in the Acts of the Apostles.

St. Luke appears to have been left by St. Paul at Philippi (see xvi. 16. 40; xvii. 1), and to have now rejoined the Apostle in that neighbourhood. See v. 6.

It was St. Paul's practice, after he had planted the Gospel, to leave some persons behind him to water it. Thus he left Silas and Timotheus at Berœa, xvii. 14, and Aquila and Priscilla at Ephesus, xviii. 19, and Titus in Crete, Titus i. 5; cp. 1 Tim. i. 3. And perhaps this is what is implied of Erastus, 2 Tim. iv. 20, Ἔραστος ἔμεινεν ἐν Κορίνθῳ, he abode there to watch over the Church, and to endure patiently what he might be required to suffer for it.

Probably St. Luke was entrusted with similar duties at Philippi, and in its neighbourhood.

Another characteristic of St. Paul's apostolic and missionary practice was to revisit those whom he had evangelized; this is intimated here in ὑποστρέφειν διὰ Μακεδονίας. See xiv. 21; xv. 36.

The topography of Troas, and St. Paul's journey thence to Miletus, is illustrated by Howson, ch. xx.

6. μετὰ τὰς ἡμέρας τῶν ἀζύμων] Observe the minute specification of days in this journey from Philippi to Jerusalem. There are two limits marked,—the days of unleavened bread at Philippi (xx. 6), and the Feast of Pentecost at Jerusalem (xx. 16; xxi. 15), with an interval of about seven weeks between them. It seems that it is intended to be inferred from the mention of his stay at Philippi at the Passover, that St. Paul did not feel himself obliged to attend the great festivals of the Levitical Ritual at Jerusalem. And yet he was desirous of doing so on certain occasions, to show that he did not, under existing circumstances, disparage the observance of the Ceremonial Law. Cp. xviii. 21.

The Days of Unleavened Bread had now been changed into the Christian Easter; and perhaps he stayed at Philippi in order to celebrate there the annual Festival of Christ's Resurrection with the Philippian Church. We find also a mention there of the celebration of the weekly Festival of the Resurrection at Troas (see v. 7).

There are also two notices of a stay of seven days in this journey (see xx. 6, and xxi. 4), which may perhaps have a reference to the observance of the Christian Sunday.

ἤλθομεν πρὸς αὐτοὺς εἰς τὴν Τρωάδα ἄχρις ἡμερῶν πέντε, οὗ διετρίψαμεν ἡμέρας ἑπτά. 7 [g] Ἐν δὲ τῇ μιᾷ τῶν σαββάτων, συνηγμένων ἡμῶν κλάσαι ἄρτον, ὁ Παῦλος διελέγετο αὐτοῖς, μέλλων ἐξιέναι τῇ ἐπαύριον· παρέτεινέ τε τὸν λόγον μέχρι μεσονυκτίου. 8 Ἦσαν δὲ λαμπάδες ἱκαναὶ ἐν τῷ ὑπερῴῳ οὗ ἦμεν συνηγμένοι. 9 Καθεζόμενος δέ τις νεανίας, ὀνόματι Εὔτυχος, ἐπὶ τῆς θυρίδος, καταφερόμενος ὕπνῳ βαθεῖ, διαλεγομένου τοῦ Παύλου ἐπὶ πλεῖον κατενεχθεὶς ἀπὸ τοῦ ὕπνου ἔπεσεν ἀπὸ τοῦ τριστέγου κάτω, καὶ ἤρθη νεκρός. 10 [h] Καταβὰς δὲ ὁ Παῦλος ἐπέπεσεν αὐτῷ, καὶ συμπεριλαβὼν εἶπε, Μὴ θορυβεῖσθε· ἡ γὰρ ψυχὴ αὐτοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ ἐστιν. 11 Ἀναβὰς δὲ καὶ κλάσας τὸν ἄρτον καὶ γευσάμενος, ἐφ' ἱκανόν τε ὁμιλήσας ἄχρις αὐγῆς, οὕτως ἐξῆλθεν. 12 Ἤγαγον δὲ τὸν παῖδα ζῶντα, καὶ παρεκλήθησαν οὐ μετρίως.

13 Ἡμεῖς δὲ προελθόντες ἐπὶ τὸ πλοῖον ἀνήχθημεν εἰς τὴν Ἄσσον, ἐκεῖθεν μέλλοντες ἀναλαμβάνειν τὸν Παῦλον· οὕτω γὰρ ἦν διατεταγμένος, μέλλων αὐτὸς πεζεύειν. 14 Ὡς δὲ συνέβαλεν ἡμῖν εἰς τὴν Ἄσσον, ἀναλαβόντες αὐτὸν ἤλθομεν εἰς Μιτυλήνην· 15 κἀκεῖθεν ἀποπλεύσαντες τῇ ἐπιούσῃ κατηντήσαμεν ἀντικρὺ Χίου. τῇ δὲ ἑτέρᾳ παρεβάλομεν εἰς Σάμον· καὶ μείναντες ἐν Τρωγυλλίῳ τῇ ἐχομένῃ ἤλθομεν εἰς Μίλητον· 16 [i] κεκρίκει γὰρ ὁ Παῦλος παραπλεῦσαι τὴν Ἔφεσον, ὅπως μὴ γένηται αὐτῷ χρονοτριβῆσαι ἐν τῇ Ἀσίᾳ·

g ch. 2. 42, 46. 1 Cor. 10. 16. & 11. 20.

h 1 Kings 17. 21. 2 Kings 4. 34.

i ch. 21. 12. & 24. 17.

— ἄχρις ἡ. π.] at the end of five days.—"Insolens forma loquendi pro Græcorum more πεμπταῖοι." (Valck.) — ἡμέρας ἑπτά] seven days, a term thrice mentioned in the Acts, as the period of St. Paul's stay (xxi. 4; xxviii. 14). See last note but one.

7. συνηγμένων ἡμῶν] For ἡμῶν Elz. has τῶν μαθητῶν; but ἡμῶν is found in A, B, D, E, and many Cursives and Versions, and has been received by Lachm., Tisch., Born., and Alf.—Elz. has τοῦ before κλάσαι, but τοῦ is not in A, B, E, G, and numerous cursives.

It may be added here, that in v. 8, for ἦμεν Elz. has ἦσαν, but ἦμεν is in A, B, D, E, G, H. This reading, and ἡμῶν in v. 7, are deserving of notice, as showing that St. Luke was present at what he describes; that he joined in the Holy Communion administered on that Lord's Day, and heard the Sermon of St. Paul, and saw Eutychus raised from the dead.

Observe the word συνηγμένων. They were not summoned, but came together, met for a stated religious purpose. Hence the word Σύναξις. Cp. ἐπισυναγωγή, for Public Worship, Heb. x. 25, a word connected with the Συναγωγὴ of the Elder Church of the Jews.

Some learned writers have supposed (see Augustine, Epist. 36, p. 117, and Howson, ch. xx. vol. ii. p. 256) that the μία σαββάτων here mentioned is the evening which succeeded the Jewish Sabbath, and that St. Paul set forth on his journey early on the Sunday morning (pp. 256—259).

But it appears to be more probable, that this meeting for breaking of bread took place on the evening of Sunday: Κυριακὴ ἦν, (says Chrys.,) καὶ μέχρι μεσονυκτίου τὴν διδασκαλίαν ἐκτείνει, καὶ συνετάραξε τὴν ἑορτὴν ὁ διάβολος by the death of Eutychus; but this was overruled for the glory of God and the diffusion of the Gospel, by his restoration to life by St. Paul. Cp. Lewin's remarks, pp. 589—592.

It appears, then, that this was a stated Day and Hour for Christian assemblies, not perhaps without some reference to the fact mentioned by St. John (xx. 19), concerning the first Lord's Day of the Christian Church; "The same day at evening, being the first day of the week, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you!"

The Holy Supper was instituted on an evening; and it was "toward evening" when our Lord took bread and blessed it, and gave it to the two disciples at Emmaus (Luke xxiv. 29, 30).

It is not likely that St. Luke, writing for the use of Gentile Christians in all ages, should reckon his days from sunset, in the Jewish manner, especially when speaking of a Christian Festival. Even St. Matthew, writing more particularly for Jewish Christians, says (xxviii. 1), ὀψὲ σαββάτων, τῇ ἐπιφωσκούσῃ εἰς μίαν σαββάτων.

On the time of receiving the Holy Communion, which varied in different Churches in ancient times, see Bingham, xiii. 9, and xv. 7.

These things were done on the Lord's Day (Chrys.). Observe the intimation here given, that the primitive Christians assembled specially on the Lord's Day for the reception of the Holy Eucharist (see ii. 46), and for hearing of the Word. Cp. Routh, R. S. i. 113. 120. 137. 180. 188. 224; ii. 4. 45. 722. 240; iii. 100. 147. 157.

Justin Martyr, in the second century (Apol. i. 85, p. 143, ed. Ashton, = § 67, p. 269, ed. Otto) says, "On the day called Sunday, our common assembly of all who are in the cities and the country, is held; and we read the Writings of the Apostles, and the Books of the Prophets." Then he describes the Sermon; and then the Administration of the Lord's Supper by the προεστὼς and οἱ διάκονοι; and the collection of alms for the Poor. He adds, "We all assemble together in common on the day called Sunday, because it is the day on which God created the world out of darkness and ὕλη, and on which Jesus Christ our Saviour arose from the dead; for on the day before Saturday they crucified Him, and on the day after Saturday He arose from the grave, and taught His Apostles and disciples those things which we have delivered to you, for your consideration."

In the two preceding Chapters, Justin M. speaks distinctly of the two Sacraments, Baptism and the Lord's Supper. And beginning with this description in the Acts of the Apostles, we may trace through his Apology, written less than fifty years after St. John's death, a clear stream of teaching concerning primitive Christian Worship and Ritual.

On the institution of the Lord's Day, see also above on Matt. xxviii. 1. John xx. 26.

8. λαμπάδες] The miracle here related was wrought at night, but the mention of the lamps shows that those who were present could see it done. They could see Eutychus fall, and perhaps they took some of the lamps down with St. Paul, and saw the dead restored to life.

9. καθεζόμενος] So A, B, D, E, and several Cursives. Elz. καθήμενος.

— τριστέγου] "tabulata tertia," Juvenal iii. 199.

10. ἐπέπεσεν] "hoc gestu non est usus Christus; est autem eo usus Elias, Elisæus, Paulus." (Bengel.)

11. τὸν ἄρτον] Observe the article—'the bread,'—i.e. of the Holy Eucharist.

Elz. has not the article, but it is in A, B, C, D*, and has been received by Lachm., Tisch., Bornemann, Alford.

The disciples had met 'to break bread' (v. 7). St. Paul preaches till midnight. Eutychus falls from the window of the third story. Paul descends from the ὑπερῷον, and revives him, and returns to break the bread; and after the breaking of the bread he has a repast (γεύεται, see x. 10), and converses till dawn, and departs on the morrow, i.e. on Monday morning. See on v. 7.

13. Ἄσσον] in Mysia, twenty-four Roman miles south of Troas. Pausan. Eliac. ii. 4.

— διατεταγμένος] "Significatio media. Sic enim disposuerat ipse." (Bengel.) See on xiii. 48. Winer, § 39, p. 234.

16. κεκρίκει] So A, B, C, D, E.—Elz. ἔκρινε.

ἔσπευδε γὰρ, εἰ δυνατὸν ἦν αὐτῷ, τὴν ἡμέραν τῆς Πεντηκοστῆς γενέσθαι εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα.

17 Ἀπὸ δὲ τῆς Μιλήτου πέμψας εἰς Ἔφεσον, μετεκαλέσατο τοὺς πρεσβυk ch. 19. 10. τέρους τῆς ἐκκλησίας. 18 k Ὡς δὲ παρεγένοντο πρὸς αὐτὸν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, Ὑμεῖς ἐπίστασθε, ἀπὸ πρώτης ἡμέρας ἀφ' ἧς ἐπέβην εἰς τὴν Ἀσίαν πῶς μεθ' ὑμῶν τὸν πάντα χρόνον ἐγενόμην, 19 δουλεύων τῷ Κυρίῳ μετὰ πάσης ταπεινοφροσύνης καὶ δακρύων καὶ πειρασμῶν, τῶν συμβάντων μοι ἐν ταῖς ἐπιβουλαῖς l ver. 27. τῶν Ἰουδαίων· 20 l ὡς οὐδὲν ὑπεστειλάμην τῶν συμφερόντων, τοῦ μὴ ἀν-m Mark 1. 15. Luke 24. 47. αγγεῖλαι ὑμῖν καὶ διδάξαι ὑμᾶς δημοσίᾳ καὶ κατ' οἴκους, 21 m διαμαρτυρόμενος Ἰουδαίοις τε καὶ Ἕλλησι τὴν εἰς τὸν Θεὸν μετάνοιαν, καὶ πίστιν τὴν εἰς τὸν n ch. 19. 21. Κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν. 22 n Καὶ νῦν ἰδοὺ, δεδεμένος ἐγὼ τῷ πνεύματι o ch. 21. 4, 11. & 9. 16. πορεύομαι εἰς Ἰερουσαλὴμ, τὰ ἐν αὐτῇ συναντήσοντά μοι μὴ εἰδώς, 23 o πλὴν ὅτι τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον κατὰ πόλιν διαμαρτύρεταί μοι λέγον, ὅτι δεσμά με p ch. 21. 13. 2 Tim. 4. 7. Gal. 1. 1. Tit. 1. 3. καὶ θλίψεις μένουσιν. 24 p Ἀλλ' οὐδενὸς λόγον ποιοῦμαι, οὐδὲ ἔχω τὴν ψυχήν μου τιμίαν ἐμαυτῷ, ὡς τελειῶσαι τὸν δρόμον μου μετὰ χαρᾶς, καὶ τὴν διακονίαν ἣν ἔλαβον παρὰ τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ, διαμαρτύρασθαι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τῆς χάριτος τοῦ Θεοῦ. 25 Καὶ νῦν ἰδοὺ, ἐγὼ οἶδα ὅτι οὐκέτι ὄψεσθε τὸ πρόσωπόν μου q ch. 18. 6. ὑμεῖς πάντες, ἐν οἷς διῆλθον κηρύσσων τὴν βασιλείαν. 26 q Διὸ μαρτύρομαι r Luke 7. 30. Eph. 1. 11. ὑμῖν ἐν τῇ σήμερον ἡμέρᾳ, ὅτι καθαρός εἰμι ἀπὸ τοῦ αἵματος πάντων· 27 r οὐ

---

17. τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους] from Ephesus, which, as a large City, had many Presbyters (see xiv. 23); but they were subject, if not now, yet soon after, to one head, Timothy (1 Tim. i. 3), who had oversight of their doctrine (i. 3, 4. 1 Tim. v. 17—19), and performed the office of ordaining presbyters and deacons (1 Tim. iii. 1—10. 15; v. 22). Cp. Rev. ii. 1. Ignat. ad Ephes. § 1, where Ephesus has an ἐπίσκοπος, and also, § 5, a πρεσβυτέριον ὃ συνήρμοσται τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ ὡς χορδαὶ κιθάρᾳ, and διάκονοι, § 2.

17—36.] This Address of St. Paul at Miletus is an Apostolic pattern of an Episcopal Charge to the Clergy, at Visitations, or Diocesan Synods.

18. ἐπίστασθε] A modest word—underrating the effect of his own labours. See on xix. 15.

19. δουλεύων τῷ Κυρίῳ] Cp. Rom. xii. 11.

— δακρύων] Elz. has πολλῶν before δακρύων; but it is not in A, D, E, and many Cursives and Versions.

20. οὐδὲν ὑπεστειλάμην] The metaphor, reintroduced v. 27, appears to be taken from Navigation; and was therefore very appropriate at a sea-port, Miletus, and in the mouth of one now on a voyage, and addressing persons who had come from the great commercial city Ephesus. An internal evidence of truth. The Apostle St. Paul, by this metaphor, compares the Church to a Ship, and himself to a Mariner or Captain of it, and the doctrines of the Gospel to its sails; and he says that he οὐδὲν ὑπεστείλατο, reefed none of its canvas, but spread it all out boldly to the sun and wind, so as to conceal nothing, but to display the whole, and to give his hearers a perfect πληροφορία of faith, in their course (see on Luke i. 1. Col. ii. 2; iv. 12) over the sea of this world to the haven of life everlasting.

For this nautical use of ὑποστέλλομαι,—ὑποστέλλεσθαι τὰ ἱστία, see Pindar, in Passow, Lexic.

22. δεδεμένος τῷ πνεύματι] Some (e. g. Meyer) interpret this 'constrained by my own spirit.' Others (Howson, ii. 269), 'a prisoner in spirit, not in body.'

The more ancient interpreters (see Chrys., Theophyl., Clem.) explain it 'bound by the Holy Spirit.' As Didymus says (in Caten. p. 333), "He that is united to the Holy Ghost is bound in Him; he is the prisoner of Christ; in these chains he rejoices, he wears them as ornaments" (πνευματικοὺς μαργαρίτας. Ignatius, Eph. § 11). They are bands of love. He bears in his body the marks of the Lord Jesus (Gal. vi. 17), and dies daily (1 Cor. xv. 31). Paul was now going up to Jerusalem to the Anniversary of the Descent of the Holy Ghost (v. 16). And as if his mind was dwelling on that event, he refers to the operations of the Holy Spirit in his speech, vv. 23. 28.

The Vulgate well renders it, 'alligatus Spiritu,' constrained and carried by the Holy Ghost. Perhaps it is a metaphor derived from the practice of chaining prisoners to their keepers (see xii. 6; xxi. 33), who carried them to a particular place. Thus Ignat. ad Rom. 5, ἀπὸ Συρίας μέχρι Ῥώμης θηριομαχῶ δεδεμένος δέκα λεοπάρδοις. So St. Paul was now carried as a prisoner to Jerusalem,—but it was by the Holy Ghost. This explains his conduct in reference to the revelations described in xxi. 4.

It also shows that St. Paul did not run into hazards without Divine guidance. As Chrys. says, οὐκ ἐπὶ τοὺς κινδύνους ῥίπτων ἑαυτὸν, ἀλλ' ἡγούμενος τοῦ πνεύματος εἶναι τὸ πρόσταγμα.

See further on this verse, the note on xxi. 4.

23. μοι] So A, B, C, D, E, and many Cursives and Versions. Elz. omits μοι. The pronoun is important, as showing that this prophecy met St. Paul on his arrival at different Cities in succession.

— λέγον] D, E, G, and many Cursives, have λέγων,—a reading which deserves consideration.

— δεσμά με—μένουσιν] It has been said by some, that this is a mere figure of speech, expressing what might have been expected by the Apostle on probable grounds; and that it is not an utterance of a divinely-inspired prophecy. But, on the contrary, it was not likely that St. Paul, being a Roman Citizen, should have been bound. See Acts xxiii. 29.

— θλίψεις] Compare the Epistle to the Romans, xv. 30, where he asks their prayers that he may be delivered from them that do not believe in Judæa, and that he may come to Rome. See Paley, Hor. Paul. pp. 22—24.

24. μετὰ χαρᾶς] Omitted by A, B, D, and some Cursives and Versions; perhaps rightly.

25. ἐγὼ οἶδα ὅτι οὐκέτι ὄψεσθε κ.τ.λ.] See v. 38. It has been argued from 2 Tim. iv. 13—20, where St. Paul speaks of being at Miletus after this, that he was not here divinely inspired, but was mistaken in this anticipation; and this, it is said, is accounted for from vv. 22, 23, where he confesses that he did not know what would happen to him at Jerusalem;

But it was one thing to acknowledge that he did not know what would happen to him at a particular place, and another thing to affirm that something would not happen which did happen;

His words are, οὐκέτι ὄψεσθε τὸ πρόσωπόν μου ὑμεῖς πάντες,—and he might easily have touched again at Miletus without ever seeing all or any of the Presbyters of Ephesus. Besides, as Bengel observes, "Rediit Româ in Asiam compluribus post annis Apostolus, sed interea defuncti aliove delati sunt ferè omnes isti." It may indeed be inferred, that he never revisited Ephesus after this time, or only after a long interval.

— τὴν βασιλείαν] So A, B, C. Elz. adds τοῦ Θεοῦ, D τοῦ Ἰησοῦ: ἡ βασιλεία, the Kingdom, is emphatic, as in Matt. viii. 12; xxiv. 14; and τὸ ὄνομα, the name, Acts v. 41. So ἡ ὁδὸς, xix. 23. All these are significant of the truth,—that there is no other kingdom which will remain, but that of God; no other Name, by which men are to be saved, than that of Christ; no other Way which can lead us to heaven, but that of the Gospel.

26. καθαρός εἰμι] Elz. has ἐγὼ for εἰμι, which is in B, C, D, E, and numerous Cursives and Versions, and appears to be preferable on another account, inasmuch as ἐγὼ thus placed emphatically would seem to imply that some one else was not pure.

γὰρ ὑπεστειλάμην τοῦ μὴ ἀναγγεῖλαι ὑμῖν πᾶσαν τὴν βουλὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ. s 1 Pet. 5. 2. 1 Tim. 3. 1, 2. & 4. 16. Phil. 1. 1. Eph. 1. 7. Col. 1. 14. 1 Pet. 1. 19. Rev. 5. 9.
28 s Προσέχετε οὖν ἑαυτοῖς καὶ παντὶ τῷ ποιμνίῳ, ἐν ᾧ ὑμᾶς τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἔθετο ἐπισκόπους, ποιμαίνειν τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἣν περιεποιήσατο

---

27. πᾶσαν τὴν βουλὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ] re-asserted from v. 20. A strong passage against the "Doctrine of Development." St. Paul says that he would not have been pure from their blood, i.e. he would have been guilty of destroying their souls, if in the time he had been at Ephesus, less than three years (v. 31), he had not declared to them "the whole counsel of God."

What would he say, if he heard, that now, after the Church has been in the world 1800 years, a new article of faith has been declared, and an addition been made by men to the "whole counsel of God?" Cp. Gal. i. 8.

28. προσέχετε οὖν—αἵματος] An exposition of this text, and an interesting application of it to the circumstances of the Church of England, may be seen in the Latin Concio of Bp. Andrewes (then a Presbyter), to the Convocation of the Province of Canterbury, in 1593. Latin Works, p. 29.

— τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἔθετο] Another assertion of the Divinity and Personality of the Holy Ghost. See v. 3; viii. 29; xiii. 2. 4.

— ἐπισκόπους] Every πρεσβύτερος is an ἐπίσκοπος τοῦ ποιμνίου, an overseer of the flock committed to his charge; but the ἐπίσκοπος is also an overseer of other Pastors; which a Presbyter is not.

S. Irenæus (iii. 14), indeed, supposes that some Bishops as well as Presbyters were present, and that St. Paul addresses them; "Paulus in Mileto convocatis Episcopis et Presbyteris qui erant ab Epheso et à reliquis proximis civitatibus," &c. So Ammonius here, who gives also the other exposition; and cp. Professor Blunt, who says, p. 51, "Paul sent for the Elders of the Church of Ephesus, or its Bishops, or rather both, to attend him at Miletus," and who observes that the authority of Irenæus is of more value here, from his connexion with Polycarp and the neighbourhood.

However, it is certain, that some of these ἐπίσκοποι, if not all, were presbyters.

On the subsequent restriction of the word Ἐπίσκοπος to the highest of the Three Orders of the Christian Ministry, see Dr. Bentley (upon Freethinking, Cam. 1743, pp. 136, 137), "They (the Bishops), with all Christian antiquity, never thought themselves and their order to succeed the Scripture Ἐπίσκοποι, but the Scripture Ἀπόστολοι: they were διάδοχοι τῶν Ἀποστόλων, the successors of the Apostles.

"The sum of the matter is this:—Though new institutions are formed, new words are not coined for them, but old ones borrowed and applied. Ἐπίσκοπος, whose general idea is overseer, was a word in use long before Christianity; a word of universal relation to œconomical, civil, military, naval, judicial, and religious matters.

"This word was assumed to denote the governing and presiding persons of the Church, as Διάκονος (another word of vulgar and diffused use) to denote the ministerial.

"The Presbyters, therefore, while the Apostles lived, were Ἐπίσκοποι, overseers. But the Apostles, in foresight of their approaching martyrdom, having selected and appointed their successors in the several cities and communities (as St. Paul did Timothy at Ephesus, and Titus at Crete, A.D. 64, four years before his death), what name were these successors to be called by? not Ἀπόστολοι, Apostles; their modesty, as it seems, made them refuse it: they would keep that name proper and sacred to the first extraordinary messengers of Christ, though they really succeeded them in their office, in due part and measure, as the ordinary governors of the Churches.

"It was agreed, therefore, over all Christendom at once, in the very next generation after the Apostles, to assign and appropriate to them the word Ἐπίσκοπος, or Bishop. From that time to this, that appellation, which before included a Presbyter, has been restrained to a superior order. And here's nothing in all this but what has happened in all languages and communities in the world. See the Notitia of the Roman and Greek Empires, and you'll scarce find one name of any state employment that in course of time did not vary from its primitive signification."

— τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ] On the purchase of the Church by the price of Christ's blood, see 1 Cor. vi. 20. 1 Pet. i. 18, 19. Rev. v. 9.

As to the reading of this passage, it is to be observed that B and many cursives, and Vulg. and Chrys., have τοῦ Θεοῦ, and this reading is received by Elz., Mill, Whitby, Bengel, Knapp, Rinck, Scholz, Alford, Bloomf.

For Θεοῦ, other MSS. have Κυρίου, particularly A, C*, D, E, and the Coptic, Sahidic, Armenian, Syriac Versions, and Irenæus (iii. 14), Didymus (de Spir. § 2), Euseb. (in Esa. xxxv. 9), Jerome and Augustine; and this reading is preferred by Lachm., Tisch., Bornemann, Olshausen, Davidson, Meyer, Hackett.

Others, C, G, H, and more than 100 Cursive MSS. have Κυρίου καὶ Θεοῦ, and this reading is preferred by Venema and Valckenaer.

The choice seems to be between Κυρίου and Θεοῦ. The evidence for each is strong.

It may be remarked that St. Luke uses the word Κύριος in application to Christ, as appointing and ordaining the Ministers of His Church, as here. See on Luke x. 1.

And in support of Κυρίου, it may also be urged that the word Κύριος would mark His Lordship and Dominion over her, as His Household and Kingdom; and would be a happy preparation for the term by which the ἐκκλησία was to be described, i.e. Κυριακὴ, Church, the spouse and body of the Κύριος, and purchased and purified by His blood. See above, ii. 25. 36.

There would also be a memento here to Bishops and Pastors —that they are not to consider the ἐκκλησία as their own, but as Christ's, and that they are not κατακυριεύειν, dominari, over what is τοῦ Κυρίου, Domini. 1 Pet. v. 3.

On the other hand—in behalf of the other reading, τοῦ Θεοῦ,—it appears (as Whitby observes, p. 489), that St. Paul never uses the phrase ἡ ἐκκλησία τοῦ Κυρίου, whereas he often employs the words ἡ ἐκκλησία τοῦ Θεοῦ. See 1 Cor. i. 2; x. 32; xi. 16. 22; xv. 9. 2 Cor. i. 1. Gal. i. 13. 1 Thess. ii. 14. 2 Thess. i. 4. 1 Tim. iii. 5. 15.

The matter reduces itself to this question,

Is it more likely that Θεοῦ should have been altered by Copyists into Κυρίου or Κυρίου into Θεοῦ?

Perhaps the former may seem the more probable alternative.

(1) No one would have been staggered by Κυρίου, or have been inclined to change that reading.

(2) But many might have been perplexed by Θεοῦ with αἵματος following it.

(3) Some orthodox persons might think that it seemed to give some countenance to the Noetian or Sabellian heresy, which confounded the two Persons of the Father and the Son; or to the Eutychian Heresy, which confounded the two Natures of Christ in One; or to the Apollinarian, Theopaschite, and Patripassian, which imputed suffering to God and the Father.

(4) It cannot, therefore, be concluded with some, that a change was made here from a theological bias.

(5) It is also observable that the word Κύριος has been interpolated, in connexion with Ἐκκλησία, in Ephes. v. 29, where A, B, D*, F, G have Χριστός.

(6) It has been said that the testimony of Athanasius is opposed to this reading. His words are (contr. Apollinarium, ii. § 14, vol. i. p. 758), οὐδαμοῦ αἷμα Θεοῦ δίχα σαρκὸς παραδεδόκασιν αἱ γραφαί, ἢ Θεὸν διὰ σαρκὸς παθόντα καὶ ἀναστάντα. Ἀρειανῶν τὰ τοιαῦτα τολμήματα, ἐπειδὴ μήτε Θεὸν ἀληθινὸν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ ὁμολογοῦσιν, αἱ δὲ ἅγιαι γραφαὶ ἐν σαρκὶ Θεοῦ καὶ σαρκὸς Θεοῦ ἀνθρώπου γενομένου αἷμα καὶ πάθος καὶ ἀνάστασιν κηρύττουσι.

Athanasius is contraverting the Apollinarian error that the Godhead itself suffered, and he asserts that the Scriptures have no where predicated to us the blood of God without the flesh; or that God suffered in the flesh (some read δίχα σαρκὸς here, and it may be the true reading): the older editions have διὰ σαρκὸς for δίχα σαρκὸς in the preceding clause.

Athanasius might have written these words, and yet have read here ἐκκλησίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ; for there is no representation, in the passage so read, of the αἷμα Θεοῦ δίχα σαρκός. St. Paul would thus say, "the Church of God, which He (Who is Man as well as God) purchased with His own Blood."

(7) The argument from St. Paul's use of Ἐκκλησία Θεοῦ, and his non-use of Ἐκκλησία Κυρίου, confirms the same conclusion.

(8) It is probable that this passage gave occasion to the use of the still bolder expression αἷμα Θεοῦ in other writers, particularly Ignatius, writing to the same Church,—the Ephesian,—as that whose presbyters were now addressed by St. Paul, Eph. i. So Tertullian, ad Uxor. ii. 3, "Sanguine Dei." Clem. Alex. "Quis dives," &c., c. 34, αἵματι Θεοῦ παιδός. Cp. Ignat. ad Rom. 6, ἄφετέ με μιμητὴν εἶναι τοῦ πάθους τοῦ Θεοῦ μου, where some copyists have inserted Χριστοῦ, to give ease to the phrase, as here. And cp. Jacobson in Clem. Rom. 2, p. 13. See also Wetstein here, p. 596, and the note in Catenâ, p. 338, where it is said, "Many of weak minds, or of perverse opinions, speak evil διὰ τοῦ αἵματος τοῦ ἰδίου. 29 [t] Ἐγὼ οἶδα ὅτι εἰσελεύσονται μετὰ τὴν ἄφιξίν μου λύκοι βαρεῖς εἰς ὑμᾶς, μὴ φειδόμενοι τοῦ ποιμνίου· 30 [u] καὶ ἐξ ὑμῶν αὐτῶν ἀναστήσονται ἄνδρες λαλοῦντες διεστραμμένα, τοῦ ἀποσπᾶν τοὺς μαθητὰς ὀπίσω αὐτῶν. 31 [v] Διὸ γρηγορεῖτε, μνημονεύοντες ὅτι τριετίαν νύκτα καὶ ἡμέραν οὐκ ἐπαυσάμην μετὰ δακρύων νουθετῶν ἕνα ἕκαστον. 32 [w] Καὶ τανῦν παρατίθεμαι ὑμᾶς, ἀδελφοί, τῷ Θεῷ καὶ τῷ λόγῳ τῆς χάριτος αὐτοῦ, τῷ δυναμένῳ οἰκοδομῆσαι, καὶ δοῦναι ὑμῖν κληρονομίαν ἐν τοῖς ἡγιασμένοις πᾶσιν. 33 [x] Ἀργυρίου ἢ χρυσίου ἢ ἱματισμοῦ οὐδενὸς ἐπεθύμησα· 34 [y] αὐτοὶ γινώσκετε ὅτι ταῖς χρείαις μου, καὶ τοῖς οὖσι μετ' ἐμοῦ, ὑπηρέτησαν αἱ χεῖρες αὗται. 35 [z] Πάντα ὑπέδειξα ὑμῖν, ὅτι οὕτω κοπιῶντας δεῖ ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι τῶν ἀσθενούντων, μνημονεύειν τε τῶν λόγων τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ, ὅτι αὐτὸς εἶπε, Μακάριόν ἐστι μᾶλλον διδόναι ἢ λαμβάνειν. 36 [a] Καὶ ταῦτα εἰπὼν, θεὶς τὰ γόνατα αὐτοῦ, σὺν πᾶσιν αὐτοῖς προσηύξατο. 37 Ἱκανὸς δὲ κλαυθμὸς ἐγένετο πάντων· καὶ ἐπιπεσόντες ἐπὶ τὸν τράχηλον τοῦ Παύλου κατεφίλουν αὐτόν· 38 ὀδυνώμενοι μάλιστα ἐπὶ τῷ λόγῳ ᾧ εἰρήκει, ὅτι οὐκέτι μέλλουσι τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ θεωρεῖν. προέπεμπον δὲ αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ πλοῖον.

XXI. 1 Ὡς δὲ ἐγένετο ἀναχθῆναι ἡμᾶς ἀποσπασθέντας ἀπ' αὐτῶν, εὐθυδρομήσαντες ἤλθομεν εἰς τὴν Κῶ, τῇ δὲ ἑξῆς εἰς τὴν Ῥόδον, κἀκεῖθεν εἰς Πάταρα. 2 Καὶ εὑρόντες πλοῖον διαπερῶν εἰς Φοινίκην, ἐπιβάντες ἀνήχθημεν. 3 Ἀναφανέντες δὲ τὴν Κύπρον, καὶ καταλιπόντες αὐτὴν εὐώνυμον, ἐπλέομεν εἰς Συρίαν, καὶ κατήχθημεν εἰς Τύρον· ἐκεῖσε γὰρ τὸ πλοῖον ἦν ἀποφορτιζόμενον τὸν γόμον.

t 2 Pet. 2. 1. Matt. 7. 15.
u 1 John 2. 19.
v ch. 19. 10.
w ch. 9. 31. Eph. 1. 18.
x 1 Sam. 12. 3. 1 Cor. 9. 12. 2 Cor. 11. 9. & 12. 13.
y ch. 18. 3. 1 Cor. 4. 12. 1 Thess. 2. 9. 2 Thess. 3. 8.
z 1 Cor. 9. 12.
a ch. 21. 5.

---

of those who use the terms σῶμα καὶ αἷμα Θεοῦ τὸ σωτήριον, but they may hear what our Lord says; and then reference is made to John vi. 35. 48. 53, and the conclusion is, Do not scruple at the words αἷμα καὶ σῶμα Θεοῦ τὸ σωτήριον, as the Jews do; for by it thou hast been redeemed and art become a son of God, and an heir of life everlasting." And as to the doctrine thus taught Bede says, "Non dubitat sanguinem Dei dicere propter unionem personæ in duobus naturis Ejusdem Jesu Christi, propter quam etiam dictum, Filius Hominis Qui est in cœlo." (John iii. 13.) "Christ our Saviour, is 'Agnus Dei' says Bp. Sanderson, i. 195. He is also 'Agnus Deus;' He is God, the Son of God, Very God of Very God; and it is this dignity of His Nature especially, and not His Innocency only, that setteth such a value upon His Blood that it is of an infinite price, of infinite merit, able to satisfy an infinite justice, and to appease an infinite wrath."

— τοῦ αἵματος τοῦ ἰδίου] So A, B, C, D, E, and many Cursives. Elz. has διὰ τοῦ ἰδίου αἵματος.

29. ἐγώ] Elz. adds γάρ; and inserts τοῦτο after οἶδα, which are not in A, B, C, D.

— ἄφιξιν] sometimes 'arrival,' sometimes 'departure,' as here. See examples in Kuin. ἀποδημίαν, Chrys.

30. ἐξ ὑμῶν] Hymenæus, Alexander, and the Nicolaitans, 1 Tim. i. 20. Rev. ii. 6. Phygellus and Hermogenes, 2 Tim. i. 15.

— τοὺς μαθητάς] the disciples—even mine and yours, and Christ's.

31. τριετίαν] Three months in the Synagogue, xix. 8; two years in the School of Tyrannus, xix. 10; and he passed through Macedonia and Achaia, where he remained three months, xx. 3.

32. τῷ λόγῳ τῆς χάριτος] To His gracious Word. The Genitive is used Hebraistically, where in other languages would be used an adjective. See on Matt. xxii. 11;

It is to be remarked, that "the Word" here is understood by some ancient Expositors to be Christ, Who is "full of Grace," and from Whom all grace has come to man. John i. 14. 16.

And there is much that is personal, here, ascribed to the Λόγος. So Ammonius, who from the addition of the participle δυναμένῳ in the singular, deduces an argument for the Unity of the Two Persons in one Godhead, as follows;

Δείκνυσιν, ὅτι ὁ Πατὴρ καὶ Θεὸς καὶ ὁ τούτου υἱὸς Ἰησοῦς, ὁ Θεοῦ Λόγος ἕνεισι (read ἓν εἰσιν, unum sunt)· οὐ γὰρ εἶπε, τοῖς δυναμένοις πληθυντικῶς, ἀλλ' ἑνικῷ ὀνόματι τὴν μοναδικὴν οὐσίαν ἐσήμανεν, εἰπὼν 'τῷ δυναμένῳ.'

It is indeed taken for granted by many modern writers, that the title ὁ Λόγος is only applied by St. John to Christ. But this assertion may be questioned. See on Luke i. 2.

If St. John had been already at Ephesus, this mode of speech would have been very appropriate there, as a testimony to the unity of the doctrine of the two Apostles St. Paul and St. John. And even if St. John had not been there, yet, as St. Paul spoke under the guidance of the same Spirit as inspired St. John, he might and would very fitly bequeath this parting word to the Ephesian Presbyters, testifying his own adhesion to the great doctrines concerning the Logos, which were afterwards to be preached more fully at Ephesus by St. John.

— οἰκοδομῆσαι] So A, B, C, D, E,—a better reading than that of Elz. ἐποικοδομῆσαι.

33. ἱματισμοῦ] Oriental wealth consisted partly in "changes of raiment," Gen. xlv. 22. 2 Kings v. 5. 22. Hence the reference to the moth in warnings to the rich and worldly, Matt. vi. 19. James v. 2. Cp. Hackett.

34. ὑπηρέτησαν αἱ χεῖρες αὗται] Compare his declaration, made at Ephesus, in 1 Cor. iv. 12, κοπιῶμεν ἐργάζομενοι ταῖς ἰδίαις χερσί: and see Paley, H. P. p. 37.

35. ὅτι αὐτὸς εἶπε] A saying alluded to by S. Clement Rom. i. 2, and in Const. Apostol. iv. 3; and one of the few sayings of our Lord preserved elsewhere than in the Gospels. Cp. Grabe, Spicileg. i. pp. 14. 327. Fabricii Cod. Apocryph. N. T. i. pp. 321—334, "De dictis Christi quæ in Evangeliis non extant." Körner, de Sermonibus Christi ἀγράφοις, Lips. 1776; and Routh, R. S. i. 9, 10. 12. 29. 31. 471. 484.

— μακάριόν ἐστι μᾶλλον] So A, B, C, D, E, G.—Elz. places διδόναι before μᾶλλον. Another transposition has been adopted in v. 37, ἱκανὸς δὲ κλαυθμὸς, from A, B, D, E, for the reading of Elz. ἱκανὸς δὲ ἐγένετο κλ.

36. θεὶς τὰ γόνατα] See Dan. vi. 10. Luke xxii. 41. Acts ix. 40; xxi. 5. Cp. Eph. iii. 14.

37. κατεφίλουν] stronger than ἐφίλουν, and marking also continuance by the imperfect tense, "deosculabantur eum."

How similar the outward act to that described by the same word Matt. xxvi. 49; but how different the inward affection!

38. θεωρεῖν] St. Paul himself uses ὄπτομαι, v. 25, a more modest word. He would not say that his own πρόσωπον was ἄξιον θεωρίας.

CH. XXI. 3. ἀναφανέντες τὴν Κύπρον] A nautical expression, ἀναφανεῖσαν ἔχοντες, as sailors say, having raised the land. The opposite is ἀποκρύπτειν γῆν. Cp. Gal. ii. 7, πεπίστευμαι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, and Rom. iii. 2. 1 Cor. ix. 17. Winer, § 39, p. 233.

— Τύρον] The mention of a Christian Church at Tyre, and of St. Paul's visit to it, suggests a reference to the prophecy, "Behold ye the Philistines also, and they of Tyre, with the Morians, lo, there was He born." (Ps. lxxxvii. 4.) Cp. Ps. xlv. 12, and see above on viii. 26.

Perhaps the seeds scattered by the Divine Sower Himself on 4 [a] Ἀνευρόντες δὲ τοὺς μαθητὰς, ἐπεμείναμεν αὐτοῦ ἡμέρας ἑπτά· οἵτινες τῷ Παύλῳ ἔλεγον διὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος, μὴ ἀναβαίνειν εἰς Ἰερουσόλυμα. 5 [b] Ὅτε δὲ ἐγένετο ἐξαρτίσαι ἡμᾶς τὰς ἡμέρας, ἐξελθόντες ἐπορευόμεθα, προπεμπόντων ἡμᾶς πάντων, σὺν γυναιξὶ καὶ τέκνοις ἕως ἔξω τῆς πόλεως· καὶ θέντες τὰ γόνατα ἐπὶ τὸν αἰγιαλὸν προσευξάμενοι 6 ἀπησπασάμεθα ἀλλήλους, καὶ ἀνέβημεν εἰς τὸ πλοῖον, ἐκεῖνοι δὲ ὑπέστρεψαν εἰς τὰ ἴδια. 7 Ἡμεῖς δὲ, τὸν πλοῦν διανύσαντες ἀπὸ Τύρου κατηντήσαμεν εἰς Πτολεμαΐδα· καὶ ἀσπασάμενοι τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς, ἐμείναμεν ἡμέραν μίαν παρ' αὐτοῖς.

8 [c] Τῇ δὲ ἐπαύριον ἐξελθόντες ἤλθομεν εἰς Καισάρειαν· καὶ εἰσελθόντες εἰς τὸν οἶκον Φιλίππου τοῦ εὐαγγελιστοῦ, ὄντος ἐκ τῶν ἑπτὰ, ἐμείναμεν παρ' αὐτῷ. 9 [d] τούτῳ δὲ ἦσαν θυγατέρες παρθένοι τέσσαρες προφητεύουσαι. 10 [e] Ἐπιμενόντων δὲ ἡμέρας πλείους κατῆλθέ τις ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰουδαίας προφήτης ὀνόματι Ἄγαβος. 11 [f] καὶ ἐλθὼν πρὸς ἡμᾶς, καὶ ἄρας τὴν ζώνην τοῦ Παύλου, δήσας ἑαυτοῦ τοὺς πόδας καὶ τὰς χεῖρας εἶπε, Τάδε λέγει τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, Τὸν ἄνδρα, οὗ ἐστιν ἡ ζώνη αὕτη, οὕτω δήσουσιν ἐν Ἰερουσαλὴμ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, καὶ παραδώσουσιν εἰς χεῖρας ἐθνῶν. 12 [g] Ὡς δὲ ἠκούσαμεν ταῦτα, παρεκαλοῦμεν ἡμεῖς τε καὶ οἱ ἐντόπιοι, τοῦ μὴ ἀναβαίνειν αὐτὸν εἰς Ἰερουσαλήμ. 13 [h] Τότε ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Παῦλος, Τί ποιεῖτε κλαίοντες καὶ συνθρύπτοντές μοῦ τὴν καρδίαν; ἐγὼ γὰρ οὐ μόνον δεθῆναι, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀποθανεῖν εἰς Ἰερουσαλὴμ ἑτοίμως ἔχω ὑπὲρ τοῦ ὀνόματος τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ. 14 [i] Μὴ πειθομένου δὲ αὐτοῦ, ἡσυχάσαμεν εἰπόντες, Τοῦ Κυρίου τὸ θέλημα γενέσθω.

15 Μετὰ δὲ τὰς ἡμέρας ταύτας ἐπισκευασάμενοι ἀνεβαίνομεν εἰς Ἰερουσόλυμα. 16 Συνῆλθον δὲ καὶ τῶν μαθητῶν ἀπὸ Καισαρείας σὺν ἡμῖν, ἄγοντες παρ' ᾧ ξενισθῶμεν Μνάσωνί τινι Κυπρίῳ, ἀρχαίῳ μαθητῇ.

a ch. 20. 23. & ver. 12.
b ch. 20. 36.
c ch. 6. 5. & 8. 26, 40. Eph. 4. 11. 2 Tim. 4. 5.
d Joel 2. 28. ch. 2. 17.
e ch. 11. 28.
f ch. 20. 23. & ver. 33. & 24. 27.
g Matt. 16. 22.
h ch. 20. 24.
i Matt. 6. 10. Luke 11. 2. & 22. 42.

---

the border-land of Tyre and Sidon (Matt. xv. 21. Mark vii. 24), were now bearing fruit.

— ἀποφορτιζόμενον] Thither the ship was on its course, to unload its freight. Cp. Winer, § 45, p. 312.

4. ἀνευρόντες τοὺς μαθητάς] Having sought out the disciples, —an intimation that they were either not very numerous, or were not publicly known.

— διὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος] Cp. δεδεμένος τῷ πνεύματι (xx. 22). This is explained by v. 11. The Holy Spirit revealed to them that he would be bound there (see xx. 23); and they, acting on this intimation, dissuaded him from going to Jerusalem. But the Spirit had done more than this for St. Paul. The Holy Spirit had not only foreshown to him the future, but had also revealed to him how to act under the circumstances foreshown. The Holy Spirit had bound him to go to Jerusalem (xx. 22, where see note), even though he was to be bound there; and therefore he went (see xx. 24, and below, xxi. 11—13). And at length those persons who had foretold his bonds, acquiesced in his resolution to go, as divinely inspired, and said, "the Lord's will (not ours) be done" (v. 14). The prophecy concerning his bonds was fulfilled. And the Lord assured St. Paul, in a vision at Jerusalem, that he had rightly understood and obeyed His will in going up to Jerusalem, xxiii. 11.

5. αἰγιαλόν] the sandy shore. Acts xxvii. 39. Cp. xx. 36. "Hodie monstratur in arenis locus ubi pariter orabant." (Bede.)

6. ἀπησπασάμεθα] gave a parting embrace to. Cp. the use of the preposition ἀπο in ἀποταξάμενος, Acts xviii. 18. 21. Elz. has προσηυξάμεθα καὶ ἀσπασάμενοι. But the reading in the text is authorized by some of the best MSS.

7. Πτολεμαΐδα] Accho (Judges i. 31); and still so called by the Arabs, and Acre or St. Jean d'Acre, by Europeans.

8. ἐξελθόντες] Elz. adds οἱ περὶ τὸν Παῦλον, which is not in A, B, C, E, and is probably a gloss.

— Φιλίππου τοῦ εὐαγγελιστοῦ] called here "one of the seven;" i. e. Philip the Deacon; see on Acts viii. 5, and the statements of Isidorus and S. Jerome, quoted by Tillemont, Mém. ii. 30. Hence Ammonius says here, "it was lawful for a Deacon to live as a married man." On Philip's connexion with Cæsarea, see viii. 40.

This was the third time Paul was at Cæsarea. See ix. 30; xviii. 22.

It is now prophesied at Cæsarea that St. Paul should be bound; and with a special providence, for he was to be brought to Cæsarea a prisoner, and to remain there in custody for two years, xxiii. 33; xxiv. 27.

— ὄντος] Elz. prefixes τοῦ, which is not in A, B, C, E, H, and numerous Cursives.

10. ἡμέρας πλείους] several days; but he was hastening to Jerusalem (see xx. 16), not, therefore, 'many days.'

— Ἄγαβος] See xi. 28.

11. δήσας ἑαυτοῦ] Elz. has δήσας τε αὐτοῦ. But δήσας ἑαυτοῦ is the reading of A, B, C, D, E, and many Cursives and Versions.

Agabus bound his own hands (not St. Paul's) with St. Paul's girdle.

— τοὺς πόδας καὶ τὰς χεῖρας] So B, C, D, E, and many Cursives and Versions. Elz. has τὰς χεῖρας καὶ τοὺς πόδας: but it is hardly probable that this would have been altered into the other reading. Such symbolical actions had been connected with the delivery of prophecies in the Old Testament. Isa. xx. 2. Jer. xiii. 1. 11. Ezek. iv. 1. (Grotius.) Cp. Jerem. xxvii. 2; xxviii. 10. 12. Ezek. xii. 3; xxiv. 3.

12. ἡμεῖς] even St. Luke himself. A modest confession, and a proof of truth. We would have dissuaded Paul from going, but he would not yield to us, and went; and we acknowledged that what he did was the Lord's will, v. 14.

13, 14. τότε—γενέσθω] See on v. 4.

13. μοῦ] emphatic.

14. τὸ θέλημα γενέσθω] From the Lord's Prayer; perhaps an intimation of its general use. Cp. 2 Tim. iv. 18, and see Blunt, Lectures, p. 38, and above on Matt. vi. 9, and Humphry here.

15. ἐπισκευασάμενοι] So A, B, E, G, and numerous Cursives. — Elz. ἀποσκευασάμενοι. D has ἀποταξάμενοι. The sense is, 'having packed up,' 'having taken what was necessary for the journey.' (Chrys. Œcumen.) Vulg. renders it 'præparati,' and other Versions give a like meaning, and Hesych. interprets it by εὐτρεπισθέντες.

The word seems to be introduced in order to show that, though St. Paul had full intimation of sufferings and imprisonment at Jerusalem, yet he proceeded thither with calmness, and in a sober and orderly manner, without neglecting any common duties, such as prudence might suggest. Compare his request for his "cloke and parchments" just before his martyrdom (2 Tim. iv. 13). There are no symptoms of a heated imagination, or of a fanatical enthusiasm, or a reckless excitement, in his character and demeanour, in the most trying circumstances.

16. ἄγοντες παρ' ᾧ ξενισθῶμεν] Objections have been made by 17 Γενομένων δὲ ἡμῶν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, ἀσμένως ἀπεδέξαντο ἡμᾶς οἱ ἀδελφοί.

k ch. 15. 13. Gal. 1. 19. 18 k Τῇ δὲ ἐπιούσῃ εἰσῆει ὁ Παῦλος σὺν ἡμῖν πρὸς Ἰάκωβον, πάντες τε παρεγένοντο οἱ πρεσβύτεροι. 19 Καὶ ἀσπασάμενος αὐτοὺς ἐξηγεῖτο καθ' ἓν ἕκαστον ὧν ἐποίησεν ὁ Θεὸς ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσι διὰ τῆς διακονίας αὐτοῦ.
l Rom. 10. 2. Gal. 1. 14. 20 l Οἱ δὲ ἀκούσαντες ἐδόξαζον τὸν Θεὸν, εἶπόν τε αὐτῷ, Θεωρεῖς, ἀδελφὲ, πόσαι μυριάδες εἰσὶν ἐν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις τῶν πεπιστευκότων· καὶ πάντες ζηλωταὶ τοῦ νόμου ὑπάρχουσι. 21 Κατηχήθησαν δὲ περὶ σοῦ, ὅτι ἀποστασίαν διδάσκεις ἀπὸ Μωϋσέως τοὺς κατὰ τὰ ἔθνη πάντας Ἰουδαίους, λέγων μὴ περιτέμνειν αὐτοὺς τὰ τέκνα, μηδὲ τοῖς ἔθεσι περιπατεῖν. 22 Τί οὖν ἐστι; πάντως δεῖ πλῆθος συνελθεῖν· ἀκούσονται γὰρ ὅτι ἐλήλυθας. m ch. 18. 18. Num. 6. 2, 13, 18. 23 m Τοῦτο οὖν ποίησον, ὃ σοι λέγομεν. Εἰσὶν ἡμῖν ἄνδρες τέσσαρες εὐχὴν ἔχοντες ἐφ' ἑαυτῶν· 24 τούτους παραλαβὼν ἁγνίσθητι σὺν αὐτοῖς, καὶ δαπάνησον ἐπ' αὐτοῖς, ἵνα ξυρήσωνται several recent Expositors to the translation of the Vulgate, "adducentes [secum] apud quem hospitaremur Mnasonem," which is the sense adopted by the English Authorized Version;

---

It has been said, that the true meaning is,—"conducting us to the house of Mnason (at Jerusalem), with whom we should lodge." In this case the construction would either be ἄγοντες (ἡμᾶς) Μνάσωνι, which is Winer's opinion, § 31, p. 192, or by attraction, ἄγοντες ἡμᾶς παρὰ Μνάσωνα παρ' ᾧ ξενισθῶμεν. See Meyer here, and Winer, § 24, p. 149, and others;

But perhaps in this case, as in many others, the older interpretation (which, as Winer allows, p. 192, is unexceptionable, grammatically) is the true one. St. Luke's design in mentioning this incident seems to be this. At first the Christians of Cæsarea attempted to dissuade St. Paul from going to Jerusalem (v. 12); but on his earnest expostulation with them, they desisted from their entreaties, and said, "the Lord's will be done" (v. 14). And not only so, but some of these disciples of Cæsarea sped him on his journey to Jerusalem, and accompanied him, bringing with them a person with whom he and his companions would lodge at Jerusalem, Mnason of Cyprus. Thus they who at first would have deterred him from going to Jerusalem, were prevailed upon by St. Paul (such was his courage and constancy, and such his influence over them) to provide facilities for his journey thither, and for his reception there;

It was also an honourable circumstance to Mnason of Cyprus, that though he had heard, no doubt, from the men of Cæsarea that the Spirit had revealed that St. Paul would be made a prisoner in Jerusalem, yet he was willing to accompany him thither (a distance of about eighty miles), and to afford him and his companions a lodging there.

These considerations seem to be lost sight of in the modern interpretation, which is also liable to the objection, that, according to it, St. Paul is said to be brought to Mnason to lodge, before his arrival at Jerusalem, which is not related till the following verse.

— ἀρχαίῳ μαθητῇ] An original disciple, i. e. from the first preaching of the Gospel. See on xv. 7, and xi. 15. Such a person was likely to have a house at Jerusalem.

18. πρὸς Ἰάκωβον] For the use of πρὸς see on xvi. 40. On the position held by St. James the Lord's brother at Jerusalem, see xii. 17. A distinction here is made between Ἰάκωβος the Bishop of Jerusalem, and πάντες οἱ πρεσβύτεροι. (Chrys.) "Videtur Jacobus convocâsse collegium Presbyterorum." (Rosenmüller.)

The Bishop of Jerusalem is here presented to the view, surrounded by all his Presbyters, who are the "Concilium Episcopi," (see Hieron. in Esa. iii. Bingham, ii. 19, 7,) for the reception of St. Paul and his friends, and for joint counsel and advice. An Apostolic precedent for the practice of the Church in all ages. See above, xv. 2. 4. 6. 22, and particularly xv. 23.

19. ὁ Θεός] He does not say what he had done, but what God had done by his ministry, and (v. 20) they glorified not him, but God. (Ammon.)

20. ἐν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις] So A, B, C, E.—Elz. Ἰουδαίων. This variation is noticeable. It is not said that many myriads of the Jews believe, &c.; but that there are many myriads of believers among the Jews, and are all zealous for the Law.

— πεπιστευκότων] Observe the tense: of those who have made public profession of faith in the Gospel. See viii. 13.

21. κατηχήθησαν] They have been studiously indoctrinated to believe, ἐδιδάχθησαν καὶ ἐπίστευσαν (Chrys.), cp. v. 24, such a misrepresentation was not unlikely to be made by Jews, concerning what St. Paul had taught not long since in his Epistles to the Romans and Galatians. Cp. Paley, H. P. pp. 24—26.

— διδάσκεις Ἰουδαίους] It was not true that St. Paul taught the Jews not to circumcise their children (see vii. 8); but it was true that he taught that circumcision was not to be enforced on the Gentiles.

What he did now, at the suggestion of the Bishop and Presbyters of Jerusalem, was to refute the former assertion, not to disavow the latter. See vv. 24. 26.

22. πλῆθος] A multitude must needs come together.

23. εἰσὶν ἡμῖν] This was often the case on the approach of great Festivals, e.g. that of Pentecost, which was now at hand. Nazarite Vows were made terminable then, in order that they who had taken them might join with others in the joyful celebration of that Festival. Cp. Lightfoot on Acts ii. 13, and on 1 Cor. xi. 14, where he observes, that even Jews who were not Nazarites were accustomed to cut their hair in honour of the feasts.

— εὐχὴν ἔχοντες ἐφ' ἑαυτῶν] having upon them a vow of Nazariteship, that is, of separation from the world to God. See above, on xviii. 18.

24. ἁγνίσθητι σὺν αὐτοῖς] Be thou a Nazarite with them; join thyself to them in their vow of abstinence or separation, and of dedication to God.

It has, indeed, been said (Howson, pp. 298—302) that St. Paul only paid the charges of the four Nazarites (v. 23), but was not under the Vow of a Nazarite;

But the word ἁγνίσθητι here, and the other kindred words used in this narrative, prove that he associated himself with them in the vow itself.

The word ἁγνίζω is the word used by the LXX for נָזַר (Nazar), in Numb. vi. 3, and ἁγνισμὸς for נֶזֶר (Nezer), Nazireatus. The best explanation, therefore, of the word ἁγνίσθητι and ἁγνισθεὶς (v. 26), and ἁγνισμὸς (v. 26), is to be derived from the use of those words by the LXX in the chapter concerning the Nazaritic Vow, Numb. vi. 3, 4, ἀπὸ οἴνου ἁγνισθήσεται, he shall keep himself separate as a Nazarite from wine πάσας τῆς ἡμέρας τῆς εὐχῆς αὐτοῦ, which is expressed in v. 5 by πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας τοῦ ἁγνισμοῦ, and v. 8, πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας τῆς εὐχῆς ἅγιος ἔσται Κυρίῳ.

It is probable that St. Paul was already under a vow of Nazariteship; and was advised to join himself as such with these four Nazarites. See xviii. 18, and below, v. 27.

The knowledge that he had not long since voluntarily taken on himself a Nazarite's vow (xviii. 18), was enough to suggest the recommendation here made to him by St. James, and the Presbyters of the Church at Jerusalem.

Origen (in Ep. ad Rom. lib. ii. 13) speaks of St. Paul as having offered 'sacrificia purificationis,' and S. Jerome (Epist. ad Augustin. Ep. 74) supposes St. Paul to have assumed the condition of a Nazarite, "obtulisse sacrificia et exercuisse nudipedalia;" and so Augustine, Ep. 82.

The reason of St. Paul's compliance is well stated by Augustine (Epist. ad Hieron. 82), who observes, that by his practice with regard to the ceremonies of the Levitical Law, St. Paul taught "nec Judæos tunc ab eis tanquam à nefariis prohibendos, nec Gentiles ad ea tanquam necessaria compellendos."

"Paul became (says Isidore in Caten. p. 352) a Jew to the Jews when he made himself a Nazarite in the Temple, and offered oblations; and, on the same principle, he circumcised Timothy and sent him to preach to the Jews, thus cancelling the circumcision by means of circumcision itself." So also Œcumenius, who says that "Paul underwent the tonsure, and complied with the Law."

That he engaged in the vow of a Nazarite, has therefore, it seems, been rightly concluded by most later Expositors, e. g.

τὴν κεφαλήν· καὶ γνώσονται πάντες, ὅτι ὧν κατήχηνται περὶ σοῦ οὐδέν ἐστιν, ἀλλὰ στοιχεῖς καὶ αὐτὸς φυλάσσων τὸν νόμον. 25 [n] Περὶ δὲ τῶν πεπιστευκότων ἐθνῶν ἡμεῖς ἐπεστείλαμεν, κρίναντες μηδὲν τοιοῦτον τηρεῖν αὐτοὺς, εἰ μὴ φυλάσσεσθαι αὐτοὺς τό τε εἰδωλόθυτον καὶ αἷμα, καὶ πνικτὸν καὶ πορνείαν.

n ch. 15. 20, 29.

26 [o] Τότε ὁ Παῦλος παραλαβὼν τοὺς ἄνδρας τῇ ἐχομένῃ ἡμέρᾳ σὺν αὐτοῖς ἁγνισθεὶς εἰσῆει εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, διαγγέλλων τὴν ἐκπλήρωσιν τῶν ἡμερῶν τοῦ ἁγνισμοῦ, ἕως οὗ προσηνέχθη ὑπὲρ ἑνὸς ἑκάστου αὐτῶν ἡ προσφορά.

o Num. 6. 13. ch. 24. 18.

Grotius, Rosenmüller, Olshausen, Meyer, Baumgarten, Hackett, Alford, and others.

There was a special reason why St. Paul, a Christian Apostle, should engage in a vow of a Nazarite. That Vow pledged the person who took it to abstain from all strong drink. And he who was known to be under the vow of a Nazarite, was known to be living a life of abstinence. The sight of the Nazarite's locks would proclaim this.

St. Paul had been converted by a heavenly Vision. He had Revelations in Arabia, and a Trance in the Temple at Jerusalem (Acts ix. 4; xxii. 6. 17; xxvi. 12. 1 Cor. xv. 8. 2 Cor. xii. 2);

He relied much on the arguments thence drawn, in his public addresses to the People of Jerusalem (xxii. 6. 17), and to Agrippa (xxvi. 12);

Let it be recollected, that the Jews attempted to refute the evidence of the miracle of Pentecost, by a scornful insinuation, "These men are full of new wine" (Acts ii. 13). It was very expedient that St. Paul, whose conversion was miraculous, and who was favoured with an "abundance of Revelations" (2 Cor. xii. 7), should be able to meet the objection, which would in all probability be raised against him, that he was under a strong mental excitement, and that he was inflamed by enthusiasm and deluded by fanaticism.

One of the best refutations of such an insinuation, and one which would have most weight with the Jews, would be found in the voluntary assumption of the Vow of a Nazarite. This would show, that like the Baptist, whom the Jews contrasted with Christ whom they dared to call a wine-bibber (Matt. xi. 18, 19), he was living an abstemious and austere life, that his judgment was cool, his mind calm, and, as he himself says, that the words which he spake when describing his own Conversion, were words of truth and soberness (xxvi. 25).

Consequently, though we hear it alleged by Festus against him, that "much learning made him mad" (xxvi. 24), we never hear it surmised that he was labouring under physical or intellectual excitement.

Thus, in his Christian prudence, St. Paul made the ceremonial Vows of the Levitical Law subsidiary to the diffusion of the saving Doctrines of Evangelical Truth.

Such advice as that which is here proffered by St. James, came very appropriately from him, who is described by Hegesippus (cp. Euseb. ii. 23) as conforming in his own person to the usages of a Nazarite; οὗτος ἐκ κοιλίας μητρὸς αὐτοῦ ἅγιος ἦν· οἶνον καὶ σίκερα οὐκ ἔπιεν, ξυρὸν ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ οὐκ ἀνέβη, —a passage which affords an interesting illustration and confirmation of the narrative of St. Luke.

Perhaps, also, these characteristics of St. James may have pointed him out as specially fit to occupy the Episcopal seat at Jerusalem, as a person most conciliatory to the Jews.

The following particulars concerning a Nazarite's Vow, are from Lightfoot (i. p. 1092. On the Temple, chap. xviii.). Referring to the Talmud (tract. Nazir, per. 1), he says, "Nazarism was most ordinarily for thirty days, though sometime it was for years, and sometimes for term of life. He whose vow was expired was to bring three beasts, one for a burnt-offering, another for a sin-offering, and a third for a peace-offering (Nazir 6). If he polled his head in the country, as Paul did at Cenchreæ, he was to bring his hair and burn it under the caldron, where his peace-offering was boiling, which was in this place of the Temple that we are speaking of (i. e. at S. E. angle of the Temple).

"The Jews in the Treatise (of the Talmud) alleged in the Margin (i. e. the Treatise Nazir), speak of 'a Samson Nazarite' and 'an everlasting Nazarite,' not but that Samson was a Nazarite always, but they use this distinction in reference to the manner of the Vow-making. He that took on him to be a Nazarite like Samson, was saying, 'Behold, I will be a Nazarite like Samson,' or 'like the son of Manoah' or 'like the husband of Delilah,' or 'like him that carried away the gates of Azzah,' or 'like him whose eyes the Philistines put out,' such an one might never cut his hair, but it must ever grow upon him; and such a Nazarite did Absalom take upon him to be, but he was forced to cut his hair once every year, it was so heavy. But he that was a Nazarite everlasting (that is, that took upon him Nazarism upon other terms, as he that said, 'I will be a Nazarite according to the number of the hairs of my head,' or 'the dust of the Earth,' or 'sand of the sea-shore'), he might poll his head once in thirty days.

"But he whose vow was expired, wheresoever he polled his hair, was to come to this place, and here to boil his Peace-offering, and to burn his hair; and the Priest took the shoulder as it boiled, and a cake, and a wafer of unleavened bread, and put all upon the hands of the Nazarite and waved them; and then was the Nazarite at liberty to drink wine, and to be defiled by the dead."

— δαπάνησον ἐπ' αὐτοῖς] "eroga sumptus super illis;" expend money upon them,—do an act of charity in helping them to perform their vow, and to shave their heads, by contributing to the necessary expences of the sacrifices to be offered; on which see Numb. vi. 13.

Thus refute the calumnies against thee, not by word, but by deed; and do this here, not in a Gentile city, but at Jerusalem, where no scandal will be given to thy Gentile converts by this compliance with the Law. (Chrys., Theophyl.)

It was usual for wealthier Jews to assist their poorer brethren in this way. Thus Agrippa showed his liberality at Jerusalem, and his regard for the Levitical Law. Joseph. xix. 6. 1, εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα ἐλθὼν χαριστηρίους ἐξεπλήρωσε θυσίας, οὐδὲν τῶν κατὰ νόμον ἀπολιπών· διὸ καὶ Ναζιραίων ξυρᾶσθαι διέταξε μάλα συχνούς. Cp. B. J. ii. 15. 1.

The reason of this will appear from the specification of the sacrificial offerings required of a Nazarite, which were numerous and expensive. (See Numb. vi.)

— φυλάσσων] The accuracy of St. Luke's style is seen in the distinction he makes between φυλάσσω here and φυλάσσομαι in the following verse.

26. σὺν αὐτοῖς ἁγνισθείς] being separated and sanctified as a Nazarite with them. See on v. 24; and cp. xxiv. 18, εὗρόν με ἡγνισμένον ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ.—Ἐξυρᾶτο ὁ Παῦλος, οὐ τῆς γνώμης καταβαλλομένης, ἀλλὰ τῆς ἀγάπης συγκαταβαινούσης. (Chrys., Theophyl.)

— διαγγέλλων τὴν ἐκπλήρωσιν τῶν ἡμερῶν τοῦ ἁγνισμοῦ, ἕως οὗ προσηνέχθη ὑπὲρ ἑνὸς ἑκάστου αὐτῶν ἡ προσφορά] Announcing the fulfilment of the days of their Nazarite vow, until the (legal) offering was offered for each one of them.

That the ἐκπλήρωσις τῶν ἡμερῶν means the fulfilment of the days of the Nazarite vow is evident from the passages in the Book of Numbers, according to the LXX, which describe the vow. See Numb. vi. 5, concerning the Nazarite's vow, ξυρὸν οὐκ ἐπελεύσεται ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ, ἕως ἂν πληρωθῶσιν αἱ ἡμέραι, ὅσας ηὔξατο τῷ Κυρίῳ: and vi. 13, ᾗ ἂν ἡμέρᾳ πληρώσῃ ἡμέρας εὐχῆς αὐτοῦ προσοίσει αὐτὸς . . . then the προσφοραὶ are specified; and then, v. 18, ξυρήσεται ὁ ἠγιαμένος παρὰ τὰς θύρας τῆς σκηνῆς τοῦ μαρτυρίου τὴν κεφαλὴν τῆς εὐχῆς αὐτοῦ. And then he shall burn his hair in the fire; and after he has shaven his head, the Priest shall take a part of the offering and place it in his hands, and offer it before the Lord. And so the ceremony was ended, and the vow was paid.

ἕως οὗ προσηνέχθη is rendered by Vulg. 'donec offerretur,' and by Engl. Vers. 'until an offering should be offered;' and this seems to be the correct rendering. See the examples of this structure in De Wette, Alford, and Kühner, § 846.

The sense appears to be this: St. Paul undertook to be the spokesman and paymaster of the four Nazarites. As such he took them with him to the Temple, and presented them to the Priests, and gave to the Priests the official notification that the term of their vow was expired; and made himself responsible for the payment of the fees for sacrifices to be offered, and services to be performed in the behalf of his presentees, before their heads could be shaved and they be released from their vow.

27 Ὡς δὲ ἔμελλον αἱ ἑπτὰ ἡμέραι συντελεῖσθαι, οἱ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἀσίας Ἰουδαῖοι θεασάμενοι αὐτὸν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ συνέχεον πάντα τὸν ὄχλον, καὶ ἐπέβαλον ἐπ' p ch. 24. 6. αὐτὸν τὰς χεῖρας, 28 κράζοντες, [p]Ἄνδρες Ἰσραηλῖται, βοηθεῖτε· οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ἄνθρωπος ὁ κατὰ τοῦ λαοῦ καὶ τοῦ νόμου καὶ τοῦ τόπου τούτου πάντας πανταχῆ διδάσκων· ἔτι τε καὶ Ἕλληνας εἰσήγαγεν εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, καὶ κεκοίνωκε q ch. 20. 4. 2 Tim 4. 20. τὸν ἅγιον τόπον τοῦτον. 29 [q]Ἦσαν γὰρ προεωρακότες Τρόφιμον τὸν Ἐφέσιον ἐν τῇ πόλει σὺν αὐτῷ, ὃν ἐνόμιζον ὅτι εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν εἰσήγαγεν ὁ Παῦλος.
r ch. 26. 21. 30 [r]Ἐκινήθη τε ἡ πόλις ὅλη, καὶ ἐγένετο συνδρομὴ τοῦ λαοῦ· καὶ ἐπιλαβόμενοι τοῦ Παύλου εἷλκον αὐτὸν ἔξω τοῦ ἱεροῦ· καὶ εὐθέως ἐκλείσθησαν αἱ θύραι.

31 Ζητούντων δὲ αὐτὸν ἀποκτεῖναι, ἀνέβη φάσις τῷ χιλιάρχῳ τῆς σπείρης, ὅτι ὅλη συγχύνεται Ἰερουσαλήμ· 32 ὃς ἐξαυτῆς παραλαβὼν στρατιώτας καὶ ἑκατοντάρχας κατέδραμεν ἐπ' αὐτούς. Οἱ δὲ ἰδόντες χιλίαρχον καὶ τοὺς στρα-s ver. 11. τιώτας ἐπαύσαντο τύπτοντες τὸν Παῦλον. 33 [s]Τότε ἐγγίσας ὁ χιλίαρχος ἐπελάβετο αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐκέλευσε δεθῆναι ἁλύσεσι δυσί· καὶ ἐπυνθάνετο τίς εἴη, καὶ τί ἐστι πεποιηκώς. 34 [t]Ἄλλοι δὲ ἄλλο τι ἐπεφώνουν ἐν τῷ ὄχλῳ· μὴ δυναμένου δὲ αὐτοῦ γνῶναι τὸ ἀσφαλὲς διὰ τὸν θόρυβον, ἐκέλευσεν ἄγεσθαι αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν παρεμβολήν. 35 [u]Ὅτε δὲ ἐγένετο ἐπὶ τοὺς ἀναβαθμοὺς, συνέβη

It is probable that this release could not be consummated immediately, nor indeed till a term of seven days (see v. 27) had expired after this announcement and presentation were made. This was reasonable. It was necessary that inquiries should be made by the Priests as to the identity of the persons presented for release, and as to the fact of their having complied with the terms of their vow (by abstinence from wine, by non-pollution, and the other conditions) before the sacrifice could be rightly offered for them, and they be emancipated from their vow.

Hence the phrase ἕως οὗ. St. Paul was their representative, and solicitor of their cause; and he must continue to act in this capacity till the seven days were completed, and the Priests were satisfied that all the requisites of the vow had been duly fulfilled.

This is confirmed by what he himself states (xxiv. 18), that those who arrested him, nearly seven days after (xxi. 27), "found him purified (as a Nazarite) in the Temple:" i. e. he was in attendance there, promoting the cause of the four poor Nazarites, as well as his own, with a view to their release from the vow.

27. αἱ ἑπτὰ ἡμέραι] Some Expositors interpret these seven days as "the feast week of Pentecost" (Wieseler, 109. Baumgarten, ii. 448, and Howson, ii. p. 300).

But the Feast of Pentecost lasted only one day (Acts ii. 1), though later Jews extended it to two (Jahn, § 352. Winer, ii. 243).

The true interpretation seems to be, "the seven days" which were required to intervene between the notice given to the Priests of the expiration of the Vow, and the consummation of the Release from it.

This opinion is confirmed by Ammonius in Catenâ, p. 351, and Theophylact, p. 156, who says, ἔθος ἦν τοὺς ἔχοντας εὐχὴν κείρεσθαι τὴν κεφαλὴν μετὰ τὸ ἁγνισθῆναι, καὶ οὕτως ἐπὶ ἑπτὰ ἡμέρας ποιεῖν προσφορὰν ὑπὲρ ἑαυτῶν.

Some reasons for this interval are suggested in the preceding note.

Why was it for seven days? Probably, because this was a stated period for purifications (Exod. xxix. 37. Levit. xii. 2; xiii. 5; xiv. 8; xv. 19. Numb. xii. 14; xix. 14. Ezek. xliii. 26).

And in the Law concerning Nazarites (Numb. vi. 9), if a person under a Nazarite Vow had incurred a ceremonial pollution, he could not shave his head immediately, and begin his term afresh, but he must wait seven days, till the offerings could be offered for him, and his head be shaved, and then he was restored to the Nazaritic state, and he began his vow anew. So at the close of the Vow, it appears to have been required by the Priests that he should wait seven days till he could be released from this Nazaritic state, and be declared by them to have kept himself pure, ἁγνὸς, in it, and be allowed to have the requisite offerings made in his behalf.

St. Paul himself, as already observed, seems to have been under a Nazarite's vow when he came to Jerusalem.

"The seven days" here mentioned could not have been the term of his vow, as some have supposed. This was too short a time for such a Vow. In the whole Treatise in the Mishna, concerning Nazarites (tom. iii. 146—178, ed. Surenhusii), there is no mention of so short a term, nor, of any period less than thirty days.

"Potuit videre Paulus antè dudum votum Nazaræi nuncupâsse," says Lorinus, p. 782. Cp. Lewin, 661—665.

On a former occasion, when he was under a Nazarite vow, he had said that "he must by all means keep the next feast (which was a Pentecost) at Jerusalem" (xviii. 21).

The reason probably then was, because he was under that Vow. And now it is said, in like manner, that he hastened to be at Jerusalem, if possible, on the day of Pentecost (xx. 16). Perhaps the reason in both cases was the same.

It was usual for persons ἁγνίζειν ἑαυτοὺς before the great Festivals. See John xi. 55.

St. Paul was still under a Nazarite vow when he was arrested in the Temple, as he himself asserts, xxiv. 18, εὗρόν με ἡγνισμένον ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ. This is also confirmed by what he states, xxiv. 17, that he had come to Jerusalem, bringing not only alms but offerings, προσφορὰς, the same word as used above concerning the Nazarites, v. 26.

The "seven days" between the διαγγελία, or announcement to the Priests and the προσφορὰ, were nearly completed, when he was arrested in the Temple; and they who charged him with breaking the Law, and dishonouring the Temple, were in fact guilty of preventing him from keeping the Law, and enabling others to do so; and thus they themselves did what they charged him with doing,—they violated the Temple and the Law.

— οἱ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἀσίας Ἰουδαῖοι] St. Paul's compliance with the Law appears to have satisfied the Jews of Jerusalem, but not those of Asia, who had come up for the Feast, and who had been disappointed by his escape from their hands at Ephesus. They assailed him while showing his charity and his respect for the Law which they charged him with violating.

31. χιλιάρχῳ τῆς σπείρης] the captain of the Roman Garrison, Claudius Lysias, in the castle or fortress of Antonia, built by Herod the Great, and called Antonia in honour of Mark Antony (Joseph. Ant. xv. 11. 4).

See below, on v. 34.

The σπεῖρα, Cohors, was properly 1000 men, or one-sixth of the Legio.

— συγχύνεται] is in confusion. So A, B, D.—Elz. συγκέχυται.

33. δεθῆναι ἁλύσεσι δυσί] See xii. 6. A fulfilment of the prophecy (xx. 23), and therefore an assurance to St. Paul that the Spirit which had spoken to him was true.

34. ἐπεφώνουν] were shouting out different answers. So A, B, D, E. See xii. 22.—Elz. ἐβόων.

— παρεμβολήν] the military Garrison, or Barracks, in the Castle of Antonia. See xxii. 24; xxiii. 16. 32. 35.

For a full history and description of the fortress of Antonia, see Robinson, i. pp. 431—435. Williams, Holy City, i. 99; ii. 403—411. Howson, ii. 311. It was on the North-West side of the Temple-Area (Joseph. Ant. xv. 11. 4. B. J. i. 5. 4; v. 5. 8; vi. 2. 9), on a rocky hill; at each of its four corners was a lofty tower; it communicated by two flights of stairs with the northern and western arcades of the Temple-Area.

On one of these two flights St. Paul stood when he addressed the people, who were in the Temple-Area below him.

βαστάζεσθαι αὐτὸν ὑπὸ τῶν στρατιωτῶν διὰ τὴν βίαν τοῦ ὄχλου· 36 t ἠκολούθει γὰρ τὸ πλῆθος τοῦ λαοῦ κράζοντες, Αἶρε αὐτόν· t Luke 23. 18. John 19. 15. ch. 22. 22.

37 Μέλλων τε εἰσάγεσθαι εἰς τὴν παρεμβολὴν ὁ Παῦλος λέγει τῷ χιλιάρχῳ, Εἰ ἔξεστί μοι εἰπεῖν τι πρός σε; Ὁ δὲ ἔφη, Ἑλληνιστὶ γινώσκεις; 38 οὐκ ἄρα σὺ εἶ ὁ Αἰγύπτιος ὁ πρὸ τούτων τῶν ἡμερῶν ἀναστατώσας καὶ ἐξαγαγὼν εἰς τὴν ἔρημον τοὺς τετρακισχιλίους ἄνδρας τῶν σικαρίων; 39 u Εἶπε δὲ ὁ Παῦλος, Ἐγὼ ἄνθρωπος μέν εἰμι Ἰουδαῖος, Ταρσεὺς, τῆς Κιλικίας οὐκ ἀσήμου πόλεως πολίτης· δέομαι δέ σου, ἐπίτρεψόν μοι λαλῆσαι πρὸς τὸν λαόν. u ch. 9. 11, 30. & 22. 3.

40 x Ἐπιτρέψαντος δὲ αὐτοῦ, ὁ Παῦλος ἑστὼς ἐπὶ τῶν ἀναβαθμῶν κατέσεισε τῇ χειρὶ τῷ λαῷ· πολλῆς δὲ σιγῆς γενομένης, προσεφώνησε τῇ Ἑβραΐδι διαλέκτῳ λέγων, x ch. 12. 17. & 13. 16. & 19. 33.

XXII. 1 Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοὶ, καὶ πατέρες, ἀκούσατέ μου τῆς πρὸς ὑμᾶς νυνὶ ἀπολογίας. 2 Ἀκούσαντες δὲ ὅτι τῇ Ἑβραΐδι διαλέκτῳ προσεφώνει αὐτοῖς, μᾶλλον παρέσχον ἡσυχίαν. Καί φησιν, 3 a Ἐγώ εἰμι ἀνὴρ Ἰουδαῖος, γεγεννημένος ἐν Ταρσῷ τῆς Κιλικίας, ἀνατεθραμμένος δὲ ἐν τῇ πόλει ταύτῃ παρὰ τοὺς πόδας Γαμαλιὴλ, πεπαιδευμένος κατὰ ἀκρίβειαν τοῦ πατρῴου νόμου, ζηλωτὴς ὑπάρχων τοῦ Θεοῦ, καθὼς πάντες ὑμεῖς ἐστε σήμερον· 4 b ὃς ταύτην τὴν ὁδὸν ἐδίωξα ἄχρι θανάτου, δεσμεύων καὶ παραδιδοὺς εἰς φυλακὰς ἄνδρας τε καὶ γυναῖκας· 5 c ὡς καὶ ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς μαρτυρεῖ μοι, καὶ πᾶν τὸ πρεσβυτέριον, a ch. 9. 11. & 21. 39. 2 Cor. 11. 22. ch. 5. 34. Gal. 1. 14. b ch. 8. 3. & 9. 1. & 26. 9. 1 Cor. 15. 9. Gal. 1. 13. 1 Tim. 1. 13. c ch. 9. 2. & 26. 12.

---

36. αἶρε αὐτόν] So they had cried, against Christ, ἆρον, ἆρον, αὐτὸν σταύρωσον (John xix. 15), where St. Luke uses, as here, the present tense αἶρε (xxiii. 18). So the populace cried at Smyrna against Polycarp and the Christians (Mart. Polyc. 3. 9), αἶρε τοὺς ἀθέους.

37. Ἑλληνιστὶ γινώσκεις;] Dost thou know Greek? A question of surprise, suggested by hearing St. Paul address him in Greek, εἰ ἔξεστί μοι εἰπεῖν; Probably the Chief Captain could not speak Hebrew, and St. Paul had spoken to him, a Gentile, in Greek; but to the Jews (which they did not expect, any more than the chiliarch expected him to speak Greek) he spoke in Hebrew (v. 40).

38. οὐκ ἄρα σὺ εἶ;] Rendered by some learned Expositors, 'Thou art not, therefore, as I imagined, art thou?' (Winer, § 57, p. 453.) But Chrys., and other ancient Greek interpreters, render it, 'Art not thou then that Egyptian?' Hence Vulg., 'Nonne tu es?' and Engl. Vers., 'Art not thou?' Their authority is of great weight; and though the meaning they assign to the words would be rightly represented by ἄρ' οὐ in classical Greek, yet the Hellenistic usage may well have admitted such a natural combination as οὐκ ἄρα σὺ εἶ; 'Art not thou, therefore?' Cp. Hackett, p. 305.

— ὁ Αἰγύπτιος] The false prophet who had led a vast multitude (Josephus says 30,000) to the Mount of Olives to see Jerusalem fall, and who was routed by Felix. See Joseph. B. J. ii. 13. 5. Ant. xx. 8. 6.

The Egyptian had escaped; hence the supposition of the chief captain, which seems to have been confirmed by hearing the Apostle speak Greek. The Greek language had become common in Egypt in consequence of the conquests of Alexander and the Ptolemies, as the LXX Version, there made, shows.

The chief captain had perhaps heard the charges of some of the Jews against St. Paul, that he had spoken against their Holy Place and the Law; and this reminded him of the language of the Egyptian, who had prophesied that the City would fall; and who had been opposed by the citizens of Jerusalem, as St. Paul now was; and he had at first imagined that he was now captured by them.

Perhaps also the Jews themselves, in order to exasperate the Romans, had identified him with the Egyptian. (Burton.)

— πρὸ τούτων τῶν ἡμερῶν] On this use of τούτων with ἡμερῶν see i. 5.

It appears from Josephus that this Egyptian was routed in the reign of Nero, probably in the first year of his reign, A.D. 55. (Wieseler, p. 76.) The word τούτων indicates that this event was still recent in the memory of the chief captain, and therefore St. Paul's imprisonment was not long after that year.

— τῶν σικαρίων] the bandits, or assassins, from sica, seco (cut-throats). See Chrys., and Joseph. B. J. ii. 13. 3, ἕτερον εἶδος λῃστῶν, οἱ καλούμενοι σικάριοι, and Ant. xx. 6. The fanaticism and ferocity of these zealots came to a height, and vented itself in the most barbarous outrages afterwards, in the siege of Jerusalem. See on Matt. xxiv. 15.

39. οὐκ ἀσήμου] Many of the coins of Tarsus bear the epigraphs ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΛΙΣ and ΑΤΤΟΝΟΜΟΣ. See Akermann, p. 56.

40. τῶν ἀναβαθμῶν] The steps which led down from the barracks and fortress of Antonia (vv. 31. 35),—where he would have found refuge,—to the Temple-Area.

"What spectacle," says Chrys., "more striking than this! Paul standing on the stairs of the Temple, bound with two chains, and speaking to the people of Jerusalem at the Feast of Pentecost."

— κατέσεισε τῇ χειρί] Made a motion of the hand, to keep down (κατὰ) the noise and passion of the crowd, and to produce silence;

"——— calidæ fecisse silentia turbæ Majestate manûs." (Pers. iv. 5.)

Cp. xii. 17; xiii. 16; xix. 33. A very different movement from ἐκτείνας τὴν χεῖρα, xxvi. 1.

— Ἑβραΐδι διαλέκτῳ] See xxii. 2. Not γλώσσῃ, but διαλέκτῳ. See ii. 6. 8. The Syro-Chaldaic, in which St. Paul addressed the people, was a dialect rather than a language.

— Ἑβραΐδι δ.] τῇ συγγενείᾳ τῆς φωνῆς αὐτοὺς ἐπισπᾶται. (Chrys.)

CH. XXII. 1. ἄνδρες ἀδελφοὶ, καὶ πατέρες, ἀκούσατε] A proœmium designed it would seem to show his hearers that he had St. Stephen in his thoughts, and to remind them of him who had begun his speech in their presence with the same words, vii. 2. Cp. below, vv. 20. 23.

3. παρὰ τοὺς πόδας Γαμαλιήλ] The Hebrew Rabbis sat on an elevated seat, and their scholars at their feet. See above, iv. 35. Schoettgen, Hor. Hebr. p. 477. On Gamaliel see v. 34.

4. ταύτην τὴν ὁδόν] this way (see ix. 2) on which I myself am now going, and to which I would bring you,—a courageous profession of his Christianity. At the same time he addresses them as brethren, in order that they may not suppose that the Gospel is at variance with the Law.

— ταύτην τὴν ὁδὸν ἐδίωξα] St. Paul was then eager to bring them of "that way" bound to Jerusalem, to be put to death; he himself is now bound at Jerusalem for "that way." So God adapts sufferings to sins, and yet he greatly blesses the Apostle in suffering those evils as a Confessor and Martyr, which he had before inflicted on others as a Persecutor.

5. ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς μαρτυρεῖ μοι] Ananias (xxiii. 2), probably one of the Sanhedrim, who had sent Saul. If St. Paul was converted in or before A.D. 35, it was Caiaphas who gave him the commission, and who was removed by Vitellius A.D. 36.

He was succeeded by Jonathan son of Annas; and after one year he was removed to make way for his brother Theophilus. (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 4. 3; 5. 3.) In A.D. 42, Simon son of Boëthus was High Priest. (Joseph. xix. 6. 2.)

παρ' ὧν καὶ ἐπιστολὰς δεξάμενος πρὸς τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς εἰς Δαμασκὸν ἐπορευόμην, ἄξων καὶ τοὺς ἐκεῖσε ὄντας δεδεμένους εἰς Ἰερουσαλὴμ, ἵνα τιμωρηθῶσιν.

d ch. 9. 3. & 26. 12. 1 Cor 15. 8. 2 Cor. 12. 2. e ch. 26. 14, 15.

6 [a] Ἐγένετο δέ μοι πορευομένῳ καὶ ἐγγίζοντι τῇ Δαμασκῷ περὶ μεσημβρίαν, ἐξαίφνης ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ περιαστράψαι φῶς ἱκανὸν περὶ ἐμέ. 7 [e] Ἔπεσόν τε εἰς τὸ ἔδαφος, καὶ ἤκουσα φωνῆς λεγούσης μοι, Σαοὺλ, Σαοὺλ, τί μὲ διώκεις; 8 Ἐγὼ δὲ ἀπεκρίθην, Τίς εἶ, κύριε; εἶπέ τε πρός με, Ἐγώ εἰμι Ἰησοῦς ὁ f ch. 9. 7. Dan. 10. 7.

Ναζωραῖος, ὃν σὺ διώκεις. 9 [f] Οἱ δὲ σὺν ἐμοὶ ὄντες τὸ μὲν φῶς ἐθεάσαντο, καὶ ἔμφοβοι ἐγένοντο· τὴν δὲ φωνὴν οὐκ ἤκουσαν τοῦ λαλοῦντός μοι. 10 Εἶπον δέ, Τί ποιήσω, Κύριε; ὁ δὲ Κύριος εἶπε πρός με, Ἀναστὰς πορεύου εἰς Δαμασκόν· κἀκεῖ σοὶ λαληθήσεται περὶ πάντων ὧν τέτακταί σοι ποιῆσαι. 11 Ὡς δὲ οὐκ ἐνέβλεπον ἀπὸ τῆς δόξης τοῦ φωτὸς ἐκείνου, χειραγωγούμενος

g ch. 9. 17.

ὑπὸ τῶν συνόντων μοι ἦλθον εἰς Δαμασκόν. 12 [g] Ἀνανίας δέ τις, ἀνὴρ εὐσεβὴς κατὰ τὸν νόμον, μαρτυρούμενος ὑπὸ πάντων τῶν κατοικούντων Ἰουδαίων, 13 ἐλθὼν πρός με καὶ ἐπιστὰς εἶπέ μοι, Σαοὺλ ἀδελφὲ, ἀνάβλεψον· κἀγὼ αὐτῇ h ch. 3. 14. & 7. 52. ch. 26. 16. 1 John 2. 1.

τῇ ὥρᾳ ἀνέβλεψα εἰς αὐτόν. 14 [h] Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν, Ὁ Θεὸς τῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν προεχειρίσατό σε γνῶναι τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἰδεῖν τὸν Δίκαιον, καὶ ἀκοῦσαι φωνὴν ἐκ τοῦ στόματος αὐτοῦ· 15 ὅτι ἔσῃ μάρτυς αὐτῷ πρὸς πάντας ἀνθρώπους,

i Matt. 3. 11. Mark 1. 4. Luke 3. 3.

ὧν ἑώρακας καὶ ἤκουσας· 16 [i] καὶ νῦν τί μέλλεις; ἀναστὰς βάπτισαι καὶ

k ch. 9. 26.

ἀπόλουσαι τὰς ἁμαρτίας σου, ἐπικαλεσάμενος τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ. 17 [k] Ἐγένετο δὲ μοὶ ὑποστρέψαντι εἰς Ἰερουσαλὴμ, καὶ προσευχομένου μου ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, γενέσθαι με ἐν ἐκστάσει, 18 καὶ ἰδεῖν αὐτὸν λέγοντά μοι, Σπεῦσον καὶ ἔξελθε ἐν τάχει ἐξ Ἰερουσαλήμ· διότι οὐ παραδέξονται σοῦ τὴν μαρτυρίαν περὶ ἐμοῦ.

l ver. 4.

19 [l] Κἀγὼ εἶπον, Κύριε, αὐτοὶ ἐπίστανται, ὅτι ἐγὼ ἤμην φυλακίζων καὶ δέρων

m ch. 7. 58. & 8. 1.

κατὰ τὰς συναγωγὰς τοὺς πιστεύοντας ἐπὶ σέ· 20 [m] καὶ ὅτε ἐξεχεῖτο τὸ αἷμα n ch. 9. 15. & 13. 2. Gal. 1. 15. & 2. 8. Eph. 3. 8. 1 Tim. 2. 7. 2 Tim. 1. 11.

Στεφάνου τοῦ μάρτυρός σου, καὶ αὐτὸς ἤμην ἐφεστὼς καὶ συνευδοκῶν, καὶ φυλάσσων τὰ ἱμάτια τῶν ἀναιρούντων αὐτόν. 21 [n] Καὶ εἶπε πρός με, Πορεύου, ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰς ἔθνη μακρὰν ἐξαποστελῶ σε.

o ch. 21. 36.

22 [o] Ἤκουον δὲ αὐτοῦ ἄχρι τούτου τοῦ λόγου, καὶ ἐπῆραν τὴν φωνὴν αὐτῶν,

---

In A.D. 43, Matthias son of Annas; and soon after him, Elionæus son of Cantheras. (Joseph. xix. 8. 1.)

In A.D. 45, Joseph son of Kami (Joseph. xx. 1. 3), and soon after him Ananias son of Nebedæus. (Joseph. xx. 5. 2.)

— πρὸς τοὺς ἀδελφούς] the Jewish authorities. The words are equivalent to πρὸς τὰς συναγωγὰς in ix. 2. See also xxviii. 21, which shows that οἱ ἀδελφοὶ was used by the Jews when speaking of their own people. St. Paul reminds the Jews that he the Christian Apostle regards them as his brethren; and therefore he had begun his address with the words ἄνδρες ἀδελφοὶ (xxii. 1; cp. xxviii. 17).

No evil treatment from them could ever provoke the Apostle to lay aside the feelings and language of affection to his brethren, his kinsmen according to the flesh. (Rom. ix. 3.)

He would also thus teach them that all men are brethren in Christ.

8. Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος] See on ix. 5; xxiv. 5; xxvi. 9.

9. καὶ ἔμφοβοι ἐγένοντο] Not found in A, B, H. Cp. ix. 7.

— φωνὴν οὐκ ἤκουσαν] See on ix. 7; and cp. ἀκοῦσαι φωνὴν, v. 14. Ammon. p. 361, οἱ συνόντες τὸν ἦχον ἤκουον τῆς φωνῆς οὐ μὴν συνῆκαν τὰ λαλούμενα. Cp. Birks, Hor. Apost. p. 326, where are some excellent remarks on this speech as compared with St. Paul's address to Agrippa, xxvi. 4—14.

16. αὐτοῦ] So A, B, E, and many Versions. — Elz. τοῦ Κυρίου.

17. ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ] Thus (in reply to the charges against him, xxi. 28) he shows that he does not despise the Temple, and is approved by the God of the Temple, and that he received his Apostolic mission to the Gentiles in the Temple, from Christ, Whom he here proclaims as Lord of the Temple.

How fitly and forcibly does the Vision here described present the God of both Covenants as One, and the Christian Church as the true substance and consummation of the Levitical Law.

The Temple is here seen to be the Vestibule, or πρόναος, of the Catholic Church; and the Waters of Life, which are to irrigate, and fertilize, and purify the world, flow from the fountain-head in Jerusalem. (Isa. ii. 3. Micah iv. 2.)

— ἐκστάσει] Perhaps on the occasion mentioned xi. 30; xii. 25, and to prepare him for his first mission to the Gentiles, whence the words, v. 21, πορεύου, ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰς ἔθνη μακρὰν ἐξαποστελῶ σε.

The Vision is supposed by some to have been on the occasion of the visit in ix. 26. But to this the words πορεύου κ.τ.λ. seem to present an objection. St. Paul came again to Jerusalem after that visit, before he went to the Gentiles. See xi. 30; xii. 25; xiii. 4.

19. κἀγὼ εἶπον, Κύριε κ.τ.λ.] They ought to receive my testimony, for they cannot but know it to be true, as the result of conviction, from such evidence as has converted one whom they saw once a most zealous Persecutor of the Church, into a witness of the truth of the Gospel. Nothing but such evidence could prevail on me to preach a religion, which shows me to myself and to others as having murdered the saints of God.

20. ὅτε ἐξεχεῖτο τὸ αἷμα Στεφάνου τοῦ μάρτυρός σου] A noble endeavour to make public reparation for a public sin, by public confession in the same place where the sin was committed.

As St. Paul did not speak Greek on this occasion (v. 2), he did not use the word martyr. The LXX often employ the word μάρτυρ for the Hebrew עֵד (edh), or witness. The application of this word to the first person who shed his blood for Christ, was enough to designate it as the fittest to be assigned to those who followed St. Stephen in his testimony to the truth, even unto death.

The same word seems to have been used by St. Paul in relating the divine message to himself in v. 15. St. Stephen was Thy witness, and He whose witness Stephen was, has commanded me to be His witness, not to the Jews only, but to all men.

— συνευδοκῶν] Elz. adds τῇ ἀναιρέσει αὐτοῦ, which is not found in A, B, D, E, and appears to be a scholium.

λέγοντες, Αἶρε ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς τὸν τοιοῦτον· οὐ γὰρ καθῆκεν αὐτὸν ζῆν. 23 Κραυγαζόντων τε αὐτῶν, καὶ ῥιπτούντων τὰ ἱμάτια, καὶ κονιορτὸν βαλλόντων εἰς τὸν ἀέρα, 24 ἐκέλευσεν ὁ χιλίαρχος εἰσάγεσθαι αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν παρεμβολήν, εἶπας μάστιξιν ἀνετάζεσθαι αὐτὸν, ἵνα ἐπιγνῷ δι' ἣν αἰτίαν οὕτως ἐπεφώνουν αὐτῷ. 25 p Ὡς δὲ προέτειναν αὐτὸν τοῖς ἱμᾶσιν, εἶπε πρὸς τὸν ἑστῶτα ἑκατόνταρχον ὁ Παῦλος, Εἰ ἄνθρωπον Ῥωμαῖον καὶ ἀκατάκριτον ἔξεστιν ὑμῖν μαστίζειν; 26 Ἀκούσας δὲ ὁ ἑκατόνταρχος, προσελθὼν ἀπήγγειλε τῷ χιλιάρχῳ λέγων, Τί μέλλεις ποιεῖν; ὁ γὰρ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος Ῥωμαῖός ἐστι. 27 Προσελθὼν δὲ ὁ χιλίαρχος εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Λέγε μοι, Σὺ Ῥωμαῖος εἶ; ὁ δὲ ἔφη· Ναί. 28 Ἀπεκρίθη τε ὁ χιλίαρχος, Ἐγὼ πολλοῦ κεφαλαίου τὴν πολιτείαν ταύτην ἐκτησάμην· ὁ δὲ Παῦλος ἔφη, Ἐγὼ δὲ καὶ γεγέννημαι. 29 Εὐθέως οὖν ἀπέστησαν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ οἱ μέλλοντες αὐτὸν ἀνετάζειν· καὶ ὁ χιλίαρχος δὲ ἐφοβήθη, ἐπιγνοὺς ὅτι Ῥωμαῖός ἐστι, καὶ ὅτι αὐτὸν ἦν δεδεκώς.

p ch. 16. 37.

30 Τῇ δὲ ἐπαύριον q βουλόμενος γνῶναι τὸ ἀσφαλὲς, τὸ τί κατηγορεῖται ὑπὸ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἔλυσεν αὐτὸν, καὶ ἐκέλευσε συνελθεῖν τοὺς ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ πᾶν τὸ συνέδριον· καὶ καταγαγὼν τὸν Παῦλον ἔστησεν εἰς αὐτούς.

q ch. 23. 28.

XXIII. 1 a Ἀτενίσας δὲ ὁ Παῦλος τῷ συνεδρίῳ εἶπεν, Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοὶ, ἐγὼ πάσῃ συνειδήσει ἀγαθῇ πεπολίτευμαι τῷ Θεῷ ἄχρι ταύτης τῆς ἡμέρας. 2 b Ὁ δὲ ἀρχιερεὺς Ἀνανίας ἐπέταξε τοῖς παρεστῶσιν αὐτῷ τύπτειν αὐτοῦ τὸ στόμα.

a ch. 24. 16. 2 Tim. 1. 3.

b 1 Kings 22. 24. Jer. 20. 2. John 18. 22.

22. καθῆκεν] it was not fit: he ought to have been slain already, instead of being rescued as he was by the Chief Captain. So A, B, C, D, E, G.—Elz. has καθῆκον.

23. ῥιπτούντων τὰ ἱμάτια, καὶ κονιορτὸν βαλλόντων] They shook their clothes and cast dust, and cried, Away with him. Perhaps, a preparation or a menace of, throwing off their clothes, in order to cast stones (Grotius, Whitby, Meyer), and kill him for blasphemy—as they had done to Stephen, when Saul himself "held the clothes of them that stoned him" (vii. 58; xxii. 20). Or it may have been only an impetuous movement of rage and execration. See Harmer, Obs. iv. p. 203, on the similar movement of the populace of Persia, when in a state of excitement.

The speech and scene are full of points of resemblance to what was said and done on that occasion; and St. Paul must have had St. Stephen often before him at this time.

They probably would have stoned him, if he had not had a retreat by the stairs into the παρεμβολή.

24. εἰς τὴν παρεμβολήν] See xxi. 31. 34, to be brought up by the stairs into the Barracks.

— ἵνα ἐπιγνῷ] for he had not understood the 'Hebrew dialect' of the Apostle's speech.

25. προέτειναν τοῖς ἱμᾶσιν] The best MSS. are divided between προέτεινον A, E, προσέτειναν C, D, προέτειναν B, G. The last seems preferable. It appears that St. Paul was actually bound by the thongs. See v. 30, ὅτι αὐτὸν ἦν δεδεκώς. St. Paul put the question in the text to the soldiers, ὡς προέτειναν, i.e. when they stretched him forward with the ἱμάντες, or thongs, to the 'palus' or post, in order that when he had been so bound he might be scourged with μάστιγες.

The Authorized Version has, "as they bound him with thongs," a rendering which has been censured by some modern expositors; but which seems more accurate than that which has been substituted for it, viz. when they stretched him out for the thongs, i.e. to receive the lashes. The word ἱμὰς is used in three other places of New Test. (Mark i. 7. Luke iii. 16. John i. 27), and always as something used for binding or tying, as here.

The rendering is also confirmed by v. 29, where it is said that the Captain was afraid when he heard that Paul was a Roman citizen, and because he had bound him. This, as Böttger and Hackett observe, could not refer to the command in xxi. 33; for he kept Paul bound with two chains, after he had heard that he was a Roman citizen (see v. 30, ἔλυσεν), and Felix left him so bound (xxiv. 27). Such a detention of a Roman citizen in safe custody, was not against the Law. But the fear of the Captain appears to have been caused by some other action of binding, which seems to be no other than that mentioned in this verse, i. e. a binding with thongs, in order that the person so bound might be scourged.

26. τί μέλ. π.;] Elz. prefixes ὅρα, which is not in A, B, C, E.

— Ῥωμαῖος] See on Acts xvi. 37.

27. λέγε μοι] Elz. adds εἰ, which is not in A, B, C, D, E, and weakens the sense, "Art thou a Roman?"

28. κεφαλαίου] properly, a capital sum put out for usury, but used by LXX for any sum of money. Levit. vi. 4. Numb. v. 7. (Grot.)

— ἐγὼ δὲ καὶ γεγέννημαι] But I have not only, like you, the 'jus civitatis,' but was also born with it.

29. ἀνετάζειν] "examinare, per quæstionem probare," i.e. "tormento flagrorum adhibito."

30. ἔλυσεν αὐτόν] Elz. adds ἀπὸ τῶν δεσμῶν, which is not in A, B, C, E, H, and seems to be a gloss.

— καταγαγών] from the Castle of Antonia overhanging the Temple, to the Temple-Area below it; and to the place in which the Sanhedrim were assembled—perhaps the same place in which he himself had taken part in their proceedings against St. Stephen, pleading before them (vi. 12. 15). They usually met in the hall Gazith. Concerning the conclave Gazith, "the seat of the great Sanhedrim," see Lightfoot (i. p. 1105. Temple, chap. xxii.). It was on the south side of the Temple.

CH. XXIII. 1. πάσῃ συνειδήσει ἀγαθῇ] "Hæc verba ad anteriorem vitæ ejus partem, quum non dum factus est Christianus, extendenda esse mihi quidem videtur valdè probabile." Bp. Sanderson, iv. p. 72. The Apostle says that he had served God from his forefathers with a pure conscience; that is, he had no private ends, but had been zealous towards God (Acts xxii. 3; xxvi. 4), and exceedingly zealous for the traditions of his fathers (Gal. i. 14); and he thought it his duty to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus Christ (xxvi. 9).

But yet he calls himself a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and injurious (1 Tim. i. 13), and chief of sinners (1 Tim. i. 15).

Almighty God had given him a Conscience, and he was bound to obey its dictates. But first, it was his duty to take care that his Conscience was rightly informed. It was not enough that his Conscience was pure and good, i.e. without any admixture of sinister designs, of worldly aims and personal interests, and desirous only of God's glory; but it was necessary, also, that his Conscience should be conformed to God's Will, and regulated by His Law.

As S. Augustine says (de Mendacio, 7), "It is indeed of great importance with what intention, and for what end a thing is done; but that which is sinful is never to be done, with any intention, or for any end, however good."

It is not enough to run toward the goal of God's glory; it is also necessary to run in the way of God's commandments.

See Bp. Sanderson's Lectures, "De Conscientiâ;" especially Lecture ii. "On good Intention," Works, iv. p. 23, in which it is shown that there is "no sufficient security in the consciousness of good intention," and Lecture iv. § 13, p. 72, where he considers this example of St. Paul.

— πεπολίτευμαι τῷ Θεῷ] a Hebraism, in God's sight; and not only in the eyes of men. The fuller expression is ἐνώπιον Θεοῦ, or ἐναντίον Θεοῦ, Luke i. 6. Acts iv. 19; viii. 21, and παρὰ Θεῷ, Luke ii. 52.

2. ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς Ἀνανίας] the son of Nebedæus; he succeeded c Lev. 19. 35. Deut. 17. 4, 9. & 25. 12.

3 c Τότε ὁ Παῦλος πρὸς αὐτὸν εἶπε, Τύπτειν σὲ μέλλει ὁ Θεὸς, τοῖχε κεκονιαμένε· καὶ σὺ κάθῃ κρίνων με κατὰ τὸν νόμον, καὶ παρανομῶν κελεύεις με τύπτεσθαι;

d Exod. 22. 28.

4 Οἱ δὲ παρεστῶτες εἶπον, Τὸν ἀρχιερέα τοῦ Θεοῦ λοιδορεῖς; 5 d Ἔφη τε ὁ Παῦλος, Οὐκ ᾔδειν, ἀδελφοὶ, ὅτι ἐστὶν ἀρχιερεύς· γέγραπται γάρ, Ἄρχοντα τοῦ λαοῦ σου οὐκ ἐρεῖς κακῶς.

e ch. 24. 15, 21. & 26. 5, 6. Phil. 3. 5.

6 e Γνοὺς δὲ ὁ Παῦλος, ὅτι τὸ ἓν μέρος ἐστὶ Σαδδουκαίων τὸ δὲ ἕτερον Φαρισαίων, ἔκραξεν ἐν τῷ συνεδρίῳ, Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοὶ, ἐγὼ Φαρισαῖός εἰμι, υἱὸς Φαρισαίων· περὶ ἐλπίδος καὶ ἀναστάσεως νεκρῶν ἐγὼ κρίνομαι. 7 Τοῦτο δὲ αὐτοῦ εἰπόντος, ἐγένετο στάσις τῶν Φαρισαίων καὶ Σαδδουκαίων, καὶ ἐσχίσθη τὸ πλῆθος.

f Matt. 22. 23. Mark 12. 18. Luke 20. 27.

8 f Σαδδουκαῖοι μὲν γὰρ λέγουσι μὴ εἶναι ἀνάστασιν, μήτε ἄγγελον μήτε πνεῦμα, Φαρισαῖοι δὲ ὁμολογοῦσι τὰ ἀμφότερα.

g ch. 5. 39. & 22. 7, 17, 18. & 25. 25. & 26. 31.

9 g Ἐγένετο δὲ κραυγὴ μεγάλη· καὶ ἀναστάντες οἱ γραμματεῖς τοῦ μέρους τῶν Φαρισαίων διεμάχοντο λέγοντες, Οὐδὲν κακὸν εὑρίσκομεν ἐν τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ τούτῳ· εἰ δὲ πνεῦμα ἐλάλησεν αὐτῷ ἢ ἄγγελος,—10 Πολλῆς δὲ γενομένης στάσεως, εὐλαβηθεὶς ὁ χιλίαρχος μὴ διασπασθῇ ὁ Παῦλος ὑπ' αὐτῶν, ἐκέλευσε τὸ στράτευμα καταβὰν ἁρπάσαι αὐτὸν ἐκ μέσου αὐτῶν, ἄγειν τε εἰς τὴν παρεμβολήν.

Joseph son of Cami in the high priesthood, in the procuratorship of Tiberius Alexander, A.D. 48 (Joseph. Ant. xx. 5. 2), and held it under Cumanus; his cruelty and avarice are recorded by Josephus, Ant. xx. 5. 3; xx. 8. He was sent to Rome for trial, before the Emperor Claudius, A.D. 52, on the accusation of Quadratus, and (it is most probable) was acquitted, and held the office of the high Priesthood at this time, and continued in it till he was superseded by Ismael, son of Phabi, a little before the departure of Felix from Judæa (Joseph. xx. 8. 2. Cp. Biscoe, pp. 70—76. Winer, p. 57. Meyer, p. 397).

3. σέ] emphatic, and to be accented as such.

— τοῖχε κεκονιαμένε] "paries dealbate—nihil solidi introrsum habens, sed aspectu tantùm speciosus." Cp. on τάφοι κεκονιαμένοι, Matt. xxiii. 27.

Though St. Paul spake "unavisedly with his lips," yet this was a true prophecy; Ananias was guilty of many crimes, and his house was burnt in a sedition raised by his own son, and he himself was drawn out from a place of concealment by the sicarii, and slain. (Joseph. B. J. ii. 17. 2—9.) A remarkable retribution; he who connived at the conspiracy of assassins against St. Paul (xxiii. 14), died by the hands of an assassin.

— καὶ σὺ κάθῃ] 'And art thou sitting there, &c.?' The καὶ connects the question with the command of Ananias, and brings out the inconsistency of his personal conduct with his judicial office.

5. οὐκ ᾔδειν] St. Paul's apology shows, that he retracted what he said, as language unfit to be addressed to any superior in the discharge of his duty;

Some have supposed that the words οὐκ ᾔδειν merely intimate defect of eye-sight; but this notion is inconsistent with these words. If St. Paul could not discern that Ananias was High Priest, how could he see that he sat there as his judge?

Or, if it be supposed that he could not distinguish him as the High Priest, then his apology amounts to no more than that he would not, indeed, call the High Priest by an opprobrious name, but that he saw no harm in addressing such language to any one else sitting there, as his Judge. Indeed, what is an apology, would in that sense be a repetition of the reproach.

The same objection seems to lie against the interpretation (suggested by Lorinus, Witsius, Schoettgen, Baumg., and others), which supposes that St. Paul means by οὐκ ᾔδειν to say, that he did not own him to be a High Priest, for he had purchased the office by bribery, and had shown himself to be a Tyrant.

But St. Paul's self-correction is recorded here as a warning, not to "speak evil of dignities" (2 Pet. ii. 10. Jude 8), even though the office they hold is disgraced by them—even though a Tiberius or a Nero sits on the throne, still the throne on which he sits, and the officer sitting upon it, are not to be treated with disrespect. See Matt. xxiii. 2.

"Ita (says Bp. Sanderson, Prælect. i. § 11, p. 8) verba Pauli, in quibus explicandis mirè se torquent, videntur omninò esse intelligenda, 'Non noveram,' i.e. Non cogitavi, non satis attentè consideravi. Quasi dixisset, Parcite, quæso, Fratres, justæ meæ indignationi, si æstuantis animi impetu abreptus liberiùs aliquid elocutus fuerim, quàm oportuit, immemor illius et personæ et officii mei. Agnosco errorem; non debui malè dicere Pontifici, quantumvis fecerit non digna suo honore; sed impediit animi ardor, ne ista, ut par erat, attentiùs considerarem." See also Sanderson's Serm. xiii. ad Aulam, § 11, i. p. 331.

On this sense of ᾔδειν, see Acts vii. 18. Rom. vii. 7. Eph. vi. 8. Col. iii. 24. It is also involved in the right and enlarged use of the word συν-είδησις, or Con-science.

6. γνοὺς ὁ Παῦλος] an example which has been much perverted in modern times. Thus a celebrated Roman-catholic expositor (Corn. A Lapide) builds on it the famous maxim "bellum hæreticorum pax est Ecclesiæ;" and he adds, "id sapienter vidit et edixit Cardinalis Hosius," the great persecutor of the Protestants in Poland in the sixteenth century;

He calls this the only method of maintaining the Unity of the Church; seeking to give a colour to this Machiavellian principle, from God's act in dispersing the builders of Babel, and from the practice of heretics themselves, in burning the corn of the field of the Church, like Sampson's foxes, with firebrands to their tails reversed (Judges xv. 4, 5).

But St. Paul gives no sanction to this unhappy maxim "divide, et impera." His end is not division but unity, and he does not seek to attain that end by any questionable means, but by a statement of the truth: "concerning the resurrection of the dead, I am this day called in question." Cp. xxvi. 23.

The confession so freely made by Romish Divines of the use they make of this example, may serve to put others on their guard against their perversions of it; especially when it is remembered how they have applied their principles in practice, by personating Puritans, Anabaptists, and other sectaries, in order to sow dissensions among us, and so to weaken and subvert the English Church. See Ware's Foxes and Firebrands, pp. 31—47. Abp. Bramhall's Works, i. p. xcvii. Wall on Infant Baptism, ii. p. 372, and the late Dr. Wordsworth's Eccles. Biog. iv. 64.

The proofs there given of the evils of schism, and of the occasions thence afforded to our adversaries, and eagerly caught at by them, of supplanting the principles of Christian doctrine, which we hold, and of propagating their own errors, may serve to remind all true friends of the English Reformation, that if they desire to promote, and not to damage, the holy cause vindicated by it, it is their primary duty to avoid and discountenance schism, and to maintain the blessings of Unity.

— Φαρισαίων] So A, B, C, and many Cursives and Vulg. St. Paul means that his family, for more than one generation, had been Pharisees. Elz. Φαρισαίου.

8. Σαδδουκαῖοι—Φαρισαῖοι] See the passages from Josephus and the Talmud on this subject in Biscoe, pp. 92—102, and cp. Dan. xii. 2, 3. 2 Macc. vii. 9—36. Acts xiii. 3. Matt. xxiii. 28.

The Sadducees explained away the ἀγγελοφανίαι in the Pentateuch, by supposing that what are there called angels were mere creations for the time, and of only a transitory and evanescent existence—like clouds. Cp. Lightfoot, ii. p. 702.

9. ἄγγελος] Elz. adds μὴ θεομαχῶμεν, which are not in the best MSS. A, B, C*, E, H, and many Versions; and were probably added, to fill up the Aposiopesis, by the copyists from v. 39. For examples of Aposiopesis in New Test., see Matt. xv. 5. Mark vii. 11; xi. 32. Winer, § 64, p. 529.

The Aposiopesis is very appropriate here; it seems to intimate that the conclusion of the sentence was drowned in the clamour of the Sadducees.

11 [h] Τῇ δὲ ἐπιούσῃ νυκτὶ ἐπιστὰς αὐτῷ ὁ Κύριος εἶπε, Θάρσει, ὡς γὰρ διεμαρτύρω τὰ περὶ ἐμοῦ εἰς Ἰερουσαλὴμ, οὕτω σε δεῖ καὶ εἰς Ῥώμην μαρτυρῆσαι. h ch. 18. 9. & 27. 23, 24.
12 [i] Γενομένης δὲ ἡμέρας, ποιήσαντες συστροφὴν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ἀνεθεμάτισαν ἑαυτοὺς, λέγοντες μήτε φαγεῖν μήτε πιεῖν, ἕως οὗ ἀποκτείνωσι τὸν Παῦλον. i ver. 20, 30. Matt. 26. 74.
13 Ἦσαν δὲ πλείους τεσσαράκοντα, οἱ ταύτην τὴν συνωμοσίαν ποιησάμενοι·
14 οἵτινες προσελθόντες τοῖς ἀρχιερεῦσι καὶ τοῖς πρεσβυτέροις εἶπον, Ἀναθέματι ἀνεθεματίσαμεν ἑαυτοὺς μηδενὸς γεύσασθαι, ἕως οὗ ἀποκτείνωμεν τὸν Παῦλον. 15 Νῦν οὖν ὑμεῖς ἐμφανίσατε τῷ χιλιάρχῳ σὺν τῷ συνεδρίῳ, ὅπως καταγάγῃ αὐτὸν εἰς ὑμᾶς, ὡς μέλλοντας διαγινώσκειν ἀκριβέστερον τὰ περὶ αὐτοῦ· ἡμεῖς δὲ, πρὸ τοῦ ἐγγίσαι αὐτὸν, ἕτοιμοί ἐσμεν τοῦ ἀνελεῖν αὐτόν.
16 Ἀκούσας δὲ ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀδελφῆς Παύλου τὸ ἔνεδρον, παραγενόμενος καὶ εἰσελθὼν εἰς τὴν παρεμβολὴν ἀπήγγειλε τῷ Παύλῳ. 17 Προσκαλεσάμενος δὲ ὁ Παῦλος ἕνα τῶν ἑκατοντάρχων ἔφη, Τὸν νεανίαν τοῦτον ἀπάγαγε πρὸς τὸν χιλίαρχον· ἔχει γὰρ ἀπαγγεῖλαί τι αὐτῷ. 18 Ὁ μὲν οὖν παραλαβὼν αὐτὸν ἤγαγε πρὸς τὸν χιλίαρχον, καί φησιν, Ὁ δέσμιος Παῦλος προσκαλεσάμενός με ἠρώτησε τοῦτον τὸν νεανίαν ἀγαγεῖν πρός σε, ἔχοντά τι λαλῆσαί σοι.
19 Ἐπιλαβόμενος δὲ τῆς χειρὸς αὐτοῦ ὁ χιλίαρχος, καὶ ἀναχωρήσας κατ' ἰδίαν, ἐπυνθάνετο, Τί ἐστιν, ὃ ἔχεις ἀπαγγεῖλαί μοι; 20 [k] Εἶπε δέ, Ὅτι οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι k ver. 12.
συνέθεντο τοῦ ἐρωτῆσαί σε, ὅπως αὔριον τὸν Παῦλον καταγάγῃς εἰς τὸ συνέδριον, ὡς μέλλων τι ἀκριβέστερον πυνθάνεσθαι περὶ αὐτοῦ. 21 Σὺ οὖν μὴ πεισθῇς αὐτοῖς, ἐνεδρεύουσι γὰρ αὐτὸν ἐξ αὐτῶν ἄνδρες πλείους τεσσαράκοντα, οἵτινες ἀνεθεμάτισαν ἑαυτοὺς μήτε φαγεῖν μήτε πιεῖν, ἕως οὗ ἀνέλωσιν αὐτόν· καὶ νῦν εἰσι ἕτοιμοι προσδεχόμενοι τὴν ἀπὸ σοῦ ἐπαγγελίαν. 22 Ὁ μὲν οὖν

---

11. θάρσει] Elz. adds Παῦλε, which is not in A, B, C, E, H, and many Cursives and Versions.

— δεῖ καὶ εἰς Ῥώμην μαρτυρῆσαι] St. Paul was Christ's μάρτυς in the two great capitals of the world; first at Jerusalem, the spiritual capital; then at Rome, the civil metropolis. See on Acts xxv. 11,—a prophecy interpreted in a special manner by St. Paul's martyrdom at Rome. εἰς here repeated with the accusatives Ἰερουσαλὴμ and Ῥώμην, expresses more than at. 'Thou barest witness to Jerusalem; thou shalt bear witness to Rome.'

12. ποιήσαντες συστ. οἱ Ἰουδ.] So A, B, C, E, and many Cursives.—Elz. has ποιοί τινες τῶν Ἰουδαίων συσ. But it is usual with the sacred writers to attribute to the οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι generally whatever is done by some of them, with the concurrence or connivance of others, especially of those in authority, as now.

— ἀνεθεμάτισαν ἑαυτούς] Subjected themselves to an ἀνάθεμα or חֵרֶם (kherem). Gal. i. 8, 9. 1 Cor. xvi. 22. They were probably of the number of λῃσταί or Sicarii, and others who, under pretence of zeal for the Law, perpetrated the worst crimes. Joseph. B. J. ii. 13. 3. Biscoe, pp. 278, 279, who observes, that "from their perverted oral traditions and the ill-adduced example of Phineas" (on which see Bp. Sanderson's admirable remarks, vol. ii. pp. 65. 67. 251; iv. 50), "it was made a rule among them that a private person might kill one who had forsaken the law of Moses. Of this there is the clearest proof in the Talmud (Sanhedr. c. 9), Philo (de Sacrific. p. 855, de Monarchiâ, i. p. 819), and Josephus (Ant. xii. 6. 2; xv. 8. 1). And it was of the crime of apostasy that St. Paul was accused." See also Lardner's Credibility, i. ch. ix. and Hackett, p. 321.

To such monstrous abuses may large bodies of men be led by the two false propositions, viz.:

(1) That the "exempla piorum,"—examples of holy men (e. g. Phineas),—may be safely followed without reference to the special circumstances under which they acted;

(2) That a good end justifies bad means.

It has been asked, What became of these conspirators?

The answer to this question is, that it was as easy to loose as to bind;

The same person who laid on the excommunication could also take it off, and particularly with regard to vows of not eating; any of their Rabbis could absolve them. (Lightfoot, ii. p. 703.)

Assassination was now legalized and consecrated among the Jews; and this diabolical spirit had full vent during the Siege of Jerusalem, in a few years after this time. And it may be regarded as an act of mercy, that the Jewish nation was delivered by its Roman conquerors from the sanguinary atrocity of its own citizens.

St. Paul found in his own person, that the zeal "not according to knowledge," by which he himself had been actuated, recoils against those who have been hurried on by it to do evil that good may come.

13. πλείους τεσσαράκοντα] On this use of the comparative without ἤ, see iv. 22; xxiii. 21. Winer, § 35, p. 214.

— ποιησάμενοι] So A, B, C, E.—Elz. πεποιηκότες.

14. τοῖς ἀρχιερεῦσι] It would seem that the conspirators presumed on the secrecy and the assistance of the Chief Priests conniving at and abetting them to commit murder under pretence of religion; a proof of the power of the Evil Spirit to tempt men, and even Ministers of Religion, to be guilty of heinous sins, on a pretence of piety and zeal.

This conspiracy proves that the Jewish Sanhedrim had not (as some have supposed) unlimited power of life and death in causes of Religion. If they had, there would have been no need for this secret plot against St. Paul. See above, ix. 2.

15. ὅπως] Elz. adds αὔριον, which is not in the best MSS., and is probably a gloss from v. 20.

16. ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀδελφῆς] The only mention in the Acts of the Apostles, of any of St. Paul's relatives.

The Holy Spirit does not gratify the curiosity of the reader of Holy Scripture by graphic sketches of the persons of the holy men who are employed by Him to preach the Gospel. He does not recite particulars of their personal and domestic history. He seems studiously to practise reserve and to keep silence in these respects. Perhaps He thus designed to bring out in clearer outline and bolder relief the importance, dignity, and sanctity of their public mission. He would have us regard them as abstracted from what is merely personal, local, and temporary, and as holding a position of their own, which no time or place can affect,—as Ambassadors of Christ, Preachers of the Everlasting Gospel, Foundation-stones set in the wall of the heavenly Jerusalem. (Rev. xxi. 14.)

— τὸ ἔνεδρον] The Hellenistic form. See LXX, Jud. ix. 35, ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐνέδρου. Eustath. Odyss. θ, v. 124. (Bornemann, who specifies ζυγὸν, κέλευθον, οὖρον, as similar forms.) It is here found in B, G, H, and several Cursives.—Elz. has τὴν ἐνέδραν.

20. μέλλων] So A, B, E, and some Cursives.—Elz. μέλλοντες.

χιλίαρχος ἀπέλυσε τὸν νεανίαν, παραγγείλας μηδενὶ ἐκλαλῆσαι, ὅτι ταῦτα ἐνεφάνισας πρός με.

23 Καὶ προσκαλεσάμενος δύο τινὰς τῶν ἑκατοντάρχων εἶπεν, Ἑτοιμάσατε στρατιώτας διακοσίους, ὅπως πορευθῶσιν ἕως Καισαρείας, καὶ ἱππεῖς ἑβδομήκοντα, καὶ δεξιολάβους διακοσίους, ἀπὸ τρίτης ὥρας τῆς νυκτός, 24 κτήνη τε παραστῆσαι, ἵνα ἐπιβιβάσαντες τὸν Παῦλον διασώσωσι πρὸς Φήλικα τὸν ἡγεμόνα· 25 γράψας ἐπιστολὴν περιέχουσαν τὸν τύπον τοῦτον, 26 Κλαύδιος
l ch. 21. 33. Λυσίας τῷ κρατίστῳ ἡγεμόνι Φήλικι χαίρειν. 27 l Τὸν ἄνδρα τοῦτον συλληφθέντα ὑπὸ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, καὶ μέλλοντα ἀναιρεῖσθαι ὑπ' αὐτῶν, ἐπιστὰς σὺν τῷ στρατεύματι ἐξειλάμην, μαθὼν ὅτι Ῥωμαῖός ἐστι. 28 Βουλόμενος δὲ ἐπιγνῶναι τὴν αἰτίαν δι' ἣν ἐνεκάλουν αὐτῷ, κατήγαγον αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ συνέδριον αὐτῶν· 29 ὃν εὗρον ἐγκαλούμενον περὶ ζητημάτων τοῦ νόμου αὐτῶν, μηδὲν δὲ ἄξιον θανάτου ἢ δεσμῶν ἔχοντα ἔγκλημα. 30 Μηνυθείσης δέ μοι ἐπιβουλῆς εἰς τὸν ἄνδρα μέλλειν ἔσεσθαι ὑπὸ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἐξαυτῆς ἔπεμψα πρός σε, παραγγείλας καὶ τοῖς κατηγόροις λέγειν τὰ πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐπὶ σοῦ. ἔρρωσο.

31 Οἱ μὲν οὖν στρατιῶται, κατὰ τὸ διατεταγμένον αὐτοῖς, ἀναλαβόντες τὸν Παῦλον, ἤγαγον διὰ νυκτὸς εἰς τὴν Ἀντιπατρίδα· 32 τῇ δὲ ἐπαύριον ἐάσαντες τοὺς ἱππεῖς πορεύεσθαι σὺν αὐτῷ ὑπέστρεψαν εἰς τὴν παρεμβολήν· 33 οἵτινες εἰσελθόντες εἰς τὴν Καισάρειαν, καὶ ἀναδόντες τὴν ἐπιστολὴν τῷ ἡγεμόνι παρέστησαν καὶ τὸν Παῦλον αὐτῷ. 34 Ἀναγνοὺς δὲ, καὶ ἐπερωτήσας ἐκ ποίας
m ch. 24. 1—6. & 25. 16. ἐπαρχίας ἐστὶ, καὶ πυθόμενος ὅτι ἀπὸ Κιλικίας, 35 m Διακούσομαί σου, ἔφη, n Matt. 27. 27. ὅταν καὶ οἱ κατήγοροί σου παραγένωνται· ἐκέλευσέ τε αὐτὸν n ἐν τῷ πραιτωρίῳ τοῦ Ἡρώδου φυλάσσεσθαι.

a ch. 23. 2. & 25. 2. XXIV. 1 a Μετὰ δὲ πέντε ἡμέρας κατέβη ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς Ἀνανίας μετὰ τῶν πρεσ-

---

23. δεξιολάβους] παραφύλακας (Suid.), lancearios (Vulg.). The word is used by the Emperor Constantin. Porphyr. (early in the 10th century), Themat. i. 1 (i. e. in his treatise on the quartering of troops), where he says that the τουμάρχης has under him στρατιώτας τοξοφόρους πεντακοσίους, καὶ πελταστὰς τριακοσίους, καὶ δεξιολάβους ἑκατόν. The rendering of the Authorized Version, 'spearmen,' is probably correct. And so Meyer, p. 405.

25. τύπον] this form; as follows. Cp. 3 Macc. iii. 30, ὁ μὲν τῆς ἐπιστολῆς τύπος οὕτως ἐγέγραπτο. St. Luke does not merely give the substance, but the words. If he had composed a letter, or given an outline of one (as has been supposed by some), he would not have imputed to the writer such a distortion of the true circumstances of the case as is found in it.

26. Φήλικι] Felix, the Roman Procurator, appointed by Claudius late in A.D. 52 or early in 53; originally a slave, described as follows by Roman writers cited by Kuin.,—"Antonius Felix erat libertus Antoniæ matris Claudii imperatoris, frater Pallantis, ejusdem Antoniæ liberti, Plin. H. N. xxxiii. 10, qui maximâ auctoritate apud Claudium valebat. Tacit. Annal. xi. 29. 1, 'flagrantissimâque eo in tempore gratiâ Pallas.' De Felice Tacit. Hist. v. 9. 6, 'Claudius defunctis regibus, aut ad modicum redactis, Judæam provinciam equitibus Romanis aut libertis permisit; è quibus Antonius Felix, per omnem sævitiam ac libidinem, jus regium servili ingenio exercuit.' Id. Annal. xii. 54. 1, 'At non frater ejus (Pallantis) cognomento Felix pari moderatione agebat, jampridem Judææ impositus, et cuncta malefacta sibi impunè ratus, tantâ potentiâ subnixo' etc. vid. et not. ad Act. xxi. 37. extr. Suetonius in V. Claud. c. 28, § 2, 'eum trium reginarum maritum' vocat. Reginas dicit Suetonius regum filias et neptes. Duas habuit Drusillas, alteram Cleopatræ Ægyptiacæ et Antonii, triumviri, neptem, filiam Jubæ Mauritaniæ regis, è Cleopatrâ Selene, Antonii filiâ, sororem Ptolomæi, v. Tacit. Hist. v. 9. 7, alteram Agrippæ majoris regis, Herodis magni, nepotis filiam, vid. not. infra ad xxiv. 24, tertia ignoratur, nec constat quonam tempore singulas sibi adjunxerit, v. intpp. ad Sueton. l. l, et Walchii Commentatio, de Felice, Judææ procuratore, Jen. 1747. 4."

27. σὺν τῷ στρατεύματι] 'with my soldiery.' It was true that Claudius Lysias had rescued Paul after he had ascertained that he was a Roman. See xxii. 29; xxiii. 10. It was also true that he had rescued him before he knew that he was a Roman (xxii. 25);

But it was not true that he had rescued him because he knew that he was a Roman, and that he then brought him to the Council.—The incidents mentioned are true, but not in the order in which they are recorded; and they are so stated as to obviate the charge that he had bound and put him to examination; and they afford strong evidence of the genuineness of the document.

29. μηδὲν ἄξιον θανάτου] Paul is pronounced innocent by Lysias, as Christ was by Pilate. (Chrys.)

31. οἱ μέν] With regard to their route, see Robinson, iii. 46. Howson, ii. 330.

— Ἀντιπατρίδα] Built by Herod on the site of Caphar-Saba, and named Antipatris from his father Antipater. (Joseph. Ant. xvi. 5. 2. Robinson, iii. 45. Raumer. Palæstin. p. 132.) It was about thirty-five miles from Jerusalem, and twenty-six miles from Cæsarea.

32. πορεύεσθαι] A, B, E, and some Cursives, have ἀπέρχεσθαι, which is received by Lachm., Tisch., and Alf.

33. εἰς τ. Καισάρειαν] Thus by God's Providence overruling the designs of the Jews, the Apostle is sent, in consequence of their conspiracy against him, to preach the Gospel, as Chrys. expresses it, "in a nobler Theatre, and before a more splendid audience at Cæsarea;" and thence, eventually, to Rome.

34. ἀναγνοὺς δέ] Elz. adds ὁ ἡγεμών, which is not in the best MSS., and is probably a gloss.

35. διακούσομαι] 'I will hear thee thoroughly.'

— πραιτωρίῳ τ. Ἡρώδου] The palace which had been built by King Herod, who had beautified Cæsarea, and was now probably occupied as an official residence by the Roman Procurator.

CH. XXIV. 1. μετὰ πέντε ἡμέρας] on the fifth day (Matt. xvi. 21 and xxvii. 63) after St. Paul's departure from Jerusalem. See on v. 11.

— μετὰ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων] The reading of A, B, E, μετὰ πρεσβ. τινων, seems to be due to a desire to obviate an objection, that all the Elders were not likely to have gone down to Cæsarea. But see xxiii. 12. 20, where οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι is used in a similar way. The elders are rightly said to do, and to be responsible for doing, that which is done with their concurrence by those who are their representatives. If St. Luke had written μ. πρεσβυτέρων τινων, it is not probable that the other reading would be found, as it is, in the majority of the MSS.

βυτέρων καὶ ῥήτορος Τερτύλλου τινὸς, οἵτινες ἐνεφάνισαν τῷ ἡγεμόνι κατὰ τοῦ Παύλου. [2] Κληθέντος δὲ αὐτοῦ, ἤρξατο κατηγορεῖν ὁ Τέρτυλλος λέγων, [3] Πολλῆς εἰρήνης τυγχάνοντες διὰ σοῦ, καὶ κατορθωμάτων γινομένων τῷ ἔθνει τούτῳ διὰ τῆς σῆς προνοίας, πάντῃ τε καὶ πανταχοῦ ἀποδεχόμεθα, κράτιστε Φῆλιξ, μετὰ πάσης εὐχαριστίας. [4] Ἵνα δὲ μὴ ἐπὶ πλεῖον σὲ ἐγκόπτω, παρακαλῶ ἀκοῦσαί σε ἡμῶν συντόμως τῇ σῇ ἐπιεικείᾳ. [5] [b] Εὑρόντες γὰρ τὸν ἄνδρα τοῦτον λοιμὸν, καὶ κινοῦντα στάσεις πᾶσι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις τοῖς κατὰ τὴν οἰκουμένην, πρωτοστάτην τε τῆς τῶν Ναζωραίων αἱρέσεως, [6] [c] ὃς καὶ τὸ ἱερὸν ἐπείρασε βεβηλῶσαι· ὃν καὶ ἐκρατήσαμεν, καὶ κατὰ τὸν ἡμέτερον νόμον ἠθελήσαμεν κρίνειν· [7] παρελθὼν δὲ Λυσίας ὁ χιλίαρχος μετὰ πολλῆς βίας ἐκ τῶν χειρῶν ἡμῶν ἀπήγαγε, [8] κελεύσας τοὺς κατηγόρους αὐτοῦ ἔρχεσθαι ἐπὶ σέ· παρ' οὗ δυνήσῃ αὐτὸς ἀνακρίνας περὶ πάντων τούτων ἐπιγνῶναι, ὧν ἡμεῖς κατηγοροῦμεν αὐτοῦ. [9] Συνεπέθεντο δὲ καὶ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι φάσκοντες ταῦτα οὕτως ἔχειν.

[10] Ἀπεκρίθη δὲ ὁ Παῦλος, νεύσαντος αὐτῷ τοῦ ἡγεμόνος λέγειν, Ἐκ πολλῶν

b ch. 6. 13. & 16. 20. & 21. 28.

c ch. 21. 28. John 18. 31.

— ῥήτορος] a 'rhetor' (Horat. Sat. i. v. 2), or 'causidicus,' acquainted with Roman Law and Language.

The Gospel, in the person of St. Paul, has to contend with Jewish prejudices allied with Roman Rhetoric, at the bar of the Imperial Power, represented by Felix.

It appears that the Speech of Tertullus was in Latin. He was employed, because he was (what his employers, the Chief Priests, were not) familiar with that tongue, his native language, as well as with Roman law. And, as has been justly observed, his harangue, as reported by St. Luke, has a Roman character and tone.

Did St. Paul also speak before Felix in Latin? It would seem that he had private interviews with him, without an interpreter (v. 26).

The practice thus indicated, of the most learned men of a country (here, the Chief Priests), hiring Roman Rhetoricians (here Tertullus) to plead their cause for them, affords an indirect and incidental confirmation of the supernatural power of the Apostles to speak with divine eloquence, and in languages they had never learnt. It is an evidence of the Gift of Tongues. St. Peter and St. John, illiterate Galilæans, and St. Paul, of Cilicia, a country whose barbarous dialect gave a name to solœcisms (from Soli, in Cilicia), never have a Tertullus to speak for them; and yet they are more than a match for the Sanhedrim; and never have any difficulty in addressing popular assemblies, and pour forth their thoughts with irresistible eloquence. How was this done? By the gift of the Holy Ghost.

3. κατορθωμάτων] A, B, E (C, D have an hiatus here), and some Cursives have διορθωμάτων, which is confirmed by Vulg., "cùm multa corrigantur." Elz. κατορθωμάτων.

A remarkable evidence of the servile sycophancy of the orator and the Jews in their zeal against St. Paul. It might be said that Felix had conferred benefits on the nation, but it could hardly be said that he had done any thing to correct it. The orator pleading for the Spiritual Power of the Jewish Nation, and for the Nation itself, confesses that his clients needed correction at the hands of a heathen Magistrate.

See Joseph. Ant. xx. 8. 5. B. J. ii. 13. 3, for an account of the attempts of Felix to quell the Sicarii.

On the other hand, Felix had been guilty of many acts of misgovernment. See Joseph. xx. 8. 9. Tacit. Hist. v. 9. Annal. xii. 54. Sueton. Claud. 28 (cp. above on xxiii. 26). And in two years after this panegyric, from the mouth of Tertullus, the advocate of the Jews, he was recalled, and was accused by them at Rome, and would have been punished, but for the intercession of his brother Pallas, then in favour with Nero. Joseph. xx. 8. 10.

5. Ναζωραίων] A term of contempt. He would not call them Christians; and they are still called by this name by Jews and Mahometans. But St. Paul had declared boldly (xxii. 8), that He who had appeared to him on the way to Damascus had said to him, ἐγώ εἰμι Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος, ὃν σὺ διώκεις.

It was ordered by the Providence of God that the Name Ναζωραῖος, used in despite by the enemies of Christianity, contained, though unknown to them, a fulfilment of the ancient prophecy concerning the Messiah as the Netser or Branch (see on Matt. ii. 23. John xix. 19), and so was an assertion of the truth,—that Jesus of Nazareth is the Christ. Hence the term Ναζωραῖος is readily applied by the Apostles to Him. Acts ii. 22; iii. 6; iv. 10; xxvi. 9.

6—8. καὶ κατὰ τ. ἡ. ν.—ἔρχεσθαι ἐπὶ σέ] Not in A ("multas hic lituras lacunasque habens." Bornemann), nor in B, G, H, and many cursives; and omitted by Griesb., Lachm., and Tisch., not by Matthæi, Bornemann, or De Wette. But perhaps these words may have been cancelled by some Copyists, who supposed that the Jews had no power of judicature. Cp. John xviii. 31.

Besides, an interpolator would not have charged Lysias with 'great violence'—of which no evidence had been given in St. Luke's narrative; but he would have taken care to conform himself to the history.

The words are found in E, and in the great majority of Cursive MSS. and Fathers. And the probability seems greater that they should have been omitted, either by chance (and omissions may take place accidentally, whereas additions cannot) or purposely, than that they should have been interpolated by the Copyists. They are therefore left in the text. See further, on v. 8.

— κατὰ τὸν ἡμέτερον νόμον] Why then the conspiracy at which the Chief Priests connived (xxiii. 14)? See note there. In cases of βεβήλωσις τοῦ ἱεροῦ, the Romans permitted the Jewish Judicature to inflict capital punishment. Joseph. B. J. vi. 2. 4, where Titus says, οὐχ ἡμεῖς τοὺς ὑπερβάντας (i. e. profaning the Temple by intruding beyond the sacred limits) ὑμῖν ἀναιρεῖν ἐπετρέψαμεν, καὶ ἐὰν Ῥωμαῖός τις ᾖ. Therefore Tertullus laboured to establish this charge against Paul. See also St. Paul's reply, xxiv. 18.

8. παρ' οὗ] Perhaps, as some Expositors say, from Paul. Cp. xxv. 26, ὅπως τῆς ἀνακρίσεως γενομένης κ.τ.λ. If so,—this was a suggestion, on the part of Tertullus, that he might be examined by quæstio, such as Lysias had employed (xxii. 24), where a similar reason is given, ἵνα ἐπιγνῷ (so Corn. A Lapide, Grotius, Rosenm.).

It may be said that Paul, as a Roman citizen, could not be so examined. But though it was contrary to law to begin with torture (as Lysias had done), and Roman citizens were legally exempt from it, yet since the age of Tiberius, it was commonly resorted to even in their case. Cp. the authorities in Howson, ii. p. 322, note.

If the words in vv. 6—8, καὶ κατὰ—ἔρχεσθαι ἐπὶ σέ, are not genuine, then οὗ in this verse must refer to Paul.

But it deserves consideration whether—if those words are genuine, as is probable,—the relative οὗ here does not rather refer to Lysias.

This interpretation is confirmed by what Felix says, v. 22, ὅταν Λυσίας ὁ χιλίαρχος καταβῇ, διαγνώσομαι,—a speech which corroborates the opinion, that the words in vv. 6—8 are genuine. Let the learned reader judge.

Besides, to refer to Lysias, was a proof of confidence which Tertullus might well be disposed to show in the goodness of his cause. And it was not very likely that he should refer to the defendant himself.

9. συνεπέθεντο] So A, B, E, and many Cursives. — Elz. συνέθεντο.

10. ἐκ πολλῶν ἐτῶν] About six years. See Joseph. xx. 6. 3, and 7. 1, and cp. "Chronological Synopsis" prefixed to this Volume. Six years were many compared with the length of the tenure of office of most provincial magistrates. Felix succeeded Cumanus as Procurator in A.D. 52 or 53.

ἐτῶν ὄντα σε κριτὴν τῷ ἔθνει τούτῳ ἐπιστάμενος, εὐθυμότερον [d] τὰ περὶ ἐμαυτοῦ ἀπολογοῦμαι· [11] δυναμένου σου γνῶναι, ὅτι οὐ πλείους εἰσί μοι ἡμέραι δεκαδύο, ἀφ' ἧς [e] ἀνέβην προσκυνήσων εἰς Ἰερουσαλήμ· [12] [f] καὶ οὔτε ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ εὗρόν με πρός τινα διαλεγόμενον, ἢ ἐπισύστασιν ποιοῦντα ὄχλου, οὔτε ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς οὔτε κατὰ τὴν πόλιν· [13] [g] οὔτε παραστῆσαι δύνανταί σοι περὶ ὧν νῦν κατηγοροῦσί μου. [14] [h] Ὁμολογῶ δὲ τοῦτό σοι, ὅτι κατὰ τὴν ὁδὸν ἣν λέγουσιν αἵρεσιν, [i] οὕτω λατρεύω τῷ πατρῴῳ Θεῷ, πιστεύων πᾶσι τοῖς κατὰ τὸν νόμον καὶ ἐν τοῖς προφήταις γεγραμμένοις· [15] [k] ἐλπίδα ἔχων εἰς τὸν Θεόν, ἣν καὶ αὐτοὶ οὗτοι προσδέχονται, ἀνάστασιν μέλλειν ἔσεσθαι νεκρῶν, δικαίων τε καὶ ἀδίκων. [16] [l] Ἐν τούτῳ καὶ αὐτὸς ἀσκῶ ἀπρόσκοπον συνείδησιν ἔχειν πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν καὶ τοὺς ἀνθρώπους διαπαντός. [17] [m] Δι' ἐτῶν δὲ πλειόνων παρεγενόμην ἐλεημοσύνας ποιήσων εἰς τὸ ἔθνος μου καὶ προσφοράς· [18] [n] ἐν οἷς εὗρόν με ἡγνισμένον ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, οὐ μετὰ ὄχλου οὐδὲ μετὰ θορύβου· τινὲς δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἀσίας Ἰουδαῖοι, [19] [o] οὓς ἔδει ἐπὶ σοῦ παρεῖναι καὶ κατηγορεῖν, εἴ τι ἔχοιεν πρός με· [20] ἢ αὐτοὶ οὗτοι εἰπάτωσαν, τί εὗρον ἐν ἐμοὶ ἀδίκημα, στάντος μου ἐπὶ τοῦ συνεδρίου, [21] [p] ἢ περὶ μιᾶς ταύτης φωνῆς, ἧς ἔκραξα ἐν αὐτοῖς ἑστώς, Ὅτι περὶ ἀναστάσεως νεκρῶν ἐγὼ κρίνομαι σήμερον ἐφ' ὑμῶν.

[22] Ἀνεβάλετο δὲ αὐτοὺς ὁ Φῆλιξ, ἀκριβέστερον εἰδὼς τὰ περὶ τῆς ὁδοῦ, εἰπάς, Ὅταν Λυσίας ὁ χιλίαρχος καταβῇ, διαγνώσομαι τὰ καθ' ὑμᾶς· [23] [q] διαταξάμενος τῷ ἑκατοντάρχῃ τηρεῖσθαι αὐτὸν, ἔχειν τε ἄνεσιν, καὶ μηδένα κωλύειν τῶν ἰδίων αὐτοῦ ὑπηρετεῖν αὐτῷ.

d 1 Pet. 3. 15.
e ch. 21. 15.
f ch. 25. 8. & 28. 17.
g 1 Pet. 3. 16.
h ch. 26. 22. & 28. 23.
i 2 Tim. 1. 3.
k Dan. 12. 2. John 5. 28, 29. ch. 23. 6. & 28. 20.
l ch. 23. 1. 2 Cor. 1. 12.
m ch. 11. 29, 30. & 20. 16. Gal. 2. 10. Rom. 15. 25.
n ch. 21. 26, 27.
o ch. 25. 16.
p ch. 23. 6. & 28. 20.
q ch. 27. 3. & 28. 16.

---

11. εἰσι μοι ἡμέραι] On this use of the dative after ἡμέραι, see Matt. xv. 32. Mark viii. 2.

— ἡμέραι δεκαδύο] Elz. has ἡμ. ἢ δεκ. The ἢ is not in A, B, E, G; and see above, on xxiii. 13.

The twelve days may be reckoned as follows:—

1st Day, arrival at Jerusalem, xxi. 15—17.

2nd, interview with James and the Presbyters of the Church at Jerusalem, xxi. 18.

3rd, Ἁγνισμὸς, Nazariteship declared, xxi. 26.

7th, 'The seven days' nearly completed, xxi. 27. Paul arrested in the Temple, xxi. 30; his speech to the people, xxii. 1.

8th, On the morrow (xxii. 30) he is brought before the Sanhedrim. Vision in the night, xxiii. 11.

9th, In the morning (xxiii. 12) overture of the Conspirators to the Chief Priests, with a view that Paul should be brought forth by the Chiliarch on the following day (xxiii. 15. 20).

Paul sent by night to Antipatris.

10th, On the morrow arrives at Cæsarea.

13th, 'After five days' (xxiv. 1), i. e. on the fifth day after his departure from Jerusalem, he is accused by Ananias and Tertullus before Felix, not more than twelve days after his arrival at Jerusalem, xxiv. 11.

— προσκυνήσων] Not βεβηλῶν τὸ ἱερόν. See also vv. 17, 18.

13. δύνανταί σοι] The pronoun σοι (not in Elz.) is found in A, B, E, and many Cursives, and is confirmed by the Syriac, Vulgate, and many Versions.

15. ἣν καὶ οὗτοι προσδέχονται] A remarkable testimony to the general belief of the Jewish Nation (notwithstanding the influence of the Sadducees) in a Resurrection to come,—a belief, therefore, to be derived from the Old Testament. See xxvi. 7.

17. δι' ἐτῶν πλειόνων] four years after his visit (xviii. 22).

— ἐλεημοσύνας] For an illustration of the coincidence of this statement, thus incidentally introduced in the Acts, with passages in St. Paul's Epistles concerning the collections made by him for the poor Saints at Jerusalem (Rom. xv. 25. 1 Cor. xvi. 1—4. 2 Cor. viii. 1—4), see Paley, Horæ Paulinæ, No. i. p. 10.

— προσφοράς] Some expositors say, for the Feast of Pentecost, xx. 16. (Meyer.) But this word suggests a supposition that St. Paul came to Jerusalem under a vow, in order to present the offerings due at its expiration. See the use of this word προσφορὰ, in connexion with this visit, for the offering made by a Nazarite, xxi. 26, ἕως οὗ προσηνέχθη ὑπὲρ ἑνὸς ἑκάστου, αὐτῶν ἡ προσφορά. And so Bede (Retr. p. 153), "Oblationes pertinent ad ea quæ ad suasionem Jacobi et seniorum in templo obtulerat."

18. ἐν οἷς] 'in which things.' See xxvi. 12, ἐν οἷς, πορευόμενος εἰς Δαμασκόν. Rom. vi. 21, ἐφ' οἷς νῦν ἐπαισχύνεσθε. Phil. ii. 15, ἐν οἷς φαίνεσθε. 1 Tim. iv. 15, ἐν τούτοις ἴσθι. The reading ἐν αἷς, found in A, B, C, E, and received by Lachm. and Tisch., not by Alf. and Bloomf., seems to be a correction of the copyists to make an agreement with προσφοράς,—and it is not probable that if αἷς had been written by St. Luke it would have been altered into οἷς.

— εὗρόν με ἡγνισμένον ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ] 'They found me separated or sanctified as a Nazarite in the Temple.' See above, on xxi. 24. 26.

His argument is, "They have charged me with profaning the Temple (v. 6). But the fact is, I came from a distance to Jerusalem to worship (προσκυνήσων, v. 11) in the Temple; and to bring alms of charity, and also offerings of piety (προσφορὰς), as a Nazarite (see xxi. 26); and they themselves found me in the Temple engaged in a holy service, proving my respect for the Temple; and they who accuse me of profaning it, were guilty of profanation, in abetting those who seized me when there employed in a religious act, of which they prevented the completion." Thus their outrage on St. Paul resembled that of Pilate on the Galilæans, whose blood he mingled with their sacrifices. Luke xiii. 1.

20. εἰπάτωσαν, τί] For τι Elz. has εἴ τι, but εἰ is not in the best MSS., and the sentence gains force by its removal. τί—ἤ = what but?

22. ἀνεβάλετο] Elz. prefixes ἀκούσας δὲ ταῦτα ὁ Φήλιξ, which words are not found in the best MSS., A, B, C, E, H, or in Vulg., Syriac, and several other Versions.

— ἀκριβέστερον εἰδώς] Although he had more accurate knowledge of Christianity than that he needed to be taught the truth concerning it, or than would have been supposed in one whose practice was such as his with regard to its Apostle.

The comparative is used in similar manner in xxv. 10, κάλλιον ἐπιγινώσκεις, i. e. "thou knowest better than that I need instruct thee, and that thou shouldest make such a proposal." This use of the comparative is very convenient, as suggestive of something understood, which it might be uncourteous to express.

Felix had been Procurator of Judæa for six years; he had, doubtless, as such, been at Jerusalem on the great festivals, and on other occasions when he could not have failed to hear of Christ. And his ordinary residence was Cæsarea, where Philip the Evangelist lived (viii. 40; xxi. 8), and where was a Christian Church (xxi. 8—16),—and where, many years before, St. Peter had preached, and baptized the Roman Centurion Cornelius (x. 1—48). How striking the contrast between the Roman soldier sending for Peter to Cæsarea, and the Roman Procurator leaving Paul bound a prisoner at the same place! The one condemns the other.

23. ὑπηρετεῖν] Elz. adds ἢ προσέρχεσθαι, which is not in A, B, C, E, or in Vulgate, Syriac, and some other Versions.

24 Μετὰ δὲ ἡμέρας τινὰς παραγενόμενος ὁ Φῆλιξ σὺν Δρουσίλλῃ τῇ γυναικὶ αὐτοῦ, οὔσῃ Ἰουδαίᾳ, μετεπέμψατο τὸν Παῦλον, καὶ ἤκουσεν αὐτοῦ περὶ τῆς εἰς Χριστὸν πίστεως. 25 Διαλεγομένου δὲ αὐτοῦ περὶ δικαιοσύνης καὶ ἐγκρα-τείας, καὶ τοῦ κρίματος τοῦ μέλλοντος, ἔμφοβος γενόμενος ὁ Φῆλιξ ἀπεκρίθη, Τὸ νῦν ἔχον πορεύου· καιρὸν δὲ μεταλαβὼν μετακαλέσομαί σε· 26 ἅμα καὶ ἐλπίζων ὅτι χρήματα δοθήσεται αὐτῷ ὑπὸ τοῦ Παύλου, διὸ καὶ πυκνότερον αὐτὸν μεταπεμπόμενος ὡμίλει αὐτῷ. 27 [r] Διετίας δὲ πληρωθείσης ἔλαβε διάδο- [r] ch. 25. 14.
χον ὁ Φῆλιξ Πόρκιον Φῆστον· [s] θέλων τε χάριτα καταθέσθαι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις [s] ch. 25. 9. Mark 15. 15.
ὁ Φῆλιξ κατέλιπε τὸν Παῦλον δεδεμένον.

XXV. 1 Φῆστος οὖν ἐπιβὰς τῇ ἐπαρχίᾳ, μετὰ τρεῖς ἡμέρας ἀνέβη εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα ἀπὸ Καισαρείας. 2 Ἐνεφάνισαν δὲ αὐτῷ ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς καὶ οἱ πρῶτοι τῶν Ἰουδαίων κατὰ τοῦ Παύλου, καὶ παρεκάλουν αὐτὸν, 3 αἰτούμενοι χάριν κατ' αὐτοῦ, ὅπως μεταπέμψηται αὐτὸν εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ, [a] ἐνέδραν ποι- [a] ch. 23. 14, 15.
οῦντες ἀνελεῖν αὐτὸν κατὰ τὴν ὁδόν. 4 Ὁ μὲν οὖν Φῆστος ἀπεκρίθη, τηρεῖσθαι τὸν Παῦλον εἰς Καισάρειαν, ἑαυτὸν δὲ μέλλειν ἐν τάχει ἐκπορεύεσθαι. 5 Οἱ οὖν ἐν ὑμῖν, φησὶ, δυνατοὶ συγκαταβάντες, εἴ τι ἐστὶν ἐν τῷ ἀνδρὶ τούτῳ, κατηγο-

---

24. Δρουσίλλῃ] daughter of Herod Agrippa I., whose miserable end is described Acts xii. 19—23, and sister of Herod Agrippa II., or Junior, mentioned in the two next chapters. She had deserted her husband Azizus, king of Emesa, and married Felix (Joseph. Ant. xx. 7. 1. See above on xxiii. 24) against the Jewish Law. Agrippa, the son of this unhappy woman, by Felix, lost his life by an eruption of Vesuvius, A.D. 79 (Joseph. Ant. xx. 7. 2).

The words οὔσῃ Ἰουδαίᾳ are emphatic. St. Paul was tried on a charge of breaking the Law at the instance of the Jews, before a Ruler who had set those laws at defiance, and who yet is flattered by them (vv. 3—9).

— περὶ τῆς εἰς Χριστὸν πίστεως] St. Paul is brought before Felix, the Roman Procurator, by his enemies, as a Criminal; but in the second hearing, he pleads before Felix and Drusilla as a Preacher.

The same process takes place in the two following Chapters. Felix, having rejected the overture made to him, is withdrawn from his office. His opportunity is lost; the day of grace is past, and he makes room for Festus, his successor. St. Paul is arraigned before him; he invites Agrippa to hear the Apostle. St. Paul is brought to answer for himself, before Agrippa and Bernice, and he preaches Christ.

These incidents are doubtless recorded, with a divine design of teaching the Church and the World, by two remarkable specimens, that all Persecutions, excited by the Enemy of God and man against the Truth are, have been, and ever will be overruled by God for the Propagation of the Gospel.

25. διαλεγομένου αὐτοῦ—ἔμφοβος γενόμενος] For the reason of which, see above on xxiii. 26 and xxiv. v. 3 and v. 27.

A lesson to preachers;

(1) To lay the foundation in Faith in Christ (v. 24).

(2) To build upon it, in practical exhortations to Righteousness and Temperance, and in warnings of the Judgment to come.

(3) To apply their preaching to the particular cases of their hearers,

(4) Especially of the powerful, whose example is of great influence with others.

"Meritò coram adulteris Paulus disserebat de Castitate; meritò coram injusto Præside disserebat de Justitiâ; meritò iniquum judicem admonebat Judicem suum fore Christum." (A Lapide.)

(5) Not to think their labour lost, if Felix does not repent. The example of his impenitence has led others to repent.

— μέλλοντος] Elz. adds ἔσεσθαι, which is not in the best MSS., and appears to be a gloss; like many other words similarly inserted in the Textus receptus in this Chapter. See vv. 22, 23. 26.

26. χρήματα] Having heard that Paul had brought a pecuniary collection to Jerusalem (v. 17), and supposing that he could command funds from his friends for his release. (Birks, Meyer.)

— Παύλου] Elz. adds ὅπως λύσῃ αὐτόν, which is not in A, C, E, or in Vulg., Syriac, and several other Versions. See above on v. 25.

27. διετίας] Even Felix had two full years of God's long-suffering. "Lord, let it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it and dung it, and if it bear fruit, well; if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down." (Luke xiii. 8, 9.)

Festus came to displace him, and Felix left Paul bound, who would have released him from the thraldom of his sins.

Two years of imprisonment.—God did not need the labour even of St. Paul: and though he was bound, "the Word of God is not bound." (2 Tim. ii. 9.) God shows his own Omnipotence, and teaches men humility, by dispensing with His best instruments.

Perhaps, also, we should not have had some books of Scripture,—perhaps not the Gospel of St. Luke and the Acts of the Apostles, and some of St. Paul's Epistles,—if St. Paul had not been imprisoned at Cæsarea and at Rome.

— ἔλαβε διάδοχον] Cp. the words of Josephus, Ant. xx. 8, 9, Πορκίου Φήστου διαδόχου Φήλικι πεμφθέντος. Observe the lenity of St. Luke. He says nothing of the subsequent arraignment of Felix at Rome, for maladministration of his province, on the prosecution of the Jews themselves.

He states that St. Paul preached before Felix, and "his wife Drusilla, a Jewess," concerning "Righteousness, Temperance, and Judgment to come," but he leaves us to gather the evidence of their unrighteousness, intemperance, and iniquity—and by consequence, to ascertain the special pertinency of St. Paul's Sermon before them—from other sources, particularly from the Jewish annalist Josephus, and from the Roman Historian and Biographer, Tacitus and Suetonius.

A signal proof of Charity and Truth, and (may we not add?) an evidence also of Divine Inspiration. Such History as this, with reverence be it said, could only be written with a pen dropped from the wing of the Divine Dove.

— χάριτα] So A, B, C.—Elz. χάριτας.—E, G χάριν.

"Gratiæ in hâc formulâ loquendi tanquam depositum considerantur. Demosth. de falsâ legat. extr. ἀφανῆ χάριτα καταθέσθαι. Plato Cratyl. 11, χρήματα τελοῦντα καὶ χάριτας καταθέμενον. Diod. Sic. p. 505, B, χάριν βουλόμενος καταθέσθαι (τῷ βασιλεῖ) ἀπήλαυνε πρὸς τοὺς πολεμίους. Exempla alia plura, vid. ap. Kypkium, Elsnerum, Westenium." (Kuin.)

CH. XXV. 1. τῇ ἐπαρχίᾳ] the 'provincia' of Festus, as Procurator.

2. ὁ ἀρχιερεύς] A, E, G, and some Cursives and Versions have οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς, which may be the true reading. Cp. v. 15.

4. εἰς Καισάρειαν] The reading of A, B, E, G,—more expressive than that of Elz. ἐν Καισαρείᾳ.

5. δυνατοί] those in power; the chief among you, the same as οἱ πρῶτοι, v. 2. Cp. 1 Cor. i. 26, οὐ πολλοὶ δυνατοί. Rev. vi. 15, οἱ πλούσιοι καὶ οἱ δυνατοί. And so frequently Josephus, see B. J. i. 12. 4, Ἰουδαίων—οἱ δυνατοί: cp. ii. 14. 8, 15. 2, 17. 2. (Biscoe, p. 107.) Festus did not wish to have τὸ πλῆθος at Cæsarea (xxv. 24), for fear of an uproar; and he desires to conciliate the δυνατοί among them. He knew why Paul had been left bound by Felix, and would have been glad to dismiss the cause; and he supposes that after two years' imprisonment of St. Paul, for no proved offence, the anger of the Jews had been cooled. But it was not so; and the new Governor, with little moral courage, is ready to ingratiate himself with the Jews, even by a surrender of St. Paul (vv. 9. 11).

ρείτωσαν αὐτοῦ. 6 Διατρίψας δὲ ἐν αὐτοῖς ἡμέρας οὐ πλείους ὀκτὼ ἢ δέκα, καταβὰς εἰς Καισάρειαν, τῇ ἐπαύριον καθίσας ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος ἐκέλευσε τὸν Παῦλον ἀχθῆναι. 7 Παραγενομένου δὲ αὐτοῦ, περιέστησαν αὐτὸν οἱ ἀπὸ Ἱεροσολύμων καταβεβηκότες Ἰουδαῖοι, πολλὰ καὶ βαρέα αἰτιώματα φέροντες κατὰ τοῦ Παύλου, ἃ οὐκ ἴσχυον ἀποδεῖξαι· 8 [b] ἀπολογουμένου αὐτοῦ, Ὅτι οὔτε εἰς τὸν νόμον τῶν Ἰουδαίων, οὔτε εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, οὔτε εἰς Καίσαρα τι ἥμαρτον. 9 Ὁ Φῆστος δὲ θέλων τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις χάριν καταθέσθαι, ἀποκριθεὶς τῷ Παύλῳ εἶπε, Θέλεις εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα ἀναβὰς, ἐκεῖ περὶ τούτων κριθῆναι ἐπ' ἐμοῦ; 10 Εἶπε δὲ ὁ Παῦλος, Ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος Καίσαρος ἑστώς εἰμι, οὗ με δεῖ κρίνεσθαι· Ἰουδαίους οὐδὲν ἠδίκησα, ὡς καὶ σὺ κάλλιον ἐπιγινώσκεις· 11 [c] εἰ μὲν οὖν ἀδικῶ καὶ ἄξιον θανάτου πέπραχά τι, οὐ παραιτοῦμαι τὸ ἀποθανεῖν· εἰ δὲ οὐδέν ἐστιν ὧν οὗτοι κατηγοροῦσί μου, οὐδείς με δύναται αὐτοῖς χαρίσασθαι· Καίσαρα ἐπικαλοῦμαι. 12 Τότε ὁ Φῆστος συλλαλήσας μετὰ τοῦ συμβουλίου ἀπεκρίθη, Καίσαρα ἐπικέκλησαι; ἐπὶ Καίσαρα πορεύσῃ.

13 Ἡμερῶν δὲ διαγενομένων τινῶν, Ἀγρίππας ὁ βασιλεὺς καὶ Βερνίκη κατήν-b ch. 24. 12. ch. 28. 17.

c ch. 18. 14. ver. 25. & ch. 26. 31.

---

6. οὐ πλείους ὀκτὼ ἢ δέκα] So A, C, and several Cursives and Versions, and B, except that it has πλείονας.—Elz. πλείους ἢ δέκα. Cp. on John vi. 19.

7. αὐτόν] omitted by Elz., but in A, B, C, E, and many Cursives and Versions; it intimates that they had access to Festus, and beset him, in order to prejudice him against Paul.

— αἰτιώματα] So A, B, C, E, G, H. "Notabilis in vitio consensus," says Bornemann.—Elz. αἰτιάματα. If, indeed, the word here used is from αἰτιάω, the reading of A, B, C, E, G, H is erroneous, but it is to be derived from αἰτιόω, 'reum (αἴτιον) facere,' 'criminari.'

9. χάριν καταθέσθαι] an imitation of the policy of Felix (xxiv. 27).

— κριθῆναι] So A, B, C, E, and several Cursives.—Elz. κρίνεσθαι.

— ἐπ' ἐμοῦ] not before the Sanhedrim, who are thine enemies, but me an impartial Judge. And yet Festus "wished to do the Jews a favour." And why would he take Paul to Jerusalem, where there was a conspiracy against him? Why not judge him at Cæsarea? St. Paul saw the snare and avoided it. Cp. xxviii. 19.

10. ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος Καίσαρος ἑστώς εἰμι] I desire to be sent to Rome, and to be judged there. (Ammonius, Chrys.) I already stand in my own resolve, founded on the divine will, at Cæsar's judgment-seat. As Chrys. observes, he remembered the divine Vision at Jerusalem (xxiii. 11), and made the appeal more confidently. This is a reply to the proposal of Felix, θέλεις —κριθῆναι ἐπ' ἐμοῦ;

He replies also to the secret designs of Festus, who wished to gain the favour of the Jews by the sacrifice of Paul; and he says, οὐδείς με δύναται αὐτοῖς χαρίσασθαι· Καίσαρα ἐπικαλοῦμαι. See v. 11.

That this is the true interpretation, and not that in standing before Festus, Cæsar's representative, he then stood before Cæsar, appears from the answer of Festus (v. 12), Καίσαρα ἐπικέκλησαι, ἐπὶ Καίσαρα πορεύσει. Compare also xxviii. 18, 19, where St. Paul explains the reasons of his conduct in this respect, and says, that the Jews delivered him a prisoner into the hands of the Romans, who were ready to release him as innocent, but that the Jews resisted this design, and that therefore he was compelled to appeal to Cæsar.

St. Paul's privilege of Roman Citizenship was here made serviceable as before (xxii. 27; xxiii. 27) for the furtherance of the Gospel.

On the right of Appeal, see Kuin. "Lege Valeriâ, Porciâ et Semproniâ cautum erat, ut si quis magistratus civem Romanum verberare et necare vellet, accusatus ad populi judicium provocare posset, intereaque nihil ab illo magistratu pateretur, nisi quando populus judicassot: v. intpp. ad Flor. i. 9. 4. not. ad Act. xvi. 37. Quod verò antea juris populi erat, id deinceps factum est Cæsaris, ut nimirum ad eum provocaretur; hinc etiam Plinius Christianos, qui cives Romani erant, et ad Cæsarem provocarant, in urbem mittebat. Ep. x. 97, quos, quia cives Romani erant, annotavi, in urbem remittendos: vid. et Krebs. p. 148."

In the resistance of the Jews to his liberation, St. Paul recognized a fulfilment of what had been already revealed to him by God, concerning the witness he was to bear to Christ at Rome (see xix. 21; xxiii. 11). Therefore he adds, οὗ με δεῖ κρίνεσθαι, where it is God's will that I should be judged. On this use of δεῖ, see xix. 21, δεῖ με καὶ Ῥώμην ἰδεῖν: xxiii. 11, δεῖ καὶ εἰς Ῥώμην μαρτυρῆσαι: xxvii. 24, Καίσαρι σὲ δεῖ παραστῆναι.

Observe,—the words are not οὗ με δεῖ με κρίνεσθαι, but οὗ με δεῖ κρίνεσθαι, with an emphasis on μέ: so xxvii. 24, Καίσαρι σὲ δεῖ παραστῆναι. I have received a special direction from heaven in this matter. I, the Apostle of Christ, have a special duty to perform. My arrestation by the Jews, and their charges against me, have already been made ministerial by God to the preaching of the Gospel by my mouth, from the stairs of the castle at Jerusalem to the People, and to the Sanhedrim, and before Felix at Cæsarea (see on xxi. 40; xxv. 23); and they are yet under divine counsel, to be made subservient to a wider and higher design—that of carrying me to preach the Gospel at Rome. Therefore I will not return to Jerusalem to be judged there, as thou proposest that I should do. I have delivered my message there; and it has been rejected. I have also delivered it at Cæsarea. I must now declare it at Rome.

These considerations may suggest a reply to the question,—Why St. Paul appealed to Cæsar?

— κάλλιον] thou knowest better than to need information from me. See ἀκριβέστερον, xxiv. 22, and 2 Tim. i. 18, βέλτιον σὺ γινώσκεις.

11. οὐ παραιτοῦμαι] 'non deprecor.'

— μὲ χαρίσασθαι] to compliment me away to them. μὲ is emphatic—me, an innocent man.

12. μετὰ τοῦ συμβουλίου] with his Council, or Assessors. "Habebant provinciarum præsides suos assessores (ut vocantur à Lamprid. Vit. Alex. Severi c. 46) consiliarios (Sueton. Tib. 33) qui à Josepho B. J. ii. 16 dicuntur φίλοι ἡγεμόνος, à Dio. Cass. p. 505, E.—πάρεδροι, quibuscum, antequam sententiam dicerent, deliberarent, v. Perizonius de Prætorio p. 718. Casaubonus Exercitt. Antibaron. p. 137." (Kuin.)

— πορεύσῃ] "hæc videtur dixisse terrendi Pauli causâ." (Bengel.)

13. Ἀγρίππας ὁ βασιλεύς] Agrippa II., or Junior, son of Agrippa I., who was struck by a mortal disease at Cæsarea, A.D. 44 (see Acts xii. 19—23), and brother of Bernice and Drusilla (Acts xxiv. 24). It would seem as if the curse of Edom hung over this unhappy family.

Agrippa was only seventeen years old when his father died (Joseph. Ant. xix. 9. 1), and was not allowed to succeed him at once; but received from Claudius (A.D. 48) the principality of Chalcis (Joseph. xx. 1. 1; 5. 2), and the superintendence of the Temple at Jerusalem, and the nomination of the High Priests (Joseph. xx. 1. 3). Four years afterwards he received the tetrarchies that had belonged to Philip and Lysanias (Luke iii. 1), with the title of King. And in A.D. 55 his dominions were further increased by Nero, with some cities in Galilee (Joseph. Ant. xx. 8. 5). He was the last of the Herods, and lived to see the fall of Jerusalem, and died at the age of seventy, in the third year of Trajan, A.D. 100 (Phot. Bibl. Cod. 33. Winer, i. p. 485).

It is observable, that although St. Luke calls Agrippa a King, he does not call him by the title which he gives to his father (xii. 1), "Herod the King (of Judæa);"—another instance of his accuracy. Cp. Hackett, p. 334.

— Βερνίκη] the Macedonian name for Φερενίκη, eldest daughter of Herod Agripp I. She had been married to her uncle τησαν εἰς Καισάρειαν, ἀσπασόμενοι τὸν Φῆστον. 14 [d] Ὡς δὲ πλείους ἡμέρας d ch. 24. 27.

διέτριβον ἐκεῖ, ὁ Φῆστος τῷ βασιλεῖ ἀνέθετο τὰ κατὰ τὸν Παῦλον λέγων, Ἀνήρ τις ἐστὶ καταλελειμμένος ὑπὸ Φήλικος δέσμιος, 15 περὶ οὗ, γενομένου μου εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, ἐνεφάνισαν οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι τῶν Ἰουδαίων, αἰτούμενοι κατ' αὐτοῦ καταδίκην. 16 [e] πρὸς οὓς ἀπεκρίθην, ὅτι οὐκ ἔστιν ἔθος e Deut. 17. 4.
Ῥωμαίοις χαρίζεσθαί τινα ἄνθρωπον, πρὶν ἢ ὁ κατηγορούμενος κατὰ πρόσωπον ἔχοι τοὺς κατηγόρους, τόπον τε ἀπολογίας λάβοι περὶ τοῦ ἐγκλήματος.
17 [f] Συνελθόντων οὖν αὐτῶν ἐνθάδε, ἀναβολὴν μηδεμίαν ποιησάμενος, τῇ ἑξῆς f ver. 6. καθίσας ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος, ἐκέλευσα ἀχθῆναι τὸν ἄνδρα· 18 περὶ οὗ σταθέντες οἱ κατήγοροι οὐδεμίαν αἰτίαν ἔφερον ὧν ἐγὼ ὑπενόουν πονηράν, 19 [g] ζητήματα g ch. 18. 15.
δέ τινα περὶ τῆς ἰδίας δεισιδαιμονίας εἶχον πρὸς αὐτὸν, καὶ περί τινος Ἰησοῦ τεθνηκότος, ὃν ἔφασκεν ὁ Παῦλος ζῆν. 20 Ἀπορούμενος δὲ ἐγὼ εἰς τὴν περὶ τούτων ζήτησιν ἔλεγον, εἰ βούλοιτο πορεύεσθαι εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, κἀκεῖ κρί-νεσθαι περὶ τούτων. 21 Τοῦ δὲ Παύλου ἐπικαλεσαμένου τηρηθῆναι αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν τοῦ Σεβαστοῦ διάγνωσιν, ἐκέλευσα τηρεῖσθαι αὐτὸν, ἕως οὗ ἀναπέμψω αὐτὸν πρὸς Καίσαρα. 22 Ἀγρίππας δὲ πρὸς τὸν Φῆστον ἔφη, Ἐβουλόμην καὶ αὐτὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἀκοῦσαι· ὁ δέ, Αὔριον, φησὶν, ἀκούσῃ αὐτοῦ.
23 Τῇ οὖν ἐπαύριον ἐλθόντος τοῦ Ἀγρίππα καὶ τῆς Βερνίκης μετὰ πολλῆς φαντασίας, καὶ εἰσελθόντων εἰς τὸ ἀκροατήριον, σύν τε τοῖς χιλιάρχοις καὶ ἀνδράσι τοῖς κατ' ἐξοχὴν τῆς πόλεως, καὶ κελεύσαντος τοῦ Φήστου, [h] ἤχθη h ch. 9. 15.
ὁ Παῦλος. 24 Καί φησιν ὁ Φῆστος, Ἀγρίππα βασιλεῦ, καὶ πάντες οἱ συμπαρόντες ἡμῖν ἄνδρες, θεωρεῖτε τοῦτον, [i] περὶ οὗ ἅπαν τὸ πλῆθος τῶν Ἰουδαίων i ver. 3. 7.
ἐνέτυχόν μοι ἔν τε Ἱεροσολύμοις καὶ ἐνθάδε, ἐπιβοῶντες [k] μὴ δεῖν αὐτὸν ζῆν k ch. 22. 22.

Herod, king of Chalcis, and after his death to Polemon, King of Cilicia (St. Paul's country), whom she had deserted δι' ἀκολασίαν, ὡς ἔφασαν (Joseph. Ant. xx. 7. 3); her infamous character was well-known at Rome (Juvenal, vi. 155), where she had an illicit connexion with the destroyer of her country. (Sueton. Tit. 7.)

The following are the statements of Josephus and other ancient writers concerning her. Joseph. Ant. xx. 7. 3, Βερνίκη δὲ μετὰ τὴν Ἡρώδου τελευτὴν, ὃς αὐτῆς ἀνὴρ καὶ θεῖος ἐγεγόνει, πολὺν χρόνον ἐπιχηρεύσασα φήμης ἐπισχούσης, ὅτι τῷ ἀδελφῷ συνῇει, πείθει Πολέμωνα, Κιλικίας δὲ ἦν οὗτος βασιλεὺς, περιτεμνόμενον ἄγεσθαι πρὸς γάμον αὐτὴν, οὕτως γὰρ ἐλέγξειν φέτο ψευδεῖς τὰς διαβολάς. Καὶ ὁ Πολέμων ἐπείσθη μάλιστα διὰ τὸν πλοῦτον αὐτῆς· οὐ μὲν ἐπὶ πολὺ συνέμεινεν ὁ γάμος, ἀλλὰ Βερνίκη δι' ἀκολασίαν, ὡς ἔφασαν, καταλείπει τὸν Πολέμωνα· ὁ δὲ ἅμα τοῦ γάμου καὶ τοῦ τοῖς ἔθεσι τῶν Ἰουδαίων ἐμμένειν ἀπήλλακτο. Juvenal, Sat. vi. 156 sqq. "Adamas notissimus, et Berenices In digito factus pretiosior, hunc dedit olim Barbarus incestæ, dedit hunc Agrippa sorori, Observant ubi festa mero pede sabbata reges, Et vetus indulget senibus clementia porcis." Suetonius, in the life of Titus (7), says, "Suspecta in eo (Tito) etiam luxuria erat—nec minus libido propter exoletorum et spadonum greges, propterque insignem reginæ Berenices amorem, cui etiam nuptias pollicitus ferebatur—Berenicen statim ab urbe dimisit, invitus invitam." Tacit. Hist. ii. 81, "Regina Berenice—florens ætate formâque, et seni quoque Vespasiano magnificentiâ munerum grata."

— ἀσπασόμενοι τὸν Φῆστον] to salute Festus on his promotion to the office of Procurator—a significant sentence: they came thither to pay their court to the Representative of Cæsar, and there they rejected the Gospel preached to them by the Embassador of Christ.

15. καταδίκην] So A, B, C.—Elz. δίκην.

16. Ῥωμαίοις] not the Romans, but Romans, as such.

— ἄνθρωπον] Elz. adds εἰς ἀπώλειαν, which is not in A, B, C, E, and is probably a gloss.

18. ἔφερον] So A, B, C, E, G.—Elz. ἐπέφερον, which would rather mean 'brought in addition;' which is not the sense here.

— ἐγὼ ὑπενόουν] So A, B, C.—Elz. ὑπενόουν ἐγώ: but ἐγώ is emphatic here; 'their charges differed from what I was anticipating.'

— πονηράν] So A, B, C, and many Cursives and Versions: the word is omitted by Elz. The word does not appear to be a gloss, but is well opposed to ζητήματα, which follows.

19. τῆς ἰδίας δεισιδαιμονίας] his own (i.e. Paul's) private superstition. Festus would not have spoken thus to Agrippa, the King of Judæa, concerning his religion.

21. Σεβαστοῦ] Nero. Cp. v. 10.

22. ἐβουλόμην] I myself was wishing to hear the man,—of whom doubtless Agrippa already knew much. See xxvi. 26.

23, 24. Ἀγρίππα—Βερνίκης—Φήστου] St. Paul's arrest in the Temple at Jerusalem was made by Divine Providence the occasion for the public preaching of Christ on numerous great occasions, and to many illustrious auditories in different places; and thus the fury of Satan against him was overruled to the glory of God, and the extension of the kingdom of Christ by the preaching of His Word,

(1) To the people at Jerusalem from the stairs of the Castle (xxi. 40; xxii. 1—21).

(2) To the High Priest and Sanhedrim (xxiii. 1—6).

(3) To Felix and the Roman Garrison, the Chiliarchs or Captains of the Five Roman Cohorts at Cæsarea (Joseph. B. J. iii. 4. 2), and other Chief persons of that City (xxiv. 10—21).

(4) To Felix and Drusilla privately (xxiv. 24, 25).

(5) To many others at Cæsarea, to whom Paul had free access (xxiv. 23), during his two years custody there.

(6) To Festus at Cæsarea (xxv. 10).

(7) To Festus and King Agrippa, and Bernice, and the officers and Court there (xxv. 23—27; xxvi. 1—29).

(8) The climax of all—at Rome, the capital of the world.

It is a striking coincidence, that Herod Agrippa II., the son and successor, and Bernice and Drusilla, the daughters, of Herod Agrippa I., are brought by Divine Providence to hear the preaching of the Apostle Paul, at Cæsarea, the scene of the vain-glorious display and miserable end of their father, Herod Agrippa I., who had killed St. James, and imprisoned St. Peter (xii. 1. 3. 19—23).

Almighty God showed His long-suffering to the Princes, as well as to the People, of Judæa. He had sent the Baptist to Herod Antipas; he wrought a miracle to deliver St. Peter, and to awaken the conscience of Herod Agrippa the First; and his Children are now permitted to hear the word of God from St. Paul; a message made more solemn by the circumstances of their father's death. But as it was with the People, so also with the Princes of Judæa. They let the day of grace pass by. They neglected God's invitations and warnings; and in them the royal house of the Herods became extinct. Their kingdom was destroyed by those whose favour they courted, and to whom they looked for protection. They relied on the Roman power at Cæsarea, rather than on the favour of the God of Jerusalem; and they were enslaved by the Cæsars, because they rejected Christ.

μηκέτι. 25 [1] Ἐγὼ δὲ κατελαβόμην μηδὲν ἄξιον αὐτὸν θανάτου πεπραχέναι· αὐτοῦ δὲ τούτου ἐπικαλεσαμένου τὸν Σεβαστὸν, ἔκρινα πέμπειν αὐτόν. 26 Περὶ οὗ ἀσφαλές τι γράψαι τῷ Κυρίῳ οὐκ ἔχω· διὸ προήγαγον αὐτὸν ἐφ' ὑμῶν, καὶ μάλιστα ἐπὶ σοῦ, βασιλεῦ Ἀγρίππα, ὅπως, τῆς ἀνακρίσεως γενομένης, σχῶ τι γράψω. 27 Ἄλογον γάρ μοι δοκεῖ, πέμποντα δέσμιον, μὴ καὶ τὰς κατ' αὐτοῦ αἰτίας σημᾶναι.

XXVI. [1] Ἀγρίππας δὲ πρὸς τὸν Παῦλον ἔφη, Ἐπιτρέπεταί σοι ὑπὲρ σεαυτοῦ λέγειν. Τότε ὁ Παῦλος ἐκτείνας τὴν χεῖρα ἀπελογεῖτο, 2 Περὶ πάντων ὧν ἐγκαλοῦμαι ὑπὸ Ἰουδαίων, βασιλεῦ Ἀγρίππα, ἡγημαι ἐμαυτὸν μακάριον μέλλων ἀπολογεῖσθαι ἐπὶ σοῦ σήμερον· 3 μάλιστα γνώστην ὄντα σε πάντων τῶν κατὰ Ἰουδαίους ἐθῶν τε καὶ ζητημάτων· διὸ δέομαί σου μακροθύμως ἀκοῦσαί μου.

4 Τὴν μὲν οὖν βίωσίν μου τὴν ἐκ νεότητος, τὴν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς γενομένην ἐν τῷ ἔθνει μου ἔν τε Ἱεροσολύμοις, ἴσασι πάντες οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, 5 προγινώσκοντές με ἄνωθεν, ἐὰν θέλωσι μαρτυρεῖν, ὅτι κατὰ τὴν ἀκριβεστάτην αἵρεσιν τῆς ἡμετέρας θρησκείας ἔζησα Φαρισαῖος. 6 Καὶ νῦν ἐπ' ἐλπίδι τῆς εἰς τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν ἐπαγγελίας γενομένης ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἕστηκα κρινόμενος· 7 εἰς ἣν τὸ δωδεκάφυλον ἡμῶν ἐν ἐκτενείᾳ νύκτα καὶ ἡμέραν λατρεῦον ἐλπίζει καταντῆσαι· περὶ ἧς ἐλπίδος ἐγκαλοῦμαι, βασιλεῦ, ὑπὸ Ἰουδαίων. 8 Τί; ἄπιστον κρίνεται παρ' ὑμῖν εἰ ὁ Θεὸς νεκροὺς ἐγείρει; 9 Ἐγὼ μὲν οὖν ἔδοξα ἐμαυτῷ πρὸς τὸ ὄνομα Ἰησοῦ τοῦ Ναζωραίου δεῖν πολλὰ ἐναντία πρᾶξαι· 10 ὃ καὶ ἐποίησα ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις· καὶ πολλοὺς τῶν ἁγίων ἐγὼ ἐν φυλακαῖς κατέκλεισα, τὴν παρὰ τῶν ἀρχιερέων ἐξουσίαν λαβών· ἀναιρουμένων τε αὐτῶν κατήνεγκα ψῆφον. 11 Καὶ κατὰ πάσας τὰς συναγωγὰς πολλάκις τιμωρῶν

1 ch. 23. 9. & 26. 31.

a ch. 23. 6. Phil. 3. 5.
b Gen. 3. 15. & 22. 18. & 26. 4. & 49. 10. Deut. 18. 15. 2 Sam. 7. 12. Ps. 132. 11. Isa. 4. 2. & 7. 14. & 9. 6. & 40. 10. Jer. 23. 5. & 33. 14. Ezek. 34. 23. & 37. 24. Dan. 9. 21. Micah 7. 20. c ch. 24. 15, 21. ch. 8. 3. & 9. 1. & 22. 4. 1 Cor. 15. 9. Gal. 1. 13. 1 Tim. 1. 13.
d ch. 8. 3.

---

25. μηδὲν ἄξιον αὐτ. θανάτου] A confession of St. Paul's innocence from the mouth of his Judge. See also the avowal of Agrippa, xxvi. 31.

26. τῷ Κυρίῳ] 'Domino meo;' a title declined by Augustus (Tertull. Apol. 34. Sueton. Octav. 53) and by Tiberius (Sueton. Tiber. 27), and now accepted and borne by Nero, who murdered his mother Agrippina, and his wife Octavia, and his master Seneca, and set fire to his own capital, and persecuted and martyred the Christians for his own sin, καὶ οὕτως ἐπὶ τὰς τῶν Ἀποστόλων ἐτήρθη σφαγάς (Euthalius, Caten. p. 421).

In this world, he who calls Nero "his Lord," has the disposal of him who calls Christ his Lord,—a proof of a future Resurrection and of a Judgment to come.

— τῆς ἀνακρίσεως] the 'divinatio,' or preliminary inquiry.

— γράψω] So A, B, C.—Elz. γράψαι, but γράψω is preferable. He was not simply desirous of having something to write, for writing's sake, but to have something that he might write with the prisoner whom he was obliged to send.

CH. XXVI. 1. τὴν χεῖρα] the right hand,—the hand which was at liberty;—the other was chained, v. 29.

St. Paul's courage and presence of mind in public assemblies is noted by St. Luke on several occasions by reference to the action of his hands (see xiii. 16; xxi. 40); and this reference is characteristic of the narrative of an eye-witness.

2. ἡγημαι] 'I have thought.' St. Paul distinguishes between ἡγοῦμαι and ἡγημαι Phil. iii. 7, 8.

3. μάλιστα γνώστην ὄντα σε] 'because thou art eminently skilful.' Winer, Gr. Gr. § 32, p. 206. So Ephes. i. 18.

On Agrippa's zeal for the ἔθη of the Jews, see Joseph. xviii. 9; xix. 5. 6. Biscoe, p. 53, and the honourable mention in the Talmud concerning his knowledge of the law; Schoettgen, p. 480.

5. ἀκριβεστάτην] A word frequently used also by Josephus to describe the sect of the Pharisees, to which he belonged. B. J. i. 5; ii. 18. Ant. xvii. 2.

6. πατέρας ἡμῶν] ἡμῶν is not in Elz., but it is in A, B, C, E, and adds force to the argument. St. Paul, as a Christian Apostle, is studious to present himself in Agrippa's sight as a true Israelite, a legitimate heir of the promises to Abraham and the Fathers.

7. τὸ δωδεκάφυλον ἡμῶν] See James i. 1. St. Paul appeals from the Jews at Jerusalem to the Jewish nation throughout the world. Agrippa himself was a Proselyte.

— ἐγκαλοῦμαι, βασιλεῦ, ὑπὸ Ἰουδαίων] Elz. has ὑπὸ τῶν Ἰ., but τῶν is not in A, B, C, E, G, H; and the sense is stronger without it. 'I, who am a Jew indeed (see v. 6), and am contending for the hope of Israel, am accused by Jews.' Some MSS. place βασιλεῦ after Ἰουδαίων. But Ἰουδαίων stands with peculiar force at the end of the sentence. And so it is placed in A, G, H, and other MSS. Cp. the position of Ἰουδαῖοι in v. 4, and Φαρισαῖος, v. 5; κρινόμενος, v. 6; ψῆφον, v. 10; Ἱεροσολύμοις, v. 11; βλασφημεῖν, v. 11. In all these the κέντρον or aculeus of the sentence is at the end,—to leave a deeper impression in the mind. Cp. in St. Stephen's speech, Βαβυλῶνος, vii. 43.

8. εἰ] Not for ὅτι, nor for 'whether,' but 'if.' If God, Who is Omnipotent, raises the dead, will you be incredulous? No; rather, we ought to receive such evidence of His power and love to us with thankfulness and joy.

Cp. the similar use of εἰ in Clem. Rom. 26, θαυμαστὸν νομίζομεν εἶναι εἰ ὁ δημιουργὸς ἀπάντων ἀνάστασιν ποιήσεται (Grinfield.)

— ἐγείρει] The present tense indicates a permanent attribute, and repeated act, of God. (Hackett.)

10. πολλοὺς τῶν ἁγίων] Acts ix. 1, Σαῦλος ἐμπνέων φόνου. The death of St. Stephen is the only martyrdom described in the Acts, but doubtless there were many others, of which it is a specimen. See Heb. x. 32—34. The words Heb. xii. 4, "Ye have not yet resisted unto blood," addressed to the private Christians of Palestine, does not preclude the supposition that many of their teachers, and many of the faithful at an earlier time, had suffered martyrdom for Christ. See Stuart on Hebrews, i. p. 72, § 10.

— τὴν—ἐξουσίαν] The requisite authority and commission, which made them responsible for my conduct, which is also thus proved to be of public notoriety, and cannot be questioned.

— κατήνεγκα ψῆφον] It would seem that Saul himself had been a member of the Sanhedrim, and took part in its Judicial proceedings, by hearing causes and voting upon them. "Presbyteratûs dignitatem (of a Jewish Elder) à Gamaliele accepisse Paulum, antequam Christo nomen dederat, non videtur dubitandum." Selden, de Synedr. ii. 7. 7. Vitringa, de Synag. iii. 7, p. 707. Biscoe, p. 269. Though called a νεανίας (vii. 58) he was probably at least thirty years of age. Wieseler, p. 155, quoted by Cook, p. 91.

11. κατὰ πάσας τὰς συναγωγὰς] A fulfilment of Christ's pro-αὐτοὺς ἠνάγκαζον βλασφημεῖν· περισσῶς τε ἐμμαινόμενος αὐτοῖς ἐδίωκον ἕως καὶ εἰς τὰς ἔξω πόλεις. 12 [e] Ἐν οἷς καὶ πορευόμενος εἰς τὴν Δαμασκὸν μετ' ἐξουσίας καὶ ἐπιτροπῆς παρὰ τῶν ἀρχιερέων, 13 [f] ἡμέρας μέσης κατὰ τὴν ὁδὸν εἶδον, βασιλεῦ, οὐρανόθεν ὑπὲρ τὴν λαμπρότητα τοῦ ἡλίου, περιλάμψαν με φῶς καὶ τοὺς σὺν ἐμοὶ πορευομένους. 14 Πάντων τε καταπεσόντων ἡμῶν εἰς τὴν γῆν, ἤκουσα φωνὴν λαλοῦσαν πρός με καὶ λέγουσαν τῇ Ἑβραΐδι διαλέκτῳ, Σαοὺλ, Σαοὺλ, τί μὲ διώκεις; σκληρόν σοι πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζειν. 15 Ἐγὼ δὲ εἶπον, Τίς εἶ, κύριε; ὁ δὲ Κύριος εἶπεν, Ἐγώ εἰμι Ἰησοῦς, ὃν σὺ διώκεις. 16 [g] Ἀλλὰ ἀνάστηθι, καὶ στῆθι ἐπὶ τοὺς πόδας σου· εἰς τοῦτο γὰρ ὤφθην σοι, προχειρίσασθαί σε ὑπηρέτην καὶ μάρτυρα, ὧν τε εἶδες ὧν τε ὀφθήσομαί σοι, 17 ἐξαιρούμενός σε ἐκ τοῦ λαοῦ καὶ τῶν ἐθνῶν, εἰς οὓς ἐγὼ ἀποστέλλω σὲ, 18 [h] ἀνοῖξαι ὀφθαλμοὺς αὐτῶν, τοῦ ἐπιστρέψαι ἀπὸ σκότους εἰς φῶς καὶ τῆς ἐξουσίας τοῦ Σατανᾶ ἐπὶ τὸν Θεὸν, τοῦ λαβεῖν αὐτοὺς ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν καὶ κλῆρον ἐν τοῖς ἡγιασμένοις, πίστει τῇ εἰς ἐμέ. 19 [i] Ὅθεν, βασιλεῦ Ἀγρίππα, οὐκ ἐγενόμην ἀπειθὴς τῇ οὐρανίῳ ὀπτασίᾳ· 20 [k] ἀλλὰ τοῖς ἐν Δαμασκῷ πρῶτον καὶ Ἱεροσολύμοις, εἰς πᾶσάν τε τὴν χώραν τῆς Ἰουδαίας καὶ τοῖς ἔθνεσιν, ἀπήγγελλον μετανοεῖν, καὶ ἐπιστρέφειν ἐπὶ τὸν Θεὸν, ἄξια τῆς μετανοίας ἔργα πράσσοντας. 21 [l] Ἕνεκα τούτων με οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι συλλαβόμενοι ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ ἐπειρῶντο διαχειρίσασθαι. 22 Ἐπικουρίας οὖν τυχὼν τῆς ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἄχρι τῆς ἡμέρας ταύτης ἕστηκα, μαρτυρόμενος μικρῷ τε καὶ μεγάλῳ, οὐδὲν ἐκτὸς λέγων ὧν τε οἱ προφῆται ἐλάλησαν μελλόντων γίνεσθαι καὶ Μωϋσῆς, 23 [m] εἰ

[e] ch. 9. 2. & 22. 6.
[f] ch. 9. 3.
[g] ch. 9. 15, 17.
[h] Isa. 35. 5. & 42. 7. & 60. 1. Eph. 1. 18. Col. 1. 13. 1 Pet. 2. 25. ch. 20. 32.
[i] Isa. 50. 5.
[k] ch. 9. 20, 28. & 13. 14. & 22. 17, 21. Matt. 3. 8.
[l] ch. 21. 30.
[m] 1 Pet. 1. 11. ver. 18. 1 Cor. 15. 20. Col. 1. 18. Rev. 1. 5. Luke 2. 32.

phecy, Mark xiii. 9. St. Paul himself was often afterwards scourged in the Synagogue, 2 Cor. xi. 24. On the practice of scourging in the synagogues, see Selden, de Syned. ii. 10. Biscoe, p. 270, who examines the question why Paul was scourged in the Synagogue, but not 'put out of the Synagogue,' John ix. 22; xii. 42.

12. ἐν οἷς] A phrase used by St. Paul, xxiv. 18.

— ἐπιτροπῆς] commission,—a proof of his former dignity, and of what he sacrificed for Christ. On the history, see Acts ix. 3; xxii. 6.

13. φῶς] If such was the splendour of His appearance then, and such its effects,—what will they be when He comes hereafter in His glorious Majesty to judge the quick and dead?

14. Ἑβραΐδι διαλέκτῳ] St. Paul, therefore, was not now speaking in Hebrew, but probably in Greek. This appears also from a comparison of this passage with xxii. 7, where he was speaking in Hebrew, xxi. 40.

— τί μὲ διώκεις;] Not τί διώκεις μὲ; but τί μὲ δ.; μὲ is emphatic. Me,—the Lord of all: Me, thy Saviour and King; Me, the Head of the Church, Who am persecuted by those who persecute her.

— σκληρόν σοι πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζειν] A proverb taken from the act of an ox kicking against the goad which wounds him the more he kicks. (Vorst, de Adag. N. T. p. 821.) "Durum est tibi adversus stimulum calces mittere," says Aug. Serm. 169, "possem enim te dimittere; tu vexareris punitionibus Meis, non Ego frangerer calcibus tuis, sed non te dimitto. Sævis, et misereor; Quid Me persequeris? Non enim timeo te, ne iterum Me crucifigas; sed volo agnoscas Me, ne occidas non Me sed te."

It is not (as some have supposed) divine grace, but the resistless power and punitive justice of Christ, which are here compared to the κέντρον. By the act of persecuting others, Paul is resisting Him Who is irresistible, and provoking Him Who is the Judge of all,—ἄλλους διώκων αὐτὸς ἐκδιώκεται. He is impinging on the "lapis offensionis" which will grind him to powder. Luke xx. 18.

Even when in heaven, our Blessed Lord did not disdain to use a proverb familiar to the Heathen world. Cp. Pindar, Pyth. ii. 173, φέρειν δ' ἐλαφρῶς Ἐπαυχένιον λαβόντα Ζυγόν γ' ἀρήγει. Ποτὶ κέντρον δέ τοι λακτίζεμεν τελέθει ὀλίσθηρος οἶμος. Æschyl. Prom. 323, οὔκουν ἔμοιγε χράμενος διδασκάλῳ Πρὸς κέντρα κῶλον ἐκτενεῖς, where the Scholiast says, πρὸς κέντρα κῶλον ἐκτείνει ὁ βοῦς, λακτίζει δὲ κεντούμενος ὑπὸ κέντρου, ὥστε λακτίζει πρὸς κέντρον καὶ τὸ κῶλον αἱμάσσει. Ὁ γὰρ πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζων τοὺς ἰδίους πόδας αἱμάσσει. Φησὶν οὖν· ἐάν μοι μὴ πεισθῇς, βλάψεις σεαυτόν—ἔστι δὲ παροιμία. Agamemn. 1633, πρὸς κέντρα μὴ λάκτιζε, μὴ πήσας μογῇς. Eurip. Bacch. 791, θυμούμενος πρὸς κέντρα λακτίζοιμι, θνητὸς ὢν θεῷ. Terent. Phorm. i. 2, 27, "Venere in mentem mihi isthæc: nam quæ inscitia est, Adversus stimulum calces?"

On our Lord's use of Proverbs see Matt. vii. 3; xi. 26. Luke v. 39.

The adage is fitly introduced by St. Paul in this speech before a heathen Procurator and a mixed audience at Cæsarea, but was not recited in his address at Jerusalem, xxii. 7. It was very suitable to be addressed to him who was to be the Apostle of the Gentiles. The ox is a Scriptural emblem for the Christian Minister (Isa. xxxii. 20) drawing the plough over the field which is to receive the seed of the Word; or as treading out the corn when grown, in order that it may be ground into bread. It is used as such by St. Paul himself, 1 Cor. ix. 9. 1 Tim. v. 18.

16. ὀφθήσομαι] A prophetic intimation that Saul was to expect further revelations from Jesus; afterwards fulfilled in Arabia (Gal. i. 11. 17), at Jerusalem (xxiii. 11), and elsewhere (2 Cor. xii. 1—7).

17. ἐξαιρούμενος] 'eripiens,' Vulg. ῥυόμενος, Hesych.; 'delivering thee from,' Authorized English Version,—a rendering censured by some learned Expositors, e. g. Heinrichs, Kuin., and Conybeare and Howson, p. 365, who translate it, 'I have chosen thee.' But how could Paul be said to be chosen from the ἔθνη? And ἐξαιρεῖσθαι is the word used for 'deliver' four times in the Acts, vii. 10. 34; xii. 11; xxiii. 27, which, with the present passage, are the only places where it is found in this book. Indeed, ἐξαιρεῖσθαι is never used for 'choose' in the N. T.

It may be observed here, in justice to the Authorized Version, that it has not unfrequently been condemned for renderings preferable to those which it has been proposed to substitute for them. See xxi. 16; xxvi. 22; xxvii. 12.

— ἀποστέλλω σέ] σὲ emphatic; i. e. thou, now a Persecutor, art to be My Apostle to them. See on Rom. i. 1.

19. οὐκ ἐγενόμην ἀπειθὴς] Even, therefore, in this extraordinary case of St. Paul, divine Grace was not irresistible. (Bengel.) He might have been disobedient, if he had not taken care to live with a pure conscience. Acts xxii. 1.

22. ἀπό] So A, B, E.—Elz. παρά. ἀπὸ is more expressive; the ἐπικουρία proceeding from, as well as given by, God.

— μαρτυρόμενος] So A, B, G, H; 'testificans' (Vulg.); 'witnessing' (Auth. Vers.),—a rendering censured by Meyer and De Wette, who read μαρτυρούμενος, and translate it, 'witnessed to by small and great.' Cp. above on v. 17.

23. εἰ] for ὅτι. Theophyl. p. 308, and so Chrys. But it may retain its proper sense, whether, and so it marks the modesty of St. Paul. It does not depend on ἐλάλησαν, but on λέγων,—and the sense is, 'I debated the question whether (as I affirm), the Christ was to be capable of suffering, and whether He was to be first,' &c. See xvii. 11, ἀνακρίνοντες εἰ ἔχοι ταῦτα οὕτως. xxv. 20, ἔλεγον εἰ βούλοιτο. 'I did not shrink from these inquiries, but argued them with the Jews.'

παθητὸς ὁ Χριστὸς, εἰ πρῶτος ἐξ ἀναστάσεως νεκρῶν φῶς μέλλει καταγγέλλειν n 1 Cor. 1. 23. & 2. 14. John 10. 20. τῷ λαῷ καὶ τοῖς ἔθνεσι; 24 [n] Ταῦτα δὲ αὐτοῦ ἀπολογουμένου, ὁ Φῆστος μεγάλῃ τῇ φωνῇ ἔφη, Μαίνῃ, Παῦλε· τὰ πολλά σε γράμματα εἰς μανίαν περιτρέπει.
25 Ὁ δὲ Παῦλος, Οὐ μαίνομαι, φησὶ, κράτιστε Φῆστε, ἀλλ' ἀληθείας καὶ σωφρο-o John 18. 20. σύνης ῥήματα ἀποφθέγγομαι. 26 [o] Ἐπίσταται γὰρ περὶ τούτων ὁ βασιλεὺς, πρὸς ὃν καὶ παῤῥησιαζόμενος λαλῶ· λανθάνειν γὰρ αὐτόν τι τούτων οὐ πείθομαι οὐδέν· οὐ γάρ ἐστιν ἐν γωνίᾳ πεπραγμένον τοῦτο. 27 Πιστεύεις, βασιλεῦ Ἀγρίππα, τοῖς προφήταις; οἶδα ὅτι πιστεύεις. 28 Ὁ δὲ Ἀγρίππας πρὸς τὸν Παῦλον, Ἐν ὀλίγῳ με πείθεις Χριστιανὸν γενέσθαι· 29 Ὁ δὲ Παῦλος εἶπεν, p 1 Cor. 7. 7. [p] Εὐξαίμην ἂν τῷ Θεῷ καὶ ἐν ὀλίγῳ καὶ ἐν πολλῷ, οὐ μόνον σὲ ἀλλὰ καὶ πάντας — παθητός] passibilis. So Ignat. Eph. 7, πρῶτον παθητὸς, καὶ τότε ἀπαθής. Cp. Phil. 9, παθητὸν χριστὸν αἱ γραφαὶ κηρύσσουσιν. Polycarp. 3, τὸν ἀπαθῆ, τὸν δι' ἡμᾶς παθητόν. Justin M. c. Tryph. 36, παθητὸς Χριστὸς προεφητεύθη μέλλειν εἶναι. That the one and the same Messiah should not only reign but suffer, be made perfect through suffering, and so enter into His glory, was a doctrine which even the disciples had yet to learn at the close of Christ's ministry. (Luke xxiv. 26. 46.) But they did learn it under the influence of the Holy Ghost (Acts iii. 18; xvii. 3) afterwards, when τὰ παθήματα τοῦ Χριστοῦ were often in their mouths. 2 Cor. i. 5—7. Phil. iii. 10. Heb. ii. 9, 10. 1 Pet. i. 11; iv. 13; v. 1. See Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. iv. pp. 344—360; see also Art. ii. p. 164.

24. μεγάλῃ τῇ φωνῇ] with his voice raised. See xiv. 10. 1 Cor. xi. 5. Winer, § 18, p. 98.

— μαίνῃ, Παῦλε] 'we fools accounted his life madness;' see Wisd. v. 4,—a lesson happily chosen by the Church for St. Paul's day. Cp. 2 Cor. v. 13, εἴ γὰρ ἐξέστημεν, Θεῷ.

— τὰ πολλά σε γράμματα] 'thy much learning.' John vii. 15.

25. οὐ μαίνομαι] 'I am not mad now; I am now sober.' He had charged himself with exceeding madness in his former career as a Persecutor, v. 11.

26. τοῦτο] The last word in the sentence, and emphatic. See above, v. 17. In a corner was not done this; i. e. this my Conversion; it was in the public road at mid-day; not so, the two conspiracies of the Jews to take away my life (xxiii. 16; xxv. 3). They were done in a corner.

28. ἐν ὀλίγῳ με πείθεις Χριστιανὸν γενέσθαι] The meaning of these words, and of St. Paul's reply, which must be considered with them, appears to be as follows:

St. Paul had been relating to Agrippa the history of his own sudden conversion from a strict Pharisee (v. 5) and bitter Persecutor of the Church (v. 9), to a Christian Confessor and Apostle (vv. 16—20).

Festus had interrupted him by the exclamation, "thou art mad." Paul, having denied that assertion, and having asserted his own sanity, turns himself to Agrippa, and appeals to his knowledge of what had been said. He then makes a personal application to him as a Jew, and appeals to his faith in the Hebrew Scriptures of Moses and the Prophets. And on the ground of that faith (see vv. 22—27) he urges him to take the next step as a logical consequence of that faith, and to confess Christ, and declare himself a Christian.

Agrippa feels the force of the appeal; he does not deny the truth of St. Paul's premises, nor does he say that the duty of confessing Christ is not their reasonable conclusion; but he endeavours to parry the blow, and to evade its force. He tries to repel St. Paul's appeal by a personal reference to his case. Thou hast described thine own conversion to Christianity. It was very rapid and sudden; it was effected ἐν ὀλίγῳ, in a short time,—in a moment,—as it were with a word and a blow. It may be right that I also should embrace Christianity; but such a great and important change requires much time and thought, especially for one like myself in high estate and royal dignity,—one who is a Jewish king and has the charge of the Temple. What a change would that be to me!—to me, the head of the royal house of the Herods, to become a Christian! You are hurrying me on too fast. You are attempting to do in a short time, and with little effort, what requires a long time and great consideration. You are endeavouring to do with me what you say was done with you. Hence the words are not πείθεις με, but με πείθεις. Ἐν ὀλίγῳ με πείθεις Χριστιανὸν γενέσθαι, 'You are attempting in a short time and with a few words to persuade me to imitate thee, and to become a Christian at once.'

As Œcumenius (p. 177) well explains it, δι' ὀλίγων ῥημάτων, ἐν βραχέσι λόγοις, ἐν ὀλίγῃ διδασκαλίᾳ, χωρὶς πολλοῦ πόνου καὶ συνεχοῦς διαλέξεως. And so Cassiodor. "sub celeritate vis me facere Christianum."

And probably Agrippa uttered the word Christian with an expression of scorn. This interpretation is supported by the emphatic position of the pronoun με, me; i. e. you would convert me as you were yourself converted, ἐν ὀλίγῳ. And it is also confirmed by the reading of A, πείθῃ—ποιῆσαι, i. e. you persuade yourself that you can make me a Christian ἐν ὀλίγῳ,—as you were made. The latter reading, ποιῆσαι, is also in B, and has been received by Lachm. and Tisch., not by Born. and Alf.

Further, it is illustrated by the other passage, where ἐν ὀλίγῳ occurs in the New Testament, viz. Eph. iii. 3, προέγραψα ἐν ὀλίγῳ, 'in a short compass;' which is similar to St. Peter's δι' ὀλίγων ἔγραψα, 1 Pet. v. 12; and there is a similar ellipsis of χρόνον after ὀλίγον in Rev. xvii. 10, ὀλίγον αὐτὸν δεῖ μεῖναι.

This exposition is also corroborated by St. Paul's reply, which may be thus paraphrased:

"You speak of my reliance on my powers of persuasion to bring you to what I myself am. You think that I am hoping and endeavouring to hurry you on into a profession of Christianity by my oratory. No; I rely not on human eloquence, but on divine grace. That it was which converted me. And in your case also, I do not rely on persuasion, but on prayer,—not on the arguments of Paul, but on supplications to God. Perhaps St. Paul thought of St. Stephen's prayer (vii. 60) for himself. Perhaps Stephen's words were so ordered by the Holy Spirit as to give to that prayer a part in the work of his own conversion. Persuade I may not, in a short time and with little effort, but pray I well may to God, not only now, in a brief address, and with little labour, but in a long time, and with great earnestness and intensity, that not only thou (σὲ is emphatic as the preceding μέ); but all who hear me this day may become such as I am this day, —except these bonds."

Thus St. Paul calmly disposes of Agrippa's disparaging allusion to the case of his sudden conversion, as if that had been unduly ἐν ὀλίγῳ, hasty and precipitate. He disclaims the notion which Agrippa had ascribed to him, of attempting to carry him away by the force of his powers of persuasion; he vindicates for divine grace its proper place in all works of genuine Conversion, and therefore in his own; and he extends the range of his appeal from Agrippa to all who heard him; and he instructs all Christian advocates to endeavour to win souls to Christ by fervent and unwearied prayer.

— Χριστιανόν] A more courteous term than the Ναζωραῖος of Tertullus, xxiv. 5: but probably used here ironically. The first time that we hear the word 'Christian' actually employed in a speech, is here in the mouth of an Idumæan Prince, a proof that it was commonly known as a name of the believers, although it only occurs three times in the New Testament. Acts xi. 26 here, and 1 Pet. iv. 16.

Herod Agrippa II., who had received from Rome the privilege of superintending the Temple at Jerusalem, and of nominating the High Priests (Joseph. xx. 1. 3), is here presented as an example of knowledge, without moral courage to act upon it. This is also the clue which unravels the mysterious inconsistencies in the character and writings of Agrippa's friend, the Jewish historian Josephus, on which subject the Editor may, perhaps, be permitted to refer to what has been said more fully in another place, as illustrating the case of Agrippa also. (Sermon "On the Life and Character of Josephus.") Agrippa lived to see the destruction of that Temple and Ritual of which he had the charge; he saw them dissolved and ruined by that secular Power, to which, from motives of policy and worldly expediency, he had attached himself.

What might have been the destiny of Herod and Jerusalem if he had possessed the courage of St. Paul!

29. εὐξαίμην ἂν τῷ Θεῷ] See the note on v. 28. The words καὶ ἐν ὀλίγῳ are not to be joined to what follows (a forced connexion), but to what precedes: "Persuade I may not be able now, but pray I well might now and ever."

τοὺς ἀκούοντάς μου σήμερον γενέσθαι τοιούτους ὁποῖος κἀγώ εἰμι, παρεκτὸς τῶν δεσμῶν τούτων.

30 Ἀνέστη τε ὁ βασιλεὺς, καὶ ὁ ἡγεμὼν, ἥ τε Βερνίκη, καὶ οἱ συγκαθήμενοι αὐτοῖς, 31 [q] καὶ ἀναχωρήσαντες ἐλάλουν πρὸς ἀλλήλους λέγοντες, Ὅτι οὐδὲν θανάτου ἄξιον ἢ δεσμῶν πράσσει ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος. 32 Ἀγρίππας δὲ τῷ Φήστῳ ἔφη, Ἀπολελύσθαι ἠδύνατο ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος, εἰ μὴ ἐπεκέκλητο Καίσαρα. q ch. 23. 9. & 25. 25.

XXVII. 1 [a] Ὡς δὲ ἐκρίθη τοῦ ἀποπλεῖν ἡμᾶς εἰς τὴν Ἰταλίαν, παρεδίδουν τόν τε Παῦλον καί τινας ἑτέρους δεσμώτας ἑκατοντάρχῃ, ὀνόματι Ἰουλίῳ, σπείρης Σεβαστῆς. 2 [b] Ἐπιβάντες δὲ πλοίῳ Ἀδραμυττηνῷ, μέλλοντι πλεῖν τοὺς κατὰ τὴν Ἀσίαν τόπους, ἀνήχθημεν, ὄντος σὺν ἡμῖν Ἀριστάρχου Μακεδόνος Θεσσαλονικέως. 3 [c] Τῇ τε ἑτέρᾳ κατήχθημεν εἰς Σιδῶνα· φιλανθρώπως τε ὁ Ἰούλιος τῷ Παύλῳ χρησάμενος, ἐπέτρεψε πρὸς τοὺς φίλους πορευθέντα ἐπιμελείας τυχεῖν. 4 Κἀκεῖθεν ἀναχθέντες ὑπεπλεύσαμεν τὴν Κύπρον, διὰ τὸ τοὺς ἀνέμους εἶναι ἐναντίους· 5 τό τε πέλαγος τὸ κατὰ τὴν Κιλικίαν καὶ Παμ- a ch. 25. 12, 25. b 2 Cor. 11. 25. ch. 19. 29. & 20. 4. Col. 4. 10. c ch. 24. 23. & 28. 16.

For πολλῷ, which is found in the majority of MSS. and in Chrys. and other Fathers, A, B, and four Cursives, have μεγάλῳ, which has been received by Lach., Tisch., Born., and Alf. It may perhaps be the true reading; but A, B, are not always trustworthy guides (see Bornemann on xxiii. 16; xxv. 1); and here, v. 28, they have ποιῆσαι, and A has πείθῃ, which readings seem to proceed from a criticism that did not scruple to modify the text. Besides, St. Luke uses μεγάλῳ as opposed to μικρῷ, v. 22, and viii. 10. μεγάλη has been substituted for πολλὴ by some MSS. in viii. 8.

The words are well explained by Œcumenius, ἐν ὀλίγῳ καὶ ἐν πολλῷ, ἀντὶ τοῦ ἐν ὀλίγῳ λόγων ἀγῶνι, εἰ δέοι καὶ ἐν πλείονι, εὐξαίμην σε Χριστιανὸν ἂν γενέσθαι· διὰ πάντων πρόθυμός εἰμι πάντα ποιεῖν ἐπὶ τῇ σῇ σωτηρίᾳ, οὐ τῇ σῇ μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν συνόντων.

30. ἀνέστη] And so the opportunity was lost. Its sudden loss seems to be marked by the rapid transition in the words of the Historian.

— ἥ τε Βερνίκη] Bernice and Drusilla, daughters of King Agrippa I., and sisters of Agrippa II. (see above on xxv. 13), jealous of one another, and of profligate lives (Joseph. xx. 6. 1), are associated with two Roman Procurators in succession; Drusilla with Felix, her reputed husband; Bernice with Festus, through Agrippa her brother, in the public hearing of St. Paul at Cæsarea, where he was imprisoned through the envy of the Rulers of Jerusalem.

Thus the Gospel of Christ was brought into contact with the vices of both sexes, and of the Roman and Jewish world. How difficult was the work of moral purification it had to perform!

But by hallowing Marriage as a "great mystery" (Eph. v. 32), as a "representation of the mystical Union and Marriage betwixt Himself and His Church," Christ regenerated the World.

But, if Marriage should be desecrated and degraded from a Holy Mystery to a secular bargain; if Divorce should be made easy by Law; then all the evils of the age of Nero will again flow in upon society; and it may see Bernices and Drusillas sitting with great pomp in high places of this world, and taking cognizance of the doctrines of St. Paul.

31. οὐδὲν θανάτου ἄξιον—πράσσει] St. Paul's innocence was declared by all who took cognizance of his cause. And consequently the Jews were condemned by them. As Chrys. says, κατέγνω αὐτῶν Λυσίας, κατέγνω (Φῆστος), κατέγνω (Φῆλιξ), κατέγνω Ἀγρίππας, and last of all, κατέγνω Θεός,—and ultimately destroyed their Temple and their City for their hostility to the Gospel.

CH. XXVII. 1. ἑτέρους] prisoners of a different class, not ἄλλους. (Meyer.)

— Ἰουλίῳ—Σεβαστῆς] Julius, of the Augustan cohort. Every incident, however minute, which is recorded by the Holy Spirit in this narrative of that great event, the conveyance of the Gospel to Rome, the capital of the world, by the ministry of the Apostle of the Gentiles, is noticeable, and seems to have been ordered by Divine Providence, so as to show that all things will be made subservient to the progress and triumph of Christianity.

St. Paul goes from Cæsarea; and it is mentioned by St. Luke that he was conducted by a Roman Centurion, recalling to the mind by his name, and that of his cohort, those of the first two Emperors, Julius and Augustus.

It is also probable that the cohort here mentioned belonged to the body-guard of the Emperor. See Tacit. Ann. xiv. 15, "cohors Augustanorum." Sueton. Ner. 25. Dion Cass. lxiii. 8. Wieseler, p. 391. It is not said that the Cohort itself was at Cæsarea; but the Centurion Julius, of that Cohort, was.

If this is so, it is observable, that an Officer, whose duty it was to protect the person of the Master of the Roman World, is here employed by God to save the life of St. Paul (v. 43).

And surely it is not without some prophetic and spiritual meaning that St. Paul was empowered, through his influence with Julius, the Centurion of the Augustan cohort, to save the lives of his fellow-prisoners in the ship (v. 43).

See further below, on v.

2. Ἀδραμυττηνῷ] of Adramyttium, on the coast of Mysia. Steph. Byz. de Urb. p. 22.

— μέλλοντι] So A, B, and many Cursives and Versions.—Elz. μέλλοντες.

— πλεῖν] A, B add εἰς, which has been received by Lachm. and Tisch., not by Bornemann, Bloomf., or Alf. And it is not probable that if εἰς had been in the original text, it would have been here ejected; whereas, it was not unlikely to have been introduced by Copyists, not familiar with the more recondite phrase, πλεῖν τόπους, on which compare Hanno, Peripl. ap. Wetstein, πλεῖν τοὺς παραθαλασσίους τόπους, and Porson, i. 35, τὴν Ἀττικὴν ἐν ἀριστερᾷ πλέουσιν (Bornemann), and the remarks of Winer, Gr. Gr. § 32, p. 200, who refers to Poppo, Thuc. vi. 36. The sense is, The ship was about to sail by the places along the coast of Asia.—πλεῖν εἰς would signify that it was sailing to them with an intention of touching at them, which does not appear to have been the case.

It would seem that the original intention was, that St. Paul and the other prisoners should take their passage to Adramyttium, and thence proceed by the overland route toward Italy; as St. Polycarp afterwards did. Cp. Lewin, p. 713.

— Ἀριστάρχου] See xix. 29; xx. 4. Col. iv. 10. Philem. 24. St. Luke mentions the name of Aristarchus—but not his own.

4. ὑπεπλεύσαμεν] under the lee of. Their course must have been along the north coast of Cyprus (not the South), because they sailed through the πέλαγος (not θάλασσα. Cp. Matt. xviii. 6), or deep water (πλάτος θαλάσσης. Hesych.), off the shore of Cilicia and Pamphylia. See Smith, pp. 63—67.

The mention of Mr. Smith's work ("On the Voyage and Shipwreck of St. Paul," with Dissertations, by James Smith, Esq., of Jordan-hill, F.R.S., 2nd ed. Lond. 1856) suggests an expression of thankfulness for the happy combination of Geographical, Archæological, and Naval knowledge, in that illustration of this narrative, and for the example there displayed of the application of science and experience to the exposition of the divine Word.

We may also refer here to Mr. Howson's Chapter on the Voyage and Shipwreck of St. Paul, one of the most interesting portions of that attractive work; ch. xxiii. of the two Volumes by Messrs. Conybeare and Howson, on St. Paul's Life and Epistles.

The narrative of this Chapter is also well illustrated in Mr. Lewin's Life and Epistles of St. Paul, pp. 713—742.

φυλίαν διαπλεύσαντες, κατήλθομεν εἰς Μύρα τῆς Λυκίας. [6] Κἀκεῖ εὑρὼν ὁ ἑκατόνταρχος πλοῖον Ἀλεξανδρῖνον πλέον εἰς τὴν Ἰταλίαν, ἐνεβίβασεν ἡμᾶς εἰς αὐτό. [7] Ἐν ἱκαναῖς δὲ ἡμέραις βραδυπλοοῦντες, καὶ μόλις γενόμενοι κατὰ τὴν Κνίδον, μὴ προσεῶντος ἡμᾶς τοῦ ἀνέμου, ὑπεπλεύσαμεν τὴν Κρήτην κατὰ Σαλμώνην· [8] μόλις τε παραλεγόμενοι αὐτὴν ἤλθομεν εἰς τόπον τινὰ καλούμενον Καλοὺς Λιμένας, ᾧ ἐγγὺς ἦν πόλις Λασαία. [9] Ἱκανοῦ δὲ χρόνου διαγενομένου, καὶ ὄντος ἤδη ἐπισφαλοῦς τοῦ πλοὸς, διὰ τὸ καὶ τὴν νηστείαν ἤδη παρεληλυθέναι, παρήνει ὁ Παῦλος [10] λέγων αὐτοῖς, Ἄνδρες, θεωρῶ ὅτι μετὰ ὕβρεως καὶ πολλῆς ζημίας, οὐ μόνον τοῦ φορτίου καὶ τοῦ πλοίου, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν ψυχῶν ἡμῶν, μέλλειν ἔσεσθαι τὸν πλοῦν. [11] Ὁ δὲ ἑκατόνταρχος τῷ κυβερνήτῃ καὶ τῷ ναυκλήρῳ ἐπείθετο μᾶλλον, ἢ τοῖς ὑπὸ Παύλου λεγομένοις. [12] Ἀνευθέτου δὲ τοῦ λιμένος ὑπάρχοντος πρὸς παραχειμασίαν, οἱ πλείους ἔθεντο βουλὴν ἀναχθῆναι κἀκεῖθεν, εἴπως δύναιντο καταντήσαντες εἰς Φοίνικα παραχειμάσαι, λιμένα τῆς Κρήτης [d] βλέποντα κατὰ Λίβα καὶ κατὰ Χῶρον. [13] Ὑποπνεύσαντος d ver. 7.

---

5. Μύρα] neuter plural. Μύρα, πόλις Λυκίας, λέγεται καὶ θηλυκὸν καὶ οὐδέτερον. (Steph. Byz.) Its remains are described by Howson, ii. p. 387.

6. πλοῖον Ἀλεξανδρῖνον] A merchantman, probably a "navis frumentaria," or corn-ship, from Alexandria, the capital of Egypt, the granary of Italy. (Cp. Sueton. Galb. 10. Tacit. Hist. iv. 52. Varro, R. R. ii. procem. Lucan vi. 105.)

How came the Alexandrine ship, sailing to Italy, to be at Myra in Lycia?

The wind was westerly (v. 4), and the ships of the ancients were not fitted for working to windward; and under the circumstances of the case, the Alexandrine ship would stand to north till it came to the land of Asia Minor, which is very favourable for navigation by such vessels, the coast being bold and safe, and abounding in harbours. The Alexandrine ship was carried to Myra by the same westerly winds that forced the Adramyttian vessel to the east of Cyprus. (Smith, p. 71.)

7. βραδυπλοοῦντες] the opposite term to εὐθυδρομοῦντες (xvi. 11; xxi. 1).

— μόλις] with difficulty (see vv. 8. 16. 1 Pet. iv. 18) having arrived over against Cnidus.

— μὴ προσεῶντος] The words μὴ προσεῶντος are not to be joined to what precedes, but to what follows. Since the wind did not allow us to advance, we sailed under the lee of Crete (i.e. along the east coast of it), towards Salmone, which is s.w. by s. from Cnidus. The wind was therefore North-west; a wind which prevails in the Eastern part of the Archipelago in the summer months. (Purdy's Sailing Directions for the Mediterranean, p. 197. Smith, p. 74.) It is the same wind as the Etesiae of the ancients. (Plin. ii. 4.)

— Σαλμώνην] "Creta longissima est, ad orientem habens Sammonium promontorium adversum Rhodo." (Plin. N. H. iv. 20.)

8. παραλεγόμενοι] coasting it along the southern shore: they were not able to coast along the north shore of Crete, on account of the adverse wind.

— Καλοὺς Λιμένας] still preserving its ancient name (Pococke's Travels, ii. 250), as does Lasea, which is about five miles to the East of it. (Smith, pp. 80. 245. 262.)

About two leagues to the west of Fair Havens is Cape Matala, where the coast of Crete begins to run northward, at nearly the central point of the south side of Crete.

The plural number (Καλοὶ Λιμένες) seems to be due to the circumstances of its having two open roadsteads; one a little to the east of the other.

9. τοῦ πλοός] the voyage to Italy (see v. 10), on account of the violent northerly winds which blow in the Ægæan at this season.

On the form πλοῦς, πλοὸς, for the Attic πλοῦς, πλοῦ, see Lobeck, Phryn. p. 453. It is used in Martyr. Ignat. 3. Cp. νοὸς 1 Cor. xiv. 19. (Grinf.) — τὴν νηστείαν] the day of Atonement 10th of Tisri (October). Lev. xvi. 1—34; xxiii. 26—30. Numb. xxix. 1—11. Jahn, Archæol. § 357.

There is a remarkable Rabbinical gloss on Isa. xliii. 16. "Who maketh a way in the sea," i.e. from the Feast of Pentecost to the Feast of Tabernacles (five days after the Fast). See Schoettgen, p. 482.

By a like figure of speech the Athenians spoke of the weather for sailing, as beginning after the Dionysia. (Theophrast. Char. 3.)

10. θεωρῶ ὅτι—μέλλειν] On this combination of two constructions, see Winer, Gr. Gr. § 44, p. 303, who quotes Xenophon, Hellen. ii. 2. 2, εἰδὼς ὅτι ἔσεσθαι, and other examples. See also ibid. § 63, p. 506.

— ὕβρεως] violence, buffeting, hard usage; cp. v. 21, κερδῆσαι τὴν ὕβριν ταύτην, and 2 Cor. xii. 10, ἐν ὕβρεσιν, ἐν ἀνάγκαις, and ὑβριστὴς is used absolutely Rom. i. 30. 1 Tim. i. 13.

— φορτίου] So A, B, G, and many Cursives.—Elz. φόρτου. φόρτον is the Attic, φορτίον the Hellenic form. Moeris, p. 52. (Bornem.)

11. κυβερνήτῃ] 'gubernatori,'—the pilot.

— ναυκλήρῳ] the 'magister navis'—'navicularius' (Gloss. Labb.). ὁ δεσπότης τοῦ πλοίου (Hesych.). "Qui hominibus vel mercibus trajiciendis lucrum quærit" (Kuin.).

12. ἀνευθέτου] not well placed; not commodiously situated. Its name shows that it was a good harbour in some seasons, and so it is described in modern works on navigation (see Smith, pp. 81, 82), but it was not commodious to winter in. It is, in fact, an open roadstead; or rather, two open roadsteads, with good anchorage, and looking to the south.

— Φοίνικα] See next note.

— βλέποντα κατὰ Λίβα καὶ κατὰ Χῶρον] Libs (from Libya), the Greek name for the Roman Africus, and opposite to Aquilo. Plin. N. H. xviii. 77, who adds that Corus is opposite to Vulturnus. Cp. Virgil, Georg. iii. 356, "Spirantes frigora Cauri;" and v. 278, "In Borean Caurumque."

The words in the text are rendered by Vulg. "respicientem ad Africum et ad Corum;" and the Authorized English Version, "which lieth toward the South-west and North-west." This rendering has been rejected by recent able Interpreters, particularly by Alford, Smith, and Howson, who understand the phrase to mean, looking towards the points to which (and not from which) the South-west and North-west winds blow; i. e. not turning the face towards, but the back on, those winds; and looking to the South-east and North-east. And on this supposition they identify Phœnice with the harbour now called Lutro, about forty miles west of Fair Havens, and which is described as being the best, and indeed the only safe winter harbour in that part of Crete, and looks to the South-east and North-east. See Smith, pp. 84—93. Howson, ii. pp. 398—400, and Alford's note here. Besides, Phœnix is described by Strabo (x. 4) as on the south of the isthmus, or narrowest part of Crete, and this corresponds to Lutro; it is called Ἀράδενα by Hierocles, Synecdem., and Aradena is called Anapolis by Steph. Byzant.; and Mr. Pashley (Crete, ii. 257) found two villages, called Aradena and Anapolis, at a little distance above Lutro, and he says (ii. 257) "Port Phœnix at Lutro."

The question is one of grammatical interpretation; and it does not seem consistent with its principles, to render the words in question in any other way than that in which they have been translated in the Vulgate and other Versions.

The expressions by which the learned writers mentioned above have endeavoured to confirm their interpretation, do not appear to be quite relevant to the case before us. No doubt πλεῖν κατὰ ῥεῦμα is to sail down the stream; and al κατὰ λίβα προσβολαὶ, quoted from Josephus, are gusts from the South-west. And so κατ' ἄνεμον φέρεσθαι, and ἐκραγῆναι κατ' εὖρον, might be used, as in Latin secundum flumina, along the side and in the direction of the rivers.

δὲ νότου δόξαντες τῆς προθέσεως κεκρατηκέναι ἄραντες ἄσσον παρελέγοντο τὴν Κρήτην. 14 Μετ' οὐ πολὺ δὲ ἔβαλε κατ' αὐτῆς ἄνεμος τυφωνικὸς, ὁ καλού-μενος Εὐρακύλων. 15 Συναρπασθέντος δὲ τοῦ πλοίου, καὶ μὴ δυναμένου ἀντοφθαλμεῖν τῷ ἀνέμῳ, ἐπιδόντες ἐφερόμεθα. 16 Νησίον δέ τι ὑποδραμόντες καλούμενον Κλαύδην, ἰσχύσαμεν μόλις περικρατεῖς γενέσθαι τῆς σκάφης· 17 ἣν

But in these cases the verb connected with κατὰ is one of motion with; and not of rest, or of direction toward, like βλέπω, the verb used here.

To describe a harbour as looking with or down the wind, is not a natural mode of expression. The best illustration of St. Luke's phraseology is to be derived from St. Luke himself, viz.,

In Acts ii. 10 we have Λιβύης τῆς κατὰ Κυρήνην, toward Cyrene. iii. 13, κατὰ πρόσωπον Πιλάτου, face to face before Pilate. Cp. xxv. 16; viii. 26, πορεύου κατὰ μεσημβρίαν, go toward the South. So xvi. 7, κατὰ τὴν Μυσίαν, and κατὰ τὴν Βιθυνίαν. So in the present chapter, v. 2, τοὺς κατὰ τὴν Ἀσίαν τόπους. v. 5, πέλαγος τὸ κατὰ τὴν Κιλικίαν. v. 7, γενόμενοι κατὰ τὴν Κνίδον. v. 7, ὑπεπλεύσαμεν κατὰ τὴν Σαλμώνην,—in all which cases there is an idea of direction towards, or juxtaposition at. Cp. St. Paul's expression, Phil. iii. 14, κατὰ σκοπὸν διώκω. Gal. ii. 11, κατὰ πρόσωπον αὐτῷ ἀντέστην. Gal. iii. 1, κατ' ὀφθαλμούς.

It has been said, indeed, that λίψ and χῶρος here do not signify fixed points of the compass; but only winds, which sometimes blow, and sometimes do not. But this does not seem a tenable opinion: St. Luke is describing the habitual aspect of the harbour, its geographical bearings, independently of variable circumstances, especially of so fortuitous and fickle a condition, as whether a given wind happened to blow or not.

On the whole, it seems most consistent with critical rules, not to abandon the ancient interpretation, "respicientem ad Africum et ad Corum;" which (not to mention others) is received by Winer, Gr. Gr., § 49, p. 357, and Professor Felton and Mr. Hackett, p. 359.

If, therefore, Lutro is Phœnix, the true rendering of the passage is this,—"If by any means they might reach Phœnix and winter in it, being a Cretan harbour which, as approached by them, entering it from the sea, looks toward the S.W. and N.W.; and is therefore sheltered from those winds by the land."

In favour of this interpretation, it may be said, that it is more natural, in describing the good properties of a harbour, as here, to speak of the winds from which it is sheltered, than of those to which it is exposed;

Also, that St. Luke suggests this mode of regarding land objects from the sea, and of interpreting his words accordingly, by the expression in v. 27, ὑπενόουν οἱ ναῦται, προσάγειν τινὰ αὐτοῖς χώραν.

But, if the expression βλέποντα κατὰ λίβα is to be rendered facing the S.W. (i.e. from the land), then we must look for Phœnix in some other place than Lutro. And perhaps it may be better to suspend our decision on this point, till we have more complete topographical details for forming it.

The identification of Phœnix with Lutro is only of recent date. The harbour of Lutro has only been lately discovered by British Navigators. (Smith, p. 89. Howson, p. 398.) Perhaps, when the southern coast of Crete has been more accurately surveyed, another harbour may be found, which may correspond with the words of St. Luke, understood in this latter sense.

Besides, in the Charts of Crete (Smith, p. 94. Howson, p. 399), is a bay a little to the west of Lutro. This bay is marked Phineka. This is the modern Greek pronunciation of Φοινικα. And this bay looks κατὰ λίβα and κατὰ χῶρον.

May not it be the Φοῖνιξ of St. Luke?

The coast has probably been changed by time; and if, as represented in the Charts, two streams flow into it, what is now a bay may have been formerly a safe harbour. (See Smith, p. 89.)

Facing, as it does, the S.W. and N.W., it would have protected the vessel from the E.N.E. wind, which soon after arose, and blew continuously for many days. In this respect it would have been εὔθετος πρὸς παραχείμασίαν. Perhaps, also, its nearness to the harbour of Lutro, where a ship would be sheltered from North-westerly and South-westerly winds, was a circumstance which, combined with others, made it more "commodious to winter in" than Fair Havens.

13. ὑποπνεύσαντος νότου] 'the south wind having sprung up.' This was a change; for from Cnidus to Fair Havens they had had N.W. winds. They hoped that the south wind would carry them round Cape Matala to Phœnice, which lay to NN.W. of Fair Havens.

— ἄραντες] sc. ἀγκύρας—they weighed anchor, and were coasting more closely than before (so Winer, § 35, p. 217, and Meyer) along Crete, ἄσσον = πλησίον, ἐγγύς, Hesyc.; it is used by Josephus, Ant. i. 20. 1, τοὺς μὲν πρυμνήτας τοὺς δὲ λειπομένους ἄσσον ἐκέλευσε ἀκολουθεῖν. Antonin. Lib. fab. 41, βῆναι εἰς ἄσσον τῷ κυνί. Joseph. Ant. xix. 2. 4. Herod. 4. 3, ἰέναι ἄσσον αὐτῶν, add. vii. 233. Conjungendum autem est ἄσσον cum παρελέγοντο·Lucian. H. V. 1, p. 657, τῇ ἐπιούσῃ δὲ, ἄραντες ἐπλέομεν πλησίον τῶν νεφῶν. (Kuin.)

14. ἔβαλε] See on Mark xiv. 72, and below, v. 41 ἐρείσασα, and v. 43 ἀποῤῥίψαντας.

— κατ' αὐτῆς] Κρήτης, from the heights of Mount Ida. Cp. Matt. viii. 32, κατὰ τοῦ κρημνοῦ.—αὐτῆς cannot refer (as some have thought) to the ship, which is called πλοῖον. Cp. on v. 41.

— Εὐρακύλων] So A and B*, and Vulg. and Cassiodor., which have "Euro-aquilo." This reading seems also to be confirmed by the Sahidic Version, which has Εὐρακήλων, and to have given rise to Εὐτρακήλων in the Coptic, and Εὐρακύκλων in the Armenian, and Aquilo in the Ethiopic Version.

Εὐρακύλων has been approved by Grotius, and ably defended by Bentley (On Free-thinking, pp. 98—100, ed. Camb. 1743), and by Mr. Smith, p. 98, and in his Dissertation, pp. 154—159, and it has been received by Lachm. and Bornemann.

Elz. has Εὐροκλύδων. G, H have Εὐροκλύδων. B has Εὐρυκλύδων.

St. Luke says that the word in question was the name of a wind (ἄνεμος, see also v. 15, τῷ ἀνέμῳ). But Euro-clydon is rather the name of a wave (κλύδων) than of a wind.

Besides, the writer says, that the ἄνεμος was that which is called (ὁ καλούμενος) by the name in question. It was known by that name. If, then, Euroclydon were the true reading, it would probably be found somewhere as a name of a wind; but it no where occurs as such.

None of these objections apply to the reading Εὐρακύλων. The wind, Εὐρακύλων, in Latin, Euro-aquilo, was the name given by Mariners, especially Italians, to what the Ancient Greeks called Καικίας, which was the wind between Eurus and Aquilo, i.e. is the E.N.E. wind in the Roman compass; and therefore called Euro-aquilo by the Roman seamen, as Euro-notus and Euro-auster, similar compounds, were used to designate the S.E.

It may be said that the proper etymological form of the word in the text would be Εὐροακύλων. And it is not improbable that that is the true reading. The confusion of ΕΤΡΟΑΚΤΑΩΝ and ΕΤΡΟΚΑΤΑΩΝ is a very easy one, and likely to be made by the Copyists, who would be more familiar with the word κλύδων than with ἀκύλων.

As has been well shown by Mr. Smith, p. 98, the effect of an E.N.E. wind, would have been precisely such as is described by St. Luke to have been produced on the ship.

15. ἐπιδόντες ἐφερόμεθα] 'we gave the ship to the gale, and scudded before it.' "Ad ἐπιδόντες supplendum τὸ πλοῖον, quod præcessit. Heliod. Æthiop. i. 3, τοῦ κυβερνήτου ἐνδόντος (scl. τὸ πλοῖον) τῷ ἀνέμῳ. Plutarch. de fortuna Rom. p. 319. Cæsar ad navis gubernatorem fluctus vehementiores timentem, τόλμα, καὶ δέδιθι μηδὲν, ἀλλὰ ἐπιδίδου τῇ τύχῃ τὰ ἱστία, καὶ δέχου τὸ πνεῦμα, τῷ πνέοντι πιστεύων, ὅτι Καίσαρα φέρεις καὶ τὴν Καίσαρος τύχην. Herod. iii. 10, ἐφέροντο κατὰ κῦμα καὶ ἄνεμον." (Kuin.)

16. ὑποδραμόντες] Having run under the lee of a little island called Claudé, in order to have stiller water, and to be sheltered from the wind, so as to be enabled to hoist up the boat (which was towed after the ship), and to lash it on board; and to undergird the ship, to keep its timbers together, and to equip it better for the storm. Their next care was to lower the sail and bring down her spars and rigging. Cp. Kitto, p. 439.

— Κλαύδην] So A (probably) and G, H; but B has Καύδα, and S. Jerome has Cauden, and this, it seems, is the true reading. The modern name of the island is Gozzo,—a corruption of Κλαῦδος and Gaudus, the name given it by Ptolemy, iii. 7, and Mela, ii. 7, and Plin. iv. 20, "dextrâ Cretam habenti contra Hierapytnam Gaudos." It lies about twenty miles to the South of Crete.

— μόλις] 'with difficulty' (vv. 7 and 8), because of the high sea, and because the boat was probably full of water, and also "because the ship must have been rounded with her head to the wind and her sails trimmed, so that she had no head-way." (Smith.)

— περικρατεῖς γ. τ. σκάφης] To get possession of the boat ἄραντες, βοηθείαις ἐχρῶντο ὑποζωννύντες τὸ πλοῖον· φοβούμενοί τε μὴ εἰς τὴν Σύρτιν ἐκπέσωσι, χαλάσαντες τὸ σκεῦος, οὕτως ἐφέροντο. 18 Σφοδρῶς δὲ e Job 2. 4. Jonah 1. 5. χειμαζομένων ἡμῶν, τῇ ἑξῆς ἐκβολὴν ἐποιοῦντο· 19 καὶ τῇ τρίτῃ [e] αὐτόχειρες τὴν σκευὴν τοῦ πλοίου ἔῤῥιψαν· 20 μήτε δὲ ἡλίου μήτε ἄστρων ἐπιφαινόντων ἐπὶ πλείονας ἡμέρας, χειμῶνός τε οὐκ ὀλίγου ἐπικειμένου, λοιπὸν περιῃρεῖτο πᾶσα ἐλπὶς τοῦ σώζεσθαι ἡμᾶς. 21 Πολλῆς τε ἀσιτίας ὑπαρχούσης, τότε σταθεὶς f ver. 10. 13.

ὁ Παῦλος ἐν μέσῳ αὐτῶν εἶπεν, [f] Ἔδει μὲν, ὦ ἄνδρες, πειθαρχήσαντάς μοι μὴ ἀνάγεσθαι ἀπὸ τῆς Κρήτης, κερδῆσαί τε τὴν ὕβριν ταύτην καὶ τὴν ζημίαν.
g Job 22. 29. Ps. 112. 7. 2 Cor. 4. 8, 9.
22 Καὶ τανῦν [g] παραινῶ ὑμᾶς εὐθυμεῖν· ἀποβολὴ γὰρ ψυχῆς οὐδεμία ἔσται h ch. 23. 11. Heb. 1. 14. i Deut. 32. 9. Ps. 135. 4. Isa. 44. 5. Mal. 3. 17. John 17. 9, 10. 1 Cor. 6. 20. ἐξ ὑμῶν, πλὴν τοῦ πλοίου. 23 Παρέστη γάρ μοι ταύτῃ τῇ νυκτὶ [h] τοῦ Θεοῦ, [i] οὗ εἰμὶ, ᾧ καὶ λατρεύω, ἄγγελος, 24 λέγων, Μὴ φοβοῦ, Παῦλε, Καίσαρί σε
k ch. 28. 1.
δεῖ παραστῆναι· καὶ ἰδοὺ, κεχάρισταί σοι ὁ Θεὸς πάντας τοὺς πλέοντας μετὰ σοῦ. 25 Διὸ εὐθυμεῖτε, ἄνδρες· πιστεύω γὰρ τῷ Θεῷ, ὅτι οὕτως ἔσται καθ' ὃν τρόπον λελάληταί μοι· 26 [k] εἰς νῆσον δέ τινα δεῖ ἡμᾶς ἐκπεσεῖν. 27 Ὡς δὲ τεσσαρεσκαιδεκάτη νὺξ ἐγένετο, διαφερομένων ἡμῶν ἐν τῷ Ἀδρίᾳ, κατὰ μέσον τῆς νυκτὸς ὑπενόουν οἱ ναῦται προσάγειν τινὰ αὐτοῖς χώραν. 28 Καὶ βολίby hoisting it with cables thrown round (περὶ) it. And yet all this was labour lost, because afterwards the boat, which had been hoisted on board with difficulty, was allowed to fall off (v. 32).

---

17. βοηθείαις] Stays and braces to keep the ship together. (Arist. Rhet. ii. 5.)

— ὑποζωννύντες] Undergirding by "cables passed round the hull or frame of the ship,"—commonly called "frapping it,"—lest, by the straining of her planks and timbers, the vessel should leak and founder. (Smith, p. 106. Howson, pp. 373. 405.)

— τὴν Σύρτιν] the Lesser Syrtis, or African quick-sand, to the s.w. of Crete.

— χαλάσαντες τὸ σκεῦος] A difficult expression. Chrys. interprets it τὰ ἱστία, al. τὸ ἱστίον. The Syriac renders it velum, and Bede 'laxantes antennas.' Vulg. has 'submisso vase.'

The neuter singular σκεῦος, which occurs frequently in N. T. (Luke viii. 16. John xix. 29. Acts ix. 15; x. 11. 1 Thess. iv. 4. 1 Pet. iii. 7. Cp. Vorst. de Hebr. pp. 29—33), denotes some single object, and as such is distinguished from the feminine σκευή, supellex. And σκεῦος, with the definite Article, as here, signifies some special object of importance,—that which might be called κατ' ἐξοχὴν τὸ σκεῦος.

Sailors, acquainted with the practice of ancient navigation, are best qualified to determine what that special object would be. On critical grounds we might be led to render it 'the main-yard and sail.' Some sail would doubtless be necessary to work the vessel on the starboard tack, i. e. with the right side to windward, so as to keep her off the quick-sand; but a press of canvas such as would not do any harm while they were under the lee of Claudé or Gozzo, would be attended with danger in such a tempestuous gale as that which had overtaken them; and therefore they might be constrained χαλᾷν, i. e. to lower—not to furl or reef, but to lower with ropes (see the use of χαλᾷν Mark ii. 4. Luke v. 4. Acts ix. 25; xxvii. 30. 2 Cor. xi. 33), τὸ σκεῦος, the main-yard and its sail. This is nearly the interpretation of the ancient Expositors; and it is confirmed by a passage of Seneca (Ep. 77): "Quoties ventus increbuit, majorque est quàm expedit, antenna submittitur (i. e. χαλᾶται); minùs habet virium flatus ex humili."

18. ἐκβολήν] They were casting out the freight, to lighten the ship while it was tossed by the storm. See LXX, Jonah i. 5, ἐφοβήθησαν οἱ ναυτικοὶ, καὶ ἐκβολὴν ἐποιήσαντο τῶν σκευῶν τῶν ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν, τοῦ κουφισθῆναι ἀπ' αὐτῶν. They lost their freight, as St. Paul had prophesied v. 10; but, as St. Aug. says (in Ps. 132), "Paulus in corde ferebat patrimonium fidei suæ, quod nullis fluctibus, nullis tempestatibus potuit auferri." He had learnt "opus esse mercibus quæ cum naufrago enatent."

On the ἐκβολὴ resorted to in a storm, see Blomf. Æschyl. S. c. T. 775, πρόπρυμνα δ' ἐκβολὰν φέρειν ἀνδρῶν ἀλφηστᾶν ὄλβος ἄγαν παχυνθείς.

19. τὴν σκευήν] The furniture (not nautical tackle), beds, tables, &c.

— ἔῤῥιψαν] So A, B, C.—Elz. ἐῤῥίψαμεν.

21. ἀσιτίας] Anxiety and fear had taken away all appetite for food, and had produced nausea and disgust for it.

— σταθεὶς ὁ Παῦλος ἐν μέσῳ] The storm, by God's permission, was raised by the Prince of the Power of the Air (Eph. ii. 2) against the ship that was carrying the Gospel to Italy and Rome; and, humanly speaking, it would have overwhelmed it (v. 20).

But it was made subservient by God's overruling Providence, to display the courage of the Apostle, and the power of divine grace, which enabled him to remain firm and intrepid in the tempest, and to inspire others with hope.

The Ship may be compared to the Church, tossed by storms, in her course over the waters of this world. These tempests try the faith, and patience, and courage, of all who, like St. Paul, are strong in grace, and suffer for Christ. They serve to exercise and to prove them, and to manifest the work of the Holy Spirit in their hearts. Perhaps the most effective sermon that St. Paul ever preached was in this storm. Its power will never cease to be felt by those who read the record of it here. And it may serve to fill the heart of every devout reader with comfort and trust, that every Tempest of Persecution which is excited by Satan against the Ship of the Church, will be made eventually conducive to the furtherance of the Gospel, and to the eternal welfare and happiness of God's faithful servants, and to the greater manifestation of His Love, Power, and Glory.

— κερδῆσαι] θησαυρίζεις ὀργὴν, Rom. ii. 5. So κερδαίνειν κακὰ, εὑρεῖν ὄλεθρον. Bentley on Phalaris, pp. 255, 256. Here again the Authorized Version has been censured without reason by some. (Howson, p. 411.)

23. τοῦ Θεοῦ] Elz. places ἄγγελος before τοῦ Θεοῦ, but A, B, C, place ἄγγελος after λατρεύω. And this appears to be the better reading. In speaking to Gentiles who had no notion of the ministry of Angels, it is not probable that St. Paul would have used the word Angel otherwise than subsequently and subordinately to God.

27. διαφερομένων ἡμῶν] It cannot, therefore, be assumed (as has been done), that the Wind continued alway the same.—διαφέρεσθαι means 'to be carried in different directions.' See xiii. 49.

— Ἀδρίᾳ] Ἰόνιον πέλαγος, ὁ νῦν Ἀδρίας, Hesych. So Strabo, ii. p. 185, and other passages quoted by Howson, p. 426, showing that writers contemporary with St. Luke apply the term Adria and Adriatic to that part of the Mediterranean which lies between Greece and Sicily, i.e. the Ionian Sea; and distinguish between Adria and the Adriatic Gulf, or Gulf of Venice. (Ignat. Mart. 5.)

Compare the account given by Josephus (Vit. 3), of his own dangerous voyage to Rome, βαπτισθέντος τοῦ πλοίου κατὰ μέσον τὸν Ἀδρίαν, and of his safe arrival at Puteoli, after the ship in which he was, containing 600 souls, had been lost, and eighty of them were taken on board by a vessel from Cyrene, in Africa, going to Italy.

— προσάγειν αὐτοῖς χώραν] "Lucas opticè loquitur, nautarum more. Val. Flacc. ii. 8, 'jam longa recessit Sepias.' Virg. Æn. iii. 72, 'Provehimur portu: terræque urbesque recedunt.' Ovid. Met. vi. 513, 'Admotumque fretum remis, tellusque repulsa est.' Cic. Quæst. Acadd. iv. 25, 'videsne navem illam? stare nobis videtur: at iis, qui in navi sunt, moveri hæc villa.' Achill. Tat. ii. 32, γῆν γὰρ ἐωρῶμεν ἀπὸ τῆς νηὸς κατὰ μικρὸν ἀναχωροῦσαν, ὡς αὐτὴν πλέουσαν." (Kuin.) σαντες εὗρον ὀργυιὰς εἴκοσι· βραχὺ δὲ διαστήσαντες, καὶ πάλιν βολίσαντες, εὗρον ὀργυιὰς δεκαπέντε· 29 φοβούμενοί τε μήπως κατὰ τραχεῖς τόπους ἐκπέσωμεν, ἐκ πρύμνης ῥίψαντες ἀγκύρας τέσσαρας, ηὔχοντο ἡμέραν γενέσθαι. 30 Τῶν δὲ ναυτῶν ζητούντων φυγεῖν ἐκ τοῦ πλοίου, καὶ χαλασάντων τὴν σκάφην εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν, προφάσει ὡς ἐκ πρώρας μελλόντων ἀγκύρας ἐκτείνειν, 31 εἶπεν ὁ Παῦλος τῷ ἑκατοντάρχῃ καὶ τοῖς στρατιώταις· Ἐὰν μὴ οὗτοι μείνωσιν ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ, ὑμεῖς σωθῆναι οὐ δύνασθε. 32 Τότε οἱ στρατιῶται ἀπέκοψαν τὰ σχοινία τῆς σκάφης, καὶ εἴασαν αὐτὴν ἐκπεσεῖν. 33 Ἄχρι δὲ οὗ ἔμελλεν ἡμέρα γίνεσθαι, παρεκάλει ὁ Παῦλος ἅπαντας μεταλαβεῖν τροφῆς, λέγων, Τεσσαρεσκαιδεκάτην σήμερον ἡμέραν προσδοκῶντες ἄσιτοι διατελεῖτε, μηδὲν προσλαβόμενοι. 34 [l] Διὸ παρακαλῶ ὑμᾶς μεταλαβεῖν τροφῆς· τοῦτο γὰρ πρὸς τῆς ὑμετέρας σωτηρίας ὑπάρχει· οὐδενὸς γὰρ ὑμῶν θριξ ἐκ τῆς κεφαλῆς ἀπολεῖται. 35 [m] Εἰπὼν δὲ ταῦτα, καὶ λαβὼν ἄρτον, εὐχαρίστησε τῷ Θεῷ ἐνώπιον πάντων, καὶ κλάσας ἤρξατο ἐσθίειν. 36 Εὔθυμοι δὲ γενόμενοι πάντες, καὶ αὐτοὶ προσελάβοντο τροφῆς. 37 [n] ἦμεθα δὲ αἱ πᾶσαι ψυχαὶ ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ διακόσιαι ἑβδομήκοντα ἕξ. 38 Κορεσθέντες δὲ τροφῆς ἐκούφιζον τὸ πλοῖον, ἐκβαλλόμενοι τὸν σῖτον εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν. 39 Ὅτε δὲ ἡμέρα ἐγένετο, τὴν γῆν οὐκ ἐπεγίνωσκον· κόλπον δέ τινα κατενόουν ἔχοντα αἰγιαλὸν, εἰς ὃν ἐβουλεύοντο, εἰ δύναιντο, ἐξῶσαι τὸ πλοῖον. 40 Καὶ τὰς ἀγκύρας περιελόντες εἴων εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν, ἅμα ἀνέντες τὰς ζευκτηρίας τῶν πηδαλίων, καὶ ἐπl 1 Kings 1. 52. Matt. 10. 30. Luke 12. 7. & 21. 18.

m 1 Sam. 9. 13. John 6. 11. 1 Tim. 4. 3.

n ch. 2. 41. & 7. 14. Rom. 13. 1. 1 Pet. 3. 20.

---

29. ἐκ πρύμνης ῥίψαντες ἀγκύρας τέσσαρας] They cast four anchors from the stern; a circumstance which has perplexed Modern critics and sailors; but has been successfully explained by reference to the structure of Ancient Ships. They were alike at both ends, and had only paddle-rudders (πηδάλια, v. 40), one on either quarter, which could be triced up, and had hawseholes at the stern.

Besides, the ship in which St. Paul was, was not running, but hove to, when she anchored; and the design was to cut the cables (v. 40), and run the ship on the beach at daylight. (Smith, pp. 200, 201.)

In anchoring by the stern the paddle-rudders were lifted out of the water, and lashed together tightly by their ζευκτηρίαι (v. 40), and the rudder-ports or rudder-cases served for hawseholes to the anchors.

30. ἀγκύρας ἐκτείνειν] i. e. under pretence that, being in the boat, into which they would take anchors and their cables, they would stretch them forth (ἐκτείνειν) from the bow, so as to steady the ship pitching in the sea.

32. εἴασαν αὐτὴν ἐκπεσεῖν] a striking proof of St. Paul's power over the minds of the Roman soldiers. The first portion of the Voyage had been characterized by opposition to his advice (v. 11); the latter is distinguished by compliance with it.

Such, in brief, is the history, past and future, of the Gospel of Christ.

34. μεταλαβεῖν] So A, B, C.—Elz. προσλαβεῖν.

— ἀπολεῖται] So A, B, C, and many Cursives and Versions. Elz. πεσεῖται.

35. εὐχαρίστησε] he gave thanks, as if what God had promised (v. 24) had been already fulfilled. Observe his faith in the storm—and see its effects on others (vv. 36, 37).

The words λαβὼν ἄρτον, εὐχαρίστησε, καὶ κλάσας, compared with Luke xxii. 19, 20, and 1 Cor. xi. 23, are remarkable, and suggest that this act may have been also a celebration of the Holy Eucharist.

38. τὸν σῖτον] not the corn—with which it was laden; for, if it was a cornship, that, viz. its freight, had been cast out before (v. 18), but their provisions. As Chrys. observes, such was their confidence in St. Paul, that they even cast out their victuals.

39. αἰγιαλόν] a beach,—without rocks.

40. τὰς ἀγκύρας περιελόντες] having cut the cables of the four anchors, by which the ship had been held during the night; and thus abandoned them to the sea (see v. 29, εἰς θάλασσαν), in which they were left, by being cut off. The sense of περιελόντες is clear from περιηρεῖτο (v. 20).

St. Luke's design in this narrative appears to be to show, that all human aids or appliances were of no use in the storm, and were even discarded as such by the crew. The reader will observe the climax in the enumeration of the successive acts of abandonment,—

(1) They cast overboard the freight (v. 18).

(2) They cast overboard with their own hands the furniture (σκευὴν) of the ship (v. 19).

(3) They cut off the boat, in which many of them had intended to escape (vv. 30. 32).

(4) They cast their provisions out of the ship into the sea (v. 38).

(5) They abandoned their anchors to the sea.

We hear nothing more of the κυβερνήτης and ναύκληρος, who had opposed St. Paul (v. 11). He alone stands forth unmoved in the storm. The crew discarded as useless their ordinary helps; and "all hope that they should be saved had been taken away" (v. 20).

But they had St. Paul and his Mission on board; and they all came safe to land. "Noli timere, Cæsaris fortunas vehis," was the saying of Julius Cæsar to the panic-struck mariner in the Adriatic; "Nolite timere, CHRISTI Evangelium vehitis," might have been that of St. Paul.

40. ἅμα ἀνέντες τὰς ζευκτηρίας τῶν πηδαλίων] The ship was not steered, as modern vessels are, by a single rudder moving on hinges at the stern, but by two πηδάλια (from πῆδα, oars; see the Editor's note on Theocritus xxi. 10, whence the English paddle), one on either quarter of the stern. This pair of πηδάλια, so arranged, may be seen represented in ancient coins, pictures, and other monuments, in Smith, pp. 183. 193, 194. 198, 199. Cp. Heliodor. 5, p. 241, τῶν δὲ πηδαλίων θάτερον ἀποβαλόντες. Lucian. Toxari, p. 51, τοῦ σκάφους ἤδη πλέοντες ἐκκρεμαννύμενοι τῶν πηδαλίων, and Navig. 5, tom. iii. p. 252, ἀνθρωπίσκος λεπτῇ κάμακι τὰ πηδάλια περιστρέφων. Ælian. H. V. ix. 40, ὅτι Καρχηδόνιοι, δύο κυβερνήτας εἰσῆγον εἰς τὴν ναῦν, ἄτοπον λέγοντες εἶναι, δύο μὲν πηδάλια ἔχειν κ.τ.λ.

When the vessel was anchored by the stern, as this had been (v. 29), these two πηδάλια were lifted out of the water, and were lashed together by the ζεῦγλαι, which seem to have bound them together habitually, thence called here al ζευκτηρίαι, the rudder-bands; and were capable of being tightened or loosened as need required. Cp. Eurip. Helen. 1536, πηδάλιά τε ζεύγλαισι παρακαθίετο, i. e. the rudder-paddles were let down at the sides of the ship (παρακαθίετο) by bands (ζεῦγλαι).

These ζευκτηρίαι, by which the πηδάλια had been lifted up out of the water and braced tightly together, were now loosened (ἀνέθησαν), so that the πηδάλια descended into the water, and were ready for use to steer the ship on to the beach.

The ancient Christian Fathers seem to have found special delight in comparing the Church to a Ship; and the reader may not be displeased with the insertion in this place of the following eloquent passage from S. Hippolytus, Bishop of Portus, near Rome (de Antichristo, § 9), which illustrates what has been said concerning the two rudders, and also throws some light on other portions of St. Luke's narrative; where, in many respects, the o 2 Cor. 11. 25. ἄραντες τὸν ἀρτέμωνα τῇ πνεούσῃ κατεῖχον εἰς τὸν αἰγιαλόν. 41 ° Περιπεσόντες δὲ εἰς τόπον διθάλασσον ἐπώκειλαν τὴν ναῦν· καὶ ἡ μὲν πρῶρα ἐρείσασα ἔμεινεν ἀσάλευτος, ἡ δὲ πρύμνα ἐλύετο ὑπὸ τῆς βίας τῶν κυμάτων. 42 Τῶν δὲ στρατιωτῶν βουλὴ ἐγένετο, ἵνα τοὺς δεσμώτας ἀποκτείνωσι, μή τις ἐκκολυμp 2 Cor. 11. 25. βήσας διαφύγῃ. 43 Ὁ δὲ ἑκατόνταρχος P βουλόμενος διασῶσαι τὸν Παῦλον ἐκώλυσεν αὐτοὺς τοῦ βουλήματος, ἐκέλευσέ τε τοὺς δυναμένους κολυμβᾷν, Alexandrine Vessel carrying St. Paul, and tossed by violent storms, affords a lively picture of the Christian Church.

Θάλασσά ἐστιν ὁ Κόσμος, ἐν ᾧ ἡ Ἐκκλησία, ὡς ναῦς ἐν πελάγει, χειμάζεται μὲν, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀπόλυται· ἔχει μὲν γὰρ μεθ' ἑαυτῆς τὸν ἔμπειρον Κυβερνήτην ΧΡΙΣΤΟΝ, φέρει δὲ ἐν μέσῳ καὶ τὸ τροπαῖον κατὰ τοῦ θανάτου ὡς τὸν (read ὡς ἱστὸν, i. e. like a mast) σταυρὸν τοῦ Κυρίου βαστάζουσα· ἐστὶ γὰρ αὐτῆς πρῶρα μὲν ἡ ἀνατολὴ, πρύμνα δὲ ἡ δύσις, τὸ δὲ κοῖλον μεσημβρία· οἴακες δὲ αἱ δύο Διαθῆκαι (the two Testaments are her two πηδάλια, by which she steers her course). Σχοινία δὲ περιτεταμένα ἡ ἀγάπη τοῦ Χριστοῦ σφίγγουσα τὴν Ἐκκλησίαν (here is a reference to the use of cables for girding the ship and bracing its timbers together; cp. above, v. 17) πλοῖον δὲ ὁ φέρει (the σκάφη, or boat; cp. above, vv. 16. 30. 32) μεθ' ἑαυτῆς τὸ λουτρὸν τῆς παλιγγενεσίας, ἀναπεύσης τοὺς πιστεύοντας (probably the font of baptism is compared to the boat, as conveying and admitting the crew and passengers into the ship). Ὅθεν δὲ ταῦτα λαμπρὰ, πάρεστιν ὡς πνεῦμα, τὸ ἀπ' οὐρανῶν, δι' οὗ σφραγίζονται οἱ πιστεύοντες τῷ Θεῷ· παρέπονται δὲ αὐτῇ ἄγκυραι σιδηραῖ, αὐταὶ τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἁγίαι ἐντολαὶ, δυναταὶ (i. e. powerful and stedfast) ὡς σίδηρος· ἔχει δὲ καὶ ναύτας δεξιοὺς καὶ εὐωνύμους ἁγίους ἀγγέλους παρέδρους, δι' ὧν ἀεὶ κρατεῖται καὶ φρουρεῖται ἡ Ἐκκλησία. Κλίμαξ ἐν αὐτῇ, εἰς ὕψος ἀνάγουσα ἐπὶ τὸ κέρας, εἰκὼν σημείου πάθους Χριστοῦ, ἕλκουσα τοὺς πιστοὺς εἰς ἀνάβασιν οὐρανῶν, i. e. the ship's ladder which conveys aloft to the summit of (the mast), is an image or resemblance of the sign of the Passion of Christ (i. e. of the Holy Eucharist), which draws the faithful up to the ascent of heaven.

Ψηφαροὶ δὲ ἐπὶ τὸ κέρας ἐφ' ὑψηλοῦ αἰνούμενοι τάξις προφητῶν, μαρτύρων τε, καὶ ἀποστόλων εἰς βασιλείαν Χριστοῦ ἀναπαυομένων. Instead of ψηφαροὶ αἰνούμενοι read ψήφαρα αἰωρούμενα. Ψήφαρα are the Latin suppara, Senec. Ep. 77, in Medeâ, 325. Lucan, v. 429, "Summa suppara velorum;" or, as Tertullian calls them (Apol. 16, ad Nation. 12), siphara (ψήφαρα), i. e. top-sails (cp. Smith, pp. 152. 195). And the Author means to say that the topsails, which are raised aloft to the summit of the mast, and are set there, remind him of the order of Prophets, and Martyrs, and Apostles glorified, and resting in bliss, in the kingdom of Christ.

A similar comparison of the Church to a Ship may be seen in a treatise in Montfaucon's S. Chrysostom, vi. tom. vi. p. cv: "Quamvis infestatione Inimici Ecclesia ab sæculi tempestatibus laboret, quibusvis tentationibus pulsetur, naufragium facere non potest, quia Filium Dei habet Gubernatorem: navigat enim fidei gubernaculo, felici cursu per hujus sæculi mare, habens Deum Gubernatorem, Angelos remiges, portans choros omnium sanctorum, erectâ in medio ipsâ salutari arbore crucis, in quâ evangelicæ fidei vela suspendens, flante Spiritu Sancto, vehitur ad portum Paradisi, et securitatem quietis æternæ."

— τὸν ἀρτέμωνα] So A, B, C, and Caten., p. 405.—Elz. ἀρτέμονα: the 'small sail' (Syriac), the foresail fixed at the prow on a bowsprit. See Juvenal, xii. 68, describing a ship in a storm:

"———— Inopi miserabilis arte cucurrit
Vestibus extensis, et quod superaverat unum Velo prora suo," which the old Scholiast explains, "Artemone solo velificaverunt." Cp. Isidor. Orig. xix. 3, as emended by Mr. Smith, p. 192, "Dolon est minimum velum, et ad proram defixum Artemo dirigendæ potiùs navis causâ commendatum (commendatur?) quàm celeritate," or, as Bede says here, "Artemon est modicum velum, dirigendæ" &c., as in Isidore. Hence the Roman Lawyers said, (Labeo, Digest. 50, tit. 16, leg. 242), "Malum navis esse partem, Artemonem autem non esse" (Meyer), and cp. Böckh (Urkunden des Attischen Seewesens, p. 140), who rightly calls it the smallest sail.

They let the vessel drive before the breeze, by a single small sail. All these incidents are mentioned with so much minuteness by St. Luke, in order to show that vain was the help of man, and that their preservation (and they were all preserved) was due, not to any human means, but to God's mercy alone, especially to his faithful servant and prisoner, St. Paul (see v. 24).

Doubtless also the Holy Spirit in dictating this beautiful narrative, designed to suggest the reflection, that whenever and wheresoever it is God's will that the Gospel shall be preached, no storms raised by the Evil One against Christ's Church can obstruct her course; and that though all human aids fail her, though the material vessel is split in fragments, and scattered over the waves,—though the earth itself is wrecked and dissolved,—He can bring her and hers by a single Artemon to shore.

41. περιπεσόντες] this word does not indicate human contrivance, but a περιπέτεια of Divine Providence. They had selected a creek having a beach, into which they desired, if possible, to thrust in the ship (v. 39). But this would not have been effected unless they had fallen into a τόπος διθάλασσος. This may be explained from reference to the Chart of St. Paul's Bay, Malta (Smith, 124. Howson, 422), where is the small island Salmonetta, which produces a current that would carry a ship into a small cove in the τόπος διθάλασσος, which, by its approximation to the shore, the island makes between itself and the beach [1].

"The sea rushing into the Bay from the N.E. strikes against the outer point of this small island, which causes it to divide and meet again at the inner point, in a small Cove, where any Ship-Master would run his ship, if in distress, and unable to get off the sand." (Cole.)

— τὴν ναῦν] they thrust in the ναῦν. Observe the word ναῦν, not πλοῖον, which had hitherto been the word used throughout the narrative; πλοῖον occurs thirteen times in this chapter, and the word ναῦς had never been used as yet;

Indeed, the present is the only place where the word ναῦς is found in the New Testament;

There is a great force in it here. The vessel had formerly been a noble πλοῖον, for sailing (εἰς τὸ πλεῖν); but now that it has lost its freight, its tackle, its boat, its provisions, its anchors, its all—it is reduced to a ναῦς, a hull, not fit to sail, πλεῖν, but only νεῖν, to swim.

— ἡ πρύμνα ἐλύετο] the stern was going to pieces, while the foreship stuck fast.

St. Paul had been already in three shipwrecks before this (2 Cor. xi. 25). How little, after all, do we know of the great Apostle's sufferings for Christ!

[1] The following is from the Sailing Directory, 1834:—

ST. PAUL'S BAY.—This is divided from Melleha Bay by the Peninsula of Salmona, on the hilly part of which stands a square building, commonly called the Salmona Palace; and at the extremity of this peninsula is a low and irregularly-formed island, named Salmona Island, already noticed; this constitutes the northern part of St. Paul's Bay. There are a few rocks at its eastern point, extending outward nearly half a cable's length; and at the distance of a cable's length you will have clear ground, with from ten to fourteen fathoms.

The east end of Salmona Island, and the Point of Kauro, are distant from each other above one mile, and bear N.W. by W. and S.E. by E. (N.W.½N. and S.E.½S.), the bay running in W.S.W. (W.½S.). The depth of water between the island and the point is eighteen fathoms, from whence it lessens to fourteen, ten, eight, and at the further end three fathoms, where there are a sandy beach and a rivulet. About a quarter of a mile to the southward of Salmona Island is a patch of foul ground, over which the least depths are six and a half and seven fathoms. The harbour is open to easterly and north-easterly winds; but it is a safe place for small vessels, with good holding-ground; and so long as your cables will hold, your anchors will never drag. The best anchorage is abreast of the small cove on your starboard side going in, where you will find from six to ten fathoms, mud and clay. Small vessels may haul into the cove, and lash themselves together in a tier, having an anchor out to the SS. Eastward, and no winds can injure them.

Within Kauro Point you will see a small tower and battery, called the University; another battery, Elbena, stands three quarters of a mile further in, and beyond that is St. Paul's Tower. There are also three other batteries defending the Points of the Bay, two of which are situated near the beach at the bottom of the Bay. From Kauro Point the land runs S.E. by E. (S.E.½S.) for five miles, towards the Lighthouse of Valetta.

ἀποῤῥίψαντας πρώτους ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν ἐξιέναι· 44 καὶ τοὺς λοιποὺς, οὓς μὲν ἐπὶ σανίσιν, οὓς δὲ ἐπί τινων τῶν ἀπὸ τοῦ πλοίου· [q] καὶ οὕτως ἐγένετο πάντας διασωθῆναι ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν. q ver. 22. Ps. 107. 28—30.

XXVIII. 1 [a] Καὶ διασωθέντες τότε ἐπέγνωμεν ὅτι Μελίτη ἡ νῆσος καλεῖται. a ch. 27. 26.
2 [b] Οἵ τε βάρβαροι παρεῖχον οὐ τὴν τυχοῦσαν φιλανθρωπίαν ἡμῖν· ἅψαντες γὰρ πυρὰν, [c] προσελάβοντο πάντας ἡμᾶς διὰ τὸν ὑετὸν τὸν ἐφεστῶτα καὶ διὰ τὸ ψῦχος. 3 Συστρέψαντος δὲ τοῦ Παύλου φρυγάνων τι πλῆθος, καὶ ἐπιθέντος ἐπὶ τὴν πυρὰν, ἔχιδνα ἀπὸ τῆς θέρμης διεξελθοῦσα καθῆψε τῆς χειρὸς αὐτοῦ. b Rom. 1. 14. 1 Cor. 14. 11. Col. 3. 11. c Matt. 10. 42. Heb. 13. 2.
4 Ὡς δὲ εἶδον οἱ βάρβαροι κρεμάμενον τὸ θηρίον ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς αὐτοῦ, ἔλεγον πρὸς ἀλλήλους, [d] Πάντως φονεύς ἐστιν ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος, ὃν διασωθέντα ἐκ τῆς θαλάσσης ἡ δίκη ζῆν οὐκ εἴασεν. 5 [e] Ὁ μὲν οὖν ἀποτιναξάμενος τὸ θηρίον εἰς τὸ πῦρ ἔπαθεν οὐδὲν κακόν. 6 [f] Οἱ δὲ προσεδόκων αὐτὸν μέλλειν πίμπρασθαι, ἢ καταπίπτειν ἄφνω νεκρόν· ἐπὶ πολὺ δὲ αὐτῶν προσδοκώντων, καὶ θεωρούντων μηδὲν ἄτοπον εἰς αὐτὸν γινόμενον, μεταβαλλόμενοι ἔλεγον αὐτὸν εἶναι θεόν. d John 7. 24. e Mark 16. 18. Luke 10. 19. f ch. 14. 11.

7 Ἐν δὲ τοῖς περὶ τὸν τόπον ἐκεῖνον ὑπῆρχε χωρία τῷ πρώτῳ τῆς νήσου, ὀνόματι Ποπλίῳ, ὃς ἀναδεξάμενος ἡμᾶς τρεῖς ἡμέρας φιλοφρόνως ἐξένισεν. 8 [g] Ἐγένετο δὲ τὸν πατέρα τοῦ Ποπλίου πυρετοῖς καὶ δυσεντερίῳ συνεχόμενον κατακεῖσθαι· πρὸς ὃν ὁ Παῦλος εἰσελθὼν καὶ προσευξάμενος, ἐπιθεὶς τὰς χεῖρας αὐτῷ, ἰάσατο αὐτόν. 9 Τούτου οὖν γενομένου, καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ οἱ ἔχοντες ἀσθενείας ἐν τῇ νήσῳ, προσήρχοντο καὶ ἐθεραπεύοντο· 10 οἳ καὶ πολλαῖς τιμαῖς ἐτίμησαν ἡμᾶς, καὶ ἀναγομένοις ἐπέθεντο τὰ πρὸς τὰς χρείας. g James 5. 14, 15.

11 Μετὰ δὲ τρεῖς μῆνας ἀνήχθημεν ἐν πλοίῳ παρακεχειμακότι ἐν τῇ νήσῳ, Ἀλεξανδρίνῳ, παρασήμῳ Διοσκούροις· 12 καὶ καταχθέντες εἰς Συρακούσας,

---

44. πάντας διασωθῆναι] Perhaps some were saved spiritually by the evidence they had seen of Paul's prophetic power (see vv. 10. 22. 26), and by being led thereby, and by his miracles (xxviii. 9, 10) to listen to the Gospel; and thus the storm in Adria brought them to an eternal calm.

CH. XXVIII. 1. ἐπέγνωμεν] So A, B, C.—Elz. ἐπέγνωσαν.

— Μελίτη] Malta. The theories which suppose this to be any other than Malta, and particularly to be Melida in the Adriatic Gulf, seem to proceed from a misunderstanding of the word Ἀδρία in xxvii. 27, and from other similar misconceptions. See Biscoe, p. 67. Smith, Dissertation ii. p. 160. Howson, p. 426. It is by no means probable that an Alexandrine ship on its way toward Rome (v. 11), would be found wintering at an island in the Gulf of Venice; but it would be very likely to winter at Malta.

2. οἱ βάρβαροι] Rom. i. 14. 1 Cor. xiv. 11. People who spoke a strange language, i. e. neither Greek nor Latin. Ovid, Trist. v. 10. 37, "Barbarus hic ego sum, quia non intelligor ulli." Hence the dialect here was probably African or Phœnician. (Rosenm., Kuin., Biscoe. Prof. Blunt on Duties of Parish Priest, p. 48.) The Greeks called all others, even the Romans, βαρβάρους. "Barbari antiquitùs omnes dicebantur exceptis Græcis." (Festus.)

As the Jews called all Gentiles Greeks, so the Romans and Greeks called all others barbarous.

By calling the Maltese βάρβαροι, St. Luke shows that he is writing as a Hellenist to Hellenists.

And here, and v. 10, St. Luke draws silently a contrast between the kindness of these so-called barbarians, and the conduct of those who despised the rest of the world as barbarous, and yet had treated St. Paul in a barbarous manner—the Jews and Romans at Cæsarea. We hear of no miracle wrought before Felix by St. Paul, in his two years imprisonment at Cæsarea, or before Festus and Agrippa; but he worked many miracles among these civilized barbarians.

— οὐ τὴν τυχοῦσαν] See above, xix. 11.

— ἅψαντες πυράν] into which the viper was afterwards cast; see on v. 4.

3. ἀπό] So A, B, C, G, H, and Caten. p. 407.—Elz. ἐκ. The sense is, the Viper had been taken up in the sticks by St. Paul, which were laid by him on the fire, and was driven forth from them (ἀπὸ τῆς θέρμης, by the force of the heat), and passed through them and seized on his hand.

4. οἱ βάρβαροι—ἔλεγον πρὸς ἀλλήλους] in their own tongue; neither Greek nor Latin (v. 2). This mention of what the barbarians said (viz. that St. Paul was a murderer, &c.), and which evidently they imagined would not be understood, is another silent evidence of power, in the Apostles and Evangelists, to understand and speak languages which they had not learnt, and were not supposed to know; just as they understood what was said in the Lycaonian dialect, and spoke it to the people at Lystra. See above, Acts xiv. 11, and on ii. 4.

— ἡ δίκη] rather it was the malice of the Evil One, who had hoped that St. Paul would perish in the storm, which he, as Prince of the power of the air (Eph. ii. 2), had been permitted by God to raise (cp. Job i. 12. 19), that he might defeat his mission to Rome. "Vipera fixit, Dæmonis arma gerens," says Arator (ii. 1157), and "Prædo venit,—sed præda jacet." The same God who delivered Paul from the sea, saved him from the serpent (see Christ's prophecy, Mark xvi. 18), and enabled him to cast it into the fire—a figurative and prophetic emblem of what awaits him who is the Old Serpent, the ὄφις ἀρχαῖος (Rev. xii. 9; xx. 2), the Enemy of the Church, which he endeavours to destroy by the storms of persecution (Rev. xii. 14, 15), and by the venom of heresy; and whose doom it will be to be cast εἰς λίμνην πυρός, into the lake of fire, Rev. xx. 10.

5. ἀποτιναξάμενος] 'having shaken off from himself.' So A, G, H.—Elz. has ἀποτινάξας.

6. θεόν] placed thus emphatically at the end of the sentence by A and B.—Elz. has θεὸν αὐτὸν εἶναι.

7. τῷ πρώτῳ] his official title, the πρῶτος Μελιταίων, or Primus Melitensium. See the Inscription in Biscoe, p. 67. Cp. Blunt, p. 48. Smith, 148. Howson, 425.

8. δυσεντερίῳ] So A, B, G, H. Cp. Lobeck, Phryn. p. 518.

— ἰάσατο] a reward for hospitality.

10. τιμαῖς ἐτίμησαν] with presents, gifts, and offerings (Chrys.). See 1 Tim. v. 17.

11. Διοσκούροις] The figures of the two sons of Jove, Castor and Pollux, the supposed patrons of sailors in the heathen world (Horat. Carm. i. 3. 2; iv. 8. 31. Catull. iv. 27. Theocrit. xxii. 1), which were at the prow's head, and were the insigne, by which the ship was known. On the insignia of ships, as distinct from their tutela, see Ruhnken's Dissertation, ed. 1771. Blomfield, Æschyl. S. c. Theb. 196.

It is the custom, says the Bishop of Alexandria (St. Cyril, in ἐπεμείναμεν ἡμέρας τρεῖς· 13 ὅθεν περιελθόντες κατηντήσαμεν εἰς Ῥήγιον, καὶ μετὰ μίαν ἡμέραν, ἐπιγενομένου νότου, δευτεραῖοι ἤλθομεν εἰς Ποτιόλους· 14 οὗ εὑρόντες ἀδελφοὺς, παρεκλήθημεν ἐπ' αὐτοῖς ἐπιμεῖναι ἡμέρας ἑπτά· καὶ οὕτως εἰς τὴν Ῥώμην ἤλθομεν. 15 Κἀκεῖθεν οἱ ἀδελφοὶ ἀκούσαντες τὰ περὶ ἡμῶν h ch. 21. 5. 3 John 6, 8. h ἐξῆλθον εἰς ἀπάντησιν ἡμῖν ἄχρις Ἀππίου φόρου καὶ Τριῶν ταβερνῶν· οὓς 1 Ps. 27. 14. ἰδὼν ὁ Παῦλος, εὐχαριστήσας τῷ Θεῷ i ἔλαβε θάρσος.

k ch. 24. 23. & 27. 3. 16 k Ὅτε δὲ ἤλθομεν εἰς Ῥώμην, ὁ ἑκατόνταρχος παρέδωκε τοὺς δεσμίους τῷ στρατοπεδάρχῃ· τῷ δὲ Παύλῳ ἐπετράπη μένειν καθ' ἑαυτὸν, σὺν τῷ φυλάσ-Caten. here), for Alexandrine vessels to have such figures as these on the right and left of the Prow.

St. Paul did not scruple to sail in a vessel with heathen deities for its insigne; and the Holy Spirit has vouchsafed to mention their name.

For what reasons?

(1) Perhaps to remove such scruples as troubled the mind of Tertullian (see his "De coronâ militis" and "De Idololatriâ") in ancient times, and of quakers and some others in modern, and to teach the nature of Christian Liberty (viz.), that Christians may freely and without sin communicate with idolaters in the common concerns of life, such as navigation, commerce, and language, &c. (1 Cor. v. 9, 10), although they must at the same time take care not to communicate with them in any act of idolatry (1 Cor. x. 21. 2 Cor. vi. 14—16. Eph. v. 11).

(2) To correct the spirit of self-righteousness which has made distinctions and differences in the Church, on the plea of conscientious objections to the use of certain words and names derived from heathen uses, such as the days of the week.

(3) To suggest the reflection, that the Gospel of Christ would appropriate and consecrate all things to itself;

The Gospel is presented to us in this divine history as sailing towards Rome in an Egyptian ship, with a heathen sign. S. Cyril quotes happily the LXX of Isa. xi. 14, speaking of Christian Missions, μετασθήσονται ἐν πλοίοις ἀλλοφύλων, θάλασσαν ἅμα προνομεύσουσι.

It is worthy of remark, that the ancient enemy of the Church of God, Egypt, was made to furnish two of the ships (Acts xxvii. 6; xxviii. 11) which conveyed the Apostle of the Gentiles, in his way to preach the Gospel to the great Metropolis of the Heathen world. The Gospel of the Son of God is carried in a ship with a Heathen sign, called from the sons of Jove. It was about to subdue heathen Rome, and to make the Mistress of the world pass under the mild yoke of the Cross. It was about to plant the cross of Christ in the centre of the blood-stained Colosseum, to erect the statues of Peter and Paul on the summits of its Egyptian obelisks, and to convert the Pantheon of Agrippa into a Christian Church.

Here is a striking prophecy and pledge of the future subjection of all earthly powers and opposing forces beneath the feet of Christ; and of the future manifestation of His Omnipotence in making them all subsidiary and subservient to the triumph of His Gospel.

13. περιελθόντες] not by a straight course, but tacking; the wind not being favourable, for it is added that after one day, the south wind (which was favourable) sprung up abaft (ἐπεγένετο), and so on the second day they arrived at Puteoli—a distance of 182 miles from Rhegium. On the rate of sailing of ancient ships, see Smith, p. 209, who understands δευτεραῖοι as equivalent to τῇ ἐξῆς ἡμέρᾳ.

— Ποτιόλους] 150 miles from Rome, now Pozzuoli, on the Bay of Naples, an ἐμπόριον μέγιστον, Strabo, v. p. 376; especially for Alexandrine Corn-Ships. (Seneca, Epist. 77.)

There is an interesting fact, recorded in connexion with Puteoli, in the Martyrdom of St. Ignatius the disciple of St. John (p. 568), viz. that, when on his way to his martyrdom at Rome, he was brought to Puteoli, he desired to land there in order that he might follow the steps of St. Paul (κατ' ἴχνος βαδίζειν θέλων τοῦ ἀποστόλου Παύλου); an incident confirming the genuineness and authenticity of the Acts, and perhaps, also, showing its influence in primitive times.

14. ἡμέρας ἑπτά] In order, probably, to spend a Lord's-Day with them. See above, on xxi. 27.

— οὕτως εἰς τὴν Ῥώμην ἦλθον.] An interesting and picturesque description of the route from Puteoli to Rome, may be seen in Howson, ii. 437—447. See also Sir W. Gell's Work on Rome and its Vicinity, and Nibby's Contorni di Roma.

15. οἱ ἀδελφοὶ – ἐξῆλθον] to meet Paul, from whom they had received an Epistle (that to the Romans) more than three years before.

— Ἀππίου φόρου καὶ Τριῶν ταβερνῶν] The former, "Appii Forum," a station marked in the Roman Itineraries as about thirty-three miles from Rome; the "Tres Tabernæ" twenty-three miles from Rome.

The former, Appii Forum, reminds the reader that they were on the "Appian Way." (See Sir W. Gell, art. "Via Appia.") Another suggestion, therefore, is here offered of the same glorious truth, as that stated above (v. 11).

These were two itinerary stations on the great Via Appia, the "Regina Viarum," the Queen of Roads (Cic. ad Att. ii. 10. Hor. Serm. i. 5. 3), on which Rome sent her armies through the Southern and Eastern regions of the world;

The conquests of the third monarchy (that of Alexander the Great. See Daniel ii. 39; vii. 6; viii. 8. 21) had provided a common language for the Gospel—Greek;

Alexandria, the great commercial capital of Egypt, and named from the great Conqueror himself, provided two ships to convey the great Apostle of the Gentiles toward Rome, the capital of the world;

The fourth great monarchy, the Roman, had made great military Roads in Europe and great part of Asia for her own conquests, as she thought; but in God's good purposes they became Highways for the Gospel. She stratified Europe. He evangelized it.

It is interesting to trace the progress of the Apostle on the great Roads of the Roman Empire, e. g. on the Via Egnatia, by which he is brought into Greece, and now on the Via Appia, by which he enters Rome.

The journeys of the Apostles and Apostolic Missionaries could not have been effected, had it not been for the engineering energy of heathen Rome, whom God employed as a κελευθοποιὸς for Christ. The Military Roads of her Legions were paths for the Prince of Peace.

Will not the world one day see similar results, in future conquests of the Gospel under God's Allwise and Almighty Providence, by means of Railroads and of Steam?

India herself is opening her arms. The great lines of her railways are doing the missionary work of the Baptist, the forerunner and herald of Christ (Isa. xl. 4). And as the ship bearing a heathen sign ("Castor and Pollux") carried the Apostle of the Gentiles to Italy, and the Basilicas and Temples at Rome have become Christian Churches, so the time may arrive when some of the magnificent Temples of India may be changed into Christian Cathedrals.

16. στρατοπεδάρχῃ] "Burrho, præfecto prætorio" (Pearson), i. e. if St. Paul arrived at Rome before the spring of A.D. 62, when Burrhus died. Tacit. Ann. xiv. 51, 52. Dio, 62, 13. Sueton. Ner. 35. Wieseler (p. 86), following Bp. Pearson (p. 389), infers that the words ὁ στρατοπεδάρχης intimate that there was only one Commander of the Prætorian Guard, or Imperial Household Troops, and that therefore St. Paul must have arrived before the death of Burrhus, i.e. the spring A.D. 62, after whom there were two στρατοπεδάρχαι (Tacit. Ann. xiv. 51). It may be so, but ὁ στρατοπεδάρχης might (as Meyer observes, pp. 18. 465) be used to indicate the Officer then on duty at the Palace.

It was a providential circumstance that prisoners who were sent, on Appeal to Rome, were consigned to the custody of the Chief of the Imperial Guard. See Joseph. Ant. xviii. 6. 6. Plin. Ep. x. 65. Thus St. Paul's bonds became manifest in Christ, ὅλῳ τῷ πραιτωρίῳ καὶ ἐν τοῖς λοιποῖς πᾶσι (Phil. i. 13), and the Gospel was brought home to the hearts of those of Cæsar's household (Phil. iv. 22).

It is probable that the πραιτώριον, of which the στρατοπεδάρχης had the command, was the barrack of the Guards, on the N.E. of the City, outside the walls, near the Porta Nomentana. See Tacit. Ann. iv. 2, and other authorities in Winer, ii. p. 330. Wieseler, p. 403. Lewin, p. 750, and Howson, ii. pp. 448. 510.

On the probability of St. Paul's communication through Burrhus with Seneca and others, see Hieron. Scrip. Eccl. 12. Burton, Lectures, pp. 261—267. Fabric. Cod. Apocr. p. 880. Bibl. Lat. ii. 121. Gieseler, § 26.

σοντι αὐτὸν στρατιώτῃ. 17 [l] Ἐγένετο δὲ μετὰ ἡμέρας τρεῖς συγκαλέσασθαι αὐτὸν τοὺς ὄντας τῶν Ἰουδαίων πρώτους· συνελθόντων δὲ αὐτῶν ἔλεγε πρὸς αὐτούς, Ἄνδρες ἀδελφοί, ἐγὼ οὐδὲν ἐναντίον ποιήσας τῷ λαῷ ἢ τοῖς ἔθεσι τοῖς πατρῴοις, δέσμιος ἐξ Ἰεροσολύμων παρεδόθην εἰς τὰς χεῖρας τῶν Ῥωμαίων 18 [m] οἵτινες ἀνακρίναντές με ἐβούλοντο ἀπολῦσαι, διὰ τὸ μηδεμίαν αἰτίαν θανάτου ὑπάρχειν ἐν ἐμοί. 19 [n] Ἀντιλεγόντων δὲ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἠναγκάσθην ἐπικαλέσασθαι Καίσαρα, οὐχ ὡς τοῦ ἔθνους μου ἔχων τι κατηγορῆσαι. 20 [o] Διὰ ταύτην οὖν τὴν αἰτίαν παρεκάλεσα ὑμᾶς ἰδεῖν καὶ προσλαλῆσαι· ἕνεκεν γὰρ τῆς ἐλπίδος τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ τὴν ἅλυσιν ταύτην περίκειμαι. 21 Οἱ δὲ πρὸς αὐτὸν εἶπον, Ἡμεῖς οὔτε γράμματα περὶ σοῦ ἐδεξάμεθα ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰουδαίας, οὔτε παραγενόμενός τις τῶν ἀδελφῶν ἀπήγγειλεν ἢ ἐλάλησέ τι περὶ σοῦ πονηρόν. 22 [p] Ἀξιοῦμεν δὲ παρὰ σοῦ ἀκοῦσαι ἃ φρονεῖς· περὶ μὲν γὰρ τῆς αἱρέσεως ταύτης γνωστόν ἐστιν ἡμῖν ὅτι [q] πανταχοῦ ἀντιλέγεται. 23 [r] Ταξάμενοι δὲ αὐτῷ ἡμέραν, ἦκον πρὸς αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν ξενίαν πλείονες· οἷς ἐξετίθετο διαμαρτυρόμενος τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, πείθων τε αὐτοὺς τὰ περὶ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἀπό τε τοῦ νόμου Μωϋσέως καὶ τῶν προφητῶν, ἀπὸ πρωῒ ἕως ἑσπέρας. 24 [s] Καὶ οἱ μὲν ἐπείθοντο τοῖς λεγομένοις, οἱ δὲ ἠπίστουν. 25 Ἀσύμφωνοι δὲ ὄντες πρὸς ἀλλήλους ἀπελύοντο, εἰπόντος τοῦ Παύλου ῥῆμα ἕν, Ὅτι [t] καλῶς τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἐλάλησε διὰ Ἡσαΐου τοῦ προφήτου πρὸς τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν 26 [u] λέγον, Πορεύθητι πρὸς τὸν λαὸν τοῦτον καὶ εἰπόν, Ἀκοῇ ἀκούσετε, καὶ οὐ μὴ συνῆτε· καὶ βλέποντες βλέψετε, καὶ οὐ μὴ ἴδητε. 27 Ἐπαχύνθη γὰρ ἡ καρδία τοῦ λαοῦ τούτου, καὶ τοῖς ὠσὶ βαρέως ἤκουσαν, καὶ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς αὐτῶν ἐκάμμυσαν· μήποτε ἴδωσι τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς, καὶ τοῖς ὠσὶν ἀκούσωσι, καὶ τῇ καρδίᾳ συνῶσι καὶ ἐπιστρέψωσι, καὶ ἰάσωμαι αὐτούς. 28 [v] Γνωστὸν οὖν ἔστω ὑμῖν, ὅτι τοῖς ἔθνεσιν ἀπεστάλη τὸ σωτήριον τοῦ Θεοῦ· [x] αὐτοὶ καὶ ἀκούσονται. 29 Καὶ ταῦτα αὐτοῦ εἰπόντος, ἀπῆλθον οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, πολλὴν ἔχοντες ἐν ἑαυτοῖς συζήτησιν.

l ch. 21. 33. & 24. 12—14. & 25. 8.
m ch. 22. 24. & 24. 10. & 25. 8. & 26. 31.
n ch. 25. 11.
o ch. 23. 6. & 24. 21. & 26. 6, 7, 29. Eph. 6. 20. 2 Tim. 1. 16.
p ch. 24. 5, 14.
q Luke 2. 34. 1 Pet. 2. 12.
r ch. 26. 6. & 4. 14.
s ch. 17. 4.
t Ps. 81. 11, 12. Jer. 5. 21. Ezek. 3. 6, 7. & 12. 2. u Isa. 6. 9, 10. Ezek. 12. 2. Matt. 13. 14. Mark 4. 12. Luke 8. 10. John 12. 40. Rom. 11. 8.
v ch. 13. 46. & 18. 6. Luke 24. 47.
x ch. 22. 21. & 26. 17, 18. Matt 21. 41. Rom. 11. 11.

St. Luke's account of the treatment which St. Paul received at Rome, is illustrated by the narrative of Josephus (Antiq. xviii. 6. 7), concerning the detention of Agrippa I. in the same city, under Tiberius, εὑρίσκετο αὐτῷ παρὰ τοῦ Μάκρωνος (the successor of Sejanus) στρατιωτῶν τε μετρίων ἀνδρῶν, οἳ παραφυλάξειαν αὐτὸν ἐν φρουρίσιν, καὶ ἑκατοντάρχου ἐφεστηκότος τε ἐκείνοις καὶ συνδέτου ἐσομένου, λουτρά τε καθ' ἡμέραν συγχαρεῖσθαι, καὶ ἀπελευθέρων καὶ φίλων εἰσόδους, τήν τε ἄλλην ῥᾳστώνην ἢ τῷ σώματι γένοιτ' ἄν· εἰσῆεσάν τε πρὸς αὐτὸν φίλος τε Σίλας κ.τ.λ.

— στρατιώτῃ] "Ad quem vinctus est." (Grot.)

19. ἠναγκάσθην] "I was constrained to appeal to Cæsar,"—an answer to the objections of the Jews, that, in a question of Religion, he had appealed from the Spiritual Court, that of the Sanhedrim at Jerusalem, to a temporal and heathen Power, and had so been guilty of profane and sacrilegious outrage against their national Faith, and against Jehovah Himself. St. Paul says that he did not act thus voluntarily, but was compelled to take this step by the Jews themselves.

We may observe here again the wonderful operation of Divine Providence in overruling the machinations of the enemies of the Gospel into means for its furtherance;

The Jews arrested and would have killed Paul. By their iniquitous and treacherous manœuvres against him, they showed even to the Chief Captain that he could have no hope of justice from them. He was therefore sent by night to Cæsarea (xxiii. 23). Festus proposed that after two years' imprisonment he should go up again to be judged at Jerusalem (xxv. 9). But the Jews had showed their inveterate malice by another conspiracy to slay him by the way (xxv. 3). In a word, St. Paul was compelled by the Jews themselves to appeal for justice from the Spiritual Court at Jerusalem to the tribunal of Nero at Rome.

A striking proof of the corrupt state of the spiritualty. No wonder its candlestick was removed.

All this was foreseen and pre-announced by God, and was made instrumental by Him for the propagation of Christianity, and for the transfer of its Mission from the centre of Judaism to the Metropolis of the Heathen World. Thus the malice of the Jews recoiled against themselves, and was used as an instrument for the glory of Christ.

21. ἡμεῖς οὔτε γράμματα] This statement of non-communication between the Jews of Jerusalem and Rome is remarkable, and has been used by some in modern times as an argument against the veracity of this History. But it must be remembered that St. Paul did not appeal to Cæsar till near the end of his confinement at Cæsarea. Festus, the successor of Felix, had wished to decide the Cause at Jerusalem (xxv. 9); and it was doubtless a surprise both to him and to the Jews to hear St. Paul say, "I appeal unto Cæsar" (xxv. 11).

Before St. Paul had made this appeal, the Jews of Jerusalem had no reason for writing to those at Rome concerning Paul; for they had no ground for supposing that he would go there. And after appeal had been made, it does not seem that they had any opportunities of sending communications to Rome, on account of the expiration of the season for navigation to Italy. Nor indeed would they have been very anxious to write concerning him after the declaration of the Jewish king Agrippa acknowledging his innocence, and that he might have been set at liberty if he had not appealed to Cæsar (xxvi. 32).

22. πανταχοῦ ἀντιλέγεται] A fulfilment of Simeon's words, Luke ii. 34, σημεῖον ἀντιλεγόμενον. The Jews are specially described as a λαὸς ἀντιλέγων. See Rom. x. 21. Isa. lxv. 2, in LXX. Acts xiii. 45; xxviii. 19.

25. ῥῆμα ἕν] 'one word,' after so many disputations; one, and that from their own Scriptures; showing that their incredulity was foreseen and foretold by God, and that the rejection of the Gospel by the Jews is therefore no argument against it, but rather an evidence of its truth.

— τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν] He claims their fathers as his own.

26, 27.] See Matt. xiii. 14, 15.

28. γνωστὸν οὖν ἔστω ὑμῖν, ὅτι τοῖς ἔθνεσιν ἀπεστάλη τὸ σωτήριον τοῦ Θεοῦ] St. Paul never disguised from the Jews his design of going to the Gentiles. As Bengel observes,—On the rejection of the Gospel by the Jews, he declared that intention to them at Antioch, xiii. 46; at Corinth, xviii. 6; and now, for the third time, he declares it at Rome. Thus he gave them a triple warning in Asia, in Greece, in Italy (see Tit. iii. 10).

29. καὶ—συζήτησιν] Not in A, B, E, and some Cursives and Versions.

30 Ἔμεινε δὲ διετίαν ὅλην ἐν ἰδίῳ μισθώματι, καὶ ἀπεδέχετο πάντας τοὺς y ch. 4. 31. Eph. 6. 19. εἰσπορευομένους πρὸς αὐτὸν, 31 y κηρύσσων τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ διδάσκων τὰ περὶ τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ μετὰ πάσης παῤῥησίας ἀκωλύτως.

30. διετίαν ὅλην] Two whole years in St. Paul's life without any incident mentioned by St. Luke;

This silence is an impressive proof that the arrival of the great Apostle at Rome, the great capital of the world, is the culminating point of the history. "Paulus Romæ apex Evangelii." (Bengel.)

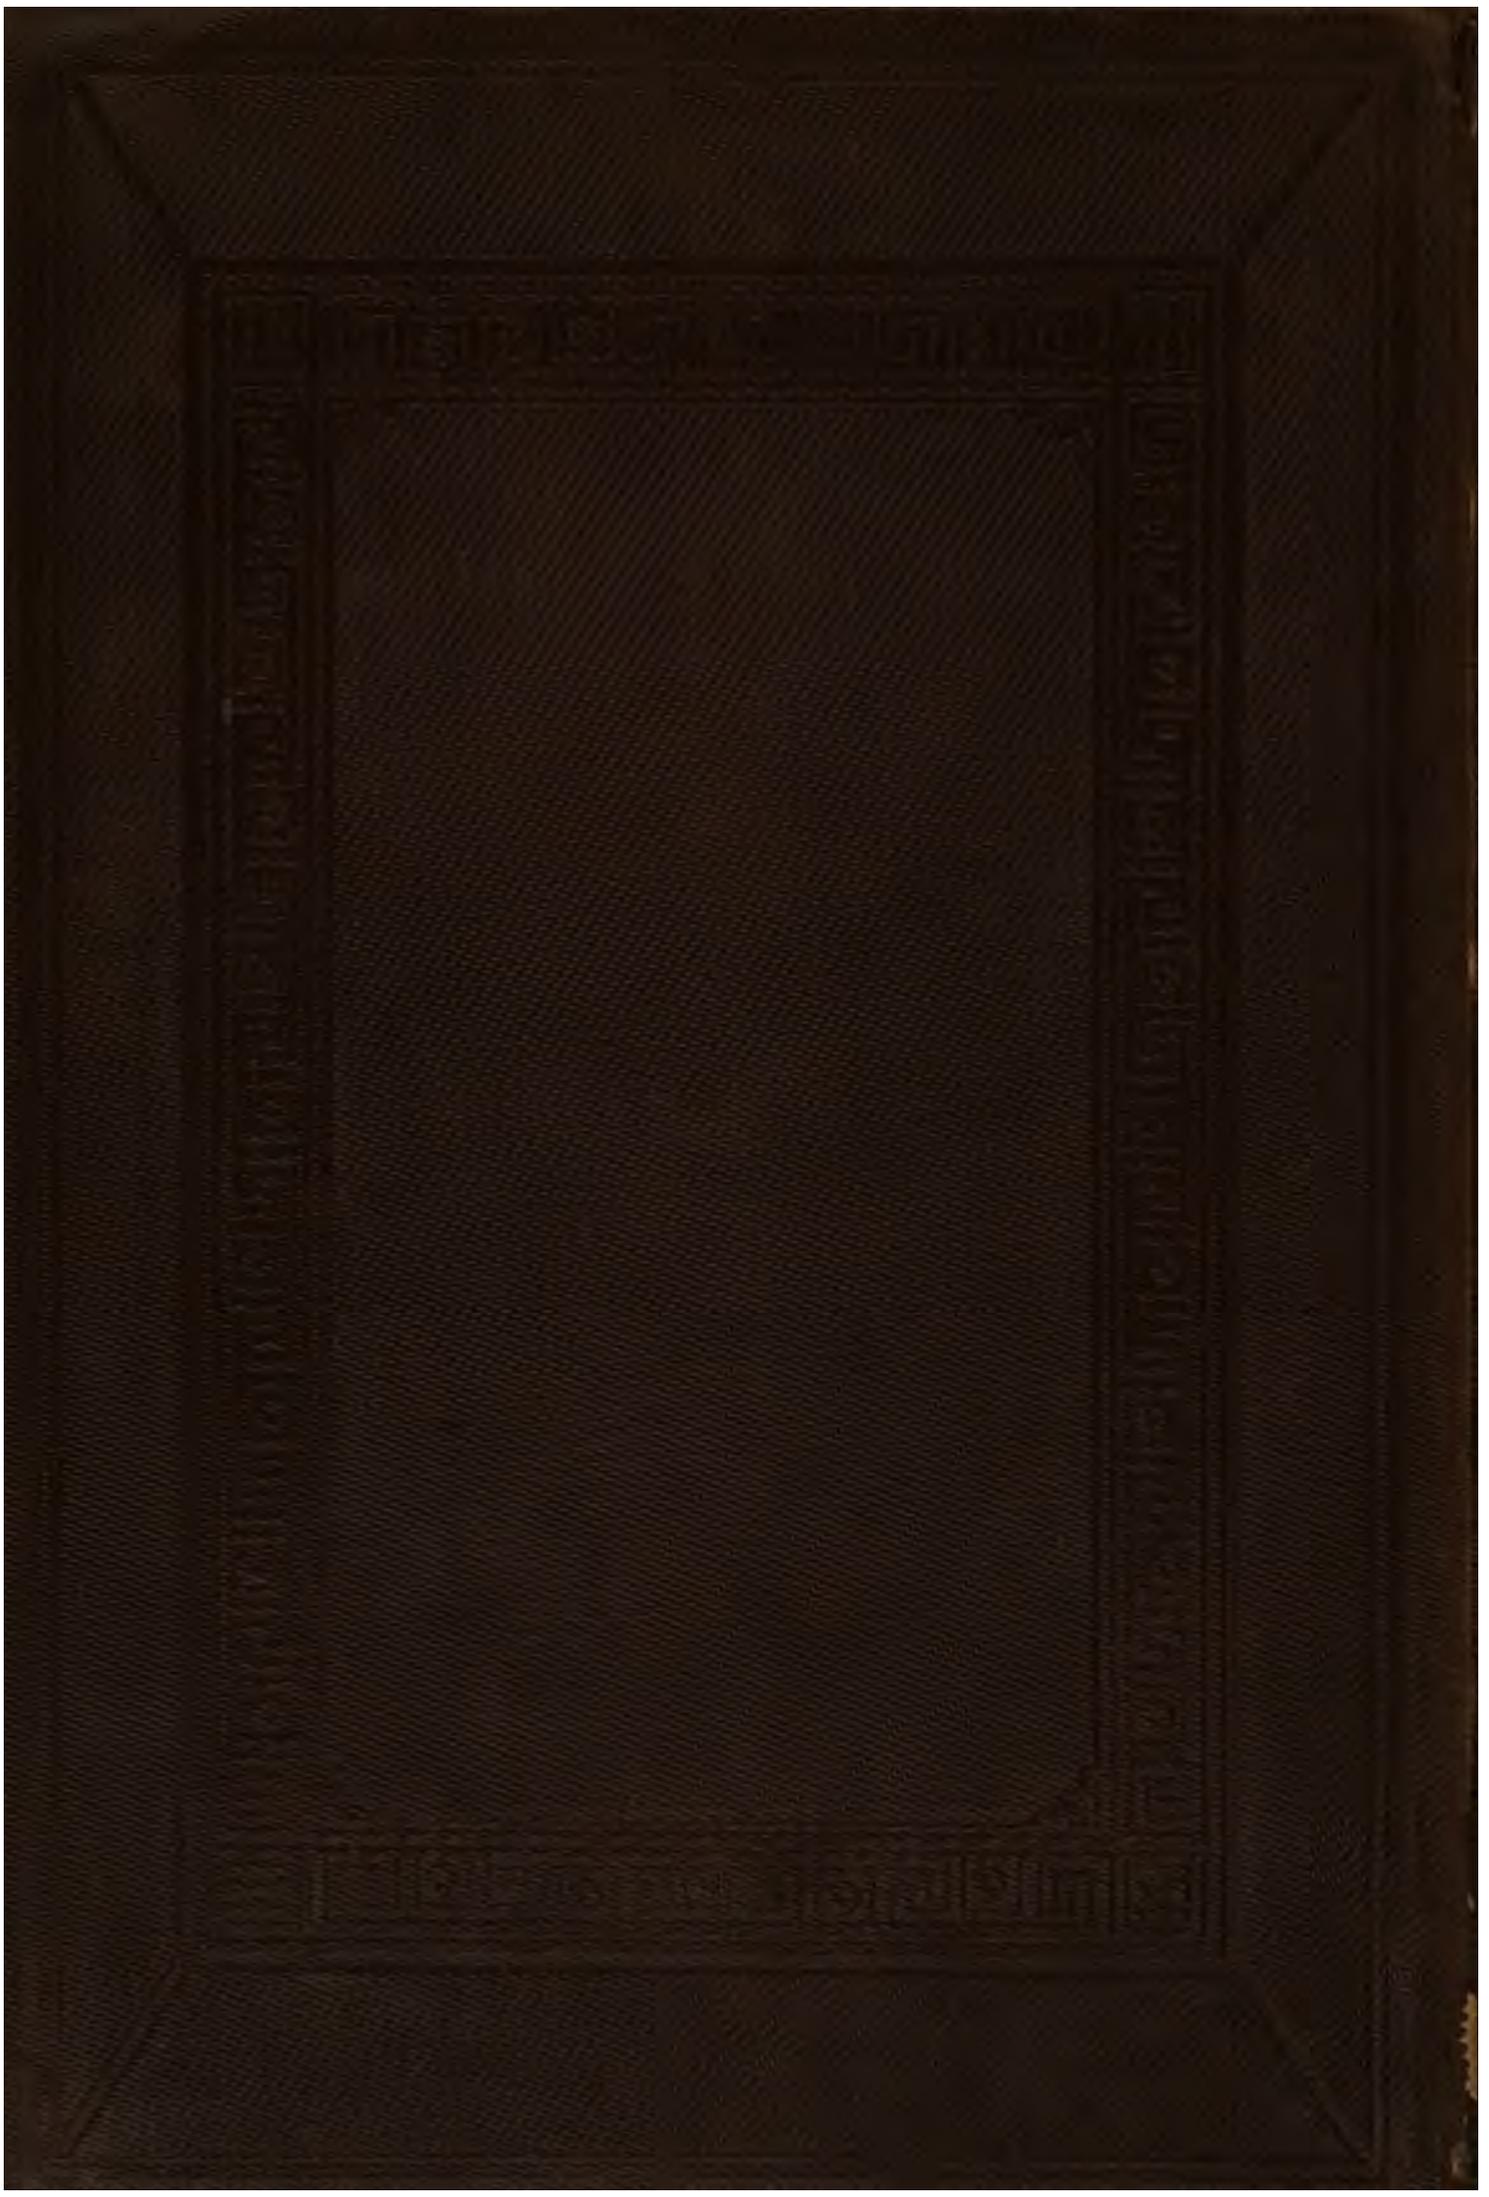
As Chrys. observes, St. Paul had suffered shipwreck, but by that shipwreck he was made more illustrious. And now, like some noble conqueror who has gained a great naval victory, he enters the royal City of Rome, the capital of the world.

The rest may be inferred from what had been already said and done by the Divine Head of the Church, in guiding and preserving him till he set foot in safety in that city; and from the words of comfort and joy with which the book concludes.

It is to be regretted, that through want of attention to such considerations as these, this divine Book has been disparaged by some as a fragmentary narrative. Like all other works of the Holy Ghost, it is a well-ordered and harmonious whole. It designs what was best to be done for a History of the Apostolic Church, and it performs fully what it designs. On this topic, see further in the Introduction prefixed to this Book.

31. ἀκωλύτως] The Acts of the Apostles is a record of trouble and suffering, like all other Books of the New Testament, and is also like them in this, that it ends happily. See particularly the end of St. Luke's Gospel (xxiv. 50 - 53).

There is something musical in the cadence of the word ἀκωλύτως, reserved for the end of this Book. The word commences with a short syllable, followed by three long ones (a first Epitrite), and so is expressive of steadiness, firmness, and stability; of motion succeeded by rest; of action consummated and settled in repose. Compare the word ἐκοιμήθη, a word of like quantity (⏑ – – –), closing the history of St. Stephen's martyrdom (Acts vii. 60).



A beautiful emblem of the History of the Church of Christ, and of the life of every true believer in Him.

END OF PART II.

GILBERT AND RIVINGTON, PRINTERS, ST. JOHN'S SQUARE, LONDON.

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at `http://books.google.com/`

THE

NEW TESTAMENT

OF OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR

JESUS CHRIST,

IN THE ORIGINAL GREEK:

WITH NOTES,

BY

CHR. WORDSWORTH, D.D.

CANON OF WESTMINSTER.

PART III.—ST. PAUL'S EPISTLES.

LONDON:
RIVINGTONS, WATERLOO PLACE.
1859.

~~101. h 24.~~ 101. d 726

LONDON:
GILBERT AND RIVINGTON, PRINTERS,
ST. JOHN'S SQUARE.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
ORDER of the EPISTLES of ST. PAUL, as arranged in this Edition	iv
COMPARATIVE TABLE of Order of the Epistles in this Edition and in other Editions	ib.
PREFACE	v
CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE of the Life and Epistles of St. Paul	xiii
ANCIENT UNCIAL GREEK MANUSCRIPTS of St. Paul's Epistles	xvi
Introduction to St. Paul's First Epistle to the Thessalonians	1
FIRST EPISTLE to the THESSALONIANS	6
Introduction to the Second Epistle to the Thessalonians	25
SECOND EPISTLE to the THESSALONIANS	27
Introduction to the Epistle to the Galatians	36
EPISTLE to the GALATIANS	43
Introduction to the Two Epistles to the Corinthians	72
FIRST EPISTLE to the CORINTHIANS	78
Introduction to the Second Epistle to the Corinthians	143
SECOND EPISTLE to the CORINTHIANS	145
Introduction to the Epistle to the Romans	182
EPISTLE to the ROMANS	204
Introduction to the Epistle to the Ephesians	269
EPISTLE to the EPHESIANS	278
Introduction to the Epistle to the Colossians	302
EPISTLE to the COLOSSIANS	309
Introduction to the Epistle to Philemon	325
EPISTLE to PHILEMON	329
Introduction to the Epistle to the Philippians	332
EPISTLE to the PHILIPPIANS	335
Introduction to the Epistle to the Hebrews	352
EPISTLE to the HEBREWS	370
Introduction to the Two Epistles to Timothy, and to the Epistle to Titus	416
FIRST EPISTLE to TIMOTHY	425
EPISTLE to TITUS	449
SECOND EPISTLE to TIMOTHY	458

ORDER OF THE EPISTLES OF ST. PAUL

AS ARRANGED IN THIS EDITION[1].

1 Thessalonians.
2 Thessalonians.
Galatians.
1 Corinthians.
2 Corinthians.
Romans.
Ephesians.
Colossians.
Philemon.
Philippians.
Hebrews.
1 Timothy.
Titus.
2 Timothy.

COMPARATIVE TABLE

OF THE

ORDER OF THE EPISTLES OF ST. PAUL IN THIS EDITION AND IN OTHER EDITIONS.

Order in this Edition.	PAGE	Common Order.	PAGE
1 Thessalonians	6	Romans	204
2 Thessalonians	27	1 Corinthians	78
Galatians	43	2 Corinthians	145
1 Corinthians	78	Galatians	43
2 Corinthians	145	Ephesians	278
Romans	204	Philippians	335
Ephesians	278	Colossians	309
Colossians	309	1 Thessalonians	6
Philemon	329	2 Thessalonians	27
Philippians	335	1 Timothy	425
Hebrews	370	2 Timothy	458
1 Timothy	425	Titus	449
Titus	449	Philemon	329
2 Timothy	458	Hebrews	370

[1] The Text of these Epistles, arranged in chronological order, and printed in the same type as the present Volume, may be had separately; as specified in the Advertisement at the end.

PREFACE.

SOME explanation may be required of the reasons which have led to the adoption of the order in which the Epistles of St. Paul are arranged in the present Edition.

That order is designed to be chronological; in other words, the Epistles are placed according to the time in which they appear to have been written.

Let it be premised, however, that this arrangement does not imply any disparagement of the order in which they are usually disposed in other editions of the Original, and in the English Authorized Version of the Holy Bible.

That order has its appropriate uses. It has been received for many centuries in our own and other countries. The Calendar of our Liturgy is conformed to it. It could not therefore be disturbed without much consequent embarrassment.

But the question may properly be entertained,—whether, in addition to that common order, another arrangement may not also be provided for private use?

The order commonly received, it is well known, is not chronological.

The Epistle to the Romans, which there stands first, was written after the Epistles to the Galatians and to the Corinthians; and it is generally acknowledged, that the two Epistles to the Thessalonians, which are placed in the common order among the last, were the first Epistles written by St. Paul.

Various and conflicting opinions have been given concerning the reasons which produced the common arrangement.

Some ancient writers supposed, that it was caused by considerations of the comparative proficiency of those persons to whom the Epistles were addressed [1]. Others conjectured that it arose from regard to the importance of the Cities to which the Epistles were respectively sent, or to the length and copiousness of the Epistles themselves [2].

The last opinion seems to be most probable [3].

The order commonly received is not, however, precisely that in which the Epistles are found in the most ancient Manuscripts. In very early copies of collections of St. Paul's Epistles, the Epistle to the Hebrews was placed between the Epistles to the

[1] So Primasius, Præfat. in Epistolas Pauli (p. 416 of Vol. 68 of Migne's Patrologia), "Movet quosdam, quare Romanorum Epistola in primo sit posita, cùm eam posteà scriptam ratio manifestet. Unde intelligendum est, ita omnes Epistolas ordinatas, ut prima poneretur, quæ ad inferiores (qu. infirmiores?) fuerat destinata, et per singulas Epistolas gradatim ad perfectiores veniretur."

[2] See Theodoret, Præfat. in Epist. S. Paul. p. 8, Vol. iii. ed. Hal. 1771.

[3] And has been adopted by Dr. Mill, Prolog. N. T. num. 237; and by Dr. Lardner, History, Vol. iii. p. 457, ed. Lond. 1815.

Galatians and the Ephesians [1]. And in most ancient Manuscripts now extant [2], the Epistle to the Hebrews is placed before the Epistles to Timothy and Titus [3], and not after them, as in the majority of modern editions.

It is also worthy of remark, that in the earliest Manuscripts which have been preserved to us, the Epistles of St. Paul are placed after [4] the General Epistles of St. James, St. Peter, St. John, and St. Jude, and not before them, as in the common order.

In addition to such considerations as these, the following reflections presented themselves to the Editor of this volume.

The present Edition of the Greek Testament is designed mainly for the use of younger students of Theology.

What therefore is the order, in which the Epistles of St. Paul may be read most profitably by them?

There seemed to be only one answer to this inquiry,—The order of time.

In confirmation of this opinion, the following reasons may be adduced;

It has pleased Almighty God to bestow upon His Church an Apostolic History, as well as Apostolic Epistles. The Apostolic History, written by St. Paul's faithful companion the Evangelist St. Luke, illustrates the Apostolic Epistles, and is illustrated by them.

But the benefit of this mutual illustration is much impaired, if the Apostolic Epistles are not studied in connexion with, and in the order of, the Apostolic History.

On the other hand, if the Epistles of St. Paul are read according to the sequence of time, the student has at hand an inspired running comment upon them in the Acts of the Apostles.

Again; if the theological student does not read St. Paul's Epistles in chronological order, but approaches them in that order in which they are commonly presented to his view, he will commence his task with the most difficult of all the Epistles of St. Paul,—the Epistle to the Romans.

He will enter upon his arduous undertaking without due previous preparation, and will find himself perplexed, and perhaps discouraged; and he may even be betrayed into distressing doubts, or dangerous errors, from which he would have been preserved, if he had come to the study of that Epistle in the natural order of time, when he would have been familiarized with the thoughts, the diction, and the teaching of the great Apostle; and would thus have been prepared and qualified for the study of the Epistle to the Romans by the previous discipline and training, which would have been afforded him by a careful perusal of those other Epistles which were written by St. Paul before the date of that Epistle.

Another reflection suggests itself here. All who believe the Gospel, regard the Apostle St. Paul with religious reverence, as a chosen vessel of God to bear His Name before the Gentiles [5], and acknowledge him to have been a wise master-builder of the Church [6]; and they are persuaded, that the Epistles written by his instrumentality were

[1] See Cardinal Mai's note in his edition of the Codex Vaticanus, Vol. v. p. 429, Rom. 1858.
[2] In the Alexandrine MS., the Vatican MS., the Codex Ephrem, and the Coislinian MS.
[3] As it is in Lachmann's Edition, Berolini, 1850.
[4] As they are in the editions of Lachmann, Berolini, 1850, and Tischendorf, Lipsiæ, 1859.
[5] Acts ix. 15. [6] 1 Cor. iii. 10.

given by inspiration of God, and are no other than words which the Holy Ghost teacheth[1]; and that though addressed in the first instance to particular Cities and Churches, they were designed for the perpetual edification of the Universal Church of Christ in every age and place[2]. They also know, that the Divine Being Who inspired the Apostle, is a God of Order, and that He does every thing by counsel, measure, number, and weight[3], especially in the building up of His Church; and they will therefore feel a strong persuasion, that St. Paul's Epistles are not to be viewed as mere disjointed and fugitive essays, thrown out extemporaneously on the spur of the moment; but that they have a mutual connexion and coherence, and that they were designed by the Holy Spirit of God to bear a reciprocal relation to one another, and lend to each other mutual help and support, like joints and members of a well organized body; and to instruct the World in the religion of Jesus Christ, by a well ordered system of doctrine and discipline; and that therefore, if the Epistles of St. Paul were placed in chronological order, they would be found to form a consistent and harmonious whole.

This anticipation is fully realized by the result.

Let the reader commence the study of the writings of the divine Apostle with that Epistle which was first produced, the First Epistle to the Thessalonians, and let him pursue that study in regular order of time, with the Acts of the Apostles at his side, till he reaches the limits of that Apostolic History, and till he arrives in due time at the conclusion and consummation of all the Epistles in the Second Epistle to Timothy; and he will thankfully acknowledge, that such an order of study is the most agreeable to reason, most gratifying to the intellect, most productive of spiritual benefit to his own soul, and will be most salutary to the souls of others also, whom he may be called upon to teach, if he is ordained to the Pastoral Office. He will recognize the blessed truth, that in reading St. Paul's Epistles, he has not only been following the Apostle in his travels, and labours, and sufferings for Christ, but that he has also been learning a lesson of Christian edification; that he has been there trained in the best method of building up himself and others, by God's grace, in the Christian Faith; and that he has been admitted to behold the great Apostolic Architect in his spiritual workshop, and has seen him, as it were, with rule and compass in hand, drawing the plan of his Apostolic work, and then laying its foundations deep and strong, and placing the first stone of the sacred edifice, and gradually rearing the fabric, which rises silently and securely, without noise of axe or hammer, like the Temple of Solomon[4], till it stands in stately grandeur before the delighted eye, a glorious building, complete in all its parts and proportions, and perfectly compacted, harmonized, and adorned, in solidity, symmetry, and beauty.

The proof of this statement will be submitted to the reader's consideration in the Introductions that will be prefixed to the several Epistles.

In the mean time it may be observed, that St. Paul, in his earliest Epistles, particularly those to the Thessalonians, begins with laying down those sacred elementary truths, which are enumerated in the Epistle to the Hebrews as among the first principles

[1] 1 Cor. ii. 13.

[2] As is excellently expressed by Tertullian (c. Marcion. v. 17), "Ad omnes Apostolus scribit, dum ad quosdam."

[3] Wisd. xi. 20.

[4] 1 Kings vi. 7.

of the doctrine of Christ[1],—namely, the doctrine of Repentance, and of Faith, and of the Resurrection of the Dead, and of Eternal Judgment[2]; that in the Epistle to the Galatians he vindicates his own Apostolic Commission; and in that Epistle, and in the later Epistle to the Romans, he proclaims the Universality of the Redemption provided by God in Christ for all of every nation under heaven who accept the Gospel by Faith, as the only means of Justification, and as distinguished from the Ceremonial and Moral Law, which was preparatory to the Gospel[3]. He thus fortifies the citadel of Christian doctrine with strong buttresses and bulwarks against the assaults of false teachers, who undermined its foundations. In the succeeding two Epistles to the Corinthians[4] he provides for its internal safety, by cementing it strongly with Christian Charity, and makes it to be like a City at unity with itself[5].

It was not till he had trained the Church by this preparatory discipline, that the holy Apostle ventured to speak fully of the great mystery of Godliness, the Incarnation of the Son of God, and of the means by which its blessings are dispensed and diffused to all the faithful members of the Mystical Body of Christ; and to dilate on the practical duties which result from the doctrine of the Incarnation, and of their incorporation in Him. He has accomplished this blessed work in the two Epistles to the Ephesians and Colossians; in the former of which[6] he displays the doctrine of the Incarnation in its divine splendour; in the other he defends it from those who would mar and obscure it. The Epistle to Philemon, written at the same time, is a practical application of the same doctrine of the Incarnation to the solution of a great social question, that of Slavery[7].

The Epistle to the Philippians completes the Apostolic labour of love to the Gentile Churches[8]. In the Epistle to the Hebrews he performs a similar office to his own kindred[9]. Both of these Epistles are built as a superstructure on the doctrine of the Divinity of Christ, and of His Incarnation.

The Epistles to Timothy and Titus naturally fall into the last place.

The Apostle was now like the great Lawgiver of his nation when about to leave the world. He would therefore provide for the government of the Church after his decease in all future ages. Moses appointed a Joshua, one person only, because the people was one, and was destined to dwell in one country, and gave him a solemn charge[10]. St. Paul appoints several persons, such as a Timothy at Ephesus, and a Titus at Crete, and others in other great cities of the world, to be his successors, and to execute Apostolic functions in various places, because the Church of Christ is universal. And in writing to two of that Apostolic family, Timothy and Titus, he has bequeathed a spiritual legacy to all Christian Bishops, and has left a pattern of Church-regimen and polity, even to the end of time[11].

Thus, then, in contemplating St. Paul's Epistles arranged in chronological order, we behold an uniform system of Christian Doctrine and Discipline.

[1] Heb. vi. 1, 2.
[2] See below, Introduction to the Epistle to the Thessalonians, p. 4.
[3] See further, Introduction to the Epistle to the Galatians, p. 39, and to the Romans, p. 183—193.
[4] See further, Introduction to that Epistle, p. 72—74.
[5] Ps. cxxii. 3.
[6] See below, Introduction, p. 302—5.
[7] See the Introduction to that Epistle, p. 329.
[8] See below, p. 332.
[9] See below, p. 360—368.
[10] Deut. xxxi. 14. 23.
[11] See below, Introduction to the Epistles to Timothy and Titus, p. 421, 422.

The reader, therefore, it may be hoped, will not require an apology for the adoption of such an order in the present edition. He will not be unwilling to concede, that if the writings of Heathen Authors, which have any historical value and connexion, have been thus dealt with by recent Editors, and if a chronological arrangement has been adopted by them, in lieu of, or in addition to, the order which existed in former editions, a like principle may be reasonably accepted in an edition of the Epistles of St. Paul [1]. The readers of Æschylus, it may be presumed, have now concurred in the reasons, which induced some recent Editors [2] to place the Supplices first, and the Orestean Trilogy last, in their recensions of his writings.

All academical students, who desire to read intelligently the writings of Aristophanes, will thank those Editors [3] who have removed the Plutus from the place which it occupied in the older editions, and have put the Acharnians in its room, and have arranged the other Comedies in their proper historical series. All will acknowledge the wisdom which dictated Bentley's remarks on the importance of studying the writings of Horace in chronological order [4]. And although from the miscellaneous character of the Roman Poet's compositions a chronological arrangement of his works was not so easy of adoption, yet all will be disposed to commend the labours of a late learned Canon of St. Paul's, in giving practical effect to Bentley's remarks, and in publishing the works of Horace arranged in order of time [5].

Perhaps, however, it may here be said, that these considerations would confessedly be of much weight, if the chronology of St. Paul's Epistles could be accurately determined. But it may be alleged by some, that differences of opinion exist with regard to the order of time in which they were written, and that attempts to arrange them in that order are precarious.

[1] A principle already adopted in the valuable work of Messrs. Conybeare and Howson, "The Life and Epistles of St. Paul," 2nd ed. Lond. 1856, 2 Vols.

[2] e. g. Hermann, in his edition of Æschylus, 1852; and before him, Professor Scholefield, Cambridge, 1828.

[3] e. g. William Dindorf, London, 1825; Immanuel Bekker, Lond. 1829.

[4] Which deserve to be placed before the student's eye, especially on account of the important moral lesson with which they conclude. "His jam positis, primum Horatii opus statuo Sermonum librum primum, quem triennio perfecit intra annos ætatis xxvi. xxvii. xxviii.; postea Secundum triennio itidem, annis xxxi. xxxii. xxxiii.; deinde Epodos biennio, xxxiv. and xxxv.; tum Carminum librum primum triennio, xxxvi. xxxvii. xxxviii.; Secundum biennio, xl. xli.; Tertiumque pariter biennio, xlii. xliii.; inde Epistolarum primum biennio, xlvi. xlvii.; tum Carminum lib. quartum et Sæculare triennio, xlix. l. li. Postremò Artem Poëticam et Epistolarum librum alterum, annis incertis. Intra hos cancellos omnium poëmatiwn natales esse ponendos, et ex argumentis singulorum et ex Annalium fide constabit. Inde est, quod in Sermonibus, et Epodis, et Carminum primo, Cæsar semper, nunquam Augustus dicitur; quippe qui id nomen consecutus est, anno demum Flacci xxxix.; in sequentibus verò passim Augustus appellatur. Inde est, quod in Sermonibus et Epodis Juvenem se ubique indicat; et quod sola Satirarum laude inclaruisse se dicit, ut Bucolicorum tum (Virgilium Serm. i. 10; v. 46), nulla Lyricorum mentione facta. In cæteris autem singulis procedentis ætatis gradus planissimis signis indicat: idque tibi ex hâc serie jam à me demonstratâ jucundum erit animadvertere, cum operibus juvenilibus multa obscœna et flagitiosa insint, quantò annis provectior erat, tantò cum et poëticâ virtute et argumentorum dignitate gravitateque meliorem castioremque semper evasisse." Bentleii Præfatio ad Horatium, ed. Amst. 1728.

[5] Horatius Restitutus, ed. Iac. Tate. Cantabr. 1832.

On the benefits to be derived from a chronological arrangement of the Books of Holy Scripture, the reader may consult the Introduction of Canon Townsend in his edition of the Old Testament, 4th ed. Lond. 1836.

If such an objection should be raised, it may not be irrelevant to observe,—

1. That all persons are agreed, that the commonly received order is not chronological.

2. That no doubt can reasonably be entertained as to the dates of the two Epistles to the Thessalonians, the two Epistles to the Corinthians, and the Epistle to the Romans.

3. That it is also certain, that the Epistles to the Ephesians, to the Colossians, to Philemon, and to the Philippians, and the Second to Timothy, were written by St. Paul when he was in prison[1], and that therefore they are subsequent in time to the Epistles to the Thessalonians, Corinthians, and Romans.

4. That it is generally acknowledged, that the Epistles to the Ephesians, Colossians, and Philippians, were written about the same time, and that they were composed during the imprisonment of the Apostle, described by St. Luke at the conclusion of the Acts of the Apostles, and are therefore subsequent in time to the events recorded in the far greater part of that history.

5. These propositions appear to be almost universally admitted[2]; and therefore, even though the precise years of the several Epistles may not be determined, yet their relative order may be ascertained, at least within certain narrow limits. Accordingly, they may be arranged chronologically, although differences of opinion may exist as to the length of the intervals of time which separate them respectively from each other.

6. But further. Important results have been obtained by the recent historical and critical researches into the Life and Writings of St. Paul. One of the most valuable of these results is, that, at least in our own country, a general consent with regard to the order of Time in which the Epistles of St. Paul were written, and also, with slight exceptions, as to the date of each several Epistle, now prevails.

The time therefore seems to have arrived, when an Editor of St. Paul's Epistles, profiting by the labours of others[3] who have gone before him in the same field, may,

[1] As is clear from internal evidence, Eph. iii. 1; iv. 1. Col. iv. 3. 10. Philem. 1. 9. Phil. i. 13. 2 Tim. i. 8. Cp. Winer, R. W. B. ii. p. 764.

[2] The following is the language of a writer on this subject who will not be charged with any disposition to dogmatize. Credner (Einleitung in das N. T., Halle, 1836, p. 338), "Concerning the time of the composition of the Epistles to the Thessalonians, Corinthians, and Romans, no doubt can exist, except where an hypercritical spirit of scepticism seduces the inquirer into error. The Epistles to the Ephesians, Colossians, Philemon, and Philippians, and the Second to Timothy, proclaim themselves to have been written from prison. Only the place of the Epistle to Titus, to the Galatians, and the First of Timothy, remains undefined."

[3] Particularly in this country, Abp. Ussher, Bp. Pearson, Dr. Wells, Dr. Lardner, Dr. Paley, Canons Townsend and Tate, Mr. Fynes Clinton, Greswell, Biley, Lewin, J. B. Lightfoot, Dr. Bloomfield, Dr. Peile, Dean Alford, Messrs. Conybeare and Howson, F. C. Cook, and Mr. Birks. In the results attained by many of these writers, the Editor concurs in all respects; and the particular points in which there is not a concurrence are comparatively so few, trivial, and insignificant (e. g. whether the Epistle to the Galatians was written before or after the Epistles to the Corinthians), that they only serve to bring out more clearly the points of agreement, and to confirm them by the suffrages of independent judgments.

Among foreign writers, the authority of the following eminent critics may be cited as harmonizing almost entirely with the opinions formed by the Editor of the present volume, concerning the chronological arrangement of St. Paul's Epistles. Tillemont, Basnage, Hottinger, Eichhorn, and De Wette (the last with reservation as to the Pastoral Epistles), Kirchhofer, Feilmoser, Schott, Wurm, Neander; and especially Guerike, to whose observations he would refer, as very full and satisfactory. They may be seen in his Einleitung in d. N. T., Leipzig, 1843, pp. 342—409.

without being chargeable with rashness and presumptuous confidence in his own conclusions, proceed to endeavour to arrange the Epistles of St. Paul in the order of time; and he will feel confirmed in the soundness of his opinions, by the fact that he finds them in unison with those of many others whose critical judgment is entitled to respect.

The historical and chronological grounds, on which that arrangement rests, will be stated hereafter in the Introductions prefixed in this volume to the several Epistles.

Let him here be permitted to observe, that although the chronological arrangement may perhaps cause some little embarrassment at first, on account of its variance from the order with which the reader is familiar, yet it will soon be found to commend itself by its clearness and simplicity, as well as by its reasonableness and truth.

The student will easily remember, that the Apostle to the Gentiles, when he first preached in Greece, came into Macedonia, and from Macedonia into Achaia. He will recollect, that the capital of Macedonia was Thessalonica, and that the capital of Achaia was Corinth; and that it was the Apostle's custom to begin his missionary operations with great centres of population; and that accordingly, soon after he had arrived in the capital of Achaia, Corinth, he began his work of writing Epistles, by addressing two Epistles to the Christian capital of Macedonia, where he had recently preached orally, Thessalonica.

He will also find it easy to remember, that St. Paul had next to encounter enemies who were excited to jealousy by his preaching and by his writing; and that he refuted their objections, and established his own Apostolic authority in his Epistle to the Galatians.

He will also readily remember, that St. Paul passed from the capital of Achaia to the capital of Asia, and addressed an Epistle to the Corinthians from Ephesus, as he had addressed Epistles to the Thessalonians from Corinth.

He will not find it difficult to recollect, that the Second Epistle to the Corinthians has a close connexion, in matter and in time, with the First Epistle to that Church, in the same manner as the Second Epistle to the Thessalonians is a natural sequel to the First Epistle to the same city.

He will remember with ease, that St. Paul's affecting and solemn appeal in his two Epistles to Corinth was followed up, as it was intended to be, by a personal visit to that city; and the Apostle of the Gentiles, having written Epistles to Thessalonica and Corinth, the great capital Cities of the two Roman Provinces of Macedonia and Achaia, next looked further westward, and wrote an Epistle to the Capital of the world, which he had long desired to visit and to evangelize, Rome.

It will readily be remembered, that his fervent wish of seeing Rome was soon afterwards accomplished. When he wrote to the Romans, he was going with alms and offerings to the poor saints of Jerusalem [1]. He was arrested at Jerusalem; and was brought a prisoner first to Cæsarea and then to Rome. Here another group of the Epistles rises up before the mind. These are the Epistles in which he speaks of himself as "a prisoner of Jesus Christ." He wrote these Epistles from Rome to those faithful friends and Churches which he had left behind him in the East: the Epistle to the Christians of the great capital of Asia, the Ephesians; the Epistle to Colossæ in Phrygia; and that short letter, which accompanied it, to his Colossian friend Philemon; and that loving Epistle to the first city in which he had preached in Greece, the Roman colony of Philippi.

[1] Rom. xv. 25, 26.

In these Epistles he describes himself as a prisoner, but he expresses an expectation of being liberated[1]. He was released; but only for a short time, for he is now Paul the aged, and his course is nearly run[2].

As a last labour of love, an Epistle is written by him to his kinsmen according to the flesh—the Hebrews at Jerusalem; and he then prepares for his departure by leaving his farewell instructions to his dear children in the faith, Timothy and Titus, in the Epistles addressed to them.

The design of the Apostle in writing the several Epistles will be considered in the Introductions prefixed to them respectively; and therefore nothing will be added in this place on that subject.

For a revision of a portion of the Text of the Epistles, the Editor has had, in addition to other resources, the benefit of Cardinal Mai's publication of the Vatican Manuscript, and of Tischendorf's seventh edition, which appeared while the present volume was passing through the press; and also of the impression of the Codex Augiensis communicated by its learned and accurate editor Mr. Scrivener.

With regard to the Notes that accompany the present volume, they are formed, for the most part, on the same plan as those that have already been published, in the former parts of this work, the Gospels, and the Acts of the Apostles. The Editor's endeavour has been to combine what is most valuable in the expositions of ancient Interpreters, and in the rich treasures of English Theology, with what has been contributed by modern Philology[3], and the historical, chronological, and geographical researches of recent times.

With feelings of devout thankfulness he would now offer a tribute of praise to the Great Giver of all Good, Who guided His Apostles into all truth and speaks in their writings, for that gracious assistance by which the present Work has been brought nearly to a close; and with this ascription of praise he would join a fervent prayer for a continuance of the same aid, in order that he may be enabled to accomplish an undertaking begun in dependence on His blessing; and that it may be mercifully accepted by Him, as an offering to Himself, through the merits of His only Son, and may be serviceable for the maintenance of His truth, and the advancement of His glory.

Cloisters, Westminster Abbey,
Feb. 11, 1859.

[1] See Philem. 22. Philippians ii. 24. [2] Philem. 9.

[3] In this department he has the agreeable task of acknowledging his obligations to the critical labours of Mr. Ellicott in his editions of the Epistles to the Galatians, Ephesians, Colossians, Philemon, Timothy, and Titus.

It may be proper to add here, that to indulge in personal animadversions, particularly of a polemical or censorious character, on the labours of other English Editors or Biblical Critics, is altogether foreign to the plan of the Editor of this Volume; for the reasons stated above, Vol. i. p. vii. His desire is not to criticize men, but to elucidate the Word of God.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE

OF THE

LIFE AND EPISTLES OF ST. PAUL.

A.D.

30 The Crucifixion of Christ, at the Passover[1].
His Ascension.

31, 32 The descent of the Holy Spirit, at the Feast of Pentecost, fifty days after the Passover.
The events described in chapters iii.—vi. of the Acts of the Apostles.

33 St. Stephen's Martyrdom (Acts vii.); Saul was then a νεανίας (vii. 58).
St. Philip's Missionary Journey (Acts viii. 5—40).
St. Peter and St. John at Samaria. Simon Magus (Acts viii. 14—24).

34 Saul's Conversion. Cp. Euseb. H. E. ii. 1; and see note below on 1 Tim. i. 13.
Saul retires to Arabia (Gal. i. 17).

36 Pontius Pilate is recalled from his procuratorship in Judæa (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 4. 2).

37 After many days (ix. 23) Saul escapes from Damascus. Goes up to Jerusalem, where he remains fifteen days, and sees Peter and John (Gal. i. 18, 19. Acts ix. 26, 27), and disputes with the Grecians.
Saul is sent to Tarsus (Acts ix. 30).
The Emperor Tiberius dies 16th March, and Caligula succeeds.

38—41 "Rest of the Churches" (Acts ix. 31).
St. Peter's Missionary Journey (ix. 32—43).
Tarries at Joppa many days (ix. 43).
Conversion of Cornelius (Acts x. 1—48).

41 The Emperor Caligula dies 24th January, and is succeeded by Claudius.

43 Euodius, first Bishop of Antioch (Euseb. Chron. ii. 269. Clinton, F. R. App. ii. p. 548).
The disciples called CHRISTIANS at Antioch (Acts xi. 26).

44 The Apostle St. James, the brother of John, is killed with the sword (Acts xii. 2), and St. Peter is imprisoned by Herod Agrippa, before Easter (Acts xii. 4).
St. Peter is delivered, and Herod is smitten by an Angel, and dies at Cæsarea (xii. 23).
St. Peter retires from Jerusalem (xii. 17).
St. Paul and Barnabas, having been deputed by the Christians at Antioch (xi. 27—30) to bring supplies to the brethren in Judæa, on account of the anticipation of the famine foretold by Agabus, which "came to pass in the reign of Claudius Cæsar" (xi. 28), i. e. after January, A.D. 41, return from Jerusalem to Antioch, with John Mark, who was connected with Peter (xii. 12), and with Barnabas (see on xv. 39).

45 The Ordination of Saul and Barnabas, at Antioch, to the Apostleship of the Gentiles (see on xiii. 1). Saul henceforth is called Paul (see on Acts xiii. 9).
St. Paul's "Visions and Revelations of the Lord" seem to have been vouchsafed to him at this time (see on 2 Cor. xii. 2, 3).

[1] For the grounds on which these dates rest, see above on Matt. ii. 20, and the Chronological Synopsis prefixed to the Acts of the Apostles, p. xxxiv.

A.D.

His first Missionary Journey to Cyprus (Paphos) and Pisidia, and Perga in Pamphylia (xiii. 4—13), whence St. Mark returns to Jerusalem. St. Paul and Barnabas visit Antioch of Pisidia, Iconium, Lystra, return to Perga and Pamphylia, and thence come back again to the place of their Ordination, Antioch, where they remain a considerable time with the disciples (Acts xiv. 26—28).

49 A Controversy arises at Antioch concerning the obligation of the Ceremonial Law on the Gentile Converts (Acts xv. 1, 2).

St. Paul and St. Barnabas, and some others, are deputed to go from Antioch to Jerusalem, "to the Apostles and Elders," concerning this question (xv. 2, 3).

50, 51 Council of Jerusalem (xv. 6—29).

St. Paul and St. Barnabas return to Antioch, where they remain some time (xv. 35, 36).

Their παροξυσμὸς (Acts xv. 39) and separation.

St. Paul takes Silas (xv. 40) on his second Missionary Journey, and afterwards associates Timothy also at Lystra (xvi. 1).

52—54 St. Paul passes through Phrygia and Galatia to Troas (xvi. 6. 8). Thence crosses over to Macedonia to Philippi (xvi. 12), and Thessalonica (xvii. 1), and Berœa (xvii. 10); thence to Athens (xvii. 15), and

St. Paul comes into Corinth, where he spends a year and six months (xviii. 1. 11).

Aquila and Priscilla come to Corinth.

54 Epistles to the Thessalonians, written from Corinth.

St. Paul sets sail from Cenchreæ in the Spring for Ephesus, on his way to Jerusalem, for the feast, probably Pentecost (xviii. 18, 19).

Epistle to the Galatians, written about this time.

After a short visit at Jerusalem (xviii. 12), St. Paul returns by way of Antioch, where he spends some time (xviii. 22), and Galatia, and Phrygia, where he confirms all the disciples (xviii. 23), and by the upper regions of Asia (xix. 1) to Ephesus, where he spends three years (xx. 31) and three months in the Synagogue, and two years in the School of Tyrannus (xix. 8—10).

57 First Epistle to the Corinthians, written at Ephesus.

The Emperor Claudius dies (13th October, A.D. 57), and Nero succeeds.

St. Paul, after three years' stay at Ephesus, quits it for Macedonia (xx. 1).

Second Epistle to the Corinthians, written in Macedonia.

Comes into Hellas, and spends three months there (xx. 3).

58 Epistle to the Romans, written at Corinth or Cenchreæ.

St. Paul sets out from Corinth with alms and offerings, collected in Asia and Greece, for the poor saints at Jerusalem (Rom. xv. 25, 26. Acts xix. 21; xx. 4), returns to Macedonia in the Spring, and arrives at Philippi for Easter (xx. 6). Passes over to Troas (xx. 6), touches at Miletus, where he bids farewell to the Presbyters of Ephesus, and gives them an Apostolic Charge (xx. 17); comes to Tyre (xxi. 3), and lands at Cæsarea (xxi. 8); arrives at Jerusalem, after several years (xxiv. 17), for the Feast of Pentecost (xx. 16; xxi. 17).

St. Paul is arrested at Jerusalem in the Temple (xxi. 28).

Is conveyed to Cæsarea (xxiii. 23—33).

58—60 Remains two years in detention at Cæsarea (xxiv. 27).

Is sent by Festus, in the Autumn of A.D. 60, by sea toward Rome (xxvii. 1).

Winters at Malta (xxviii. 11).

61 Spring; arrives at Rome.

62 Martyrdom of St. James, the Bishop of Jerusalem, at the Passover.

62, 63 St. Paul is at Rome, where he writes the Epistles to the Ephesians, Colossians, and to Philemon, in which he calls himself "Paul the Aged" (Philem. 9, see above on A.D. 33).

Writes the Epistle to the Philippians at the close of his imprisonment, A.D. 63.

Has been detained at Rome for "two whole years" till the Spring of A.D. 63 (xxviii. 30), where the History of the Acts of the Apostles concludes. Cp. Euseb. ii. 22.

A.D.

64 St. Paul, after his liberation from his first imprisonment at Rome, goes probably to Spain, and perhaps even to Britain. See on Rom. xv. 24. 28, and the Introduction to the Pastoral Epistles, p. 418—421.

Writes the EPISTLE to the HEBREWS.

In the Summer of A.D. 64 the Persecution of the Christians at Rome begins. See Introduction to the Epistles to Timothy, p. 417, note.

55—67 St. Paul returns from the West in his way to JERUSALEM, probably with Timothy (Heb. xiii. 23). Perhaps leaves Titus at Crete in his way to Jerusalem; and after his visit to Jerusalem performs his promise of visiting Colossæ in Phrygia (Philem. 22).

On his way to Macedonia, to visit Philippi, according to his promise (Phil. ii. 24), he commands Timothy to "abide at Ephesus" as Chief Pastor there (1 Tim. i. 3).

FIRST EPISTLE to TIMOTHY, Bishop of Ephesus. See the Introduction to that Epistle, p. 420.

EPISTLE to TITUS, Bishop of Crete.

St. Paul passes a winter at Nicopolis in Epirus (Tit. iii. 12).

Probably visits Corinth, where Erastus was left in charge (2 Tim. iv. 20).

Comes to Asia, where he left Trophimus at Miletus (2 Tim. iv. 20).

Perhaps saw Timothy at Miletus. Cp. 2 Tim. i. 3.

St. Paul is arrested, probably near Miletus, and is sent a prisoner to Rome.

See the Introduction to the Pastoral Epistles, and notes on 2 Tim. i. 4. 13; iv. 13—17.

Touches at Troas (2 Tim. iv. 13) in his way to Rome.

Is brought, probably by the Egnatian way, to Rome.

At Rome, writes the SECOND EPISTLE to TIMOTHY.

68 His MARTYRDOM at Rome. See the Introduction to the Epistles to Timothy, p. 423, 424.

ANCIENT UNCIAL GREEK MANUSCRIPTS

OF

ST. PAUL'S EPISTLES.

See above, the Introduction to the Gospels, p. xxxvi, and on the Acts of the Apostles, p. xlii, for a fuller description of them.

A Alexandrine. It does not contain 2 Cor. iv. 13—xii. 6.

B Vatican; printed by Cardinal Mai, Rome, 1858. It fails at Hebrews ix. 14 to the end, and does not contain the two Epistles to Timothy, or the Epistles to Titus and Philemon.

C Codex Ephrem rescriptus; with some omissions. See Tischendorf, p. clxxxi.

D Codex Claromontanus, Greek and Latin.

E Codex Sangermanensis, now Petropolitanus.

F Codex Augiensis, Greek and Latin, now published by the Rev. F. H. Scrivener.

G Codex Boernerianus, Greek and Latin.

H Codex Coislinianus.

I Codex Angelicus Romanus, called L by Tischendorf, ed. 1859.

K Codex Mosquensis; with some omissions. See Tischendorf, p. cxc.

M See Tischendorf (Apparatus Criticus, p. cxc, ed. 7th, 1859).

INTRODUCTION

TO

ST. PAUL'S FIRST EPISTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

I. 1. St. Paul had visited Thessalonica on his first missionary journey into Greece (Acts xvii. 1—9). He had spent there but a short time, being driven from the city by the Jews not long after his arrival (v. 5—10).

From Thessalonica he went to Berœa, accompanied by Silas, as he is called by St. Luke, in the Acts of the Apostles, or, as St. Paul always calls him, Silvanus.

Being pursued by the rancour of the Jews, coming from Thessalonica, St. Paul quitted Berœa, leaving Silas and Timotheus there, and took ship for Athens (Acts xvii. 14, 15).

To Athens he was followed by Timotheus (1 Thess. iii. 1), and from Athens he despatched Timotheus back to Thessalonica, in order to confirm the faith of the Christians there, and to ascertain, and to report to the Apostle, what was their spiritual condition (1 Thess. iii. 2—5).

2. After a short stay at Athens, St. Paul came to Corinth (Acts xviii. 1).

At Corinth he formed a connexion with Aquila and Priscilla, and abode with them, and laboured with his own hands as a tent-maker, and preached "every Sabbath-day in the Synagogue, and endeavoured to persuade both Jews and Greeks" (Acts xviii. 2—4).

3. When he had thus been engaged at Corinth for some time, Silas and Timotheus came to him from Macedonia (Acts xviii. 5), bringing with them pecuniary supplies for the Apostle (2 Cor. xi. 9).

It would seem that Timotheus only came directly from Thessalonica, to which he had been sent by St. Paul from Athens, as above stated. (See 1 Thess. iii. 6.)

But Silas also came with Timotheus to Corinth, and he also came from Macedonia (Acts xviii. 5), though probably from some other city, perhaps Philippi, the Christians of which are commended for their liberality by the Apostle on the occasion of his first visit to Greece (Phil. iv. 15), and through Berœa (Acts xvii. 13).

On the arrival of Timotheus at Corinth, St. Paul wrote this Epistle to the Thessalonians from that city (1 Thess. iii. 6. Acts xviii. 5).

4. It will be seen in the statements contained in the Chronological Table prefixed to the Acts of the Apostles (pp. xxxv—xxxix) and to this volume, that this Epistle was probably written in A.D. 53[1].

5. It was the first written of all St. Paul's Epistles. As to this point there is almost an universal consent of critics, e. g. Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact, Baronius, Ussher, Petavius, Lightfoot, Pearson, Hammond, Mill, Lardner, Eichhorn, Hug, De Wette, Hemsen, Wurm, Anger, Credner, Neander, Wieseler, Bloomfield, Davidson, Alford, and others. See the Table in Credner, p. 336, Wieseler, p. 606.

II. This circumstance imparts to it a special interest and importance.

In reference to this particular characteristic of this the first Epistle of St. Paul, it may be observed, [1] Cp. Wieseler, Chronologie der apostolischen Zeitalters, p. 40—44, p. 595. Lünemann, Einleitung, p. 6. Alford, Prolegom. p. 46. De Wette, p. 91. Davidson, ii. p. 434.

1. That, at the time in which it was written, Greece was under Roman sway, and was divided into two Provinces, Macedonia and Achaia.

The capital city of the former Province was Thessalonica; the capital of the latter Province was Corinth.

The first Epistle of St. Paul was written in the one of these two capital cities, Corinth; and it was addressed to the other of them, Thessalonica.

This circumstance illustrates the history of St. Paul, and of the Apostolic Church.

It is a specimen of his practice. It displays the principle of action by which he was guided and governed. He chose the greatest Cities as the fields of his missionary labour.

Here is a proof of his courage and zeal, and also of his confidence in the truth of his cause, and in the aid of the Holy Ghost. St. Paul encountered Satan in his strongest holds, and there he planted the Cross.

2. Besides, the wisdom of the Apostle is evident from this choice, as follows:

Thessalonica was a large Metropolis, communicating by a great Roman military road—the Via Egnatia—with the shores of the Adriatic and Italy on the West, and with Asia on the East. It was also situated on the coast, and had an excellent harbour. Consequently it was a commercial emporium, and had intercourse by sea with all parts of the civilized world. No wonder then, that, as St. Paul himself affirms in this Epistle (1 Thess. i. 8), the success of the Gospel at Thessalonica was soon known far and wide, and (in his own expressive phrase) the Word of God sounded forth from Thessalonica, as by a trumpet, throughout the world.

3. It may be remarked also, that in addressing an Epistle to the Church of Thessalonica, the Holy Spirit, writing by St. Paul, was addressing the Church at large, of every age and country in the world.

This Epistle was to be publicly read in the Church there (1 Thess. v. 27, where see note). The Apostle gives a solemn charge to that effect. It was to be read there, not as a private letter, but as the Epistle of a person inspired by the Holy Ghost; as a missive from God. All Christian antiquity testifies that this injunction was obeyed, and that it was so read (see on 1 Thess. v. 27).

4. At Thessalonica, a busy city of trade and commerce, there were many hands of copyists ready to make transcripts of the Epistle. And, from the local advantages, and commercial intercourse of Thessalonica, by sea and by land, with the principal cities of the world, copies of the Epistle addressed to it would be rapidly circulated. What the Holy Spirit wrote to Thessalonica by the hand of St. Paul, was written to all; and would soon be diffused every where. What the Apostle says of the word preached by him at Thessalonica, that it sounded forth thence every where, would be no less true of the word of God written by him in this Epistle. It would be like a Trumpet of the Gospel, which, being filled by the breath of the Holy Ghost, would sound in the ears of the world.

5. The shortness of this Epistle is not without its purpose and significance. Being short it would be more speedily transcribed and circulated. This remark applies also to the second Epistle to the Thessalonians, the next in chronological order of St. Paul's Epistles. That contains a refutation of an error, and an exposure of a fraud, and is a depository of a solemn prophetical warning. It was requisite that it should be easily circulated. Hence, probably, its brevity.

6. Since, also, these two Epistles were the first written by the Apostle, they would not have the advantage of any reputation derivable from previous writings from the same hand.

But being easily transcribed, and readily circulated, and publicly read in Churches, they would promulgate the name and acts of the great Apostle of the Gentiles, and would prepare the way for the general and ready reception of the subsequent, longer and more elaborate, Epistles from the same pen.

III. The success which attended St. Paul's Apostolic labours at Thessalonica is very remarkable.

It would seem from the Acts of the Apostles (xvii. 1—9), that he had spent only a few weeks at Thessalonica; and while he was there, as he himself relates, he "laboured night and day, working with his own hands" (1 Thess. ii. 9. 2 Thess. iii. 8). He was also the first person who preached the Gospel there (1 Thess. i. 9. 2 Cor. x. 15. Rom. xv. 20).

And yet the harvest which he there reaped was abundant; as is evident from this Epistle (1 Thess. i. 3—10. Cp. Acts xvii. 4).

Nor were the results of his preaching temporary, superficial, and stationary, but permanent, substantial, and progressive. They were fruitful of practical results, in the daily growth of the graces and virtues of a religious life, both in action and in suffering for the Gospel (1 Thess. iii. 1—9; iv. 9, 10. 2 Thess. 1—3).

By what means were these results produced?

This is an important and interesting subject of inquiry.

1. Doubtless, in a great measure, they were effected by the mighty working of the Divine Head of the Church, sending down the miraculous gifts of the Holy Ghost on those who received the faith of Christ, and were baptized into Him; exciting the attention of others by the spiritual graces vouchsafed to them, and making themselves visible by external manifestations, particularly by the Gift of Tongues; and accrediting the ministry of St. Paul by these and other supernatural effects. The Miracle recently wrought by him in the neighbouring city of Philippi, and the Divine interposition there vouchsafed in his behalf for his deliverance from prison by an earthquake (Acts xvi. 16—30), would also have made themselves heard and felt at Thessalonica, to which the intelligence of his sufferings at Philippi was brought, (1 Thess. ii. 2,) and would have predisposed many there to pay attention to his preaching.

2. Many of his converts at Thessalonica were proselytes of the Gate (Acts xvii. 4). The providential pre-arrangement for the reception of the Gospel through the medium of this important and numerous class of persons has been already described, and was one of the most effective agencies for the diffusion of Christianity in all the great cities of the heathen world[3]. There is good reason for believing that it was very serviceable at Thessalonica.

But these auxiliaries would have produced little permanent result, unless a settled provision had been made by the Holy Spirit animating and directing the Apostle for the subsequent regular and continuous watering of the seed of the Word which had been sown there by his ministry when he was in that city.

3. One of the most interesting and instructive characteristics of this Epistle—the first written by St. Paul—is therefore to be found in the evidence it affords of the provision made by him for this purpose. This evidence is more valuable because it is so unobtrusive that it would hardly attract the attention of a cursory reader.

For example, we do not find in this Epistle any direct commands given to the Thessalonians to constitute a Church; but they are addressed as already incorporated in a Church. Both the Epistles bear this address in their commencement,—"to the Church of the Thessalonians."

Nor do we find any injunction in the Epistle that they are to constitute a body of Clergy to preach the Word and administer the Sacraments of Christ. But injunctions are given them in it how they are to treat their Ministers, already constituted. "We beseech you, brethren, to know (i. e. to discern, to acknowledge, and revere) them that are over you in the Lord, and admonish you, and to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake." (1 Thess. v. 12, 13.)

Again, there is no explicit precept in the Epistle for the assembling of the Christians at Thessalonica together at a set time and place for the reading of the Holy Scriptures, and for public worship, and for the reception of the Holy Communion.

But the injunctions at the close of the Epistle will sufficiently show to an intelligent and thoughtful reader, that provision for those things had been already made.

In fact, they are, as it were, taken for granted by St. Paul in writing this Epistle.

Such usages as these are probably among the παραδόσεις, or traditions, which he had taught them, and for keeping which they are commended by him. (2 Thess. ii. 15. Cp. 1 Cor. xi. 2.)

The brief directions given at the close of his Epistle—brief, because easily understood by them to whom it was sent—with regard to the holy kiss (1 Thess. v. 26), and also as to the public reading of his own Epistle (v. 27), are of this character.

This will be readily acknowledged by those who will take the pains to compare these with other similar injunctions and directions in St. Paul's other Epistles, and with statements occurring incidentally in the History of the Acts of the Apostles[3], and will also read them with the help of the light shed upon them by the writings of Primitive Christian Antiquity, particularly those of the Apostolic Fathers, and of Justin Martyr, Tertullian, and Irenæus—without which the work of expounding the Epistles of St. Paul cannot be effectually performed[4].

[3] See the Introduction to the Acts of the Apostles, p. xvii.

IV. Hence an important inference may be drawn. If such was the provision for the regular organization of the order, ministry, and offices of the Church at Thessalonica, which St. Paul had only visited once, and where he had stayed but for a short interval, and where the Gospel had been planted merely for a few months when this Epistle was written, assuredly this organization was regarded by the Apostle as of primary importance, and doubtless he took care to provide a similar organization for other Churches, which he afterwards planted, and where he remained in person for a longer time.

This reasonable deduction will have its due weight with those who investigate the primitive history of the Church Polity. It will also have its practical bearings on the conduct of Christian Missions.

The extraordinary success of St. Paul's ministry at Thessalonica is to be attributed to the means, which, under the Divine guidance of the Holy Spirit, and with His blessing, were used by the Apostle not only for the first planting, but also for the continuous healthful growth, of the Gospel.

It will show what the Divine plan of propagating the Gospel is, and how the Divine blessing is to be obtained, for winning Heathen Populations, and in recovering semi-pagan Cities to Christ.

It will prove that this is to be achieved, not merely by preaching, even with the eloquence of a St. Paul (if it were now to be had), but also by the regular ministries of religion, in a systematic organization of Church regimen, and in the peaceful dispensation of the ordinary means of grace, to every member of the body of Christ.

Acting on these principles, the Church of the present day, in her own Missionary Labours, may look, with the Divine blessing, for similar success to that which attended those of St. Paul.

V. Lastly, another inference of a doctrinal kind suggests its proper instruction here.

On examining this Epistle, and the Second to the Thessalonians—the earliest Epistles of St. Paul—we find that as far as they are of a dogmatical character, they are mainly taken up,

With asserting, enforcing, and explaining, certain specific Articles of Christian Faith and Practice to those who have turned from Idols to the Living God by Repentance (i. 9), and have received the Gospel of Christ, and have been led into the path of Christian Life for "the work of Faith, the labour of Love, and the Patience of Hope" (i. 3). These are[5]—

1. The Death and Resurrection of Christ.
2. The General Resurrection.
3. The Second Advent of Christ in Glory, to judge the Quick and the Dead.
4. The Eternity of future Rewards and future Punishments. (See 1 Thess. iv. 13—18; v. 1—10. 23, 24. 2 Thess. i. 7—10; ii. 1—8; iii. 5.)

In perfect harmony with this his own practice in preaching, St. Paul calls these things the "first principles of the doctrine of Christ." Heb. vi. 1, 2.

5. The personal existence and active working of Satan, whom his hearers had renounced in their Baptism. (See 1 Thess. ii. 18; iii. 5. 2 Thess. ii. 9; iii. 3.)
6. The practical application of these specific doctrines.

Thus these two earliest Epistles teach where the foundations are to be laid in preaching to the Heathen, and to those who are almost Heathens. And this inference is confirmed by St. Paul's own [3] See particularly Acts xiv. 23; xx. 7. 28.

[4] See note below on 1 Thess. v. 26, 27. 2 Thess. iii. 10, 11.

[5] If, as some have ventured to allege (e.g. Baur, Paulus der Apostel, pp. 480, &c.), these Epistles were not genuine works of St. Paul, but only centos made up of other Epistles, they would have been of a much more comprehensive character, and their contents would have been much more miscellaneous than they are. Among many internal proofs of genuineness (which might be multiplied easily) one may be adduced from the first line of both the Epistles, viz. that a forger, writing in St. Paul's name, would certainly have called himself an Apostle. See note there.

practice at Athens, where he preached "Jesus and the Resurrection" (Acts xvii. 18), and a future Day of Retribution to all men both in body and soul. (Acts xvii. 31.)

Thus these two Epistles standing at the beginning of the course of teaching of the Great Apostle of the Gentiles, in his inspired writings addressed to single cities, and to the whole world even to the Day of Doom, have their appropriate place and office. They lay the foundation in asserting the personal existence and in revealing the energetic working of the Evil One, the Tempter, Satan; and in inculcating the great doctrines of Death and Judgment, Heaven, and Hell, and Eternity.

They were the first of St. Paul's Epistles; and were to be followed from time to time by other Epistles from him, which suppose this foundation to be already laid, and are built upon it.

It is a very erroneous notion,—consequent perhaps on a disregard of the chronological order of St. Paul's Epistles,—that they were put forth incoherently, accidentally, and at random, without any mutual connexion and dependence.

The Epistles of St. Paul are not mere disjointed fragments, but form a harmonious whole.

The goodly structure of the great Apostle's Teaching arose gradually, quietly, and securely, ever growing in height, beauty, and dignity, with each successive Epistle, till the whole fabric was completed. And then the holy Apostle, having at length fulfilled his task as a wise master builder in Christ (1 Cor. iii. 10), passed from the City of this World to the Everlasting City whose Builder and Maker is God (Heb. xi. 10), and from the labours and conflicts of the Church militant, to the rest and triumph of the Church glorified.

ΠΡΟΣ ΘΕΣΣΑΛΟΝΙΚΕΙΣ Α΄.

I. [1] [a] ΠΑΥΛΟΣ καὶ Σιλουανὸς καὶ Τιμόθεος τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ Θεσσαλονικέων ἐν Θεῷ Πατρὶ καὶ Κυρίῳ Ἰησοῦ Χριστῷ, χάρις ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη ἀπὸ Θεοῦ Πατρὸς ἡμῶν, καὶ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

[a] 2 Cor. 1. 19. Eph. 1. 2. 2 Thess. 1. 1. 1 Pet. 5. 12.

The title of the Epistle, πρὸς Θεσσαλονικεῖς α΄, is that which is given in A, B, D, E.

Ch. I. 1. Παῦλος] On the name Paul, see note, Acts xiii. 9.

In neither of the Epistles to the Thessalonians does St. Paul annex to his own name the title of Apostle.

But he does adopt this designation at the commencement of all his other Epistles, with three exceptions (for special reasons), the Epistles to Philemon, the Philippians, and Hebrews.

The reason seems to be, that these two Epistles to the Thessalonians are the earliest that St. Paul wrote; and that when he wrote them (viz. soon after his arrival at Corinth, A. D. 52) he had only just commenced his Apostolic Labours in Greece, and he would not put forward the Apostolic title before he had amply made good his claim to it by Apostolic acts.

Here, then, is an example of difference of address in St. Paul's Epistles, which is in harmony with the facts of the case, as related in the History of the Acts: and it shows in an unobtrusive way, that St. Paul does not overrate the results of his own ministerial labours.

— Σιλουανός] Silvanus, always so called by St. Paul (2 Thess. i. 1. 2 Cor. i. 19), and by St. Peter (1 Pet. v. 12), and always called Silas by St. Luke (Acts xv. 22. 27. 32. 34. 40), where he is first associated as a fellow-missionary with St. Paul (xvi. 19. 25. 29; xvii. 4. 10. 14, 15; xviii. 5); and always placed before Timothy by St. Luke (Acts xvii. 14, 15; xviii. 5), and by St. Paul (2 Thess. i. 1. 2 Cor. i. 19). He is first heard of in connexion with the Church at Jerusalem (Acts xv. 22), and his Aramaic name Silas was probably modified into Silvanus for readier acceptance with the Greek and Roman Christians, see on Acts xiii. 9. The same individuals were often characterized by a longer and a shorter name, see on Acts xv. 22. On his subsequent history, see on Phil. i. 1.

— Τιμόθεος] Timotheus, first associated with St. Paul at Lystra (Acts xvi. 1) in the Apostle's second missionary tour. On his personal history, see on 1 Tim. i. 2.

St. Paul associates Silvanus and Timotheus with himself in writing these two Epistles to the Thessalonians, because they had been with him at Thessalonica, and were left by him in Macedonia to continue his missionary work (see on Acts xx. 5) when he quitted it for Athens, at which place they were desired to rejoin him (Acts xvii. 13–15), and from which Timothy was despatched back to Thessalonica (1 Thess. iii. 2), whence he came to St. Paul at Corinth. (Acts xviii. 5.)

St. Paul's practice in associating others with himself in writing his Epistles, e. g. Sosthenes in his 1st Epistle to the Corinthians, and Timothy in his Epistles to the Philippians, and to the Colossians, and to Philemon, and Silvanus and Timotheus in both his Epistles to the Thessalonians, deserves consideration:—

(1) As an example of humility, modesty, and charity.

(2) As a guarantee of the genuineness, and authenticity, and integrity of his Epistles.

For example, Silvanus and Timotheus, being present with St. Paul when he wrote these two Epistles to the Thessalonians, and being associated with St. Paul in writing them, would naturally be appealed to if any doubt arose as to the genuineness, &c. of any part of them.

In this respect there was a peculiar fitness in the choice of Timothy. He is associated with St. Paul in these his first Epistles to a Christian Church, and also in the last, to the Philippians.

He was young when these Epistles were written (Acts xvi. 1 Tim. iv. 12), and survived long, in an exalted station in the Church as Bishop of Ephesus, to be a public witness of the genuineness of the Epistles of St. Paul. (Euseb. iii. 4, cf. on Rev. ii. 2. Tillemont, Mem. ii. 67.)

At the same time, the authorship of the Epistles is solely from St. Paul. They are not in any sense the Epistles of Timothy, but entirely of St. Paul. See below, iii. 1, where he says, "We thought it good to be left at Athens alone, and sent Timothy, our brother and fellow-labourer to you;" and (ver. 6) "when Timothy came to us from you." Here, in using the pronoun we, he means himself only, for Silvanus as well as Timothy came to him from Macedonia to Corinth. (Acts xviii. 5) And indeed Timothy only seems to have come to St. Paul at Athens, and Silvanus remained in Macedonia. (Acts xvii. 10. 14.) See also the Epistle to the Philippians (ii. 19), where he mentions Timothy, although Timothy's name is associated with his own at the beginning of the Epistle.

— τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ Θεσσαλονικέων] to the Church of the Thessalonians. And so again in the second Epistle, i. 1. He does not speak of the Church in the city, but of the Church of inhabitants in it.

It is observable that these two Epistles, the earliest in date, are the only Epistles of St. Paul where he writes thus.

In other cases he addresses the Church as the Church of God, planted and settled in the city. See, for instance, 1 Cor. i. 2, τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ τοῦ Θεοῦ τῇ οὔσῃ ἐν Κορίνθῳ. Similarly St. John in the Apocalypse addresses each of the Churches of Asia, as settled in their respective cities, e. g. ἐν Ἐφέσῳ (Rev. ii. 1), ἐν Σμύρνῃ (ii. 8), ἐν Περγάμῳ (ii. 12). Cf. ii. 18; iii. 1. 7. 14.

What is the reason of this difference?

Perhaps the Christians of Thessalonica, who had only been visited once by St. Paul, and among whom he had only been able to remain for about three weeks (Acts xvii. 2), could hardly have been yet so organized as that a Church might be said to be planted in their city. A Church there was, but it was rather made up of Thessalonians than established in Thessalonica.

The same remark may, perhaps, apply to Laodicea. (Col. iv. 16.)

But at Corinth he remained a year and six months. (Acts xviii. 11.) Therefore, in writing his Epistles to the Corinthians, he might well inscribe them "to the Church that is existing (τῇ οὔσῃ) in Corinth." (1 Cor. i. 2. 2 Cor. i. 1.)

Observe also that in his first five Epistles, and in them only (viz. the two to the Thessalonians, the Epistle to the Galatians, and the two to the Corinthians), does he address himself τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ to the Church of, or in, the city or country.

In all the later Epistles to other Churches he expands the word to τοῖς ἁγίοις, "the Saints," or τοῖς ἁγίοις πᾶσι, "all the Saints."

The only exception, which confirms the rule, is Philemon 2, τῇ κατ' οἶκόν σου ἐκκλησίᾳ. Thus he teaches that all the mem-

2 [b] Εὐχαριστοῦμεν τῷ Θεῷ πάντοτε περὶ πάντων ὑμῶν, μνείαν ὑμῶν ποιούμενοι ἐπὶ τῶν προσευχῶν ἡμῶν ἀδιαλείπτως 3 [c] μνημονεύοντες ὑμῶν τοῦ ἔργου τῆς πίστεως, καὶ τοῦ κόπου τῆς ἀγάπης, καὶ τῆς ὑπομονῆς τῆς ἐλπίδος τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ Πατρὸς ἡμῶν, 4 [d] εἰδότες, ἀδελφοὶ ἠγαπημένοι ὑπὸ Θεοῦ, τὴν ἐκλογὴν ὑμῶν, 5 [e] ὅτι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον ἡμῶν οὐκ ἐγενήθη εἰς ὑμᾶς ἐν λόγῳ μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐν δυνάμει καὶ ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ, καὶ ἐν πληροφορίᾳ πολλῇ, καθὼς οἴδατε οἷοι ἐγενήθημεν ἐν ὑμῖν δι' ὑμᾶς. 6 [f] Καὶ ὑμεῖς μιμηταὶ ἡμῶν ἐγενήθητε καὶ τοῦ Κυρίου δεξάμενοι τὸν λόγον ἐν b Eph. 1. 16. 2 Thess. 1. 3. Phil. 1. 3. Rom. 1. 8, 9.

c John 6. 29. 2 Thess. 1. 11. Gal. 5. 6. James 2. 17.
d Col. 3. 12. 2 Thess. 2. 13. ch. 2. 12. 2 Tim. 1. 9, 10. Tit. 3. 4, 5.
e 1 Cor. 2. 4. & 4. 20. 2 Cor. 6. 6. ch. 2. 10.
f 1 Cor. 11. 1. Acts 5. 41. Heb. 10. 34. Acts 13. 52.

bers of the visible Church are to be accounted to be, and are obliged to be, ἅγιοι, saints.

On the geography and history of Thessalonica, see the authorities in Wetstein, p. 297; Winer, R. W. B. ii. p. 608; Leake, Northern Greece, iii. 235; Howson, i. 379; Lünemann, p. 1; Alford, Proleg. p. 44. It was anciently called Therme, and gave its name to the bay (sinus Thermaicus) on which it was built, and was enlarged and beautified by Cassander, and called Thessalonica from his wife, sister of Alexander the Great. After the Roman conquest of Macedonia by Paulus Æmilius, it became the capital of Macedonia Secunda, and afterwards the capital of the whole Province; and was the most populous and wealthy city of Macedonia in the Apostolic age. (Strabo, vii. 7. Theodoret, H. E. v. 17.)

On the contrast of character between Thessalonica, a Greek free city, and Philippi, a Roman colony in Greece, see above note on Acts xvii. 6.

— χάρις ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη] Grace to you and Peace. Observe that at the commencement of this, the first of St. Paul's Epistles, and of every one of his Epistles, the Apostle adopts this double salutation—ΧΑΡΙΣ, Grace, referring to the Greek greeting χαίρειν.

ΕΙΡΗΝΗ, Peace, referring to the Hebrew שָׁלוֹם (Shalom).

But he elevates and spiritualizes, consecrates and Christianizes those forms of social salutation; he gives an Apostolic greeting to the World. So also St. Peter, "Grace and Peace." (1 Pet. i. 2. 2 Pet. i. 2.) In the Pastoral Epistles of St. Paul ἔλεος is inserted between χάρις and εἰρήνη, and so 2 John 3, and Jude 2.

Our Blessed Saviour, the Prince of Peace, had said to His assembled Apostles on the Sunday of, and next after, His Resurrection from the Dead, "PEACE be unto you" (John xx. 19. 26), but He had not yet said, "GRACE be upon you," for He had not yet been glorified by His Ascension, and had not yet sent down from heaven the Holy Spirit of Grace.

— ἀπὸ Θεοῦ—Χριστοῦ] Not found in B, F, G, and omitted by Tisch., Lünem, Alf.. but the words are in A, D, E, J, K.

2. εὐχαριστοῦμεν] We render thanks.

One of the characteristics of the two Epistles to the Thessalonians, which bespeaks their early date, and distinguishes them from the later Epistles, is the use throughout of the first person plural we and our, and not I and mine. Cf. 2 Thess. i. 3. And contrast this with Philippians i. 3, and that Epistle throughout, in which Timothy is also associated with St. Paul. (Phil. i. 1.)

When he wrote to the Thessalonians the dignity of St. Paul's Apostolic character, and the weight of his authority, had not as yet been fully shown and acknowledged.

The following recapitulatory summary of the introductory characteristics of St. Paul's Epistles may serve to illustrate their claims to order and design.

(1) He begins all his Epistles with his own name "Paul," except the Epistle to the Hebrews.

(2) He adds to his own name the official title of Apostle in all his Epistles, except in the two earliest, and in the Epistles to Philemon, the Philippians, and the Hebrews, where it is omitted for special reasons.

(3) In his earliest five Epistles he addresses himself τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ κ.τ.λ., but in no others.

(4) In his earliest two Epistles he addresses himself τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ of persons in the city, and not τῇ Ἐκκλησίᾳ in the city, and in no others.

(5) In all the later Epistles he addresses himself τοῖς ἁγίοις.

(6) In all his Epistles he commences with the salutation χάρις καὶ εἰρήνη, "Grace and Peace." In all his Pastoral Epistles, "Grace, Mercy, and Peace."

(7) In his earliest Epistles he uses the first person plural 'we:' in his later Epistles the first person singular 'I.'

(8) As to his usage at the close of his Epistles, see on 1 Thess. v. 28.

(9) All these minute incidents indicate a well prepared and well digested plan in the composition of his Epistles, even in details of diction, and much more in the delivery of doctrine. See Introduction above, § v.

3. τοῦ ἔργου τῆς πίστεως] of the work of your faith, the fruit of the tree planted by us. Cp. Titus iii. 8. James ii. 22, and Winer, p. 541. St. Paul commends here a Faith which works, a Love which labours, and a Hope which endures; and teaches that Faith is not to be approved without Works, nor Love without Labour, nor Hope without Patience. Cp. Chrys. here.

— τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν] of our Lord. Christ, the Author and also the object of Faith, Charity, and Hope. They proceed from Him as their Origin, and tend towards Him, and terminate in Him as their End.

— ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ Πατρὸς ἡμῶν] in the sight of God, who is also our Father. Although men may not see your good works, and although if they see them they may revile them, you are not moved thereby, for your eye is upon God, and the Eye of your Heavenly Father, who seeth in secret, is upon you; and He will hereafter reward you openly for your Faith, Hope, and Charity, when this world has passed away. (Matt. vi. 4. 18.) Cp. Chrys., Theoph.

4. εἰδότες τὴν ἐκλογὴν ὑμῶν] knowing your election. This is said to all the members of the Thessalonian Church (cp. 2 Thess. ii. 13), and does not predicate any thing of the final condition of any one among them. St. Paul did not even know whether he himself would be saved. (1 Cor. ix. 27, and Philipp. iii. 11—13.)

Compare 1 Pet. i. 1, where St. Peter addresses all to whom he is writing as ἐκλεκτοί, and 2 Pet. i. 10, where he exhorts them to make their election (ἐκλογὴν) sure.

All the members of the Visible Church are ἐκλεκτοί in the eyes of man; the members of the Invisible Church alone, whom God, and God only, knows, and of whom He knows that they will persevere unto the end, are elect in the eyes of God. See below on Romans viii. 30. Hooker, III. ii. 4—8.

Observe, therefore, that St. Paul infers their election from their good fruits.

He says we "know your election, because (ὅτι) our Gospel was made (by God's grace) to you to be effectual (ἐγενήθη, factum est), not in words only, but in power and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance, just as you on your side know what sort of persons we were made (by God's grace) to be in you for your sakes. From the fruits of the Gospel among you we derive proofs of your election, and reasons for gratitude to God; as you on your side may derive reasons also for faith, and hope, and joy, from considering the effects wrought in us by God's grace among you."

5.] On the aorist passive ἐγενήθη, was made (i. e. by God's grace), see Winer, § 15, p. 77.

It is observable that this form is repeated very often in this, the first, and in the second chapter of St. Paul's first Epistle (see v. 5, bis v. 6, and ii. 5. 7, 8. 10. 14), as if he would thus declare at the outset that whatever he or his converts did that was good, was made and done in them by the free grace of God. The Vulgate rightly renders ἐγενήθητε, v. 6, by 'facti estis;' and so the old Latin Version in Cod. Augiensis, and Cod. Boernerianus, and Primasius.

— εἰς ὑμᾶς] So B, I, K, most cursive MSS., Lachmann, and Alf. Elz. has πρός: but εἰς is better adapted to express the effectual reception of the Gospel in the heart. Cp. Heb. ii. 3.

— ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ] by the Holy Ghost, and His gifts, such as the gift of Tongues shed on those who were admitted into the Church by Baptism. See Acts x. 44. (Theodoret.)

— ἐν πληροφορίᾳ] in full assurance. The metaphor is from a ship. As a vessel with its sails spread and filled with a prosperous gale is wafted on steadily and swiftly, so you went on in your Christian voyage, with your hearts filled and impelled by the heavenly breeze of the Spirit. See above on Luke i. 1.

6. μιμηταὶ ἡμῶν ἐγενήθητε] ye were made (by God's grace) to be followers of us and of the Lord. See on 1 Cor. xi. 1, μιμηταί μου γίνεσθε, καθὼς κἀγὼ Χριστοῦ.

θλίψει πολλῇ, μετὰ χαρᾶς Πνεύματος ἁγίου, 7 ὥστε γενέσθαι ὑμᾶς τύπον πᾶσι τοῖς πιστεύουσιν ἐν τῇ Μακεδονίᾳ καὶ ἐν τῇ Ἀχαΐᾳ. 8 g Ἀφ' ὑμῶν γὰρ ἐξήχηται ὁ λόγος τοῦ Κυρίου οὐ μόνον ἐν τῇ Μακεδονίᾳ καὶ Ἀχαΐᾳ, ἀλλὰ ἐν παντὶ τόπῳ ἡ πίστις ὑμῶν ἡ πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ἐξελήλυθεν, ὥστε μὴ χρείαν ἔχειν ἡμᾶς λαλεῖν τι. 9 h Αὐτοὶ γὰρ περὶ ἡμῶν ἀπαγγέλλουσιν ὁποίαν εἴσοδον ἔσχομεν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, καὶ πῶς ἐπεστρέψατε πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ἀπὸ τῶν εἰδώλων δουλεύειν Θεῷ ζῶντι καὶ ἀληθινῷ, 10 i καὶ ἀναμένειν τὸν Υἱὸν αὐτοῦ ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν ὃν ἤγειρεν ἐκ νεκρῶν Ἰησοῦν, τὸν ῥυόμενον ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ τῆς ὀργῆς τῆς ἐρχομένης.

II. 1 a Αὐτοὶ γὰρ οἴδατε, ἀδελφοί, τὴν εἴσοδον ἡμῶν τὴν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ὅτι οὐ κενὴ γέγονεν, 2 b ἀλλὰ προπαθόντες καὶ ὑβρισθέντες, καθὼς οἴδατε, ἐν Φιλίπποις, ἐπαρρησιασάμεθα ἐν τῷ Θεῷ ἡμῶν λαλῆσαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν πολλῷ ἀγῶνι.

g Rom. 10. 18. & 1. 8. 2 Thess. 1. 4. 3 John 12.

h ch. 2. 1. 1 Cor. 12. 2. Gal. 4. 8, 9. 1 Phil. 3. 20. 2 Thess. 1. 10. Rev. 1. 7. Matt. 3. 7. Luke 3. 7. Heb. 10. 27.

a ch. 1. 5, 9. b Acts v. 41. & 16. 22, &c. & 17. 2. Phil. 1. 30. 2 Tim. 1. 12. Heb. 11. 36, 37.

---

7. τύπον] So B, D; and this reading has been adopted by Lachm., Tisch., Alford, and is preferred by Lünemann and Winer, p. 157; and so Vulg., and Syriac, and Æthiopic Versions, and Primasius, "ut facti sitis forma." Elz. has τύπους.

— ἐν τῇ Μακεδονίᾳ καὶ ἐν τῇ Ἀχαΐᾳ] In Macedonia and Achaia, the two Roman provinces of Greece. See note on Acts xvi. 10, and above, Introduction to this Epistle, § II.—Elz. omits the second ἐν.

8. ἐξήχηται] has been made to sound forth as the clear voice of a Trumpet (Chrys., Theodoret). ἐκηρύχθη (Hesych.) The neuter form is used by the Septuagint in Joel iii. 14, ἦχοι ἐξήχησαν. Sirach xl. 13, βροντὴ ἐξήχησεν. This diffusion of the Gospel from Thessalonica was a happy result of its geographical position and commercial advantages.

St. Paul, in his missionary course, selected great centres of population as the fields of his apostolic labours,—such as Thessalonica, Corinth, Ephesus, Rome. In them he planted the Cross. To them specially he addressed Epistles. He chose those places where he had enemies. (Cp. 1 Cor. xvi. 9.) He encountered Satan in his strongholds,—a proof of his courage, and of confidence in his cause, and an evidence of the truth of Christianity. And those great Cities became, as Thessalonica is here described, like Trumpets of the Gospel to the World. (Cp. Rom. i. 8.)

9. αὐτοί] ipsi, of their own accord, without any word on our part.

— ἴσχομεν] So the best authorities.—Elz. ἔχομεν.

— ἀπὸ τῶν εἰδώλων] from idols. Therefore the Church of the Thessalonians consisted mainly of Gentile converts; and this is what appears from the History of the Acts, xvii. 5. 11. 13. It must be remembered, however, that St. Paul, on his arrival at Thessalonica, had offered the Gospel in the first instance (as was his invariable practice) to the Jews. He passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, and went on to Thessalonica, because the Synagogue of that District was there. (Acts xvii. 1.) And when there, he went, according to his custom, into the Synagogue, and reasoned with them for three Sabbath days from their Scriptures. (Acts xvii. 2.)

But the Jews of Thessalonica did not "search the Scriptures, whether these things were so." (Acts xvii. 11.) The fruits of his preaching were, for the most part, seen by its effects upon the Gentiles. This is evident from the exasperation of the Jews, which was produced by those effects. See below, ii. 16, and Acts xvii. 4, where the reading of A, D, and the Vulgate, καὶ Ἑλλήνων πλῆθος πολύ, approved by Paley and received by Lachmann, has much to recommend it.

This was a remarkable result. The Jews, who possessed the advantage of the preparations made for the Gospel by the Scriptures of the Old Testament, which they had in their hands and heard in their Synagogues, rejected the Gospel; the Gentiles, who did not enjoy this benefit, received it.

In accordance with these historical facts, we may observe as a remarkable internal coincidence, that in both the Epistles to the Thessalonians, and also to their neighbours the Philippians (whose circumstances were similar), St. Paul never quotes directly from the Scriptures of the Old Testament. (Cp. below, 1 Cor. i. 19.)

The Holy Spirit addressed the first two Epistles of the New Testament to those who had not enjoyed the light of the Old Testament, but profited by the Light of Conscience and of Reason, and gladly received the Gospel. Thus he shows God's love to all who, in a teachable spirit, use the advantages, whatever they may be, that they possess.

These considerations suggest the following inquiry:—Whether other spiritual provision was not then made for the edification of these and other Gentile Churches of Macedonia and Achaia?

St. Paul deemed it requisite that they should now possess Epistles written by himself . . . . . Was it not equally necessary that they should possess a written Historical Record of the words, works, and sufferings of Christ? The Holy Spirit dictated Epistles to them. Is it not probable that they were then supplied by Him also with a written Gospel?

Is it not also probable that this Gospel was the Gospel of St. Luke?

It appears that St. Paul was accompanied from Troas into Macedonia by St. Luke.

St. Luke describes St. Paul's vision at Troas in Acts xvi. 10; and after that description, he adds, "we immediately sought means to go forth into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us to preach the Gospel to them."

St. Luke therefore had a mission in Macedonia as well as St. Paul.

St. Luke appears to have been left by St. Paul at Philippi (see on Acts xvi. 40). For what purpose?

For an answer to this question let the reader be requested to consider the statements and reasonings in the notes below on 1 Thess. v. 2, and on 1 Cor. viii. 18.

In the Collect for St. Luke's Day, the Church of England, with many ancient Christian Authorities, has expressed an opinion that the words of St. Paul, "the brother whose praise is in the Gospel in all the Churches" (which words were written in Macedonia), refer to St. Luke.

The Gospel of St. Luke was generally supposed by Christian Antiquity to have been written under the eye of St. Paul, and to have been specially designed for the Churches of Macedonia and Achaia. (See Introduction to St. Luke's Gospel.)

No place would be better adapted for the circulation of a written Gospel than Thessalonica, on account of its situation and its commerce, by means of which (as the Apostle here says) "the Gospel sounded from it through the world." On this point see further below, ii. 18; v. 2. 27.

— Θεῷ ζῶντι καὶ ἀληθινῷ] 'The Living and True God,' as distinguished from dead images and dead men who are objects of worship to the heathen. Cp. Wisdom xiv. 15 concerning the origin of idolatry, εἰκόνα ποιήσας τὸν νεκρὸν ἄνθρωπον, ὃς Θεὸν ἐτίμησε.

On the proper sense of ἀληθινὸς (the sense of which is very different from that of ἀληθὴς) as applied to the One true God in order to distinguish Him from the many Idols of Paganism, see note on John xvii. 3, and cp. 1 John v. 20, 21, οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ἀληθινὸς Θεὸς καὶ ἡ ζωὴ αἰώνιος· τεκνία, φυλάξατε ἑαυτοὺς ἀπὸ τῶν εἰδώλων.

10. καὶ ἀναμένειν] and to wait for—. The Doctrines of the future Resurrection and Universal Judgment to come, and the Supreme Royalty of Jesus, were the Doctrines which the Apostle made the primary subject of his preaching to the Gentiles. See above, Introduction to this Epistle, § V., and below, 1 Thess. iii. 13; iv. 16; v. 2. 2 Thess. i. 7, and St. Paul's Sermon at Athens, Acts xvii. 31; and cp. Tertullian de Resurrectione, c. 24.

Hence the charge against him at Thessalonica, as if he preached against Cæsar, "saying, that there is a different King (ἕτερον βασιλέα), Jesus" (Acts xvii. 7).

CH. II. 2. ὑβρισθέντες, καθὼς οἴδατε] contumeliously and injuriously handled, as ye know, at Philippi—a statement explained by the History, Acts xvi. 22, describing the shameful usage received by Paul and Silas at Philippi.

3 c Ἡ γὰρ παράκλησις ἡμῶν οὐκ ἐκ πλάνης, οὐδὲ ἐξ ἀκαθαρσίας, οὐδὲ ἐν δόλῳ, 4 d ἀλλὰ, καθὼς δεδοκιμάσμεθα ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ πιστευθῆναι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, οὕτω λαλοῦμεν, οὐχ ὡς ἀνθρώποις ἀρέσκοντες, ἀλλὰ τῷ Θεῷ τῷ δοκιμάζοντι τὰς καρδίας ὑμῶν.

5 e Οὔτε γάρ ποτε ἐν λόγῳ κολακείας ἐγενήθημεν, καθὼς οἴδατε, οὔτε ἐν προφάσει πλεονεξίας, Θεὸς μάρτυς, 6 f οὔτε ζητοῦντες ἐξ ἀνθρώπων δόξαν, οὔτε ἀφ' ὑμῶν οὔτε ἀπ' ἄλλων δυνάμενοι ἐν βάρει εἶναι, ὡς Χριστοῦ ἀπόστολοι, 7 g ἀλλ' c 2 Cor. 2. 17. & 4. 2. d 1 Tim. 1. 11, 12. Tit. 1. 3. Gal. 2. 7. & 1. 10.

e Acts 20. 33. 2 Cor. 1. 23. & 2. 17. & 4. 2. & 7. 2. & 11. 31. & 12. 17. Gal. 1. 10.
f John 5. 41, 44. & 12. 43. 2 Thess. 3. 8, 9.
g 1 Cor. 2. 3. & 9. 1, &c. 2 Cor. 10. 1, 2, 10, 11. & 13. 4.

It has been asked by some in modern times—

Is it probable that St. Paul, who had pleaded his Roman citizenship at Jerusalem, in order to escape scourging, should not have also pleaded it in Philippi, in order to escape a similar outrage? And some have been led to question the veracity of the sacred history of the Acts on the ground of this alleged improbability.

This question has been already considered in the note on Acts xvi. 22, to which it may be added here that doubtless together with the tidings of his shameful usage, which, he here says, were brought from Philippi to Thessalonica, were brought also the tidings of the miraculous ejection of the Evil Spirit which gave occasion to that shameful usage (Acts xvi. 18), and of his own miraculous deliverance from the prison, which followed it, and of his honourable departure from Philippi (Acts xvi. 25—40).

May we not therefore believe that he was withheld from pleading his Roman citizenship at Philippi by the same Holy Spirit Who enabled him to suffer with joy, and to sing praise to God in the prison at midnight? and that the knowledge of what the Apostle had nobly done and patiently suffered at Philippi, opened the way for the joyful acceptance of the Gospel at Thessalonica?

3. οὐκ ἐκ πλάνης—ἀκαθαρσίας] 'non ex seductione nec ex immunditiâ' (Tertullian de Pudic. c. 17), and so the Syriac and Arabic versions, 'neither from deception nor uncleanness'—the means with which the Evil Spirit deluded the heathen; in the former case, by sorcery, oracles, and divinations; in the latter, by impurity, consecrated as a part of Religion. See note below, on iv. 4.

St. Paul had encountered the Evil One in the former character, that of a πλάνος or seducer, in the Pythoness at Philippi, in Macedonia (see on Acts xvi. 16). He was now encountering him in the latter shape, that of uncleanness, in Achaia, at Corinth, where πορνεία was identified with the worship of Aphroditê, and where he writes this present Epistle.

— οὐδὲ ἐν δόλῳ] nor yet by guile. So A, B, C, D, F, G, and Lachmann, Tisch., Alford. Elz. has οὔτε.

St. Paul here passes to another phase of delusion, one practised by Satan under the guise of Christianity. Hence οὐδὲ, nor yet, is preferable to οὔτε. Δόλος is here predicated of Christian Teachers who adulterate the truth with false admixtures, δολοῦντες τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ (see 1 Cor. iv. 2; cp. 2 Cor. ii. 17), and the word is connected with δέλω, δέλεαρ, esca, a lure with which they hunt souls (Theodoret). But the notion of πλάνη is seduction from the truth into error. A person who uses δόλος is also a πλάνος, but a man may be πλάνος without resorting to δόλος.

St. Paul had experience of the evil effects of δόλος in religion, among the ἐργάται δόλιοι of Corinth (2 Cor. xi. 13).

Observe also that he uses two different prepositions here. He says ἐκ πλάνης, ἐξ ἀκαθαρσίας, but ἐν δόλῳ. The former intimates the origin and the main spring of action, the other the habit of mind and temper in which the agent acts, and the instruments by which he acts.

4. πιστευθῆναι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον] to be entrusted with the Gospel. As to the construction, see 1 Tim. i. 11, εὐαγγέλιον ὃ ἐπιστεύθην ἐγώ, and Gal. ii. 7, and note on Acts xxi. 3.

5. ἐν λόγῳ κολακείας] In this and like examples, the preposition ἐν denotes that in which, with which, and by which the agent works: as, for example, the armour of a soldier, with which, and in which, he is clad, and by which he fights. As in Virg. v. 37, "Horridus in jaculis et pelle Libystidis ursae." Cp. Ephes. vi. 16, τὸν θυρεὸν τῆς πίστεως ἐν ᾧ κ.τ.λ., and see Winer, p. 343.

Λόγος κολακείας is the language of flattery, and the genitive indicates the quality of what is said; or it signifies such a speech as Flattery personified would utter. So Acts xiii. 15 λόγος παρακλήσεως, 1 Cor. ii. 4 λόγος σοφίας: and it is contrasted with the λόγος ἀληθείας of 2 Cor. vi. 7, which describes such language as Truth speaks, and which is characterized by truth as its essence.

— ἐγενήθημεν] we were made. Cp. v. 7. This passage is quoted by Clemens Alex. Pædag. i. § 19, p. 109, Potter, with the singular variety of νήπιοι for ἤπιοι.

— προφάσει πλεονεξίας] a mask for covetousness. We were not clad in any fair disguise of covetousness. Πρόφασις is not from πρόφημι, but from προφαίνω, and means that which is used by a person who is "Introrsus turpis, speciosus pelle decorâ" (Horat. 1 Epist. xvi. 45. 1 Sat. i. 65).

Our Saviour says of the obstinate Jews that had heard His doctrine and seen His miracles, that they had no cloak (πρόφασιν) for their sins. (John xv. 22.) He means that they had not even any colour or fair show to pretend by way of excuse for their sins. And St. Paul professes not to have used at any time a cloak of covetousness; that is, he did not, under colour of preaching the Gospel, endeavour to make a prey of those to whom he preached, or gain to himself by preaching. Hence we may learn what a base thing it is to be covetously minded. Would the Apostle be so careful to quit himself of the suspicion if the crime were any whit tolerable? To the Ephesians he says, I have coveted no man's silver or gold or apparel. (Acts xx. 33.) To the Corinthians, I have not written these things, that it should be so done to me. (1 Cor. ix. 15.) I was not, neither will I be, burdensome to you; for I seek not yours but you. (2 Cor. xii. 14.) To the Thessalonians, Neither at any time used we a cloak of covetousness, God is witness. (1 Thess. ii. 5.) He called God in to be his compurgator, which sure he would not do, nisi dignus vindice nodus, if it did not much concern him to stand clear in the eye of the world in that behalf. And he speaketh there of a cloak of covetousness too; for who indeed shameth not to wear it (covetousness) outwardly? No man will profess himself covetous, be he never so wretchedly sordid within; but he will for very shame cast as handsome a cloak as he can over it,—frugality, good husbandry, providence,—some cloak or other, to hide the filthiness of it from the sight of others. But filthy it is still, be it cloaked never so honestly. God abhorreth it as a filthy thing: He speaketh well of the covetous, whom God abhorreth. (Ps. x. 3.) Our Apostle hath set a brand of filthiness upon it more than once, calling it filthy lucre, μὴ αἰσχροκερδῆ. (1 Tim. iii. 3. 8. Tit. i. 7.) Yea, so unfit he holdeth it to be found in the priests, that he would not have it, if it were possible, so much as once named, at least not without some stigma upon it, among the saints, Eph. v. 3. Bp. Sanderson, iii. p. 290, cp. i. 115.

6. ἐν βάρει] has a double meaning, as explained by the ancient expositors:—

(1) Weighty, in authority. (Chrys.)

(2) Burdensome, as requiring pecuniary support from you. (Theodoret.)

Both meanings are well comprised by Theophylact, who says, "We had power to be ἐν βάρει, weighty and burdensome to you, by virtue of our dignity and office as Apostles of Christ; as such we had a right to be honoured ἐν τιμῇ, ἐν δόξῃ, and also to be maintained by you, and so to be a burden to you. For our dignity claims this at your hands." See also Bengel here.

St. Paul himself combines the two notions of βάρος:—

(1) That of weight in 2 Cor. x. 10, "His letters, they say, are weighty" (βαρεῖαι).

(2) That of a burden, below v. 9, πρὸς τὸ μὴ ἐπιβαρῆσαί τινα, so as not to be burdensome to any by demanding maintenance; and 2 Thess. iii. 8, where he uses the same words. Compare the similar words of S. Ignatius, Phil. 6, οὐκ ἔχει τις καυχήσασθαι ὅτι ἐβάρησά τινα ἐν μικρῷ ἢ ἐν μεγάλῳ. The Hebrew and Latin languages suggest such a double meaning in reference to the person who is honoured, and also to those who honour him.

Thus βαρεῖσθαι, to be burdened, is used for the Hebrew כָּבַד (cabad, to be heavy) in Exod. vii. 14; and the same Hebrew word is rendered δοξάζεσθαι, to be honoured as grave, Levit. x. 3, and passim. And the Latin proverb "Honos propter onus" is equivalent to "beneficium propter officium."

h 2 Cor. 12. 15. Phil. 2. 17. 1 John 3. 16.

ἐγενήθημεν ἤπιοι ἐν μέσῳ ὑμῶν, ὡς ἂν τροφὸς θάλπῃ τὰ ἑαυτῆς τέκνα, [8] [h] οὕτως ὁμειρόμενοι ὑμῶν εὐδοκοῦμεν μεταδοῦναι ὑμῖν οὐ μόνον τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰς ἑαυτῶν ψυχάς, διότι ἀγαπητοὶ ἡμῖν ἐγενήθητε.

1 Acts 18. 3. & 20. 34. 1 Cor. 4. 12. 2 Cor. 11. 9. & 12. 13. 2 Thess. 3. 7—9. 1 Tim. 4. 10.

[9] [i] Μνημονεύετε γὰρ, ἀδελφοὶ, τὸν κόπον ἡμῶν καὶ τὸν μόχθον, νυκτὸς καὶ ἡμέρας ἐργαζόμενοι, πρὸς τὸ μὴ ἐπιβαρῆσαί τινα ὑμῶν, ἐκηρύξαμεν εἰς ὑμᾶς τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦ Θεοῦ.

---

7. ὡς ἄν] Cp. Luke ix. 57. 1 Cor. xvi. 2. Col. iii. 23. Winer, p. 275.

— τροφός] A nursing mother, τὴν αὐτὴν τροφὸν καλεῖ καὶ μητέρα. (Theodoret.) Cp. below, v. 11, πατὴρ τέκνα ἑαυτοῦ. As to θάλπη, applied to a mother, see Deut. xxii. 6, ἡ μητὴρ θάλπῃ ἐπὶ τῶν νεοσσῶν.

This bold figure may have been suggested by Isaiah, lx. 3, speaking to the Church, "Thou shalt suck the breast of kings."

Behold the love of the Apostle, he does not disdain to call himself a mother. (Cp. Gal. iv. 19.) He is both a nurse and a mother. He unites both persons in one. For there are some nurses who cherish, but not their own children: and there are some mothers who put out their children to nurse, and do not cherish their offspring. Augustine (Serm. 23). The Apostle, inspired by the Holy Spirit of love, when he would give the most affecting proof of tenderness, compares himself to a mother nursing her children. A practical lesson to all Christian mothers. Would any of them willingly forfeit the privilege of being like the divine Apostle? Let them imitate the love of him who resorts to their presumed practice for the most affecting expression of his own ardent love to his spiritual children.

The duty of nursing children lies at the root of all household charities; and the neglect of it has led to great evils. There may be cases where this duty cannot be performed; but sometimes it is omitted for the pleasures of society. And yet what society ought to be preferred by a mother to that of her child? St. Paul exhorts married women to love their children, and to be keepers at home, οἰκουρούς (Titus ii. 5), and, among qualifications for a Widow, to be enrolled on the list and maintained by the alms of the Church, he mentions that she shall have nursed her children (εἰ ἐτεκνοτρόφησεν, 1 Tim. v. 10).

In Holy Scripture the blessings of the breast are joined with the blessings of the womb. (Gen. xlix. 25.) So are the curses: "I will give thee a miscarrying womb and dry breasts." (Hos. ix. 14.) The Holy Spirit does not disdain to mention, concerning some of the greatest Saints, that they were nursed by their own mothers: "Who would have said unto Abraham that Sarah should have given children suck?" (Gen. xxi. 7, 8.) God mercifully interfered to procure this blessing to Moses (Exod. ii. 9); so it was with Samuel (1 Sam. i. 22, 23), and with David (Ps. xxii. 9); and the Infant Jesus hung upon His mother's breasts in the Stable at Bethlehem, and in the journey into Egypt.

Cp. Bp. Taylor, Vol. iv. p. 157, ed. Heber, and his Discourse in his Life of Christ, "On the duty of nursing children," Vol. ii. p. 30.

8. ὁμειρόμενοι] So A, B, C, D, E, F, G, and Griesb., Scholz., Lach., Tisch., Lünemann, Alf. Elz. has ἱμειρόμενοι.

Some Editors suppose with Winer (§ 16, p. 92) that ὁμειρόμενοι is only another form of μειρόμενοι from μείρομαι, used by Nicander (Theriac 402) for ἱμείρομαι, to desire, as ὀδύρομαι for δύρομαι, ὀκέλλω for κέλλω.

But these are not cases in point. Nor has any instance been cited of such a modification with the ὁ aspirated as in ὁμείρομαι.

The evidence of the MSS. in favour of ὁμειρόμενοι is irresistible.

After all that has been said on the subject in modern times, it appears probable that the true account of the word had been given by Theophylact, who says, "Some here read ἱμειρόμενοι, and explain the word by ἐπιθυμοῦντες, desiring, but this is erroneous."

Ὁμειρόμενοι signifies προσδεδεμένοι, bound to, twined together with you, and clinging to you, from ὁμοῦ and εἴρω, συμπλέκω.

It is true that the exposition of ὁμειρόμενοι, as equivalent to desiring, rests on high authority, that of the Vulg., Syriac, and Æthiopic Versions, and by Hesych., Phavorin., Winer, Lünemann, Alford. But Theophylact's knowledge of the dialects of Northern Greece entitles his testimony to consideration, and his explanation is confirmed by that of Œcumenius, ἀντεχόμενοι ὑμῶν.

Besides, the Apostle is describing his affection towards them when he was present with them, and not when absent from them; and ἱμείρομαι, like the Latin word desidero, signifies a craving for something absent.

The Apostle is comparing himself to a nursing mother in a special act, that of θάλπειν, cherishing her own children. This is not an act of desire, but of love.

His words may be thus paraphrased: "We were made (by God's grace) to be gentle among you, as a nursing mother cherisheth her own children, so clinging to you, and interwoven, as it were, with you, and hanging over you in the yearnings of our love, we were well pleased to give you the milk of the Gospel, as to new-born babes in Christ (cp. I Pet. ii. 2, τὸ λογικὸν ἄδολον γάλα, provided for ἀρτιγέννητα βρέφη), and our own lives also."

It has indeed been said, that if ὁμειρόμενοι has this sense, it ought to be followed by a dative, and not by a genitive, as here.

But ὁμείρομαι, in the sense of ἅπτομαι and ἔχομαι, to communicate with, so as to hang on an object, may rightly take a genitive. See Matth. G. G. § 359, where συλλαμβάνεσθαι, συνδράσθαι, and ἅπτεσθαι, and ἔχεσθαι are illustrated as having this regimen; and § 359, where words signifying communion with have a genitive after them. Cp. Kuhner, § 519, 520.

— ἐγενήθητε] ye were made. (See i. 4, 5.) So the best MSS. and Editions. Elz. has γεγένησθε.

9. κόπον καὶ μόχθον] Not synonyms. Cp. 2 Thess. iii. 8. 2 Cor. xi. 27, where they are similarly joined together; κόπος being always put first, as representing the act of hewing (κόπτω) wood, whereas μόχθος (ὄχθος, ἄχθος, ἔχω) is that of carrying the logs after they have been hewn. The former word expresses energy of action, the other indicates patience in bearing.

— νυκτὸς καὶ ἡμέρας] night and day. So iii. 10, and 2 Thess. iii. 8, and 1 Tim. v. 5. 2 Tim. i. 3. In all these cases St. Paul puts the night before the day.

St. Luke puts day before night in Acts ix. 24; but not where he relates two speeches of St. Paul, there the night is put before the day, as in St. Paul's Epistles. (See Acts xx. 31; xxvi. 7.)

St. Luke in his Gospel once uses the Jewish mode of speaking in this respect, which was that adopted by St. Paul. See Luke ii. 37, where he is writing of what took place at Jerusalem. But compare Luke xviii. 7.

St. Mark puts the night first, iv. 27; v. 5.

It is observable that St. John, in the Apocalypse, uses the expression ἡμέρας καὶ νυκτὸς five times (iv. 8; vii. 15; xii. 10; xiv. 11; xx. 10), and never puts the night first.

This remark may serve to confirm what has been said above concerning St. John's mode of reckoning the hours of the day, as distinguished from that usual in Palestine, where time was calculated from sunset: and may serve to illustrate the important questions in his Gospel which turn on this point. See on John xix. 14.

— ἐργαζόμενοι] working, with manual labour, probably in tent-making. See on Acts xviii. 3, εἰργάζετο: 1 Cor. iv. 12, and ix. 6, where ἐργάζεσθαι stands absolutely as here.

St. Paul worked in the night (νυκτὸς genitive) as well as day; he worked for part of the night, in order that he might preach during the day.

It may perhaps be inquired,

How was he able to defray the expenses of his voyage from Macedonia to Athens? and at Athens, where he does not appear to have worked, it is said he spent the whole day in the Agora. (Acts xvii. 17.)

The answer is,—he received pecuniary supplies from Philippi. See the remarkable testimony Phil. iv. 15, 16: "At the beginning of my preaching the Gospel (in Greece), when I set forth from Macedonia, no Church communicated with me in respect of giving and receiving, but ye only. For when I was at Thessalonica, ye sent to me once and again for my necessities."

It appears that St. Paul worked for his daily maintenance at Thessalonica, and that the Thessalonians, with whom St. Paul was present, and to whom he preached, did not maintain him, and the Philippians sent him supplies to Thessalonica, and the Macedonians sent him supplies to Corinth.

The reason of this seems to be, that while he was present, St. Paul waived his own claim to receive pecuniary aid from those to whom he preached, lest he should seem to preach the Gospel for lucre (see v. 5), and so impede its progress.

But he did not forbid those whom he left in charge behind

10 j Ὑμεῖς μάρτυρες καὶ ὁ Θεὸς, ὡς ὁσίως καὶ δικαίως καὶ ἀμέμπτως ὑμῖν τοῖς πιστεύουσιν ἐγενήθημεν, 11 καθάπερ οἴδατε, ὡς ἕνα ἕκαστον ὑμῶν, ὡς πατὴρ τέκνα ἑαυτοῦ, παρακαλοῦντες ὑμᾶς καὶ παραμυθούμενοι, k καὶ μαρτυρόμενοι 12 εἰς τὸ περιπατεῖν ὑμᾶς ἀξίως τοῦ Θεοῦ, τοῦ καλοῦντος ὑμᾶς εἰς τὴν ἑαυτοῦ βασιλείαν καὶ δόξαν.

13 l Διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ἡμεῖς εὐχαριστοῦμεν τῷ Θεῷ ἀδιαλείπτως, ὅτι παραλαβόντες λόγον ἀκοῆς παρ' ἡμῶν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐδέξασθε, οὐ λόγον ἀνθρώπων, ἀλλὰ, καθώς ἐστιν ἀληθῶς, λόγον Θεοῦ, ὃς καὶ ἐνεργεῖται ἐν ὑμῖν τοῖς πιστεύουσιν. 14 m Ὑμεῖς γὰρ μιμηταὶ ἐγενήθητε, ἀδελφοὶ, τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν τοῦ Θεοῦ τῶν οὐσῶν ἐν τῇ Ἰουδαίᾳ ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ, ὅτι τὰ αὐτὰ ἐπάθετε καὶ ὑμεῖς ὑπὸ τῶν ἰδίων συμφυλετῶν, καθὼς καὶ αὐτοὶ ὑπὸ τῶν Ἰουδαίων· 15 n τῶν καὶ τὸν Κύριον ἀποκτεινάντων Ἰησοῦν καὶ τοὺς προφήτας, καὶ ἡμᾶς ἐκδιωξάντων, καὶ Θεῷ μὴ j Acts 20. 18, 26, 33, 34. 2 Cor. 4. 2. & 5. 11.

k Eph. 4. 1. Phil. 1. 27. Col. i. 10. 1 Matt. 10. 40. Gal. 4. 14.
l Acts 2. 41. & 4. 4. & 8. 14. & 11. 1. & 17. 11. 2 Thess. 3. 7. 1 Tim. 4. 10. 2 Tim. 3. 10. Tit 2. 7, 8.
m Acts 13. 45. & 17. 5, 13. Heb. 10. 34. n Matt. 23. 34, 37. Luke 13. 33. Acts 7. 52.

him,—for instance, St. Luke at Philippi, and Silas and Timothy in other cities of Macedonia (Acts xviii. 5. 2 Cor. vii. 5),—to stir up the Christian charity of their flocks, and to excite them to exercise their gratitude and love to Christ by sending supplies to the Apostle.

10. ὁσίως καὶ δικαίως] On the difference of these words see on Luke i. 75, and Bengel here: "Sanctè in rebus divinis, justè erga homines."

— ἀμέμπτως] unblameably. See on Phil. iv. 8, ὅσα εὔφημα.

— ὑμῖν τοῖς πιστεύουσιν] in regard to you who are believers, whatsoever we may have seemed to be to the unbelieving, by whom we were evil spoken of.

11. ὡς ἕνα ἕκαστον ὑμῶν . . . παραμυθούμενοι] After these words the verb ἐγενήθημεν is to be supplied from the previous clause, "As ye know how we were made, i. e. behaved ourselves, exhorting you, and comforting you one by one, as a father does his children."

— μαρτυρόμενοι] 'testificati' (Vulg.); 'protesting.' So D, E, I, K, Chrys., Œc., Damasc.; and so Matthæi, Fritz., Bloomf., Lünem., Alf.—Elz. has μαρτυρούμενοι.

There is a similar confusion in the MSS. in Acts xxvi. 22, where the sense is the same as here. Cp. Acts xx. 26. Gal. v. 3, μαρτύρομαι πάντι κ.τ.λ.

12. περιπατεῖν] So A, B, D, F, G, and Lach., Tisch., Alf.—Elz. περιπατῆσαι, which is not so forcible, as not expressing a settled purpose and constant practice.

13. λόγον ἀκοῆς] the word of hearing, the word of which the essential characteristic and quality is, that it should not only be preached, but heard and obeyed; it is "verbum audientiæ et obedientiæ."

The Genitive ἀκοῆς may be called the characterizing Genitive; and this use of the Genitive—a use derived from the Hebrew (see examples on Matt. xxi. 11), is far more convenient and expressive than that of an Adjective, because it brings out the single point to which the speaker's or writer's mind is specially directed, and to which he desires to direct the minds of his hearers or readers.

The Gospel preached, τὸ κήρυγμα (Theophyl.), is called the word of hearing, in order to bring out more clearly the duty of all men to hearken to it; and, in order to show that the Gospel is eminently that Word which is worthy and necessary to be heard by all who desire to be saved. "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." (Matt. xiii. 9.) See below, on Heb. iv. 2, ὁ λόγος τῆς ἀκοῆς.

The Apostle thus guards the Church against the dangerous error—too prevalent in later times—which treats the Gospel merely as the Word of Preaching, when it is more especially the Word of Hearing; and though the duties of Preachers are important, yet those of the Hearers are not less so.

— παραλαβόντες—ἐδέξασθε κ.τ.λ.] Mark the difference between παραλαμβάνω and δέχομαι. We thank God that, having received the word of hearing (or Gospel) of God from us, you—accepted it; (ἐδέξασθε) not the word of men (do not suppose that), but, as it is in truth, the Word of God, which (is not only heard, but also) worketh in you that believe.

Do not imagine that we thank God that you received our word as such; no, what we thank God for is, that you accepted His Word from us.

— ἐνεργεῖται] is internally and effectually energetic, and produces good fruit; it is to be construed with λόγος. (See 2 Thess. ii. 7. Rom. vii. 5. Col. i. 20. Winer, p. 231.)

On a review of what St. Paul says in these two chapters (i. 2—ii. 14) concerning the rapid reception of the Gospel at Thessalonica, and comparing this record with the account of St. Paul's visit to that city in Acts xvii. 1—9, it will appear surprising that so much was effected there as he here relates.

The explanation seems to be offered by a consideration,

(1) of the miraculous gifts possessed by the Apostle and his companions in speaking with tongues, and in healing; and the spiritual gifts bestowed by them on those who were baptized; and the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the Gentiles, as on the Jews at Pentecost, when so many thousands were converted at once. (Acts ii. 41.)

(2) The intelligence of what had been done for the Gospel at Philippi.

(3) The labours of Silas and Timotheus, and of St. Luke, who were left behind by St. Paul in Macedonia. See above, Introduction, § III.

(4) The organization of a standing Ministry by St. Paul.

14. συμφυλετῶν] fellow-countrymen. ὁμοεθνῶν (Hesych.).

You Gentile Christians in Greece suffered the same afflictions from your fellow-countrymen the Gentiles as the Jewish Christians in Judæa did from theirs the Jews. Cp. Heb. x. 34.

Yet St. Paul, in the following verse, has evidently his mind fixed on the Jews, as the most inveterate enemies of the Gospel.

This, seeming a difficulty, is cleared up by the History of the Acts of the Apostles.

In Judæa the Jews were the main authors of all the early persecutions of the Church.

The Roman Power there abstained from persecution. See note on Acts iv. 6.

Beyond the limits of Palestine the Jews had little political power, and were in many places objects of antipathy to the Greek and Roman people, and suffered oppression from the secular authority. They had been lately expelled from Rome by the Emperor Claudius, when St. Paul wrote this Epistle. (Acts xviii. 2.)

The Jews also appear to have been regarded with special detestation at Philippi, a Roman colony, where the Apostle and Silas were not persecuted as Christians, but as Jews. (Acts xvi. 20.)

We find, however, that the Jews, wherever they were not able in their own persons to persecute the Christians, were every where active and indefatigable in endeavouring to stir up the Heathen to persecute them. See, for example, what St. Paul suffered by means of the Jews at Antioch in Pisidia (Acts xiii. 50), at Iconium (xiv. 2), at Lystra (xiv. 19), at Thessalonica (xvii. 5), at Berœa (xvii. 13), at Ephesus (xix. 23).

The Heathen fellow-countrymen of the Thessalonian Gentile Christians persecuted them; but they had been set in motion against them by the Jews, on the plea that the Gospel taught that there was some "other king than Cæsar" (Acts xvii. 7).

The Jews had brought about the Crucifixion of Christ by representing Him to be a rival of Cæsar (John xix. 12. 15). They employed the same policy against the first preachers of the Gospel. They alarmed the suspicions, and exasperated the passions of the Roman Magistrates against them, on the ground that they were disloyal to the Roman Government, and looked for the dissolution of that Imperial Sovereignty which Rome believed to be eternal. See on 2 Thess. ii. 2—4.

Hence it is that, though St. Paul speaks here of the sufferings endured by the Gentile Christians at Thessalonica from their own fellow countrymen, he passes on from them to speak of the Jews as the authors of the evil.

15. τοὺς προφήτας] Elz. inserts ἰδίους after τούς. But the reading in the text is in A, B, D*, E, F, G, and is preferable also on this account, because ἰδίους might seem to involve a conceso Luke 11. 52. Acts 13. 50. & 14. 5, 19. & 17. 5, 13. & 18. 12. & 19. 9. & 22. 21, 22. Matt. 23. 32.

ἀρεσκόντων, καὶ πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις ἐναντίων, 16 ° κωλυόντων ἡμᾶς τοῖς ἔθνεσι λαλῆσαι ἵνα σωθῶσιν· εἰς τὸ ἀναπληρῶσαι αὐτῶν τὰς ἁμαρτίας πάντοτε· ἔφθασε δὲ ἐπ' αὐτοὺς ἡ ὀργὴ εἰς τέλος.

p Rom. 1. 13. & 15. 22.

17 Ἡμεῖς δέ, ἀδελφοί, ἀπορφανισθέντες ἀφ' ὑμῶν πρὸς καιρὸν ὥρας προσώπῳ οὐ καρδίᾳ περισσοτέρως ἐσπουδάσαμεν τὸ πρόσωπον ὑμῶν ἰδεῖν ἐν πολλῇ ἐπιθυμίᾳ. 18 P Διὸ ἠθελήσαμεν ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ἐγὼ μὲν Παῦλος καὶ ἅπαξ καὶ δίς, καὶ ἐνέκοψεν ἡμᾶς ὁ Σατανᾶς.

---

sion that (as was afterwards alleged by the Marcionites) the Prophets belonged to the Jews, and not also to the Church of Christ. It is affirmed by Tertullian (c. Marcion. V. 15) that the word ἰδίους is a Marcionite interpretation: 'suos adjectio est hæretici.'

— ἡμᾶς ἐκδιωξάντων] having persecuted us out of Thessalonica (Acts xvii. 5—10, and elsewhere; see on v. 14).

— πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις ἐναντίων] The Jews are contrary to all men, in that they oppose the progress of the Gospel which is designed for the salvation of all men.

16. ἔφθασε δὲ ἐπ' αὐτοὺς ἡ ὀργὴ εἰς τέλος] but the wrath of God came upon them to the uttermost.

They vented their wrath against Christ and His Church, and their own prophets, but (δὲ) when they most indulged their own rage, then the wrath of God came upon them to the uttermost. ἡ ὀργή, 'the wrath,' i. e. of God. In using the definite article ἡ, he means that dreadful wrath which the Jews merited, and which was foretold by the Prophets (Theophyl.), and which they brought down on themselves.

ἔφθασε, came upon them and overtook them with a sudden surprise when they did not expect it. See on Matt. xii. 28. Dan. vii. 22, ὁ καιρὸς ἔφθασε.

The aorist ἔφθασε points to the time of the act mentioned in the previous verse. Then, when they wreaked their own wrath on the Just One, and killed the Lord Jesus, they filled up the measure of their fathers' iniquities (see Matt. xxiii. 32. 38. Luke xi. 51; xiii. 35), and then God gave them the cup of his wrath to drink to the dregs, εἰς τέλος, on which expression see note on Luke xviii. 5, and compare the use of it by the LXX in Ps. xii. 1; xv. 11; xliii. 23; lxiii., ἔκαρον τὰς χεῖράς σου ἐπὶ τὰς ὑπερηφανίας αὐτῶν εἰς τέλος, and cii. 9.

Then when they crucified the Son of God they brought bloodguiltiness not only upon themselves, but upon their children; The Wrath of God therefore coming upon them to the utmost, and the curse of God abiding upon their posterity even unto this day. Bp. Sanderson (iii. p. 67).

The 68th Psalm, which contains the declarations of Messiah the King speaking from the Cross as from a Judgment Seat, and pronouncing sentence on the Jews for their sin in rejecting and crucifying Him, affords the best comment on St. Paul's words. See particularly Ps. lxviii. 21—29. Be it remembered also the Jews imprecated God's wrath upon themselves when they said, "His blood be upon us, and on our children" (Matt. xxvii. 25).

17. ἀπορφανισθέντες] bereaved as a parent of his children, by separation from you. He preserves the comparison of himself to a nursing mother (v. 7) in tender affection and fostering care, and to a father in discipline and guidance (v. 11).

Our Lord had applied the word ὀρφανούς to His disciples bereft of His presence (John xiv. 18). St. Paul, in his humility, speaks of their loss as his own; He their spiritual parent is the ὀρφανός.

The word is used of parents by Pindar (Olymp. ix. 92), ὀρφανὸς γενεᾶς, so ἀπωρφανισμένοι Æschyl. (Choeph. 247). Hesych. ἀστερημένος τέκνων (Wetstein, Lünem.). So Latin 'orbi.'

Some ancient expositors (Chrys. and Theodoret) suppose that St. Paul here, in his longing to return to the Thessalonians as soon as he was bereaved of their presence, has changed his metaphor, and compares himself to a child suddenly made an orphan, and longing to see his parents again; and perhaps, in impatience of absence, and eagerness of desire for return, the character and position of the orphan child seems to afford more tender and endearing features for the comparison than that of the childless parent.

But the word ἀδελφοί, 'brethren,' prefixed to ἀπορφανισθέντες may be intended to indicate that neither meaning of ἀπορφανισθέντες is to be pressed too closely.

— πρὸς καιρὸν ὥρας] For a brief season, "horæ momento" (Horat.), as πρὸς ὥραν 2 Cor. vii. 8, Gal. ii. 5, Philem. 15 ἐχωρίσθη πρὸς ὥραν, and πρὸς καιρὸν Luke viii. 13.

The Septuagint unite καιρὸς and ὥραι in Gen. xviii. 10, κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν τοῦτον, εἰς ὥρας, and v. 14, εἰς τὸν καιρὸν τοῦτον, εἰς ὥρας, where ὥρα marks more precisely what is meant by καιρός.

The sense is:

As soon as we were separated from you, although only for a short season, and though we were severed from you in person, and not in spirit, we immediately began to long vehemently to return to you (Theodoret, Chrys., Theophyl.).

On περισσοτέρως, more earnestly than if we had not been separated, see Winer, p. 217.

18. ἠθελήσαμεν] I willed to come. A stronger word than ἐβουλόμην, which signifies 'I was wishing' (see 2 Cor. i. 17). It was my θέλημα to come. The difference of the words βούλομαι and θέλω is clearly marked by St. Paul (Philem. 13), ὃν ἐγὼ ἐβουλόμην κατέχειν, it was my wish to keep him; χωρὶς δὲ τῆς σῆς γνώμης οὐδὲν ἠθέλησα ποιῆσαι, but it was my will to do nothing without thy judgment.

— ἐγὼ μὲν Παῦλος καὶ ἅπαξ καὶ δίς] I, indeed, Paul, both once and twice. If these words had not been inserted, limiting what he has just written to Paul himself, it might perhaps have been alleged that there is a discrepancy between his words and the History of the Acts. For Silas and Timotheus (who are associated with him in writing the Epistle) remained in Macedonia, (and one of them, Timotheus, came to Paul from Thessalonica,) after he had quitted it. See Acts xviii. 5, and below, iii. 2—6.

— ἐνέκοψεν ἡμᾶς ὁ Σατανᾶς] Satan hindered us. He here says that he was hindered from coming to Thessalonica, and by Satan. And yet his prevention from going to preach in Asia and Bithynia is ascribed to the Holy Ghost (Acts xvi. 6, 7). See also what he says to the Romans (Rom. xv. 22), ἐνεκοπτόμην τοῦ ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, and i. 13, ἐκωλύθην ἄχρι τοῦ δεῦρο, where he uses the word προεθέμην, 'I purposed to come to you.'

How is this to be explained?

The answer seems to be;

St. Paul prayed for divine direction in his ministerial labours; and he received it. He prayed that the thorn in his flesh might be removed from him (2 Cor. xii. 7), and God revealed to him that it would not be removed, and declared to him the reason of this dispensation.

St. Paul's will was conformed to the will of God. And wherever he declares that he had a deliberate will and settled purpose to do any thing, it may be concluded that he had God's permission and direction to do it.

This was the case with regard to his return to Thessalonica, and also to his visit to Rome. He declares that after unceasing prayer (iii. 10) he willed to do the one (v. 18), and purposed to do the other.

This will and purpose of the holy Apostle, praying for God's guidance, and filled with the Holy Ghost, may be regarded as no other than the will and purpose of God.

Therefore all obstructions to the execution of that will and that purpose might justly be regarded and described as impediments and interruptions (ἐγκοπαί) of Satan.

They were (as S. Basil observes, Reg. brevior 275) trials (allowed by God) of his patience and perseverance, for the quickening of his zeal, and for the exercise of prayer and his growth in grace. Accordingly we find that he never renounced his will to return to Thessalonica, and never abandoned his purpose of visiting Rome. He persevered in both designs, and after much endeavour and conflict, he overcame the obstructions of Satan, and accomplished both purposes. Cp. Acts xix. 21; xx. 1; xxiii. 11; xxviii. 14. 16.

But this was not the case with regard to going to Bithynia. See Acts xvi. 7.

There it is said that he was assaying to go into Bithynia, and the Spirit of Jesus interfered to restrain him.

But there was no such interference to control his will and purpose to return to Thessalonica and to visit Rome.

On the contrary, it is expressly recorded that he had special directions for the latter (Acts xxiii. 11), and doubtless also for the former.

This subject is fraught with instruction, as revealing to us views of the unseen working of the spiritual powers of Good and 19 [q] Τίς γὰρ ἡμῶν ἐλπὶς ἢ χαρὰ ἢ στέφανος καυχήσεως; ἢ οὐχὶ καὶ ὑμεῖς, ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐν τῇ αὐτοῦ παρουσίᾳ; 20 Ὑμεῖς γάρ ἐστε ἡ δόξα ἡμῶν καὶ ἡ χαρά.

q 2 Cor. 1. 14. Phil. 2. 16. & 4. 1.

III. 1 [a] Διὸ μηκέτι στέγοντες εὐδοκήσαμεν καταλειφθῆναι ἐν Ἀθήναις μόνοι, 2 [b] καὶ ἐπέμψαμεν Τιμόθεον τὸν ἀδελφὸν ἡμῶν καὶ συνεργὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, εἰς τὸ στηρίξαι ὑμᾶς καὶ παρακαλέσαι ὑπὲρ τῆς πίστεως ὑμῶν, 3 [c] μηδένα σαίνεσθαι ἐν ταῖς θλίψεσι ταύταις· αὐτοὶ γὰρ οἴδατε ὅτι εἰς τοῦτο κείμεθα. 4 Καὶ γὰρ ὅτε πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἦμεν, προελέγομεν ὑμῖν ὅτι μέλλομεν θλίβεσθαι, καθὼς καὶ ἐγένετο, καὶ οἴδατε.

a ver. 5. Acts 17. 15. 2 Cor. 2. 13. & 11. 29, 30.
b Acts 16. 1. Rom. 16. 21. Phil. 2. 19.
c Acts 14. 22. Eph. 3. 13. 2 Tim. 3. 11, 12. 1 Pet. 2. 21. & 4. 12.

5 [d] Διὰ τοῦτο κἀγὼ μηκέτι στέγων ἔπεμψα εἰς τὸ γνῶναι τὴν πίστιν ὑμῶν, μή πως ἐπείρασεν ὑμᾶς ὁ πειράζων, καὶ εἰς κενὸν γένηται ὁ κόπος ἡμῶν.

d Phil. 2. 16. Gal. 2. 2. & 4. 11.

Evil in the affairs of the Church, and also of the holy Apostle's insight into that mysterious working, and of his continual communion with the Holy Spirit in all his plans and purposes for preaching of the Gospel of Christ.

— ὁ Σατανᾶς] Satan. This mention of Satan, the Hebrew name of the Tempter, the Devil (see Matt. iv. 10), in this St. Paul's first Epistle, and this to a Gentile Church (cp. 2 Thess. ii. 9), deserves notice, especially when considered together with the fact above mentioned (i. 9), that he never quotes directly from the Old Testament in these two Epistles to the Thessalonians.

How then had the Thessalonians been made acquainted with the name and character of the Evil Spirit? Probably by St. Paul's oral teaching; and probably also by a written Gospel. And of all the Gospels there is none which speaks so clearly concerning the personality and operations of the Tempter, under the name of Satan, as the Gospel written for the special use of the Greeks by St. Paul's fellow-traveller St. Luke. See Luke x. 18; xi. 18; xiii. 16; xxii. 3. 31. See above, on i. 9.

To the Gentile Christians the Gospel was made known before the Law; and they were familiar with the New Testament before the Old. Indeed, they read the Law through the Gospel, and not the Gospel through the Law. They heard of Satan first, as they heard of God and Christ, from the Apostles and Evangelists; and therefore it may well be said that the Universal Church is built first on Apostles and then on Prophets. (Eph. ii. 20.)

19. τίς ἐλπὶς—στέφανος καυχήσεως;] what hope—and crown of rejoicing? The words of the parent concerning his offspring. (Chrys.) "These are my jewels," as the Roman mother, Cornelia, said of her offspring. Cp. Prov. xvii. 6, στέφανος γερόντων, τέκνα τέκνων, καύχημα δὲ τέκνων πατέρες αὐτῶν.

— καὶ ὑμεῖς] You also as well as others, showing that he does not forget others in writing so affectionately to them. (Theophyl.)

CH. III. 1. μηκέτι στέγοντες] 'non amplius sustinentes.' (Vulg.)

On the sense of στέγω, said properly of a vessel which neither lets in a leak nor allows water to ooze out, see 1 Cor. ix. 12, πάντα στέγομεν, and xiii. 7, ἀγάπη πάντα στέγει.

2. ἐπέμψαμεν Τιμόθεον] I sent Timothy from Athens, to which place St. Paul had desired Silas and Timothy to come to him from Macedonia as speedily as they could. (Acts xvii. 15.)

After St. Paul had quitted Athens and had come to Corinth, he was rejoined by Silas and Timothy there (Acts xviii. 5), and this Epistle was written from that city; and Silas and Timothy are associated with him in writing it, and also in writing the second Epistle to the Thessalonians. See 1 Thess. i. 1, and 2 Thess. i. 1, and note there.

— καὶ συνεργόν] Elz. inserts διάκονον τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ between καὶ and συνεργόν, and reads ἡμῶν for τοῦ Θεοῦ after συνεργόν. The reading in the text is authorized by D. Clar., Germ., and Vulg., and is received by Griesb., Lach., Tisch., Lünem., Alf. The reading συνεργὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ is also confirmed by St. Paul himself, 1 Cor. iii. 9, Θεοῦ γάρ ἐσμεν συνεργοί. St. Paul commends Timothy as being a brother to himself (cp. Heb. xiii. 23), and a fellow-worker with God in the Gospel.

He shows his affection to the Thessalonians by depriving himself of so efficient a fellow-labourer as Timothy for their benefit, and to be left alone (καταλειφθῆναι, de-relinqui, a stronger word than λειφθῆναι) in Athens, where he had no one to assist and comfort him in his work.

This spirit of disinterestedness and self-sacrifice was characteristic of the Apostle; and he was consistent in this respect even to the end. See the similar trait in one of his latest Epistles also in reference to Timothy. Philipp. ii. 19—23, and 2 Tim. iv. 12.

— ὑπέρ] in behalf of. See 2 Cor. xii. 19, λαλοῦμεν ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑμῶν οἰκοδομῆς, and below, 2 Thess. ii. 1, ὑπὲρ τῆς παρουσίας. Cp. Winer, p. 342, 3. Elz. has περί, but ὑπὲρ is found in A, B, D*, E*, F, G, K.

3. μηδένα σαίνεσθαι] This was to be the purport and subject of Timothy's παράκλησις or exhortation, and depends on παρακαλέσαι. And so Theodoret, who says, παρακαλέσαι φέρειν γενναίως τὰς τῶν ἐναντίων ἐπιβουλάς, καὶ μὴ κλονεῖσθαι. Cp. iv. 1, παρελάβετε τὸ πῶς δεῖ ὑμᾶς περιπατεῖν. Τὸ is the reading of A, B, D, E, I, K.—Elz. has τῷ.

On the use of the definite article τὸ prefixed to the infinitive, so as to introduce and bring out more forcibly a proposition which is the subject of the writer's thoughts, compare 1 Cor. iv. 6. 2 Cor. x. 2, δέομαι τὸ μὴ παρὼν θαρρῆσαι. Phil. ii. 6. 13; iv. 10, and note on Mark ix. 23. Winer, § 44, p. 288.

— σαίνεσθαι] to be shaken, to waver. From root σείω.

The word σαίνειν is usually applied to an animal gently wagging the tail; "leniter atterens caudam," Horat. Homer, Odyss. κ. 216. Aristoph. Equit. 1028, κέρκῳ σαίνων. Lucian, Dial. xii. 2, οἱ λέοντες σαίνουσί με. Wetstein. Blomfield, Æsch. S. c. Theb. 379.

It is also explained by σαλεύεσθαι and ταράττεσθαι in Hesych., and by Theophylact on this passage, who says, "The Evil One, when he finds an opportunity of temptation, endeavours to shake the unstable by suggestions of ease, in order that they may fly from trial." Perhaps, as he suggests, the metaphor of an animal wagging his tail and fawning, in order that he may bite (as a λαιθαργὸς κύων), is not to be lost sight of here.

The sense would then be, "I sent Timothy to you in order to confirm and exhort you in behalf of your faith, that none of you should be beguiled in your sufferings by the blandishments of the Tempter, the Lion who goes about seeking whom he may devour (1 Pet. v. 8, cp. v. 5), and sometimes alarms by roaring, and sometimes allures by fawning."

An example of the need of such a warning was seen in the case of Demas, who was allured by the love of this world, and forsook Paul in his sufferings at Rome, and departed to Thessalonica. (2 Tim. iv. 10.) The Devil is often more to be feared when he fawns (σαίνει τῇ οὐρᾷ) than when he roars (ὠρύεται τῷ στόματι). The man of God from Judah overcame Satan at Bethel, but he was ensnared by him under the oak-tree. (1 Kings xiii. 14.) David vanquished Satan in the battle-field (1 Sam. xvii. 49), but was vanquished by him in the cool of the evening on the house-top. (2 Sam. xi. 2.)

5. ἔπεμψα εἰς τὸ γνῶναι] I sent him in order that I might know. The Apostle does not profess to know all things, even those things that he most wished to know. But he does profess to be inspired (ii. 13). Inspiration is not Omniscience. He lays claim to the one, but not the other. And his frankness in disclaiming the latter confirms his claim to the former. Cp. Theophyl. here.

— μή πως ἐπείρασεν—καὶ εἰς κ. γένηται ὁ κ. ἡ.] 'ne forte tentaverit is qui tentat, et inanis fiat labor noster' (Vulg.); lest haply the Tempter may have tempted you, and our labour may become in vain; and cp. Winer, p. 448, Scholefield, Peile, and Bloomfield, compare Eurip. Phœn. 91, 92.

— ὁ πειράζων] the Tempter, Satan. This appellation "the Tempter," thus introduced, shows that the Thessalonians had been already instructed in the doctrine of the Personality and Operations of the Evil One. It suggests the probability that they had a written Gospel in which Satan is thus described. Satan is only described by this name in one other passage of the New

6 Ἄρτι δὲ ἐλθόντος Τιμοθέου πρὸς ἡμᾶς ἀφ' ὑμῶν, καὶ εὐαγγελισαμένου ἡμῖν e 1 Cor. 11. 2. Col. 4. 18. 2 Tim. 1. 3. Heb. 13. 3, 7. τὴν πίστιν καὶ τὴν ἀγάπην ὑμῶν, [e] καὶ ὅτι ἔχετε μνείαν ἡμῶν ἀγαθὴν πάντοτε ἐπιποθοῦντες ἡμᾶς ἰδεῖν, καθάπερ καὶ ἡμεῖς ὑμᾶς, 7 διὰ τοῦτο παρεκλήθημεν, ἀδελφοί, ἐφ' ὑμῖν, ἐπὶ πάσῃ τῇ ἀνάγκῃ καὶ θλίψει ἡμῶν, διὰ τῆς ὑμῶν πίστεως·
8 ὅτι νῦν ζῶμεν ἐὰν ὑμεῖς στήκητε ἐν Κυρίῳ.

9 Τίνα γὰρ εὐχαριστίαν δυνάμεθα τῷ Θεῷ ἀνταποδοῦναι περὶ ὑμῶν, ἐπὶ πάσῃ f Rom. 1. 10—12. & 15. 23. 2 Cor. 1. 15, 24. & 13. 9, 11. Phil. 1. 25. τῇ χαρᾷ ᾗ χαίρομεν δι' ὑμᾶς ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν, 10 [f] νυκτὸς καὶ ἡμέρας ὑπερεκπερισσοῦ δεόμενοι εἰς τὸ ἰδεῖν ὑμῶν τὸ πρόσωπον, καὶ καταρτίσαι τὰ ὑστερήματα τῆς πίστεως ὑμῶν; 11 Αὐτὸς δὲ ὁ Θεὸς καὶ Πατὴρ ἡμῶν, καὶ ὁ g ch. 5. 15. 2 Pet. 1. 7.
Κύριος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς κατευθύναι τὴν ὁδὸν ἡμῶν πρὸς ὑμᾶς· 12 [g] ὑμᾶς δὲ ὁ Κύριος πλεονάσαι καὶ περισσεύσαι τῇ ἀγάπῃ εἰς ἀλλήλους καὶ εἰς πάντας, h 1 Cor. 1. 8. Phil. 1. 10. ch. 5. 23. 2 Thess. 2. 17. Zech. 14. 5. καθάπερ καὶ ἡμεῖς εἰς ὑμᾶς· 13 [h] εἰς τὸ στηρίξαι ὑμῶν τὰς καρδίας ἀμέμπτους ἐν ἁγιωσύνῃ, ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ Πατρὸς ἡμῶν, ἐν τῇ παρουσίᾳ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ μετὰ πάντων τῶν ἁγίων αὐτοῦ.

IV. 1 [a] Λοιπὸν οὖν, ἀδελφοί, ἐρωτῶμεν ὑμᾶς καὶ παρακαλοῦμεν ἐν Κυρίῳ Ἰησοῦ, a Phil. 1. 27. ch. 2. 12. Col. 2. 6. 2 Thess. 3. 10—12.

Testament, viz. in the Gospel of St. Matthew, iv. 3. Cp. above, ii. 18.

6. Ἄρτι ἐλθόντος Τιμοθέου] Silas and Timothy came together from Macedonia to St. Paul at Corinth, and brought with them pecuniary supplies for the Apostle. See on Acts xviii. 5. 2 Cor. xi. 9, and above, ii. 9. And this Epistle was written soon after their arrival, ἄρτι ἐλθόντος Τιμοθέου.

As Timothy only, and not Silas, is mentioned here as having come to Athens from Thessalonica, Silas, who afterwards came with Timothy to Corinth from Macedonia, and had been left at Beræa (Acts xvii. 14), may have been joined by Timothy there.

On their first visit to Macedonia, Paul and Silas were sent away by the brethren by night from Thessalonica, on account of the rage of the Jews of that city against them. (Acts xvii. 10.)

But Timothy is not mentioned as being sent away with them.

He seems to have remained behind at Thessalonica, and afterwards to have joined St. Paul and Silas at Beræa. (Acts xvii. 14.)

On the whole, it is probable that St. Paul provided for the spiritual welfare of the three principal Macedonian Churches by appointing three of his companions and fellow-labourers to watch with special care over each of them respectively.

(1) St. Luke at Philippi. (Acts xvi. 40.) Cp. on Phil. iv. 3.

(2) Timothy at Thessalonica.

(3) Silas at Beræa. (Acts xvii. 10.)

At the same time they would doubtless have frequent opportunities of intercourse with each other.

— ἐπιποθοῦντες ἡμᾶς ἰδεῖν] A proof of their obedience as well as love. They would not have been eager to see the Apostle again if they had disobeyed his commands.

7. τῇ ἀνάγκῃ καὶ θλίψει] necessity and affliction. So the best MSS. Elz. has ἐν τ. θλίψει καὶ ἀ., and this is the order in 2 Cor. vi. 4.

10. καταρτίσαι τὰ ὑστερήματα] He does not flatter, because he loves them; he tells them that their faith is not perfect, and he desires to supply its shortcomings.

He charges them to take care that this Epistle, in which he thus speaks, should be publicly read in the Church (v. 27),—a proof of his courage and veracity.

11. ὁ Θεὸς—κατευθύναι πρὸς ὑμᾶς] St. Paul visited Macedonia several times after the date of this Epistle (see Chronological Table), and doubtless on one or more visits this desire was fulfilled.

12. καθάπερ καὶ ἡμεῖς] as we also abound in love toward you.

13. παρουσίᾳ] The Coming, the second Advent of Christ. A word occurring often in this sense, in these two the earliest, and among the shortest, Epistles of St. Paul. See ii. 19; iii. 13; iv. 15; v. 23. 2 Thess. ii. 1. 8.

There is only one other place in all St. Paul's Epistles where the word occurs with this meaning, 1 Cor. xv. 23. The reading in 1 Cor. i. 8 is not certain.

The word is found in one only of the Evangelists, St. Matthew, in one chapter, xxiv. 3. 37. 39. But it is found in St. James, v. 7, 8, and 2 Peter i. 16; iii. 4. 12, and in 1 John ii. 28.

It has been alleged, unhappily, by some in modern times (e. g. in Olshausen's Introduction to these Epistles), that St. Paul, having described the Second Advent of Christ in this his earliest Epistle, and having observed that his language on this subject was misunderstood (see 2 Thess. ii. 1), was made wiser by experience, and therefore abstained from adverting to this subject in his later Epistles.

But this allegation is erroneous.

St. Paul does refer to the subject again, and very fully, in a later Epistle,—his First Epistle to the Corinthians. (1 Cor. xv. 23. 51.)

And, as we have seen, the other Apostles speak of it, though briefly.

The fact is, St. Paul gave a solemn charge to the Thessalonians that this present Epistle should be read publicly to all the brethren (v. 27).

It is also a well known fact, that this Epistle, in which the circumstances of Christ's Second Advent are so fully described (iv. 14—17), was circulated throughout Christendom in the Apostle's age, and was read publicly in Churches, and sounded in the ears of all Christians. See the authorities in Kirchofer, Quellensammlung, pp. 179—181, and note below on v. 27.

Having once here, and once again in his Epistle to the Corinthians, which was also publicly read and circulated throughout Christendom, described the circumstances of the Second Advent, he had no need to dwell again on that subject.

The other Apostles, who had these two Epistles of St. Paul before their eyes, needed not do more than refer to the doctrine briefly, as generally received and understood by Christians. Such is their mode of handling it in the passages of their Epistles cited above.

The subject could not be passed over in the Apocalypse, where it is fully displayed. (Rev. xx. 11—15.)

— μετὰ πάντων τῶν ἁγίων αὐτοῦ] with all His Saints. See Tertullian, De Resurr. 24, who is one of the first writers that use the word Adventus in the now received ecclesiastical sense for the Second Advent. His translation of St. Paul's words, dating as it does from about the end of the second century, deserves insertion:—"Quæ enim spes nostra vel gaudium, vel exultationis corona, quàm et vos coram Domino nostro Jesu Christo in Adventu Ejus? (above, ii. 19.) Item coram Deo et Patre nostro, in Adventu Domini nostri Jesu Christi, cum omnibus sanctis Ejus."

It will be observed on comparison of this Version with the Vulgate, that it differs from, and is more literal than, it.

It also confirms the readings Χριστῷ (ii. 19) and Χριστοῦ here,—which have been expunged by some recent Editors. Tertullian quotes this Epistle more than twenty times in his extant work (cp. Kirchofer, p. 180), and it is also quoted by S. Irenæus, the scholar of S. Polycarp, the disciple of St. John (v. 6. 1. 30. 2) as the work of St. Paul.

It may be remarked here, that the writings of a very early Latin Father like Tertullian are sometimes of more value as critical helps in regard to the Text of the New Testament, than even those of a contemporaneous Greek Father; because the text of the latter would not improbably be tampered with by copyists to suit their own Greek recensions of the New Testament, but the text of a Latin Father would escape such a treatment. Hence the frequent citations of Tertullian in the present edition will, it may be presumed, be thought not irrelevant. It is to be regretted that they have not been noted by Lachmann.

καθὼς παρελάβετε παρ' ἡμῶν τὸ πῶς δεῖ ὑμᾶς περιπατεῖν καὶ ἀρέσκειν Θεῷ, καθὼς καὶ περιπατεῖτε, ἵνα περισσεύητε μᾶλλον· [2] οἴδατε γὰρ τίνας παραγγελίας ἐδώκαμεν ὑμῖν διὰ τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ. [3] [b] Τοῦτο γάρ ἐστι θέλημα τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὁ ἁγιασμὸς ὑμῶν, ἀπέχεσθαι ὑμᾶς ἀπὸ τῆς πορνείας, [4] [c] εἰδέναι ἕκαστον ὑμῶν τὸ ἑαυτοῦ σκεῦος κτᾶσθαι ἐν ἁγιασμῷ καὶ τιμῇ, [5] [d] μὴ ἐν πάθει ἐπιθυμίας, καθάπερ καὶ τὰ ἔθνη τὰ μὴ εἰδότα τὸν Θεόν· [6] [e] τὸ μὴ ὑπερβαίνειν καὶ πλεονεκτεῖν ἐν τῷ πράγματι τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ· διότι ἔκδικος ὁ Κύριος περὶ πάντων τούτων, καθὼς

b Rom. 12. 2. Eph. 5. 17, 27.
c 1 Cor. 6. 15, 18. Rom. 6. 19.
d 1 Cor. 15. 34. Eph. 4. 17, 18.
e Lev. 19. 11, 13. & 25. 14. Jer. 22. 13. 1 Cor. 6. 8.

CH. IV. 1. Λοιπόν] 'Quod super est,' marking a transition from the narrative portion of the Epistle to the hortatory. (Cp. 2 Thess. iii. 1. 2 Cor. xiii. 11. Eph. vi. 10. Phil. iii. 1; iv. 8)

— καθὼς καὶ περιπατεῖτε] Omitted by Elz. and D, E, I, K, but found in A, B, D, E, F, G, and received by Lachm., Lünem., Alf., not Tisch. (Cp. iv. 10.)

2. διὰ τοῦ Κυρίου] not in my own name, but through the Lord dictating and strengthening my commands; so that they are not mine, but His. (Cp. Winer, p. 339, note.) Christ is "the Way" by which the Apostle walks, when he commands others to walk aright.

3. ἀπὸ τῆς πορνείας] On the necessity of this injunction to the Gentiles see note on Acts xv. 20.

4. τὸ ἑαυτοῦ σκεῦος κτᾶσθαι] A much controverted passage. The sense appears to be—

To acquire and hold his own vessel (or body) in sanctification and honour; to keep his body in temperance, soberness, and chastity.

With regard to the sense of κτᾶσθαι, even if it be allowed that it must mean to acquire, yet it includes the meaning of keeping, as is evident from the boast of the Pharisee (Luke xviii. 12), ἀποδεκατῶ πάντα ὅσα κτῶμαι. Cp. Luke xi. 42. Matt. xxiii. 23.

Let it also be considered that the deadly sin here reprobated by the Apostle was—as the Christian Fathers have shown, e. g. Ambrose de Abraham, ii. p. 348; Jerome, Ep. 77; Augustine, de Civ. Dei, xiv. 18—as Bp. Sanderson, who quotes them, truly observes (iii. 220), accounted by the Gentiles a thing "as indifferent as what was most indifferent," and was excused by parents (Terent. Adelph. I. ii. 21), commended by moralists (Horat. 1 Sat. ii. 32; cp. Cicero, pro Cœlio 48), and consecrated by the Religion of Heathenism, especially in Greece, and particularly at Corinth, where St. Paul now was; and we need not hesitate to say, that every one at Thessalonica who complied with the precepts of Christianity, commanding personal holiness, might be truly said to acquire, to purchase, to recover his own body, to redeem it from a debasing and galling slavery, and to become a free man, the master and lord of his own body, which had before been alienated by sin, and enthralled by Satan.

There is therefore much truth in the remark of S. Chrysostom here, that abstinence from the sin of which St. Paul here speaks, was μαθήσεως πρᾶγμα, a thing to be learnt by the Gentiles "who knew not God."

It is also well said by Theophylact that "The Apostle here calls a man's body his vessel which, when it is tainted by uncleanness, sin takes possession of, and enslaves it; but when it is purified, we ourselves make it our own."

So likewise Theodoret and Primasius, who mention the other interpretation which has been adopted by some learned Expositors, after Augustine (Serm. 278, and De Nuptiis and Concup. i. 9, Vol. x. p. 613, and contra Julian. iv. 56, and v. 38, p. 1073 and 1125), viz. that by the σκεῦος ἑαυτοῦ the Apostle means a man's own wife.

But, as Theodoret says justly, St. Paul is speaking here to all, to unmarried as well as to married persons, and to women as well as men. The use of the word σκεῦος, vessel (as Heb. כְּלִי c'li), for body, has been well illustrated by Vorstius in his excellent work "De Hebraismis N. T." p. 31, and he (as A Lapide had already done) aptly refers to the use of the word vessel, in St. Paul's sense, in 1 Sam. xxi. 5, "the vessels of the young men are holy," i. e. their bodies. He also well illustrates the present text by St. Paul's words to the Romans (i. 24), "God gave them (the Gentiles) over to uncleanness in the lusts of their hearts, to dishonour their own bodies," ἐν ταῖς ἐπιθυμίαις, εἰς ἀκαθαρσίαν εἰς πάθη ἀτιμίας (v. 26), τοῦ ἀτιμάζεσθαι τὰ σώματα αὐτῶν ἐν ἑαυτοῖς. Compare the very similar words of the Apostle here, τὸ ἑαυτοῦ σκεῦος κτᾶσθαι ἐν ἁ. κ. τιμῇ, μὴ ἐν πάθει ἐπιθυμίας . . . οὐ γὰρ ἐκάλεσεν ἡμᾶς ὁ Θεὸς ἐπὶ ἀκαθαρσίᾳ.

This Exposition of the word σκεῦος here is very ancient. It is found in writers of the second century, e. g. Tertullian, who says (de Resurr. Carnis, 16), "Caro vas vocatur apud Apostolum, quam jubet in honore tractare," and again c. Marcion. v. 16. And Barnabas (c. 17) calls the body τὸ σκεῦος τοῦ πνεύματος, and St. Paul himself confirms this exposition by his use of σκεῦος (2 Cor. iv. 7), ἐν σκεύεσιν ὀστρακίνοις, and the phrase was familiar even to the heathen, whence Cicero calls "Corpus quasi vas animi" (Tusc. D. i. 22), and Lucret. iii. 441, "Corpus quod vas quasi constitit ejus" (sc. animæ. See Lünemann, p. 103). And the Alexandrine writers (e. g. Philo, p. 186) call the body τὸ τῆς ψυχῆς ἀγγεῖον.

It may be suggested also for consideration whether in using here the words σκεῦος κτᾶσθαι (to gain and keep possession of a vessel) in the sense thus explained, the Holy Spirit may not have referred to the words of our Blessed Lord Himself, describing the Work He has done for us in rescuing Mankind from the grasp of the Devil (Matt. xii. 29).

The Heathens were bound by Satan, by the lusts of the Flesh, especially by the prevalence and even consecration of that deadly sin which the Apostle is here describing. Their bodies had become Satan's furniture, his vessels "filled with all uncleanness."

And, let us observe, Christ calls them by that name σκεύη, vessels (Matt. xii. 29. Mark iii. 27). Irenæus (iii. 8. 1) therefore says well, expounding our Lord's Words, "Vasa Ejus (Satanæ) nos eramus; utebatur enim nobis quemadmodum volebat; et spiritus immundus habitabat in nobis." We were once vessels in the strong man's house, but a Stronger than he came, and delivered the vessels (σκεύη) out of the strong man's hand, and has given to each of us power to acquire, and to keep possession, each of his own vessel, in sanctification and honour, which was before kept by the Evil One in unholiness and shame.

Thus, in fine, the Gentile, who was transferred from the house of Satan to the House of Christ, in which are many vessels, some of gold and some of silver, became, by a glorious and blessed transmutation, a vessel unto honour, sanctified, and meet for the Master's use, and prepared unto every good work (2 Tim. ii. 20).

The words ἐν τιμῇ, in honour, as here used, serve to illustrate the difficult passage Col. ii. 23, where see note.

6. ἐν τῷ πράγματι] in the matter, or in the deed. An example of that modest reserve, and refined delicacy, which characterize the holy Apostle's language, in speaking of things which the Gentiles did without shame (Ephes. v. 3. 12), and thus, by a chaste bashfulness of words, commending the duty of unblemished purity in deeds. Compare similar instances of Apostolic gravity and decency of diction 1 Cor. vii. 1—7, and especially 1 Cor. v. 1, 2, where the guilty person is merely said γυναῖκα τοῦ πατρὸς ἔχειν, and is described as ὁ ἔργον τοῦτο ποιήσας, which phrases are the best comment on πλεονεκτεῖν and τὸ πρᾶγμα here. Cp. also 2 Cor. vii. 11, ἐν τῷ πράγματι, said of the sin of the incestuous person.

St. Peter uses the word πρᾶγμα (facinus) with the same severe δεινότης of indignation in his denunciations of judgment on Ananias, τί ὅτι ἔθου ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ τὸ πρᾶγμα τοῦτο; See also James iii. 16, πᾶν φαῦλον πρᾶγμα. Cp. the remarks of Bengel and Bp. Middleton here, who rightly interprets the words, and refers to 2 Cor. vii. 11.

It is therefore well said by Damascene here (quoted by Wetstein) that St. Paul here speaks εὐφήμως καὶ ἐπικεκαλυμμένως with a holy euphemism, and casting a veil over the deadly sin which he is here describing, that of μοιχεία.

St. Paul, in the two former verses, having spoken of πορνεία, proceeds now to refer to a still more heinous sin, that of μοιχεία. As Theodoret remarks, "Here he calls Adultery by the name of πλεονεξία, because he who is guilty of it usurps and embezzles what is not his own; and he is guilty of wrong against one who is his own brother."

The πορνὸς sins against his own σκεῦος, he sins against his own body (see 1 Cor. vi. 18); the μοιχὸς sins against his brother also, and in that which is one with him.

καὶ προείπαμεν ὑμῖν καὶ διεμαρτυράμεθα· 7 [f] οὐ γὰρ ἐκάλεσεν ἡμᾶς ὁ Θεὸς ἐπὶ ἀκαθαρσίᾳ ἀλλ' ἐν ἁγιασμῷ. 8 [g] Τοιγαροῦν ὁ ἀθετῶν, οὐκ ἄνθρωπον ἀθετεῖ, ἀλλὰ τὸν Θεὸν, τὸν καὶ δόντα τὸ Πνεῦμα αὐτοῦ τὸ ἅγιον εἰς ὑμᾶς.

9 [h] Περὶ δὲ τῆς φιλαδελφίας οὐ χρείαν ἔχετε γράφειν ὑμῖν· αὐτοὶ γὰρ ὑμεῖς θεοδίδακτοί ἐστε εἰς τὸ ἀγαπᾶν ἀλλήλους· 10 καὶ γὰρ ποιεῖτε αὐτὸ εἰς πάντας τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς τοὺς ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ Μακεδονίᾳ. Παρακαλοῦμεν δὲ ὑμᾶς, ἀδελφοὶ, περισσεύειν μᾶλλον, 11 [i] καὶ φιλοτιμεῖσθαι ἡσυχάζειν, καὶ πράσσειν τὰ ἴδια, καὶ ἐργάζεσθαι ταῖς ἰδίαις χερσὶν ὑμῶν, καθὼς ὑμῖν παρηγγείλαμεν, 12 ἵνα περιπατῆτε εὐσχημόνως πρὸς τοὺς ἔξω, καὶ μηδενὸς χρείαν ἔχητε.

f Lev. 11. 44. & 19. 2. John 17. 9. 1 Cor. 1. 2. Heb. 12. 14. 1 Pet. 1. 14, 15. g Luke 10. 16. 1 Cor. 7. 40. h Lev. 19. 18. Matt. 22. 39. John 6. 45. & 13. 34. Eph. 5. 2. 1 Pet. 4. 8. 1 John 3. 11, 23. & 4. 21.
i Acts 20. 34. Eph. 4. 28. 2 Thess. 3. 7, 12.

The words are thus commented on by Theophylact:—

"St. Paul is here speaking of μοιχεία, which is justly called by him πλεονεξία and παράβασις. For it is God Himself who gives to man his own wife, and Who sets up the landmarks of nature in the conjunction of that one man with her alone. So that in case of μοιχεία there is πλεονεξία ἐν τῷ πράγματι, τουτέστι, τῇ μίξει, and this too against a brother."

With regard to ancient Latin Expositors, it may suffice to add the name of S. Jerome, who authorizes the same exposition of this text (in Ephes. iv. 19), "Ne quis supergrediatur et circumscribat, neu avarus fraudet in negotio fratrem suum, id est, ne suam conjugem derelinquens alterius polluere quærat uxorem." And to justify this exposition S. Jerome refers to the Greek Original, which he quotes, and compares the use of the word πλεονεκτεῖν here with πλεονεξία in the text of Ephes. iv. 19.

So in his Commentary on Eph. v. he says, "Avaritiam (πλεονεξίαν) pro adulterio positam."

The etymology of the Latin adulter (i. e. qui a suâ ad alteram transgreditur, ὑπερβαίνει), illustrates this exposition.

The "honesta aposiopesis" (as A Lapide calls it) in the words τῷ πράγματι perhaps served as an example to some in the Early Church speaking of the same sin (in Constit. Apostol. iii. 2).

The English translation of τῷ πράγματι, as equivalent to "any matter," i. e. any transaction of traffic (a rendering rightly questioned by Bp. Sanderson, ii. 349), is at variance with the context, and is probably due to the influence of the Latin Vulgate, which has "in negotio," and to the defect of the Latin language in not having a definite article, a reason sufficient in itself to disqualify the Vulgate from being regarded as an "authentic standard," and much more as "the authentic standard," of Holy Writ. See Bentley's Sermon on 2 Cor. ii. 17; Works, iii. p. 243—248, ed. Dyce.

— διεμαρτυράμεθα] we earnestly protested.

8. δόντα] So A, I, K, and Elz., Tisch., Bloomf., Lünem., Alf. B, D, E, F, G have διδόντα, which is received by Lachmann.

— ὑμᾶς] So B, D, E, F, G, I, K; and so the Syriac and Arabic Versions, and Scholz., Lach., Tisch., Lünem., Alf.—Elz. has ἡμᾶς, and this reading adds to the force of the argument. You received the Holy Spirit when you were admitted into the Church by Baptism. God shed forth the Holy Spirit even unto (εἰς) you, Gentiles. Your bodies were then become Temples of the Holy Ghost; therefore defile them not.

The Apostle afterwards dilated upon this great doctrine more at large in the two Epistles to the Corinthians, and showed its practical bearings on society. (1 Cor. vi. 19. 2 Cor. vi. 16.)

These enlargements on the same doctrines are not to be ascribed to any "fuller developments in the Apostle's own views," but to the better preparation of those whom he addressed to receive them.

For example, in the present case, he had been at Thessalonica only for a short time when he wrote this Epistle, but at Corinth he had resided eighteen months when he wrote his first Epistle to that Church.

It must be remembered also that St. Paul's Epistles were circulated from one Church to another, so that the earlier Epistles, addressed to a particular Church or Churches, prepared all the Churches to receive the later Epistles.

10. ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ Μακεδονίᾳ] The whole of Northern Greece. An important testimony, as showing the intercommunion of Christian Churches, and the consequent facilities for the circulation of the Books of the New Testament in the Apostolic age. See below, v. 25.

11. φιλοτιμεῖσθαι ἡσυχάζειν] to aspire to be quiet; to be ambitious to be still. A happy oxymoron.

Compare the similar oxymoron, which has not been generally understood, in Rom. xii. 11, τῇ σπουδῇ μὴ ὀκνηροὶ, "in your busy-ness not idle;" and on the sentiment see also 2 Thess. iii. 11.

Φιλοτιμία, Love of glory, the moving passion of the Greeks, which haunted them, like the trophies of Miltiades at Marathon which would not suffer Themistocles to sleep. The Apostle turns the eager stream of their vainglorious activity, loving ever to be seen, and exulting in the foam and spray of its own restlessness, into a quiet lake of religious life, clear and deep, reflecting in its peaceful mirror the calmness of heaven.

The Prophet Isaiah had used a similar figure of speech to quiet the restlessness of the people, distrusting the providence of God, and ever looking to human aids, "Their strength is to sit still" (Isa. xxx. 7).

This and the following precept are not without their special uses in these latter days, when "many run to and fro; and knowledge is increased" (Dan. xii. 4).

— πράσσειν τὰ ἴδια] See Dr. Barrow's Sermon on "Quietness, and doing our own business," i. p. 457—489.

It has been supposed by some modern Expositors that the unquiet spirit, and repugnance to labour, which are noted for censure here, had been produced at Thessalonica by an expectation of a speedy end of the World, an expectation derived (they allege) from St. Paul's teaching. (2 Thess. ii. 1.) But the spirit of περιεργία, πολυπραγμοσύνη, and ἀλλοτριοεπισκοπία was characteristic of the Greek population long before the Gospel appeared. Cp. Acts xvii. 21; 1 Tim. v. 13; 1 Pet. iv. 15; and the commentators on Juvenal, iii. 61—70.

Besides, the vice of theft was very prevalent (see Eph. iv. 28; 1 Cor. vi. 10); and see the character of the Gentile world in Romans i. 29—31. It is also probable that the liberality of some among the Thessalonians, to which St. Paul here bears testimony, was abused by others into an occasion of indolence, in the expectation that they would be supported by the alms of the wealthier members of the Church. Cp. 2 Thess. iii. 10—12.

— ἐργάζεσθαι] to labour. Hence it may be inferred that a large portion of the primitive Thessalonian Church consisted of poor. Cp. 1 Cor. i. 26. (Lünemann.) But "of the chief women not a few" received the Gospel from St. Paul. (See Acts xvii. 4.) However, it appears that on the whole the Churches of Macedonia were poor, compared with that of Corinth. See 2 Cor. viii. 1.

— ἰδίαις] Omitted by B, D*, F, G, but found in A, D, I, K. It does not seem to have been read by Tertullian, de Idol. c. 4, who quotes the words thus, "manibus unusquisque operetur."

12. τοὺς ἔξω] the Heathen. So οἱ ἔξω, 1 Cor. v. 12, 13. Col. iv. 5. οἱ ἔξωθεν, 1 Tim. iii. 7.

The Christians were not to abuse their Christian liberty, and not to use it as a plea for disloyalty, and so make it a cloak of licentiousness (1 Pet. ii. 16); but to walk with an orderly and respectful deportment (εὐσχημόνως) towards Heathen Magistrates, and to render honour and obedience to them as "unto the Lord," in all things not contrary to His will. See on Matt. xxii. 21. Rom. xiii. 1—4. Tit. iii. 1. 1 Pet. ii. 13.

And what was true as to the duty of Subjects toward Rulers was true of the duty also of Slaves to Masters.

The necessity of this precept had appeared on the occasion of St. Paul's visit to Thessalonica, when he was charged by the Jews with being a preacher of sedition; and the Heathen populace was stirred up by them against him and Silas, as acting "contrary to the laws of Cæsar in saying that there is a different King, Jesus" (Acts xvii. 7).

The World had yet to learn, from the loyalty of Christians, even when persecuted by it, that Christianity is the best safeguard of States.

The Christians were also taught by the Apostle to behave εὐσχημόνως towards them that were without, by industry, lest the Heathen should be able to say that Christianity was a religion of indolence. (Bengel.)

13 j Οὐ θέλομεν δὲ ὑμᾶς ἀγνοεῖν ἀδελφοί, περὶ τῶν κεκοιμημένων, ἵνα μὴ λυπῆσθε καθὼς καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ οἱ μὴ ἔχοντες ἐλπίδα. 14 k Εἰ γὰρ πιστεύομεν ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἀπέθανε καὶ ἀνέστη, οὕτω καὶ ὁ Θεὸς τοὺς κοιμηθέντας διὰ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἄξει σὺν αὐτῷ. 15 l Τοῦτο γὰρ ὑμῖν λέγομεν ἐν λόγῳ Κυρίου, ὅτι ἡμεῖς οἱ ζῶντες οἱ περιλειπόμενοι εἰς τὴν παρουσίαν τοῦ Κυρίου οὐ μὴ φθάσωμεν τοὺς κοιμηθέντας· 16 m ὅτι αὐτὸς ὁ Κύριος ἐν κελεύσματι, ἐν φωνῇ ἀρχαγγέλου, καὶ ἐν σάλπιγγι Θεοῦ καταβήσεται ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ, καὶ οἱ νεκροὶ ἐν Χριστῷ ἀναστήσονται πρῶτον, j Rom. 1. 13. 1 Cor. 10. 1. & 12. 1. 2 Cor. 1. 8. 2 Pet. 3. 8.

k 1 Cor. 15. 12—23. 2 Cor. 4. 13, 14. Rev. 1. 18.
l 1 Cor. 15. 22, 51.
m Matt. 24. 31. 1 Cor. 15. 51. 2 Thess. 1. 7.

---

13. θέλομεν] So the best MSS. Elz. θέλω. Cp. 2 Cor. i. 8. — κεκοιμημένων] So Elz., with D, E, F, I, K. A, B, have κοιμωμένων, which is received by Lach., Tisch., Alford.

There is a difference in meaning between κοιμώμενοι and κεκοιμημένοι, on which account the latter reading seems preferable; οἱ κοιμώμενοι means properly those who are falling asleep, and, sometimes, those who are sleeping: but κεκοιμημένοι signifies those who have been laid asleep, and are still asleep; that is, here, those who, as to their bodies (for of their souls he is not here speaking), have, as it were, been 'somno compositi,' lulled into the sweet slumber of a Christian death, in which they still repose, till they will be awakened by the last trump. Cp. John xi. 11, Λάζαρος κεκοίμηται, and 1 Cor. xv. 20, Χριστὸς ἀπαρχὴ τῶν κεκοιμημένων. See note below on 1 Cor. xi. 30.

The word κοιμᾶσθαι, and κεκοιμῆσθαι, is never applied in the New Testament to the soul (for there is no sleep of the soul after death), but always to the body; and by the use of the word in that sense, it is intimated that the body will be awakened; that is, that the body will rise again. See Aug. (Serm. 172): "Dormientes eos appellat Scripturæ veracissima consuetudo, ut, cùm dormientes audimus, evigilaturos minimè desperemus;" and Serm. 93: "Quare dormientes vocantur? nisi quia suo die resuscitabuntur." So also Chrys. and Theophyl. Cp. note below, on 1 Cor. xv. 6.

— ἵνα μὴ λυπῆσθε] 'ne contristemini' (Vulg.); that ye be not grieved, but be comforted. Some MSS. have λυπεῖσθε here. See on 1 Cor. iv. 6.

He does not mean that they are not to sorrow for the departed, but that they are not so to sorrow, as men who have no hope.

As it is beautifully expressed by Augustine (Serm. 172): "Non admonuit Apostolus ut non contristemur, sed (ut non contristemur) sicut cæteri qui spem non habent." For we have hope. "Contristamur ergo nos in nostrorum mortibus necessitate amittendi, sed cum spe recipiendi. Inde angimur, hinc consolamur; inde infirmitas afficit, hinc fides reficit; inde dolet humana conditio, hinc sanat divina promissio." See also his touching address to Christian mourners: "You may, indeed you must sorrow, but not as the Heathen do, who have no hope. You must sorrow. But remember, where you have sorrow you have also comfort. How can you but sorrow when that body, which lives by the soul, becomes lifeless by the flight of the soul? and when that which used to walk lies; when that which used to talk is dumb; when the closed eyes admit no light; when the ears are opened to no sound; when all the functions of the limbs cease? Is not this dead body a house in which an unseen spirit once dwelt, and which it once beautified? That which was unseen is gone; that which we see with pain, remains. Here surely is a cause of sorrow. But let it have its comfort. What comfort? The Lord Himself will descend with a shout, and with the voice of the Archangel and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ will rise first; and then we who remain alive shall be caught up in the clouds to meet Christ, into the air. 'Pereat contristatio ubi tanta est consolatio.' Let grief be wiped away from the soul, and let faith banish grief. Why should we grieve for the dead? because death is bitter? But Christ has passed that way." Augustine (Serm. 173).

So another African Father writes: "Remember the words of the Apostle; and be not grieved by your friend's departure, as the Heathen who have no hope. For if we believe in the Resurrection of Christ, we believe in the resurrection of those for whom Christ died and rose again. Therefore sorrow for death has been done away. Why should you weep for one who is not lost? Why should you mourn for him who will return? He whom you lament is not dead; he is only gone on a journey. Do not weep for him who has set out a little before you, and whom you will soon follow. 'Profectio est quam credis mortem. Non est lugendus qui antecedit, et quem tu mox subsequeris.'" Tertullian (De Patientiâ, 9).

— οἱ λοιποί] the rest, the others, i. e. the Heathen. (Eph. ii. 3.) The melancholy feelings of the Heathen on the subject of death were expressed as follows: Theocr. (Id. iv. 42), ἐλπίδες ἐν ζωοῖσιν, ἀνέλπιστοι δὲ θανόντες. Æschyl. (Eum. 638), ἅπαξ θανόντος οὔτις ἐστ' ἀνάστασις. Catull. (v. 4), "Soles occidere et redire possunt, | Nobis, cum semel occidet brevis lux, | Nox est perpetua una dormienda." How different from the language of the Apostle! (See on 1 Cor. xv. 37.) But these words, οἱ λοιποί, are not to be limited to the Heathen, but are applicable to the ungodly, and generally to all who are not true believers. See Proverbs xi. 23, ἐλπὶς ἀσεβῶν ἀπολεῖται, but v. 7, δικαίου οὐκ ὄλλυται ἐλπίς.

14. Ἰησοῦς ἀπέθανε] Jesus died. But they of whom he is speaking are not said by him to be dead, but asleep. The death of Jesus has made death to be not death, but sleep.

— τοὺς κοιμηθέντας διὰ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ] those who have been laid asleep through the power and death of Jesus, and through faith in Him, Who Himself (as the Apostle says here) died and rose again.

The bias of some Expositors to separate the words διὰ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ from κοιμηθέντας, and to join them in a less easy combination with ἄξει, seems to have arisen from neglect of the proper meaning of κοιμηθέντας, 'somno compositos,' laid asleep.

The best illustration of the sense of the word is found in the first passage in which it occurs in the New Testament, viz. in the history of the martyrdom of St. Stephen. He looked up to heaven and saw Jesus, once dead, but now risen and standing at God's right hand to help him. He prayed to Jesus to receive his spirit, and through the love and power of Jesus, Who had died, and had been buried, and had arisen and ascended into heaven, and through faith in Him, the first Martyr ἐκοιμήθη, fell asleep.

On this use of διὰ, through a person as a mediator, and especially as applied to Christ, the Mediator (1 Tim. ii. 5), and the Door (John x. 7), and the Way (John xiv. 6), through Whom alone all blessings, both in life and death, come to us from God. See John x. 9; xiv. 6. Acts iii. 16; x. 36. 43. Rom. i. 5; v. 11. 17. 21. 1 Cor. viii. 6; xv. 21. 2 Cor. i. 5; v. 18. Gal. vi. 14, δι' οὗ ἐμοὶ κόσμος ἐσταύρωται. Col. i. 16. 20. 2 Thess. iii. 12. Tit. iii. 5, 6. Heb. xiii. 15. 21. 1 Pet. ii. 5, and Dean Alford's excellent note here.

Indeed, Chrysostom had rightly expounded the words thus, τῇ πίστει τοῦ Ἰησοῦ κοιμηθέντας: and Theodoret says, "Jesus is the Mediator of the Resurrection; and the faithful who have Christ dwelling in themselves κοιμῶνται διὰ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ."

15. ἐν λόγῳ Κυρίου] in the Word of the Lord; not on my own authority, but the Lord's.

This expression, 'the Word of the Lord,' is a link which connects the writings of the Apostle with those of Moses and the Prophets of old, to whom 'the Word of the Lord came,' and who are said to speak in 'the Word of the Lord.' See 1 Kings xiii. 1, 2. Jer. i. 4, LXX. Hos. i. 2.

In this and numerous other respects, the New Testament came before the Old Testament to the Gentile world, and the New Testament prepared the Gentile world for the profitable study of the Old. See above on ii. 18.

16. αὐτὸς ὁ Κύριος καταβήσεται] The Lord Himself will descend in His human body (for descent is proper to body), and in the same human body and in the same manner as He ascended into heaven (Acts i. 11). "In quâ carne ascendit in cœlum, et in quâ sedet ad dexteram Patris, descensurus est ad Judicium." Augustine (contra Serm. Arian. c. 12, Vol. viii. p. 972).

— ἐν κελεύσματι] κέλευσμα (from κελεύω), the music played to set an Army or a Fleet in motion (Thucyd. ii. 92). The word is used in this sense by the Septuagint, Prov. xxx. 27, στρατεύει ἀφ' ἑνὸς κελεύσματος, and cp. Philo (de Præm. § 19), who says that God can easily bring together all men, wherever dispersed, into one place, from the ends of the earth, ἑνὶ κελεύσματι.

This appears to be the sense here. The Angelic Host is compared to a vast Army, which is set in motion by the Divine command, and accompanies Christ to Judgment. See Zech. xiv. 5. Dan. vii. 10. 13. Matt. xxv. 31.

The Son of Man shall come in His glory, and all the holy Angels with Him, and He shall sit on the throne of His glory n John 12. 26. & 14. 3. & 17. 24. Acts 1. 9. Rev. 11. 12.

17 n ἔπειτα ἡμεῖς οἱ ζῶντες οἱ περιλειπόμενοι ἅμα σὺν αὐτοῖς ἁρπαγησόμεθα ἐν νεφέλαις εἰς ἀπάντησιν τοῦ Κυρίου εἰς ἀέρα· καὶ οὕτω πάντοτε σὺν Κυρίῳ ἐσόμεθα. 18 Ὥστε παρακαλεῖτε ἀλλήλους ἐν τοῖς λόγοις τούτοις.

(2 Thess. i. 7). He shall be revealed with His mighty Angels, and so Enoch prophesied, 'The Lord cometh with ten thousands of His Saints to execute Judgment' (Jude 14, and cp. Rev. xiv. 14).

— ἐν φωνῇ ἀρχαγγέλου—ἐν σάλπιγγι Θεοῦ] with the voice of the Archangel and with the trumpet of God. See Zech. ix. 14, ὁ Κύριος ἐν σάλπιγγι σαλπιεῖ, and 1 Cor. xv. 52. The circumstances of the Second Advent, and of the Last Judgment, appear to have been prefigured by those of the Giving of the Law on Mount Sinai; Men will be judged according to their works, of which the Law of God is the Rule: and therefore the future Great Assize in which men will be rewarded or punished according to their Deeds, to be then judged by the standard of the Divine Law, was fitly typified by the promulgation of that Law. Compare the words of Moses describing the delivery of the Law (Exod. xix. 16) with the language used by the Apostle here describing the last Judgment: Ἐγένοντο φωναὶ καὶ ἀστραπαί, φωνὴ τῆς σάλπιγγος ἠχεῖ μέγα, καὶ ἐπτοήθη πᾶς ὁ λαὸς, καὶ ἐξήγαγε Μωϋσῆς τὸν λαὸν εἰς συνάντησιν τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ παρέστησαν ἐπὶ τὸ ὄρος· τὸ ὄρος ἐκαπνίζετο ὅλον, διὰ τὸ καταβεβηκέναι ἐπ' αὐτὸ τὸν Θεὸν ἐν πυρί (cp. 2 Thess. i. 8)· ἐγίνοντο δὲ αἱ φωναὶ τῆς σάλπιγγος ἰσχυρότεραι σφόδρα παραβαίνουσαι.

There is also mention made by Moses of the νεφέλη, v. 13. Cp. here v. 17.

Also the Law was given with the ministry of Angels (Acts vii. 53. Gal. iii. 19), and Angels will come with the Lord to Judgment. See above note on κελεύσματι.

The Trumpet here seems to be no other than that of the Seventh Angel in the Apocalypse (xi. 15—18).

Whether you eat or drink, or wake or sleep, let that Trumpet be ever sounding in your ears with this call, "Arise, ye dead; come ye to the Judgment" (S. Jerome, ap. A Lapide).

— οἱ νεκροὶ ἐν Χριστῷ] the dead in Christ shall rise first. See preceding note. The words have been supposed by some learned interpreters to signify the dead generally shall rise first, and some take the words 'in Christ' as following 'they shall rise;' but this does not appear to be a correct exposition.

The dead in Christ are they who having been incorporated into the body of Christ, remain living members of Christ, and die in Christ, and though asleep in peace (κεκοιμημένοι) as to their bodies, yet remain members of the Communion of Saints in Him Who lives for ever, and is the source of undying life to those who are in Him.

Thus they who live in Christ communicate with the dead in Christ: "Communionem cum illis sanctis, qui in hâc quam suscepimus fide defuncti sunt, societate et spei communione tenemur." Augustine (Serm. 181). See below, Heb. xii. 23.

The Saints of God living in the Church of Christ are in communion with all the Saints departed out of this life, and admitted to the presence of God. The mystical union between Christ and His Church, the spiritual conjunction of the members to the Head, is the true foundation of that communion which one member had with another, all the members living and increasing by the same influence which they receive from Him. But Death, which is nothing else but the separation of the soul from the body, maketh no separation in the mystical union, no breach of the spiritual conjunction, and consequently there must continue the same communion, because there remaineth the same foundation. And since the true and unfeigned holiness of man wrought by the powerful influence of the Spirit of God, not only remaineth, but also is improved after death, and since the correspondence of the internal holiness was the Communion between their persons in their life, they cannot be said to be divided by death, which had no power over that sanctity by which they were first conjoined. Bp. Pearson (on the Creed), Art. ix. p. 664, 665.

17. ἡμεῖς οἱ ζῶντες οἱ περιλειπόμενοι κ.τ.λ.] We the living (as distinguished from the dead) being left behind (present participle) by the departure of others who die from time to time, shall not anticipate those who have fallen asleep; or, as Tertullian says (de Resurrect. 24), "nos qui remanemus in adventum Domini non præveniemus eos qui dormierunt."

This passage has given rise to three questions:

1. What is the meaning of the words οἱ ζῶντες, the living, here?

2. Whether, inasmuch as all men are from Adam, and since it is said in Holy Scripture that by Adam death passed upon all, and that in Adam all die (Rom. v. 12. 14. 1 Cor. xv. 22), and it is appointed unto men to die, and after that the Judgment (Heb. ix. 27), they who are alive on the earth when Christ comes will first die, and so pass through Death to Resurrection and Judgment?

These two questions were discussed in ancient times;

Another has arisen in modern days, viz.;

3. Whether St. Paul believed and taught in this Epistle that he himself would be alive at Christ's coming, and therefore that he supposed that the Second Advent was near at hand when he wrote these words?

As to questions 1 and 2,

The difference of opinion as to the meaning of the word living here, arose in great measure from the difference of reading in the MSS. in the parallel passage of St. Paul's Epistle to the Corinthians (1 Cor. xv. 51), where some MSS. read πάντες κοιμησόμεθα, 'we shall all sleep.'

On this point see the note there.

Consequently, some Expositors were led to interpret ζῶντες as equivalent to spiritually alive, and quickened by a lively faith; and others supposed that all would first die, and then revive and be raised for Judgment.

These differences of opinion are recapitulated by S. Jerome, Epist. ad Minervium, iv. p. 216; S. Augustine, de octo Dulcitii quæstionibus, Vol. vi. p. 223; and Epist. ad Mercator. 193; and de Civ. Dei, xx. 20; and in Enchirid. c. 54; de Fide et Symb. c. 8; S. Chrys. and Theophyl. in 2 Tim. iv. 1; and by Isidorus Pelusiot. Epist. 222; and, in later times, by Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. vii. p. 561—563.

S. Augustine, although not enabled to ascertain the true reading in 1 Cor. xv. 51 as fully as it has since been determined, declared the true meaning of the passage in the following langnage:—

If no other meaning can be attached to the words of the Apostle, and if it be evident that he designed that the meaning which they manifestly proclaim should be assigned to them, namely, that at the end of the World, and at the Lord's Second Coming, there will be some who will not be unclothed of their bodies, but be clothed upon with immortality, and this mortal will be swallowed up by life (2 Cor. v. 4), doubtless with this meaning will accord that which we profess in the Rule of Faith, namely, that 'He will come again to Judge the Quick and Dead;' so that we are not here to understand by the word quick, the just, and by the word dead, the unjust, although it be true that the Just and the Unjust will be judged; but by the word quick in the Creed we are to understand those whom Christ's Second Coming will find not yet departed from the body; and by dead, those who have departed from it. And those other texts (1 Cor. xv. 36. 51) must be so expounded as to agree with this interpretation. (Augustine.)

However, even till the sixteenth century, many Expositors were of the opinion that all who were alive at Christ's coming would first die, and then revive and be judged. So Aquinas, Anselm, and A Lapide here.

But now that the reading of 1 Cor. xv. 51 has been established, by the collation of MSS. and Versions derived from all parts of Christendom, there can be no longer any doubt that the interpretation propounded by S. Augustine is the true one; and it may suffice to remind the reader of the words of the learned English Expositor of the Creed on this subject; He shall judge the quick, that is, those which shall be then alive when He cometh; and He shall judge the dead, that is, those which at the same time shall be raised from the dead;

The only doubt in this interpretation is, whether those that shall be found alive when our Saviour cometh shall still so continue till they come to judgment, or upon His first appearance they shall die, and after their death revive; and so together with all those which rise out of their graves appear before the judgment seat. The consideration of our mortality, and the cause thereof (that it is appointed unto all men once to die, in that death hath passed upon all, Heb. ix. 27. Rom. v. 12), might persuade us that the last generation of mankind should taste of death, as well as all the rest that went before it; and therefore it hath been thought, especially of late, that those, whom Christ at His coming finds alive, shall immediately die; and after a sudden and universal expiration shall be restored to life again, and joined with the rest whom the graves shall render, that all may be partakers of the Resurrection;

But the Apostle's description of the Last Day mentioneth no such kind of death, yea, rather excludeth it: For we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and the

V. 1 a Περὶ δὲ τῶν χρόνων καὶ τῶν καιρῶν, ἀδελφοὶ, οὐ χρείαν ἔχετε ὑμῖν γράφεσθαι· 2 b αὐτοὶ γὰρ ἀκριβῶς οἴδατε, ὅτι ἡμέρα Κυρίου, ὡς κλέπτης ἐν νυκτὶ, οὕτως ἔρχεται· 3 c ὅταν γὰρ λέγωσιν, Εἰρήνη καὶ ἀσφάλεια, τότε αἰφνίδιος

a Matt. 24. 3, 36.
b Matt. 24. 42, 43. Mark 13. 34. Luke 21. 34. 2 Pet. 3. 10. Rev. 3. 3. & 16. 15. c Luke 21. 34, 35. Isa. 13. 6—9. Jer. 13. 21.

trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we be ever with the Lord. (1 Thess. iv. 15—17.)

In which words, they which remain unto the coming of the Lord, are not said to die or to rise from the dead, but are distinguished from those which are asleep and rise first; yea, being alive, are caught up together with them, having not tasted death;

The same is further confirmed by the Apostle, saying, Behold, I shew you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed (1 Cor. xv. 51), which, being added to the former, putteth this doctrine out of question; for the living, which remain at the coming of Christ, are opposed to them which are asleep; and the opposition consists in this, that they shall not sleep, which sleep is not opposed to a long death, but to death itself, as it followeth, the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we (which shall not sleep) shall be changed; so that their mutation shall be unto them as a Resurrection. And collation of these two Scriptures maketh up this conclusion so manifestly, that I conceive no man had ever doubted or questioned the truth of it, had they not first differed in the reading of the text. (Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. vii. p. 563.)

3. As to the third question, we may say—

It was not revealed by Almighty God to St. Paul, nor has it ever been revealed to any man, whether he himself should remain alive till Christ's second coming. Our Lord said to his Apostles, "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father has put in His own power." (Acts i. 7.)

But it would be very erroneous to say (as has been recently affirmed by some), that St. Paul expected that he himself, and the majority of those whom he was addressing, would be alive at Christ's Second Coming; and that he taught in this Epistle, as an article of Christian Doctrine, that Christ would come in his own age and lifetime; and that he was deceived in this expectation, and afterwards "modified this opinion," particularly when "he saw the evil effects of this doctrine on the practice of the Thessalonians," who (it is alleged) were induced by the expectation of an immediate reappearance of Christ to relinquish their worldly callings, and to live in idleness.

This allegation is disproved by the fact that St. Paul used the same language five years after the composition of his two Epistles to the Thessalonians, viz. in his first Epistle to the Corinthians, where, using the first person plural in the same way as here, he says, "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed" (1 Cor. xv. 51).

And, be it observed, he used that language at a time when he himself personally was in daily danger of death. (1 Cor. xv. 31. Cp. 2 Cor. i. 8, 9.)

If the personal pronoun we in the present passage means St. Paul himself and his own contemporaries, it must also have the same meaning in the latter passage.

There was no alteration whatever in his teaching, such as is supposed;

Before he wrote to the Corinthians he himself warned the Thessalonians in his second Epistle, which, be it remembered, was written very shortly after the first, against being "soon shaken or troubled as if the day of the Lord was at hand" (2 Thess. ii. 2).

And he teaches them that the Day of the Lord would not come until after the manifestation of some Power, which was not then visible, and which he describes.

St. Paul also, in his Epistle to the Romans, written in the next year after the first Epistle to the Corinthians, speaks of the Conversion of the Jews as an event still to be looked for after the "fulness of the Gentiles had come in" (Rom. xi. 24—27).

This was a preliminary prophecy, which he, the Apostle of the Gentiles, well knew was not yet accomplished; and therefore he was a debtor to the Gentiles (Rom. i. 14, 15; xi. 13), and bound to promote its fulfilment. Cp. Tertullian, de Resurrectione, c. 23.

As to the use of the pronoun we in this passage and that to the Corinthians (1 Cor. xv. 51), if it be pressed rigidly, it would follow that all the Thessalonians to whom he writes, who would live till Christ's Second Coming, would be for ever with the Lord; which could not have been his meaning.

But no one who has considered the characteristics of St. Paul's style, will be perplexed by the use of the pronoun here.

St. Paul frequently even speaks of himself individually as a representative of a class with which he has no sympathy, and with which he himself, therefore, is by no means to be identified. See on 1 Cor. iv. 6, and the quotation from Bp. Sanderson in the note on 1 Cor. vi. 12 and xiv. 14.

Thus in Rom. iii. 7: "If the truth of God hath more abounded through my lie unto his glory, why yet am I also judged as a sinner?"

See also the seventh Chapter of the Epistle to the Romans, vii. 7—25.

Accordingly, it is well said by Theodoret here, "St. Paul is not speaking here of his own person, but of those who will be alive at that time. He is speaking of the faithful who will then be alive, and who will be caught up into the air." So also Chrysostom and Theophylact. The Apostle "transfers by a figure unto himself and his contemporaries the persons of those who would be alive at Christ's Second Coming." Augustine, De Civ. Dei, xx. 20.

Although St. Paul no where teaches that the Lord would not come again while he himself was alive, yet he did not teach in this Epistle, or in any other, that Christ would come in his own age. He knew that the time of Christ's coming could not be known by men, and had not been revealed by God. He teaches in this Epistle that it would come as a thief in the night (v. 2), and that the certainty of its coming, and the uncertainty of the time of its coming, is a reason for perpetual preparation for it.

Let it be remembered that it is the Holy Ghost who speaks by the Apostle. And let it not be forgotten that He designed this Epistle not only for the edification of the Thessalonians and of other Churches in the Apostolic Age, but of all Christians in every Country and Age, even to the Coming of Christ, and that He knew that it would be read in every country and age till the Day of Doom.

Hence we may recognize the divine wisdom of the Apostle in using that pronoun which would best admonish all who read the Epistle, in his own and every successive generation, to be on their guard, as not knowing when their Lord would come; whereas, if he had used the pronoun they, it might have been thought that as long as the Apostle was alive men need not expect the Coming of Christ.

St. Paul's we is an universal we, which every age may apply, and ought to apply, to itself. Cp. Bengel.

St. Paul's office was to teach that the Great Day would surely come, and would come suddenly. But it was no part of his Mission to declare when it would, or would not, come.

That Day is hidden, in order that every day may be well spent. "Ergo latet Ille Dies, ut observentur omnes dies" (Augustine). See his three Letters, "De fine Sæculi," Ep. 197—199.

— εἰς ἀπάντησιν τοῦ Κυρίου εἰς ἀέρα] to meet the Lord, into the air. "Nos qui vivimus, qui residui erimus, rapiemur cum nubibus obviam Domino in aëra.—Domino obviam Sancti rapientur in nubibus, ipso illo nube in resurrectionis corpore elati." Hilary (in Ps. li. and in Ps. lvi.) And Tertullian (adv. Marcion. iii. ad fin.), "Auferemur in nubibus obviam Domino secundum Apostolum, Illo scilicet Filio hominis veniente in nubibus secundum Danielem (Dan. vii. 13), et ita semper cum Domino erimus."

Observe, he does not say αἰθέρα, but ἀέρα, intimating that Christ will descend to this lower Atmosphere which surrounds the Earth. Cp. the use of ἀήρ Acts xxii. 23. Ephes. ii. 2.

18. Ὥστε] Therefore; 'itaque' (Vulg.). Cp. Phil. ii. 12; iv. 1.

CH. V. 1. τῶν χρόνων καὶ τ. καιρῶν] the times and seasons; 'de temporibus et momentis' (Vulg.). Χρόνος signifies duration or length of time; καιρὸς, point of time: so that καιρὸς is ἀκμὴ χρόνου, 'punctum temporis.' See on Acts i. 7, and the remarks of Augustine, Epist. 197, noting the inadequacy of the Latin language to mark this difference, "Ibi Græcè legitur (Act. i. 7) χρόνους ἢ καιρούς. Nostri utrumque hoc verbum tempora appellant sive χρόνους sive καιρούς, cùm habeant hæc duo inter se non negligendam differentiam;" which he explains.

2. ἀκριβῶς οἴδατε] ye know well. How did the Thessalonians know certainly that the Day of the Lord would come "as a thief in the night?"

The expression is a remarkable one. No one but Christ Himself would have ventured to compare His Second Advent to judge the World to the coming of a Thief. Probably the Thessalonians derived that knowledge from a written Gospel.

If so, it must have been either from the Gospel of St. Matthew (xxiv. 43), or of St. Luke (xii. 39), or from both. See above, on ii. 18 and iii. 5;

The present comparison is not found in either of the two other Gospels. The expression, the Day shall come, is not found αὐτοῖς ἐφίσταται ὄλεθρος, ὥσπερ ἡ ὠδὶν τῇ ἐν γαστρὶ ἐχούσῃ, καὶ οὐ μὴ ἐκφύγωσιν.

d Eph. 5. 8.

4 [d] Ὑμεῖς δὲ, ἀδελφοὶ, οὐκ ἐστὲ ἐν σκότει, ἵνα ὑμᾶς ἡ ἡμέρα ὡς κλέπτης καταλάβῃ· 5 [e] πάντες γὰρ ὑμεῖς υἱοὶ φωτός ἐστε καὶ υἱοὶ ἡμέρας, οὐκ ἐσμὲν νυκτὸς οὐδὲ σκότους.

e Luke 16. 8. Rom. 13. 12. Eph. 5. 8.

f Matt. 24. 42. & 25. 13. Luke 21. 34, 36. Rom. 13. 11, 12. 1 Cor. 15. 34. Eph. 5. 14. 1 Pet. 5. 8.

6 [f] Ἄρα οὖν μὴ καθεύδωμεν ὡς καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ, ἀλλὰ γρηγορῶμεν καὶ νήφωμεν· 7 [g] οἱ γὰρ καθεύδοντες νυκτὸς καθεύδουσι, καὶ οἱ μεθυσκόμενοι νυκτὸς μεθύουσιν· 8 [h] ἡμεῖς δὲ ἡμέρας ὄντες νήφωμεν, ἐνδυσάμενοι θώρακα πίστεως καὶ ἀγάπης, καὶ περικεφαλαίαν ἐλπίδα σωτηρίας. 9 [i] Ὅτι οὐκ ἔθετο ἡμᾶς ὁ Θεὸς εἰς ὀργὴν, ἀλλ' εἰς περιποίησιν σωτηρίας διὰ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, 10 [k] τοῦ ἀποθανόντος ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, ἵνα, εἴτε γρηγορῶμεν εἴτε καθεύδωμεν, ἅμα σὺν αὐτῷ ζήσωμεν.

g Rom. 13. 13. h Isa. 59. 17. Rom. 13. 12. Eph. 6. 14, &c. i Rom. 9. 22. 1 Pet. 2. 8. k Rom. 14. 8, 9. 1 Cor. 5. 15.

11 Διὸ παρακαλεῖτε ἀλλήλους, καὶ οἰκοδομεῖτε εἷς τὸν ἕνα, καθὼς καὶ ποιεῖτε.

1 Rom. 15. 27. 1 Cor. 9. 11. & 16. 18. Gal. 6. 6. Phil. 2. 29. 1 Tim. 5. 17. Heb. 13. 7, 17.

12 [l] Ἐρωτῶμεν δὲ ὑμᾶς, ἀδελφοὶ, εἰδέναι τοὺς κοπιῶντας ἐν ὑμῖν, καὶ προϊσταμένους ὑμῶν ἐν Κυρίῳ, καὶ νουθετοῦντας ὑμᾶς, 13 καὶ ἡγεῖσθαι αὐτοὺς ὑπερεκπερισσοῦ ἐν ἀγάπῃ διὰ τὸ ἔργον αὐτῶν.

Εἰρηνεύετε ἐν ἑαυτοῖς.

---

in St. Matthew (cp. Matt. xxiv. 50), but it is found in St. Luke (xxi. 35).

Also, the word αἰφνίδιος, here used by St. Paul to describe the sudden coming of that day, occurs only once in the New Testament, viz. in the Gospel of St. Luke describing the coming of that Day.

Compare also St. Paul's words here, τότε αἰφνίδιος αὐτοῖς ἐπίσταται ὄλεθρος, καὶ οὐ μὴ ἐκφύγωσιν, with the very similar language in St. Luke (xxi. 34), προσέχετε ἑαυτοῖς .... μὴ αἰφνίδιος ἐφ' ὑμᾶς ἐπιστῇ ἡ ἡμέρα ἐκείνη· ὡς παγὶς γὰρ ἐπελεύσεται κ.τ.λ. ἀγρυπνεῖτε οὖν ἵνα καταξιωθῆτε ἐκφυγεῖν ταῦτα πάντα.

Whether the Thessalonians were now in possession of the Gospel of St. Luke, is a question which has been touched upon elsewhere. See on 1 Thess. i. 9; ii. 18. 2 Cor. viii. 18.

It may be observed here, in addition to what is there said, that, at the beginning of both these Epistles to the Thessalonians, the Apostle addresses them to the Church (Ἐκκλησίᾳ), as a Society already existing at Thessalonica (1 Thess. i. 1. 2 Thess. ii. 1), and that in this chapter we have evidence of the existence of a body of Clergy (v. 12) already organized there.

We find also a solemn charge from St. Paul, that this Epistle should be publicly read in the presence of the Faithful (v. 27), doubtless in the assembly of the Church.

We know also that the reading of the Gospels as well as of the Old Testament was a part of the Ritual of the Primitive Church. (See Justin, M. Apol. ii. p. 98, c. Tryph. p. 331. Kirchofer, p. 35, 36.)

It is probable, that the Holy Spirit who gave so solemn a charge that this Epistle should be read in the Church, would have been equally earnest in providing that some authentic account of the words, works, and sufferings of Him on Whom all the teaching of the Apostle in this and all his Epistles is built, should be extant for the use of the faithful; and that one of the duties of the Clergy who are mentioned here, was to read such an Evangelic History in the public religious assemblies at Thessalonica. See further on v. 21. 27.

— ἡμέρα] The Article ἡ is prefixed by A, I, K, but not by B, D, E, F, G. Cp. 2 Pet. iii. 10, ἥξει ἡμέρα Κυρίου ὡς κλέπτης.

3. ὠδίν] See Ps. xlviii. 6, ὠδῖνες ὡς τικτούσης. Jerem. vi. 24; xiii. 21.

8. θώρακα πίστεως] the breastplate of faith. In carnal weapons, a shield is always a shield, and nothing more; but not so in spiritual. For we find that the Apostle sometimes specifies the 'loricam fidei,' the breastplate of faith; and in another place, 'scutum fidei,' the shield of faith. (Ephes. vi. 14. 16.) Faith is both a breastplate and a shield; it is a shield because it receives and wards off the darts of the enemy, and it is a breastplate because it defends the heart from being pierced through. Augustine (in Ps. 34).

9. εἰς περιποίησιν] for the purchase of salvation through our Lord Jesus Christ. 'Ad acquisitionem salutis per Dominum' (Vulg.); and so the Gothic Version of Ulphilas.

περιποίησις, from περιποιοῦμαι, sibi vendico, redimo, is said properly of Christ purchasing salvation for us, and redeeming us by the sacrifice of Himself.

This signification of the word had already been prepared for Evangelical use by the Septuagint Version of the Old Testament, which uses the word in the sense of recovering, rescuing, purchasing, and making alive and keeping alive. See Isa. xxxi. 5, περιποιήσεται καὶ σώσει, and xliii. 21, λαόν μου ὃν περιεποιησάμην, and see Gen. xxxi. 18; xxxvi. 6, and Mal. iii. 17. 1 Pet. ii. 9.

But by virtue of their incorporation in Christ their Head, the acquisition made by Christ is here predicated of Believers, who by means of His death and passion acquire salvation and glory; and so the Apostle speaks in 2 Thess. ii. 14, εἰς ὃ ἐκάλεσεν ὑμᾶς εἰς περιποίησιν δόξης τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. Cp. Heb. x. 39.

11. εἷς τὸν ἕνα] one the other. See 1 Cor. iv. 6, εἷς ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἑνός. So Herod. iv. 50, ἓν πρὸς ἓν συμβάλλειν. Winer, p. 156.

12. εἰδέναι] to discern and know, to distinguish from false teachers, and to acknowledge, to revere and love them as teachers of the truth. See on Acts xv. 18. Compare 1 Cor. xvi. 16. 18, ἐπιγινώσκετε τοὺς τοιούτους, compared with Phil. ii. 29.

This word εἰδέναι is specially used to express the duty owed by the Laity to their Ministers. Thus Ignatius (Smyrn. 9), καλῶς ἔχει—ἐπίσκοπον εἰδέναι.

On the duty here inculcated of "obedience to Spiritual Guides and Governors," see Dr. Barrow's Three Sermons, vol. iii. p. 106—167, in which the author, with his usual clearness and learning, shows first who they are that are entitled to be owned and acknowledged, loved and revered, as Spiritual Guides; and next, the grounds on which this duty is to be paid to them.

— τοὺς κοπιῶντας ἐν ὑμῖν, καὶ προϊσταμένους κ.τ.λ.] those who are labouring among you, and presiding over you in the Lord. An important passage in this, the earliest Epistle of St. Paul, as showing that even at Thessalonica, where St. Paul had been only on a brief visit, on his first visit to Greece, a short time before this Epistle was written, and where the Gospel had only been recently planted, provision had already been made for the organization of a Christian Ministry.

We find here a body of men labouring (κοπιῶντας), and presiding (προισταμένους, cp. Rom. xii. 8. 1 Tim. v. 17), and admonishing (νουθετοῦντας) the rest,—in a word, a body of Clergy already settled and established; and to be known, reverenced, and esteemed very highly in love for their work's sake as such, —a specimen of what was done by the Apostle in other Churches. Cp. Acts xiv. 23; xx. 17.

13. Εἰρηνεύετε ἐν ἑαυτοῖς] Be at peace among yourselves. These short sentences,—short in order that they might be easily remembered, and pass readily from mouth to mouth,—are like what the wise man calls 'goads' to stimulate moral practice, and 'as nails fastened by the Masters of Assemblies' (Eccl. xii. 11),—nails fastened by Chief Pastors of Churches in the memory of Christendom. Each of them deserves special attention; and some of them, it will be seen, are delivered in pairs, and they are therefore here printed accordingly. See v. 19. 21, and compare the note below on 1 Cor. vi. 20, and Heb. xiii. 5.

14 [m] Παρακαλοῦμεν δὲ ὑμᾶς, ἀδελφοί, νουθετεῖτε τοὺς ἀτάκτους, παραμυθεῖσθε τοὺς ὀλιγοψύχους, ἀντέχεσθε τῶν ἀσθενῶν, μακροθυμεῖτε πρὸς πάντας.

15 [n] Ὁρᾶτε μή τις κακὸν ἀντὶ κακοῦ τινὶ ἀποδῷ, ἀλλὰ πάντοτε τὸ ἀγαθὸν διώκετε, καὶ εἰς ἀλλήλους καὶ εἰς πάντας.

16 [o] Πάντοτε χαίρετε· 17 [p] ἀδιαλείπτως προσεύχεσθε· 18 [q] ἐν παντὶ εὐχαριστεῖτε, τοῦτο γὰρ θέλημα Θεοῦ ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ εἰς ὑμᾶς.

19 [r] Τὸ Πνεῦμα μὴ σβέννυτε, 20 προφητείας μὴ ἐξουθενεῖτε·

21 [s] Πάντα δοκιμάζετε, τὸ καλὸν κατέχετε, 22 [t] ἀπὸ παντὸς εἴδους πονηροῦ ἀπέχεσθε.

m Rom. 14. 1. Gal. 6. 1, 2. 2 Thess. 3. 6, 11, 12.
n Lev. 19. 18. Prov. 17. 13. & 20. 22. & 24. 29. Matt. 5. 39. Rom. 12. 17. 1 Cor. 6. 7. Gal. 6. 10. 1 Pet. 3. 9.
o Rom. 12. 12. Phil. 4. 4. p Eccles. 18. 22. Luke 18. 1. Rom. 12. 12. Eph. 6. 18. Col. 4. 2.
q Eph. 5. 20.
r Eph. 4. 30. 2 Tim. 1. 6. 1 Cor. 14. 1, 39.
s 1 Cor. 2. 11, 15. 1 John 4. 1.
t Phil. 4. 8.

17. ἀδιαλείπτως προσεύχεσθε] The Apostle commands us to pray without ceasing. We cannot be always on our knees, and strecthing forth our hands, and yet we are to pray without ceasing (ἀδιαλείπτως).

How can this be done? By continuity of desire. If, whatever you are doing, you are longing for the everlasting Rest, the heavenly Sabbath, you never cease praying; your desire is prayer. Continuous desire is continuous prayer. If you would never cease from prayer, never cease from desire. Your desires speak. If you cease to desire, you are dumb, you have ceased to pray. Augustine (in Ps. 37). See also Dr. Barrow's exposition of this text in his Sermons on the Duty of Prayer (i. p. 107—140), where he shows that the precept is to be obeyed,

(1) by cherishing habitually and constantly the spirit of supplication.

(2) by vigilant attendance on devotion, as the main business of the Christian life.

(3) by never failing to engage in public acts of devotion, on the recurrence of set times for it, and on all fitting occasions;

(4) especially when prescribed by authority.

(5) by lifting up our hearts to God from time to time in fervent ejaculations in private, in the midst of our business, and by being in "the fear of the Lord all the day long" (Prov. xxiii. 17).

19. τὸ Πνεῦμα μὴ σβέννυτε] quench not the Spirit, whether in yourselves or others. Compare the case of the foolish Virgins saying αἱ λαμπάδες ἡμῶν σβέννυνται (Matt. xxv. 8).

The flame of the Spirit is kindled from heaven in the lamp of man's nature, but requires to be fed with continual supplies of oil from the same Spirit, given in the means of Grace, Prayer, Confirmation, the Holy Eucharist, hearing and reading the Word of God, and in the exercise of works of piety, holiness, and charity. Otherwise the light will go out, that is, will be no light to us, and the door will be shut, and we excluded from the wedding (Matt. xxv. 10—13). This Scripture is not to be so pressed as to be made a plea for rebaptization or re-ordination, as it was by some schismatics in ancient times, as if the Spirit once given in Baptism or Holy Orders could be so utterly quenched that it required to be lighted again by a Second or Third Baptism, and by a Second or Third Ordination. See S. Jerome's Dialogue against the Luciferians, and Augustine's remarks on this point, c. Epist. Parmenian. ii. c. 13, vol. ix. p. 108, where he says: "The Sacraments of Christ are holy and pure, and cannot be violated; and yet they are said to be polluted by evil men, because they do what in them lies to defile them. So the Spirit is said to be quenched by sin, because the sinner does his part to quench it; but he cannot so violate the purity of the Holy Ghost, and the grace of the Spirit remains 'bonis ad præmium, malis ad judicium.'"

Besides; this text is to be taken together with what follows, where see note.

20. προφητείας μὴ ἐξουθενεῖτε] despise not prophesyings, or preachings; declarations of God's will, and expositions of His Word. On this use of προφητεία, frequent in St. Paul's Epistles, see 1 Cor. xi. 4; xii. 10, and on Rom. xii. 6.

But it may be asked, how was there any danger that prophesyings should be despised?

This question may best be answered by reference to the precept which immediately precedes, and to the circumstances of the early Church.

They who were admitted into the Church by Baptism received on their admission supernatural spiritual gifts (χαρίσματα), particularly the gift of Tongues.

Some among them were vain of their gifts, and made an ambitious display of them, as was the case at Corinth, where St. Paul was now writing. See 1 Cor. xii. 28; xiii. 1; xiv. 2—39.

And in comparison with those extraordinary gifts of the Spirit, some disparaged the less ostentatious but more edifying work of Prophesying (see 1 Cor. xiv. 1—5).

St. Paul had a difficult task to perform, in order to assign to each gift its proper place; and so to commend the ordinary work of Prophesying as not to depreciate the supernatural gifts of the Spirit, which had produced such glorious effects on the day of Pentecost.

The balance was to be held in equipoise between the two; and he has done it on these two precepts, which are like the two scales of the Balance.

He gives due honour to both in these two consecutive sentences. To one side he says, "Quench not the Spirit;" to the other, "Despise not Prophesyings."

These precepts may be best illustrated by the words with which he afterwards summed up his more elaborate reasonings on this subject in his first Epistle to that city from which he is writing, Corinth—ζηλοῦτε τὸ προφητεύειν,—καὶ τὸ λαλεῖν γλώσσαις μὴ κωλύετε.

"Earnestly desire Prophesying; and do not forbid speaking with Tongues" (1 Cor. xiv. 39). There the balance is perfectly adjusted, for he inverts the prohibition, and converts it into an exhortation. Here he says, Despise not Prophesying; there he says, Earnestly desire it.

21. Πάντα δοκιμάζετε] Prove all things. "Omnia examinate; quod bonum est, tenete" (Tertullian, de Præs. Hæret.). A precept probably derived from one of our Blessed Lord, which is often cited as such by ancient writers, γίνεσθε δόκιμοι τραπεζῖται. 'Estote probi examinatores sive nummularii,' 'Be ye skilful tryers (properly assayers) of coin, whether it be spurious or genuine;' which precept is ascribed to St. Paul by Dionysius of Alexandria (cp. Euseb. vi. 7), probably referring to the present text. See the note of Valesius on Euseb. l. c., and note above on Matt. xxv. 27, and the present Editor's note on Theocritus xii. 23.

On the duty of examining evidence in Religion, see on 1 Cor. x. 15.

This precept, "Try all things, hold fast the good, and abstain from all evil," evidently implies that they to whom it is addressed had some standard by which all things were to be tried.

They are required to prove the various doctrines presented to them; they must therefore have had some touchstone by which those doctrines were to be tested. What could that be? Some authentic document doubtless. How otherwise could these Thessalonians who were only neophytes in Christianity, recently converted from idolatry (1 Thess. i. 9), have been proof against the arts of false teachers? how would they be enabled to prove all things, and to hold fast the truth? This consideration confirms the opinion stated above (v. 2), viz. that they had a written Gospel already provided for them.

22. ἀπὸ παντὸς εἴδους πονηροῦ ἀπέχεσθε] This precept, like that in v. 20 (see note), is to be coupled with the preceding one. Hence S. Basil says (cited by Grinfield here), "The wise examiner of spiritual coinage (i. e. of doctrine) will hold fast what is genuine, but will hold himself off ἀπὸ παντὸς εἴδους πονηροῦ."

Try all things, put them to the test, do not hastily receive any doctrine that is presented to you, nor believe every spirit, but prove them by the Rule of Faith which ye have received, and hold fast that which is good, Τὸ καλὸν κατέχετε, but ἀπέχεσθε ἀπὸ παντὸς εἴδους πονηροῦ, 'hold yourselves off from its opposite evil.'

Observe the contrast between κατέχετε and ἀπέχεσθε, and between τὸ καλὸν, 'the one good and true,' as opposed to ἀπὸ παντὸς εἴδους πονηροῦ.

But what is εἴδους πονηροῦ?

Some interpret it, 'every form or kind of evil.'

But this interpretation of εἶδος as equivalent to form or kind, and of εἴδους πονηροῦ as equivalent to form, or kind, of evil, seems to be liable to two objections;

u Rom. 15. 33. ch. 3. 13. 1 Cor. 1. 8. & 6. 20.
x 1 Cor. 1. 9. & 10. 13. 2 Cor. 1. 18. Heb. 10. 23.
y Rom. 16. 16. 1 Cor. 16. 20. 2 Cor. 13. 12. 1 Tim. 1. 3, 18. & 5. 7, 21. & 6. 13, 17. 1 Pet. 5. 14. z Col. 4. 16.

23 u Αὐτὸς δὲ ὁ Θεὸς τῆς εἰρήνης ἁγιάσαι ὑμᾶς ὁλοτελεῖς, καὶ ὁλόκληρον ὑμῶν τὸ πνεῦμα, καὶ ἡ ψυχὴ, καὶ τὸ σῶμα ἀμέμπτως ἐν τῇ παρουσίᾳ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τηρηθείη. 24 x Πιστὸς ὁ καλῶν ὑμᾶς, ὃς καὶ ποιήσει.

25 Ἀδελφοὶ, προσεύχεσθε περὶ ἡμῶν.

26 y Ἀσπάσασθε τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς πάντας ἐν φιλήματι ἁγίῳ.

27 z Ὁρκίζω ὑμᾶς τὸν Κύριον ἀναγνωσθῆναι τὴν ἐπιστολὴν πᾶσι τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς. 28 Ἡ χάρις τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ μεθ' ὑμῶν.

---

1. The word εἶδος (from εἴδω, video) which often occurs in the LXX, means form, outward appearance, which is seen, but does not signify kind, except perhaps in Jer. xv. 3. And it never signifies kind or sort in the New Testament. Indeed this is a philosophical sense of εἶδος which is not quite in harmony with the style of the sacred text.

2. εἴδους seems more naturally construed as agreeing with πονηροῦ. And it is doubtful whether πονηροῦ would have been used for τοῦ πονηροῦ. The passage cited in defence of this construction, Heb. v. 14, πρὸς διάκρισιν καλοῦ τε καὶ κακοῦ, is hardly parallel.

Accordingly we find that in the Vulgate, Syriac, Æthiopic, and Arabic Versions εἴδους is construed as agreeing with πονηροῦ, and so the Old Latin Version in the Codex Augiensis (now first published by Mr. Scrivener), and cod. Boërnerianus. On the whole, the meaning of the two precepts seems to be:

Hold fast the good, and Hold yourselves off, refrain, not merely from πᾶν ἔργον πονηρὸν, every evil work, (cp. 2 Tim. iv. 18, where the structure is the same as here, ἀπὸ παντὸς ἔργου πονηροῦ, and confirms this exposition, and Job i. 1, ἀπεχόμενος ἀπὸ παντὸς πονηροῦ πράγματος, LXX, and Exod. xxiii. 7,) but hold yourselves also off from every evil appearance, every thing that has an evil look.

Provide things honest, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men (2 Cor. viii. 21); or as the heathen poet expresses it, keep yourselves off

"—— ab omni
Non solum facto, verum opprobrio quoque turpi."
(Horat. 1 Sat. vi. 83.)

23. Αὐτὸς ὁ Θεὸς κ.τ.λ., πνεῦμα ... ψυχὴ ... σῶμα] May the God of Peace Himself sanctify you perfectly, and may your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless. The words ὁλοτελὴς and ὁλόκληροι signify perfected in your Christian stature and maturity, and in full participation of the Christian inheritance. An ancient version of an ancient Father thus renders the words: "Deus pacis sanctificet vos perfectos, et integer vester spiritus et anima et corpus sine querelâ in Adventum Domini Nostri Jesu Christi servetur," Irenæus (v. 6. 1), who comments on this triple division of the human constitution, and on the graces which men receive from God, and the duties which they owe to Him, for the perfect preservation of each of these elements (spirit, soul, and body) to the coming of Christ.

What reason (says Irenæus) had the Apostle to pray for a perfect preservation of those elements (soul, body, and spirit), unless he foreknew the reunion of all three, and that there is one salvation for them all? They will be perfect, who present all three blameless to God. They will be perfect, who have the Spirit of God dwelling in them, and keep their souls and bodies blameless before Him, by holding the true faith, and doing their duty to their neighbour. (Irenæus, and see Gregory Nyssen ap. Theophyl. here.)

It is not to be supposed that the ψυχὴ and πνεῦμα are different parts of the human constitution; for the sentient faculty is indiscerptible (Bp. Butler, Anal. i.), and cannot be anatomized, like the body; but they are different faculties of the invisible part of man; so that ψυχὴ refers to that lower faculty of life which man has in common with other animals, and πνεῦμα represents the higher attribute which they do not possess, and which makes him nearest to God. (See Grotius here.)

This distinction of σῶμα, ψυχὴ, and πνεῦμα is best illustrated by the adjectives thence derived, and as used by St. Paul, σωματικὸς belonging to the body (1 Tim. iv. 8), ψυχικὸς, animal, distinguished from πνευματικὸς, spiritual, 1 Cor. ii. 14; xv. 44. 46; cp. Jude 19, ψυχικοὶ, πνεῦμα μὴ ἔχοντες. Observe also their order, as here marked by St. Paul,—πνεῦμα, the spirit, or highest faculty, the proper recipient of the Holy Spirit; then, secondly, ψυχὴ, or living principle, as that which animates the σῶμα, or corporeal frame. Cp. 1 Tim. iii. 16.

26. ἀσπάσασθε—φιλήματι ἁγίῳ] Greet all the brethren with a holy kiss. This precept also is to be coupled with that which is placed next to it, viz. 'I conjure you that this Epistle be read to all the brethren.'

Let the reader compare this precept as it stands here with the other places where the same precept occurs in St. Paul's Epistles (1 Cor. xvi. 20. 2 Cor. xiii. 12. Rom. xvi. 16. Cp. 1 Pet. v. 14), and let him also bear in mind the practice of the primitive Church in this respect, especially as stated by Justin Martyr (Apol. ii. p. 97), "After the Prayers (in the Church) are ended, we greet one another with a kiss."

S. Cyril of Jerusalem (Catech. 5, n. 2) says that, before the 'sursum corda' a deacon said to the communicants (in the words of St. Paul), "Salute one another with a holy kiss."

This was called φίλημα εἰρήνης, 'Osculum Pacis,' the 'Kiss of Peace,' and a seal of peace, 'Signaculum Pacis' (Tertullian de Orat. 14), and sometimes simply 'Pax.' In the Eastern Churches it was given before the oblation in the Eucharist, as a sign of reconciliation and love; in the Western, after the consecration of the elements, and before the distribution. See Concil. Laodic. c. 19; August. c. literas Petil. ii. c. 23 (quoted by Bingham, xv. 3); and Constitut. Apost. ii. 57, ἀσπαζέσθωσαν ἀλλήλους οἱ ἄνδρες καὶ ἀλλήλας αἱ γυναῖκες τὸ ἐν Κυρίῳ φίλημα.

Further, we know from the Acts of the Apostles that the Churches planted by St. Paul came together on a stated day, the Lord's Day, to break bread, i. e. to receive the Holy Communion. See on Acts xx. 7.

On considering these evidences we may conclude that the kiss of which the Apostle speaks, was not one given in private; it was a holy kiss, the kiss of peace, the kiss to be given in a holy place on a holy solemnity, the kiss to be given in the assemblies of the Church at the Holy Communion. In a word, this kiss which passed from mouth to mouth was a holy symbol of unity. The mouth which gave it was about to receive Christ in the Holy Eucharist, and the kiss was a seal of that love which knits together the faithful with one another and with Him in the Holy Communion of His Body and Blood. Here, then, we have another glimpse of the system of spiritual order and discipline organized by the Apostle in the Churches planted by him.

Concerning this Apostolic precept, "Salute one another with a holy kiss," and whether it is still obligatory, see Hooker, Pref. iv. 4, &c. Let us see what follows next;

27. ὁρκίζω ὑ. τ. Κ. ἀναγνωσθῆναι τὴν ἐπιστολὴν πᾶσι τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς] A solemn adjuration by the Lord, Christ; and a testimony to His Godhead. For He Whom the Apostle invokes, as knowing all things, cannot be other than God. Cp. Ps. lxiii. 12.

It shows also the great importance of the matter here enjoined, viz. that the Epistle now sent should be read to all the brethren, doubtless, not only at Thessalonica, the capital of Macedonia, but in all the Macedonian Churches. Compare 1 Cor. i. 1, 2. 2 Cor. i. 1.

Taken together also with other similar denunciations in Holy Writ, it seems to imply a condemnation of every Church which is untrue to this charge, and does not read the Holy Scriptures in the vernacular tongue to the people. "Quod Paulus cum adjuratione jubet, id Roma sub anathemate prohibet" (Bengel). There is something therefore like a prophetic protest in this solemn adjuration.

The Apostle had given a precept in the foregoing verse concerning an order to be observed in their public assemblies at the administration of the Holy Communion. He now gives direction as to another point in their public Ritual, viz. the Reading of Holy Scripture.

He uses the same language in both precepts, with a slight change in the position of the words.

He had said, Salute all the brethren, τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς πάντας, or every one, with a holy kiss; he now says, I adjure you by the Lord that this Epistle be read to all the brethren.—ἁγίοις, inserted here by Elz., is not in the best MSS.

The present was the first Epistle written by St. Paul; and the precept he gives here, that this Epistle should be read in the public assemblies of the Church, is a specimen and pattern of what was to be done with all his Epistles. They were addressed (for the most part) not to private or particular persons, but to large public Societies, to Churches. See particularly Gal. i. 2, the Churches of Galatia; 1 Cor. i. 2, 2 Cor. i. 1, to the Church at Corinth with all the Saints that are in all Achaia.

They were to be passed on and circulated from one Church to another. See Colossians iv. 15, 16, "When this Epistle is read among you (he takes it for granted that it will be read), cause that it be read also in the Church of the Laodiceans, and that ye read the Epistle from Laodicea,"—probably another Epistle of the Apostle. See note there.

His Epistles, which were to be thus read, were to be read, not as the word of man, but of God. They were to be read in the same manner as, and of equal authority with, the Books of Moses and the Prophets, which were read as Holy Scripture in the Synagogues, and had been recognized as the Word of God by Jesus Christ Himself.

See his assertion of his own inspiration in this Epistle (1 Thess. ii. 13, and 1 Cor. ii. 13). See also the terms in which he refers to his Epistle in 2 Thess. ii. 15; iii. 6. 14. That St. Paul's injunctions to read this Epistle in this manner were complied with, we may infer from the second Epistle, where he commends the Thessalonians for their faith (2 Thess. i. 3), which he would not have done if they had disobeyed the precept laid upon them here with a solemn adjuration.

It is also to be remembered, that the Apostle St. Peter, at the close of his life, when all, or nearly all, St. Paul's Epistles had been written, speaks of all St. Paul's Epistles as Holy Scripture (see on 2 Pet. iii. 16), i. e. as of equal authority with those writings which, and which alone, were called Scripture by the Ancient Church and People of God, and had been received as divinely Inspired by them, and by Jesus Christ Himself. Besides, it is manifest from early Christian testimony that St. Paul's Epistles were read in all Churches of Christendom in primitive times, and were read as Scripture. See, for instance, Tertullian, Præs. Hæret. c. 36, adv. Marcion. iv. 5. Canon. Muratorian. Origen ap. Euseb. vi. 24. Cyril Hierosol. cat. 4. Clemens Rom. i. 47.

Here then we have a further insight into the order and discipline of Christian Churches as founded by the Apostles.

We have seen that the Society of Christians at Thessalonica is called a Church (i. 1, cp. ii. 1), that it had a body of Clergy known as such (v. 12, 13). We have seen reason to believe that they had public assemblies on a stated day for the administration of the Holy Communion; and we now perceive ground for the persuasion that a part of the public service on those occasions consisted in the reading of St. Paul's Epistles as Holy Scripture. Three inferences may be drawn from the above.—

(1) If such an organization as this was settled in the Gentile City of Thessalonica, one of the first cities of Europe which received the Gospel, and where he was enabled to remain only for a short time, and to which this Epistle (the earliest written by him) is addressed, much more may we believe that a regular system of Church Order and Ritual, as well as of Christian Teaching, was settled in the other Churches to which the Apostle came afterwards in succession, such as Corinth and Ephesus, and which had the benefit of his presence for a longer time, and which received and read the Epistles which he had already written to other Churches.

This conclusion is confirmed by what we know of those other Churches from the Acts of the Apostles and the other Epistles of St. Paul. See, for instance, Acts xx. 17. 1 Cor. xiv. 26.

(2) If St. Paul so solemnly adjures the Thessalonians that this Epistle, written by himself, should be read in the public assemblies of the Church, and if all his Epistles were thus read, and if they were read as Holy Scripture by the Churches, it is reasonable to suppose (as has been already suggested, see on i. 9, and on iii. 18, and v. 2) that the Apostle had provided for those Churches some written document, containing a record of the words, works, and sufferings of Him on Whom all St. Paul's teaching in all his Epistles is grounded.

Would the Apostle, who so earnestly conjures them to read his own words, not take good care that they should be able to read the words of his Divine Master Jesus Christ?

Is it not therefore probable that they to whom he sent this Epistle possessed already a written Gospel?

(3) This earnest adjuration in the name of the Divine Head of the Church, that this Epistle should be publicly read, and the fact that this precept was complied with, and that all St. Paul's Epistles were publicly read as Holy Scripture in the Churches of all parts of Christendom in the age in which they were written, and have continued to be read in all parts of the World even to this day, will suffice to convince all reasonable persons that the Epistles which we have in our hands, bearing the Apostle's name, cannot have been tampered with; and that these Epistles, as a whole and in every part of them, are, what they profess to be, the writings of the blessed Apostle St. Paul.

In a word, this public reading of the Epistles was a divine provision made by the Holy Spirit Himself, not only for the public promulgation of His own Will and Word, but for the perfect assurance and unswerving belief of all reasonable men in the Genuineness, Authenticity, Integrity, and Inspiration of that Word.

It is the best safeguard against all allegations on the contrary side. And they who duly consider the nature of this evidence will not much need to occupy their time and distract their thoughts with the theories of those who, forgetting or suppressing this evidence, which dates from the age of St. Paul himself, and declares itself in the consentient voice and concurrent practice of eighteen centuries, set up against its authority their own private surmises and cavils of to-day, and deny the genuineness and inspiration of Epistles of St. Paul.

28. ἡ χάρις τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ] After the adjuration to read his Epistle in the Church, he adds the token by which it was to be known as his Epistle. St. Paul did not write his Epistles with his own hand, except in one instance, as far as we know for certain (though other exceptions have been made by some), viz. the Epistle to the Galatians, in which he expressly mentions the fact (Gal. vi. 11) in order to obviate any doubts as to the genuineness of the other Epistles not so written;

But his usual habit was to employ an amanuensis. I, Tertius, who wrote this Epistle, salute you in the Lord (Rom xvi. 22). And this was a happy circumstance, because the persons whom he employed as his amanuenses were witnesses to the genuineness of the Epistles penned by them. But though (as was usual for authors in those days) St. Paul dictated his Epistles to secretaries, yet he invariably subscribed them with his own hand. "The salutation of Paul with mine own hand, which is the token in every Epistle, so I write. The salutation of me Paul with mine own hand" (2 Thess. iii. 17. Col. iv. 18. 1 Cor. xvi. 21.)

In what did this salutation consist?

If we examine the thirteen Epistles to which the name of St. Paul is prefixed, we find that near their conclusion they all contain (with some verbal variations) the phrase, "The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you." And St. Paul himself indicates that this Apostolic Benediction is what he means by the salutation of me Paul: for in the passage just quoted he says, "The salutation of Paul with mine own hand, which is the token in every Epistle: so I write," and then he adds immediately, "The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all." These words, then, the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, were St. Paul's salutation written by his own hand. This was the token by which all his Epistles were to be known. And a beautiful and interesting token it is.

The following is the form in which this salutation appears in the several Epistles, arranged in chronological order:—

St. Paul's Benedictions.

1 Thess. v. 28. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.
2 Thess. iii. 18. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all.
Gal. vi. 18. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit, brethren.
1 Cor. xvi. 23. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.
2 Cor. xiii. 14. The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all.
Rom. xvi. 24. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all.
Col. iv. 18. Grace be with you.
Philem. 25. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit.
Eph. vi. 24. Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity.
Phil. iv. 23. The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit.
Heb. xiii. 25. Grace be with you all.
1 Tim. vi. 21. Grace be with thee.
Tit. iii. 15. Grace be with you all.
2 Tim. iv. 22. Grace be with you.

The choice of this γνώρισμα, or badge of cognizance, is characteristic. The Apostle, who was the most signal monument of Divine Grace, fitly chooses Grace for his motto and sign manual.

This salutation, found at the close of every one of St. Paul's thirteen Epistles, is not found in any one of the Epistles of any other Apostle, written in St. Paul's lifetime. It is employed by others after his death. It is used in the Apocalypse (written after St. Paul's death), and also by S. Clement of Rome at the close of his Epistle to the Corinthians.

It was adopted by St. Paul as his own badge, and, being known by others to be so, it seems to have been appropriated and reserved to him by his brethren during his life. Soon after his death it was used by others, and it has now become the ordinary conclusion of liturgies and sermons in all parts of Christendom.

This salutation, employed by St. Paul as his own criterion in each of his Thirteen Epistles, and not used by any other Apostle in St. Paul's life, is found in the Epistle to the Hebrews, to which St. Paul's name is not prefixed, but which ends thus, "They of Italy salute you: Grace be with you all. Amen" (Heb. xiii. 24, 25).

This circumstance confirms the evidence that the Epistle to the Hebrews was written by St. Paul.

The subscription to the Epistle in Elz., purporting that it was written from Athens, found in A, B, I, K, and other MSS., and in the Syriac, Arabic, and Coptic Versions, is inconsistent with the History of the Acts (xviii. 5) and the beginning of the Epistle itself. See Introduction above, p. 1, and Lünemann, p. 7.

INTRODUCTION

TO THE

SECOND EPISTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

St. Paul had expressed his desire, in his former Epistle to the Thessalonians, to revisit them speedily (1 Thess. ii. 17). But he was hindered by Satan (1 Thess. ii. 18). And he was also detained at Corinth by his apostolic labours in that city, where he remained for a year and six months (Acts xviii. 9—11).

Not being able to revisit Thessalonica in person, as he had wished to do, he addresses this Second Epistle to the Church of the Thessalonians, in order, in some degree, to satisfy their eager desire for intercourse with him who had first planted the Gospel there (1 Thess. iii. 6); and to allay the disappointment occasioned by his protracted absence. He was also constrained by other motives to write this Epistle, which was the second in time of all St. Paul's Epistles, as is almost universally allowed [1].

A communication, purporting to come from St. Paul, had been brought to Thessalonica, in which it was affirmed, that the Day of the Lord was immediate (2 Thess. ii. 2).

The consequence of such a persuasion would, he knew, be very injurious. It would not be verified by the event. The Day of the Lord was not close at hand; it would not come soon. And when a little time had elapsed, and that Day had not arrived, then a twofold evil would ensue.

Some of the enemies of the Gospel would say that the Resurrection was only spiritual, and was past already, and would overthrow the faith of some (2 Tim. ii. 18).

Others would thence take occasion to insinuate, that, inasmuch as the promise of Christ's second coming—a promise announced in the name of St. Paul, the Apostle of Christ—had not been fulfilled, it was vain to ground any hopes on the declarations of the Apostle, and of Christ Himself in the Gospel, that a Day of Universal Retribution would come, in which every man would be judged according to his works [2].

Thus the foundations of Christian faith and Christian practice would be undermined.

The Holy Spirit, guiding the Apostle, converted these devices of the Evil One into occasions of permanent and universal good to the Church of Christ.

(1) He overruled for good the impediments with which Satan had obstructed St. Paul in his desire to return in person to Thessalonica, and confirm the Thessalonians in the faith, by writing this Epistle to them, and through them to all Churches of every age and place.

If St. Paul had been enabled to return to them in person, he would indeed have disabused the Thessalonian Church of their error, by his oral communications. But the Universal Church of Christ would not have possessed that salutary instruction and solemn warning which has been treasured up for every age in this Second Epistle to the Thessalonians.

(2) In this Epistle he confutes the Tempter, who had sent forth the false Teachers personating the Apostle, and asserting in his name that the Second Advent of Christ was immediate. He thence takes occasion to vindicate the Doctrine of the Second Advent—taught by him in his former Epistle (iv. 13—v. 10)—from such delusive and dangerous misrepresentations.

[1] See the authorities in the Chronological Table in Wieseler's Chronologie, p. 607.

[2] See Chrysostom and Theophylact, Prolog. to the Epistle.

(3) He also turns the weapons of Satan against Satan himself. The Father of Lies had said in St. Paul's name, that the Day of the Lord was immediate. He had assumed the name of the Apostle, and had professed reverence for Christ. He had thus endeavoured to prepare the way for weakening the belief of Christians in the word of the Apostle, and in the Doctrine of the Second Advent, and of a General Resurrection, and of a Judgment to come.

The Holy Spirit, speaking by St. Paul, strips off the disguise from the Tempter, and reveals him in his true form. He unfolds the future, and announces to the Church of Thessalonica in this Epistle, and by it to all Churches of Christendom (in which the Epistle is, and ever has been, read as Holy Scripture), that the Day of Christ will not come, till a very different manifestation has previously been made to the world. The Coming of Christ (παρουσία) is not to be looked for, he says, till after the appearance of a Power, whose coming (also called παρουσία) is according to the working of Satan (2 Thess. ii. 9). He delivers a Divine Prophecy, in which he describes the Mystery of Iniquity, characterized by dark features of spiritual delusion and wickedness. He pourtrays that Power. He warns the Churches against it.

Thus from the present working of Satan he takes occasion to guard the world against his future working, and he turns the arms of the Enemy against the Enemy himself.

(4) The Adversary of the Truth had fabricated an Epistle in St. Paul's name; and by this forgery he had attempted to undermine St. Paul's authority, and to subvert the Gospel which he preached.

The Apostle avails himself of this forgery as an occasion for guarding the Thessalonians, and the Church generally, against such fabrications of Epistles in his name.

He is thus led to furnish a criterion by which all his Epistles are to be discerned. He exposes the deception, and puts the Church on her guard against such frauds for the future. And he provides her with a guarantee against the impositions of forgery, and a test by which the genuineness of his Epistles is to be ascertained[3].

(5) Thus then the subtlety of the Tempter, envying the Church the spiritual blessings she was about to receive from the Holy Ghost speaking in the Epistles of St. Paul, and attempting to mar those benefits by a fabrication issued in St. Paul's name soon after the publication of his earliest Epistle, has been made, under God's gracious providence frustrating that artifice, to be one of the means for establishing the Genuineness and Integrity of those portions of Holy Writ which were dictated by the Holy Spirit, for the building up of the Church Universal in the saving faith of Christ, through the instrumentality of St. Paul.

[3] See 2 Thess. iii. 17, and note on 1 Thess. v. 28, and Chrysostom's procemium here.

ΠΡΟΣ ΘΕΣΣΑΛΟΝΙΚΕΙΣ Β΄.

I. [1] [a] ΠΑΥΛΟΣ καὶ Σιλουανὸς καὶ Τιμόθεος τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ Θεσσαλονικέων ἐν Θεῷ Πατρὶ ἡμῶν καὶ Κυρίῳ Ἰησοῦ Χριστῷ, [2] [b] χάρις ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη ἀπὸ Θεοῦ Πατρὸς ἡμῶν καὶ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

[3] [c] Εὐχαριστεῖν ὀφείλομεν τῷ Θεῷ πάντοτε περὶ ὑμῶν, ἀδελφοί, καθὼς ἄξιόν ἐστιν, ὅτι ὑπεραυξάνει ἡ πίστις ὑμῶν, καὶ πλεονάζει ἡ ἀγάπη ἑνὸς ἑκάστου πάντων ὑμῶν εἰς ἀλλήλους· [4] [d] ὥστε ἡμᾶς αὐτοὺς ἐν ὑμῖν καυχᾶσθαι ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις τοῦ Θεοῦ ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑπομονῆς ὑμῶν καὶ πίστεως, ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς διωγμοῖς ὑμῶν καὶ ταῖς θλίψεσιν αἷς ἀνέχεσθε, [5] [e] ἔνδειγμα τῆς δικαίας κρίσεως τοῦ Θεοῦ, εἰς τὸ καταξιωθῆναι ὑμᾶς τῆς βασιλείας τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὑπὲρ ἧς καὶ πάσχετε, [6] [f] εἴπερ δίκαιον παρὰ Θεῷ ἀνταποδοῦναι τοῖς θλίβουσιν ὑμᾶς θλῖψιν, [7] καὶ ὑμῖν τοῖς θλιβομένοις ἄνεσιν μεθ' ἡμῶν, ἐν τῇ ἀποκαλύψει τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ μετ' ἀγγέλων δυνάμεως αὐτοῦ [8] [g] ἐν φλογὶ πυρὸς, διδόντος ἐκδίκησιν τοῖς μὴ εἰδόσι Θεὸν, καὶ τοῖς μὴ ὑπακούουσι τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, [9] [h] οἵτινες δίκην τίσουσιν ὄλεθρον αἰώνιον ἀπὸ προσώπου τοῦ Κυρίου a 1 Thess. 1. 1.

b Rom. 1. 7. 1 Cor. 1. 3, 8. 1 Pet. 1. 2. c Eph. 1. 15. Phil 1. 3. Col. 1. 3. 1 Thess. 1. 2. d 2 Cor. 7. 14. & 9. 2. 1 Thess. 2. 19.
e Phil. 1. 28. 1 Thess. 2. 14. 1 Pet. 4. 14—18.
f Rev. 6. 10. & 11. 18. & 15. 4. & 16. 5, 6. & 18. 20, 24. & 19. 2.
g Ps. 79. 6. Rom. 2. 8. 2 Pet. 3. 7.
h Isa. 2. 10, 19, 21. Matt. 16. 27. & 24. 30.

πρὸς Θεσσαλονικεῖς Β΄.] So A, B, D, E, F, G.

Ch. I. 1. Παῦλος καὶ Σιλ. καὶ Τιμ.] See above, on 1 Thess. i. 1. — τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ Θεσσαλονικέων] See above, on 1 Thess. i. 1.

3. ὑπεραυξάνει] superabounds. Your afflictions come upon you like a flood, and endeavour to overwhelm you, but your faith rises over them (ὑπεραυξάνει), and buoys you up above them. (Theophyl.)

4. ὥστε ἡμᾶς αὐτοὺς ἐν ὑμῖν καυχᾶσθαι ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις τοῦ Θεοῦ] so that we ourselves glory on your account in the Churches of God. This passage deserves consideration in reference to the words of S. Polycarp to the Philippians, c. 11:

"Ego nil tale sensi in vobis vel audivi, in quibus laboravit beatus Paulus, qui estis in principio Epistolæ ejus. De vobis enim gloriatur in omnibus Ecclesiis, quæ Deum tunc solæ cognoverant."

Did S. Polycarp regard the Epistles to Thessalonica, the capital of Macedonia, as addressed to all the Macedonian Churches and therefore to Philippi?

This is not improbable, cp. Kirchofer, p. 181.

And what does he mean by "qui estis in principio Epistolæ ejus?" Does he mean, "Ye are his Epistles" (cp. 2 Cor. iii. 2), in the beginning of his Ministry? See on Phil. iv. 15.

Some have interpreted the words, "Ye are in the beginning of his Epistle;" but it is not easy to see what this means.

5. ἔνδειγμα] an example. "Exemplum justi judicii Dei." (Iren. iv. 36.) So the Gothic Version. "Ostentamen justi judicii." Tertullian (Scorpiace, c. 13). Ἔνδειγμα is a nominative in apposition with the preceding clause. See Winer, p. 472, who compares Eurip. Orest. 1105. Herc. fur. 59. Elect. 231. Horat. 1 Sat. iv. 110.

S. Augustine inquires how the sufferings of the Thessalonians could be an evidence of God's justice (in Rom. 10, Vol. iii. p. 2641), and thinks that the sufferings of the good are a proof that much greater afflictions are reserved for the wicked. Cp. 1 Pet. iv. 15—18.

But another consideration may be added here; The sufferings to which the good are subject in this world, and which they often endure at the hands of the wicked, who are in prosperity here, are a proof that this world is not a final, but only a transitory, state of human existence; and that there is a future world, in which whatever is now wrong will be set right, and all things will be fully and finally adjudged by the righteous Governor of all, according to an exact scale of retributive Justice.

Besides, it is not only the suffering, but the courage and patience, with which the Thessalonians were enabled by God's grace to suffer, that is appealed to by the Apostle as a proof of the Divine Judgment. The same God Who enabled them to suffer gladly persecutions for His sake at the hand of their enemies, thus showed that He would one day judge their enemies. See Phil. i. 28.

6. εἴπερ] if—as doubtless it is. See 1 Pet. ii. 3.

8. ἐν φλογὶ πυρός] So B, D, E, F, G, and so, in the second century, Tertullian (c. Marcion. v. 16), who cites this passage thus: "Cum angelis virtutis suæ, et in flammâ ignis;" and the ancient interpreter of Irenæus (iv. 27 and v. 33), "Cum angelis virtutis ejus, et in flammâ ignis;" and Scholz., and Lachmann, and Lünemann. Elz. has ἐν πυρὶ φλογός, and so Tisch., Alf.

— μὴ εἰδόσι—μὴ ὑπακούουσι] μὴ implies that their ignorance and disobedience is the cause of their punishment. Cp. Winer, p. 422.

9. αἰώνιον] everlasting. Chrys. and Theophyl. ask here, "Can any one venture to say that future punishments are only for a time?"

See on Matt. xxv. 46. Mark ix. 44—48.

— ἀπὸ προσώπου κ.τ.λ.] "Ipsum quod ait (Apostolus) 'a facie Domini et a gloriâ valentiæ Ejus' verbis usus Esaiæ" (ii. 19). Tertullian (c. Marcion. v. 16).

St. Paul adopts here the words of the LXX (in Isa. ii. 19), ἀπὸ προσώπου τοῦ φόβου Κυρίου καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς δόξης τῆς ἰσχύος αὐτοῦ, ὅταν ἀναστῇ θραῦσαι τὴν γῆν, and teaches us to connect that prophecy with the Second Advent, as is done by the Church appointing that Chapter for a Proper Lesson on the First Sunday in Advent.

καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς δόξης τῆς ἰσχύος αὐτοῦ, 10 [1] ὅταν ἔλθῃ ἐνδοξασθῆναι ἐν τοῖς ἁγίοις αὐτοῦ, καὶ θαυμασθῆναι ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς πιστεύσασιν, ὅτι ἐπιστεύθη τὸ μαρτύριον ἡμῶν ἐφ' ὑμᾶς, ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ· 11 [k] εἰς ὃ καὶ προσευχόμεθα πάντοτε περὶ ὑμῶν, ἵνα ὑμᾶς ἀξιώσῃ τῆς κλήσεως ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν, καὶ πληρώσῃ πᾶσαν εὐδοκίαν ἀγαθωσύνης καὶ ἔργον πίστεως ἐν δυνάμει, 12 [l] ὅπως ἐνδοξασθῇ τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ ἐν ὑμῖν, καὶ ὑμεῖς ἐν αὐτῷ, κατὰ τὴν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν καὶ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

II. 1 [a] Ἐρωτῶμεν δὲ ὑμᾶς, ἀδελφοί, ὑπὲρ τῆς παρουσίας τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ ἡμῶν ἐπισυναγωγῆς ἐπ' αὐτόν, 2 [b] εἰς τὸ μὴ ταχέως σαλευθῆναι ὑμᾶς ἀπὸ τοῦ νοὸς, μηδὲ θροεῖσθαι, μήτε διὰ πνεύματος, μήτε διὰ λόγου μήτε δι' ἐπιστολῆς ὡς δι' ἡμῶν, ὡς ὅτι ἐνέστηκεν ἡ ἡμέρα τοῦ Κυρίου.

3 [c] Μήτις ὑμᾶς ἐξαπατήσῃ κατὰ μηδένα τρόπον· ὅτι, ἐὰν μὴ ἔλθῃ ἡ ἀποστασία πρῶτον, καὶ ἀποκαλυφθῇ ὁ ἄνθρωπος τῆς ἁμαρτίας, ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀπωλείας, 4 [d] ὁ

1 Acts 1. 11. 1 Thess. 1. 10. Rev. 1. 7. k 1 Thess. 1. 3. & 2. 13. Heb. 12. 2.
l 1 Pet. 1. 7. & 4. 14.
a Rom. 12. 1. 1 Thess. 4. 14—16. 2 Tim. 4. 1. b Jer. 29. 8. Matt. 24. 4. Eph. 5. 6. Col. 2 18. 1 John 4. 1. c Matt. 24. 23. Eph. 5. 6. 1 Tim. 4. 1. 1 John 2. 18. Rev. 13. 11.
d Dan. 7. 8, 25. & 8. 9, 11. & 11. 36. Rev. 13. 6.

10. ὅταν ἔλθῃ] when he shall have come.

— ἐνδοξασθῆναι ἐν τοῖς ἁγίοις] to be glorified in the saints, whose glorified bodies will shine in and by the glory of Christ's Body. See Phil. iii. 21.

— πιστεύσασιν] So A, B, D, E, F, and Iren. So Griesb., Lach., Tisch., Alford. Elz. has πιστεύουσιν, which is less appropriate than the aorist here. The work of Faith will then be past, and will have been followed by, and absorbed in, Sight. Hence the Apostle says, v. 11, ἵνα πληρώσῃ ἔργον πίστεως ἐν δυνάμει.

— ὅτι ἐπιστεύθη τὸ μαρτύριον ἡμῶν ἐφ' ὑμᾶς] because our testimony (i. e. the testimony concerning the Truth in Christ) brought to you, was believed,—not only by you, but by many others after you, even to the Day of doom; in all of whom Christ and His Power and Love will shine forth and be admired at that Day; Christ will be admired in all who have believed in Him. (Cp. 1 Tim. iii. 16, ἐπιστεύθη ἐν κόσμῳ.) The emphatic word is ἐπιστεύθη. He uses the past tense because he is carried forward by the Spirit to the Day of the Lord, and speaks from it as already present, and looks backward on all past ages of the world.

11. εἰς ὅ] in regard to which, or with our eyes fixed on which, we pray. On this use of εἰς, signifying the direction and aim, see Acts xxv. 20. Rom. iv. 20; xv. 2. 2 Pet. i. 8. Winer, p. 354.

— εὐδοκίαν] good pleasure. The εὐδοκία, or 'bene-placitum,' announced at the Nativity, will then be consummated. Cp. Luke ii. 14. Eph. i. 5. 9. Phil. ii. 13.

CH. II. 1. ὑπὲρ τῆς παρουσίας] ὑπὲρ = 'super Adventu,' not only in regard to the Coming, but also on behalf of the Coming. Ὑπὲρ is more expressive than περί, and intimates that in what he is about to say he is like an advocate pleading on behalf of what had been misrepresented by others, and that his discourse is a refutation of error, and an ἀπολογία or vindication of the truth. So ὑπὲρ in Rom. xv. 8, and particularly the difficult passage in 1 Cor. xv. 29, where ὑπὲρ is used in the same apologetic sense, 'in behalf of' what had been misrepresented (3 John 7), and cp. Winer, p. 343, and Alford here.

— ἡμῶν ἐπισυναγωγῆς ἐπ' αὐτόν] our future gathering together to Him in the clouds of Heaven at His second Advent. Cp. 1 Thess. iv. 17.

The word ἐπισυναγωγὴ used here is very expressive. Our Blessed Lord had applied the term ἐπισυναγωγεῖν (ad-congregare) to Himself, in order to describe His own earnest desire to gather together in one (cp. John xi. 52) the children of Jerusalem to Himself, as a hen gathers together (ἐπισυνάγει) her chickens under her wings. (Matt. xxiii. 37. Luke xiii. 34.)

Our Lord had also applied this word to describe what St. Paul is about to pourtray here, viz. the gathering together of the elect from the four winds (Matt. xxiv. 31. Mark xiii. 27). See Theodoret here.

Christ had also said in the Gospel that wherever the Body is (i. e. wherever His own Body is), there the Eagles of the Gospel will be gathered together. See on Luke xvii. 37. Matt. xxiv. 28.

The comparison of Himself to the hen was adapted to the time of His first Advent in Humility; this latter reference to the Eagle has relation to the time of His second Advent in Glory.

It is that Advent of which the Apostle now speaks.

According to the language of the ancient Expositors, the Saints of God at the Resurrection will have cast off the old age and weakness of earth, and will have renewed their strength as Eagles (Isa. xi. 31. Ps. ciii. 5); and with the glorious plumage of their risen bodies will mount up with wings as Eagles (Isa. xl. 31), and will be gathered together to the glorious Body of Him who is both their Food and Parent Bird, for He feeds His young with His own flesh and blood; and He is called in Scripture the Great Eagle (Rev. xii. 14), the King of Birds, the Royal Eagle of the Gospel, and Who will, as it were, spread abroad His Wings, and gather His Saints unto Him, and bear them on Eagles' Wings (Deut. xxxii. 11, see LXX), and carry them aloft above the Clouds, and above the Sun, into the regions of heavenly glory. See the passages quoted above from Origen, Jerome, Augustine, Theophylact, and others, in the note on Matt. xxiv. 28.

2. εἰς τὸ μὴ τ. σαλευθῆναι ὑ. ἀπὸ τοῦ νοός] so that you may not soon be drifted off from your mind. 'Ut non cito moveamini à vestro sensu' (Vulg.). A maritime metaphor. Cp. note on iii. 6.

In order that you should not be soon shaken off from the anchorage of your firmly settled mind, and be drifted about by winds of false doctrine (Eph. iv. 14), as a ship in your harbour at Thessalonica is shaken off its moorings by the surge of the sea (σάλον). So Arrian (Epictet. iii. 26, cp. Wetstein), μὴ ἀποσαλευθῆναι διὰ σοφισμάτων.

— μηδὲ θροεῖσθαι] nor yet be agitated by fear (Vulg.). The best MSS. have μηδέ. Cp. Winer, p. 437. Elz. has μήτε.

— μήτε διὰ πνεύματος] neither by a false spirit, as that πνεῦμα Πύθωνος which flattered St. Paul at Philippi, Acts xvi. 16—18, where see the notes.

— μήτε διὰ λόγου] nor by word of mouth as from us. (Theodoret.) Cp. v. 15, εἴτε διὰ λόγου, εἴτε δι' ἐπιστολῆς ἡμῶν, where λόγου is to be connected with ἡμῶν as here.

— μήτε δι' ἐπιστολῆς] nor by an Epistle forged in our name. Tertullian, de Res. c. 24. Chrys., Theoph.

— ὡς ὅτι] as if the Day of the Lord were now instant. 'Tanquam instet' (Vulg.). The force of the ὡς here is to qualify that which is recited by the ὅτι, and to throw a shade of discredit upon it. So Isocr. Busir. org. p. 420, κατηγόρουν αὐτοῦ ὡς ὅτι καινὰ δαιμόνια εἰσφέρει, where the Latin would be "tanquam inferat." Cp. 2 Cor. xi. 11, and Winer, p. 544.

— ἐνέστηκεν] is instantaneously imminent. He does not reveal to them when the Resurrection will be, but he tells them that it will not be now. Chrys.

— Κυρίου] so the majority of the best MSS. and Editions.—Elz. Χριστοῦ.

3—12. ὅτι, ἐὰν μὴ ἔλθῃ ἡ ἀποστασία πρῶτον—ἀδικίᾳ] These Ten Verses contain one of the most solemn Prophecies ever delivered by the Holy Spirit to the world; a Prophecy, upon the right understanding of which the everlasting happiness of thousands of immortal beings depends. They demand therefore a full and minute examination. They will be best understood by being considered collectively:

i. As to the Text.
ii. As to their literal Translation.
iii. As to their Exposition.

I. As to their Text.

In v. 4, Elz. inserts ὡς Θεὸν between τοῦ Θεοῦ and καθίσαι: but these two words are not found in A, B, D*, and in many Cursives, nor in the oldest Greek and Latin Fathers—Iren., Origen, Tertullian, Cyprian, nor in many ancient Versions, and are cancelled by Gb., Sch., Ln., Tf., Lün., Alford.

In v. 8, Ἰησοῦς is omitted by Elz., but is found in A, D*, E*, F, G, I, and most of the earliest Fathers who quote the verse, and is received by Gb., Sch., Ln., Lün., Alford.

In v. 10, Elz. inserts τῆς before ἀδικίας, but this is not ἀντικείμενος, καὶ ὑπεραιρόμενος ἐπὶ πάντα λεγόμενον Θεὸν ἢ σέβασμα, ὥστε αὐτὸν εἰς τὸν ναὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ καθίσαι, ἀποδεικνύντα ἑαυτὸν ὅτι ἐστὶ Θεός.

5 [e] Οὐ μνημονεύετε, ὅτι ἔτι ὢν πρὸς ὑμᾶς ταῦτα ἔλεγον ὑμῖν ;

6 Καὶ νῦν τὸ κατέχον οἴδατε, εἰς τὸ ἀποκαλυφθῆναι αὐτὸν ἐν τῷ ἑαυτοῦ καιρῷ.

7 [f] Τὸ γὰρ μυστήριον ἤδη ἐνεργεῖται τῆς ἀνομίας μόνον ὁ κατέχων ἄρτι ἕως ἐκ μέσου γένηται. 8 [g] Καὶ τότε ἀποκαλυφθήσεται ὁ ἄνομος, ὃν ὁ Κύριος Ἰησοῦς e Matt. 16. 9. Mark 8. 18. Luke 24. 6, 7. Acts 20. 31.

f Acts 20. 29. Col. 2. 18—23. 2 Tim. 2. 17, 18. 1 John 2. 18. & 4. 3.
g John 4. 9. Isa. 11. 4. Rev. 19. 15, 20, 21.

---

found in A, B, F, G, and is cancelled by Ln., Tf., Lün., Alford.

Also in v. 10, Elz. inserts ἐν before τοῖς, but this is not found in A, B, D*, F, G, and is cancelled by Sch., Lach., Tisch., Lün., Alford.

In v. 11, Elz. has πέμψει. But A, B*, D, F, G have πέμπει, the prophetic present (Glasse, Phil. Sacr. p. 144), which is received by Sch., Ln., Tf., Lün., Alford.

II. As to their literal Translation.

The following is the most ancient form in which the passage occurs in the language of the Western Church:

"Ne quis vos seducat ullo modo, quoniam, nisi veniat abscessio primò, et reveletur delinquentiæ homo, filius perditionis, qui adversatur et superextollitur in omne quod Deus dicitur vel religio, uti sedeat in templo Dei affirmans se Deum esse.

"Nonne meministis quòd cum apud vos essem, hæc dicebam vobis?

"Et nunc quid detineat scitis, ad revelandum eum in suo tempore.

"Jam enim arcanum iniquitatis agitatur tantum qui nunc tenet [teneat] donec de medio fiat. Et tunc revelabitur iniquus, quem Jesus interficiet Spiritu oris sui, et evacuabit apparentiâ sui; cujus est adventus secundum operationem Satanæ in omni virtute et signis atque portentis mendacii, et in omni seductione injustitiæ eis qui pereunt." Tertullian (de Res. Carnis, c. 25). See also Tertullian (c. Marcion. v. 16). See also the ancient Latin version of Irenæus (iii. 6), "Qui adversatur et extollit se super omne quod dicitur Deus vel colitur. . . ."

"Et tunc revelabitur iniquus quem Dominus Jesus Christus interficiet spiritu oris sui, et destruet præsentia adventus sui, illum cujus est adventus secundum operationem Satanæ in omni virtute et signis et portentis mendacii."

See also Irenæus, v. 25, where we read,

"Et omni seductione malitiæ pereuntibus, pro eo quod dilectionem veritatis non receperunt ut salvi fierent. Et ideo mittit eis Deus operationem erroris, ut credant mendacio, ut judicentur omnes qui non crediderunt veritati sed consenserunt iniquitati." (See also ibid. iv. 28.)

In English, the Apostle's words, literally rendered, may be represented as follows:—

"We beseech you, brethren, on behalf of the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our gathering together to Him, in order that ye be not soon drifted off from your mind, nor be disturbed either by means of a spirit, or of word or of letter as from us, as if the Day of the Lord were immediate.

"Let no one deceive you by any means. For [that Day shall not come] except the Falling away shall have first come, and the Man of Sin shall have been revealed, the Son of perdition, he who opposeth and exalteth himself exceedingly against every one that is called God, or is an object of reverence; so that he goeth and taketh his seat in the temple of God, showing himself forth that he is God.

"Do ye not remember, that when I was yet with you, I was wont to tell you of these things?

"And now ye know that which restraineth, in order that he may be revealed in his own season.

"For the Mystery of the Lawlessness (of which I am speaking) is now working inwardly only until he that restraineth shall have been removed out of the way: and then the Lawless one shall be revealed, whom the Lord Jesus will consume with the spirit of His mouth, and destroy with the manifestation of His coming; him, of whom the coming is according to the inner-working of Satan, in all power, and signs, and wonders of lying, and in all deceit of iniquity to them that are perishing, because they accepted not the love of the truth in order to their being saved; and therefore God sendeth to them the inner working of error in order that they should believe the lie; that all may be condemned who believed not the truth, but took pleasure in iniquity."

On the language of this Translation a few short notes may be inserted here. The Exposition will follow after.

v. 3. Observe ἀποστασία with the definite article signifying 'the falling-away;' 'that notable falling-away.'

v. 4. 'who exalteth himself exceedingly against.' It is to be observed here, that the Apostle does not say that the Man of Sin will exalt himself ὑπὲρ, above, every one that is called God, but ἐπὶ, against.

The word ὑπεραιρόμενος, 'exceedingly exalting himself,' or 'exalted exceedingly,' is used by the Septuagint concerning Hezekiah in 2 Chron. xxxii. 23, where it means much magnified; and it is used by St. Paul in another place when speaking of himself (2 Cor. xii. 7), ἵνα μὴ ὑπεραίρωμαι, 'that I may not be exalted above measure by my revelations.'

This is a common use of ὑπὲρ in composition in St. Paul's writings, as ὑπερλίαν 2 Cor. xi. 5, xii. 11; ὑπερβάλλω 2 Cor. ix. 14; ὑπερβολὴ i. 8, xii. 7, Gal. i. 13; ὑπερεκπερισσοῦ 1 Thess. iii. 10, v. 13; ὑπεροχὴ 1 Cor. ii. 1; ὑπερφρονεῖν Rom. xii. 3.

v. 4. 'every one that is called God or object of worship,' σέβασμα. Observe the original here.

v. 4. 'goeth and taketh his seat in the temple of God.' The preposition εἰς connected with καθίσαι, and followed by an accusative, shows that the Apostle has in his mind the entrance of the Power here described into God's House, and his session there.

Observe also that he does not say ἱερὸν Θεοῦ, but ναὸν,—not therefore any outer court, but the inner part of God's house; that part where He is specially to be supposed ναίειν, to dwell, and where worship is offered to Him, as in the Holy Place of the Temple at Jerusalem, into which the Priests alone were allowed to enter. Cp. Luke i. 9. 21, 22; xxiii. 45. On ναὸς as distinguished from ἱερόν, cp. Matt. xxi. 15. Mark xi. 15. Acts iii. 2, and Dean Trench, Syn. N. T. § iii.

v. 4. Object of reverence. The original is σέβασμα. The only other passage where it occurs in the New Testament is Acts xvii. 23, where the Altar to the unknown God is mentioned among the σεβάσματα of Athens.

v. 5. When I was yet with you (at Thessalonica), I was telling you (ἔλεγον, imperfect), or used to tell you, these things.

v. 6. 'that which restraineth;' τὸ κατέχον, neuter gender, called also ὁ κατέχων, 'he that restraineth,' in the next verse. The word κατέχειν, literally to 'hold down,' is explained in Hesychius by κρατεῖν, κωλύειν, συνέχειν.

This verb is not followed here, in either verse, by an accusative case. This is observable. St. Paul therefore does not say that this restraining Power would check the Lawless One by any direct action upon him, but would occupy a place, so that he should not be manifested before his season, but be manifested in that season.

v. 5. "In order that he may be revealed;" i. e. God permits the present restraint, in order that he who is now restrained (κατέχεται) may not be revealed before his due season, but in it.

v. 7. Mystery of Lawlessness. Observe both these words.

Mystery (μυστήριον, from μύω, μύστης, μυστικός), something secret, and professing to be sacred (cp. Rev. xvii. 5. 7), fitly therefore coupled with ἐνεργεῖται, 'works inwardly.'

Lawlessness (ἀνομία), what sets law (νόμον) at defiance. Cp. ὁ ἄνομος, 'the lawless one,' v. 8.

The Mystery of the Lawlessness, i. e. which I am now about to describe.

Observe the Article repeated with each substantive.

The sense of this otherwise difficult verse, v. 7, is to be cleared up, by observing that there should be no comma after ἀνομίας, and that ἤδη, 'now,' is opposed to καὶ τότε, 'and then;' and that the phrase 'the Mystery of the Lawlessness' (which he is describing), is to be illustrated by the words, 'the Lawless One' in the next verse, and that μόνον is to be connected with ἐνεργεῖται, 'worketh inwardly,' which is contrasted with ἀποκαλυφθήσεται, 'will hereafter be revealed outwardly.'

The Apostle therefore means that the Mystery now works inwardly, and will continue to work so, till the restraint which prevents its manifestation shall have been removed; and then it will no longer only work inwardly, but the Lawless One himself will be displayed openly to the world.

v. 8. ὁ ἄνομος, 'the Lawless One' (cp. v. 7), something more than the Mystery (or arcanum) of Lawlessness in v. 7.

h Deut. 13. 1. Matt. 24. 24. John 8. 41. 2 Cor. 4. 4. Eph. 2. 2. Rev. 13. 13, &c. i 2 Cor. 2. 15. & 4. 3. j 1 Kings 22. 22. Ezek. 14. 9. Rom. 1. 24, &c. 1 Tim. 4. 1.

ἀναλώσει τῷ πνεύματι τοῦ στόματος αὐτοῦ, καὶ καταργήσει τῇ ἐπιφανείᾳ τῆς παρουσίας αὐτοῦ, 9 h οὗ ἐστιν ἡ παρουσία κατ' ἐνέργειαν τοῦ Σατανᾶ ἐν πάσῃ δυνάμει καὶ σημείοις καὶ τέρασι ψεύδους, 10 i καὶ ἐν πάσῃ ἀπάτῃ ἀδικίας τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις, ἀνθ' ὧν τὴν ἀγάπην τῆς ἀληθείας οὐκ ἐδέξαντο εἰς τὸ σωθῆναι αὐτούς. 11 j Καὶ διὰ τοῦτο πέμπει αὐτοῖς ὁ Θεὸς ἐνέργειαν πλάνης, εἰς τὸ πι-

---

8. ἀναλώσει τῷ πνεύματι] See Isa. xi. 4, LXX.

— τῇ ἐπιφανείᾳ] manifestation. Cp. Clem. Rom. ii. 12, ἐκδεχώμεθα καθ' ὥραν τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ . . . . ἐπειδὴ οὐκ οἴδαμεν τὴν ἡμέραν τῆς ἐπιφανείας τοῦ Θεοῦ . . ., where our Lord Jesus Christ is expressly called God. Cp. 1 Tim. vi. 14.

v. 10. τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις, to them who are in the way of destruction, as opposed to οἱ σωζόμενοι, those who are in the way of salvation. Acts ii. 47. See on 2 Cor. ii. 15; iv. 3. Hence he adds, "because they accepted not (οὐκ ἐδέξαντο)," but rejected the love of the truth, for their own salvation; and says, that because they were not willing to believe the truth, but rejoice in unrighteousness, God punishes them by sending them an inner working of error, that they may believe the lie, i. e. the lie of the Lawless One here described 2 Thess. ii. 2—13.

v. 11. ἐνέργειαν πλάνης is not any thing internal to them, but something within them, which they bring upon themselves by not accepting the love of the truth. Compare the remarkable words in Matt. vi. 22, 23, Luke xi. 34, 35, and that admonition repeated fourteen times in the New Testament, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." Bp. Butler (on 1 Pet. ii. 16, note).

III. Let us now proceed to the Exposition of this Prophecy.

Three questions arise here;

i. What is the restraining Power here mentioned by St. Paul?

ii. Has that restraining Power been removed out of the way?

iii. Who is the 'Man of sin' (v. 3), or the 'Lawless One' (v. 8), who the Apostle foretells would be revealed on the removal of that restraining Power?

The answer to the two former of these three questions will suggest a reply to the third.

i. What then was the restraining Power which hindered his manifestation?

In reply to this question, be it observed, that

(1) St. Paul remarks of the Thessalonians, that he had often spoken to them on this matter (v. 5) when he was among them, which was a short time before the Epistle was written; and that he had then told them what this restraining Power was; and he recalls the words which he had then used to their recollection: Do ye not remember that when I was with you I used to tell you these things? (v. 5.)

Therefore the restraining Power was some Power which St. Paul had mentioned to them by word of mouth at that time, and it was a Power which he knew they would remember by name, when they reflected on what he had then spoken to them.

(2) He contents himself with referring them to what he had then said; and does not proceed to say more on the subject of this restraining Power in this his Epistle to them. Therefore,

(3) There must then have been something in the character of this restraining Power which made it requisite for St. Paul to practise reserve concerning it in writing, although he had described it clearly to them in speaking.

Otherwise, why did he content himself with referring them to what he had spoken to them on the subject? Why did he not write as plainly concerning it in his Epistle, as he had spoken when he was with them by word of mouth.

(4) Hence the restraining Power here referred to cannot have been the power of God, or any Christian power, such as that of the Gospel.

There could not have been any reason why St. Paul should not have written as plainly as he had spoken concerning such a Power as that.

This has been already remarked by S. Chrysostom here: "If he had meant the Holy Spirit when he speaks of the Power that restrained, he would have spoken clearly, and said so."

What then was the restraining power?

(5) Let us remember, that the passage before us occurs in one of St. Paul's Epistles.

(6) These Epistles (as he himself enjoins) were to be read publicly, and they were so read and circulated throughout the world (see on 1 Thess. v. 27).

This is an important consideration; for,

(7) Hence it is certain, that when this Epistle containing this remarkable prophecy came to be read in Thessalonica, they who heard it publicly read, and who remembered what the Apostle had said to them concerning the restraining Power, would (as he commanded them to do, v. 5) recall to mind his words on this subject; and others also would be sure to inquire of those who knew,—what St. Paul had said on this matter?

Thus, by the public reading of this Epistle in the Church of Thessalonica, and in the other Churches of Macedonia and of Europe and Asia, to which this and the other Epistles of St. Paul were communicated, a continuous tradition would be preserved on this subject.

(8) Hence therefore the question now arises, Was there any primitive tradition as to the Power which St. Paul here describes as the restraining Power (τὸ κατέχον) which was to continue to exist till the manifestation of the Lawless One, and be succeeded by him? (v. 7.)

(9) There are two early Christian writers, already referred to, distinguished by extensive learning and ability, and living in the next century to St. Paul, who have commented on this prophecy, viz. Tertullian and Irenæus.

The former, in his exposition of this passage, puts this question,—

What is that of which the Apostle speaks? What is this restraining Power? And he replies, "Quis, nisi Romanus status?" What is it but the Roman state? (Tertullian, De Resurr. Carnis, 24.)

Accordingly, Tertullian says in his Apology for Christianity (c. 32) that the ancient Christians had special need to pray for the continuance of the Roman Empire ("pro omni statu Imperii rebusque Romanis"), "because some terrible violence would ensue on its removal."

Similarly S. Irenæus affirms, that St. Paul, in describing the Revelation of the Lawless One, is describing what would take place on the dismemberment of the Empire which was then in being, viz. the Roman Empire, which he recognizes as the Fourth Empire spoken of by the prophet Daniel, vii. 23. (Compare Irenæus, v. 25 with v. 26.)

This evidence (which might be much enlarged by quotations from Cyril Hierosolym. Catech. 15; Chrysostom here; Theodoret, in Dan. vii. 7; Augustin, De Civ. Dei, xx. 19; Jerome, Qu. xi. ad Algasiam, vol. iv. p. 209, in Hierem. xxv. 26. "Eum 'qui nunc tenet' Romanum Imperium ostendit," Lactant. vii. 15; Primasius here) may be summed up in the words of S. Jerome (in Dan. vii. vol. iii. p. 1101), "Let us therefore say,—what all Ecclesiastical Writers have delivered to us,—that, when the Roman Empire is to be destroyed, Ten Kings will divide the Roman World among themselves, and then will be revealed the Man of Sin, the Son of Perdition, who will venture to take his seat in the Temple of God, making himself as God."

Hence then

(10) it appears that the restraining Power, which was in existence when St. Paul wrote, and would continue to exist till the season had arrived for the manifestation of the Lawless One, and which, on its removal, would be followed by that manifestation (v. 7), was the Heathen Power of Imperial Rome.

(11) This conclusion is confirmed by other considerations.

It enables us to account for the fact, that St. Paul, who had specified this restraining Power by word of mouth when he was at Thessalonica, did not venture to describe that Power explicitly in writing in this Epistle, but contented himself with referring the Thessalonians to what he had said to them on that subject.

That reference, he knew, would revive their recollection of what it was requisite for them to know; and therefore what he had said would be preserved to them and to the world.

But, let us remember, this Epistle was to be read publicly, at Thessalonica and throughout Christendom. Copies of it would be circulated in all parts of the Roman Empire.

If, instead of writing as he has done, "Do you not remember that I said these things to you?" and "ye know what restraineth;" and "when he that restraineth shall have been removed out of the way, then the Lawless One will be revealed," he had written openly, "the Roman Empire is that which reστεῦσαι αὐτοὺς τῷ ψεύδει, [12] [k] ἵνα κριθῶσι πάντες οἱ μὴ πιστεύσαντες τῇ ἀληθείᾳ, ἀλλ' εὐδοκήσαντες ἐν τῇ ἀδικίᾳ.

k Rom. 1. 32. & 2. 8. & 8. 7, 8. & 12. 9.

strains;" and if he had proceeded to say, "when the Roman Empire shall have been removed,"—then he would have exasperated the passions of the authorities of the Roman Empire against himself, and against the Christians, and against the Gospel of Christ.

The Romans imagined that the Roman Empire would never be removed. They thought it was imperishable. They engraved on their coins the impress, "Romæ Æternæ." The language which their national poet, Virgil, puts into the mouth of Jupiter, represents their national belief: "Imperium sine fine dedi" (Virg. Æn. i. 278). How then would they have tolerated a doctrine which professed to reveal what would follow after the removal of that National Polity which they fondly believed to be eternal?

St. Paul, as he afterwards proved by his martyrdom at Rome, was ready to shed his blood for the truth. But he had wisdom and charity as well as courage. He would not recklessly expose himself and others to persecution. He would not rashly obstruct the progress of Christianity. He would not tempt any to be guilty of the sin of persecuting it. He remembered what he had said to the Thessalonians on this important and awful subject. He knew that they would recollect his words, and would communicate them to others after them, and so all the purposes of his prophecy would be answered.

(12) This observation is also confirmed by ancient writers, whose testimony shows that they not only recognized the Roman Empire as the restraining Power here adverted to by St. Paul, but also discerned the cause why he practised this wise and charitable reserve in writing about it in this passage.

Thus S. Jerome says (qu. xi. ad Algasiam), "If St. Paul had written openly and boldly 'that the Man of Sin would not come' until the Roman Empire was destroyed, a just cause of persecution would then appear to have been afforded against the Church in her infancy."

S. Chrysostom also here says, "If St. Paul had said that the Roman Empire will soon be dissolved, the heathen would have destroyed him as a rebel, and all the faithful with him, as persons who took up arms against the State.

"But St. Paul means the Roman Empire. And when that shall have been taken away, then the Man of Sin will come. For as the power of Babylon was dissolved by the Persian Dynasty, and the Persian was supplanted by the Greek, and the Greek by the Roman, so the Roman will be dissolved by Antichrist, and Antichrist by Christ."

It is well said also by another ancient Father, "The Apostle writes obscurely, lest some of the Romans should read this Epistle, and excite a persecution against him and the other Christians on the part of those Romans who imagined that they would reign for ever in the world." Remigius, Bibl. Patr. Max. viii. p. 1018.

(13) Let us remember also that this Epistle, being published to the world, and designed to be generally read, would come into the hands of the Jews, St. Paul's bitter enemies, who were ever on the watch to excite the Romans against the Apostle and the Gospel (see above, on 1 Thess. ii. 14—17). They would not have failed to avail themselves of any declaration on the part of the Apostle, that the Roman Empire would be destroyed, as an occasion for exciting the rage of the Roman Empire against St. Paul and the Gospel.

(14) Here another important confirmation suggests itself of the conclusion above stated, viz. that the Roman Empire was the restraining power alluded to here by St. Paul.

It is this:

St. Paul here recalls to the recollection of his Thessalonian readers what he had said to them on this subject when he was at Thessalonica.

What he had said in preaching on such a solemn subject as this would doubtless make a deep impression there. It could hardly fail to be repeated from mouth to mouth; and would in all likelihood be rehearsed to some who were not very friendly to him.

Now, if we turn to the narrative of St. Paul's visit and preaching at Thessalonica (to which he here refers), our attention is drawn to an incident mentioned by St. Luke in the Acts of the Apostles;

If we consider the character of St. Luke's narrative, and recognize the work of the Holy Spirit in his writing, we shall feel assured that this incident is very significant;

The incident is as follows:

The Jews (of Thessalonica) being moved with envy (because the Gospel was preached to the Gentiles by St. Paul with success), and having taken to themselves some lewd persons of those who frequented the market, and made a tumult, set the city in an uproar, and having assaulted the house of Jason, sought to bring them forth (i. e. Paul and Silas) to the people . . . and cried, These all do things contrary to the decrees of Cæsar, saying that there is another King, Jesus. (Acts xvii. 5—7.)

This incident fits in very harmoniously with what St. Paul says here concerning his own teaching at Thessalonica as now expounded.

He had said to the Thessalonians that Jesus would not come, and that His kingdom would not be established before the revelation of the Lawless one, who would appear in the world when the power which restrained his manifestation had been removed. That restraining power was the power of Rome.

What, therefore, was more likely than that these words of his, spoken at Thessalonica, should have been caught up by some, and made the occasion of an imputation against him on the part of the Jews, stirring up the people and the Magistrates against him on the plea that he opposed the authority of Cæsar, and taught that there was another King, who would supplant the Roman Empire, namely, Jesus?

This public accusation of St. Paul would help to keep alive his teaching on this subject in the minds of the Thessalonian Christians.

(15) On the whole it may be concluded, that the restraining Power of which St. Paul speaks in this Prophecy, was the Imperial Power of Heathen Rome.

We may now proceed to the next point;

ii. Has this restraining Power been now removed out of the way?

To this question there can be but one reply, viz. in the affirmative;

All territories which were possessed by the Emperors of Rome, in St. Paul's age, have long since been disparted among other Rulers; there is no "Roman Empire" marked in any Map of the World, there is no army under the command of any Roman Cæsar, there is no coinage which bears his name.

We may therefore pass on to Question

iii. Who is the "Man of Sin," or "the Lawless One," whom the Apostle foretells as to be revealed on the removal of the restraining Power?

1. Since, on the removal of the restraining Power, the Man of Sin was to be revealed (see vv. 6, 7, 8), and since that restraining Power has long since been removed, it follows that the Man of Sin has been long ago revealed to the world.

2. Since, also, the Man of Sin is described here by St. Paul as continuing in the world from the time of the removal of the restraining Power even to the Second Advent of Christ (v. 8), therefore the power here personified in the "Man of Sin" must be one that has continued in the world for many centuries, and continues to the present time.

3. Also, since it has this long continuance assigned to it in the prophecy,—a continuance very far exceeding the life of any one individual, therefore the "Man of Sin" cannot be only one single person.

4. The restraining Power (τὸ κατέχον, in the neuter gender, v. 6) is also called by the Apostle "he who restraineth" (ὁ κατέχων, in the masculine gender, v. 7), because the restraining Power was swayed by a series of single persons, viz. the Roman Emperors, following one another in succession. So, in like manner, the "Man of Sin," though a single person, and therefore called a Man, must also have his existence continued by means of a long succession of Persons bearing the name and exercising the power belonging to his place, or he could not remain, as the Apostle predicts he will, to the Second Advent of Christ.

5. Here we may reply to an objection. Many of the Ancient Fathers of the Church expected that the Man of Sin would be a single person, and therefore it is alleged, he is so.

Doubtless they so thought. And we should probably have done the same if we had lived in their age. They wrote while the Roman Empire was yet standing. And the Fathers were not Prophets, and could not tell how long the Roman Empire might stand.

It might stand (for what they knew) till almost the time of Christ's Second Advent.

They therefore might well suppose that the revelation of the Man of Sin, who they knew was to be revealed on the removal of the Roman Empire, might soon be followed by the Second Advent of Christ. Therefore they might well imagine that he would be only a single person.

But we have seen the removal of the Roman Empire. We 11 Thess. 1. 4. ch. 1. 3. 2 Tim. 1. 9. 1 Pet. 1. 2.

13 1 Ἡμεῖς δὲ ὀφείλομεν εὐχαριστεῖν τῷ Θεῷ πάντοτε περὶ ὑμῶν, ἀδελφοὶ ἠγαπημένοι ὑπὸ Κυρίου, ὅτι εἵλατο ὑμᾶς ὁ Θεὸς ἀπ' ἀρχῆς εἰς σωτηρίαν ἐν know that it has been removed for many centuries. And we also know that Christ is not yet come.

We do not pretend to be wiser than the ancient Fathers. But Time, the great Interpreter of Prophecy, has made clear to us what could not be clear to them: namely, that the Man of Sin, who, as the Holy Spirit foretold by St. Paul, would be revealed on the removal of the Roman Empire, and continue to the Second Advent, cannot from the nature of the case be a single person. And we are persuaded that the ancient Fathers, who knew and taught that the restraining Power was the Power of Heathen Rome, would, if they were alive now, be also of our mind.

6. The time at which the Man of Sin is to be revealed is marked by St. Paul. He was to be revealed to the world, when the restraining power was removed.

St. Paul also remarks the place at which he is to be revealed.

He says that when the restraining Power is removed out of the way (ἐκ μέσου, v. 7) the Man of Sin will be revealed. The power that hindered is called τὸ κατέχον, ὁ κατέχων, holding, keeping down, by occupation of a particular place.

This verb is not followed in either verse by an accusative; and therefore does not denote a direct action on the Man of Sin by which he is kept down, but it indicates that the existence of the restraining Power is an impediment to the revelation of the Man of Sin; as the possession of a seat by any one person is an hindrance to its occupation by any other.

And since the removal of the restraining power is specified as a pre-requisite for the revelation of the Man of Sin, it is intimated that the place occupied by the restraining power, will, on the removal of that power, be occupied by the Man of Sin.

7. We are therefore led to believe that the Man of Sin was revealed at the time when the restraining power was "removed out of the way," and came up in the place from which the restraining power was removed.

8. Therefore the following questions arise here:

(1) Did any power appear in the world at the time of the removal of the heathen Roman Empire?

(2) Did any power come up in its place?

(3) Has that power continued from that time to this?

(4) Has it been continued by a succession of persons?

The answer to these questions cannot but be in the affirmative. And therefore,

(5) What is that power?

The reply is,—

The Power of the Popes of Rome.

(6) Does the Power of the Popes of Rome correspond in its exercise to the description of St. Paul?

Is not St. Paul's prophecy (it may be said) of too dark a character to be applied to any Christian Church?

To this it may be answered, that this is a question of which we are not competent judges;

St. Paul was inspired by the Holy Ghost. To the eye of the Holy Spirit evils may appear far more evil than they do appear to us; especially may corruptions of doctrine and worship in a Christian Church have a far more heinous and deadly aspect in His eyes than in ours. He sees all their enormities at one view in their proper light, and in all their bearings and ultimate results—even for eternity.

He not only saw at one glance what the Papacy is, and has been for many centuries, but what it may yet become before it is destroyed by the Second Advent of Christ.

If, therefore, the conclusions above stated are true, then the application of this prophecy to the Papacy cannot be set aside by any subjective notions on our part as to the moral or religious guilt of the Church of Rome.

On the contrary, the strength of the denunciatory language of the Holy Spirit on this subject, must be regarded as a guide to regulate and enlighten our judgment upon it, and as designed by the Holy Spirit to convey a warning proportionate in solemnity and awfulness to the strength of the language employed by Him to describe it.

But further:

iv. As to the correspondence between this Prophecy and its fulfilment in the Papacy, be it observed,—

(1) That the first word used to describe what is here pre-announced, is ἡ ἀποστασία (v. 3), the falling away ('discessio' or declension from the primitive standard of Christian faith). Cp. 1 Tim. iv. 1, where the cognate verb is used with the word faith.

This word indicates a previous profession of the Truth. For none can fall away from ground on which he did not once stand. It is therefore characteristic of a corrupt Church.

(2) The word ἀφίσταμαι is therefore frequently applied to the ancient Church of Judah and Israel sliding back from the Truth (see LXX in Deut. xxxii. 15. Jer. ii. 5. 19; iii. 14. Isa. xxx. 1. Dan. ix. 9). Compare the words addressed to a Church in Rev. ii. 5, "Remember whence thou art fallen; and repent and do the first works."

The declension of the Papacy from the primitive Faith may well be called the falling-away, because no one system of ἀποστασία can be compared with it in long continuity of time, and in wide extent of place.

(3) The person who is its principal agent is called the 'Son of perdition' (v. 3).

These words are used as a name in one other place of the New Testament, and are applied (not to an Infidel Power but) to a Christian Apostle, Judas (John xvii. 12).

They may therefore be fitly applied to a Christian Bishop, a successor of the Apostles, if he betrays Christ.

And if the Bishop of Rome is unfaithful to the trust he has received from Christ, they may well be applied to him.

(4) The system, described in this prophecy, is called a Mystery.

It is not therefore an Infidel system. That is open, and is no Mystery.

It is also something which purports to be holy. Compare the word (Mystery) as used by St. Paul, 1 Tim. iii. 9. 16, Eph. v. 32.

It is therefore fitly applied to the religious system of a Church.

(5) This Mystery is not a Mystery of Faith and Godliness (1 Tim. iii. 9. 16), but of Lawlessness.

Bp. Butler (Serm. v.) calls Popery, "as it is professed at Rome, a manifest open usurpation of all human and divine authority."

The Mystery of "Lawlessness" has been revealed in the manifestation of "the Lawless one."

(6) But here it may be objected, How could this power be said to be at work in St. Paul's age?

To this it may be replied, that St. Paul was inspired by the Holy Ghost. The Holy Ghost can see what man cannot see. And he says expressly, that what he is describing was then a Mystery, and was not as yet revealed, but was only working inwardly, and would be revealed in its due season, which was not then come, and which did not arrive till some centuries afterwards.

No wonder then if we at this time (in looking back on the Apostolic age) should not be able to discern what was then not openly visible.

Besides, when we consider that the whole system of the Papacy, as such, is grounded on the corruptions of human nature, viz. on pride and lust of power, and on the operations of the Evil One opposing himself to God (as St. Paul declares, v. 9), and doing his work by subtlety and spiritual wickedness, who can decline to accept the assertion of the Holy Spirit Himself, that what was afterwards fully revealed was then secretly at work?

(7) The person in whom this system is embodied is described as ἀντικείμενος (v. 4), i. e. literally one setting himself in opposition, and particularly as a rival foundation, in the place of or against another foundation.

Now, be it remembered that St. Paul says, "Other foundation can no one lay, than that which already lieth (κεῖται, remark the word), which is Jesus Christ" (2 Cor. iii. 11).

May not he, therefore, the Bishop of Rome, who calls himself the Rock of the Church, be rightly called ὁ ἀντι-κείμενος? Cp. note on Matt. xvi. 18.

(8) The same person is said "to exalt himself exceedingly against (ἐπί) every one who is called God" (v. 4).

It has been said, indeed, that this description in v. 4 is not fulfilled in the Papacy, and represents a degree of pride and blasphemy far beyond what can be imputed to it.

This objection has arisen in great measure from non-attention to the words of the original. They do not import that the "man of sin" exalts himself above every one that is called God, but that he exalts himself exceedingly against every one that is so called. See note above on the translation of that verse.

Is this assertion too strong for the Papacy?

In Holy Scripture Civil rulers are called gods, Elohim (Ps. lxxxii. 6). Cp. John x. 34.

It is unnecessary to prove that the Bishop of Rome exalts himself exceedingly against them. Every Pope in succession, ἁγιασμῷ Πνεύματος καὶ πίστει ἀληθείας, 14 εἰς ὃ ἐκάλεσεν ὑμᾶς διὰ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου ἡμῶν, εἰς περιποίησιν δόξης τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

15 [m] Ἄρα οὖν, ἀδελφοί, στήκετε, καὶ κρατεῖτε τὰς παραδόσεις, ἃς ἐδιδάχθητε εἴτε διὰ λόγου εἴτε δι' ἐπιστολῆς ἡμῶν.

16 [n] Αὐτὸς δὲ ὁ Κύριος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς καὶ Πατὴρ ἡμῶν, ὁ ἀγαπήσας ἡμᾶς καὶ δοὺς παράκλησιν αἰωνίαν καὶ ἐλπίδα ἀγαθὴν ἐν χάριτι, 17 [o] παρακαλέσαι ὑμῶν τὰς καρδίας, καὶ στηρίξαι ἐν παντὶ ἔργῳ καὶ λόγῳ ἀγαθῷ.

III. 1 [a] Τὸ λοιπὸν προσεύχεσθε, ἀδελφοί, περὶ ἡμῶν, ἵνα ὁ λόγος τοῦ Κυρίου τρέχῃ καὶ δοξάζηται καθὼς καὶ πρὸς ὑμᾶς, 2 [b] καὶ ἵνα ῥυσθῶμεν ἀπὸ τῶν ἀτόπων καὶ πονηρῶν ἀνθρώπων, οὐ γὰρ πάντων ἡ πίστις. 3 [c] Πιστὸς δέ ἐστιν ὁ Κύριος, ὃς στηρίξει ὑμᾶς, καὶ φυλάξει ἀπὸ τοῦ πονηροῦ. . 4 [d] Πεποίθαμεν δὲ ἐν Κυρίῳ ἐφ' ὑμᾶς, ὅτι ἃ παραγγέλλομεν ὑμῖν καὶ ποιεῖτε καὶ ποιήσετε. 5 [e] Ὁ δὲ Κύριος κατευθύναι ὑμῶν τὰς καρδίας εἰς τὴν ἀγάπην τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ εἰς τὴν ὑπομονὴν τοῦ Χριστοῦ.

6 [f] Παραγγέλλομεν δὲ ὑμῖν, ἀδελφοί, ἐν ὀνόματι τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, στέλλεσθαι ὑμᾶς ἀπὸ παντὸς ἀδελφοῦ ἀτάκτως περιπατοῦντος, καὶ μὴ m 1 Cor. 15. 58. & 16. 13. & 11. 2. Phil. 4. 1. ch. 3 6.

n 1 Pet. 1. 3—5. 1 John 3. 2, 3.
o 1 Thess. 3. 2, 13. Heb. 13. 9. 1 Pet. 5. 10. Jude 24. a Eph. 6. 19. Col. 4. 3. b Acts 28. 24. Rom. 10. 16. & 15 31. c John 17. 15. 1 Cor. 1. 9. & 10. 13. 1 Thess. 5. 24.
d 2 Cor. 7. 16.
e 1 Chron. 29. 18.
f 1 Thess. 4. 11. & 5. 14. vv. 11, 14, 15.

---

when he is crowned with the tiara, is solemnly addressed by the minister who crowns him as "Pater Principum et Regum, RECTOR ORBIS." And it is said on his coins, "Omnes Reges servient ei." See this and other evidence on this subject in the Editor's Letters on the Church of Rome, Letter XII.

(9) It is further said that "he exalteth himself exceedingly against every thing that is an object of reverence (σέβασμα), so that he goes into The Temple and takes his seat there, showing himself that he is God" (v. 4).

The Temple of God here (ναὸς Θεοῦ) is the Church. See Jerome, Chrys., Theodoret, Theophyl., cited by Bp. Andrewes, c. Bellarm. p. 226.

The action which is specified here in evidence of his exaltation against every σέβασμα, is that of his session in the ναός or holy place of the Church of God.

It may be also noted that in the only other place in the New Testament where the word σέβασμα occurs, it is used to introduce the mention of an Altar (Acts xvii. 23).

This prediction is signally fulfilled by the first public official act which is performed by every Pope in succession on his elevation to the Papacy, and by which he takes possession of his place as such.

Every Pope on his election is carried into the principal Church at Rome, his cathedral, St. Peter's.

He is there lifted up by the Cardinals, and is placed on the high Altar. When there placed, and sitting in the Church of God, on the Altar of God, he is adored by them kneeling before him and kissing his feet.

The word by which this act is described by the Church of Rome herself is no other than "the Adoration" (see Notitia Curiæ Romanæ, p. 125); and the words on the Papal Coin, "Quem creant, adorant" (Numism. Pontif. p. 5); and the description of the ceremony, in the Cæremoniale Romanum, ed. 1572, Lib. iii. sect. 1.

(10) Lastly, if the above statements and reasonings are true, they will need no authorities to confirm the conclusion to which they have now led. But it may be satisfactory to the reader to remember that this conclusion is one which is sanctioned by the names of some of the holiest, wisest, most charitable, and judicious persons that have expounded the word of Inspiration, particularly Bp. Jewel, Richard Hooker, Bp. Andrewes, and Bp. Sanderson, and the framers of the Authorized English Version of the Holy Bible. See Bp. Jewel's Works, Portion ii. p. 891—923, ed. Camb. 1847; Hooker, Sermon on Jude 17, pp. 841. 843; Bp. Andrewes, c. Bellarmin. c. ix. and x. p. 220; Bp. Sanderson, i. p. 338, iii. pp. 13. 146. 161. 283; the English Translation, Dedication to King James I., A.D. 1611.

11. πιστεῦσαι τῷ ψεύδει] Cp. the Prophecy, 1 Tim. iv. 2.

13. ἀπ' ἀρχῆς] So Eliz. with A, D, E, I, K.

Some of the best MSS., B, D, G, and several cursives, have ἀπαρχὴν, and Vulg. has 'primitias,' and so the Æthiopic Version and Lachmann; a reading not unworthy of consideration, and not unlikely to be altered by copyists into ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, from non-adverrence to the fact that the Thessalonians might be called the first fruits of the harvest of the Gospel in Europe, having been converted to Christ by the Apostle of the Gentiles on his first missionary visit to Greece; a circumstance which would impart a special significance to the word ἀπαρχήν. Cp. 1 Cor. xvi. 15, ἀπαρχὴ τῆς Ἀχαΐας. Phil. iv. 15, ἐν ἀρχῇ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου.

However, the reading in the text is confirmed by the preponderance of authority, e. g. Eph. i. 4, and appears on the whole to be most in harmony with the context, as declaring the wonderful mystery that the Gentiles, though despised by the Jews, and for a long time aliens from God, were chosen by Him from the beginning. See Eph. ii. 1—19; iii. 1—9.

14. εἰς περιποίησιν] 'in acquisitionem' (Vulg.). See on 1 Thess. v. 9.

16. αἰωνίαν] This feminine form is found in the New Testament only here and in Heb. ix. 12.

17. ἔργῳ καὶ λόγῳ] So most of the best MSS. and Editions, and Vulg. 'in omni opere et sermone bono.' Eliz. has λόγῳ καὶ ἔργῳ, a reading which enfeebles the sense.

CH. III. 2. οὐ γὰρ πάντων ἡ πίστις] For Faith is not the property and privilege of all men, but only of those who have special pre-requisites for its reception, namely, who possess the qualities of meekness, and gentleness, docility, and readiness to receive the evidences of the Gospel, and to listen to its precepts.

The construction of the words may be compared (as it is by Wetst.) with the proverb οὐ παντὸς ἀνδρὸς εἰς Κόρινθόν ἐσθ' ὁ πλοῦς.

The connexion therefore is, Pray that we the Ministers of the Gospel may be delivered from absurd and evil men; and do not be surprised, perplexed, and staggered because we have enemies, and that the Gospel, although it is the word of God, does not make converts of all men; for absurd and wicked men are by their absurdity and wickedness disqualified from receiving it. Being ἄτοποι καὶ πονηροὶ they are not εὔθετοι εἰς βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ (Luke ix. 62).

The Gospel hides itself from the proud and ungodly, and reveals itself to those who are humble, and practise what they know. See our Lord's words, Matt. x. 11 and xi. 25, and Dr. Barrow's excellent observations quoted above on Acts x. 5.

3. τοῦ πονηροῦ] the Evil One. See Eph. vi. 16. 1 Thess. ii. 18; iii. 5. 2 Thess. ii. 9, whence it will appear that in these, his two earliest Epistles, St. Paul is carefnl to remind his hearers of the existence and activity of the Devil, whose works they had renounced in their Baptism.

4. παραγγέλλομεν] we charge you. A strong word used by St. Paul five times in these Epistles to the Thessalonians (1 Thess. iv. 11. 2 Thess. iii. 4. 6. 10. 12), and once to Timothy (1 Tim. vi. 13), and twice to the Corinthians (1 Cor. vii. 10; xi. 17), but not in his other Epistles.

5. ὁ Κύριος] God the Holy Ghost. (S. Basil.) Cp. Theophyl.

6. στέλλεσθαι ἀπό] Another nautical word suited to the inhabitants of a maritime and commercial city like Thessalonica. See above, on ii. 2. St. Paul is fond of such metaphors, especially in writiag or speaking to such persons; see note on Acts xx. 20, and 2 Cor. viii. 20. The literal meaning is, to take in your sails (στέλλεσθαι τὰ ἱστία, see those passages), so as to be able to steer clear of a rock or reef, or any other danger; hence, in maritime language, to part company, and decline from, any person or thing, as here, that may be injurious in your Christian voyage.

κατὰ τὴν παράδοσιν ἣν παρελάβοσαν παρ' ἡμῶν. 7 [g] Αὐτοὶ γὰρ οἴδατε πῶς δεῖ μιμεῖσθαι ἡμᾶς, ὅτι οὐκ ἠτακτήσαμεν ἐν ὑμῖν, 8 [h] οὐδὲ δωρεὰν ἄρτον ἐφάγομεν παρά τινος, ἀλλ' ἐν κόπῳ καὶ μόχθῳ νύκτα καὶ ἡμέραν ἐργαζόμενοι, πρὸς τὸ μὴ ἐπιβαρῆσαί τινα ὑμῶν. 9 [i] Οὐχ ὅτι οὐκ ἔχομεν ἐξουσίαν, ἀλλ' ἵνα ἑαυτοὺς τύπον δῶμεν ὑμῖν εἰς τὸ μιμεῖσθαι ἡμᾶς. 10 [k] Καὶ γὰρ ὅτε ἦμεν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, τοῦτο παρηγγέλλομεν ὑμῖν, ὅτι εἴ τις οὐ θέλει ἐργάζεσθαι μηδὲ ἐσθιέτω. 11 [l] Ἀκούομεν γάρ τινας περιπατοῦντας ἐν ὑμῖν ἀτάκτως, μηδὲν ἐργαζομένους ἀλλὰ περιεργαζομένους. 12 [l] Τοῖς δὲ τοιούτοις παραγγέλλομεν καὶ παρακαλοῦμεν διὰ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ἵνα μετὰ ἡσυχίας ἐργαζόμενοι τὸν ἑαυτῶν ἄρτον ἐσθίωσιν.

13 [m] Ὑμεῖς δέ, ἀδελφοί, μὴ ἐγκακήσητε καλοποιοῦντες. 14 [n] Εἰ δέ τις οὐχ ὑπακούει τῷ λόγῳ ἡμῶν διὰ τῆς ἐπιστολῆς, τοῦτον σημειοῦσθε· καὶ μὴ συναναμίγνυσθε αὐτῷ ἵνα ἐντραπῇ, 15 καὶ μὴ ὡς ἐχθρὸν ἡγεῖσθε, ἀλλὰ νουθετεῖτε ὡς ἀδελφόν. 16 [o] Αὐτὸς δὲ ὁ Κύριος τῆς εἰρήνης δῴη ὑμῖν τὴν εἰρήνην διὰ παντὸς ἐν παντὶ τρόπῳ. Ὁ Κύριος μετὰ πάντων ὑμῶν.

17 [p] Ὁ ἀσπασμὸς τῇ ἐμῇ χειρὶ Παύλου, ὅ ἐστι σημεῖον ἐν πάσῃ ἐπιστολῇ, g 1 Cor. 4. 16. & 11. 1. 1 Thess. 1. 6. & 2. 10. & 4. 11.

h Acts 18. 3. & 20. 34. 1 Cor. 4. 12. 2 Cor. 11. 9. & 12. 13. 1 Thess. 2. 9.
i Matt. 10. 10. 1 Cor. 4. 16. & 9. 3, 6. & 11. 1. 1 Thess. 1. 6. & 2. 6. Phil. 3. 17. 1 Tim. 5. 18.
k Gen. 3. 19. 1 Thess. 4. 11.
l Eph. 4. 28. 1 Thess. 4. 11. Ecclus. 3. 23.
m Gal. 6. 9.
n Matt. 18. 17. 1 Cor. 5 9, 11. ver. 6.
o Rom. 15. 33. & 16. 20. 1 Cor. 14. 33. 2 Cor. 5. 19—21. & 13. 11. p 1 Cor. 16. 21. Col. 4. 18.

Eph. 2. 14—17. Phil. 4. 9. 1 Thess. 5. 23. Heb. 7. 2.

— παρελάβοσαν] So A, D, Gb., Tisch., Lün., Alf. Cp. Winer, p. 71; Lobeck, Phryn. p. 349; Sturz. de Dial. Maced. p. 58; and the forms εἴχοσαν in some MSS. of John xv. 22. 24, and ἐδίδοσαν xix. 3. Elz. has παρέλαβε. D, E, I, K, have παρέλαβον, which confirms παρελάβοσαν. B, F, G, have παρελάβετε.

8. κόπῳ καὶ μόχθῳ] See 1 Thess. ii. 9.

— νύκτα καὶ ἡμέραν ἐργαζόμενοι] See on 1 Thess. ii. 9.

Every one is born to labour, though not to labour in the same way. And our Lord showed that the Minister of the Gospel is not to be supposed by himself or others to be not a labourer; for He said specially of His Apostles, "The labourer is worthy of his meat" (Matt. x. 10). They are ἐργάται and ἐργάζονται: and therefore St. Paul does not claim exemption for himself from the duty of labouring, when he says that he had power to abstain from labouring with his hands, and be chargeable to others for his support in preaching the Gospel. "He laboured more abundantly than they all" (1 Cor. xv. 10), because he was most zealous in preaching the Gospel.

S. Augustine (de Opere Monachorum, vi. p. 812) expresses his surprise that St. Paul should have been enabled to labour so much with his hands, and yet preach the Gospel with such energy and success. "Quando autem soleret operari, id est, quibus temporum spatiis, ne ab evangelizando impediretur, quis possit comprehendere? Sanè quia et nocturnis et diurnis horis operabatur, ipse non tacuit." And (p. 819), "Ipsi Apostolo quomodo vacaret operari manibus suis nisi ad erogandum verbum Dei certa tempora constitueret? Neque enim et hoc Deus latere nos voluit." And for specimens of St. Paul's unwearied energy in preaching, he points to the narrative in the Acts of the Lord's Day at Troas (Acts xx. 7), and his employment at Athens (Acts xvii. 17—21).

— ἐπιβαρῆσαι—ἔχομεν ἐξουσίαν] See above, 1 Thess. ii. 6—9, and below, 1 Cor. ix. 4.

10. μηδὲ ἐσθιέτω] neither let him eat, i. e. from the offerings of the faithful. An allusion to alms collected in the Church for the poor (cp. 1 Tim. v. 3, 4, and v. 16, μὴ βαρείσθω ἡ Ἐκκλησία), by relieving them from the Church fund. So Bp. Sanderson, iii. p. 112. Cp. Blunt's Lectures, p. 27—29.

S. Augustine has made this precept the text of his treatise "De Opere Monachorum" (vi. 799—838), in which he declares his disapprobation of those who enter a monastic life without intention to labour in it, but only to live a contemplative life; and he censures them as "in quandam sanctam societatem otiosissimè congregatos."

11. μηδὲν ἐργαζομένους ἀλλὰ περιεργαζομένους] not busy, but busybodies. "Non agentes sed satagentes;" a saying ascribed by Quintilian (vi. 3. 54) to Domitius Afer, speaking of Mallius Sura (Lünemann). Cp. 1 Tim. v. 13, ἀργαὶ . . . καὶ περίεργοι.

For similar paronomasias in St. Paul's Epistles, see 1 Cor. vii. 31. 2 Cor. iv. 8; v. 4. Rom. i. 20; v. 19. Phil. iii. 2. Philem. 20. 2 Tim. iii. 4. As to the sentiment, see on 1 Thess. iv. 11, and Rom. xii. 11; and Martial's Epigram, i. 80, "Semper agis causas et res agis, Attale, semper | Est, non est quod agas, Attale, semper agis," &c.

12. παραγγέλλομεν] we charge. After this severer word (see v. 4 and 1 Thess. iv. 11) he adds the milder term παρακαλοῦμεν, we exhort, and that in the name of Christ, tempering sternness with love. (Chrys.)

13. μὴ ἐγκακήσητε (so A, B, D*) καλοποιοῦντες] do not faint in well doing. Καλοποιεῖν is to be distinguished from ἀγαθοποιεῖν, which would mean to do good in the way of bounty, whereas καλοποιεῖν has a more general signification, to do well in the sight of man as well as God (2 Cor. viii. 21. Rom. xii. 17), and not only by beneficence, but by honest industry in our calling. Compare Gal. vi. 9, where the Apostle is speaking of providing maintenance for the Christian Ministry, τὸ δὲ καλὸν ποιοῦντες μὴ ἐκκακῶμεν. This precept is to be connected with what precedes and with what follows. Do not ye faint in doing well, although there may be many among you that presume on your goodness, and make it a plea for indolence. Labour yourselves, that ye may be able to relieve the indigent (Eph. iv. 28). Learn to maintain good works (καλὰ ἔργα, Tit. ii. 7. 14; iii. 8) for necessary uses, to help the needy that ye be not unfruitful (Tit. iii. 14). But do not relieve those who can work and will not. By relieving such as have no claim to relief, you will encourage them and others in indolence, and disable yourselves for relieving those who have a claim on your bounty. Nor yet allow yourselves to be deterred from doing good by the ill conduct of the indolent, who can work and will not. Let not their improbity harden you against those who would work and cannot. Let not their evil overcome your good. (Theodoret.) Be bountiful to the poor, who are poor indeed; but if any one does not obey our precept in this Epistle (cp. 1 Thess. v. 27), particularly if he will not labour in his calling, but is indolent and a busybody, mark that man, and have no fellowship with him, that he may be ashamed. Cp. Augustine, viii. p. 814. Bp. Sanderson, ii. p. 186. The Macedonians were not disobedient to St. Paul's precept. See his honourable testimony to their beneficence, 2 Cor. viii. 1, 2.

14. διὰ τῆς ἐπιστολῆς] by the Epistle from me. Cp. 1 Thess. v. 27. Rom. xvi. 22. Col. iv. 16, where the phrase ἡ ἐπιστολή refers to the then present Epistle; and so the Syriac, Arabic, and Gothic Versions here.

In 1 Cor. v. 9, and 2 Cor. vii. 8, the phrase ἡ ἐπιστολή refers to a former Epistle. Probably both senses are combined here; and the Apostle means, that if any one obeys not his word, commanded by the Epistle present or past from him, he is to be noted; and the words τῆς ἐπιστολῆς here will be best rendered my Epistle.

— τοῦτον σημειοῦσθε] set a mark on this man. A proof that St. Paul's Epistle was well known to all at Thessalonica. It was to be a rule of action, and all who swerved from that rule were to be avoided. It was like a Law, publicly promulgated to all, because to be obeyed by all. This promulgation was effected by its public reading in the Church. Cp. 1 Thess. v. 27.

15. μὴ ὡς ἐχθρὸν ἡγεῖσθε] do not regard him as an enemy. See S. Polycarp's Epistle to the Philippians (c. ii.), where he imitates this language of St. Paul: "Non sicut inimicos tales existimetis," &c.

17. ὁ ἀσπασμός] The salutation here specified is the Benediction at the close of the Epistle. "The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all." He made this addition with his own hand, as a safeguard against forgeries disseminated in his name οὕτω γράφω· 18 Ἡ χάρις τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ μετὰ πάντων ὑμῶν. ἀμήν.

(see above, ii. 2). Instead of writing 'Farewell' (Ἔρρωσθε), the Apostle wrote, The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ. And let us who receive the Apostolic Benediction in his Epistle bless Christ Who spake by him. (Theodoret.) His salutation is his prayer. He begins his Epistle and ends it with 'Grace.' (Chrys. and Theophyl.)

Accordingly, we find the words, "The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ," or "Grace be with you," or some similar salutation containing the word 'Grace,' at the close of all St. Paul's Epistles. See note above, on 1 Thess. v. 27, 28, and Introduction to the present Epistle, § 4, and below, on Heb. xiii. 25.

— ἐν πάσῃ ἐπιστολῇ] in every Epistle. Therefore, even now, when he had written only two short Epistles, he entertained the design of writing other Epistles hereafter, which would come into the hands of the readers of the present Epistle; and this caution shows that he intended that the readers of his earliest Epistles should become acquainted with those other Epistles and be able to recognize them as his.

The subscription to this Epistle in Elz., purporting that it was written from Athens, is found in A, B, I, K, and in the Arabic Version, but not in the Syriac (in Walton, p. 820), which names "Laodicea of Pisidia" as the place of writing. See above, on 1 Thess. v. at the end. The Gothic Version of Ulphilas has no subscription.

INTRODUCTION

TO THE

EPISTLE TO THE GALATIANS.

I. On the Date of the Epistle to the Galatians.

1. This Epistle was written after St. Paul had visited the Galatians, and had preached the Gospel to them as an Apostle; for he speaks of their enthusiastic reception of him in that character. (Gal. iv. 13—15.)

2. St. Paul does not appear to have visited Galatia before the period mentioned in Acts xvi. 6, which was a little prior in time to his first transit from Asia into Macedonia, A.D. 52 [1].

3. This result agrees with another note of time specified in this Epistle, as follows:

This Epistle was written after the Council of Jerusalem, and after St. Peter's visit to Antioch, which it describes Gal. ii. 1—11 [2]. The Council of Jerusalem was held A.D. 50.

4. The question therefore arises,

How long after St. Paul's first Apostolic visit to Galatia in A.D. 52, was the Epistle to the Galatians written?

5. It has been affirmed by some learned writers [3], that this Epistle was written after the second Apostolic visit which St. Paul made to Galatia, and which is described in Acts xviii. 23, and which did not take place before A.D. 54.

6. This inference has been derived from the expression τὸ πρότερον in chap. iv. 13, which, it is alleged, signifies "the former visit," and therefore shows that the Apostle had visited the Galatians a second time, when he wrote this Epistle.

But this inference cannot rightly be deduced from that expression. See the note on that passage.

7. It has also been said by some persons, that St. Paul must have been twice in Galatia when he wrote this Epistle, because he asks in chap. iv. 16, whether he has "become their enemy," ἀληθεύων αὐτοῖς?

He could not, it is alleged, have become their enemy at his first visit, for they then received him as their friend. (See Gal. iv. 13, 14.) Nor would he have become their enemy by what he writes in this Epistle, for they had not yet received it.

He must therefore, it is said, have become their enemy at some other visit; namely, as is alleged, at his second visit to Galatia described in Acts xviii. 23.

Therefore it has been inferred, that this Epistle was written after the date of that visit, viz. A.D. 54.

8. But this argument has little weight. St. Paul does not affirm that he has become their enemy by speaking the truth; but he asks, in the language of surprise and indignation, whether it be possible that he can have become their enemy by being faithful to them?

He had shown this faithfulness to them by preaching the Gospel to them at the first, without [1] See Chronological Synopsis prefixed to the Acts, p. xxxix, and the Chronological Table before this volume.

[2] See note there, and on Acts xv. 20. 39, and Chronol. Synops. prefixed to the Acts, p. xxxv, and the Chronological Table prefixed to this volume.

[3] See Meyer, Einleitung, p. 7, and on iv. 13. Cp. Wieseler, Chron. Syn., p. 30. 277, De Wette, p. 3, and Alford, Prolegomena, p. 4. Davidson's Introduction, ii. p. 295. Conybeare and Howson, ii. ch. xviii. p. 158—164. Guerike, Einleitung, p. 350.

imposing upon them the Levitical Law as necessary to salvation. He had continued to show the same faithfulness to them, by resisting all the attempts of the Judaizers to enforce the Ceremonial Law on other Gentile converts, whose cause was the same as that of the Galatians; and he now shows his faithfulness to them by asserting and maintaining their Christian liberty in this Epistle. And if he has now become their enemy, it is not by any change in his own conduct or language towards them, for he has ever been the same towards them; but by his stedfast continuance in the same faithfulness towards them which he had shown from the first.

There is a generous irony in the words here used. Have your feelings towards me been changed, because I continue unchanged in my affection towards you? Have I, in a word, become your enemy by remaining true to you?

The force of this Apostolic expostulation is almost lost, if it be assumed that the word ἀληθεύων refers to some other visit, in which he is supposed to have used unwonted severity towards them, by which he excited their enmity.

9. It has been also asserted by some learned writers, that the Epistle to the Galatians bears internal evidence of being composed about the same time as the two Epistles to the Corinthians and the Epistle to the Romans.

If so, the Epistle to the Galatians cannot have been written before A.D. 57 or 58[4].

This has been argued,

(1) From the nature of the subject of this Epistle.

(2) From resemblances of style.

10. As to the nature of its subject—the Doctrine of Justification by Faith—it is true that it bears much similitude to the Epistle to the Romans[5]; but this circumstance, though it may be an evidence of identity of authorship, cannot be received as a proof of synchronism of composition.

An author, like St. Paul, whose works were to be circulated throughout Christendom, and to be read publicly in Churches, would not be inclined to make the same Doctrine the subject of two Epistles written at the same time; although he might find it needful by experience to reinforce or expand the same arguments and admonitions after an interval of some years. It does not therefore seem probable, a priori, that the Epistles to the Galatians and Romans were composed at the same time.

As to resemblance of style between this Epistle and those to the Corinthians and Romans, doubtless it is striking[6]; but this does not prove coincidence of time in their composition. Still less does this resemblance in diction show that the Epistle to the Galatians was written after the second to the Corinthians.

If it be granted that the Epistle to the Galatians was written before the Epistles to the Corinthians, and that no Epistle intervened between it and them, all is conceded which ought to be claimed on the ground of such a resemblance[7].

11. The Epistle to the Galatians deals with the Doctrine of Justification: and it has been said, that the declaration of this Doctrine appertains to an advanced place in the Apostolic teaching; and that, therefore, the Epistle to the Galatians is not one of the earliest Epistles of St. Paul.

But on this statement it may be remarked, that the Doctrine of Justification, handled in this Epistle, is a primary and elementary one. It concerned the first principles of Christianity. Accordingly, we find it in the first Missionary Sermon which the Apostle is recorded to have preached, —that at Antioch in Pisidia. (Acts xiv. 38, 39, and note.) Were the Gentiles to be circumcised or not, at their admission into the Christian Church? Was Circumcision to be enforced upon them as necessary to salvation?

This was the question at issue. It met the Apostle, it met every Christian teacher, even at the [4] See Chronological Synopsis, p. xxxix.

[5] This has been shown by a learned writer in the Journal of Classical and Sacred Philology, No. ix. p. 312—315.

[6] As may be seen in the Journal already quoted, p. 303—309.

[7] That the Epistle to the Galatians preceded that to the Romans, as Chrysostom supposed, will be allowed by all who carefully consider the contents of these two Epistles. See Chrys. Prolog. ad Ep. ad Rom., and Theophylact. The words of Tertullian are remarkable (Ad Marcion. v. 2): "Principalem adversus Judaismum Epistolam nos quoque confitemur quæ Galatas docet." Tertullian, therefore, believed that the Epistle to the Galatians was written before the Epistles to the Corinthians and the Romans; and accordingly, in his fifth book against Marcion, he makes his extracts from it, and from them, in that order, i. e.

1. Galatians.
2. 1 Corinthians.
3. 2 Corinthians.
4. Romans.

This assertion of principalitas for the Epistle to the Galatians does not seem to touch the question of the order of the Apostle's shorter Epistles, such for instance as the Epistles to the Thessalonians, which he puts in a different class; see c. 15, "brevioribus quoque Epistolis non pigebit intendere." The order specified by Tertullian as that of the four Epistles mentioned above, is that adopted in the present edition; and has been followed by many learned writers.

baptismal font; and he must be able to answer that question before he could proceed to administer the Sacrament of Baptism, and receive a Gentile convert into the Church of Christ.

12. Besides, in another respect, the Epistle to the Galatians claims for itself an early place among St. Paul's Epistles.

Was the Author himself to be received as an Apostle of Christ?

In his two first-written Epistles, those to the Thessalonians, St. Paul had not introduced himself as an Apostle; he had not assumed the Apostolic name[8]; he had not written in his own name alone; but at the beginning of both those Epistles he had associated with himself two other persons, Silas and Timotheus, as colleagues, who certainly had no claim to the title of Apostles.

It might therefore be alleged that he did not venture to call himself an Apostle. Was he then to be received as such?

He had not written those two Epistles with his own hand. (See 2 Thess. iii. 17.) Was not this also, it might be asked, a sign that he did not venture to put forth his doctrine on his own independent authority?

Was St. Paul to be recognized as holding the same rank in the Church as St. Peter, St. James, and St. John, and the other Apostles who were called by Christ Himself upon earth, and had received the gift of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost? Was St. Paul to be allowed to go forth and preach to the world as the Apostle of the Gentiles, when, as was alleged by his Judaizing opponents, who tracked his steps in order to disparage his authority, and to seduce his converts, and who succeeded in this attempt among the Galatians, his preaching was not in accordance with that of those other Apostles whom Christ Himself had called, and who had been visibly ordained with supernatural gifts of the Holy Ghost?

These were grave questions, and they were preliminary ones. They required an immediate answer. They must be answered, before St. Paul could expect to gain any footing for the Gospel, preached by his ministry, in any part of the world.

They must be answered without delay, in order that those might be recovered, who, like the Galatians, had lost, or were losing, the wholesome soundness of Evangelical Truth, and had been infected by the contagion of Judaism.

13. These circumstances seem to require that a very early place should be assigned to the Epistle to the Galatians, in which these urgent questions are encountered and answered.

Let the reader peruse the first and second chapters of this Epistle with these considerations in his mind; and it is probable that he will be ready to recognize in these two introductory chapters a noble Apostolic Apology addressed by St. Paul to the Churches of Galatia, to which the Epistle was first sent, and to all the Churches of Christendom, to which copies of it would be transmitted, and in which it would be publicly read.

Let it be borne in mind also that this Epistle was distinguished from his former Epistles, and from most of his later Epistles also, by being written by him in his own name alone, and with his own hand (vi. 11).

In those two chapters St. Paul displays his own Apostolic credentials to the world. He comes forth boldly and independently as the Ambassador of Christ, as one fully instructed by Him, and as such he claims to be heard. "Even though an angel from heaven," he says, "preach to you any thing beside what I preached to you, and ye received from me, let him be accursed" (Gal. i. 8, 9).

These declarations bespeak an early date for this Epistle.

14. Besides, if, as has been alleged, this Epistle to the Galatians had been written so late as the two Epistles to the Corinthians, and as that to the Romans, and at the same time with these Epistles (viz. A. D. 57 or 58), it is probable that this Epistle would have contained some reference to that important matter which at that time occupied much of St. Paul's time and thoughts, and on which he dwells so forcibly in those three Epistles, viz. the collection of alms for the poor Jewish Christians at Jerusalem[9].

St. Paul himself was the main instrument in making that collection; he was appointed to convey it to Jerusalem, and did convey it thither soon after he had written these three Epistles[1].

A reference to that charitable collection would have had a special relevancy in this Epistle to [8] See note above, 1 Thess. i. 1.

[9] See 1 Cor. xvi. 1—4. 2 Cor. viii. 4. 2 Cor. ix. 1, 2. 12. Rom. xv. 26.
[1] Rom. xv. 26. Acts xxiv. 17.

the Galatians. It would have afforded a practical proof that though the author opposed the false doctrines of Judaizers, he was not biassed by any prejudices against the Jewish Christians at Jerusalem, who were zealous in behalf of the Levitical Law (Acts xxi. 20), and that he was actuated by feelings of love towards their persons, although he impugned their principles. He therefore does not omit to mention in this Epistle to the Galatians (chap. ii. 10) that before the Council of Jerusalem he "was forward to remember the poor," i. e. the poor saints at Jerusalem; an assertion confirmed and explained by the Acts of the Apostles (Acts xi. 27—30; xii. 25).

How much force would have accrued to this important affirmation if he could have also said, that at the very time in which he was engaged in writing this Epistle, he was making a charitable collection for the poor saints at Jerusalem!

The estrangement of many of the Galatians from him at the time of writing this Epistle might, and probably would, have deterred him from enjoining such a collection on them by his own authority, but it would have even suggested a reason for a reference to the collection itself in which he was zealously engaged.

This collection would have been a demonstrative argument to the Galatians that his earnest zeal against the errors of the Judaizers was accompanied with fervent charity to the erring, and could not be imputed to any personal animosity on his part, but was prompted by love of the Truth, and even by love for the erring, whom he desired to recover from their error.

He enlarges upon the subject of this collection in those three other Epistles (the two to the Corinthians, and that to the Romans); and he would not have omitted to mention the collection in this Epistle, if it had been written at the same time as those Epistles when he was engaged in making the collection.

15. This consideration derives additional force from the fact that St. Paul, in his first Epistle to the Corinthians, does not omit to mention that he had then given an order, on the subject of this collection, to the Churches of Galatia (1 Cor. xvi. 1), "Concerning the collection for the saints (the poor Christians of Jerusalem), as I gave charge (διέταξα) to the Churches of Galatia, so do ye."

16. When did he give this charge to the Churches of Galatia?

Not in this Epistle,—there is no reference to it there.

But he might, it is said, have sent an oral message to that effect with the Epistle.

Undoubtedly he might have done so. But why should he not mention in the Epistle to the Galatians what he has mentioned in all those other Epistles? If an oral message would suffice for one, why not for all?

Besides, the charge was given, he says, to the Churches of Galatia. It was not merely sent to one, but to many.

This circumstance bespeaks some general mission, or a visit from the Apostle himself.

17. Had then St. Paul any communication with the Churches of Galatia a short time before he wrote his first Epistle to the Corinthians, in which he speaks of having given a direction "to the Churches of Galatia" (1 Cor. xvi. 1)?

He had. The history of the Acts of the Apostles relates that, after his first visit to Corinth, he went by way of Ephesus up to Jerusalem, and thence returned to Antioch, the centre of his missionary labours, where he remained some time, and thence came back to Ephesus through the country of Galatia and Phrygia, "confirming[2] all the disciples[3]."

After his return to Ephesus he wrote his first Epistle to the Corinthians from that City.

It was probably in that visit to Galatia, where he "confirmed all the disciples," that he gave this charge concerning the collection to "the Churches of Galatia," to which he refers in his first Epistle to the Corinthians.

18. He had "confirmed the disciples" in Galatia. His Apostolic authority was now re-established there; and he was now in a condition to give an injunction which, at the time when he wrote his Epistle to the Galatians, and their minds had been estranged from him by false teachers, would not have been so readily given, nor cheerfully obeyed.

This consideration, therefore, leads us to place the Epistle before that second visit to Galatia.

19. Besides, let it be remembered that when the affections of a Church had been alienated from him, as was the case with the Churches of Galatia, it was not St. Paul's custom to visit that

[2] ἐπιστηρίζων. [3] Acts xviii. 23.

Church in person at once. As he himself says to a Church thus disaffected, "He would not come to it in sorrow (2 Cor. ii. 1), and with a rod" (1 Cor. iv. 21).

However desirous he might be to see it, yet in order to spare the offending he would not come to them (2 Cor. i. 23), even at the risk of being taunted (as he was) with timidity and vacillation (2 Cor. i. 17).

His practice was, first, to try the more lenient process of an Epistle, and then, when the Epistle had wrought its proper effect upon them, but not till then, he would follow up the Epistle by a visit.

This Apostolic method of retrieving an erring Church is illustrated by the history of his dealings with the Church of Corinth (2 Cor. i. 23; ii. 1).

He would probably have resorted to the same wise and merciful treatment in restoring his spiritual children of Galatia.

Therefore, on this ground also, it seems to be more probable that the Epistle should have preceded the Visit, than that the Visit should have preceded the Epistle.

Accordingly, we find in the Epistle to the Galatians a desire expressed on his part to visit them (iv. 20). But he first writes to them.

20. Again; the terms in which that second visit to Galatia is described in the Acts of the Apostles, deserve careful attention.

We there read that he went through in order (καθεξῆς) the region of Galatia and Phrygia, confirming or establishing (ἐπιστηρίζων) all the disciples (Acts xviii. 23).

Since it is thus affirmed in a Book of Canonical Scripture, written some time after that visit, that the Apostle went through a country settling all the disciples, we may reasonably conclude that they were settled; and we cannot bring ourselves to imagine that soon after a visit, in which the holy Apostle settled all the disciples, the Churches of Galatia generally became so unsettled, as the Galatians evidently were, when they received this Epistle from St. Paul. (See Gal. iii. 1—4; iv. 19; v. 4.)

We cannot, therefore, be induced to concur with those learned persons, who think that the Epistle to the Galatians, representing such a state of spiritual disorganization, was written soon after the visit in which, as Holy Scripture assures us, they were confirmed by St. Paul.

21. Reasons have now already been given for assigning an earlier date to this Epistle.

This then being assumed as probable, the word ἐπι-στηρίζων, used by St. Luke in describing St. Paul's second visit to Galatia, may perhaps afford a clue for determining the date of the Epistle.

That word intimates some previous act of corroboration.

The Visit of the Apostle came upon (ἐπὶ) some prior work of spiritual settling in the faith.

The Epistle represents the Galatians in an unsettled state; but the Epistle was designed to settle them.

This work of restoration was, it is probable, commenced by the Holy Ghost inspiring the Apostle to write this Epistle, and blessing His Word written, and granting the Apostle's prayers, and recovering those who had swerved from their Christian stedfastness.

When this previous work of reparation and recovery had been performed by an Epistle, then it was prosecuted (as might have been expected) by a Visit, which the Epistle had pre-announced as probable (iv. 20). The Visit completed the work happily commenced by the Epistle.

St. Paul went through the region of Galatia, ἐπιστηρίζων—giving additional strength and stedfastness—to all the disciples.

22. This conclusion comes in very appropriately to explain what he says to the Corinthians concerning the above-mentioned charge to the Galatian Churches with regard to the collection of alms for the poor saints of Jerusalem (1 Cor. xvi. 1).

St. Paul could hardly have ventured to give such a charge to the Galatians when they were in that condition of spiritual revolt and defection from him, which is described in the Epistle.

But now that they had been brought back to their allegiance by the Epistle and the Visit, he was enabled to issue such a mandate in full confidence that it would be obeyed.

Here, perhaps, we may recognize the reason why he mentions to the Corinthians the fact that he had given such a direction to the Galatians, whose estrangement from St. Paul must have been matter of notoriety, and perhaps of boasting, among the Judaizers of Corinth.

He specifies the fact, that he had given such a direction to the Churches of Galatia, in order that the Corinthians might thus learn by a practical proof, that the Galatians had been recovered from the schismatical and heretical influence of the Judaizing opponents of the Apostle, and had returned to their spiritual obedience and loyalty to him, and recognized St. Paul once more as their Apostle, and regarded him with their original feelings of enthusiastic admiration and love (Gal. iv. 15), and were ready to obey his commands, and could now be cited by him as examples of Obedience and Charity for the edification of other Churches; and that thus the Corinthians themselves, who were exposed to the same evil influences as the Galatians were, and had been injured by them, might derive practical benefit from the example of the Churches of Galatia.

23. On the whole then we arrive at the following results:—

(1) That the Epistle to the Galatians was written by St. Paul after A.D. 52, the date of his first visit to Galatia.

(2) That it was written before the date of his second visit to Galatia.

(3) That it was probably written at Corinth on his first visit to Greece, A.D. 53 or A.D. 54[4].

(4) That it was written next after his two Epistles to the Thessalonians[5].

(5) That not long after the Epistle had been sent, he heard, probably at Ephesus, a good report of the favourable manner in which the Epistle had been received by the Galatians, and consequently resolved to visit Galatia in person on his return to Ephesus from Jerusalem and Antioch.

(6) That accordingly, having gone up from Ephesus to Jerusalem (Acts xviii. 22), and thence to Antioch, where he abode some time, he did not return by a direct course to Ephesus, although the Ephesian disciples were very desirous of his presence (Acts xviii. 20), but came back by a circuitous route through Galatia, where he strengthened all the disciples (Acts xviii. 23).

(7) That St. Paul's authority was re-established in Galatia, and the Galatians themselves were recovered to the faith, and that this Epistle was a blessed instrument to them, as it has been to every age and country of Christendom, for building up the hope of salvation on the only solid basis upon which it can stand unmoveably,—that of a sound Faith in the meritorious efficacy of the Death of Christ.

II. On the Design of the Epistle to the Galatians.

This subject will be considered in the Review at the close of the Second Chapter of this Epistle, and in the Introduction to the Epistle to the Romans.

The following preliminary remarks upon it are from S. Augustine[6].

The cause for which this Epistle was written to the Galatians was this:—

When St. Paul had preached to them the Grace of God in the Gospel, some persons of the Circumcision arose, bearing the Christian name, who desired to bring the Galatians under the bondage of the Levitical Law.

They alleged that the Gospel would profit them nothing unless they were circumcised, and submitted to the other carnal observances of the Jewish ritual.

Hence the Galatians began to regard St. Paul with suspicion, as if he did not observe the same discipline as that of the other Apostles.

The Apostle Peter had given way to the scruples of these persons, and had been led to a semblance of agreement with them, as if he also was of their mind, that the Gospel was of no avail to the Gentiles unless they submitted to the burden of the Law.

Peter had been reclaimed from this simulation by St. Paul, as is related in this Epistle (ii. 14).

The subject of this Epistle is similar to that of the Epistle to the Romans, with, however, some difference. In the Epistle to the Romans the Apostle determines judicially the questions which were debated between the Jewish and Gentile Christians, the former alleging that the Gospel was awarded to them as a reward due to their own deservings consequent on a performance of the works of the Law, and not allowing this reward to be communicated to the Gentiles, who were not circumcised, and therefore, in the opinion of the Jews, did not merit the same. (Augustine.)

[4] Compare Lardner, Vol. iii. p. 289, chap. xii. sect. iii. Birk's Horæ Apostolicæ, p. 207.

[5] This is the opinion of many of the most learned writers on the Chronology of St. Paul's Epistles, e. g. L. Capellus, Heidegger, Hottinger, Benson, Lardner, Schmid, De Wette, Feilmoser, Schott, Anger, Neander, Wieseler, and others. See Wieseler, Chron. Syn. p. 607.

[6] Whose Commentary on this Epistle will be found in Vol. iii. pp. 2660—2713 of his works, ed. Bened. 1837.

The Gentile Christians, on the other hand, exulted in their own preference to the Jews, who had been guilty of killing Christ.

In the present Epistle the Apostle writes to those who had been swayed by the influence of some false Teachers, exacting from them an observance of the Ceremonial Law, and had begun to listen to their insinuations that because St. Paul was unwilling that they should be circumcised, he had not preached to them the truth.

There is also this difference between the Epistle to the Galatians and that to the Romans, that in this Epistle St. Paul does not address himself to persons who had passed from Judaism to Christianity, but to such as had been converted to the Gospel from Heathenism, and were lapsing into Judaism under the influence of false Teachers, who affirmed that Peter, and James, and all the Churches of Judæa had joined the Law with the Gospel, and had exacted a like observance of both.

They also alleged that Paul was inconsistent with himself, that he did one thing in Judæa and preached another to the Heathen; and that it would be vain for them to believe in Christ unless they conformed to those things which were observed by His principal Apostles.

St. Paul, therefore, is obliged to steer a middle course, so as neither on the one hand to betray the Grace of the Gospel, nor yet, on the other, to disparage the authority of his predecessors in the Apostleship. S. Jerome[1].

Another difference may be remarked in the character of the two Epistles.

In that to the Romans, the Apostle speaks with more deference and reserve to those whom he addresses, whom he had never seen, and who had been converted by others to Christ.

In the Epistle to the Galatians he speaks with the affectionate sternness of a spiritual Father to his own children in the Faith, who were disparaging his authority, and renouncing his precepts, to the injury of their own souls, and the perversion of the Gospel of Christ. See Gal. iii. 1; iv. 8—20; v. 7.

[1] Procem. in Epist. ad Gal. Vol. iv. p. 223, ed. Bened. Paris, 1706.

ΠΡΟΣ ΓΑΛΑΤΑΣ.

I. [1] [a] ΠΑΥΛΟΣ, ἀπόστολος, οὐκ ἀπ' ἀνθρώπων οὐδὲ δι' ἀνθρώπου, ἀλλὰ διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ καὶ Θεοῦ Πατρὸς τοῦ ἐγείραντος αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν, [2] καὶ οἱ σὺν ἐμοὶ πάντες ἀδελφοί, ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις τῆς Γαλατίας, [3] χάρις ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη ἀπὸ Θεοῦ Πατρὸς, καὶ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, [4] [b] τοῦ δόντος ἑαυτὸν περὶ τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν ἡμῶν, ὅπως ἐξέληται ἡμᾶς ἐκ τοῦ ἐνεστῶτος αἰῶνος πονηροῦ, a ver. 11, 12. Acts 9. 6. Tit. 1. 3. Acts 2. 24, 32. & 3. 15. & 4. 10. & 10. 40. & 13. 30, 34. & 17. 31. Rom. 4. 24. & 8. 11.

1 Cor. 6. 14. & 15. 15. 2 Cor. 4. 14. Eph. 1. 20. Col. 2. 12. 1 Thess. 1. 10. Heb. 13. 20. b Matt. 20. 28. Rom. 4. 25. ch. 2. 20. Eph. 5. 2. 1 Tim. 2. 6. Tit. 2. 14. Heb. 9. 14. & 10. 9, 10. John 15. 19. 1 Pet. 2. 24. & 3. 18. 1 John 5. 19.

Πρὸς Γαλάτας] So A, B, and many Cursives. And so Lach., Tisch., Meyer, Alf.

Ch. I. 1. Παῦλος, ἀπόστολος, κ.τ.λ.] A declaration extorted from St. Paul in self-defence. He thus replies to those who disparaged his Apostolic authority, on the plea that he was not one of the original Twelve, and had been a Persecutor of the Church; and who contravened his teaching on the ground that in asserting the abolition of the Ceremonial Law of Moses, he was setting himself up against St. Peter and others who had been ordained to the Apostleship by Christ Himself upon earth. (Cp. Jerome.)

These introductory words are not found in any other Epistle of St. Paul. By saying that he himself is an Apostle, not of men, or by men, but of God, he intimates that those persons who taught the doctrine which he refutes in this Epistle, were not of God, but of men. (Augustine.) By not associating any other person by name with himself (as Silas or Timotheus, see 1 Thess. i. 1), he declares here his own independent Apostolic authority.

— οὐκ ἀπ' ἀνθρώπων οὐδὲ δι' ἀνθρώπου] My calling to the Apostleship was not from man as a source (ἀπὸ) nor through man as a channel (διὰ), but through Jesus Christ Who called me, speaking to me with His own voice from heaven, without the intervention of man. (Cp. Theodoret.)

Jesus Christ is here distinctly contrasted with man; an assertion of His Godhead.

— διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χ. καὶ Θεοῦ Πατρός] by Jesus Christ and God the Father. The Son leads to the Father, and the Father reveals the Son. Irenæus (iii. 14). In the Acts of the Apostles it is related that the Holy Ghost commanded the Church at Antioch to ordain St. Paul (Acts xiii. 1—4, where see note). Here his commission is ascribed to God the Father and the Son. The Power of all the three Persons of the Trinity is One. (Chrys. and Theoph.)

— τοῦ ἐγείραντος αὐτόν] God raised Christ from the dead, and thus showed that the sacrifice offered by Him on the Cross for the sins of the whole world was accepted as a full satisfaction for them (see on Rom. iv. 25). Thus the Apostle prepares the way for his argument in this Epistle, that Christ's death is the true ground of our Justification.

2. οἱ σὺν ἐμοὶ πάντες ἀδελφοί] all the brethren that are with me. An answer to the objection of those who alleged that St. Paul's doctrine was novel and singular, and only his own. Others are with him, and they all agree with him in it. (Chrys.)

— ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις τῆς Γαλατίας] to the Churches of Galatia. This is the only Epistle of St. Paul in which he addresses himself thus to the Churches of a country. See on 1 Thess. i. 1.

A remarkable address in what it does not, as well as in what it does say. He does not speak to them as he does to other Churches, in the beginnings of his Epistles, in terms of thankfulness and joy; and he does not address the Church of one city, but all, for it appears that the evil which he deplores had propagated itself to all. (Chrys.)

Though they were infected with heresy, yet he still calls them Churches. Such is the character and condition of the Church in this world: the time is not yet come in which the Church will be cleansed from all spot and wrinkle (Eph. v. 27). Jerome. See on 1 Cor. i. 2. A caution to those who look for a perfect Church on earth, and who separate themselves from a Church on the plea of imperfections, real or supposed, in it. See on Matt. xiii. 30.

The address, 'To the Churches of Galatia,' indicates that St. Paul intends, and takes for granted, that this Epistle will be circulated.

— τῆς Γαλατίας] Galatia, or Gallo-Græcia, a central province of Asia Minor, was occupied about 280 B.C. by a horde of Gauls and Celts, who were invited by Nicomedes, king of Bithynia, to assist him against his brother. About 240 B.C. they were restrained within the limits of the Halys and Sangarius by Attalus, king of Pergamus, and became incorporated with the Greeks, and were thence called 'Gallo-Græci.' Though the Greek Language was adopted by them, yet still the Celtic remained as a vernacular tongue among them. (See S. Jerome, Prolog. ad Epist.) In B.C. 189 they became subject to Rome; and they adopted the religious rites of the Greek and Phrygian mythology, especially the worship of Cybele. See on v. 12. Its principal cities were Ancyra, Pessinus, and Tavium. Cp. Strabo, xii. p. 566. Liv. xxxiv. 12; xxxvii. 8. Florus, ii. 11; Winer, R. W. B. i. p. 384.

3, 4. χάρις κ.τ.λ.] A summary of the argument of the Epistle, which is a pleading for the doctrine of Free Grace in Christ, dying for our sins, as our only ground of Peace.

4. περὶ τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν] So A, D, E, F, G, I, K, and several Cursives, and Gb., Sch., Ln., Tf., Mey., Alf., Ellicott. Elz. has ὑπέρ. But ὑπὲρ is 'on behalf of,' i. e. with a view, a benefit for. Christ suffered for us and for our salvation, ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν and ὑπὲρ τῆς τοῦ κόσμου ζωῆς (John vi. 51), and περὶ ἁμαρτιῶν, 'for our sins,' or 'on account of our sins,' which made it necessary that He should die for us. Cp. Rom. viii. 3 for περὶ, and see for examples of ὑπὲρ, Luke xxii. 19, 20. Rom. v. 6; xiv. 15. Gal. ii. 20; iii. 13; and Winer, p. 333.

— ἐκ τοῦ ἐνεστῶτος αἰῶνος πονηροῦ] To deliver us from the present evil world (Aug.) in which we were imprisoned as captives and slaves sentenced to death. His blood was our λύτρον, or ransom, by which we have been redeemed from this bondage. And St. Paul says that this ransom was given freely by Christ, and that it was given according to the Father's will. A declaration of the truth against the Socinian allegation that the Doctrine of the Atonement is not reconcileable with Divine Love. See on Matt. xvii. 5; xx. 28; and John x. 17.

Neque Filius se dedit pro peccatis nostris absque voluntate Patris, neque Pater tradidit Filium sine Filii voluntate. Sed hæc est voluntas Filii voluntatem Patris implere. (Jerome.) κατὰ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ Πατρὸς ἡμῶν, [5] [c] ᾧ ἡ δόξα εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων, ἀμήν.

[6] [d] Θαυμάζω ὅτι οὕτω ταχέως μετατίθεσθε ἀπὸ τοῦ καλέσαντος ὑμᾶς ἐν χάριτι Χριστοῦ εἰς ἕτερον εὐαγγέλιον, [7] [e] ὃ οὐκ ἔστιν ἄλλο, εἰ μή τινές εἰσιν οἱ ταράσσοντες ὑμᾶς, καὶ θέλοντες μεταστρέψαι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦ Χριστοῦ· [8] [f] ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐὰν ἡμεῖς ἢ ἄγγελος ἐξ οὐρανοῦ εὐαγγελίζηται ὑμῖν παρ' ὃ εὐηγγελισάμεθα ὑμῖν, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω· [9] [g] ὡς προειρήκαμεν, καὶ ἄρτι πάλιν λέγω, εἴ τις ὑμᾶς c Rom. 11. 36. & 16. 27. Eph. 1. 12. Phil. 4. 20.

d ch. 5. 8.
e Acts 15. 1. 1 Cor. 11. 4. ch. 5. 15.
f 1 Cor. 16. 22.
g Rev. 22. 18.

— τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ Πατρός] God who is also our Father (Phil. iv. 20. Eph. v. 20. Bp. Middleton on Eph. v. 5), and is specially our Father by the redemption of us His children by the blood of His Son.

6. οὕτω ταχέως μετατίθεσθε] "Miror quòd sic tam citò transferimini." Tertull. de Præs. c. 27. Cp. 2 Macc. vii. 24, μεταθέμενος ἀπὸ πατρίων νόμων. And on the sense of ταχέως, easily, at once, see Judges ii. 17, ἐξέκλιναν ταχὺ ἐκ τῆς ὁδοῦ.

The sense is, I marvel that you are shifting yourselves from God to a different Gospel, and that you are doing this so quickly (cp. 2 Thess. ii. 2); that is, without due consideration of what is to be said on the other side, and, as it were, on the first impulse.

Instead of making a vigorous defence, or calling on me to protect you, you are capitulating immediately, you are revolting from God Who enlisted you at your Baptism as His soldiers under the banner of the Cross, and after this defection you are joining the ranks of the enemy. So Chrys., who says, "The Apostle brings two charges against them—their change, and its suddenness." Such a change was in character (as Grotius observes) with the desultory fickleness which is attributed by ancient writers as a national trait to the race from which the Galatians sprung. See Cæsar, Bell. Gall. iv. 5, and the characteristic lines describing their conduct in the battle which decided the fortunes of the world,—

> "Ad hoc frementes verterant bis mille equos > Galli canentes Cæsarem."—Horat. Epod. ix. 16.

It must be remembered that the Galatians had been converted from Heathenism (iv. 8), and that the national superstition of Galatia, the worship of Cybele, would predispose them readily to receive Circumcision as a rite of religion. See on v. 12.

6, 7. εἰς ἕτερον εὐαγγέλιον, ὃ οὐκ ἔστιν ἄλλο, εἰ μή τινές εἰσιν οἱ ταράσσοντες ὑμᾶς] I marvel that you are so soon revolting to a different Gospel which is not another: for there are not two Gospels of Christ; but one and the same Faith for all.

Ἕτερος is diverse in kind, ἄλλος is other in number. Cp. Tittmann, Syn. N. T. p. 155; Quod post primum Evangelium infertur non jam secundum est, sed nullum; and see the similar uses of these words ἕτερος and ἄλλος in 2 Cor. xi. 4, which is the best comment on this verse.

— εἰ μή τινές εἰσιν οἱ ταράσσοντες ὑμᾶς] The meaning of this clause has been much controverted. It has been usually rendered, 'except that there are certain persons who are troubling you.' But this version appears to be incorrect. For

(1) It supposes an awkward ellipse, and does not cohere with the context, and

(2) The definite article οἱ prefixed to ταράσσοντες shows that 'they who were troubling' them, are the subject of the proposition, and not the predicate of it.

The true rendering seems to be this, 'Unless they, who are troubling you, are somebody,' i. e. are persons of some substantial weight and Apostolic authority, with a commission, such as St. Paul himself had, from God; and are not mere usurpers and intruders.

This version is also confirmed by the Vulgate and old Latin Version in the Codex Augiensis, which have the pronoun aliqui here, not quidam: "Nisi sunt aliqui qui vos conturbant," i. e. unless they who trouble you are aliqui, men of authority, true Apostles; and not (as, in fact, these my opponents and your false teachers are) mere unauthorized persons.

St. Paul says that this different Gospel of these false teachers is no Gospel at all, unless εἰ μή (forsooth) the false teachers who are troubling you, and whose will it is to pervert the Gospel of Christ, are somebody: which they are not. Indeed, so far from being τινές, men of any mark or likelihood, they are worse than nobody; for, by the very fact of their perverting Christ's Gospel, they are Anathema, or accursed; as he proceeds solemnly to declare twice in vv. 8, 9.

Εἰ μή, unless, is used by St. Paul, with a tone of irony, in order to introduce an incredible supposition, which he only puts, in order to explode it. So 2 Cor. iii. 1, εἰ μὴ χρήζομεν συστατικῶν, unless forsooth we, your Apostles, need letters of commendation from you our children!

τινὲς here is emphatic, and is to be illustrated by Acts v. 36, λέγων εἶναί τινα ἑαυτὸν, professing himself to be somebody, and Ignatius (Eph. 3), οὐ διατάσσομαι ὡς ὢν τίς, I do not dictate to you, as if I were somebody. The present passage is best explained by what St. Paul says below, vi. 3, "If any one imagine himself to be something (τι) when he is nothing (as these false Teachers, of whom he here speaks, are) he deceives himself as well as others." So τι, 'something of importance,' 1 Cor. iii. 7; x. 19, and Gal. ii. 6; vi. 15. Compare also the similar use of τινές in Demosth. c. Mid. p. 582, πλούσιοι πολλοὶ τὸ δοκεῖν τινὲς εἶναι δι' εὐπορίαν προσειληφότες, and the Latin aliquis and aliquid (somebody and something of note), e. g. as in Juvenal, i. 73,—

> "Aude aliquid brevibus Gyaris et carcere dignum, > Si vis esse aliquis;"

and in somewhat a similar sense (ii. 149),— > "Esse aliquos Manes et subterranea regna, > Nec pueri credunt."

This interpretation renders the sentence clear and coherent. "I marvel that ye are so soon shifting yourselves to a different Gospel, which is not a second Gospel, unless, forsooth, those persons who are troubling you, and whose will it is to pervert the Gospel of Christ, are somebody. But no: even though we or an Angel from heaven preach to you any other Gospel beside what we preached to you, let him be accursed."

7. θέλοντες μεταστρέψαι] willing to pervert; that is, whose will (θέλημα) it is to pervert. On the sense of θέλω see Philem. 14.

8, 9. ἀλλὰ καί] But even if these persons were τινὲς, aliqui, somebodies, and not nobodies, even if they were men worthy of your attention and confidence, I now add (καί), that if I (an Apostle of Christ, v. 1, which they are not), or if even an angel from heaven, or if any one in the world, preach to you, not only a different Gospel, but any thing beside or beyond what I preached to you, and ye received from me, when I evangelized you, let him be accursed!

Παρὰ = 'præter,' properly by the side of,—i. e. not in the same line, but by the side of it, or swerving from it; and thus it expresses difference, whether by defect or excess. See Tertullian, de Præsc. Hær. 6 (who interprets παρὰ by aliter), and ibid. 29, by 'aliter citrà quàm,' and c. Marcion. iv. 4, and v. 2; and cp. as to the use of παρὰ Matt. iv. 18; xiii. 4. Rom. i. 25, 26; xiv. 5; and Winer, p. 359.

As Chrys. and Theoph. expound the words, the Apostle does not say, "if they preach things contrary to the Gospel and subvert the whole," but "if they preach any thing divergent from what we preached;" even if they make any alteration whatever in it, "let them be accursed!"

A solemn warning against those who (as the Church of Rome does) venture to make any addition to, or to take any thing from, the Faith once for all delivered to the Saints (Jude 3).

— ἀνάθεμα] See on Acts xxiii. 14. 1 Cor. xii. 3; xvi. 22. Fritz, on Rom. ix. 3. and Trench, Synonyms, § v. on the distinction between ἀνάθημα, a thing offered for God's honour, and ἀνάθεμα, a thing devoted for destruction.

9. ὡς προειρήκαμεν] as we have said before. Lest any one should suppose that the awful denunciation which I have just uttered against all who make any alteration in the doctrine preached by me, had escaped me in a momentary excitement of passionate indignation, produced by a sense of personal injury, I solemnly repeat it. (Chrys.)

St. Paul (adds Chrys.) grounds his doctrine on the Holy Scriptures of the Old Testament. In the Gospel, Christ had introduced the Patriarch Abraham saying, that if the Jews heard not Moses and the Prophets, i. e. the Old Testament, neither would they be persuaded though one rose from the dead (Luke xvi. 50).

εὐαγγελίζεται παρ' ὃ παρελάβετε, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω. 10 h Ἄρτι γὰρ ἀνθρώπους πείθω, ἢ τὸν Θεόν; ἢ ζητῶ ἀνθρώποις ἀρέσκειν; εἰ ἔτι ἀνθρώποις ἤρεσκον, Χριστοῦ δοῦλος οὐκ ἂν ἤμην.

h Acts 4. 19, 20. & 5. 29. 1 Thess. 2. 4. James 4. 4. i 2 Cor. 12. 19. Eph. 6. 6. Col. 3. 22.

11 j Γνωρίζω δὲ ὑμῖν, ἀδελφοί, τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τὸ εὐαγγελισθὲν ὑπ' ἐμοῦ, ὅτι οὐκ ἔστι κατὰ ἄνθρωπον· 12 k οὐδὲ γὰρ ἐγὼ παρὰ ἀνθρώπου παρέλαβον αὐτό, οὔτε ἐδιδάχθην ἀλλὰ δι' ἀποκαλύψεως Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

j 1 Cor. 15. 1, 3. ver. 1. k Eph. 3. 3.

13 l Ἠκούσατε γὰρ τὴν ἐμὴν ἀναστροφήν ποτε ἐν τῷ Ἰουδαϊσμῷ, ὅτι καθ' ὑπερβολὴν ἐδίωκον τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ ἐπόρθουν αὐτήν, 14 καὶ προέκοπτον ἐν τῷ Ἰουδαϊσμῷ ὑπὲρ πολλοὺς συνηλικιώτας ἐν τῷ γένει μου, περισσοτέρως ζηλωτὴς ὑπάρχων τῶν πατρικῶν μου παραδόσεων.

l Acts 8. 3. & 9. 1. & 22. 4. & 26. 9. Phil. 3. 6. 1 Tim. 1. 13.

Thus Christ preferred the witness of the Scriptures to that of one from the grave. So Paul here, or rather Christ Himself—for it was Christ Who inspired Paul—prefers the testimony of the Scriptures to that of an Angel from heaven. For angels, though mighty, are servants; but the Holy Scriptures are not the words of servants, but of the Lord of all. (Chrys.)

10. Ἄρτι γὰρ ἀνθρώπους πείθω] Do I now, when I utter such words as these, endeavour (as my enemies tell you I do) to gain the favour of men?

On this use of πείθω see Acts xii. 20, πείσαντες Βλάστον, having made Blastus their friend.

This question, and what follows—'Do I seek to please men?'—is doubtless an answer to objections raised against the Apostle by his adversaries alleging that he was inconsistent in his practice, and a time-server, and a men-pleaser (cp. 1 Cor. ix. 22; x. 24. Rom. xv. 1); and that he preached against circumcision, and yet had circumcised Timothy (Acts xvi. 3; cp. below, on v. 11); that he taught that the Levitical Law was abrogated, and yet observed it in his own person (Acts xviii. 18).

On such pleas as these, grounded on his preaching and his practice not rightly understood, the false teachers asserted that the Apostle, with all his professions of independence, was only an ἀνθρωπάρεσκος, a men-pleaser, and was influenced by a love of popularity, and not by a zeal for the truth and for the glory of God.

These and similar objections are tacitly implied in this and other portions of the Epistle, which (it is to be remembered) is of an apologetic character throughout. They account for the mention of many incidents in it, e. g. of the non-circumcision of Titus (ch. ii. 2—11), and the Apostle's opposition to St. Peter at Antioch; and must be carefully borne in mind in its perusal.

How far St. Paul made himself all things to all men, and sought to please all, and how far all ought to imitate him, has been well stated as follows by one of the best expositors of St. Paul's writings;—

St. Paul professeth that he sought to please all men in all things, not seeking his own profit, but the profit of many (1 Cor. ix. 20—22). And it was no flourish neither. St. Paul was a real man, no bragger; what he said, he did. He became as a Jew to the Jews, as a Gentile to the Gentiles; not to humour either, but to win both. And at Corinth he maintained himself a long while with his own hand-labour, when he might have challenged maintenance from them as the Apostle of Christ. But he would not, only to cut off occasion (2 Cor. xi. 12) from those that slandered him, as if he went about to make a prey of them, and would have been glad to find any occasion against him to give credit to that slander;

But what, is St. Paul now all on a sudden become a man-pleaser? Or how is there not yea and nay (2 Cor. i. 18) with him that he should profess it so largely, and yet elsewhere protest against it so deeply? Do I seek to please men? (Gal. i. 10.) No, saith he, I scorn it; such baseness will better become their own slaves,—I am the servant of Christ. Worthy resolutions both, both savouring of an apostolic spirit, and no contrariety at all between them. Rather that seeming contrariety yieldeth excellent instruction to us, how to behave ourselves in this matter of pleasing. Not to please men, be they never so many or great, out of flatness of spirit, so as, for the pleasing of them, either,

First, to neglect any part of our duty towards God and Christ; or,

Secondly, to go against our own consciences, by doing any dishonest or unlawful thing; or,

Thirdly, to do them harm whom we would please, by confirming them in their errors, flattering them in their sins, humouring them in their peevishness, or but even cherishing their weakness; for weakness, though it may be borne with, yet it must not be cherished;

Thus did not he, thus should not we, seek to please any man;

But then, by yielding to their infirmities for a time (Rom. xv. 1), in hope to win them, by patiently expecting their conversion or strengthening, by restoring them with the spirit of meekness (1 Thess. v. 14. Gal. v. 26; vi. 1) when they had fallen, by forbearing all scornful jeering, provoking, or exasperating language and behaviour towards them, but rather with meekness instructing them that opposed themselves (2 Tim. ii. 25), so did he, so should we seek to please all men, for their profit and for their good. For that is Charity (1 Cor. x. 33. Rom. xv. 2). Bp. Sanderson (i. p. 316).

— εἰ ἔτι ἀνθρώπους ἤρεσκον] if I were yet pleasing men, as my adversaries allege, I should not have been as I am the servant of Christ. The fact is, as I well know, I am encountering their hatred for the sake of Christ, Whom I serve and Whom I seek to please.

Before ἔτι Elz. inserts γὰρ, which is not in the best MSS., and weakens the sense.

The ἔτι, yet, appears to intimate, that when he was a rigid observer of the Law, and a persecutor of the Church, he did please men; but now he has renounced all human favour and applause for the service of Christ, for which he has sacrificed all earthly advantages and counts them as loss.

11. Γνωρίζω δέ] But I certify you. Having vindicated himself from the charge of pleasing men, by denouncing a solemn imprecation on all persons who tamper with the doctrine delivered by him, he now declares that he was not indebted to men for that doctrine, but had received it immediately by revelation from God.

The MSS. fluctuate between δὲ and γὰρ, and the authorities are almost equally balanced. On internal grounds δὲ seems preferable, as marking a transition.

— οὐκ ἔστι κατὰ ἄνθρωπον] but κατὰ Θεόν. Cp. 2 Cor. vii. 10.

12. οὐδὲ γὰρ ἐγώ] For neither did I receive it from man, nor was I taught it at all, except &c. See next note.

— οὔτε ἐδιδάχθην ἀλλά] nor was I taught it except by Revelation. He does not mean that he was not taught it, but that he was not taught it by man, but by God. He was θεοδίδακτος. It is therefore better not to put a comma after ἐδιδάχθην.

This use of ἀλλὰ has sometimes been lost sight of. See Matt. xx. 23, where an important article of doctrine is involved in it. Our Lord there says, "It is not Mine to give (ἀλλὰ) save to those for whom it is prepared of My Father." It is Mine to give (for I am Judge of all), but only to those for whom it has been prepared by My Father.

13. τὴν ἐμὴν ἀναστροφὴν ποτέ] 'conversationem meam aliquando.' Jerome, Aug.

— Ἰουδαϊσμῷ] Judaism, as distinguished from Gentilism. Cp. ii. 14. See Dean Trench's Synonyms of N. T. xxxix.

— καθ' ὑπερβολήν] exceeding other persecutors in my zeal. See 1 Cor. xii. 31.

— ἐδίωκον—ἐπόρθουν—προέκοπτον] Observe the imperfect tenses describing the condition in which he was at that very time when he had his first revelation from Christ; showing that he could not have derived his Gospel from man before that time.

He then proceeds to describe what happened to him after that time.

14. ζηλωτὴς ὑπάρχων] Compare the report of the speech from St. Paul's mouth from the stairs of the castle at Jerusalem, Acts xxii. 3—5, ζηλωτὴς ὑπάρχων τοῦ Θεοῦ κ.τ.λ.

15 m ᵛ Ὅτε δὲ εὐδόκησεν ὁ Θεὸς ὁ ἀφορίσας με ἐκ κοιλίας μητρός μου, καὶ καλέσας διὰ τῆς χάριτος αὐτοῦ, 16 n ἀποκαλύψαι τὸν Υἱὸν αὐτοῦ ἐν ἐμοί, ἵνα εὐαγγελίζωμαι αὐτὸν ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσιν, εὐθέως οὐ προσανεθέμην σαρκὶ καὶ αἵματι, 17 οὐδὲ ἀνῆλθον εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα πρὸς τοὺς πρὸ ἐμοῦ ἀποστόλους, ἀλλ' ἀπῆλθον εἰς Ἀραβίαν, καὶ πάλιν ὑπέστρεψα εἰς Δαμασκόν.

18 o ᵛ Ἔπειτα μετὰ ἔτη τρία ἀνῆλθον εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα ἱστορῆσαι Κηφᾶν, καὶ ἐπέμεινα πρὸς αὐτὸν ἡμέρας δεκαπέντε· 19 p ἕτερον δὲ τῶν ἀποστόλων οὐκ εἶδον, εἰ μὴ Ἰάκωβον τὸν ἀδελφὸν τοῦ Κυρίου. 20 q ᵃ Ἃ δὲ γράφω ὑμῖν, ἰδοὺ ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ ὅτι οὐ ψεύδομαι.

m Acts 9. 15. & 13. 2. Rom. 1. 1. Jer. 1. 5.
n Matt. 16. 17. 1 Cor. 2. 9—13. 2 Cor. iv. 6. ch. 2. 8. Eph. 3. 1, 8.
o Acts 9. 26, 29. & 22. 17, 18.
p Mark 6. 3.
q Rom. 1. 9. & 9. 1. 2 Cor. 1. 23. & 11. 31. 1 Thess. 2. 5. 1 Tim. 5. 21. 2 Tim. 4. 1.

---

15. ὁ Θεός] Omitted by B, F, G, but found in A, D, E, I, K. It marks strongly the contrast between God and man. He had studiously repeated the word ἄνθρωπος no less than six times (v. 1. 10 thrice, 11, 12), now he passes to speak of God. The sense therefore is weakened by the omission.

— ὁ ἀφορίσας] He who set me apart, an important word in the history of St. Paul. See on Rom. i. 1.

16. ἀποκαλύψαι—ἐν ἐμοί] to reveal his Son in me. "Revelare Filium suum in me, ut evangelizarem eum gentibus." Iren. (v. 5), who adds "revelatione ei de cœlo facta, et colloquente cum eo Domino."

A striking contrast. He who had been stricken by blindness as a Persecutor, has now Christ, the Light of the world, revealed in him as a Preacher. He who was himself dark, has become a light to others, a light revealing to them Christ. S. Jerome well compares 2 Cor. xiii. 3, ἐν ἐμοὶ λαλοῦντος Χριστοῦ. Gal. ii. 20, ζῇ ἐν ἐμοὶ Χριστός. So Chrys. He does not say, "God revealed His Son to me," but "in me," showing that he did not learn the Gospel merely by words from God, but that he was filled in his heart with the Holy Spirit, so that the knowledge of the Gospel was, as it were, dyed into his inner man. Chrys., Theophyl.

The Father revealed the Son in me, not in order that the revelation of the light of Christ so kindled in me should be confined to me, but that it should be diffused by my preaching to the world. (Chrys.) He gave me this grace that I should preach, not the Law, but the Gospel. (Theodoret.)

— οὐ προσανεθέμην] 'non retuli,' Tertullian (de Resur. 51); 'non acquievi' (Vulg., Cod. Aug., and Boern.). I resorted not, literally referred not myself to them for counsel, guidance, instruction, and assurance. So Diod. Sic. xvii. 116, cited by Mintert, προσανατίθεσθαι τοῖς μάντεσι, and Lucian (Jov. Trag. init.), ἐμοὶ προσανάθου, λάβε μὲ σύμβουλον πόνων. Cp. ii. 6.

— σαρκὶ καὶ αἵματι] flesh and blood, as distinguished from spirit and God. Compare our Lord's words, Matt. xvi. 17, σὰρξ καὶ αἷμα οὐκ ἀπεκάλυψέ σοι (addressed to St. Peter) ἀλλ' ὁ Πατήρ μου.

May not St. Paul be referring here to those remarkable words of our Lord to St. Peter?

It was not flesh and blood, but the Father who revealed His Son to St Peter, and by him to the world.

So now St. Paul says that God revealed His Son in him, and he did not commune with flesh and blood in order to obtain further knowledge.

